Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 214-215, "Peter Murphy's Little Dog" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

NOTES [22 words]: As is common with teasing songs, this is a fragmentary ballad at best, each verse ricocheting off the previous into a new direction. - EC

File: RL214

Peter Piper Picked a Peck of Pickled Pepper

DESCRIPTION: "Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers, A peck of pickled peppers Peter Piper picked. If Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers, How many pickled peppers did Peter pick?" (Or: "Where's the peck of pickled peppers Peter Piper picked?")

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1819 (Peter Piper's Practical Principles of Plain and Perfect Pronunciation, according to the Opies)

KEYWORDS: food wordplay

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (4 citations):

Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, p. 122, "(Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers)" (1 text)

Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 406, "Peter Piper Picked a Peck of Pickled Pepper" (1 text)

Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #740, p. 281, "(Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled pepper)"

Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 182, "Peter Piper Picked a Peck (1 text)

Roud #19745

NOTES [48 words]: According to Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, the earliest printed source, Peter Piper's Practical Principles of Plain and Perfect Pronunciation, included practice rhymes for every letter of the alphabet. But this was clearly the "hit" of the collection, and may well precede the other rhymes. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5

File: 002406
Peter Pullin' Blues
DESCRIPTION: "Papa caught me in the loft, I'd just finished jackin' off." The father orders the boy to cease. He takes the boy, whose only other sexual experience is with a cow, to a whorehouse, where he proves highly interested but unable to perform.
AUTHOR: attributed to Tex Fletcher by Jack Steele
EARLIEST DATE: 1989 (Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging)
KEYWORDS: bawdy whore warning animal sex
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 60, pp. 271-274, "Peter Pullin' Blues" (1 text)
Roud #10110
NOTES [36 words]: Despite the title, this is clearly not a blues, either in form or in content. And I couldn't bring myself to tag it "humorous," either. It's too crude; a slightly lighter touch would have been much more amusing. - RBW
File: Logs060

Peter Rabbit, Ha! Ha!
DESCRIPTION: "Peter Rabbit, ha! ha! Stole my cabbage, ha! ha! Caught him in the garden, ha! ha! Sop that gravy, ha! ha! Ain't he pretty, ha! ha!" "Peter Rabbit, ha! ha! STole my cabbage, ha! ha! Caught him in the garden, ha! ha! Suck his bomes, ha! ha! Ain't he...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1944 (Trent-Johns-PlaySongsOfTheDeepSouth)
KEYWORDS: animal food nonballad playparty
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Trent-Johns-PlaySongsOfTheDeepSouth, pp. 6-7, "Peter Rabbit, Ha! Ha!" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: TrJo067

Peter Was a Fisherman
DESCRIPTION: Peter was a fisherman who preached and shouted on Pentecost. "The lily of the valley ... the lily stand in the valley ... green and fair."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (WITrinidadVillage01)
KEYWORDS: flowers Bible nonballad religious FOUND IN: West Indies(Trinidad)
RECORDINGS:
Michael Williams, "Peter Was a Fisherman" (on WITrinidadVillage01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "He's the Lily of the Valley" (theme)
NOTES [273 words]: A critic quoted in the liner notes ridiculed the idea of Peter equating himself with the lily of the valley (Donald R. Hill, Maureen Warner-Lewis, John Cowley, Lise Winer, liner notes on WITrinidadVillage01). If we assume the lily reference is to the content of Peter's Pentecost sermon (Acts 2.14-30), and if we do not concentrate so on the word "of," then the reference can be to Luke 12.27-28 ("Consider the lilies how they grow ... If then God so clothe the grass ..."), rather than to Song of Solomon 2.1 ("I am the rose of Sharon, and the lily of the valleys"). That would be a reference not in Acts, but a conflation of sermon texts.
Sankey #104 has "Through Jesus I shall safely reach the goal. / He's the 'Lily of the Valley,' the 'Bright and Morning Star'; He's the fairest of ten thousand to my soul!!" (Ira D Sankey, Sacred Songs and Solos (London: Marshall, Morgan and Scott Ltd, 189?)). Booth #3 is entitled "He's the Lily of the Valley" (Evangeline Booth, The Salvation Army - Songs and Music (New York) The Salvation Army, 1922 ("Digitized by Internet Archive"): "The Lily of the Valley, in Him alone I see All I need to cleanse and make me whole". - BS
The word "lily" is used fifteen times in the King James Bible, and eight of these are in the Song of Songs (2:1, 2, 16, 4:5, 5:13, 6:2, 3, 7:2), it also shows up in 1 Kings 7:19, 22, 26, 2 Chronicles 4:5 as part of the description of the building of the Temple; in Hosea 14:5; and in Matthew 6:28, Luke 12:27, where it refers to the "lilies of the field" and Solomon. I doubt any of this is significant. As Ben says, this is just some texts jumbled together. - RBW
Peter Wheeler

DESCRIPTION: Peter Wheeler comes to "this foreign shore, He lived close by little Annie's door" in Nova Scotia. He asks Anne to marry and she refuses again. He clubs her and cuts her throat. He is convicted, gives us good advice and bids us "a last good-night"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick)

KEYWORDS: courting rejection execution homicide trial gallows-confession

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1895 - Anne Kempton murdered by Peter Wheeler at Bear River, Digby County (source: Mackenzie; Creighton says 1896)

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 91, "Peter Wheeler" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST CrSNB091 (Partial)
Roud #2770

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Bear River Murder" (subject: the same murder) and references there

File: CrSNB091

Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater

DESCRIPTION: Peter, a neeper [neighbor], pumpkin-eater, chimney sweeper, ... 'Had a wife and couldn't keep her." He put her away [in a wall, pumpkin shell] and mice eat her, or he treats her well. Or, didn't love her until he taught her to read and write.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1797 (_Infant Institutes, part the first_, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)

KEYWORDS: nonballad nonsense husband wife food

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1896, "Peer Peter My Neeper" (1 text)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 405, "Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater" (3 texts)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 32, "Peter, Peter, Pumpkin Eater" (1 text)

Roud #13497

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Heeper, peeper, Chimney-sweeper

NOTES [51 words]: There must be countless parodies like this one: "Peter, Peter, pumpkin eater, Had a wife and couldn't keep her, Took an axe and smashed her bike, So she had to stay at home at night" (source: Edmond Redmond, Lyra Cyclus or The Bards and the Bicycle, (Rochester, 1897 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 90). - BS

File: GrD81896

Peter's Banks

DESCRIPTION: William Strickland and Goddard take the Lily out on Peter's Banks on May 21. They are lost in wind and fog for six days without food or water and Goddard dies. A fishing skiff from Ramea rescues Strickland.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Peacock)

KEYWORDS: rescue death fishing sea ship

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
May 24, 1897 - Albert Goddard is lost on the Lily (source: Newfoundland Schoonermen -- Victims of their Trade per Robert C Parsons NF Shipwrecks on the WEB site)

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
Peterborough May Song

DESCRIPTION: "Good morrow, lords and ladies, It is the first of May. We hope you'll view our garlands." "To the greenwoods we will go," "This bunch of May... is but a sprout but it's well spread out By the work of our Lord's hand." Singers celebrate spring, ask alms

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Dack, according to Palmer)

KEYWORDS: ritual religious bird

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #134, "Peterborough May Song" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #305

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "May Day Carol" (subject) and references there

NOTES [27 words]: Roud lumps a great variety of May songs (many of them clearly distinct) under his #305. I've split a lot of them, including this, but best to check them all. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.7

File: PECS134

Peterhead

DESCRIPTION: "A busy town was Peterhead ... In the days of long ago": lasses worked at looms, whaling ships sailed to Greenland, "fishermen went out to sea," "drifters were unknown." "Peterhead will flourish still As in the days of long ago"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: commerce fishing weaving nonballad whaler

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #86, p. 1, "Peterhead" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 515, "Peterhead" (1 text)

Roud #5999

NOTES [96 words]: Greig/Duncan3 has a map on p. xxxv, of "places mentioned in songs in volume 3" showing the song number as well as place name; Peterhead (515) is at coordinate (h4-5,v1) on that map [on the coast, roughly 28 miles NNE of Aberdeen] - BS

Peterhead was for a time famous as the place where the Old Pretender landed in 1715. As the song indicates, it was a leading whaling port. But first the arctic whales were hunted to near-extinction, and then the fish populations crashed. Peterhead was never to recover its prosperity (although I gather North Sea oil has helped somewhat). - RBW

Last updated in version 2.6

File: GrD3515

Petit Couturier, La (The Little Dressmaker)

DESCRIPTION: French. A dressmaker goes to an inn; there are two lovely women there. He makes love with the smaller one; the larger offers the dressmaker 100 sovereigns to sleep with her. He declines, for honor's sake. She throws him out of the inn.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1855 (BNP MSS)
LONG DESCRIPTION: French. A dressmaker goes to an inn; there are two lovely women there. He makes love with the smaller one; the larger, however, is searching for a husband, and offers the dressmaker 100 sovereigns to sleep with her. He declines, for the sake of his own honor and the smaller woman's. The larger woman throws him out of the inn. On the street, his knees begin to tremble; he says that if he were back at peace, he'd never refuse a damsel, but they have tricked him too much.

KEYWORDS: jealousy courting sex rejection request foreignlanguage lover worker

FOUND IN: France Canada

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 113, "Le Petit Couturier [The Little Dressmaker]" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: K113

Petit Mari, Le

DESCRIPTION: French. "Mon pere m'a donné-t-un petit mari." The girl complains that her father wed her to a tiny husband, "a manikin, not a man." She complains about all the problems this causes -- e.g. the cat confuses him with a rat.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry)

KEYWORDS: humorous foreignlanguage husband wife animal

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 189-190, "Le Petit Mari" (1 French text plus translation, 1 tune)

File: LoSi189

Petit Moine, Le (The Little Monk)

DESCRIPTION: French. The little monk finds a dairy-maid crying because she has trouble milking her cows. She offers a kiss if he does the job. The cow kicks over the pail, then kicks the monk into a ditch. The monk vows he'll never again help anyone milk a cow.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (recording, Allan Kelly)

KEYWORDS: farming foreignlanguage humorous animal clergy

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

RECORDINGS:
Allan Kelly, "Le Petit Moine (The Little Monk)" (on Miramichi1)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Deacon's Calf" (plot)

File: RcLPetMo

Petit Rocher

DESCRIPTION: Canadian French: The trapper, wandering in the forest, fears for his family's safety. He returns home, and arranges for his family's flight from marauding Indians. He remains and is mortally wounded. He prays for comfort in death.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1865 (Gagnon)

KEYWORDS: Quebec family death separation Indians(Am.) foreignlanguage

FOUND IN: Canada(Que,West) US(MW)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes, p. 24, "P'tit rocher, de la haute montagne (Little Rock Atop the Mountain Crest" (1 text + translation, 1 tune)
Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong, pp. 34-35, "Petit Rocher" (1 text, 1 tune)
Salt-BuckeyeHeritage-OhioHistory, pp. 18-19, "Petit Rocher de la Haute Montagne" (1 text+translation, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: Grace Lee Nute, _The Voyageur_, Appleton, 1931 (reprinted 1987 Minnesota Historical Society), pp. 148-149, "Petit Rocher" (1 text plus English translation, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Haunted Wood" (plot)

NOTES [156 words]: This is said to be "the first Canadian song about a Canadian incident." The song is supposedly based on the legend of the trapper Cadieux. In 1709 he went trapping along the Ottawa River. Returning to his camp and his family, he saw a band of Indians threatening the camp. He put his family in the canoe and stayed behind to slow the attackers.
When his body was found, it lay in a grave he had dug with his own hands, and with his story written on birchbark with his own blood.
We must regretfully report that little if any verifiable evidence exists for this story. - RBW

Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes gives the Cadieux story, but also mentions that one Frank Louvier, an elderly and "well-known folk singer of the region" around Prairie du Rocher, Illinois, stated that local legend placed the events on which the song was based in that community, founded by the French in the 1730s. No evidence beyond the assertion, unfortunately. - PJS

Last updated in version 5.3
File: FMB034

Petroleum Oil

DESCRIPTION: "How strange! Why, old Fishkill is all in a blaze, And the people -- why, they the Old Nick will soon raise!" All "are prospecting for Petroleum Oil." Oil is everywhere -- even in the water and the whiskey. But at least they're getting rich

AUTHOR: "A. W. L." (source: Nestler)

EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (Nestler)

KEYWORDS: mining money drink

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1864 - the Fishkill oil "strike" (which seems to have been hoax)

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Harold Nestler, "Songs from the Hudson Valley" (article in _New York Folklore Quarterly_, Volume V, #2, Summer 1949), p. 101, "Petroleum Oil" (1 text)

File: Nest109

Petticoat Lane (II)

DESCRIPTION: A man from the country comes to town. His friend shows him the sights of Petticoat Lane. He is beaten at every turn and his pockets picked clean. The police charge him with killing a policeman. His policeman brother Darby gets him off. He goes home

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1855 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(2996))

KEYWORDS: travel violence homicide theft reprieve brother police crime brother

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, pp. 18-19, "Petticoat Lane" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1871, p. 126, "Petticoat Lane" (1 reference)

Roud #V20294

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(2996), "Petticoat Lane" ("To London I came from the sweet county Down"), E.M.A. Hodges (London), 1846-1854; also 2806 b.11(167), Firth b.25(393), "Petticoat Lane"

NOTES [58 words]: Charles R. Thatcher wrote a song, "Encore Verses to Petticoat Lane" (Thatcher-ColonialMinstrel-Songsters, pp. 174-175). I assume this is the "Petticoat Lane" he meant.
For brief background on Charles Thatcher's career, see the notes to "Where's Your License?" For an extensive collection of his songs, see Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.1
File: OCon018A
Petty Harbour Bait Skiff

DESCRIPTION: A bait skiff sails from Petty Harbour to Conception Bay in the spring and encounters a storm on their return in the summer. A rescue party is dispatched, but only a young fisherman named Menshon is saved.

AUTHOR: John Grace

EARLIEST DATE: 1852 (source: Another Time: Songs of Newfoundland); first publication perhaps 1912 (Murphy)

KEYWORDS: wreck ship disaster rescue

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (8 citations):
Fowke/MacMillan-PenguinBookOfCanadianFolkSongs 13, "The Petty Harbour Bait Skiff" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 87, "The Petty Harbour Bait Skiff" (1 text, 1 tune)
Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, pp. 99-101, "The Petty Harbour Bait Skiff" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mills-FavoriteSongsOfNewfoundland, pp. 29-31, "Petty Harbour Bait Skiff" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, BAITSKIF*

ADDITIONAL: James Murphy, editor, _Old Songs of Newfoundland_, James Murphy Publishing, 1912 (PDF available on the Memorial University of Newfoundland web site), p. 4, "Petty Harbor Bait Skiff" (1 text) James Murphy, _Songs Their Fathers Sung: For Fishermen: Old Time Ditties_, James Murphy Publishing, 1923 (PDF available from the Memorial University of Newfoundland web site), p. 8, "Petty Harbor Bait Skiff" (1 text)

Roud #4410

RECORDINGS:
Cyril O'Brien, "Petty Harbour Bait Skiff" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Pat Sullivan, "Petty Harbour Bait Skiff" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

NOTES [163 words]: Doyle mentions that he received the song from someone who was still alive when the book was compiled and remembered the events fully. However, the recording, "Another Time: Songs of Newfoundland," notes that John Grace wrote the song in 1852, which was almost ninety years before Doyle published it.

The attribution to John Grace is also found in Murphy's book, which seems to be the first actual publication. He says that the name of the sole survivor was "Menchington."

According to G. M. Story, W. J. Kirwin, and J. D. A. Widdowson, editors, _Dictionary of Newfoundland English_, second edition with supplement, Breakwater Press, 1990, p. 15, a baitskiff is a "large undecked boat with 5 to 7 crewmen, propelled by oar and sail and employed to catch caplin, etc. for use in the cod fishery." These bait fish included herring, lance, squid and others; they were used to bait the lines used to catch cod, Newfoundland's chief food source and export (StoryEtAl, p. 14). - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: Doy48

Pewter Tailor, The

DESCRIPTION: The tailor, apparently needing money, enlists with Hugh Fraser. The captain warned him that he could not be a soldier if he is not sober. Someone tells the tailor's mother and his sister buys off the tailor.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan1)

KEYWORDS: army recruiting money humorous mother sister

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan1 76, "The Pewter Tailor" (1 text)

Roud #5795

NOTES [169 words]: I am too dense for this humor. The chorus is "O for lead and tin, Pewter, tin and siller; O for twenty pun, To buy the pewter tailor." First, I assume "pun" stands for "pundis" or "pounds" (source: "Glossary" at Wedderburn pages site). Pewter is a silvery alloy of tin, copper and lead. Pewter was used in counterfeit British coins in 18th century (source: "Counterfeit British Coppers" at The Coins of Colonial and Early America site). Is any of this relevant?
Greig/Duncan1: "There may possibly be a connection with the Hugh Fraser who was captain in the 78th (Highland) Regiment c. 1780" - BS
My speculation about the tailor being "pewter" has to do with the use of pewter as fake silver -- used for dinnerware, or (as noted) for counterfeit coin. The pewter tailor is an imitation soldier. There is also the point that pewter eventually poisoned its users as the lead leached out. But the composer of the song would probably be less aware of that than of the use of pewter by those who couldn't afford silver. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD1076

Phadrig Crohour
DESCRIPTION: "Phadrig Crohour was a broth of a boy, and he stood six foot eight" with strong arms; "...with one blow he stretched bold O'Hanlan for ever."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: violence death
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1748, "Phadrig Crohour" (1 fragment)
Roud #13132
NOTES [15 words]: Although this sounds like a song about a murder, I suspect it is actually about boxing. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD1748

Pharaoh's Host Got Lost
DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Pharaoh's host got lost, lost, lost, Pharaoh's host got lost In that Red Sea." The leader would have Moses "lay your rod" that the children cross. When the host was lost there was shouting and weeping.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1983 (McIntosh1)
KEYWORDS: escape death drowning dying sea magic Bible religious soldier
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Lawrence McKiver and the McIntosh County Shouters, "Pharaoh's Host Got Lost" (on McIntosh1)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Oh, Mary, Don't You Weep" (Pharaoh's army theme) and references there
cf. "Old Moses Smote the Waters" (Pharaoh's army theme)
File: RcPhHoGL

Phil the Fluther's Ball
DESCRIPTION: "Have you heard of Phil the Fluther, of the town of Ballymuch? The times were going hard with him, in fact the man was broke." So he holds a party, passing the hat, promising that the more he takes in, the better the music will be AUTHOR: Percy French (1854-1920)
EARLIEST DATE: before 1920 (French died in that year)
KEYWORDS: music hardtimes humorous
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
DT, PHILFLUT
ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 32, #4 (1987), pp, 22-23, "Phil the Fluther's Ball" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [22 words]: For background on Percy French, see the notes to "Ballyjamesduff." Apparently this song was based on the story of a real person. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: DTphilfl
Philadelphia Lawyer, The

DESCRIPTION: "Way out in Reno, Nevada," the Philadelphia lawyer courts a "Hollywood maid." He tries to convince her to come back to Philadelphia with him. But her husband Bill, discovering them, kills the lawyer.

AUTHOR: Words: Woody Guthrie (tune: The Jealous Lover)
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (composed)
KEYWORDS: homicide lawyer courting derivative cowboy infidelity
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, pp. 283-284, "The Philadelphia Lawyer" (1 text)
DT, PHILALAW
Roud #500
RECORDINGS:
Woody Guthrie & Cisco Houston, "Philadelphia Lawyer" (on OrigVis, CowFolkCD1)
Maddox Bros. & Rose, "Philadelphia Lawyer" (on Four Star 1289, 1949)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Reno Blues
NOTES [32 words]: In one of the strangest lumps I've seen, Roud classifies this with the "Florella" family [Laws F1]. That, of course, provided some inspiration, but the actual text is pure Woody Guthrie. - RBW
File: Grnw283

Philadelphia Riots, De, or, I Guess It Wan't de Niggas Dis Time

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, in Philadelphia folks say how De Darkies kick up all de rows," but in the 1844 riots, "I guess it wasn't de niggas dis time." The "natives" (nativists) opposie the immigrant Irish, resulting in riots. The singer gleefully points out his lack of fault.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 19C (Wolf); probably published c. 1844
KEYWORDS: emigration fight Black(s) political
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1875, p. 126, "Philadelphia Riots" (1 reference)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 143-146, "De Philadelphia Riots, or, I Guess It Wasn't De Niggas Dis Time" (1 text)
File: CAFS1143

Philander's March

DESCRIPTION: "Come, Philander, let us be a-marching, From the ranks there's no deserting, Choose your own, your own true lover, See that you don't choose any other. Now farewell, dear love, farewell, We're all a-marching, so farewell."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren)
KEYWORDS: playparty love soldier separation
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #9, "Philander's March" (2 texts)
Roud #12426
File: Newe009

Phoenix of the Hall, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets and falls in love with "the Phoenix of the Hall." He proposes. "Drop such speculation," she says, but he begs. She changes her mind. They marry and he now has money and land: "to her am obligated." "My foes I've exculpated."

AUTHOR: Domhnall O Suillebhain (Danny O'Sullivan) (source: OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin) Phoenix Park Tragedy, The

DESCRIPTION: Burke and Cavendish are murdered in Dublin's Phoenix Park. The Lord Mayor and Irish MPs -- Davitt, Parnell, Dillon, Sexton -- condemn the assassins. "[L]et us hope and pray to the Lord each night and day, That no Irishman for this crime will be blamed"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE:

KEYWORDS: homicide Ireland political

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Chronology of the Phoenix Park murders (source: primarily Zimmermann, pp. 62, 63, 281-286.)
May 6, 1882 - Chief Secretary Lord Frederick Cavendish and the Under Secretary Thomas Henry Burke are murdered by a group calling themselves "The Invincible Society."
January 1883 - twenty seven men are arrested.
James Carey, one of the leaders in the murders, turns Queen's evidence.
Six men are condemned to death, four are executed (Joseph Brady is hanged May 14, 1883; Daniel Curley is hanged on May 18, 1883), others are "sentenced to penal servitude," and Carey is freed and goes to South Africa.
July 29, 1883 - Patrick O'Donnell kills Carey on board the "Melrose Castle" sailing from Cape Town to Durban.
Dec 1883 - Patrick O'Donnell is convicted of the murder of James Carey and executed in London (per Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast)

FOUND IN:
Roud #V8799

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 26(362), "Lines on the Phoenix Park Tragedy" ("Pay attention young and old to these lines"), unknown, n.d.

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Condemned Men for the Phoenix Park Murders" (subject: the Phoenix Park murders)
cf. "The Execution of Michael Fagan" (subject: the Phoenix Park murders)
cf. "Joe Brady and Dan Curley" (subject: the Phoenix Park murders)
cf. "The Men Awaiting Trial for the Murders in Phoenix Park" (subject: the Phoenix Park murders)
cf. "O'Donnell and Carey" (subject: the Phoenix Park murders)
cf. "O'Donnell the Avenger" (subject: the Phoenix Park murders)
cf. "Pat O'Donnell" (subject: the Phoenix Park murders)
cf. "Skin the Goat's Curse on Carey" (subject: the Phoenix Park murders)
cf. "Dan Curley" (subject: the Phoenix Park murders)
cf. "Joe Brady" (subject: the Phoenix Park murders)
cf. "The Bold Tenant Farmer" (subject: Charles Stewart Parnell) and references there
cf. "Carey's Disguise" (possible subject of James Carey)

NOTES [1077 words]: Zimmermann p. 62: "The Phoenix Park murders and their judicial sequels struck the popular imagination and were a gold-mine for ballad-writers: some thirty songs were issued on this subject, which was the last great cause to be so extensively commented upon in broadside ballads." - BS
The Phoenix Park murders were, in the end, very costly for Ireland; at the very least, they destroyed her influence in the English parliament, and arguably cost them Home Rule and eventually resulted in the Civil War.

Though it doesn't seem to have bothered the more vigorous Irish nationalists, we should note that the Phoenix Park murders were incredibly brutal; Kee, p. 87, says that Cavendish and the Catholic Irishman Burke were "hacked to death by twelve-inch long surgical knives."

Lyons, p. 176, says that on May 6, 1882, "A new Chief Secretary, Lord Frederick Cavendish, arrived in Dublin to replace W. E. Forster who had resigned in protest at the Kilmarnam 'Treaty' [under which British Prime Minister Gladstone freed Charles Stewart Parnell and gave concessions in return for political help]. Later on the evening of his arrival Cavendish and his undersecretary, T. H. Burke, were set upon by a band of assassins while they were walking in the Phoenix Park in Dublin and stabbed to death. The murderers belonged to a secret society, the Invincibles."

Fetherling, p. 72, reports that "[Joseph] Brady stabbed Burke in the back with a long surgical knife; Burke died immediately. Alarmed, Cavendish attempted to repel Brady with his umbrella but Brady stabbed him repeatedly, while [Tim] Kelly cut Burke's throat to make sure he was dead."

Sadly, the murders forced Gladstone's hands at a time when he was trying to improve Ireland's condition. It was not just the English who were upset; Charles Stewart Parnell -- who dominated Irish politics and held the balance of power in the English parliament -- offered to resign his leadership of the Irish party (Golway, p. 175).

Parnell, for the moment, stayed on. But Gladstone still had to be seen to do something -- that something being coercion. (Any scruples he may have had were probably lessened by the fact that Cavendish was Gladstone's nephew by marriage.) And when Gladstone finally managed to propose a limited Home Rule bill in 1886, it failed and Gladstone's government fell (Golway, p. 180).

We might add that Parnell himself was largely responsible for the sequel: His party fell apart not over Phoenix Park but his own adulterous affair (Fry/Fry, 259-260). Gladstone tried again for Home Rule in 1893; it was rejected in the Lords, and Gladstone sort of faded away. So did Home Rule. And while Zimmermann is clearly right that this terrorist act caught the attention of the broadside press, it's worth noting that very little of this outpouring of venom seems to have made it into oral tradition. [One song that has been found in Newfoundland and the Canadian Maritimes as well as Ireland is "Pat O'Donnell" which tells only of the assassination of Brady at the very end of the story. - BS]

It did have its effects, though. According to Townshend, p. 6, the murder was carried out by "[t]he nearest thing to a home-grown terrorist group to appear in Ireland [prior to the twentieth century]... the shadowy Irish National Invincibles.... This ephemeral group carried out only one operation. All the same, that single operations... had a tremendous psychological impact. Together with the Manchester Martyrs, the Invincibles' drama became an enduring spur to later generations."

Coogan, pp. 12-13, gives another take, showing how the horrid events influenced a future Irish leader: "In the year [Eamon] de Valera was born, the desperation... led to some of the most horrific murders in Irish history. There were some sixty agrarian or politics-related killings in the first eight months of the year alone. Amongst these were the knifing to death on 6 May 1882, the day he arrived in Ireland, of the Chief Secretary for Ireland, Lord Frederick Cavendish, and of his Under Secretary, T. H. Burke...." Some would argue that reaction in Britain to the deaths aborted progress to Home Rule for Ireland and so paved the way for revolution, partition and today's Provision IRA. Certainly, Parnell was so shattered by the assassinations that for a while he seriously contemplated resignation. Then, in August, there occurred the Maamtrasna murders in Co. Mayo: The Joyce family were slaughtered in a clay-floored hovel shared by humans and animals." Four people were killed, and two boys were mutilated and left for dead. "The neighbours, out of superstition and ignorance, left the boys in agony without doing anything to help them. One child died, and subsequently three men -- one of them innocent -- were hanged for the crime...."

Maamtrasna and the related events became the talk of Ireland, obviously adding to the tensions there.

