Postbaccalaureate Advancement

Graduate Education programs in the School of Education and Human Development are focused on “Making a Difference” in central California’s diverse society by preparing leadership for a new millennium. Postbaccalaureate advanced credential and master’s degree programs are primarily focused on: (1) preparation and enhancement of teachers and other educational leaders and (2) preparation of human service leaders who function in a variety of human development roles in both public and private sectors.

The need for quality teachers, administrators, curriculum and instruction specialists, and human development professionals is particularly important for the enhancement of human potential and productivity in the richly varied ethnic, cultural, and social milieu of the region. The School of Education and Human Development is committed to developing the knowledge, skills, and values for educational leadership in a changing, diverse, and technologically complex society.

Interprofessional Collaboration

The Certificate of Advanced Study in Interprofessional Collaboration (CASIC) is a 15-unit, two-semester program that provides graduate students and practicing professionals with essential knowledge and skills in interprofessional collaboration while earning university credit and an academic certificate at the completion of the program. See page 464-465.

Mission and Goals

The mission of the School of Education and Human Development is to educate students to become teachers, administrators, counselors, and educational specialists in order to provide for the educational needs of children and adults, with special attention to diversity and equity.