Boylan, pp. 50-51, has a capsule biography of James Carey, one of the key figures in the Invincibles. Born in 1845, he was a bricklayer, like his father before him. Able to start his own business, he became a Dublin Councilman as well as joining the Fenians. After the Phoenix Park murders, he was one of seventeen men arrested. Carey turned Queen's Evidence, which resulted in five other men being executed. (Fetherling, pp. 71-72, lists the most important as Joseph Brady, 1856-1883, and Tim Kely, 1862-1883). Carey and his family were supposed to go to South Africa for their safety, but the remaining Invincibles learned of the plan. Patrick O'Donnell shot Carey on July 29, 1883 on the Melrose after the ship left Cape Town. Sent back to Britain, O'Donnell was executed at Newgate on December 17 of that year, without his Fenian connections being aired. It is interesting to note that O'Donnell had cousins in American who were associated with another violent group, the Molly Maguires (Kenny, p. 207); for background on that, see the notes to "Muff Lawler, the Squealer" [Laws E25]. Kenny seems to suggest that O'Donnell spent time in Pennsylvania and developed his hatred of informants among his cousins there. For more on Parnell, see "We Won't Let Our Leader Run Down."
The Phoenix Park murders apparently inspired several books; the two most recent (both of them controversial, based on the reviews) appear to be T. H. Corfe, The Phoenix Park Murders, 1968; and Senan Molony, The Phoenix Park Murders: Conspiracy, Betrayal & Retribution, Mercier Press, 2006. - RBW

Bibliography

- Kee: Robert Kee, The Bold Fenian Men, being volume II of The Green Flag (covering the period from around 1848 to the Easter Rising), Penguin, 1972

Last updated in version 6.1

Phyllis and her Mother

DESCRIPTION: Phyllis hides in the woods. Her mother finds her asleep. The daughter drowsily says, "Damon, dear, how long you take." The mother, enraged, tells Phyllis she must go to a convent; Phyllis demurs: "And if love is wrong, said she/Tell me how I came to be."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (recording [in German], Paul Reimers)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Waiting for her shepherd lover, Phyllis hides in the woods. Her mother looks for her and, finding her asleep, kisses her supposedly-innocent daughter. The daughter drowsily says, "Damon, dear, how long you take." The mother, enraged, tells Phyllis she must go to a convent; Phyllis demurs: "And if love is wrong, said she/Tell me how I came to be."

KEYWORDS: courting sex foreignlanguage mother

FOUND IN:

RECORDINGS:

Paul Reimers, "Phyllis und die Mutter" (Victor 45062, 1915)

NOTES [123 words]: The song is probably best-known, in an English translation, from the repertoire of revival singer Richard Dyer-Bennet. However, the 78 by Paul Reimers is evidence that the song circulated in German during the 20th century. Reimers seems to have been an American (or at least a resident), recording for Victor in New Jersey, and most of his recordings are of English-language popular music. Dyer-Bennet notes an anonymous publication of the song in Germany in 1799, but without further data I'm reluctant to list that as earliest date. - PJS It seems pretty clear to me that it's an art song rather than of true folk origin (at least in the Dyer-Bennet form), but I'm in the same quandry as Paul: I can't do much to trace the history. - RBW

Phyllis and the Shepherd

DESCRIPTION: A shepherd looking for a lost lamb falls in love with Phyllis, who he finds apparently sleeping in the shade with her flock. She reveals that she was not asleep and had been watching him. "He wooed her and won her, I can't tell you how" and they marry.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1776 (Herd)
KEYWORDS: courting love marriage sex sheep shepherd
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 38, "Phyllis and the Shepherd" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 363)
ADDITIONAL: David Herd, editor, Ancient and Modern Scottish Songs, Heroic Ballads, etc. (facsimile of (Edinburgh,1776) with an "Appendix ... containing the pieces substituted in the 1791 reprint for those omitted of the 1776 edition, &c.") ("Digitized by Google"), Vol II, Appendix p. 41 [2-44], ("Her sheep had in clusters kept close by the grove") (1 text)
Roud #1225
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 21(1), "Damon & Phillis" ("A shepherd in clusters crept close by a grove"), C. Sheppard (London), 1786; also Harding B 41(3v), ("A shepherd in clusters crept close by a grove"), Harding B 25(1496)[many illegible lines], "Phillis and the Butterfly"

Pick "Em Up, Hot Potatoes (Bugle Call Lyric)

DESCRIPTION: "Pick 'em up, pick 'em up, Hot potatoes, hot potatoes, hot potatoes, Pick 'em up, pick 'em up, Hot potatoes, hot potatoes, oh!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang)
KEYWORDS: soldier food nonballad
Pick a Bale of Cotton

DESCRIPTION: "You got to jump down, turn around, Pick a bale of cotton...." A list of various people who can, alone or in combination, pick a bale of cotton a day. (In the more serious versions, the singer disclaims any ability to do such a thing.)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (recording, James "Iron Head" Baker & group)

KEYWORDS: work nonballad farming bragging

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (8 citations):
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 393-304, "Pick a Bale o' Cotton" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 68, "Pick a Bale of Cotton" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 231-233, "Pick a Bale o' Cotton" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 99-101, "Pick a Bale o' Cotton" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Seeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 54, "Pick A Bale Of Cotton" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 123, "Pick A Bale Of Cotton" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Moses Asch and Alan Lomax, Editors, _The Leadbelly Songbook_, Oak, 1962, p. 56, "Pick a Bale of Cotton" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10061

RECORDINGS:
James "Iron Head" Baker & group, "Pick a Bale o' Cotton" (AFS 195 A1, 1933; on LC53)
James "Iron Head" Baker, "Pick a Bale o' Cotton" (AFS 721 B3, 1936) (AFS 3523 A3, 3523 B3, c. 1940)
Folkmasters, "Pick a Bale of Cotton" (on Fmst01)
Mose "Clear Rock" Platt, "Pick a Bale o' Cotton" (AFS 2643 A2, 1939)
Pete Seeger & Sonny Terry, "Pick a Bale of Cotton" (on SeegerTerry)
Pete Seeger, "Pick a Bale o' Cotton" (on PeteSeeger43)

NOTES [15 words]: Picking a bale of cotton in a single day is, for one picker, an almost superhuman task. - PJS

Last updated in version 3.1

File: LxU068

Pick and Shovel

DESCRIPTION: "The pick and shovel are all that I know, I'm workin' the day-shift away down below, A mile underground I keep pickin' all day." "From Cornwall we have come to explore." The miners have been working since age six. He is grateful for his wife

AUTHOR: almost certainly Carl Nelson

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin)

KEYWORDS: mining wife work

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 78-79, "Pick and Shovel" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: David C. Peterson, "Wisconsin Folksongs," chapter in _Badger History: Wisconsin Folklore_, State Historical Society of Wisconsin (Volume XXV, Number 2, November 1973), pp. 53-54, "Pick and Shovel" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9076

NOTES [44 words]: The inclusion of this song in Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin is rather a curiosity. It is about miners from Upper Michigan, not Wisconsin, and it was found in a musical play, not composed for "folk" use. It does not appear to have found a place in tradition. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5

File: Pet078
Pickaxe Too Heavy
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, dis pickaxe am too heavy, Dis pickaxe am too heavy, Dis pickaxe am too heavy To heavy for my strength."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: work
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 216, (no title) (1 fragment)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Take This Hammer" (theme)
NOTES [31 words]: This is obviously reminiscent of "Nine Pound Hammer/Take This Hammer" and the like. But the song applies to a different occupation, so -- for lack of additional words -- I split them. - RBW
File: ScNF216A

Picket Line Blues, The
DESCRIPTION: "Com all my friends if you want to know And I'll tell you about the C.I.O.... I'll tell you about the Ashland Strike." The workers picket, and some are arrested; the singer says he will not be discouraged, even though "I've got them picket line blues"
AUTHOR: Bunyan Day
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)
KEYWORDS: strike labor-movement police trial lawyer
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 238-239, "The Picket Line Blues" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Ashland Strike" (subject)
NOTES [105 words]: 1937 is listed by Thomas as the date of the strike mentioned in this song. This is supported by internal evidence: The song mentions the Wagner Act (National Labor Relations Act), which legally protected collective bargaining; it was passed in 1935 and declared constitutional by the Supreme Court in 1937.
John L. Lewis (the "John L." of the song) originally served as president of the United Mine Workers, then came into the AFL as chief of the Committee for Industrial Organizations. This group proved too radical for the AFL, and so was expelled in 1937, whereupon Lewis remade it as the Congress of Industrial Organizations. - RBW
File: ThBa128

Pickin' Out Cotton
DESCRIPTION: "Hello, my little girl, which away, which away... Mammy sent me pickin' out cotton." The girl and the singer converse about the state of the cotton and where she is going; the girl (?) concludes by asking for a chew of tobacco
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: work drugs farming
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 212, "Pickin' Out Cotton" (1 text plus an excerpt)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 212, "Pickin' Out Cotton" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
File: Br3212

Pickle My Bones in Alcohol
DESCRIPTION: A dying request, with the verse, "When I die don't bury me at all... Just pickle my bones in alcohol" (or, sometimes, corn pone). The rest of the song varies widely, usually with other requests for the burial; it may also have blues floating verses

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: drink burial floating verses

FOUND IN: US(SE) West Indies

REFERENCES (4 citations):

Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 38, "Pickle My Bones in Alcohol" (1 relatively full text, 3 fragments plus mention of 2 more)

Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 38, "Pickle My Bones in Alcohol" (2 tunes plus text excerpts)

Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, p. 24, "When I Die" (1 short text)

Roud #727

RECORDINGS:

Edith Perrin, "When I Die" [fragment] (on USWarnerColl01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Hard Times in the Mill (I)" (floating lyrics)

NOTES [165 words]: This piece is one of those Big Problems, because the key verse ("When I die don't bury me at all") floats, and also has a variable ending. We do the best we can with it.

Edith Perrin's West Indian version is so distinct that I thought about calling it a separate song:

Mama, when I die
Don't you bury me at all
Just cure my bone and body in alcohol.

Two bottles of beer,
One at my head and one at my feet,
Then to show the world
That my bones can cure,
My bones can cure.

I suspect that this may have mixed in part of another song -- just possibly, in fact, a religious song, since the Bible tells, e.g., of the curative power of Elisha's bones (2 Kings 13:21). But we really need more text to prove it.

The NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal tet is

When I die bury me deep,
Put a bowl of gravy at my feet.
Put two biscuits in my hand;
I'll sop my way to the glory land.

This could be almost anything; I'm putting it here mostly because Brown has other When I Die items from North Carolina. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1

File: Br3038

Pickled Jew, The

DESCRIPTION: "Two middle-age brothers in New York once dwelt"; the two were Jewish merchants. One dies and leaves his property to his brother if he will bury him in England. The brother ships it to England as salt pork. The crew, in distress, unknowingly eats it

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin); before 1863 (broadside, Bodleian Bod10069 Firth c.20(132))

LONG DESCRIPTION: Isaac and Moses are rich merchants in New York. Moses dies and his will leaves all his goods to Isaac if he is buried in "old English soil." No captain will carry the body of a Jew, so Isaac cuts and pickles the body and says it is a barrel of pork. The ship is becalmed and, provisions being short, they eat the "pork." Isaac explains that they have eaten his brother. The captain offers to pay for the body as if it were pork. Isaac feels he can't accept money for -- that is, sell -- his brother but accepts the payment as if for the barrel and brine.

KEYWORDS: Jew cannibalism sailor disaster humorous greed trick burial corpse death commerce sea ship food starvation America England humorous animal brother

FOUND IN: US(MW) Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 290-291, "The Pickled Jew" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, PCKLDJEW
ADDITIONAL: John Ashton, Modern Street Ballads (London: Chatto & Windus, 1888 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), pp. 170-172, "The Barrel of Pork" ("Two Israelite brothers in New York once dwelt") (1 text)
Roud #15684 and
RECORDINGS:
Paddy Duggan, "Barrel of Pork" (on MUNFLA-Leach)
Bob Walker, "The Pickled Jew" (AFS 3290 B1, 1941)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Bod10069 Firth c.20(132), "The Barrel of Pork" ("Two Israelite brothers in New York once dwelt"), H. Such (London), 1849-1862; also Bod4175 Firth b.27(107), "The Barrel of Pork"
NOTES [46 words]: Roud files the versions of this called "The Pickled Jew" as #15684; those labelled "Barrel of Pork" as #15912, but they have so much in common that I have concluded that they are one song. The long description is of a "Barrel of Pork" text, the short, of "The Pickled Jew." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.1
File: Pet290

Picnic at Groshaut, The
DESCRIPTION: The ladies prepare the picnic "upon the teagrounds at Gros Haut" but it rains until noon. "If it wasn't a success, 'twas a frolic nonetheless" The picnic is rescheduled for the next day with cider-drinking, dancing, and "scuffles" meanwhile.
AUTHOR: Lawrence Doyle
EARLIEST DATE: 1968 (Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland)
KEYWORDS: fight dancing drink music party
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 14-15, "The Picnic at Gros Haut" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 178-179,253, "The Picnic at Groshaut" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12483
RECORDINGS:
Arthur Cahill, "The Picnic at Groshaut" (on MREIves01)
NOTES [11 words]: Groshaut is in the northeast corner of Kings, Prince Edward Island - BS
File: Dib014

Picnic in the Northwest, The DESCRIPTION: An August picnic in poor weather has some folks say they had other plans. Those who go row to the spot. Meal being over, they sweeten bad tea with four-cent syrup bought on credit. It being rainy they all get wet, put on dry clothes and go to a dance.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA-Leach)
KEYWORDS: clothes dancing food party sea ship shore humorous moniker
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
Roud #26978
RECORDINGS:
Harry Curtis, "The Picnic in the Northwest" (on MUNFLA-Leach)
File: ML3PitNo

Picnic, A
DESCRIPTION: "What's any better than a picnic? The victuals all on the ground, Flies in the buttermilk, bugs in the butter, And the skeeters humming around. Goin' down, children, Goin' down, I say, Goin' down, children, to have a holiday."
Picture from Life's Other Side, A

DESCRIPTION: "In the world's mighty gallery of pictures Hang scenes that are faded from life...." The song describes the pictures from life's other side: A gambler staking his mother's ring, a thief killing his brother for gold, a starving woman leaping off a bridge.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1896 (sheet music)

KEYWORDS: poverty hardtimes robbery suicide gambling death

FOUND IN: US(SE,So)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
- Randolph 603, "A Picture from Life's Other Side" (1 text)
- Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 422-424, "A Picture from Life's Other Side" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 603)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 265, "A Picture From Life's Other Side" (1 text)
- Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 153-154, "The Lights of London Town" (1 text, 1 tune, quite distinct from the common version)
- Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, p. 148, "Pictures from Life's Other Side" (1 fragment)

DT, PICTLIFE*

Roud #3527

RECORDINGS:
- Benny Borg (The Singing Soldier), "Picture from Life's Other Side" (Columbia 15183-D, 1927; Velvet Tone 7109-V/Clarion 5141-C, 1930)
- The Blue Sky Boys, "Picture From Life's Other Side" (Bluebird 8646/Montgomery Ward M-8845, 1941; rec. 1940)
- The Clinch Valley Boys, "Picture From Life's Other Side" (Champion 15316/Silvertone 5091/Challenge 393 [as Borton & Lang], 1927)
- Vernon Dalhart, "Pictures from Life's Other Side" (OKeh 40696, 1926)
- Hank & Slim, "Three Pictures of Life's Other Side" (Vocalion 02808, Vocalion 02840, 1934)
- Harkins & Moran [pseud. for Sid Harkreader & Grady Moore], "A Picture from Life's Other Side" (Broadway 8055, c. 1930)
- Jenkins Family [or Jenkins Sacred Singers], "Pictures from Life's Other Side" (OKeh 45134, 1927)
- Matt Judson, "Pictures from Life's Other Side" (Clarion 5141-C, 1930)
- Kelly Family, "A Picture from Life's Other Side" (Decca 5054, 1934)
- Bradley Kincaid, "A Picture from Life's Other Side" (Vocalion 5476, 1930; Conqueror 7983, 1932; Vocalion 4637, 1939)
- Luke the Drifter [pseud., Hank Williams], "Pictures from Life's Other Side" (MGM 11120, 1951)
- Frank Luther's Trio, "A Picture of Life's Other Side" (Decca 5039, 1934)
- Old Southern Sacred Singers, "Picture from Life's Other Side" (Brunswick 115, 1926; recut 1932)
- Sam Patterson Trio, "Pictures from Life's Other Side" (Edison 52085, 1927)
- Goebel Reeves, "Pictures from Life's Other Side" (MacGregor 875, n.d.)
- Smith's Sacred Singers, "Pictures from Life's Other Side" (Columbia 15090-D, 1926/Vocalion 02949, 1935) (Bluebird B-5606, 1934; Montgomery Ward M-4804, 1935)
- Smoky Mountain Sacred Singers "'Tis a Picture From Life's Other Side" (Vocalion 5119, c. 1927/Dominio 0186, 1927 [as Smoky Mountain Twins, "A Picture From Life's Other Side"]) "'Tis a Picture From Life's Other Side" (Vocalion 5119, 1927; rec. 1926) (Domino 0186 [as Smoky Mountain Twins,"A Picture From Life's Other Side"], 1927/Challenge 667/Banner 6041 [both as Lonesome Pine Twins, "A Picture from Life's Other Side"], 1927; Banner 0586 [as Smoky Mountain Twins, "Picture from Life's Other Side"], 1930)
- Frank Welling, "Picture[s] from Life's Other Side" (Champion 15924 [as Clarence Young]/Supertone 9612 [as Frank Hill], 1930)
Picture No Artist Can Paint, A

DESCRIPTION: "A quaint New England homestead Where a gray-haired couple dwell, Their heads are bowed with sorrow For the one they loved so well." Their daughter ran away from home after an argument. Her brother left to seek her. Neither has yet returned

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (recording, Leake County Revelers)

KEYWORDS: family separation children brother sister

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 831, "A Picture No Artist Can Paint" (1 text)
Roud #7441

RECORDINGS:
Leake County Revelers, "A Picture No Artist Can Paint" (Columbia 15691-D, 1931; rec. 1930)

Picture that Is Turned Toward the Wall, The DESCRIPTION: "Far beyond the glamour of the city and its strife There's a quiet little homestead by the sea." But a family daughter ran away, and "There's a name that's never spoken, and a mother's heart is broken... And a picture that is turned toward the wall."

AUTHOR: Charles Graham

EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (copyright)

KEYWORDS: separation abandonment children

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Spaeth-ReadEmAndWeep, pp. 160-161, "The Picture That Is Turned Toward the Wall" (1 text, 1 tune)
Geller-FamousSongsAndTheirStories, pp. 59-63, "The Picture That Is Turned Toward the Wall" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gilbert-LostChords, pp. 276-277, "The Picture That Is Turned Toward the Wall" (1 text)
DT, PICWALL*

RECORDINGS:
Vernon Dalhart, "The Picture That Is Turned Toward the Wall" (Columbia 15030-D, 1925) (Edison 51607 [as Vernon Dalhart & Co.], 1925)

NOTES [162 words]: Written by Graham after seeing the play "Blue Jeans," in which a father turns his runaway daughter's picture toward the wall. (Why not take it down? Don't ask me.)
The song sold extremely well, but as so often happens, Graham saw little of the proceeds, and died a pauper in 1899.
He also produced a sequel, "Her Father Has Turned the Dear Picture Again." Which had all the success it deserved.
To set a new record for Completely Useless Information Included in the Ballad Index, some students of Sherlock Holmes claim that the woman whose picture is turned toward the wall is none other than Irene Adler, the heroine of "A Scandal in Bohemia." The latter story was published in 1891, with an internal date of 1888 though Sherlockians have demonstrated that this date is not possible. For what little I can glean of this theory, see William S. Baring-Gould, The Annotated Sherlock Holmes, Volume I, note 28 to "A Scandal in Bohemia" (p. 354 in the Wings Books edition). - RBW
Pig and a Posset o' Whey, A

DESCRIPTION: The singer, it seems, would poison her husband, Arthur o' Broadley, with a witch's brew. She wants to be a widow. She likes "the yellow haired lad." Expensive meal will be cheap again and she won't mind if "farmers a' may hang themselves"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: farming poison humorous nonballad husband wife youth
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1706, "A Pig and a Posset o' Whey" (1 text)
Roud #13525
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Dear Meal's Cheap Again" (one verse; see the note below)
NOTES [103 words]: The verse, "The dear meal will be cheap again; The dear meal will be cheap again, The Farmers may go hang themselves; The dear meal will be cheap again" dates back at least to 1813. It is embedded in a medley in W. Beattie, Buchan Poetry. Fruits of Time Parings (Aberdeen, 1873 (Reprint of the 1813 edition ("Digitized by Google")), p. 63). See "The Ports Are Open" for a discussion of grain prices after the Napoleonic wars. - BS
I'd love to know how getting rid of farmers would lower grain prices. I suppose the claim is that they are jacking up prices, but historically, it has rarely happened that way.... - RBW

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD81706

Pig at Home in the Pen

DESCRIPTION: Floaters: "When she saw me coming, she hung her head and cried/Yonder comes the meanest boy that ever lived or died." "Next time said darling, pick a bed with me...." Cho: "Got that pig at home in the pen, corn to feed him on/All I want..."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (recording, Arthur Smith Trio)
KEYWORDS: love sex rejection farming floatingverses nonballad animal
FOUND IN: US(SE,Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
McNeil-SouthernMountainFolksong, pp. 52-55, "Pig in a Pen" (2 texts, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Spud Gravely w. Glen Smith, "Pig in a Pen" (on Persis1)
Arthur Smith Trio, "Pig at Home in the Pen" (on Bluebird B-7043, 1937)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Shady Grove" (lyrics)

File: RcPAHITP

Pig Got Up and Slowly Walked Away, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer, drunk, walks down the street "in tipsy pride" and falls down in the gutter. A pig lies down beside him. A high-toned lady remarks that "you can tell a man who boozes By the company he chooses," and "the pig got up and slowly walked away"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (copyrighted by Benjamin Hapgood Burt)
KEYWORDS: drink humorous animal
FOUND IN: US Britain(England) Australia
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains, pp. 58-59, "Friendship with a Hog" (1 text, 1 tune; the first two verses from this song but the last three might be informant John Daniel Vass's expansions of the piece)
DT, PIGINEBR PIGINEB2 PIGENEB3

Roud #7322
Pig in the Parlor

DESCRIPTION: "My ma and pa was Irish (x3), And I am Irish too," "Your right hand to your partner/neighbor... And we'll all promenade,""We got a new pig in the parlor... and he is Irish too." "We kept the cat in the cream-jug... And it was Irish too." Etc.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad animal family
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) US(Ap,MW,So)
REFERENCES (14 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1746, "My Father and Mither Were Irish" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph 522, "Pig in the Parlor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 80, "Pig in the Parlor" (1 short text plus 1 excerpt and 1 fragment)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 80, "Pig in the Parlor" (1 tune plus a partial text)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #239, "That Was Irish, Too" (1 text)
Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois, pp. 198-199, "The Pig in the Parlor" (1 text)
Wolford-ThePlayPartyInIndiana=Wolford/Richmond/Tillson-PlayPartyInIndiana, pp. 183-184, pp. 81-82, "Pig in the Parlor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame, p. 313, "Pig in the Parlour" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty, pp. 153-154, "Pig in the Parlor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Bush-FSoCentralWestVirginiaVol4, pp. 17-18, "The Pig in the Parlor" (1 text, 1 tune)
JournalOfAmericanFolklore, Mrs. L.D. Ames, "The Missouri Play-Party," Vol. XXIV, No. 93 (Jul 1911), pp. 297-298 ("My father and mother were Irish") (1 text, 1 tune)
JournalOfAmericanFolklore, Leona Nessly Ball, "The Play Party in Idaho,", Vol. XLIV, No. 171 (Jan 1931 ), p. 12 "My Father and Mother Were Irish" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, PIGPARLR*
ADDITIONAL: Tristram P. Coffin and Hennig Cohen, _Folklore in America: Tales, Songs, Superstitions, Proverbs, Riddles, Games, Folk Drama and Folk Festivals_, Doubleday, 1966, pp. 70-71, "Pig in the Parlor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4251
RECORDINGS:
Chubby Parker, "And That Was Irish Too" (Conqueror 7896, 1931)
Pete Seeger, "Pig in the Parlor" (on PeteSeeger22) (on PeteSeeger33, PeteSeegerCD03)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "We Won't Go Home Until Morning" (floating lyrics, form)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
We Have a Pig in the Parlor
File: R522
Pig Snout

DESCRIPTION: "Pig snout, Walk out" (or "You are out")

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)

KEYWORDS: play party animal

FOUND IN: New Zealand

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 95, "(Pig snout)" (1 text)

NOTES [70 words]: The Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren version of this is so short that I hesitated over including it. I finally decided to list it, for a peculiar reason. In the Harry Potter books, one of the passwords to the Griffyndor common room is "Pig Snout." Did J. K. Rowling know this rhyme? After all, those who need the password to the common room are "out" -- as in, locked out of the dormitory. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.4

File: SuSm095E

---

Pigeon, The

DESCRIPTION: A woman asks where her lover is and why he hadn't returned. She sends a letter by pigeon. The pigeon flies through a storm; it "disdain'd To seek shelter ... It flew all around Till Colin he found." and dies from exhaustion while Colin reads the letter.

AUTHOR: Lady Anne Lindsay (Barnard) (1750-1825) (source: Wilson)

EARLIEST DATE: before 1819 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(2362))

KEYWORDS: love separation death ordeal storm bird lover

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 231-232, "The Dove" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Ox 284)

ADDITIONAL: James Grant Wilson, The Poets and Poetry of Scotland (London, 1876 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 334,336, "Why Tarries My Love?" (1 text)

Roud #1296

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(2362), "The Pigeon("Why tarries my love a[h] where does he rove?")", H. Wadsworth (Birmingham), 1802-1818; also 2806 c.16*(154), Harding B 15(309b), 2806 c.18(244), Harding B 21(14), Harding B 11(2418), "The Pigeon"

NOTES [30 words]: Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO lacks Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames third verse in which the woman "tied to his wing this letter with a string, And kissed him and sent him away." - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: WT231

---

Pigs Did Squeal, The (I Once Did Love a Girl Named Sal)

DESCRIPTION: "I once did love a girl named Sal, Each day and night I'd court her." He is about to propose when the pigs start squealing; the other animals add to the din. She feeds them; they squeal when he kisses her. He drops her rather than hear the squealing

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales)

KEYWORDS: love courting animal humorous abandonment

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 410-411, "(no title)" (1 text)

Roud #6604

File: TNY410
Pilgrim's Sea-Voyage and Sea-Sickness, The (Pilgrim's Song; Pilgrims to St. James)

DESCRIPTION: "Men may leve all gamys, That saylen to seynt James," because the sea voyage brings trouble. The work of the sailors is described. The passengers are unable to eat -- and the food is bad anyway. And the smell of the pump is awful

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1600 (MS. Cambridge, Trinity College R.3.19)
KEYWORDS: travel hardtimes MiddleEnglish sea
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #2148
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #3466
Douglas Gray, _The Oxford Book of Late Medieval Verse and Prose_. Oxford University Press, 1985, pp. 25-26, "By Sea to Santiago" (1 text)
MANUSCRIPT: Cambridge, Trinity College, MS. R.3.19 (Trinity 599), folio 208
NOTES [582 words]: There is no reason to think this traditional, but Stone's Sea Songs and Ballads calls it the "Earliest Sea Song," so here it is. Despite Stone, obviously it isn't the first sea song, and I'm pretty sure it's not the oldest surviving sea song even in English. It certainly doesn't look "folk," with its stanzas consisting of three-foot lines in eight-line stanzas rhyming aaabcccb.

So how old is it? The only hints we have are the language (which does not seem very old to me) and the manuscript, Trinity R.3.19, plus the fact that it describes a sea-voyage to Santiago de Compostela -- implying a date before the Protestant Reformation. So we can surely say that it is from before 1560, and probably before 1540. (In any case, the cult of Saint James at Santiago peaked in the twelfth through fifteenth centuries and was in decline in the sixteenth; OxfordSaints, p. 269).

The manuscript is written on paper, not parchment. The binding, which is not contemporary, has the arms of George Wilmer, who died in 1626 (Seymour, p. 95). Seymour, p. 136, suggests that at least one of the scribes was from the east Midlands working in London.

Manly/Rickert, p. 533, say that the various sections date from the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. They think (p. 534) it might have been made in the shop of John Shirley, although after his death. The manuscript is large and diverse; the Digital Index of Middle English Verse counts 59 items in its 248 folios (about a fifth of them blank, perhaps set aside for items that were not at hand when the text was originally written). But it has much Chaucer (the _Legend of Good Women_, the _Parliament of Fowls_, parts of the _Canterbury Tales_, and a few short items) and a lot of Lydgate, plus miscellaneous lyrics. It is, however, composite -- a collection of independent booklets (Seymour, p. 95). These remained separate for long enough that the outer pages of some of the booklets suffered soiling and damage. Seymour, in his content list on pp. 96-98, divides its 32 quires into 13 sections; Manly/Rickert, p. 533, suggest 14. Seymour, p. 97, places this poem in section 10 (quires 26-27, folios 205-217), along with seven other fairly short pieces: "Discriving of fayre lady" (IMEV #1300), "O mosy quince" (IMEV #2524), Lydgate's "Horns away" (IMEV #2625), "Looke well" (IMEV #1944), Lydgate's "They that no while endure" (IMEV #55), "Proverbs of Wisdom" (IMEV #3502), and "How the Good Wife" (IMEV #671).

Seymour, p. 23, declares that the text of Chaucer's _Parliament_ is derived from Caxton's 1477-1478 edition, and pp. 136-137 say that the Canterbury Tales extracts are also from Caxton (the original 1478 edition rather than the corrected edition of 1483); Manly/Rickert, p. 533, agree. The fact that the two Chaucer poems are certainly from after 1478 is not definitive for this piece, since it's in a separate booklet, but Manly/Rickert, p. 533, think that the bulk of the Trinity manuscript, folios 55-213, are from a single cursive hand, using yellowish-brown changing to reddish-brown ink. Thus it is likely that the quire containing this piece is from the same scribe as the one who copied Caxton's Chaucer text, and probably from the same post-1478 period. Thus a good approximate date for the manuscript is c. 1500. I would guess the poem, at least in its current form, not much older.

There is a published facsimile of the manuscript, B. Y. Fletcher, _M.S. Trinity College R. 3. 19. A facsimile_ (1987). Good luck finding a copy. - RBW
Bibliography

Last updated in version 6.1
File: MSPSVASS

Pin Dip

DESCRIPTION: "A pin or a bull or a button, To see a rary rary show, show, show"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1875 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)
KEYWORDS: playparty commerce
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 59, "(A pin or a bull or a button)" (1 text)
File: SuSm059C

Pinch and a Punch, A

DESCRIPTION: "A pinch and a punch, For the end of the month." Supposedly used to justify the "associated behaviors" at the end of a month.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)
KEYWORDS: playparty injury
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 134, "(A pinch and a punch)" (1 text)
File: SuSm134B

Pining Daily and Daily

DESCRIPTION: "I am pining day and daily this twelve months and above, I am pining day and daily, and all about my love My beauty it is fading... And I wish I was with my true love...." The singer's love has been unfaithful, but her words encourage him to return
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: love separation emigration
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H149, p. 456, "Pining Daily and Daily" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "The Blacksmith" (plot)
NOTES [47 words]: Kennedy, seemingly followed by Brunnings, connects this with "She Moved Through the Fair (Our Wedding Day)." This, in my opinion, is an impossible degree of stretch. The lyrics have some similarity to "The Blacksmith"; I also find myself reminded of "I'll Weave My Love a Garland." - RBW
File: HHH149
Pint Pot and Billy
DESCRIPTION: The singer apparently struck it rich in Australia and returned to join the high society in Britain. But he hates it: "Now I am stranded on my own native shore, I'll go back to Australia to the goldfields again." No one understands him; he wants to go home
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973
KEYWORDS: Australia home gold
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 116-117, "Pint Pot and Billy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fahey-PintPotAndBilly, p. 20, "Pint Pot and Billy" (1 text)
File: FaE116

Pioneer Preacher, The
DESCRIPTION: "As we were on the ice and snow, It rained, it hailed, and the wind did blow... We were so cold we almost died." "But thank the Lord, relief was found...." The singer will preach in Tennessee/Cumberland, where "Religion's scarce"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi)
KEYWORDS: clergy storm pioneer settler Indians(Am.)
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 82, p. 82, "The Pioneer Preacher" (1 short text)
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 168-169, "The Evangelist's Song" (1 text)
Roud #4493
File: Hud082

Pioneers, The
DESCRIPTION: The pioneers, the engineers, the cannoneers are very hardy, and very sexual.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929
KEYWORDS: bawdy humorous talltale sex scatological animal
FOUND IN: US(MW,SW)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 228-231, "The Pioneers" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 510-512, "The Pioneers" (6 texts, 1 tune)
DT, PIONEERS*
Roud #10119
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Son of a Gambolier" (tune & meter) and references there
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Engineers
The M.P.s
The Infantry
The A.P.s
The Mountaineers
File: EM228

Pious Little Men, The
DESCRIPTION: "See the pious little men So faithful to their duty, Marching to a batter land In robes of shining beauty." "Lowly, lowly, lowly, low, I love to be a Shaker." (x2) "Be kind and be good... If you join the Shaker band You will be good forever."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 2010 (Grimes-StoriesFromTheAnneGrimesCollection)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
Piper MacNeil
DESCRIPTION: Piper MacNeil loves whisky. One night he staggers home falling-down drunk. His mother opens the door, sees his dirty clothes and curses whisky. He says she should not be angry because “as long as I live I aye will be, That I'll take a drap whisky-o"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1967 (recording, Willie Scott)
KEYWORDS: drink mother
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen, pp. 96-96, 153, "Piper MacNeil" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5125
RECORDINGS:
Willie Scott, "Piper O'Neill" (on Voice13) [the title seems to be an error for "Piper MacNeil" in the text]
File: RcPipMON

Piper o' Dumbarton, The
DESCRIPTION: "Saw ye Rory Murphy, Rory Murphy, Rory Murphy, Saw ye Rory Murphy, Comin' through Dumbarton?" Rory, "a piper guid," plays for his living and travels Scotland, but at last falls "doun a brae" while drunk AUTHOR: David Webster ?
EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Ford)
KEYWORDS: music death drink
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 138-141, "The Piper o' Dumbarton" (1 text)
Roud #13116
File: FVS138

Piper o' Dundee, The
DESCRIPTION: "The piper cam' tae oor toon, Tae oor toon (x2), The piper cam' tae oor toon, And he played bonnily." He plays inspiring Jacobite tunes, and many leaders gather to support the Stuarts. "And wasna he a roguey, The piper o' Dundee?"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1821 (Hogg-JacobiteRelicsOfScotlandVol2)
KEYWORDS: music patriotic Jacobite
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Hogg-JacobiteRelicsOfScotlandVol2 19, "The Piper o' Dundee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 13, "The Piper o' Dundee" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, PIPERDUN*
File: Gath013
The Piper of Crossbarry

DESCRIPTION: Piper Flor Begley volunteers to fight but his captain prefers that "Today you'll stride between our lines and martial music play." Tom Barry's fighters defeat 2000 British. "The Piper of Crossbarry, boys, had piped old Ireland free"

AUTHOR: Bryan MacMahon

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)

KEYWORDS: rebellion battle Ireland patriotic IRA music

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Mar 19, 1921 - Nationalist victory at Crossbarry

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 58A, "The Piper of Crossbarry" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Boys of Kilmichael" (subject: The exploits of Tom Barry)

NOTES [682 words]: [On March 19, 1921], 104 men of the Third West Cork Flying Column of the IRA, under Tom Barry, defeat more than 1000 British and 120 Auxiliaries about 12 miles southwest of Cork city (source: Tom Barry Leads West Cork Flying Column To Victory at Crossbarry at Cork's War of Independence site).

The "Black and Tans" were British reinforcements to regular British soldiers sent to Ireland in 1920. The "Auxiliary Cadets" were veteran British army officers sent to help the Black and Tans. (source: Michael Collins: A Man Against an Empire copyright by and available on the History Net site) For more information see RBW note for "The Bold Black and Tan" - BS

Crossbarry was really two actions: Kee, p. 128, notes that "at Crossbarry... not only did Tom Barry and his flying column successfully ambush a convoy of nine military lorries but fought their way out of a massive attempt to encircle them afterward."

This was not the only victory won by Barry in 1920-1921, nor even his most notorious. He was also, according to OxfordCompanion, p. 40, responsible for killing 15 Auxiliaries at Kilmichael on November 28, 1920 -- an event which also inspired a song.

Kee, pp. 120-121, reports of this action, "After a savage fight at close quarters in which three IRA were killed and, according to Barry, the Auxiliaries made use of the notorious 'false surrender' tactics, the entire convoy was wiped out, and seventeen of the eighteen auxiliaries were killed.... [T]he first British officer on the scene... said that although he had seen thousands of men lying dead in the course of the war, he had never before seen such an appalling sight... The doctor at the inquest, an Irishman, said that there was no doubt that some of the injuries had been inflicted after death."

 Dangerfield's history of Irish rebellion does not list Kilmichael or Crossbarry but on p. 319 does mention an action of 1920: "On 9 December a flying column under Tom Barry, Commandant of Cork's No. 3 Brigade, and one of the most ruthless and successful of all guerilla leaders, ambushed two lorry loads of Auxiliaries, and wiped them out in circumstances of unusual savagery."

Although Barry's behavior was unconscionable, the reaction was also ugly, showing how bad conditions were in Ireland at that time: In December, pro-British forces (Auxiliaries and Black and Tans) destroyed a large part of the city of Cork (Kee, pp. 116-117).

Barry would later attack a police barracks in Cork (Kee, p. 128).

Younger, pp. 108-109, notes a case of Barry justifying the murder of a Catholic member of the R. I. C. as he went in to mass, though it doesn't tell whether Barry was actually the assassin.

It's probably no surprise that, when Irish leaders had to decide on the Treaty granting Ireland functional independence, Barry was against it (Murphy, p. 48).

Coogan, p. 169, sums up Barry and Crossbarry as follows: "Barry in fact was one of the bravest men in the war and probably the most successful field commander.... [H]e achieved a spectacular success at Crossbarry, County Cork, on 19 March 1921. In a day-long engagement, encouraged by the traditional pipes of Flor Begley, Barry and a force of about a hundred men broke through a more heavily armed British encirclement of ten times that number and got away safely...."

Ironically, Barry (1897-1980) had been in the British Army in Mesopotamia (Boylan, p. 15; Kee, p. 70), and had shown no evidence of nationalist sympathies at that time. But he would later become a high officer of the IRA, becoming its Chief of Staff for a time in 1937. But he quit the IRA the next year, disagreeing with their proposal to engage in terrorist bombings of England, since he thought it would kill innocent civilians. Which is not to say that he had turned peaceful; he wanted to make war in Ulster.

He eventually wrote a memoir, Guerilla Days in Ireland. published in 1949, and also a pamphlet,
The Reality of the Anglo-Irish War, 1919-21, (1974), to counteract what he considered a false narrative by Liam Deasy (Boylan, p. 45). Born in County Cork in 1897, he died in 1980. - RBW

Bibliography

- Coogan: Tim Pat Coogan, Michael Collins, 1992 (I used the 1996 Roberts Rinehart edition)
- Dangerfield: George Dangerfield, The Damnable Question: One Hundred and Twenty Years of Anglo-Irish Conflict, Atlantic Little Brown, 1976
- Kee: Robert Kee, Ourselves Alone, being volume III of The Green Flag (covering the brief but intense period from 1916 to the establishment of constitutional government in the 1920s), Penguin, 1972
- Murphy: John A. Murphy, Ireland in the Twentieth Century (originally published in 1975 as a portion of the Gill History of Ireland), Gill and Macmillan, 1989
- Younger: Calton Younger, Ireland's Civil War (1968, 1979; I used the 1988 Fontana edition)

Last updated in version 5.2
File: OLoc058A

Piper's Tunes, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer goes to town "to view the pretty lasses" and sees a famous Captain and Joe Blake. Blake the piper plays the favorite tunes and variations, all named. "Get up and shake your heels, 'tis better sport than any"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1855 (broadside, Johnson Ballads 602)
KEYWORDS: dancing music
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 11, "The Piper's Tunes" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3030
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 602, "Sporting Irish Piper," E.M.A. Hodges (London), 1846-1854; also 2806 b.11(249), Johnson Ballads 603, "Sporting Irish Piper"; 2806 c.15(147), 2806 b.9(225), "The Rakes of Kildare"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Bob and Joan" (tune, per OLoclaimn)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
John Murphy
NOTES [79 words]: The final line of the Bodleian "The Rakes of Kildare" broadsides is "Oh, tune up the old banjo, for that's better than any." OLoclaimn-IrishStreetBallads's town is Cove and his famous captain Burke of Grove; the broadsides town is Kildare and the famous captain Cornock of Cromwell's Fort. The Bodleian "Sporting Irish Piper" broadsides have no similar final line or famous captain, the town is Liverpool and the piper is John Murphy." The same tunes are played throughout. - BS
File: OLoc011

Pique la Baleine

DESCRIPTION: French. Rowing shanty. "Pour retrouver ma douce amie." The whaler goes out to strike the whale, "for to find my love again." He sails many seas to find the whale, and will find the whale, his love, even if she is drowned

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1977 (Hugill-SongsOfTheSea)
KEYWORDS: whaler shanty foreignlanguage love
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Pirate Crew, The

DESCRIPTION: "O'er the wide world of waters we roam ever free: Sea-kings and rovers, bold pirates are we... We love the black storm as we rode o'er the billows... Hurrah! the black banner is nailed to the mast." "Dauntless and daring the deeds that they do."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1845 (The Book of a Thousand Songs, according to Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)

KEYWORDS: pirate nonballad ship

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 72, "The Pirate Crew" (1 text; #47 in the first edition)

Roud #V9212

File: FrPi072

Pirate Lover, The

DESCRIPTION: "Thou art gone from thy lover thou lord of the sea, The illusion is over that bound me to thee." The singer cannot forget her love -- but his "black vessel" is at sea. She thought him brave, and will not upbraid him, but as a pirate, he must die.

AUTHOR: unknown (music by J. Akroid and J. G. Percival?)

EARLIEST DATE: 1847 (Journal of the Cortes)

KEYWORDS: pirate love separation ship

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 136-137, "The Pirate Lover" (1 text, 2 tunes)
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 35, "The Pirate Lover" (1 text, 1 tune; #48 in the first edition, without a tune)

Roud #27513

File: HGam136

Pirate of the Isles, The

DESCRIPTION: "I command a steady band Of pirates so bold and free." The pirate rejoices at being ruler of his ship and men. He tells of his joy in the sea. At last, however, he is overtaken by a warship. Hit by a cannonball, he is dying. His crew surrenders.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1847 (Journal of William Histed of the Cortes)

KEYWORDS: pirate ship battle death

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 172-174, "The Pirate of the Isle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 74-77, "The Pirate of the Isles" (1 text, 1 tune)
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 138-139, "The Pirate of the Isle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 44, "The Pirate of the Isle" (1 text, 1 tune; from Chappell; #37 in the first edition)

Roud #2024

BROADSIDES:
Murray, Mu23-y4:026, "The Pirate of the Isles," unknown, 19C

NOTES [128 words]: Leslie Shepard, John Pitts, Ballad Printer of Seven Dials, London 1765-1844, Private Library Association, 1969, p. 65, quotes an interview by Henry Mayhew with the alleged author of this piece (who is, however, not named). He complained about the pay:
"The first song I ever sold was to a concert-room manager. The next I sold had great success. It was called the 'Demon of the Sea', and was to the tune of 'The Brave Old Oak.' Do I remember how it began? Yes, sir, I remember every word of it.... That song was written for a concert-room, but it was soon in the streets, and ran a whole winter. I got only 1 [shilling] for that. Then I wrote the 'Pirate of the Isles,' and other ballads of that sort. The concert-rooms pay no better than the printers in the sheets...."

Last updated in version 5.0
File: SwMS074

Pirate Smith

DESCRIPTION: Smith scoured the seas "with a noble crew of cutthroats." "He said that grabbing booty was a Briton's pleasing duty." He'd hang foreign foemen from his lanyards. At 37 he is killed by a Spanish bullet and goes to heaven "to rest in Nelson's bosom"

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (OLochlann-MoreIrishStreetBallads)
KEYWORDS: death sea ship England humorous political pirate
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlann-MoreIrishStreetBallads 65, "Pirate Smith" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [66 words]: Sullivan is the author of a number of Irish patriotic poems, of which "God Save Ireland" is probably the best-known. This is one of the few non-nationalist poems I've seen from his pen. Ironically, the Smith he commemorates does not seem to be very famous; there are several Smiths with entries in Rogozinski's The Wordsworth Dictionary of Pirates, but none of them fit the hero of this song. - RBW

File: OLcM065

Pirate's Bark, The

DESCRIPTION: "Lightly thou art bounding, My bark upon the sea, Like an eagle on the mountain, Thou'ret rapid and as free." "Hurrah, hurrah, my rover, We're fleeting past the wind. The fancied danger's over, Thou'st left them far behind."

AUTHOR: Words: TJ. Burrington / Music: John W. L. Ash (according to Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
EARLIEST DATE: 2011 (Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs), but probably from the 1830s
KEYWORDS: pirate ship escape
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 40, "The Pirate's Bark" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V13258

NOTES [29 words]: Amazingly, the sheet music to this lists three noteworthy performers who sang it. I'm amazed three people even managed to finish reading the first verse without gagging. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3
File: Fran040

Pirate's Call, The

DESCRIPTION: "There's a prize upon the deep, boys, There's gold in the gathering gale, Then to your posts quick leap, boys... Awake, awake, bold pirates." The target is heavily-laden. A broadside causes her to give in. "The ocean shall be their shroud."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1845 (The Buccaneer Songster, according to Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
KEYWORDS: homicide pirate ship
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 74, "The Pirate's Call" (1 text; #50 in the first edition)
Roud #V30992

File: FrPi074

Pirate's Chorus

DESCRIPTION: "Ever by happy and light as thou art, Pride of the Pirate's heart! Long be thy reign" o'er land and main, By the glaive, by the chart, Queen of the Pirate's heart." The rest of the song mostly rearranges these words

AUTHOR: Michael William Balfe (1808-1870) (source: Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
EARLIEST DATE: 1845 (opera The Enchantress, according to Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs); also in some versions of the Forget-Me-Not Songster
KEYWORDS: pirate nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Heart-Songs, p. 237, "Pirates' Chorus" (1 text, 1 tune)
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 56, "Pirate's Chorus" (1 text, 1 tune; #33 in the first edition)
Roud #31314
File: FrPi056

Pirate's Deserted Bride, The

DESCRIPTION: "Far o'er the sea the bark is gone, with her blood red flag above; And I am left to weep along." The singer fears that her pirate lover will not return. In words so flowery as to approach incomprehensibility, she admits to sorrow

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1832 (sheet music, according to Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
KEYWORDS: pirate marriage love separation
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 36, "The Pirate's Deserted Bride" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V13709
File: FrPi036B

Pirate's Serenade, The

DESCRIPTION: "My boat's by the tower, my bark's in the bay, And both must be gone ere the dawn of the day." The pirate waits for his bride. He asks that his roughness be excused. She shall "rule as Queen." He sees her signal that she is coming

EARLIEST DATE: 1842 (_Whistle-Binkie_)
KEYWORDS: courting marriage ship pirate
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, pp. 152-153, "The Pirate's Serenade" (1 text, 1 tune)
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, p. 132, "Serenade Song of Hurrah for the Rover and His Beautiful Lass" (1 text, 1 tune)
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 52, "The Pirate's Serenade" (1 text, 1 tune, #31 in the first edition)
Roud #2698
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth b.25(493), "The Pirate's Serenade," T.A. Jackson (Birmingham), c.1860
NOTES [112 words]: See two very similar broadsides for "The Pirate's Serenade" attributed to Geo. A. W. Langford Fahie and with the tune "I Am Off for Baltimore": LOCSinging, as111010, "The Pirate's Serenade," J. Andrews (New York), 1853-1859; also sb30427a, "The Pirate's Serenade" - BS
According to Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs, the text and tune of this did not often appear together, raising the possibility that the tune would not be widely known in tradition. And, indeed, although the Creighton tune starts like that in Frank, the rest looks significantly different, although I could believe that the one evolved into the other (e.g. by eliminating accidentals in the original tune). - RBW
Last updated in version 4.3
File: CrMa152
Pirate's Song (IV)
DESCRIPTION: "Come pass round the bowl and the festive board hail, We will drink deep tonight, for tomorrow we sail... We seek for an equal game, conquer or die." "The eagle aloft on Icarian flight Feels no more at home than we in the fight." They fight man and sea
AUTHOR: Words: George W. Frase / Music: Charles Leslie (source: Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
EARLIEST DATE: 1853 (sheet music, according to Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
KEYWORDS: pirate ship battle nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 60, "Pirate's Song (I)" (1 text, 1 tune; #34 in the first edition)
Roud #V26999
File: FrPi060

Pirate's Song (V), The
DESCRIPTION: "O Lady, come to the Indies with me, And reign and rule on the sunny sea." The singer tells of a gallant ship and hopes for "the foe on our lee." Neither French nor Americans frighten him. She will be "queen of the fathomless brine."
AUTHOR: Allan Cunningham (1784-1842) (source: Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
EARLIEST DATE: 1895 (Rinder's Naval Songs, according to Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
KEYWORDS: pirate courting battle nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 75, "The Pirate's Song (II)" (1 text; as "The Pirate's Song (III), it is #54 in the first edition)
File: FrPi075

Pirates Bold and Brave
DESCRIPTION: "Pirates, bold and brave, are we, Who sail on the snowy crested sea"; the ship waits in ambush, then plunders "the foe." The singer loves the sailing, spending the gold, and the free life of a pirate
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1845 (The Pirate's Songster, according to Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
KEYWORDS: pirate ship fight gold
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 73, "Pirates Bold and Brave" (1 text; #49 in the first edition)
Roud #V36788
File: FrPi073

Pirn-Taed Jockie
DESCRIPTION: While a girl was kissing Jockey she stole his candy. When at a ball, he kissed Polly Procter; she ran off with an ugly soldier. At a market he swapped his nag, blind in one eye, for a Balaklava charger that was blind in both.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: courting bargaining trick party humorous soldier
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #144, pp. 2-3, "Pirn-Tae't Jockie" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan6 1220, "Pirn-Taed Jockie" (2 texts)
Roud #6315
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Swapping Boy" (theme: bad bargains)
NOTES [24 words]: Greig/Duncan6: "Pirn-taed" means "pigeon-toed."
Pit the Lassie Till Her Beddie

DESCRIPTION: Put the lassie to bed. Her head and back are sore. "She'll need cock bree"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan7)

KEYWORDS: sex pregnancy

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1430, "Pit the Lassie Till Her Beddie" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #7268

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sandy's the Laddie That I'm Gaun Wi'" (tune, per Greig/Duncan7)

NOTES [22 words]: Greig/Duncan7 quoting Duncan: "The words are said to be objectionable." "No more remembered: the reference is of course indelicte." - BS

Pitcaithly's Wells

DESCRIPTION: "It fell aboot the Lammas time A fine time o' the year..." that the singer goes out and sees the girls "drink the waters clear." His eye lights on one in particular. He asks if she will marry; she refuses at first, but after a time of courting, consents

AUTHOR: Sixth Earl of Kinnoul (c.1660-1719) (source: Hecht-Herd)

EARLIEST DATE: 1776 (Herd, according to Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)

KEYWORDS: love courting

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #20, p. 1, "Pitcaithly's Well"; #21, p. 3, "Pitcaithly's Wells"; #22, p. 2, "Pitcaithly's Wells" (1 text plus 2 fragments)
Greig/Duncan4 925, "Pitcaithly's Wells" (8 texts plus 5 verses on pp. 578-579, 9 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 133-134, "Pitcaithly's Wells" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Hans Hecht, editor, Songs From David Herd's Manuscripts (Edinburgh, 1904), #110 pp. 255-257,329-330, "Pitcaithly Green" (1 text) [Not yet indexed as Hecht-Herd 110]

Roud #5549

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Clyde's Water" (tune, per Greig/Duncan4)

NOTES [130 words]: Ord-BothySongsAndBallads reports a legend that this was written, perhaps c. 1700, by the Earl of Kinnoul in honor of Jeannie Oliphant of Pitcaithly. This sounds like the usual sort of pretty legend. - RBW

Greig: "Pitcaithly, celebrated for its mineral wells, is situated near Bridge of Earn in Perthshire." - BS

Hecht: "In Herd's MS. there is the following remark under the title of the poem: 'This song was made by the auld Earl of Kinnoul (grandfather of the present Earl) upon Jean Oliphant, a daughter of the Laird of Pitcaithly and Kilcow, afterwards married to Mr. Bruce, a minister in Fife -- short time after the mineral of Pitcaithly was discovered. We have thus to consider the sixth Earl of Kinnoul as the author of the poem (born about 1660, Earl 1706, died 1719)." - BS

Pitch, You Old Piebally, Pitch

DESCRIPTION: "You've been roped and saddled, bridled and straddled, I've spurred and quirted you too." Despite the trouble the animal has caused, the singer says, "I'll ride you, ole hoss, till you drop." Half friendly, half exasperated, he says, "pitch, you piebally"

AUTHOR: attributed to Kearney Moore in the Powder River Jack Lee Songbook (but see NOTES)
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Powder River Jack & Kitty Lee Songbook)
KEYWORDS: cowboy horse work
FOUND IN: US(Ro)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
NOTES [81 words]: The WPA Guide to Wyoming calls this "a variation of E. A. Brinistool's "A Corral Soliloquy" and says it was popular in the Jackson Hole area. The latter poem was published in _Trail Dust of a Maverick_ (p. 140) in 1914. The dependence is clear, but in the Brinistool version, the horse is a "pie-bitier" and the order of the lyrics somewhat different. Nor is a tune indicated. My guess would be that Kearney Moore rewrote Brinistool's poem, then Powder River Jack Lee fitted a tune. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.7
File: PRJL038

Pitman's Courtship, The
DESCRIPTION: " Quite soft blew the wind from the west, The sun faintly shone in the sky, When Lukey and Bessie sat courting, As walking I chanced to espy. " He reminds her that they have been together since childhood, and promises business and a fine wedding
AUTHOR: William Mitford
EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland); Mitford died 1851
KEYWORDS: love courting marriage
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 39-40, "The Pitman's Courtship" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST StoR039 (Partial)
Roud #3058
File: StoR039

Pitman's Happy Times, The
DESCRIPTION: " When aw wes yung, maw collier lads, Ne man cud happier be; For wages was like sma' coals then, An' cheps cud raise a spree. " The singer recalls all afford in his youth, and notes in sad amazement all the changes since -- e.g. that all children can read
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland)
KEYWORDS: work age children food clothes money mining
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 167-169, "The Pitman's Happy Times" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3172
NOTES [13 words]: Never thought I'd see a coal miner reminiscing about the good old days.... - RBW
File: StoR167

Pittenweem Fisher-Wife's Song, The
DESCRIPTION: The fisher-wife wakes her husband and three sons. The sun shines like gold in their boat and it is time, while they still live, to row out -- "were I a man I'd off to sea" -- and, when they return at night, she'll hear their "songs and tales"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: fishing sea nonballad family
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1760, "Fisher Song" (1 fragment)
ADDITIONAL: Christopher Stone, Sea Songs and Ballads (Oxford, 1906 ("Digitized by Google")), #24 pp. 36-37, "We'll Go To Sea No More" J. E. Patterson, The Sea Anthology: From the Earliest Times Down to the Middle of the Nineteenth Century (New York, 1913 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 182, "The Pittenweem Fisher-Wife's Song"
Roud #13136
NOTES [48 words]: The line about hearing songs is ironic if Greig's assessment is accurate: "There are not many traditional songs dealing with fisher folk; and as for fisher folk themselves they do not seem to have any old minstrelsy dealing with their special calling and interests" [Greig #153, p. 2]. - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD81760

Pittsburg Is a Great Old Town
DESCRIPTION: "Pittsburg is a great old town, Pittsburg (x2), Pittsburg is a great old town, Solid steel from McKeesport down." "Pittsburg is a smoky old town... Coal piled high in great big mounds." Pittsburg is a river town, a hilly town....
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends)
KEYWORDS: nonballad home river technology
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, pp. 440-441, "Pittsburg Is a Great Old Town" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7747
File: KPL440

Pitty Patty Poke
DESCRIPTION: Game played while patting a baby's feet: "Pitty patty poke, Shoe the wild colt, Here a nail, there a nail, Pitty patty poke"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 119, "Pitty Patty Poke" (1 text)
Roud #7850
File: Br3119

Pity a Maiden
DESCRIPTION: A maiden in Bedlam blames her ruin on the press-master that took her Billy. She dreams that her work in Bedlam would allow her to fit out a man of war and go to him. She gets a letter from Billy saying he hopes to return and free her.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1820 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 25(1502))
KEYWORDS: madness love war prison death father mother
FOUND IN:
Roud #V19594
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 25(1502), "Pity a Maiden" (Pity an innocent maiden in Bedlam I lay confin'd"), J. Pitts (London), 1820-1824
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Nancy's Complaint in Bedlam" (theme of a maid in Bedlam) and references there
File: BdPitMa
Pity Poor Labourers
DESCRIPTION: "You sons of old England, now listen... Concerning poor lab'rors we all must allow Who work all day at the tail of the plow. Oh, pity poor lab'rors, oh, pity them all, For five or six shillings they work the whole week." The complaints of poor workers
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: Before 1855 (Bodleian broadside Harding B 11(2682))
KEYWORDS: poverty work
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 18-19, "Pity Poor Labourers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-ThePainfulPlow, #7, "Pity Poor Labourers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V8898
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(2682), "A New Song: Pity Poor Labourer's" (sic.), E. M. A. Hodges
(London), 1846-1854; also Firth b.25(399)=Firth c.16(300)=Johnson Ballads 3356, "The Poor Labourers," G Henson (Northampton), n.d.
File: FaE018

Pity the Poor Seaman
DESCRIPTION: "O think on the mariner tossed on the billow Far from the home of his childhood and youth." He is in a "prison [that] floats at the sport of the wind." The singer hopes that heaven will "pour on his pathway... The radiant light of the gospel of peace."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1833 (Journal of the Cortes)
KEYWORDS: sailor hardtimes nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, p. 131, "Pity the Poor Seaman" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27514
File: HGam131

Place Where the Old Horse Died, The DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls a spot -- a spot he no longer visits: "The place where the old horse died." He recalls that final ride, where the horse, for no evident reason, stumbled. Rider soon arose, but the faithful horse never moved again
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1955
KEYWORDS: horse death burial
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 279-281, "The Place Where the Old Horse Died" (2 texts, 1 tune)
File: MA279

Plain Golden Band, The [Laws H17]
DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls his parting from his former sweetheart and why she gave back her engagement ring. A young man comes to her and tells her stories of the singer's falsehood.
She briefly dallies with him. Having stained the ring, she must return it
AUTHOR: Joe Scott
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Family Herald, according to Ives-Joe-Scott-TheWoodsmanSongmaker); thought to have been in tradition by 1911
KEYWORDS: farewell ring infidelity lie trick
FOUND IN: US(NE) Canada(Mar,Newf,West)
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Laws H17, "The Plain Golden Band"
Plains of Baltimore, The

DESCRIPTION: As the singer prepares to leave (Ireland?), his rich sweetheart promises to go with him and takes some of her father's money with her. They leave Ireland for America and settle down happily. Her father promises a reward when their first son is born.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: emigration father love elopement

FOUND IN: US(MA) Ireland Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 5, "Plains of Baltimore" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H553, p. 482, "Jamie, Lovely Jamie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 38, "There Was a Wealthy Farmer" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST Wa005 (Full)
Roud #7457

CROSS-REFERENCES:

NOTES [68 words]: Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick has the money sewn into her dress: "This lovely maid was gaily decked most wondrous to behold, And in her dress a fortune sewed, five hundred pounds in gold." - BS

This is fairly typical of the versions, though the amount varies, as does the place of departure. The ending, in which the father forgives and offers more money once the son is born, seems fixed. - RBW

File: Wa005

Plains of Drishane, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer "roamed Eastwards to view navigations of the pleasin' grand scene" and other wonders "for this far famed dwelling station Whose proper appellation her name is Drisbane ... For grandeur it has taken the sway from them all"

AUTHOR: Sean O Tuama (Johnny Nora Aodha)? (source: OCanainn-SongsOfCork)

EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (OCanainn-SongsOfCork)

LONG DESCRIPTION: The singer "roamed Eastwards to view navigations of the pleasin' grand scene" and other wonders "for this far famed dwelling station Whose proper appellation her name is Drisbane." He admires each plantation, the mill for gringing corn, the huge oxen, guinea-hens, peacock and swan. The trees are matchless. The castle "has baffled molestations and Cromwell's aspirations." Strangers "ponder in amazement whilst on it they are gazing." They tell "in all these foreign places, Spain, Germany and Gaul" that "for grandeur it has taken the sway from them all." KEYWORDS: nonballad lyric
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCanainn-SongsOfCork, pp. 92-93,123, "The Plains of Drishane" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Groves of Blarney" (theme: extravagant praise of Cork) and references there NOTES [138 words]: This, probably consciously, outdoes "The Groves of Blarney." For example, in "Blarney" the castle is attacked by Cromwell: "her he did pommel. And made a breach in her battlement." Cromwell's "molestations" are "baffled" at Drisbane.
OCanainn-SongsOfCork: The singer "tells me that Johnny Nora Aodha is said to have composed it while going by horse and cart to Drishane for lime. On his arrival he sang the song for the man who was to sell him the lime. Tradition has it that his composition was so well receivd that he got the lime free. It's a good story and deserves to be true!" Maybe so, but to my mind it's too good of a one-upmanship story over the writer of "Castle Hyde," the "inspiration" for "The Groves of Blarney." And Aodha's song seems to me to one up "The Groves of Blarney" which, itself, one ups "Castle Hyde." - BS
File: OCan092

Plains of Emu, The (The Exile of Erin II)

DESCRIPTION: The Irish prisoner sadly recalls his home in Erin. The singer, though he claims he never received "a base-earned coin," has been transported for life. He fondly recalls his mother and his Nora. He says, "The tie is unbroken on the plains of Emu."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1829
KEYWORDS: prisoner transportation separation
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 36-37, "The Exile of Erin" (1 text, 1 tune)
Anderson-FarewellToOldEngland, pp. 117-119, "The Exile of Erin on the Plains of Emu" (1 text, 1 tune)
Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads, pp. 74-75, "The Exile of Erin on the Plains of Emu" (1 text)
Roud #4354
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Exile of Erin (I)" (theme)
NOTES [19 words]: Emu Plains was a prison farm outside Sydney, established to grow food for the large population of that city. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: FaE036

Plains of Illinois, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer urges "all you good old farmers that on your plow depend" to "come travel west and settle on the plains of Illinois." It is alleged that Adam would compare Illinois to the Garden of Eden. The state and its residents are glowingly described
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag); Edwin Wolf 2nd, _American Song Sheets, Slip Ballads, and Political Broadsides 1850-1870_, Library Company of Philadelphia, 1963, p. 152, lists a broadside that is presumably from the mid-nineteenth century
KEYWORDS: Bible talltale emigration farming
FOUND IN: US(MA,MW)
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 89, "The Plains of Illinois" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 162-163, "El-A-Noy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 41, "El-A-Noy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 441-442, "The Plains of Illinois" (1 text plus a broadside print); pp. 454-455, "El-A-Noy" (1 text)
Plains of Monaro, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh I ofttimes have heard of the plains of Monaro And I've longed in my heart for to spend my days there."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Fahey-Joe-Watson-AustralianTraditionalFolkSinger)
KEYWORDS: travel home
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fahey-Joe-Watson-AustralianTraditionalFolkSinger, [p. 18, page headed "Ditty: The plains of"], "The plains of Monaro" (1 fragment)
File: FaWTP0Mo

Plains of Waterloo (I), The [Laws N32]

DESCRIPTION: The singer, a soldier, sees Sally lamenting for her Willie -- the wars are over but Willie has not returned. He tells her that Willie died at Waterloo after bidding her farewell, but then shows his half of a broken token and reveals himself as Willie

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia)
KEYWORDS: brokentoken disguise mourning war soldier battle
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
June 18, 1815 - Battle of Waterloo
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar,Newf,Ont) Ireland
REFERENCES (13 citations):
Laws N32, "The Plains of Waterloo I"
Fowke/MacMillan-PenguinBookOfCanadianFolkSongs 66, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 85, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 1014-1015, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leach-MaritimeFolkSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 126, "Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, pp. 56-57, "Plains of Waterloo" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 34, "Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 69, "Waterloo" (1 text)
Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario 21, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Vikár/Panagapka-SongsNorthWoodsSungByOJAbbott 61, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 189, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Morton/Maguire-ComeDayGoDayGodSendSunday 46, pp. 137-138,173, "Smith at Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 459, PLNWL0O PLNWL0O2
Roud #960
RECORDINGS:
Caroline Brennan, "Fain Waterloo" (on ITMA/CapeShoreNL)
Amos Jollimore, "The Plains of Waterloo" (on MRHCreighton)
Tom Pennell, "Waterloo II" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "John (George) Riley (I)" [Laws N36] and references there
cf. "The Banks of the Clyde (I)" (plot, lyrics)
cf. "The Maid of Dunmore" (partial plot, lyrics)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Smith at Waterloo

NOTES [423 words]: Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs: "I have two quite different songs by the same title." I believe Creighton's complete version and fragmentary text are both Laws N32. Creighton's problem seems to come from the fragment's following "eighteenth of June" verse that matches no other "eighteenth of June" I've found for any Waterloo ballad or broadside; the sense of the verse -- that Willie was killed in battle -- belongs with Laws N32. In addition, the only other verse in the fragment also belongs to Laws N32.

"On the eighteenth day of June the battle was ended
Which caused many the British heroes to sigh and complain,
The drums they did beat and the cannons they did rattle
And by a French soldier your true love was slain."

Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia: "The hypothesis that I have finally excogitated is that 'Waterloo' [Laws N32] is a fragmentary and modified version of the early nineteenth-century English ballad entitled 'The Mantle So Green,' [Laws N38] and that 'The Mantle So Green' is in its turn a modified version of the late eighteenth-century English ballad 'George Reilly.' [Laws N36]"

Mackenzie's discussion includes a detailed examination of the three ballads.

Online, you can get some idea of the similarities by using these texts at one of the Digital Tradition sites [searching on the DT number works, for example #459]:

Laws N32: "Plains of Waterloo" DT #459.
Laws N38: "The Mantle So Green" DT #463.
Laws N36: "George Reilly (6)" DT #592 [unfortunately, as noted there, this one "sort of stops short," before the narrator tells of George's supposed dying words "Farewell, my dearest Nancy ...."

"Laws reveals the end: Finally he [the narrator] puts an end to the girl's grief by revealing that he is Riley."

Obviously there is a great similarity between these broken token songs, and the Waterloo-specific versions probably are more recent (since the Napoleonic Wars were the last great wars before the telegraph and railroad and widespread literacy). But the vast number of songs of this type (see the mass list under Laws N36) inclines me to think that they are not all related -- but that Laws N36 and "The Mantle So Green" [Laws N38], which are among the most popular, are at the heart of the tradition. - RBW

The ballad is recorded on one of the CD's issued around the time of the bicentenial of the 1798 Irish Rebellion. See:

Franke Harte and Donal Lunny, "The Plains of Waterloo" (on Franke Harte and Donal Lunny, "My Name is Napoleon Bonaparte," Hummingbird Records HBCD0027 (2001)) - BS

Last updated in version 5.1

File: LN32

---

Plains of Waterloo (II), The [Laws J3]

DESCRIPTION: The singer tells of all the places he has fought, ending with his part at Waterloo (from which he is grateful to have emerged alive). He tells of Napoleon's success on the first two days of the battle and of Wellington's victory on the final day

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1869 (Logan)

KEYWORDS: war Napoleon battle

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
June 18, 1815 - Battle of Waterloo

FOUND IN: US(MW,Ro) Canada(Mar,Ont)

REFERENCES (7 citations):

Laws J3, "The Plains of Waterloo II"

Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 118-119, "The Battle of Waterloo" (1 text)

Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #154, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)

Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 73, "The Plains of Waterloo," "Wellington and Waterloo" (2 texts)

Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick, pp. 117-119, "The Battle of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)

Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 84-86, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT 547, PLNWLOO3

ST LJ03 (Full)

Roud #1922
RECORDINGS:
O. J. Abbott, "The Plains of Waterloo" (on Abbott1)
Amos Jollimore, "The Plains of Waterloo" (on MRHCreighton)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Plains of Waterloo (V)" (subject, plot)

NOTES [587 words]: The notes in Laws regarding this piece are somewhat confusing. He quotes Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia to the effect that this song "is plainly derived" from the much longer, more elaborate broadside piece we've listed as "The Plains of Waterloo (V)." That the two are on the same theme is undeniable. But Bennett Schwartz, who has examined the matter with care, notes "I do not believe it was Laws's intent to consider these both the same, but rather to consider only the derivative as traditional. I think an argument can be made that J3 is not a derivative of this broadside at all."

Schwartz adds,
There are three other broadsides in Bodleian Library site Ballads Catalogue that describe the battle and go under the name "Plains of Waterloo." I do not believe they are the source of J3 either.

Specifically,
"The Plains of Waterloo" beginning "The ancient sons of glory were all great men they say" (shelfmarks Harding B15(239b), Harding B 28(76), Harding B 11(3017), Harding B11(3018), Harding B 11(3019))
"The Plains of Waterloo" beginning "Assist me you muses while I relate a story" ( Harding B25(1501)[a hard-to-read copy])
"The Plains of Waterloo" beginning "On the Eighteenth Day of June, my boys, Napoleon did advance" (shelfmarks Firth c.14(7), Firth b.25(507), Firth c.14(28), Harding B11(91), Harding B 25(1503), Harding B 11(3020), Harding B15(239a)) [Roud #5824]
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia's opening stanza for this song is presumably characteristic:

Come all you brisk and lively lads, come listen unto me,
While I relate how I have fought through the wars of Germany.
I have fought through Spain, through Portugal, through France and Flanders too;
But it's little I thought I'd be reserved for the plains of Waterloo. - BS, RBW

Although the "Battle of Waterloo" took place on June 18, 1815, it was actually the culmination of a several-day campaign. Napoleon, who had just returned from Elba, knew that all Europe would soon turn against him. His only hope was to defeat his enemies piecemeal -- starting with the Anglo-Dutch army of Wellington (the hero of the Peninsular campaign) and the Prussian army of Blucher.

Even though Napoleon started levying troops immediately, Wellington and Blucher together outnumbered the forces at his command by better than three to two. He had to separate them. He undertook this by dividing his army into two wings, the left under Ney and the right under Grouchy. (This was probably Napoleon's worst mistake of the campaign. He left his three of his best Marshals -- Soult, Suchet, and Davout -- in minor roles, while making the uninspired Ney and the inexperienced Grouchy his field commanders).

Napoleon struck first on June 16. Ordering Ney to attack Wellington's rearguard at Quatre Bras, Napoleon took Grouchy's reinforced right and attacked Blucher at Ligny. Ney's attack accomplished little, but Grouchy beat Blucher handily at Ligny.

Napoleon had apparently achieved his objective; Blucher was forced to retreat -- which took him away from Wellington. Napoleon therefore swung the larger part of his army back to deal with the British.

Unfortunately for the French, Blucher didn't retreat far. Even worse, Grouchy didn't follow him closely. Ney's errors topped things off. Given field command by Napoleon at Waterloo (June 18), Ney was unable to dislodge Wellington before Blucher returned to the battlefield. Since Grouchy did "not" show up, Blucher and Wellington swept Ney from the field, ending Napoleon's dreams forever. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
File: LJ03

Plains of Waterloo (III), The [Laws J4]

DESCRIPTION: A boast of the bloody victory at Waterloo, telling of Mooney, who rides a milk-white steed as he rides his troops, and of General Hill, one of thousands of casualties

AUTHOR: unknown
Plains of Waterloo (IV), The

DESCRIPTION: A very confused song. The singer goes to fight the French at Waterloo. He thinks of the mountains of Britain, and his parting from his girl. He receives a letter. Now the girl recalls her lover's departure and curses the man who killed him

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: soldier death Napoleon
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
June 18, 1815 - Battle of Waterloo
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H608, pp. 87-88, "The Plains of Waterloo (IV)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 192, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1106
NOTES [69 words]: Sam Henry's text almost has to be a conflate song, combining two (or more) Waterloo ballads. Possibly they came together because both involved letters between lovers. But with only five stanzas of the combined piece, I haven't been able to identify the parts. The best candidate seems to be Ford's song of the same name; they have similar opening lines, and Roud lumps the pieces. But the plots are different. - RBW
File: HHH608

Plains of Waterloo (IX)

DESCRIPTION: "The ancient sons of glory" were great but fame will proclaim those who fought at Waterloo. The English commanders, killed and wounded, are named. Napoleon runs to Paris to have his son crowned

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1825 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 28(76))
KEYWORDS: war soldier death Napoleon battle
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Jun 18, 1815 - Battle of Waterloo
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North)) Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 121-123, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1106
RECORDINGS:
Pat Critch, "Waterloo" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 28(76), "The Plains of Waterloo" ("The ancient sons of glory were all great men, they say"), W. Armstrong (Liverpool), 1820-1824; also Harding B 15(239b), Firth c.14(27), Harding B 11(3017), Harding B 11(3018), "[The] Plains of Waterloo"; Harding B 30(24), "The Battle of Waterloo"
File: KiTu121
The Plains of Waterloo (V), The

DESCRIPTION: "On the sixteenth day of June, my boys, in Flanders where we lay," the troops are ordered to meet Napoleon at Waterloo. Napoleon urges on his men; Wellington just fights. When the British emerge victorious, they drink to King George

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1869 (Logan-APedlarsPack)

KEYWORDS: war Napoleon battle

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
June 18, 1815 - Battle of Waterloo

FOUND IN: Britain(England,Scotland) Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Logan-APedlarsPack, pp. 106-109, "The Battle of Waterloo" (1 text)
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 61-65, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 299-301, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text)
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 120-121, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 1016-1017, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 202-203, "The Battle of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune, short enough that it might be one of the other Waterloo songs but more likely this)

ST LJ03A (Partial)

RECORDINGS:
Freeman Bennett, "The Plains of Waterloo" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]

BROADSIDES:
Murray, Mu23-y1:033, "The Battle of Waterloo," James Lindsay Jr. (Glasgow), 19C

CROSS-REFERENCES:

SAME TUNE:
Behold He Comes (per broadside Murray, Mu23-y1:033)

NOTES [421 words]: Laws mentions this piece in connection with Laws J3, "The Plains of Waterloo (II)," quoting Mackenzie's claim that this is the literary original of that ballad. Earlier editions of this index lumped the two (based on a lack of reliable texts of Laws J3 for comparison).

But, as Bennett Schwartz points out, they are not the same song as they stand now, and this piece may not even be the actual source of the Laws ballad; the material they both contain is largely commonplace. Thus we split them, though fragments might go with either one, and there will be editors who lump. - BS, RBW

Although the "Battle of Waterloo" took place on June 18, 1815, it was actually the culmination of a several-day campaign. Napoleon, who had just returned from Elba, knew that all Europe would soon turn against him. His only hope was to defeat his enemies piecemeal -- starting with the Anglo-Dutch army of Wellington (the hero of the Peninsular campaign) and the Prussian army of Blucher.

Even though Napoleon started levying troops immediately, Wellington and Blucher together outnumbered the forces at his command by better than three to two. He had to separate them. He undertook this by dividing his army into two wings, the left under Ney and the right under Grouchy. (This was probably Napoleon's worst mistake of the campaign. He left his three of his best Marshals -- Soult, Suchet, and Davout -- in minor roles, while making the uninspired Ney and the inexperienced Grouchy his field commanders).

Napoleon struck first on June 16. Ordering Ney to attack Wellington's rearguard at Quatre Bras, Napoleon took Grouchy's reinforced right and attacked Blucher at Ligny. Ney's attack accomplished little, but Grouchy beat Blucher handily at Ligny.

Napoleon had apparently achieved his objective; Blucher was forced to retreat -- which took him away from Wellington. Napoleon therefore swung the larger part of his army back to deal with the British.

Unfortunately for the French, Blucher didn't retreat far. Even worse, Grouchy didn't follow him closely. Ney's errors topped things off. Given field command by Napoleon at Waterloo (June 18), Ney was unable to dislodge Wellington before Blucher returned to the battlefield. Since Grouchy did "not" show up, Blucher and Wellington swept Ney from the field, ending Napoleon's dreams forever.

The other general mentioned in the song, Jerome, was Napoleon's younger brother. At Waterloo he commanded Ney's left, and failed completely to rout the British from their stronghold of Hougoumont. - RBW
Plains of Waterloo (VI), The

DESCRIPTION: The singer tells of her love, a soldier. She describes his beauty. He fights in the peninsular war. He dies at Salamanca and Waterloo. She describes his last messages, then says she will remain faithful until her own death

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: battle soldier death Napoleon

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
July 22, 1812 - Battle of Salamanca
June 18, 1815 - Battle of Waterloo

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #79, pp. 2-3, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan1 152, "The Plains of Waterloo" (8 texts, 7 tunes)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H15, p. 87, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 191, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [95 words]: The Sam Henry version of this song seems to conflate the battles of Salamanca and Waterloo; the hero is fighting at the first when he dies at the second. Either the song has been strangely damaged in transmission (and it shows no other signs of damage), or it was written by someone with no real understanding of the Napoleonic Wars. My guess is the latter; I suspect this was written well after its alleged date. - RBW

Harding B 11(3020)Greig/Duncan1 152C verse 1 belongs to "The Plains of Waterloo (VIII)"; the other two verses belong to "The Plains of Waterloo (V)." - BS

Plains of Waterloo (VII), The

DESCRIPTION: Singer tells about her lover who "fought in Spain and Portugal and was slain at Waterloo." When Ireland fell he joined Bonaparte, promising to return and marry. "When Bathurst was taken" he went to Waterloo. She'll have no other man.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 2000 (Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)

KEYWORDS: love battle soldier death Napoleon

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
June 18, 1815 - Battle of Waterloo

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 190, "The Plains of Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [303 words]: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 considers this the same song as "The Plains of Waterloo" (VI), but then he argues against his own position: "Unlike most other Napoleonic songs found in Ireland and Britain, the hero of the song fights on Napoleon's side." Moylan's version of "The Plains of Waterloo" (VI) (Moylan 191) shares no lines with this ballad. Moylan speculates that the Bathurst reference "may refer to Henry, the 3rd Earl of Bathurst, who was Secretary of State for the Colonies." There is a connection between "Bathurst" and Napoleon. The following statement is from the Napoleonic Society site: "It is our view that Liverpool, Castlereagh and Bathurst betrayed Napoleon by offering him asylum in England and then sending him off to St-Helena." Robert Stewart, Viscount Castlereagh (Foreign Secretary 1812-1822),
Robert Banks Jenkinson, 2nd Earl of Liverpool (Prime Minister 1812-1827), and Henry Bathurst (Secretary of State for War and the Colonies 1812-1827) are the parties mentioned. The ballad is recorded on one of the CD's issued around the time of the bicentennial of the 1798 Irish Rebellion. See: Franke Harte and Donal Lunny, "My Love at Waterloo" (on Franke Harte and Donal Lunny, "My Name is Napoleon Bonaparte," Hummingbird Records HBCD0027 (2001))

Frank Harte's version resolves the Bathurst "problem." His verse is

When Badajoz was taken and our leaders all were dead,
The plain around in carnage lay to show how much we bled,
Ten thousand man lay in their gore and those who fled were few,
And we marched on to fight once more on the Plains of Waterloo.

Harte: "Badajoz ... is the capital of Badajoz province situated near the border with Portugal. The French captured it in 1811, and held it until the following year when it was retaken by the British, led by the Duke of Wellington." - BS

File: Moy1190

Plains of Waterloo (VIII), The

DESCRIPTION: "On the eighteenth day of June, my boys, Napoleon did advance." "The fight did last from ten o'clock until the close of day." The Belgians desert the Britons on the field but "the Prussians with the English join'd so nobly drubb'd their foe"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1856 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(91))

KEYWORDS: battle France Napoleon

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
June 18, 1815 - Battle of Waterloo

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan1 153, "Waterloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 204-206, "With Wellington We'll Go" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5824

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(91), "Plains of Waterloo" ("On the eighteenth day of June, my boys, Napoleon did advance"), W. Jackson and Son (Birmingham), 1842-1855; also Harding B 11(3020), Harding B 25(1503), Firth b.25(507), Firth c.14(28), Firth c.14(7), Harding B 15(239a), "The Plains of Waterloo[!]"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Hanoverian March" (tune, per broadsides Bodleian Firth b.25(507), Firth c.14(28))
cf. "A-Hunting We Will Go" (tune, per Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs)

NOTES [344 words]: Broadside Bodleian Harding B 11(91) is the basis for the description. - BS

The song conforms to the general outline of the Battle of Waterloo: Napoleon with most of his army attacked Wellington. He came fairly close to victory, but was defeated when the Prussian forces under Blucher arrived and gave the allies a decisive edge in numbers, guaranteeing a French defeat.

It should be noted that there was no nation of Belgium at the time of Waterloo; it was a later creation. Still, the army of Wellington did contain soldiers from this part of the Low Countries -- and he didn't trust them much, and made sure to alternate them with reliable English soldiers.

The times in the song are inaccurate. There was some minor fighting in the morning around the strong British position at Hougoumont (see David Chandler, The Campaigns of Napoleon, Macmillan, 1966, p. 1072, but Napoleon did not begin his big push until 1:00 p.m. on June 18, to let the ground dry out (Chandler, p. 1067). Few British forces were involved until the latter attack began. And even when Napoleon began his artillery bombardment, the British were mostly hidden behind a ridge line, keeping them safe (Chandler, p. 1073).

Fighting continued at some points of the line until 8:00 or 9:00 in the evening (Chandler, p. 1090), as the light faded. By that time, Napoleon's left was completely stalled (it had been stalled all day), his center had been repulsed, and his right had been bent back into a hairpin salient and was starting to crumble (see the map on pp. 1082-1083 of Chandler).

The French army was not completely ruined, as is sometimes asserted -- indeed, it did some good rearguard fighting -- but it was definitely defeated. Napoleon turned the task of rallying the troops over to Marshal Soult and prepared to head for Paris to try to hold his government together.
(Chandler, p. 1090). But though France was probably physically capable of fighting on, no one except Napoleon wanted to continue the fight. He ended up riding all the way into exile, and was sent to Saint Helena. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
File: GrD1153

Plainte du Capitaine, La (The Captain's Lament)

DESCRIPTION: French. A wind blows the ship off course. The captain climbs the mainmast and finds the way home but is thrown into the sea. He is sorry to leave his family. At his burial he wants the crew to sing that he died on the deadly sea.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: foreign language death sea ship storm children mother wife sailor mourning separation funeral
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peacock, pp. 161-162, "La Plainte du Capitaine" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: Pea161

Plane Wreck at Los Gatos (Deportee)

DESCRIPTION: Once the crop is gathered in, the illegal workers who harvested them can be sent back to Mexico. They are taken and separated and put on a plane across the border. The plane catches fire and crashes over Los Gatos; the Mexicans are killed.

AUTHOR: Words: Woody Guthrie / Music: Martin Hoffman
EARLIEST DATE: 1961
KEYWORDS: death disaster foreigner work political flying crash exile emigration
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Jan 28, 1948 - The Los Gatos plane crash
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 367-369, "Plane Wreck at Los Gatos" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, pp. 294-295, "Plane Wreck at Los Gatos" (1 text)
DT, DEPORTE*
RECORDINGS:
Pete Seeger, "Deportee" (on PeteSeeger41)
File: SBoA367

Plant, Plant the Tree

DESCRIPTION: Freedom's sun is rising for Ireland. "Despotic sway from France is chas'd, And church delusion's vanish'd"; Ireland needs the same. "Plant ... fair Freedom's Tree." The French will help. "Erin Go Bragh" will replace "God Save the King." Wars will end

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1790s (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
KEYWORDS: rebellion France Ireland political
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 5, "Plant, Plant the Tree" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 19, "Plant, Plant the Tree" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [91 words]: Evidently a reference to the events of the 1790s, when the French Revolution seemed to portend freedom for many nations. The irony is that instead it led to the Reign of Terror, and Napoleon, and not much else. Indeed, Ireland would see her freedom reduced; since 1782, she had had some internal autonomy under Grattan's Parliament (see the notes to "Ireland's Glory"). But the French were in fact very little help (see the notes to "The Shan Van Voght"), and Ireland would suffer first the 1798 rebellion and then the Union of the Parliaments. - RBW
File: Zimm005
Play on the Hill
DESCRIPTION: "There's a play on the hill tonight (x3), Don't let the Yankees know it. The Rebels are my delight (x3). Don't let the Yankees know it."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (collected from Donald Davidson by Boswell)
KEYWORDS: Civilwar nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 53, p. 91, "Play on the Hille" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #11030
File: BosWo053

Pleasant and Delightful
DESCRIPTION: On a "pleasant and delightful" midsummer's morn, a sailor bids farewell to his true love. She gives him a token, and begs to come along with him. He forbids it, but promises that they will be wed "if ever I return again."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1841 (broadside, Bodleian 2806 c.18(276))
KEYWORDS: love farewell ring separation
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Greig/Duncan1 64, "The Sailor and His True Love" (12 texts, 10 tunes)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 466, "Sailor and His True Love" (1 text)
Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 64-65, "Pleasant and Delightful" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 82, "Pleasant and Delightful" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, PLESDELT*
Roud #660
RECORDINGS:
Sam Larner, "Happy and Delightful" (on SLarner02)
Cyril Poacher, "A Sailor and His True Love" (on Voice02)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.18(276), "The Sailor and his Truelove" ("As a young sailor and his truelove one morning in May"), J. Jennings (London), 1790-1840; also Firth c.12(147), Harding B 17(266b), "Sailor and his Truelove"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Farewell, Charming Nancy [Laws K14]" (plot, lyrics)
cf. "The Soldier and the Sailor" (meter)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Mary Ann
Charming Mary Ann
NOTES [43 words]: This song shares many similarities with "Farewell, Charming Nancy" [Laws K14]; it is not impossible that they have a common ancestor. But the degree of difference is now so large that, until an intermediate version shows up, I must regard them as separate. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.4
File: DTplesde

Pleasant Month of May (I), The
DESCRIPTION: "The pleasant month of May is now a-coming on, The trees are in full bloom, So ye maidens and ye swains," so maidens and swains should go out to pay. "Now that I am single, And I can take no rest," she will seek her lover's arms. She enjoys married life
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Henderson-VictorianStreetBallads)
KEYWORDS: courting marriage shepherd
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henderson-VictorianStreetBallads, p. 64, "The Pleasant Month of May" (1 text)
Pleasant Ohio
DESCRIPTION: "When rambling o'er these mountains And rocks, where ivies grow... great storms of snow, cold winds that blow... Says I, my boys, we'll leave this place For the pleasant Ohio." The singer is sad to leave friends behind, but looks forward to Ohio life
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1992 (Salt-BuckeyeHeritage-OhiosHistory)
KEYWORDS: home travel nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 394-395, "[Pleasant Ohio]" (1 text)
Salt-BuckeyeHeritage-OhiosHistory, pp. 34-36, "Pleasant Ohio" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1026
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Lovely Ohio" (subject)
cf. "Chase the Buffalo (I)" (lyrics)
NOTES [31 words]: Roud appears to lump this with "Chase the Buffalo (I)," and there certainly seems to be a relationship. But I'd consider this to be a deliberate localization, so I'm splitting them.
- RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: CAFS2394

Please Have Mercy on a Longtime Man
DESCRIPTION: "Well I went to the Captain, with my hat in my hand, Said, 'A-Lordy, have mercy, on a longtime man.... He spit on the ground." The singer recalls the poor food, says that his parents lied about earning him a pardon, and complains of prison life
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (vollected from Louis Houston and Matt Williams by Jackson)
KEYWORDS: prison nonballad floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 88-91, "Please Have Mercy on a Longtime Man" (3 texts, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Godalmighty Drag" (lyrics)
NOTES [79 words]: Jackson notes that his informants regard his three texts as three different songs. In terms of content, they are right -- each version is distinct, and while any two versions have words in common, there is hardly anything common to the three. But they have the same tune, and the rest seems to be more the result of the extreme fluidity of prison songs than anything else. Given that all three versions seem to be largely unique, it didn't seem worthwhile to split them.
- RBW
Last updated in version 2.4
File: JDM088

Please Lord, Don't Leave Me
DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Please Lord, don't leave me (alone) (x3), Guide me on my way." Verses are floaters about Noah's ark, "... two by two, ... kangaroo," the raven and dove, and "rainbow sign, It wouldn't be water but fire next time"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 2008 (USSeaslsand04)
KEYWORDS: Bible flood floatingverses religious animal bird
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Gullah Kinfolk, "Gullah Intro/Pleeze Lawdy" (on USSeaslsand04)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
Please, Don't Burn Our Shithouse Down

DESCRIPTION: The singer pleads for his/her outhouse, chronicling the family's woes, and promises to pay [tax?].

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1733 (Thomson's Orpheus Caledonius)

KEYWORDS: bawdy family humorous scatological

FOUND IN: Australia Canada Britain(England,Scotland) Ireland US(ubiquitous) New Zealand

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 109-111, "Please, Don't Burn Our Shithouse Down" (5 texts, 1 tune)
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 191-195, "Finest Fucking Family" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, p. 167, "Times Is Hard" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #10270

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "My God, How the Money Rolls In" cf. "My Daddy's a Delver of Dykes"

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Finest Fucking Family in the Land
My Father Was Hung for Sheep-Stealing (as a Horse Thief)

Please, Mister Barkeeper

DESCRIPTION: "Please, Mr. Barkeeper, has father been here?" The barkeeper directs the hoy to the policeman, and the policeman to the jailer; the man has been arrested (for drink?). The boy waits all day outside the prison. Finally someone promises to drink no more.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin)

KEYWORDS: drink prison children

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 256-257, "Please, Mister Bartender" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #4926 and 15678

NOTES [67 words]: This looks like a pretty standard nineteenth century temperance song, but the ending in Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin is confused. As it stands, the boy awaits his father in vain, then goes home and promises to drink no more. I suspect two verses have been conflated: the boy probably waits all day, then the father is released (perhaps due to the boy's pleading) and promises to change his ways. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.6

Please, Mister Conductor (The Lightning Express)

DESCRIPTION: The conductor demands a boy's ticket. He has none. He went to work in the city to pay for his mother's care, but now she is dying. He has no fare, but is going to be with her; he begs the conductor to let him stay. The passengers chip in to pay his fare.

AUTHOR: J. Fred Helf (?) and E. P. Moran

EARLIEST DATE: 1898 (copyright)

KEYWORDS: mother disease age separation train help

FOUND IN: US(So,SW)

REFERENCES (5 citations):

File: GuKiGLPL
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 321-325, "Please, Mr. Conductor/The Lightning Express" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph 720, "Please, Mister Conductor" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 468-470, "Please, Mister Conductor" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 720A)
High-OldOldFolkSongs, p. 39, "The Little Boy on a Train" (1 text)
Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart1 27, "Lightning Express" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7389

RECORDINGS:
Blue Sky Boys, "The Lightning Express" (Bluebird B-8369, Montgomery Ward M-8414, 1940)
Fiddlin' John Carson, "The Lightning Express" (OKeh 7008, 1924)
Johnny & Albert Crockett, "Lightnin' Express" (Crown 3074, 1930)
Pete Daley's Arkansas Fiddlers, "Lightning Express" (Varsity 5078, n.d.)
Vernon Dalhart, "Lightning Express" (Banner 1594, 1925) (Challenge 165/Challenge 320, 1927)
(Champion 15017, 1925) (Victor 19837, 1925)
Byron G. Harlan "Please, Mr. Conductor, Don't Put Me Off The Train" (CYL: Edison 7219, 1903)
Jim Holbert, "The Lightning Express" (AFS 4130 B2, 1940; on LC61)
Frank Hutchison, "Lightning Express" (OKeh 45144, 1927)
Bradley Kincaid, "The Lightning Express" (Melotone 12184, 1931; Vocalion 02683, 1934)
Lester McFarland & Robert Gardner [Mac & Bob], "The East Bound Train" (Vocalion 5174/Vocalion 5200/Brunswick 169/Brunswick 326, 1928; Supertone S-2032 [as Kentucky Mountain Boys], 1930; rec. 1927)
Gene McNulty, "Lightning Express" (Decca 12202)
George Reneau, "The Lightning Express" (Vocalion 5056/Vocalion 14991, 1925; Silvertone 3045 [as George Hobson], 1924)
Mervin Shiner, "The Lightning Express" (Decca 46272, 1950)
Ernest V. Stoneman "The Lightning Express" (OKeh 40408, 1925)
Arthur Tanner, "The Lightning Express Train" (Puritan 9160, n.d. but prob. c. 1926)
Ernest Thompson, "The Lightning Express" (Columbia 145-D, 1924)
Wesley Tuttle, "The Lightning Express" (Coral 64068, 1950)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Going for a Pardon" (plot)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The East Bound Train

NOTES [93 words]: The sheet music of this is obscure enough (or illegible enough) that the first author is various listed as "H. Fred Delf" and J. Fred Helf. I've tentatively listed the latter in the "author" field, since it's the form Norm Cohen uses, and he's more authoritative than any of the other sources.
The memory of Delf/Helf and Moran is quite obscure; their copyright was not renewed, and we find the song being re-copyrighted in 1925 by Triangle Music Publishing, with no reference to the original authors; they credited to the universal pseudonym E. V. Body. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3
File: R720

Plooin' Match, The

DESCRIPTION: The ploughmen meet at (Hilton) to have a contest. The various ploughmen are listed, along with the way they competed. The song concludes, "The judges cam frae far an' near... But some wad say their sicht was puir That day among the ploomen."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: farming racing humorous moniker contest

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #163, p. 1, "The Plooin' Match" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 422, "The Plooin' Match" (1 text)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 239-241, "The Ploughing Match" (1 text)
Roud #5581

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Whistle Owre the Lave o't" (tune, per Greig)
cf. "The Fyvie Ploughmen" (subject: ploughing match)
Plooman Laddie (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "My love's a plooman and follows the ploo, I promised to him and I'll keep it true.... What's better than a plooman?" The singer rejects many (e.g. "I micht hae gotten the miller... But the smell o' the dust wad had done me ill") and rejoices to be wed

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: love courting farming rejection

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #130, p. 1, "The Plooman Laddie" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 445, "The Plooman Laddie" (5 texts, 4 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 223-224, "The Plooman Laddie" (1 text)
Roud #3447

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Soldier Boy for Me (A Railroader for Me)” (theme: professional comparison) and references there

cf. "The Rigs o' Rye" (tune, per Greig)

cf. "My Love's a Plooman" (lyrics)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
I Micht Hae Gotten
The Ploughman

NOTES [114 words]: Ord-BothySongsAndBallads lists this as being sung to "The Rigs o Rye." The tune I've heard isn't quite that, though it's close. - RBW
Greig's text is "a piecing together of two or three versions, none of which is complete, but each of which provides something of its own." But at Greig #135, p. 3, "[M.S. (Mrs Sangster according to Greig/Duncan3)] says that the first verse 'My love is a ploughman and follows the plough, etc.,' is another song altogether from 'I mith hae gotten the gatherer o' yonder tree, etc.' although they were combined in our version. The songs are different, shes ays[sic], and have different tunes. This we can well believe, these songs get so mixed up." - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: Ord223

Ploughboy (I), The

DESCRIPTION: In this confused composite of floating verses, the ploughboy courts Molly, but then departs to become a soldier. He will build Molly a castle and take her away. She nonetheless rejects him

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Sam Henry collection); c1810? (_English Minstrel_, according to Yates, Musical Traditions site _Voice of the People suite_ "Notes - Volume 5" - 25.8.02)

KEYWORDS: love courting rejection soldier flowers floatingverses

FOUND IN: Ireland Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-Sam Henrys Songs Of The People H780, p. 345-346, "The Ploughboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Porter/Gower-Jeannie-Robertson-Emergent Singer Transformative Voice #62, p. 226-227, "Lovely Molly" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1446

RECORDINGS:
Lizzie Higgins, "Lovely Molly" (on Voice05)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Green Grows the Laurel (Green Grow the Lilacs)" (floating lyrics)
cf. "The Streams of Lovely Nancy" (floating lyrics)
cf. "The Blackbird and Thrush" (theme)
NOTES [113 words]: This song consists almost entirely of floating material (see the cross-references), and is fairly incoherent as a result. The largest element is "Green Grows the Laurel" (to such an extent that it's almost a version of that song), but there are plenty of other elements. The composite probably didn't circulate widely as an independent entity. - RBW

"[O]ne source credits Charles Dibdin as its author," according to Yates, Musical Traditions site Voice of the People suite "Notes - Volume 5" - 25.8.02. - BS
My guess would be that Dibdin is responsible for some of the floating material; on that basis, I have not listed him in the "author" field, even as a possibility. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
File: HHH780

Ploughboy's Dream, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer, a ploughboy, recalls a dream: he tries unsuccessfully to plow hard ground and curses and beats his horses; an angel stops him warning "there's One that knows your crimes and sins." He warns other ploughboy lads to "let kindness your motto be"

AUTHOR: William Mason (source: broadside Bodleian Harding B 7(44))
EARLIEST DATE: 1795 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 7(44))
KEYWORDS: warning abuse farming dream religious horse
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) Britain(England(Lond))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #54, pp. 1-2, "The Ploughboy's Dream" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 491, "The Ploughboy's Dream" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #94, "The Ploughboy's Dream" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1545

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 7(44), "The Plow-boy's Dream" ("I am a plow-boy stout and strong"), J. Marshall (London), 1795; also Harding B 11(3032), "The Ploughboy's Dream"

NOTES [107 words]: This is surely a rewrite of the story of Balaam's Ass, applied to a farmer's situation. In Numbers 22:22-35, Balaam has been hired by the King of Moab to try to curse Israel. On the way, the donkey first turns off into a field, then crushes Balaam's foot against a rock, then stop still in the middle of the path. Balaam each time strikes it, but on the third time the donkey speaks, and an angel tells Balaam that the donkey had kept him from being killed by the angel. Balaam repents of his treatment of the donkey. The song lacks the incident of the horses talking, but the rest -- including the moral against sinning -- is the same. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
File: GrD3491

Ploughing Match at Bucharn, The

DESCRIPTION: "John Geggie's man he cocked his hat When he began to smele thereat That he was foremost of the lot And judged to be the rarest."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: contest farming racing
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1882, "The Ploughing Match at Bucharn" (1 fragment)
Roud #13568
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ah, Smiler Lad" (ploughing match)
cf. "Dalmuir Ploughing Match" (ploughing match)
cf. "The Inverquhomery Ploughing Match" (ploughing match)
cf. "The Plooin' Match" (ploughing match)
Ploughman (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "The ploughman, he's a bonnie lad, And does his wark at leisure... Then up wi't noo, my ploughman lad, And hey my merry ploughman." The singer describes her ploughman's work, and the work she does to keep him well, and scorns those who scorn him

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: in traditional form 1906 (Greig/Duncan3); Burns rewrote it for the Scots Musical Museum

KEYWORDS: work marriage nonballad farming

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Greig/Duncan3 451, "Commend Me to the Plooman" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 217, "The Ploughman" (1 text)
- Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, p. 354, "The Ploughman" (1 text)

Roud #5582

NOTES [10 words]: The Greig/Duncan3 tune is very close to "The Boyne Water." - BS

Last updated in version 3.2
File: Ord217

Ploughman (II), The

DESCRIPTION: Singer, a ploughman, praises his fellows, his profession and his recreations.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1904

KEYWORDS: work drink nonballad farming

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 122-123, "I Am a Pretty Wench" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 449)
- VaughanWilliams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs, p. 84, "The Ploughman" (1 text, 1 tune)
- DT, PLOUGHM4*

Roud #2538

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "I am a Pretty Wench"

NOTES [310 words]: This is a muddled song. As collected in 1904, the singer began with a verse from "The Condescending Lass" (a song in which the lass in question rejects the idea of marrying men of various professions). He veered off immediately, however, into a praiseful description of ploughmen, and the lass is not heard from again. [Vaughan Williams and Lloyd] excised the seemingly-unconnected first verse and assigned the present title (the singer had called it "Pretty Wench"). -PJS

[For that "Pretty Wench" song, see "I am a Pretty Wench." The title "The Condescending Lass" for the poem appears to be known primarily from broadsides; the typical traditional title is either "Pretty Wench" or "I Am a Pretty Wench." - RBW]

To tell this from other songs in praise of farmhands, consider this first stanza:
"A ploughman dresses fine, he drinks strong beer ale and wine
And the best of tobacco he do smoke;
Pretty maids don't think amiss a ploughman for to kiss,
For his breath smells as sweet as a rose, a rose, a rose
For his breath smells as sweet as a rose." - RBW

It appears Roud would have Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 525, "I am a pretty wench" be the verse excised by Vaughan Williams and Lloyd. Roud has other examples as well under #2538. Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes notes that this song is in Alfred Williams Folk-Songs of the Upper Thames (1923) and that Vaughan Williams did collect it. If we ever add one of those "The Pretty Wench" songs it should probably considered separate from "The Ploughman."
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames has the pretty wench compare weavers to carters ("The carter dresses fine, He drinks strong beer, ale, and wine, And smokes tobacco ...." and "his breath smells as sweet as the rose...."). It does begin with the "I Am a Pretty Wench" verse which matches the pattern of the rest of the song. - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: VWL084

Ploughman Chiel and the Ploughman Laddie, The DESCRIPTION: "The ploughman chiel and the ploughman laddie, Are you afraid of the ploughman laddie? Are you afraid that he'll do you wrong, Na nae a bit for he'll do me none"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: farming questions
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 416, "The Ploughman Chiel and the Ploughman Laddie" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #5937
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Ploughman Laddie
NOTES [10 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan3 entry. - BS
Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD416

Ploughman Lad for Me, A
DESCRIPTION: "Where first I saw my Jockie, Was at (Huntly) feeing fair." She praises his beauty, declaring, "So a ploughman lad for me." She cares not what her parents think, and is willing to work hard alongside him; his love is worth more than riches
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1860 (broadside NLScotland L.C.Fol.178.A.2(023))
KEYWORDS: love courting farming
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 280-281, "A Ploughman Lad for Me" (1 text)
BROADSIDES:
NLScotland, L.C.Fol.178.A.2(023), "The Ploughman Lads for Me," James Lindsay (Glasgow), 1852-1859 [despite the title, the song text refers "a ploughman lad," not "lads"]
NOTES [23 words]: Credited to John Wilson in the NLScotland broadside -- which, interestingly, leaves blank the name of the city in which the couple meets. - RBW
File: Ord280

Pluie Tombe, La
DESCRIPTION: Creole French: "La pluie tombe, Crapeau chante, Oin, oin! oin, oin! oin! oin! M'a pale baigner moine, La pluie tombe, Marin-gouin crie...." As the rain falls, the frog an the mosquito call the singer into the water (and drown)
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage animal bug drowning
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 203-204, "La Pluie Tombe" (1 short text, 1 tune)
File: ScaNF203
Plum and Apple
DESCRIPTION: "Plum and apple, Apple and plum, Plum and apple There is always some. The A.S.C. get strawberry jam And lashings of rum, But we poor blokes We only get Apple and plum."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang)
KEYWORDS: soldier food drink hardtimes
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, p. 59, "Plum and Apple" (1 text)
Roud #10545
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Just a Wee Doch-an-Dorris" (tune)
File: BrPa059B

Plumb and Level, The
DESCRIPTION: "When Adam ruled the world" he and Eve "formed a bower to shade them from the weather's evil." "They lived in social harmony till madam longed for fruit ... And the bit she went out one morning for to meet the deevil"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: Bible Devil food
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 472, "The Plumb and Level" (1 fragment)
Roud #5968
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.13(205), "The Tower of Babel" ("When Adam ruled the world by an order from the Grand"), unknown, no date
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Rules of Masonry" (theme: Building the First Temple)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Adam and Eve
NOTES [386 words]: Apparently Broadside Bodleian, 2806 c.13(205), "The Tower of Babel" ... is this song but I could not download and verify it. On the small image of the broadside that is visible, the broadside has at least eight verses compared to Greig/Duncan's 2 verses. The lines I can make out for verses one and two seem very close to Greig/Duncan3. - BS
I was able to download it, but large portions of the scan are unreadable. It lists as a tune "The old Orange [something]" (not "flute," "Order," perhaps?). The first verse tells the story of the fall of Adam and Eve, as described above; this tale is in Genesis 3 (though it never says Eve met the Devil; she met the Serpent). Greig's decision to file this with the Masonic songs seems justified, since it refers to the "plumb gauge and level."
The next few verses refer to Noah building an ark with square gauge and level, and to forty days of rain. The tale of the flood occupies Genesis 6-8, with the "forty days" being mentioned e.g. in Genesis 7:4.
The next verse, which is probably about the Tower of Babel, has been obliterated. The story of the Tower is in Genesis 11.
Then we come to Solomon. This song, like "The Building of Solomon's Temple" [Laws Q39] and "The Rules of Masonry," hints at Solomon being a mason. But the building of the Temple is described in chapters 5-8 of 1 Kings (and 2 Chronicles chapters 2-6 with a foreshadowing in 1 Chron. 28-29). But it clearly was not built by masons; it was probably designed by Phoenicians (note that this song mentions "Hiram King of Tyre," the leading Phoenician monarch), and certainly constructed by slaves.
The final verse refers to "The widow's murdered son" who "masonic power displayed." I "think" this is a reference to Jesus, who of course was considered to have been murdered. Legend, based on the fact that the gospels mention Mary but not Joseph during Jesus's adult ministry, has it that Mary outlived Joseph, making her a widow. As for Jesus showing Masonic power, John 2:19 has Jesus say, "Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up" (with verse 2:21 explaining that "he was speaking of the temple of his body"); in Mark 14:58 and parallels we read that Jesus was charged with saying "I will destroy this temple made with hands, and in three days build another not made with hands." - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD3472

Plumb the Line

DESCRIPTION: "Well, I'm so glad I can plumb the line (x3). It takes a number one (driver/tamper) to plumb the line." "Won't you come on, buddy, we can plumb the line." The singer describes his exploits, or asks for help in his work.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands)
KEYWORDS: work bragging prison nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE,So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 218-222, "Plumb the Line" (3 texts, 2 tunes); pp. 280-281, "Down the Line" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands 9, pp. 67-70, "Plumb de Line" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10979
RECORDINGS:
  Dock Reed & Vera Hall Ward, "Plumb the Line" (on NFMAla5)
NOTES [220 words]: Jackson thinks that "Plumb the Line" may have originated as a tie-tamping song, and I think it nearly certain that his version derives from a tamping text-- at least, it is certain that it has close analogies among tampers. But it seems to have become a specialized prison song. Jackson's "Down the Line" is used for a different purpose (flatweeding rather than crosscutting), but in Jaccson's versions, the similarities are so great that they can still be treated as one song. Whether that would remain true after future evolution is another question, but given the rarity of both songs, it's not worth splitting at this time.

The Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands and Reed/Ward texts are religious; Ben Schwartz gave this description of the Parrish text: "The tag line of each verse is 'If you want to go to heaven you've got to Plumb the line.' Verses are 'O members (sister, deacon), Plumb the line' and "You've got to sing (shout) right, Plumb the line. The Dock Reed & Vera Hall recording has a different tag line: 'Anchor (?) in my Jesus, Plumb the line."' It is not clear to me whether the religious or secular text is older; I lean slightly toward the religious version. Conceptually, they are different enough that they might be split, but there aren't enough versions of either to make it worthwhile. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1
File: JDM218

Plutocracy

DESCRIPTION: "The heir apparent's been and gone and the frenzied welcome's dead" but stories about the visit are still being published. The "piffle press" goes on about that, but won't tell of the sufferings of the lower classes.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Transport Workers Songbook, according to Cleveland-NZ-GreatNewZealandSongbook)
KEYWORDS: New Zealand royalty hardtimes nonballad
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
  1920 - the visit of the future Edward VIII to New Zealand
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Cleveland-NZ-GreatNewZealandSongbook, pp. 106-107, "Plutocracy" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "Yankee Doodle" (tune) and references there
File: Clev106
Po' Boy (I)
DESCRIPTION: "My mammy's in the cold cold ground, My daddy went away... now I've gone astray. I sit here in the prison, I do the best I can, But I get to thinkin' of the woman I love; She ran away with another man." The singer tried to rob a mail train, but was caught
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)
KEYWORDS: prison crime robbery punishment separation
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 30-32, "Po' Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: San030

Po' Farmer
DESCRIPTION: "Work all week, don't make enough To pay my board and buy my snuff... It's a-hard on we po' farmers, it's a-hard." The farmer describes the long day's work -- only to come home to "peas in the pot and an old jaw-bone" and fifteen cents weekly pay
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry; supposedly collected 1934)
KEYWORDS: work farming hardtimes poverty
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 280-281, "Po' Farmer" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 284, "Po' Farmer" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, POFARMER*
Roud #6709
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Humble Farmer" (theme)
File: LoF284

Po' Li'l Ella
DESCRIPTION: "I'll tell you somep'n that bothers my mind: Po' li'l Ella laid down an' died." "I wouldn't a-minded little Ella dyin', But she left three chillum." "Judge, you dome me wrong, Ninety-nine years is sho' too long!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: death homicide children punishment prison judge
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 278-279, "Po' Li'l Ella" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [19 words]: Scarborough claims this is "a favorite in East Texas sawmill districts." But I've seen no other signs of it. - RBW
File: ScNF278B

Po' Liza Jane
DESCRIPTION: "Go long, po' Liza Jane (x2), I turned my head to the ole grey horse, Go long po' Liza Jane." "I ast her would she marry me; She ast me wasn't I shamed." "I went up to the new-cut road, And she went down the lane."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: courting horse floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 456, "Po' Liza Jane" (1 short text)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 172, "Liza Jane" (1 text, with a "Cindy...Cindy Jane" chorus)
Po' Shine

DESCRIPTION: "You can't do me like you done po' Shine, Paid off everybody and you didn't pay Shine." About the hard times on a work crew. Shine departs seeking better work, and finally the workers are paid. Some elements float

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1944 (Wheeler)

KEYWORDS: work hardtimes boss travel

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Wheeler-SteamboatinDays, pp. 17-18, "Po Shine" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST MWhee017 (Full)

Roud #9995

File: MWhee017

Poacher's Fate, The [Laws L14]

DESCRIPTION: (Six) young men go out hunting. They are met by a gamekeeper, who vows to shoot one of them to end their depredations. The keeper fatally wounds "the bravest lad."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1842 (broadside, Bodleian Firth b.34(118))

KEYWORDS: death poaching punishment

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland,England(South)) US(MW,NE) Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (9 citations):

Laws L14, "The Poacher's Fate"

Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 248, "The Gallant Poacher" (1 text, 1 tune)

Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 576, "Gallant Poacher" (1 text)

Kidson-TraditionalTunes, p. 134, ("Come all you lads of high renown") (1 fragment)

OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart2 37, "The Poacher" (1 text, 1 tune)

Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, "Lads of High Renown" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #4, "The Gallant Poachers" (1 text, 1 tune)

Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. 351-352, "The Poacher's Fate" (1 text; tune on p. 451)

DT 351, POACHERF

Roud #793

RECORDINGS:

Walter Pardon, "The Poachers' Fate" (on Voice18)

BROADSIDES:

Bodleian, Firth b.34(118), "Gallant Poacher" ("Come all you lads of high renown"), Birt (London), 1833-1841; also Harding B 11(325), Harding B 11(3853), Firth c.19(49), "[The] Gallant Poacher"; Johnson Ballads 1394, "Gallant Poachers"

Murray, Mu23-y4:020, "Gallant Poachers," unknown, 19C

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Keepers and Poachers" (plot)

File: LL14

Poetry on the Death of Ezekiel Crane, and Execution of Indian John

DESCRIPTION: "Sweet poetry, my bosom fire, My mental and my muse inspire." Indian John declares that "Then me would kill all white men dead." He manages to shoot Ezekiel Crane, but is captured. Even the Indians are glad that he is to be executed.

AUTHOR: Jason Smith

EARLIEST DATE: 1818 (source: Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales)

KEYWORDS: homicide Indians(Am.) execution

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1818 - Murder of Ezekiel Crane by "Indian John"

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 436-439, "Poetry on the Death of Ezekiel Crane, and Execution of Indian John" (1 excerpt, of 50 lines out of 280 in the original; that's about 49 lines too many....)

ADDITIONAL: (no author listed), _Portrait and Biographical Record of Seneca and Schuler Counties, New York_, Chapman Publishing Co, 1895 (available on Google Books), pp. 185-187, "Poetry on the Death of Ezekiel Crane, and Execution of Indian John" (1 monotonously complete text)

NOTES [59 words]: For another account of this incident, almost as racist as this poem, see J.O. Noyes, _The Lakes & Legends of Central New-York: A Virtually Unknown Rambling Account of Life and Times in Upstate, New York, 1857_, W.E. Morrison & Co., 1973. Apparently the incident actually happened, and Indian John's skeleton was preserved and became a surgeon's model. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.0

File: TNY436

Point Maid, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer's father was a farmer, but he must leave his home, his work, and his girl. As he makes his way to the port, he thinks of drowned sailors and his lost sweetheart. He hopes to return, though he would not care if the girl were with him.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: emigration separation farewell

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H42b, p. 197, "The Point Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: HHH042b

Pokegama Bear

DESCRIPTION: Lumbermen encounter the Pokegama bear. Morris O'Hearne tells the men to run; (they have humorous accidents). Mike McAlpin kills the bear with an axe; the grease is divided up among the men, and the meat cooked and eaten.

AUTHOR: Frank Hasty (words)

EARLIEST DATE: 1874 (composed)

LONG DESCRIPTION: A crew of lumbermen encounters the Pokegama bear. Morris O'Hearne, who first flushes him, tells the men to run; Jimmy Quinn runs into a porcupine. The bear heads for the swamp; O'Hearne follows, but slips and falls under it. Mike McAlpin chases down and kills the bear with an axe; the grease is divided up among the men, and the meat cooked and eaten. O'Hearne gets the skin; "Long life to you and long growth to your hair/When it's greased with the fat from Pokegama Bear"

KEYWORDS: lumbering work moniker animal logger worker humorous

FOUND IN: US(MW)

RECORDINGS:
Art Thieme, "Pokegama Bear" (on Thieme06)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Vilikens and his Dinah (William and Dinah) [Laws M31A/B]" (tune & meter) and references there

NOTES [261 words]: Pokegama Lake is a very wide area of the upper Mississippi River. - PJS

Paul Stamler didn't list this as a humorous item, but the versions I recall hearing (I think from John Berquist, though I've heard other Minnesotans mention it) generally have comic aspects as the loggers flee the bear. The tune seems to have wandered a bit, too, though that may just be my memory.

It should be noted that it is highly unlikely that a really dangerous bear would be encountered in Minnesota. The only bears which come anywhere near the state are black bears; a gang of loggers could certainly handle one black bear! But the Pokegama region is features some of the harshest winter weather in Minnesota. Climatologist Mark W. Sealy, Minnesota Weather Almanac, Minnesota Historical Society, 2006, p. 55, writes of the weather station there, "The weather station at Pokegama Dam, along the Mississippi River, was established in April 1887.... Pokegama's reputation as one of Minnesota's coldest spots is bolstered by more than 30 low temperatures records, including the following: coldest temperature recorded in March... coldest-ever November temperature... and coldest-ever December temperature... Temperatures of -50 [degrees] F and colder have been recorded 30 times, the coldest being -59 [degrees] F on February 16, 1903. From January to February in back-to-back years, 1904 and 1905, Pokegama Dam recorded 31 consecutive days of temperatures below zero."

Thus one might suspect that the legend of the Pokegama Bear actually arose as an excuse to get out of the cold. - RBW

File: RcPokegB

poleon doré

DESCRIPTION: French-Canadian dialect song. Singer describes working in a lumber camp. Paul Desjardins falls into rapids; oars do not reach him. Napoleon Dore dives in. Both drown in a whirlpool. Their bodies are found in each other's arms. They are buried together.

AUTHOR: William Henry Drummond

EARLIEST DATE: 1897 (Drummond, The Habitant)

LONG DESCRIPTION: French-Canadian dialect song. Singer first describes (at length) the pleasures and comradeship of working in a lumber camp, then tells story. Paul Desjardins falls overboard in rapids; after his workmates fail to save him with their oars, Napoleon Dore dives in, but both are caught in a whirlpool and drowned. Their bodies are found in each other's arms, and they are buried together.

KEYWORDS: lumbering work death friend logger drowning

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 74, "'Poleon Doré" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: William Henry Drummond, M.D., _The Habitant and other French Canadian Poems_, Putnam, 1897, pp. 37-43, "'Poleon Doré'" (1 text)

ST Be074 (Partial)

Roud #8869

NOTES [59 words]: Is there something left unsaid here? I can't tell. I do note that this is a composed piece, and I find no evidence of a tune; I'm not sure that it justifies its inclusion in Beck. William Henry Drummond also wrote "The Wreck of the Julie Plante," which is probably traditional, and "De Camp on de Cheval Gris," which is in the Index but probably isn't. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: Be074

polk county blues

DESCRIPTION: "Ain't nobody knows Polk County like I do; I walked Polk county through and through." "Woke up this morning feeling bad; Thinking about good time I used to have." Other verses float

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Recording, Eddie Kelly's Washboard Band)

KEYWORDS: rambling floatingverses nonballad

FOUND IN:

RECORDINGS:

Willie Gillard, "Polk County Blues" (on USFlorida01)

Eddie Kelly's Washboard Band, "Poole County Blues" (Bluebird B7204, 1937)

Ella Mae Wilson and Richard Williams, "Polk County Blues" (on USFlorida01)

NOTES [64 words]: The Eddie Kelly record sounds as though his words are "Polk County" rather Poll the Grogseller
DESCRIPTION: "Big Poll the Grogseller gets up every day... She's turning in plenty of tin people say," for "Polly's good looking, and Polly is young, And Polly's possessed of a smooth oily tongue." When magistrates come in seeking illegal boose, she easily fools them
AUTHOR: Charles R. Thatcher (1831-1878)?
EARLIEST DATE: 1969 (Thatcher-ColonialMinstrel-Songsters)
KEYWORDS: drink police trick money beauty
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Thatcher-ColonialMinstrel-Songsters, p. 75 "Poll the Grogseller" (1 text, from "Thatcher's Colonial Songster")
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 85-87, "Poll the Grogseller" (1 text, 1 tune)
Anderson-GoldrushSongster, pp. 46-47, "Poll the Grogseller" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hoskins-GoldfieldBalladeer-LifeAndTimes-Charles-R-Thatcher, pp. 149, "Poll the Grogseller" (1 text)
Anderson/Thatcher-GoldDiggersSongbook, pp. 53-54, "Poll the Grogseller" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Phillip the Falconer" (tune)
NOTES [29 words]: For brief background on Charles Thatcher's career, see the notes to "Where's Your License?" For an extensive collection of his songs, see Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong.
- RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: AnSt085

Polly Brannigan (Molly Brannigan)
DESCRIPTION: The singer confesses that Polly Brannigan "stole me heart and I'll never be a man again." Now she has left him; he wishes that "when she got another heart she might send mine back home again." (Considering suicide, he hopes she will grieve when he dies)
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland)
KEYWORDS: love rejection suicide
FOUND IN: US(MW) Ireland
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Munnelly/Deasy-TheMountCallanGarland-Tom-Lenihan 34, "Purty Molly Brannigan" (2 texts, 1 tune)
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 41, "Molly Brallaghan" (1 text)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 153, (fifth of several "Fragments of Irish Songs")
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 181, "Molly Brannigan" (1 text)
DT, MOLLBRAN
Roud #13375
RECORDINGS:
Tom Lenihan, "Purty Molly Brannigan" (on IRTLenihan01)
NOTES [75 words]: There is a sense that the singer is naive and that we are supposed, at least, to smile behind his back. For example, in Munnelly/Deasy-TheMountCallanGarland-Tom-Lenihan he asks advice of Father Mc Donald and Counsellor O'Connell who "told me promise-breaches had been ever since the world began: Now I've only one pair, ma'am, and they are corduroy! ... Must my corduroys to Molly go? ... I can't afford to lose both my heart and ould britches too." - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: E153E
Polly Oliver (Pretty Polly) [Laws N14]

DESCRIPTION: Polly loves a sea captain; her parents do not. She dresses as a man and follows her love. Still in disguise, she meets him at an inn. The captain wishes to sleep with her; she refuses, but appears the next day in her own clothes. The two are wed.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1820 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 17(240b))

KEYWORDS: courting disguise marriage cross-dressing

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North,South)) US(Ap,MA,MW,NE,SE,So) Canada(Mar,Newf) Ireland

REFERENCES (26 citations):

- Laws N14, "Polly Oliver (Pretty Polly)"
- Williams-Wittshire-WSRO Mi 671, "Polly Oliver" (1 text)
- Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 116-117, "Polly Oliver's Ramble" (1 text, 2 tunes)
- Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 105, "Polly Oliver's Rambles" (1 text)
- Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #72, "Polly Oliver's Rambles" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 183-185, "Polly Oliver" (2 texts)
- Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 145, "Polly Oliver's Rambles" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H166, pp. 328-329, "Lovely Annie (II)" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Cox-FolkSongsSouth122, "Pretty Polly" (1 text)
- Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 273-274, "Polly Oliver" (1 short text, 1 tune, ending with the meeting in the inn)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 97, "Polly Oliver" (1 text)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 97, "Polly Oliver" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
- Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 128, "Pretty Polly" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 60, "Pretty Polly Oliver" (1 text plus mention of 1 more)
- Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 133-134, "Polly Oliver" (1 short text, 1 tune, probably this although it's too short to be certain)
- Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 14, p. 22, "Polly Oliver" (1 fragment, probably this although it's too short to be sure)
- Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 195-198, "Pretty Polly" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 23, "Polly Oliver" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Peacock, pp. 344-345, "Polly Oliver" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 28, "Polly Oliver" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 55, "Polly Oliver" (1 text)
- Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 54, "Polly Oliver" (3 texts, 3 tunes)
- Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic II, p. 181, "Pretty Polly Oliver" (1 tune, probably of this piece though the text is lacking)
- Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN2180, "One night as Polly Oliver lay musing on her bed" DT 446, POLLOLVR*

Roud #367

RECORDINGS:
- Ollie Gilbert, "Pretty Polly Oliver" (on LomaxCD1707)
- Peter Molloy, "Pretty Polly" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Harding B 17(240b), "Polly Oliver's Ramble," J. Pitts (London), 1802-1819; also Harding B 17(241b), Harding B 16(205d), Harding B 11(3147), Harding B 25(1518)[some lines illegible], "Polly Oliver's Ramble"; Harding B 28(238), "Polly Oliver"; Harding B 17(241a), Harding B 16(206b), Harding B 15(241a), Harding B 15(241b), Firth c.26(50), 2806 c.17(337)[words missing], 2806 b.11(260), 2806 c.16(61), Firth c.14(169), Harding B 16(206a), 2806 c.14(10)[many illegible words], Harding B 15(240b), "Polly Oliver's Rambles"

SAME TUNE:
- Parody on Polly Oliver ("O Pretty Polly Oliver one hot summer's day, To Milverton market was making her way") (Reginald Nettel, _Seven Centuries of Popular Song_, Phoenix House, 1956, p. 141)

File: LN14
Polly on the Shore (The Valiant Sailor)

DESCRIPTION: The sailor warns others about bad company. While out roaming, he is pressed to sea. Soon his ship meets a (French) vessel; he is mortally injured. He recalls his beloved Polly on shore, says he is dying for her, and hopes the sailors will be remembered

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1744 (The Irish Boy’s Garland)
KEYWORDS: sailor love pressgang farewell warning death fight dying
FOUND IN: US(NE) Britain(England(Lond)) Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
- Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 57, "The Press Gang Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 87, "The Neat Irish Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #68, "Bold Carter" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 40, "The Valiant Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
- DT, (POLSHORE) PRSSGANG
Roud #811

RECORDINGS:
- George Maynard, "Polly on the Shore" (on Maynard1, HiddenE, Voice12)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- Press Gang

File: Wa057

---

Polly Perkins of Paddington Green

DESCRIPTION: The singer describes beautiful Polly, whom he vainly loved. She teases and flirts, but declares, "The man that has me must have silver and gold." He gives up his courtship -- but later learns that she did not marry a lord but a "bow-legged conductor."

AUTHOR: Harry Clifton (source: Greig/Duncan6)
EARLIEST DATE: 1865 (referred to by Charles Dodgson); reportedly published 1856 (Greig/Duncan 6)
KEYWORDS: love courting rejection money beauty
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber)) Ireland Canada(Mar,Newf)
REFERENCES (9 citations):
- Greig/Duncan6 1212, "Pretty Polly Perkins of Paddington Green" (3 texts)
- Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H132, pp. 398-399, "Polly Perkins of Paddington Green" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 680, "Pretty Polly Perkins of Paddington Green" (1 text)
- Henderson-VictorianStreetBallads, p. 65, "Polly Perkins" (1 text)
- Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. 282-288, "The Butcher Boy" (8 texts; the "E" text is a single stanza which does not belong with the usual "Butcher Boy" versions and which does mention Polly Perkins, so it might be related to this song)
- Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, pp. 176-177, "Polly Perkins" (1 text, 1 tune)
- New-Comic-Songster, pp. 43-44, "Polly Perkins of Paddington Green" (1 text, 1 tune)
- DT, PLLYPK*

ADDITIONAL: Aline Waites & Robin Hunter, _The Illustrated Victorian Songbook_, Michael Joseph Ltd., 1984, pp. 72-75, "Polly Perkins of Paddington Green" (1 text, 1 tune, plus a plate of the color cover of the sheet music version)

Roud #430

RECORDINGS:
- Tom Murphy, "The Broken-Hearted Milkman" (on ITMA/CapeShoreNL)

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Firth b.26(314), "Polly Perkins of Paddington Green" ("I'm a broken hearted milkman, in grief I'm arrayed"), H. Such (London), 1863-1885; also Harding B 16(206c), Harding B 11(3384), "Polly Perkins, of Paddington Green"

SAME TUNE:
- Cushie Butterfield (Peter Davison, _Songs of The British Music Hall_, Oak, 1971, pp. 30-31)
- Polly Perkins, of Washington Square ("I'm a broken-hearted butcher-boy") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 127)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- Pretty Polly Perkins
Pretty Polly Perkins of Paddington Green NOTES [117 words]: Greig/Duncan6: "Composed by the music hall performer, Harry Clifton and published in 1856." - BS
According to Waites and Hunter, there was much dispute over whether this song or "Cushie Butterfield," with which it shares a tune, was the original. They note, however, that both use the tune of "Nightingales Sing," so the most likely explanation is that both songs borrowed that melody.
For background on Harry Clifton, see the notes to "The Good Ship Kangaroo."
This seems to have been very popular in its time, as the number of broadsides suggests, which perhaps makes it little surprise that Charles Dodgson ("Lewis Carroll") heard Florence Terry sing it;
see his diary entry for April 7, 1865. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: HHH132

Polly Primrose
DESCRIPTION: "Sweet Polly Primrose, a girl of nineteen summers-o, Sure, I love my Polly better than all the wealth I own." Now she is at the bottom of the sea; she fell off a ship in rough waters.
The singer wishes he were a fish, so he might see her as a mermaid
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: death ship separation mermaid/man drowning
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H734, p. 149, "Polly Primrose" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9450
File: HHH734

Polly Sat Down and I Sat By Her
DESCRIPTION: "Polly sat down and I sat by her, These few words were just for to try her": he tells her it would be folly to marry him. Polly "smiles like a Venus" and says that, although he has little, she will have enough. He says he will go see Sallie; she grieves
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal)
KEYWORDS: love courting money abandonment
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, Charles W. Joyner, "The Repertory of Nancy Jones as a Mirror of Culture in Scotland County," Vol. XXI, No. 3 (Sep 1973), pp. 95-96, "Polly Sat Down and I Sat By Her" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #21654
File: NCF213PS

Polly Williams
DESCRIPTION: The singer calls the listeners to hear Polly's tragedy. Her lover grows tired of her, takes her off to the mountains to murder her. A great manhunt finds him. The singer expects him to be condemned, and warns young women against false lovers
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Lomax)
KEYWORDS: love courting homicide manhunt trial
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
  Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 159-162, "Polly Williams" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, p. 35-36, "(Polly Williams)" (1 text, slightly shortened)
  Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, p. 136, "Polly Williams" (1 text)
DT, POLLYWMS*
Roud #4111
NOTES [141 words]: Bayard, who collected this song, reports that it is based on an actual murder committed in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, in 1810, in which the young man threw the girl's body over a cliff. Despite the song, the man is reported to have been acquitted, presumably due to the lack of direct evidence that he was the guilty party. The girl's name was not Polly Williams; Bayard thought that the name was chosen as conventional; Dick Greenhaus suggests that it was for metrical reasons.

Burt-AmericanMurderBallads had another take on the matter: She claims the existence of a genuine Polly Williams who was living alone with a minor boy (presumably her son) in 1790. This Polly Williams was sufficiently well-off to have taken over a 400 acre property in 1794. But Burt cannot link the two beyond that.

This song is item dF39 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.7
File: LoA159

Polly Wolly Doodle
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, I went down south for to see my Sal, Sing polly wolly doodle all day...." Sal is described in nonsense terms ("curly eyes and laughing hair"). Floating verses may describe the difficult journey
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1880 (Harvard "Student's Songs")
KEYWORDS: love courting nonsense floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (12 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 462, "Sing Polly Wolly Doodle" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 462, "Sing Polly Wolly Doodle" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 42, "Polly Wolly Doodle" (1 verse of a shanty version)
Spaeth-ReadEmAndWeep, pp. 82-83, "Polly-Wolly-Doodle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 274, "Polly Wolly Doodle" (1 text)
Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 43-45, "Polly Wolly Doodle" (1 text)
Heart-Songs, p. 436, "Polly-wolly-doodle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #162, "Polly-Wolly-Doodle" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 240, "Polly Wolly Doodle" (1 text)
DT, POLYWOLY
Roud #11799

RECORDINGS:
Walter Coon & his Joy Boys, "Polly Wolly Doodle" (Gennett 7079/Champion 15896/Supertone 9680 [as "Polly Wolly Doodle"], 1930; Superior 2671 , 1931; rec. 1929)
Vernon Dalhart, "Polly Wolly Doodle" (Edison N-20001, 1929)
Louise Massey & the Westerners, "Polly Wolly Doodle" (Vocalion 05296, 1939)
Pete Seeger, "Polly Wolly Doodle All Day" (on LonesomeValley)
Gid Tanner & his Skillet Lickers, "Polly Woddle Doo" (Columbia 15200-D, 1927; rec. 1926)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Fiddler's Bitch" (tune)
cf. "The Golden Axe" (floating verse)
SAME TUNE:
The Big Fat Boss and the Workers (Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, pp. 250-251)
The Fiddler's Bitch (File: RL346)
The Thousand-Legged Worm (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, pp. 51-52)

File: SRW082

Pom, Pom, Pompadour
DESCRIPTION: "Pom, pom, pompadour Richard, Calling (first player) to my door. (Second player) is the one who is having all the fun, So we don't need (first player) any more."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal)
KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Roud #19934
NOTES [31 words]: I seem to recall hearing this somewhere in my youth, which would date this to the Upper Midwest before 1973, but I can’t claim to be certain enough to list either the location or the date.
Last updated in version 6.1
File: NCF211PP

Pommy’s Lament, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer warns against moving to Australia. He was well-off when he went, but his ship is nearly wrecked. He is robbed by an outlaw. There is no good land available. After further misadventures, he finds himself breaking rocks and wishing for home

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1842 (broadside)
KEYWORDS: Australia poverty hardtimes emigration robbery
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 207-208, "The Pommy’s Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, pp. 30-31, "The Pommy’s Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I've Been to Australia, Oh!" (theme)
File: MA207

Pomona (I), The

DESCRIPTION: Pomona leaves Liverpool "bound for the land of plenty" and is wrecked "on Blackwater's shoals" in Wexford Bay by "fictitious reckoning." The crew of thirty-five and four hundred passengers are lost.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1943 (Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast)
KEYWORDS: drowning sea ship storm wreck sailor
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Apr 28, 1859 - The Pomona wreck
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast, pp. 62-63, "The Pomona" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7342
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Courtown Fishermen" (tune) NOTES [64 words]: April 28, 1859: Pomona en route from Liverpool to New York "driven into sandbank seven miles off Ballyconigar" with nearly 400 lost (mostly emigrants). Reported in Wexford Constitution Apr 30th 1859 (source: RootsWeb.com genealogy site under shipping; Northern Shipwrecks Database; Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast; for details see Bourke in Shipwrecks of the Irish Coast v1, p. 70) - BS
File: Ran062

Pomona (II), The

DESCRIPTION: Singer and crew strike Blackwater sandbank. "We launched our jovial long boat and headed for the strand. We ran her down before the wind into sweet Wexford Bay, And wasn't that a dreadful sight, all on St Patrick's Day" Two of 12 escape.
Pony Song, The

DESCRIPTION: "Let the pony go fast as e'er it will ... What a merry ride ... snugly side by side and joining in a song. Jinkle bells, jinkle bells, jinkle all the way, Oh the funny ride we had down by Enniskea."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Morton/Maguire-ComeDayGoDayGodSendSunday)
KEYWORDS: nonballad horse music
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Morton/Maguire-ComeDayGoDayGodSendSunday 7, pp. 16,102,157, "The Pony Song" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #2933
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Jingle Bells" (approximate tune, theme, and some words)
NOTES [88 words]: Morton/Maguire-ComeDayGoDayGodSendSunday: "Here John remembers just a snatch of a song from his school days. The words and the tune obviously belong to 'Jingle Bells', but both have been adapted -- the last line ["down by Enniskea"] makes it 'belong' to that area [specifically, County Louth]." The words are sort of like "Jingle Bells" -- except the practically identical line "Jinkle bells, jinkle bells, jinkle all the way." Otherwise it shares no lines with the John Pierpont text of "Jingle Bells" on Digital Tradition. - BS
File: MoMa007

Poor Bill Brown

DESCRIPTION: On a stormy night Bill Brown, his friends, and their dogs go hunting hare. Bill and his dog are shot. He asks the singer to "revenge my death." The next night the singer shoots Tom Green

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1886 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(2635))
KEYWORDS: promise homicide poaching revenge death dog animal
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 131-132, "The Death of Bill Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #609
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(2635), "Poor Bill Brown" ("Ye gentlemen both great and small"), H. Such (London), 1863-1885; also Firth c.19(48), "Poor Bill Brown"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Bill Brown the Poacher" (subject)
File: KiTu131
Poor Boy (II)

DESCRIPTION: "Very first day on the Brazos line, poor boy, on the Brazos line, Number One was a-buckin." The singer complains of the heat and hard work and wishes desperately for rest. He wishes he had listened to his parents

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1966 (recorded from J. B. Smith by Jackson)

KEYWORDS: prison hardtimes work

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 61-66, "Poor Boy" (3 texts, 1 tune, but the "A" and "B" texts and the tune are "The Coon Can Game" [Laws I4])

File: JDM061

Poor Boy a Long Way From Home

DESCRIPTION: The singer leaves Louisiana for Texas: "I got to work or leave." He decides "my home ain't Texas," gets on a boat and now "my home's on the water and I sure don't like land." "Poor boy, poor boy, poor boy a long way from home"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Odum and Johnson)

KEYWORDS: rambling home travel ship work nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (2 citations):
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, Charles W. Joyner, "The Repertory of Nancy Jones as a Mirror of Culture in Scotland County," Vol. XXI, No. 3 (Sep 1973), pp. 94-95, "(Poor boy, long way from home)" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Howard W. Odum and Guy B. Johnson, The Negro and his Songs (Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1925 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), p. 5, ("Po' boy 'long way from home") (1 fragment)

Roud #17701

RECORDINGS:
Mississippi John Hurt, "Poor Boy a Long Way From Home" (on MJHurt05)

NOTES [15 words]: The description is based on the Ramblin' Thomas recording. Hurt sings only the chorus. - BS

Last updated in version 6.1

File: RCPBLwFH

Poor Chronic Man, The

DESCRIPTION: The "poor chronic man" from Athlone goes to visit a cousin in Belfast. Along the way he meets a girl, who wines him, beds him -- then puts him to sleep and steals his clothes and money. He is taken into custody, and wishes he had never left home

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1911 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 17(56b))

KEYWORDS: whore trick prison

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 118, "The Poor Chronic Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong 33, "The Connaught Man's Trip to Belfast" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST FSC118 (Partial)

Roud #3341

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 17(56b), "The Connaught-man" ("I am a poor Connaught man, from the town of Athlone"), Sanderson (Edinburgh), 1830-1910; also 2806 c.15(119), Harding B 40(1)[last verse illegible], "The Poor Connaughtman"; 2806 c.15(23), Harding B 19(32), "The Connaughtman's Adventures in Dublin"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
Poor Dog Tray
DESCRIPTION: "On the green banks of Shannon, when Sheelah was nigh, No blythe Irish lad was as happy as I," with harp and dog Tray. Sheelah bids him care for the dog when they part. The dog comforts him when he is old. The dog is dead and he can't go home
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster)
KEYWORDS: river separation dog death
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1893 - Peter Degraph (sometimes spelled De Graff) is sentenced to die for the murder of Ellen Smith
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, pp. 73-74, "My Poor Dog Tray" (1 text)
Roud #2668
File: HMHS075B

Poor Ellen Smith (I)
DESCRIPTION: "Poor Ellen Smith, how was she found? Shot through the heart lying cold on the ground." The singer briefly outlines the facts of the murder, then claims his innocence though he expects to be convicted. (He says he would put flowers on her grave.)
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: homicide execution
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1893 - Peter Degraph (sometimes spelled De Graff) is sentenced to die for the murder of Ellen Smith
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE)
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 306, "Poor Little Ellen, or, Ellen Smith" (1 text)
Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, p. 19, "Ellen Smith" (1 text, 1 tune, mislabelled Laws F2)
Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains, p. 67, "Ellen Smith" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sulzer-TwentyFiveKentuckyFolkBallads, p. 20, "Ellen Smith" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 143, "Poor Ellen Smith" (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 204-206, "Poor Ellen Smith" (2 text, of which the "A" text goes here and the "B" text with "Ellen Smith" [Laws F11])
DT, ELSMITH*
ADDITIONAL: Frances H. Casstevens, _Death in North Carolina's Piedmont: Tales of Murder, Suicide, and Causes Unknown_, History Press, 2006, p. 114, "Poor Ellen Smith" (1 text, possibly adapted by Tom Sauber)
Roud #448
RECORDINGS:
Green Bailey, "The Fate of Ellen Smith" (Gennett 6702/Supertone 9372 [as Harvey Farr], 1929; rec. 1928; on ConstSor1, KMM) [2 different but successive matrices]
Estil C. Ball, "Poor Ellen Smith" (on LomaxCD1702)
Homer Cornett, "Poor Ellen Smith" (on USWarnerColl01)
Dykes' Magic City Trio, "Poor Ellen Smith" (Brunswick 127/Vocalion 5143, 1927)
Texas Gladden and Hobart Smith, "Poor Ellen Smith" (disc ???; on USTGladden01)
Theophilus Hoskins, "Ellen Smith" (AFS, 1937; on KMM)
Vester Jones, "Poor Ellen Smith" (on GraysonCarroll1)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Poor Ellen Smith" (on NLCR16)
Frank Proffitt, "Poor Ellen Smith" (on Proffitt03)
Hobart Smith, "Poor Ellen Smith" (Disc 6080, 1940s)
Pete Steele, "Ellen Smith" (on PSTeele01, FMUSA)
Poor Ex-Soldier

DESCRIPTION: "I'm just a poor ex-soldier, a-broken down in doom; I fought all in the great World for the old red, white and blue." The singer saw his buddy killed, but found no help at home. He declares "I'm a poor forgotten soldier boy who fought to save our land."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices)

KEYWORDS: soldier hardtimes

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, p. 172, "Poor Ex-Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #16282

NOTES [111 words]: The soldier evidently fought in World War I. It is possible, since the song does not refer to any events after the war, that the soldier is simply suffering post-traumatic stress and having trouble returning to civilian life (a common enough phenomenon to cause references to a "lost generation"). But I rather suspect he was a member of the "Bonus Army" -- that large group of former soldiers who, in 1932, went to Washington to ask congress to pay a benefit they were not scheduled to earn until the 1940s. This being still the Hoover administration, no help was provided -- and those who refuse to disperse were eventually attacked by soldiers in riot gear. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.6

File: Rose172

Poor Girl on the Town, The

DESCRIPTION: "I had a dear old father once, who gave me this advice," telling his son to find a wife and stay away from harlots. The son points out that his sisters might be "poor girls on the town" who become harlots. The son is then advised to patronize harlots

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1968 (submitted to Logsdon by Riley Neal)

KEYWORDS: father sister brother whore warning

FOUND IN: US(SW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 45, pp. 226-227, "The Poor Girl on the Town" (1 short text)

Roud #10101

NOTES [65 words]: I've given the description of this based on the text in Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging, but I suspect the text is damaged. My guess is that there is a change of speakers: In the original, the father advises against whores, the son argues that even his sisters might end up whores, and someone else (my gut says an uncle) says, in effect, "Oh, go ahead, if you need to, visit a whore." - RBW

File: Logs045

Poor Goins [Laws F22]

DESCRIPTION: Goins runs into bandits but escapes. He meets Ely Boggs, who promises to help him escape but instead turns him over to the robbers. A bandit clubs Goins to death when the latter's horse bolts
AUTHOR: Gabriel Church?
EARLIEST DATE: 1908
KEYWORDS: homicide outlaw robbery horse
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Oct 1844 - Murder of Alexander Goins in what was then Lee County, Virginia (source: Cohen)
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Laws F22, "Poor Goins"
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 138-139, "Poor Goins" (1 text)
Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates 69, pp. 167-168, "Poor Goens" (1 text)
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 50, pp. 118-119, "Poor Goins" (1 text)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 191-192, "Poor Goins" (1 text)
DT 801, GOINS
Roud #2260
File: LF22

Poor Greeting Wilsie

DESCRIPTION: Dialog between "kind hearted Nancy" and "cowardly Willsie": She is going to the wood. He asks if he can follow; nothing's to stop you. What if I lay you down? I can rise again.
Where'll I tie my horse? To my/your big toe. If he runs away? Devil take him.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1827 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1)
KEYWORDS: sex dialog
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber,Bord))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1 42, "Poor Greeting Wilsie" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan4 811A,811B, "I'm Gaun to the Wood" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Roud #298
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rolling in the Dew" (subject, some verses, and dialog format)
cf. "Cockabendy" (tune, per Greig/Duncan4)
cf. "I'm Gaun to the Wood (!)" (dialog format and characters)
cf. "I'm Goin' Away to Texas" (dialog format, characters and attitude)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
My Spouse Nancy
File: GrD4811A

Poor Hard-Working Man, The

DESCRIPTION: "I have to work so very hard To keep my family. There's eleven children and my wife... And my wife she often told me I am the daddy of them all." The grown boys work shining shoes, singing, and dancing, and the girls "dance and play and sing all day"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia)
KEYWORDS: marriage work ordeal humorous wife family
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 144, "The Poor Hard-Working Man" (1 text)
Roud #3284
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Pat Malony's Family" (theme)
NOTES [112 words]: Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia draws the parallel in theme to "Pat Malony's Family"; the analogy is not as close as Mackenzie might have us think.
Malony's family came ready made; on the other hand, the family in this song are the singer's wife and his[?] eleven children. - BS
Although seemingly found only in Canada, the contents of this song seem to imply nineteenth century Irish origin, in that the grown boys are still at home; with so little land in Ireland, the children tended to stay at home until the girls married and the oldest boy inherited upon his father's death. This had a tendency to control population, but obviously not in this care.... - RBW

File: Mack144

Poor Howard

DESCRIPTION: "Poor Howard's dead and gone, Left me here to sing this song." "Who's been here since I've been gone? Pretty little girl with a red dress on." "Who's been here... Great big man with a derby on" And so forth, through as many visitors as desired

AUTHOR: Huddie Leadbetter

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (copyright)

KEYWORDS: nonballad death

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 63, "Poor Howard" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Moses Asch and Alan Lomax, Editors, _The Leadbelly Songbook_, Oak, 1962, p. 21, "Poor Howard" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #11673

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Stavin Chain" (lyrics)

File: FSB063

Poor Jack (III)

DESCRIPTION: "Go patter to lubbers and swabs, d'ye see, About danger and fear and the like." The singer will still go to sea, "For they say there's a Providence sits up aloft, To keep watch for the life of Poor Jack." He describes how he learns and tells of his safety

AUTHOR: Charles Dibdin (1745-1814)

EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (Nettel)

KEYWORDS: sailor religious navy

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Reginald Nettel, _Seven Centuries of Popular Song_, Phoenix House, 1956, pp. 144-145, "(Poor Jack)" (1 text)

Roud #24887

NOTES [14 words]: For more on probable author Charles Dibdin, see the notes to "Blow High Blow Low." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2

File: NetPoJac

Poor Jack (Shrove Tuesday)

DESCRIPTION: "Shrove Tuesday, when Jack went to plough" his mother made pancakes for him but "she did not know how." "She put so much pepper she poisoned poor Jack"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Manning)

KEYWORDS: death farming poison food playparty mother

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame, p. 36, ("Shrove Tuesday, Shrove Tuesday, when Jack went to plough") (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Percy Manning, "Stray Notes on Oxfordshire Folklore (Continued)" in Folklore, Vol. XIV, No. 2 (Jun 1903 (available online by JSTOR)), p. 168, "Poor Jack" (Oxfordshire) (1 text)

J.B. Partridge, "The Game of 'Thread the Needle' and Custom of Church Clipping" in Folklore, Vol. XXIII, No. 2 (Jun 1912 (available online by JSTOR)), p. 198 ("Shrove Tuesday, Shrove Tuesday, when Jack went to plough") (Wiltshire) (1 text)

Edward Vivian and F.W. Mathews, "The Folk-Lore of Somerset" in Folklore, Vol. XXXI, No. 3 (Sep 1920 (available online by JSTOR)), p. 247 ("Shrove Tuesday, Shrove Tuesday, when Jack went to plough") (Wiltshire) (1 text)
Poor Jock frae the Country

DESCRIPTION: "Ae nicht I bein' half fou and better, That nicht I bein' bent for a spree, I dauntered awa' to the city In hopes for some fun I micht see"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan2)

KEYWORDS: travel humorous

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan2 294, "Poor Jock frae the Country" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #5860

NOTES [14 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan2 fragment, excluding the chorus. - BS

Last updated in version 2.4

File: GrD2294

Poor Johnny's Dead

DESCRIPTION: "Poor Johnny's dead, I hear his knell, Bim, bim, bome bell! The bell doth toll, O may his soul, In Heacen for ever dwell!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1770? (see notes); 1825 (_The Kaleidoscope_) 1825 (see notes); 1825 (_The Kaleidoscope_)

KEYWORDS: death nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 301, "Poor Johnny's Dead" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Ox 185)
Thomas Ludford Bellamy, Lyric Poetry of Glee, Madrigals, Catches, Rounds, Canons, and Duets (1840, London ("Digitized by Google"), p. 356, ("Poor Johnny's Dead") (1 text)

Roud #1334

NOTES [125 words]: Oliphant: "Music by W. Cranford, one of the Singing-men of St Paul's Cathedral."

Wildridge at Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO quoting Williams: "They never popular with the ordinary village minstrels and were seldom, if ever, heard at the inns", referring to "Come Hither, Tom," "Twas You, Sir," and "Poor Johnny's Dead."

The Kaleidoscope: "A round"; Bellamy: "Catch, for 3 voices."

The current description is all of the Bellamy text.

Bellamy has the author as "Dr Hayes." The pdf 18th Century Secular Music Three and More Voices & BC (Amsterdam, 2006), p. 20, available at Muziekhandel Saul B. Groen site (copyright Meindert C Heer) lists "Poor Johnny's dead I hear his knell," a catch for three voices, as written by William Boyce, printed in 1770. - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: WT301A
Poor Kitty Popcorn

DESCRIPTION: The story of a "loyal cat..." She spends much of the war following her soldier boy. (After) the war her master dies and we see "Poor Kitty Popcorn, buried in a snowdrift now; Nevermore we'll hear the music of her charming song, Me-owww."

AUTHOR: Henry Clay Work

EARLIEST DATE: 1866 (sheet music copyright by Root & Cady and published by S. Brainard's Sons)

KEYWORDS: animal death Civilwar

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Work-SongsOf-Henry-Clay-Work, pp. 155-159, "Poor Kitty Popcorn, or the Soldier's Pet" (1 text, 1 tune, a copy of the original sheet music)
- Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 431, "Poor Kitty Popcorn" (1 fragment)
- DT, KITTYPOP*

Roud #20051

NOTES [24 words]: Gag. - PJS

Well -- there are a zillion dog songs on this sort of theme. I suppose the cats deserve their chance to be disgustingly saccharine. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: San431

---

Poor Lazarus (Bad Man Lazarus) [Laws I12]

DESCRIPTION: Lazarus breaks into the commissary and flees. The sheriff orders that he be taken dead or alive. Deputies shoot Lazarus and bring him back. He asks for a drink of water and dies. Lazarus's sister tells his mother, who recalls how troublesome he was

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934

KEYWORDS: robbery death family

FOUND IN: US(SE,So)

REFERENCES (11 citations):
- Laws I12, "Poor Lazarus (Bad Man Lazarus)"
- Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 86, "Po' Laz'us" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 91-93, "Po' Laz'us (Poor Lazarus)" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 342-345, "Po' Laz'us" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 303, "Po' Lazarus" (1 text, 1 tune, composite)
- Frye-TheMenAllSinging, p. 185, ("Go and bring me old bad Lazarus") (1 text)
- GarrityBlake-FishFactory, p. 61, ("Didn't Lazarus shit on the commissary counter") (1 text)
- Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, pp. 909-910, "Po' Laz'us (Poor Lazarus)" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 179-181, ("Lazarus") (1 text)
- DT 661, (POLAZRUS?)

ADDITIONAL: Harold Courlander, _A Treasury of Afro-American Folklore_, Crown Publishers, 1976, pp. 400-402, "Poor Lazarus" (1 text)

Roud #4180

RECORDINGS:
- Bright Light Quartet, "Po' Lazarus" (on LomaxCD1701) (on LomaxCD1705)
- James Carter & prisoners, "Po' Lazarus" (on LomaxCD1705)
- Vera Hall, "Po' Laz'us" (AFS 1320 A2, 1937) [Note: Dixon/Godrich/Rye also identifies this AFS number with a Vera Hall recording of "John Henry"; one of them is clearly in error, but I don't know which] (AFS 4050 A1, 1940)
- Menhaden Fishermen, "Lazarus" (on USMenhaden01)
- Henry Morrison, "Lazarus" (on LomaxCD1705)
- William Thompson and Group, "Lazarus" (on VaWork)

NOTES [199 words]: The two Bright Light Quartet citations are different versions, recorded on separate dates. - PJS

The Menhaden01 version ends with the "every mail day," "ready made money," and "gonna roll here" verses from "Goin' Home."

At the beginning of the ballad -- before he "walked away" -- "Lazarus sit(ted)"

(USMenhaden01,VaWork)/ shit (GarrityBlake-FishFactory)/ walked (Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry) / up (Morrison LomaxCD1705) on the commissary counter," he "broke in the commissary window (Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs)," or "commissary man swore out warrant for Lazarus (Harold Courlander, A Treasury of Afro-American Folklore)." As always, there is the question of censorship by singers or collectors. As an example of how bits float from chantey to chantey Frye-TheMenAllSinging has this meld of "Mule on the Mountain" and "Poor Lazarus": "Old Lazarus the mule ... he shit on the commissary counter! ... he just walk away." Not knowing the prison song, Frye thought "Lazarus could have been the Biblical character, more likely the mule that plowed the garden at home, or a mine mule he [the singer] remembered if he had actually been to the mountains to dig coal." (pp. 184, 188). - BS

Last updated in version 4.2
File: LI12

Poor Lil

DESCRIPTION: Lil, a beauty, lives in a house of ill repute. Her health declines and she loses her looks; a house physician recommends Scott's Emulsion, to no avail. She loses her clientele and dies.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1991 (List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana)

KEYWORDS: bawdy humorous whore disease doctor drugs

FOUND IN: US(MW,So)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, pp. 200-201, "Her Name Was Lil" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 248-249, "Poor Lil" (1 text, 1 tune)
- RT, POORL1
- Roud #10310

File: RL248

Poor Little Ewing, A

DESCRIPTION: "I'm only a poor little Ewing." The singer complains about JR and claims the other characters are drunk, punk, "and Bobby lives under the sea"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)

KEYWORDS: playparty

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame, p. 445, ("I'm only a poor little Ewing") (1 text)
- ADDITIONAL: Ewan McVicar, Doh Ray Me, When Ah Wis Wee (Edinburgh, 2007), p. 163, "A Poor Little Ewing"

NOTES [42 words]: Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame: "In 1979, when a disreputable rhyme about the characters in the television serial Dallas was in circulation, seven-year-olds patted it into domesticity in the playground: [text] But such songs do not satisfy for long...." - BS

Last updated in version 2.6
File: OpGap445

Poor Little Girls of Ontario, (The)

DESCRIPTION: "I'll sing you a song of a plaguey pest, It goes by the name of the Great North-West. I cannot get a beau at all. They all skip out there in the fall." The girl describes all the men she courted who have now headed west. She declares she will follow them

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1957

KEYWORDS: courting separation emigration

FOUND IN: Canada(Ont,West)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong, pp. 147-149, "The Poor Little Girls of Ontario"; 150-152, "The Saskatchewan Girl's Lament" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
DT, GALONTAR
Roud #4513
RECORDINGS:
Ann Halderman, "A Poor Lone Girl in Saskatchewan" (on Saskatchewan01)
Mrs. Hartley [Ethel] Minifie, "The Poor Little Girls of Ontario" (on Ontario1)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Little Brown Jug" (tune)
NOTES [23 words]: This sounds like it ought to be a humorous song about a woman who so scares men that they head west -- but it seems to be "straight." - RBW
File: FMB147

Poor Little Jesus
DESCRIPTION: "It was poor little Jesus, yes, yes, He was born on Christmas... And laid in a manger...." Describes Jesus's humble birth, the song goes on to relate his death and resurrection.
Stanzas end with "Wasn't that a pity and a shame?"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1926
KEYWORDS: religious Bible Jesus poverty
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 101, "Po' Lil Jesus" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 373, "Poor Little Jesus" (1 text)
File: LxU101

Poor Little Joe (The Dying Newsboy)
DESCRIPTION: The singer is in New York (or London) when he meets a (newsboy) -- "Although he was singing, he wanted for bread; Although he was smiling, he wished himself dead." The poor newsboy is ignored by the well-to-do, and is at last found dead in the street
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1879 (Journal of the Andrew Hicks)
KEYWORDS: death poverty hardtimes
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,Ro,So)
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Randolph 716, "Poor Little Joe" (1 text plus a fragment)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 152, "Poor Little Joe" (1 text)
Cox/Hercog/Halpert/Boswell-WVirginia-B, #33, p. 209, "Poor Little Joe" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 48, pp. 64-65, "Poor Little Joe" (1 text plus a fragment)
Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois, p. 254, "Poor Little Joe" (1 text)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #101, "Poor Little Joe" (2 texts)
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 243-244, "Poor Little Joe" (1 text, 2 tunes) cf. Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, p. 482, "Poor Little Joe" (source notes only)
Roud #3111
RECORDINGS:
Red Patterson's Piedmont Log Rollers, "Poor Little Joe" (Victor 35874, 1928)
James Ragan [pseud. for Roy Harvey], "Poor Little Joe" (Challenge 394, c. 1928)
Earl Shirkey & Roy Harper [Roy Harvey], "Poor Little Joe" (Columbia 15376-D, 1928)
Arnold Keith Storm, "Poor Little Joe" (on AKStorm01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Won't You Buy My Pretty Flowers" (theme of a young person trying to sell something no one bothers to buy)
NOTES [208 words]: E. J. Kahn, Jr., The Merry Partners: The Age and Stage of Harrigan and Hart, Random House, 1955, pp. 18-19, writes:
There had been no newsboys at all in the city [of New York] until 1833, at which time the Sun, departing radically from the view of all publishers that it was undignified to peddle their wares like tea-water or chestnuts, had appealed for vendors. By 1873, when the unsettled post-war economic conditions had produced 10,000 homeless children in New York and when there were fifteen daily newspapers in the city, the streets swarmed with newsboys. They were a hardy lot, many of them orphans, who went by names like One-Lung Pete, Slobbery Jack, and Jake the Oyster, and who, if they toiled unremittingly and in good voice from four o’clock in the morning until after dark, could hope to earn a daily income of fifty cents or so."
That would be about the same amount of money as a private during the Civil War, but the private got food and clothing. Of course, the private might also have a family to support. The bottom line is, it wasn't really enough to live on unless one already had shelter.
Little wonder, then, that there are many songs about dying newsboys. The surprise is that the papers didn't print more of them! - RBW

Last updated in version 5.1
File: R716

Poor Little Johnny
DESCRIPTION: The cotton is rotten, so Johnny "won't get his hunderd" (pounds) today.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1940
KEYWORDS: worksong
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Botkin-TreasuryOfSouthernFolklore, p. 742, "Poor Little Johnny" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [17 words]: John Lomax recorded this from Aunt Harriet McClintock, who said it was sung in the days of slavery. - NR
File: BSoF742

Poor Little Kitty Puss
DESCRIPTION: Fiddle tune with lyrics: "Pore little Kitty Puss, Pore little feller, Pore little Kitty Puss, Died in the cellar." "Pore little Fido, Pore little Fidie, Pore little Fidie Died last Friday." Possible chorus: "Don't you hear them wolves a-howling..."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: animal death nonballad dancetune
FOUND IN: US(SE,So)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 108, "Poor Little Kitty Puss" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 108, "Poor Little Kitty Puss" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 146, p. 293, [no title] (1 fragment)
ST Br3108 (Full)
File: Br3108

Poor Little Laura Lee
DESCRIPTION: Floating stanzas of two songs which mention Laura Lee. The first seems to be a song of parting as Laura's lover goes to the wars (?), but with an "I won't marry" ending; the other perhaps involves a shotgun wedding.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: courting separation
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 102, "Poor Little Laura Lee" (2 fragments)
NOTES [31 words]: The Brown texts (the only ones I've seen) are very short and perhaps unrelated; the description is partly from the headnotes. This entry probably does not adequately describe the song. - RBW
File: Br3102
Poor Little Sweep, The

DESCRIPTION: "On a cold winter's morn as the snow was falling, When a child of misfortune so loudly was bawling," the "poor little sweep" begs for "compassion" and weeps when he finds none.
A "kind hearted damsel" finally sees him; she takes him to her home

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1847 (Forget-Me-Not-Songster)

KEYWORDS: worker hardtimes rescue

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Forget-Me-Not-Songster, pp. 166-167, "Poor Little Sweep" (1 text)

Roud #2672

BROADSIDES:

Bodleian, Harding B 11(1133), Harding B 11(1132), Johnson Ballads 252, "Poor Little Sweep," J
Catnach (London)/W. Marshall (Bristol)/J. Sherman (Cambridge), 1813-1838; also Firth b.25(284),
"The Poor Little Sweep!" W. and T. Fordyce (Newcastle), 1832-1842; Harding B 11(1134), "Poor Little Sweep," J. Harkless (Preston), 1840-1866; also Harding B 11(3089), "Poor Little Sweep," J.
Jackson and Son (Birmingham), 1842-1855 (image missing); also Firth b.34(232) and Harding B 25(1532), Harding B 11(3086), Johnson Ballads 954, Harding B 11(3087) (image missing), "The Poor Little Sweep," J. Pitts (London), 1819-1844; also Harding B 19(56b), "The Poor Little Sweep," unknown, n.d. (image missing); also Harding B 11(2306), "The Poor Little Sweep" T. Hoggett (Durham), 1816-1843; also Harding B 40(13), "The Poor Little Sweep," J. F. Nugent and Co.
(Dublin?), 1850-1899 (image missing); also Harding B 25(1531), J. K. Pollock (North Shields), 1815-1855; also Harding B 36(23), "Poor Little Sweep," J. Kiernan (Manchester), n.d. (image missing); 2806 c.16(262), Harding B 11(4037), J. O. Babbington (Manchester), 1855-1858; also 2806 c.17(342), "The poor little little sweep," unknown, n. d.

NOTES [2 words]: Blech. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: FMNS166

Poor Lonely Widow

DESCRIPTION: The "poor lonely widow" reports that "Three husbands I've had but they're all dead and buried." The first choked to death in bed, the second drank too much (?), the third hit her and she hit him back. She wonders "if anyone will marry me now."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1973

KEYWORDS: husband wife death loneliness oldmaid

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Copper-SongsAndSouthernBreezes, pp. 228-229, "Poor Lonely Widow" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #1197

File: CoSB228

Poor Lonesome Cowboy

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a poor lonesome cowboy (x3) And a long way from home." "I ain't got no father To buy the clothes I wear." "I ain't got no mother To mend the clothes I wear." "I ain't got no sweetheart To sit and talk with me." (And so on for other missing persons)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)

KEYWORDS: cowboy loneliness family

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 273, "Poor Lonesome Cowboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Larkin-SingingCowboy, pp. 112-115, "Poor Lonesome Cowboy" (1 text, 1 tune) Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 84, "The Poor Lonesome Cowboy" (4 texts, 1 tune; the "C" and "D" texts are Spanish -- "Soy Pobre Vaquero" -- but with plots similar to this piece)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, p. 418, "Poor Lonesome Cowboy" (1 text) Tinsley-HeWasSinginThisSong, pp. 216-219, "Poor Lonesome Cowboy" (1 text, 1 tune plus a text
Poor Lucy Anna
DESCRIPTION: Shanty, Negro origin. "Oh the mounten's so high, an' de ribber's so wide, Poor Lucy Anna! De mounten's so high and de ribber's so wide, Ise just gwine ober de mountains." Sung in a slow 3/4 tempo.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Bullen, _Songs of Sea Labor_)
KEYWORDS: shanty worksong
FOUND IN: West Indies
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 378-379, "Poor Lucy Anna" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, p. 287]
Abrahams-DeepTheWaterShallowTheShore, p. 57, "Judiano" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9127
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Susiana" (similar wording in some verses)
NOTES [51 words]: Bullen stated that this was so mournful a song that "one suspects it of being the lament of some just sold slaves sent from one state to another without reference to any human ties they may have possessed. This chantey was very seldom used except where negroes formed a considerable portion of the crew." - SL
Last updated in version 4.0
File: Hugi378

Poor Man
DESCRIPTION: "I worked all the winter time, I worked through the spring, I planted my corn and taters, Then it wouldn't rain. There ain't nothing for a poor man in this world." The singer catalogs his troubles: Drought, flood, poverty, and work every day
AUTHOR: Frank Proffitt
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl)
KEYWORDS: poverty nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 117, "Poor Man" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 24, #2 (1975), p, 14, "Poor Man" (1 text, 1 tune, included in a memorial to Frank Proffitt)
ST Wa117 (Partial)
Roud #5733
File: Wa117

Poor Man Blues
DESCRIPTION: "I never had a barrel of money... I'm gonna die and go to heaven, There I'll set and sing. Lord, this song ain't nothin'... But a poor man singin' the blues." The singer misses his girl. He will go home to East Virginia to stay. Other verses float
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973
KEYWORDS: love separation home hardtimes poverty
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 80, "Poor Man Blues" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Boll Weevil [Laws I17]" (floating lyrics)
File: FSWe80B
Poor Married Man (I)
DESCRIPTION: "You may talk about the joys of the sweet honeymoon... But almost every case they're gone too soon." The troubles and burdens of the married man are listed; "You can tell by his clothes wherever he goes That he is a poor married man."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: marriage family hardtimes work
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 309, "Poor Married Man" (1 text plus a fragment)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 309, "Poor Married Man" (3 tunes plus text excerpts)
Roud #16861
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Poor Married Man (II)" (theme)
cf. "I Wish I Were Single Again (I - Male)" (theme)
NOTES [35 words]: The versions I have seen of this are so close to "Poor Married Man (II)" that I almost lumped them. But they don't seem to have actual lyrics in common, and Roud splits them. I follow his lead, very hesitantly. - RB
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Br3309

Poor Married Man (II)
DESCRIPTION: "Come listen to the doleful ditty of a poor married man, And when you've heard it you will pity a poor married man." His bills are overdue. His wife beats him. His six children don't resemble him. His daughter will make another fellow a poor married man.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah)
KEYWORDS: hardtimes husband wife infidelity
FOUND IN: US(Ro)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #133, "Poor Married Man" (2 texts, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Poor Married Man (I)" (theme)
cf. "I Wish I Were Single Again (I - Male)" (theme)
NOTES [35 words]: The versions I have seen of this are so close to "Poor Married Man (I)" that I almost lumped them. But they don't seem to have actual lyrics in common, and Roud splits them. I follow his lead, very hesitantly. - RB
Last updated in version 3.8
File: Hubb133

Poor Mary Sits A-Weeping (I)
DESCRIPTION: "Poor Mary sits a-weeping, A-weeping, a-weeping, Poor Mary sits a-weeping All on a summer's day." "I'm weeping for a sweetheart." "Pray, Mary, choose a sweetheart." "I'll chose (X) for a sweetheart."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1890 (Sutton-Smith)
KEYWORDS: playparty courting
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,West)) US(NE) New Zealand
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, p. 76, "Poor Mary" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 47-49, "Poor Mary Sits A-Weeping" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 23-24, "(Poor Alice is a-weeping)" (1 text)
Poor Murdered Woman, The

DESCRIPTION: "It was Hankey the squire, as I have heard say," who rides out hunting. He finds nothing "but a poor murdered woman, laid on the cold ground." People gather to seek the murderer, but the crime remains unsolved

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1897 (Broadwood)

KEYWORDS: homicide nobility hunting burial

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1834 - Discovery and burial of the anonymous murdered woman in Leatherhead Common (source: Broadwood)

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Broadwood-EnglishTraditionalSongsAndCarols, pp. 70-71, "The Poor Murdered Woman" (1 text, 1 tune)

Poor Old Couple, The

DESCRIPTION: "There was an old couple, and they were poor." The wife is afraid to stay alone; when the man goes away, she locks the doors and goes to bed. When he returns, she complains of his absence and asks for an (apple). He falls off the ladder. She insults him

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1849 (Halliwell)

KEYWORDS: husband wife separation disease food age disease request dialog husband wife

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,South)) US(SE)

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 94-95, "There Was an Old Couple" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 499)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 184, "The Poor Couple" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople 76, "The Poor Old Couple" (1 text)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #102, "It's Of an Old Couple" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hamer-GarnersGay, p. 36, "The Poor Old Couple" (1 text, 1 tune)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #821, pp. 305-306, "(There was an old couple, and they were poor)"

ADDITIONAL: James Orchard Halliwell, "Popular Rhymes and Nursery Tales" (London, 1849 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 270, ("There was an old couple and they were poor")

NOTES [274 words]: It sounds like a "spark" is some sort of supernatural creature [in the Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians version, after she request the fruit, "up jumped a spark and he run like a hare"], but none of my dictionaries lists any such definition. Local dialect for "spook"? Or has the lady been two-timing the "poor old fool," and is the spark her paramour? Now if she'd asked the old man to fetch a cabbage-head, we'd know for sure. - PJS

My guess is that it's an error for "up HE jumped [like?] a spark...." Or maybe it's an oblique reference to Job 5:7, "Man is born unto trouble, as the sparks fly upward." - RBW

"Spark" indeed! Somewhere along the line the story seems to have been "severely censored," as noted in Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople. Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople #76 has the town clerk, who was "resolved with her to lie," come to visit at eight o'clock. He is still there when the husband comes home at twelve. To facilitate the clerk's escape she sends her husband to "fetch me an apple from yonder tree And I will come and let in thee, O yes I will said he." The escape is successful: "Now as he was grabbling under the tree Up jumped the town clerk and away runned he That's very well done, said she." She claims to have been sick in his absence. "Poor wife said he Poor cuckhold thought she."
The Halliwell version has no town clerk but retains the unsympathetic wife: when the old man tries to climb the tree for her apple "the ladder it fell, and down tumbled he. That's cleverly done! said she." - BS
Has anyone noticed how many elements of this song are reminiscent of Chaucer's "Merchant's Tale"? - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: B6MG821

Poor Old Ernie's Dead
DESCRIPTION: "Poor old Ernie's dead, He died last night in bed. They put him in a coffin, He fell through the bottom, Poor old Ernie's dead."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)
KEYWORDS: playparty death
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 134, "(Poor old Ernie's dead)" (1 text)
File: SuSm134A

Poor Old Granuaile
DESCRIPTION: Granuaile appears in a dream. She supports those jailed "in O'Connell's time in '29 ... 'we'll Home Rule get." She plays the patriotic tunes. She says "we'll have freedom yet." The dreamer wakes in jail.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads); 1870s? (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
KEYWORDS: Ireland patriotic prison dream
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (3 citations):
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 3A, "Poor Old Granuaile" (1 text)
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 77, "Poor Old Granuaile" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Anne Chambers, Granuaile, 1986, pp. 197-198, "Poor Old Granuaile"
Roud #3068
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Eileen McMahon" (aisling format)
cf. "Granuaile" (aisling format) and references there
cf. "Granuwale" (theme)
cf. "Erin's Lament for her Davitt Asthore" (theme)
cf. "The Blackbird of Avondale" or "The Arrest of Parnell" (theme) NOTES [240 words]: Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 77: "This text was the new version of an older ballad (first half of the nineteenth century." There are only a few words difference between Zimmermann 77 and OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 3A. An early date for these texts is set by the mention of tunes played by Granuaile including "God Save Ireland" (1867).
Zimmermann p. 55: "At the time of the United Irishmen, Granu Waile standing for Ireland was already celebrated by broadsides in English."
Two similar but different broadsides:
Bodleian, Harding B 19(25), "Granauile" ("One morning fair to take the air and recreate my mind"), J.F. Nugent & Co. (Dublin), 1850-1899
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 507A, "Granawail" ("[Come] all you Irish hero's that's craving for liberty"), E. Hodges (London), 1855-1861
"Granuaile O'Malley (Or Grace O'Malley, or Gr.inne Ni Mhaille or Gr.inne Uaile) is among the most illustrious of O'Malley ancestors. She was a 'Sea Queen' and pirate in the 16th century." (Source: The Official Web Site of The O'Malley Clan Association) - BS
The Oxford Companion to Irish History gives her dates as c. 1530-c. 1603, observes that she was married twice and imprisoned 1577-1579 -- and notes that, on the whole, she strove for peaceful relations with the English.
For a discussion of this type of song as an example of the genre known as the "aisling," see the notes to "Granuaile." That song also has a few notes on Grace O'Malley. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: OLoc003A

Poor Old Horse (III)
DESCRIPTION: "My clothing once was linsey-woolsey fine, My hair unlinkt, and my coat it did shine; But now in open fields I'm forced for to go... Crying, 'Poor old horse, O poor old horse.'" The horse recalls the old days, and bequeathes its body to the huntsmen
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1877 (Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland);
the Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland versions apparently was published in Topliff before 1850
KEYWORDS: age ritual horse
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,North,South))
REFERENCES (11 citations):
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 135, "Poor Old Horse" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 85, "Poor Old Horse" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reeves/Sharp-TheldicomOfThePeople 77, "Poor Old Horse" (2 texts)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 106, "Poor Old Horse" (1 text) Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 60-61, "The Poor Old Horse" (1 text, 1
tune)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #140, "The Old Horse" (1 text, 1 tune, with a musical "prologue")
Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 404-406, "The Mummers' Song; or, The Poor Old Horse" (1 text)
Henderson-VictorianStreetBallads, p. 128, "Lamentation of an Old Horse" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1902, p. 128, "Poor Old Horse Let Him Die" (2 references)
ADDITIONAL: Roger deV. Renwick, _Recentering Anglo/American Folksong: Sea Crabs and Wicked Youths_, University Press of Mississippi, 2001, pp. 88-89, "Poor Old Horse" (1 text)
Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #90, "Poor Old Horse" (1 text)
ST ShH85 (Full)
Roud #513
CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "Poor Old Man (Poor Old Horse; The Dead Horse)" (plot)
 cf. "Pawkie Paiterson's Auld Grey Yaud" (theme)
 cf. "Mon Cher Voisin (My Dear Neighbor)" (theme)
 cf. "The Old Blind Horse" (theme)
 cf. "The Auld Horse's Lament" (theme)
NOTES [122 words]: Hobbyhorse rituals have been commonplace in rural Britain for centuries.
This song was sung as part of these rituals.
Although there are a few parallels between this song and "Poor Old Man" (notably the description of the horse's decrepitude), I believe that this is a related but separate song with a thoroughly different gestalt. As we are being splitters in this index, this song deserves its own entry. -PJS Roud lumps the two; personally, I wonder a little if even this song might not need splitting. The description above is taken mostly from Stokoe's text; Sharp, which begins "When I was young and in my prime," has a quite distinct look -- but exactly the same plot, and apparently both were used for hobbyhorse rituals. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: ShH85

Poor Old Lazarus (I've Got a Home; Don't You See)
DESCRIPTION: "Poor ol' Lazarus, poor as I, Don't you see? When he had a home on high, Don't you see?" "Rich man, rich man lived so well, When he died he had a home in hell, Don't you see, don't you see?"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Wings Over Jordan)
KEYWORDS: religious death Bible home
Poor Old Maid

DESCRIPTION: "We're a lonely dismal crew, Poor old maid!/We're a lonely dismal crew/All dressed in yellow, pink and blue/Nursing the cats is all we do...." "Three scores and ten of us/And not a penny in the purse/So something must be done for us...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1876 (Christie, _Traditional Ballad Airs, vol. 1_)

KEYWORDS: loneliness poverty clothes money nonballad political oldmaid

FOUND IN: Britain(England), US(Ap,SE)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
- Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 229, "Poor Old Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains, pp. 12-13, "Poor Old Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #206, "Poor Old Maids" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #81, "Poor Old Maids" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 57, "Poor Old Maids" (2 texts, 2 tunes, plus mention of 1 more)

Roud #3337

NOTES [290 words]: Sharp refers to a manuscript in his collection with the additional lyrics, "We'll apply to George the Third/And our petition shall be heard./George the third unto us he said: 'And here's a penny to buy some bread.'" Sharp adds, "This is, no doubt, an allusion to the Bread Riots." He adds a verse from Christie, "But we'll apply to James our King/And to him a petition bring/That he may get us wed wi' ring/Poor auld maidens." - PJS

The "Bread Riots," also known as "Bread of Blood Riots," took place in 1816. In the aftermath of the Napoleonic Wars, Britain's immense military spending led to an intense round of inflation, with devastating effects on the poor. The most intense uprising came in Liverpool, where protesters bore placards saying "Bread or Blood." 24 rioters were sentenced to death, though in the end only five were hanged and nine more transported.

This is in the reign of George III -- but the other side of the coin is, George III by this time was permanently insane (with what is now believed by some to have been porphyria, although this has been questioned); the future George IV had been regent since 1811 (and at times before that). So I rather suspect the song it older -- perhaps, as implied by Christie, to the reign of James I (1603-1625), the only significant King James of England, whose reign did see a lot of economic trouble, partly because of the high spending of Elizabeth's reign (which ended with an economic downturn) and partly because James didn't understand money at all well.

The American versions of course have none of this, and downplay the poverty; instead of the song being about a POOR ol maid, it is about a poor OLD MAID -- that is, her loneliness rather than her poverty is stressed. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: ShAp2229

Poor Old Man (II)

DESCRIPTION: The poor old man warns the Connors's from Kerry that they will rue stopping in Ross Town. He barricades his door [in "real life" that apparently led to a disaster for him].

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1985 (IRTravellers01)
Poor Old Man (Poor Old Horse; The Dead Horse)

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Characteristic line: "For they say so and they know so... Oh, poor old (horse/man)." The sailor meets an old man with an old horse; they exchange comments about the horse's (and humanity's) fate. Alternate chorus: "And I say so/And we hope so"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1845 (broadside, Bodleian Johnson Ballads 768)

KEYWORDS: shanty horse

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) US(MA,NE,SE) Canada(Mar,Newf)

REFERENCES (23 citations):
- Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, p. 14, "Poor Old Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, pp. 63-64, "Poor Old Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 68-69, 84, "Poor Old Man," "The Dead Horse," "Poor Old Joe" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
- Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, pp. 14-15, "Poor Old Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 554-555, "The Dead Horse" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, pp. 389-392]
- Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 185, "The Dead Horse" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, XLVII, p. 52, "The Dead Horse" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, p. 91, "Dead Horse"; p. 96, "Poor Old Joe" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks, pp. 104-106, "The Poor Old Horse," "The Poor Old Man" (1 texts)
- Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 134-135, "The Dead Horse" (1 short text, 1 tune)
- Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 406, "The Dead Horse" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 226, "Children's Quatrains" ("One old man come ridin' by") (1 short text)
- Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol2, pp. 30-31, "Viggy Mitchy Kimeo" (1 text, 1 tune, which appear to combine a "Kemo Kimo" chorus and one or two verses with a single verse from "Poor Old Man (Poor Old Horse; The Dead Horse)"
- Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, p. 25, "Say Old Man" (1 text)
- Bone-CapstanBars, p. 50, "The 'Dead Horse' Chanty" (1 short text, 1 tune)
- Shay-AmericanSeaSongsAndChanteys, p. 16, "The Dead Horse" (1 text)
- Terry-TheShantyBook-Part1, #23, "The Dead Horse" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Morris-FolksongsOfflorida, #24, "O Johnny Come to Hilo" (1 text, which appears to mix the chorus of "Johnny Walk Along to Hilo" with words from "Poor Old Man (Poor Old Horse; The Dead Horse)"
- Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 237, (no title) (1 fragment, probably this)
- Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 155-156, "Poor Old Horse" (2 texts) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Ox 217; Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 312)

ADDITIONAL: Robert Bell, editor, Ancient Poems, Ballads and Songs of the Peasantry of England (London, 1857 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 184-186, "The Mummers' Song; or The Poor Old Horse" (1 text) "as sung by the Mummers in the Neighbourhood of Richmond, Yorkshire, at the merrie time of Christmas"

Captain John Robinson, "Songs of the Chantey Man," a series published July-August 1917 in the periodical _The Bellman_ (Minneapolis, MN, 1906-1919). A fragment titled "Poor Old Joe" is in
RECORDINGS:
Tom Cornelly, "Poor Old Man" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Capt. Leighton Robinson, "The Dead Horse" (AFS, 1951; on LC26)
Leighton Robinson w. Alex Barr, Arthur Brodeur & Leighton McKenzie, "Poor Old Man" (AFS 4229 B. 1939; in AMMEM/Cowell)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 768, "The Old Horse" ("My cloathing once was linsey wolsey fine"), J. Pitts (London), 1819-1844; also Firth c.18(208), Harding B 11(3712), Harding B 25(1539), Johnson Ballads 2763 [some words illegible], Firth c.19(93), Firth c.19(94), 2806 c.17(345) [some words lost], "[The] Poor Old Horse"
LOCSinging, sb30437a, "Poor Old Horse let him die" ("My clothing once, alas my friends, was linsey woolsey fine"), H. De Marsan (New York), 1864-1878; also as100480, "My Old Horse" [fragment]

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Poor Old Horse III" (plot)
cf. "Old Marse John" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Charleston Gals (Clear the Kitchen)" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Johnny Booker" (lyrics)
cf. "The Salt Horse Song"
cf. "I Whipped My Horse"
cf. "Dumpty Moore"

NOTES [410 words]: When a boarding master supplied a sailor to a ship, he received an advance from the sailor's pay (for background on this, see the notes to "Dixie Brown" [Laws D7]). Thus the sailor had to work for some weeks or months before he began to earn money for himself. This was known as "working off the dead horse." Often sailors celebrated in some way when the dead horse was finally disposed of, and this song celebrates the process. - RBW
Thirty days out, sailors would sometimes make a horse-figure from rags and tar, hoist it to the yardarm, cut it loose and let it drift away on the sea, a ritual known as "burying the dead horse." A good captain would break out a ration of rum at this time. A sailor of my acquaintance reported that 100 days out, on a U.S. Navy carrier, the men would be given a ration of two cans of beer, and this was still known as the "dead horse." - PJS
Bone-CapstanBars says of this that it is "the only chanty I know composed definitely for entertainment." - RBW
The Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Ox 217 text adds a verse to the Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames text on p. 155. The Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 312 text adds a toast to the poor old horse to the Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames text on p. 156. Bell (not cribbing this time from Dixon 1846): "As sung by the Mummers in the Neighborhood of Richmond, Yorkshire, at the merrie time of Christmas. The rustic actor who sings the following song is dressed as an old horse, and at the end of every verse the jaws are snapped in chorus. It is a very old composition, and is now printed for the first time. The 'old horse' is, probably, of Scandinavian origin, -- a reminiscence of Odin's Sleipnor." - BS
The link with Sleipnor strikes me as dubious at best -- Sleipnor, or Sleipnir, was a "magnificent beast," the offspring of Loki, ridden by Hermod when he went to Hel to try to release Balder from death (Sykes/Kendall, p. 179). In Snorri's Prose Edda, it is called the best of all the AEsr's horses and is said to have eight legs (Snorri/Young, p. 43). It appears Sleipnir is still alive at the end of the Edda (Snorri/Young, p. 66). Also, Sleipnir could run over sea as well as land (Benet, p. 1039). His teeth were somehow notable, but why is not clear (Edda/Terry, p. 164).
Broadside LOCSinging sb30437a: H. De Marsan dating per Studying Nineteenth-Century Popular Song by Paul Charosh in American Music, Winter 1997, Vol 15.4, Table 1, available at FindArticles site. - BS

Bibliography
- Benet: William Rose Benet, editor, The Reader's Encyclopedia, first edition, 1948 (I use the four-volume Crowell edition but usually check it against the single volume fourth edition edited by Bruce Murphy and published 1996 by Harper-Collins; however, this entry was deleted from the latter)
- Snorri/Young: Snorri Sturluson, The Prose Edda: Tales from Norse Mythology, translated Poor Old Robinson Crusoe

DESCRIPTION: "When I was a lad, my fortune was bad, My grandfather I did lose." As in the book, he, Robinson Crusoe, is shipwrecked, lands on an island with gun and sword. He builds a hut, lives there with Friday, until he is rescued by a passing ship.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1797 (Oh poor Robinson Crusoe sheet music, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)
KEYWORDS: rescue sea ship wreck
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Greig/Duncan1 25, "Robinson Crusoe" (1 text)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 455, "Poor old Robinson Crusoe!" (2 texts)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #216, p. 146, "(Poor old Robinson Crusoe)"
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 156, "Poor Old Robinson Crusoe" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2017, p. 135, "Robinson Crusoe" (3 references)
New-Comic-Songster, p. 10, "Robinson Crusoe" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5805
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 28(66), "Robinson Crusoe," W. Armstrong (Liverpool), 1820-1824; also Harding B 28(66), "Robinson Crusoe"; Johnson Ballads 2559, "Life and adventures of Robinson Crusoe"
LOCSinging, sb40455b, "Robinson Crusoe," H. De Marsan (New York), 1864-1878; also as203020, as111820, "Robinson Crusoe"

NOTES [70 words]: Robinson Crusoe was written by Daniel Dafoe and published in 1719. [Based loosely on the actual adventures of a sailor named Alexander Selkirk. - RBW]
The source for the description is broadside Bodleian Harding B 28(66).
Broadside LOCSinging sb40455b: H. De Marsan dating per Studying Nineteenth-Century Popular Song by Paul Charosh in American Music, Winter 1997, Vol 15.4, Table 1, available at FindArticles site. - BS

Poor Old Sailor, The

DESCRIPTION: An old sailor begging tells his story: his death, falsely reported, caused his wife to die of a broken heart and his daughter to wander "I know not where." A woman listening reveals herself as his daughter and she takes him home until he dies.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1846 (broadside, Bodleian Johnson Ballads 457)
KEYWORDS: age disability begging children sailor reunion
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar) Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, pp. 59-60, "The Worn-Out Sailor" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan5 1076, "The Poor Old Worn-Out Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6764
BROADSIDES:
Poor Old Slave, The

DESCRIPTION: "The poor old slave is dead and gone, We know that he is free. Disturb him not, but let him rest, Away down in Tennessee." "The poor old slave is gone to rest, No master does he fear, Disturb him not..."

AUTHOR: G. W. H. Griffin (Source: Huntington, based on Spaeth)

EARLIEST DATE: 1858 (Journal of the Pavilion)

KEYWORDS: slave death burial humorous wordplay

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Wheeler-SteamboatinDays, p. 118, "Th Po' Old Slave" (1 short text, 1 tune)
- Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, # 5, "The Poor Old Slave" (1 short text)
- Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 305-306, "Good Old Jeff" (1 text, 1 tune)
- DT, POORS LAV
  ST MWhee118 (Full)
  Roud #10049

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Good Old Slave

NOTES [58 words]: The Digital Tradition has a (camp?) version of this in which the singer inserts nonsense syllables. But Wheeler's text, though short, seems to ensure that this is a parody -- or rather an expansion -- of a serious song (perhaps a spiritual). Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida's informant had an amazing story of it having been learned in Sierra Leone. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2

File: MWhee118

---

Poor Omie (John Lewis) (Little Omie Wise) [Laws F4]

DESCRIPTION: John Lewis, to free himself of his pregnant sweetheart, offers to marry her but instead plans to drown her. She begs for her life, promising to go begging, but he throws her in the river. The body is found and Lewis imprisoned. (He escapes into the army.)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1874

KEYWORDS: pregnancy homicide rejection prison drowning

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1807 (some sources, including her tombstone, say 1808, but see below) - Drowning of Naomi Wise in North Carolina

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,SE,So)

REFERENCES (34 citations):
- Laws F4, "Poor Omie (John Lewis) (Little Omie Wise)"
- Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 322-324, "Oma Wise" (2 texts)
- Randolph 149, "Poor Oma Wise" (5 texts plus 2 excerpts and 1 fragment, 2 tunes)
- Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 163-166, "Poor Oma Wise" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 149A)
- High-OldFolkSongs, pp. 37-38, "Poor... Oma" (1 text)
- Abrahams/Riddle-ASingerAndHerSongs, pp. 56-57, "Little Lonie" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 300, "Poor Naomi (Omie Wise)" (5 texts plus 1 excerpt and mention of 2 more; it appears that Laws places texts "A" and "D" here, but
"H" is also this song, with "F" and "G" being "Naomi Wise" [Laws F31]
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 300, "Poor Naomi (Omie Wise)" (2 excerpts, 2 tunes, both probably this)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 786, "(no title)" (1 tune with no text, which Schinhan says is closely related to the tune in Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4)
Lunsford/Stringfield-30And1FolkSongsFromSouthernMountains, pp. 28-29, "Poor Omia Wise" (1 text, 1 tune)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #38, "Naomi Wise" (2 texts, 1 tune, with the "A" text and tune, locally titled "Sweet William," being "Poor Omie (John Lewis) (Little Omie Wise)" [Laws F4], while the "B" text is "Naomi Wise" [Laws F31])
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 63, pp. 187-188, "Poor Omie" (1 text)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol1, pp. 64-65, "Omie Wise" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, pp. 84-86, "Omy Wise" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 169, "Pretty Molly" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cambioire-EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads, pp. 30-31, "Oma Wise" (1 text)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 73-75, "John Lewis" (1 text)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol3, pp. 61-62, "Omie Wise" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burton-TennesseeTraditionalSingers, pp. 52-53, "Omie Wise" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 793-795, "Naomi (Omie) Wise" (2 texts)
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 202, "Naomi Wise" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 116, "The Ballad of Naomi Wise" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burton-TennesseeTraditionalSingers, pp. 52-53, "Omie Wise" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, pp. 84-86, "Omy Wise" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 138, "Omie Wise" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 51, pp. 119-120, "Poor Omie" (1 text)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 123, "Poor Omie" (7 texts, 7 tunes)
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 25-28, "Omie Wise" (1 text plus some fragments, 1 tune; also an excerpt from another Naomi Wise song, seemingly neither this nor Laws F31)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, p. 232, "Poor Naomi" (1 text plus an excerpt of a second)
Leach-HeritageBookOfBallads, pp. 143-144, "Omie Wise" (1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 200-201, "Omie Wise" (1 text)
Dunson/Raim/Ash-AnthologyOfAmericanFolkMusic, p. 42 "Ommie Wise" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 149, "Deep Water" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 627, OMIewise* OMIWISE2* Roud #447
RECORDINGS:
Finley Adams, "Omie Wise" (AAFS 2796 B1)
Clarence Ashley, "Naomi Wise" (Columbia 15522-D, 1930; rec. 1929; on Ashley04)
Clarence Ashley & Doc Watson, "Poor Omie" (on Ashley03)
Dock Boggs, "Little Omie Wise" (on Boggs3, BoggsCD1)
Mrs. W. R. Buchanan, "Little Omie Wise" (AAFS 2857 B3)
Acie Cargill, Debra Cowan, Kristina Olsen, "Omie Wise" (on HcargillFamily)
Ruth Clark Cullipher, "Little Onie" (AAFS 1031 A1)
Aunt Idy Harper & the Coon Creek Girls, "Poor Naomi Wise" (Vocalion 04354 [or 04345], 1938)
Roscoe Holcomb, "Omie Wise" (on Holcomb1, HolcombCD1)
A. J. Huff, "Omie Wise" (AAFS 2877 B3)
Sarah Ison, "Little Omie Wise" (AAFS 2810 B1)
Aunt Molly Jackson, "Oma Wise" (AAFS 824 B2, 1935) (AAFS 3340/3341 A)
Polly Johnson, "Poor Omie" (AAFS 2760 A4)
Mrs. Esco Kilgore, "Oma Wise" (AAFS 2772 A2)
Alexander Kirkheart, "Naomi Wise" (AAFS 1700 A1)
Alec Moore, "Poor Omie Wise" (AAFS 57 B1)
Johanna Shepherd, "Omie Wise" (AAFS 1405 B2)
Lillian Short, "Naomi Wise" (AFS; on LC12)
Della Sibert, "Omie Wise" (AAFS 1486 A2)
Doug Wallin, "Omie Wise" (on Wallins1)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Naomi Wise" [Laws F31] (plot)
cf. "Tragic Romance" (tune)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Naomi Wise

Dr. Long-Wilgus's monograph on Naomi Wise proceeds from the apparent original "True Account of Nayomy Wise" to show how both folksongs, "Poor Omie" (Laws F4) and "Naomi Wise" (Laws F32), grew out of this original under the influence of two broadsides (on other murders) from the 18th Century, both exemplifying the "murdered girl" narrative theme. The first printed version of "Poor Omie" was published by Braxton Craven in 1851, the second, "Naomi Wise," was recorded in 1925 by Carson Robison. But Long-Wilgus argues convincingly that the songs are older, modeled on the murdered girl theme (cf. Banks of the Ohio [Laws F5], the Wexford Girl [Laws P35], or Rose Conoley [Laws F6]), and while they show communalities with the eighteenth and nineteenth century broadsides, do not derive strictly from them, but rather increasingly fulfill the conventions of the "murdered girl theme" implied by that original "True Account." - DGE

Arthur Palmer Hudson called this North Carolina's "Principal contribution to American folksong" (Roote, p. 70).

A good brief account of the whole incident is on pp. 51-57 of Polenberg; there is a bibliography (far from complete, but a start) on p. 266, which indicates that the piece by Long-Wilgus is the only published book on the subject although there is a 1982 masters thesis by Robert Thomas Roote (which Polenberg considers the most important source for the song. This is not the Roote article cited here; the citations are to a 1984 summary).

Polenberg lists two early accounts of the Naomi Wise murder, with the first one, a poem by Mary Woody, being the "True Account of Nayomy Wise" mentioned above; the other, later and less accurate, was by Braxton Craven. Craven (born 1822) published his account in the January and February issues of Evergreen (Polenberg, p. 52; Roote, p. 70, who summarizes Craven's account on the next pages). It is not only unreliable but heavily fictionalized, including, e.g., conversations between Naomi and Lewis that could not have been preserved by anyone (some are quoted on p. 73 of Roote). Nonetheless it was the basis for a 1944 account, The Story of Naomi Wise, by Randelman (Roote, p. 74).

Although Craven said Wise was 19, and this seems to have infiltrated some versions of the song (indeed, her tombstone gives her dates as 1789-1808 -- but we know she was murdered in 1807!), she was certainly older although her exact age is unknown (she was an orphan who had been raised and indentured as a servant by William and Mary Adams of Randolph County; Polenberg, p. 54). She already had two children by the time she became pregnant by John Lewis: a nine-year-old daughter Nancy and a four-year-old son Henry. The fathers (plural) were known but had not married her (Polenberg, p. 53).

John Lewis was 24 and lived in neighboring Guilford County. Although he had seemingly gotten her pregnant, he did not want to marry her. He reportedly took her away on his horse to the mill dam at Adams's Spring near her home (Polenberg, p. 52, has a later photo of this mill dam). Ploenberg gave the year as 1807, although this apparently is in doubt. She was strangled and/or drowned; the commotion was heard although no one was able to reach the scene of the crime in the dark.

The Adamses searched the next morning and found artifacts; calling on neighbors, they eventually found Naomi's body (Polenberg, pp. 54-55).

A Grand Jury returned a bill on March 30, 1807 accusing John Lewis of murder (Roote, p. 74). Eventually they located John Lewis and took him into custody (Polenberg, p. 55). It is interesting, in light of the use of the name "Omie" in this song, that at least one of the court documents pertaining to his custody, refers to Naomi as "Omia Wise" (quoted on p. 74 of Roote). Lewis was in prison for eight months, but managed to escape (probably with help; several people got in trouble about it; Roote, p. 76) shortly before going on trial (the trial was scheduled for October 26, 1807, and Lewis got away on October 9; Roote, p. 75). He emigrated to the west. Supposedly (believe this if you want to!) he was discovered when someone sang a song about Naomi (Polenberg, pp. 55-56). In any case, he was finally brought back to North Carolina, but did not stand trial until October 1813.
Given the long time lapse and the lack of physical evidence, it apparently was not possible to prove the case (at least, Roote, p. 78, can find no records of a murder trial, though he allows the possibility that one took place); the only thing Lewis was convicted of was the minor crime of breaking jail. Having been given a month's sentence (he actually served 47 days, according to Roote, p. 77) and shown that he did not have the money to pay his fine, he was freed and allowed to head west to return to the wife he had married in 1811.

Although he had escaped justice, he did not enjoy freedom for long; he died in 1817, still in his early to mid thirties (Polenberg, pp. 56-57). - RBW

Bibliography

- Roote: Robert Roote, "The Historical Events Behind the Celebrated Ballad 'Naomi Wise'," article in North Carolina Folklore Journal, Volume XXXII, Number 2 (Fall-Winter 1984), pp. 70-81

Last updated in version 6.1
File: LF04

Poor Parker

DESCRIPTION: The singer laments, "Ye gods above, protect us widows!" She recalls her husband [Richard] Parker, "hanged for mutiny." She recalls how she was not allowed to his execution, and how she and friends dug up his grave and gave him a decent burial

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1824 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 28(42))

KEYWORDS: ship navy mutiny punishment execution husband wife burial mourning

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1797 - Nore mutiny, ending in the execution of Richard Parker and others

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland) US(Ro,SE)

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 29, "The Death of Parker" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 117, Poor Parker"" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 117, "Poor Parker" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #136, "Parker" (1 text, 1 tune)
Logan-APedlarsPack, pp. 58-64, "Death of Parker" (1 text)
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 75, "President Parker" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: C. H. Firth, Publications of the Navy Records Society, 1907 (available on Google Books), p. 282, "The Death of Parker" (1 text, immediately following an anti-Parker song)

ST BrII117 (Partial)

Roud #1032

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.18(83), "The Death of Parker," Angus (Newcastle), before 1826; also Harding B 28(42), "Parker's Widow," W. Armstrong (Liverpool), 1820-1824 (barely legible); Harding B 25(490) (only a few words legible but probably this); Johnson Ballads 2447 (semi-legible); Harding B 11(843); Harding B 11(840)=Harding B 11(841), "The Death of Parker," H. Such (London), 1863-1885; Harding B 11(844), "The Death of Parker," J Harkness (Preston), 1840-1866; 2806 c.16(207)=Harding B 11(3301), J. Walker (Durham); 2806 c.13(245) (only partly legible)

NOTES [4203 words]: Living conditions in sailing ships were rarely pleasant, but conditions in the British Navy in the late eighteenth century were particularly bad. Sailor's food, supplied by dishonest contractors (M/D, p. 45), was often insufficient and rotten (M/D, p. 43), and they were all but imprisoned on their ships. Plus, the sailors (most of them, of course, recruited by press gangs; Dugan, p. 58) were held in service for very long periods. Many were beaten mercilessly for bad reasons or none -- or, perhaps, "to encourage the others"; cruel officers were one of their chief causes of complaint (M/D, pp. 55-61).

Theoretically, rations were supposed to be adequate and fresh food offered when possible. But the Navy farmed out these services, and the contractors were generally corrupt and supplied bad food in inadequate quantities; Dugan, pp. 56-57. Even if the contractors had been entirely honest, it would have been hard for them to do their work well, because they, like the sailors, were not getting paid what they were owed; Dugan, p. 67.
Nor could the men hope to buy anything to improve their conditions; pay hadn't been raised for over a century (Guttridge, p. 46), and even those pitiful amounts often went unpaid; Dugan, p. 35, says that the total arrears as of the end of 1796 exceeded 1.4 million pounds -- a figure that could be multiplied by a factor of a hundred or so to reach modern dollars. M/D, p. 18, cites a source claiming some sailors had not been paid for decades, although no proof was offered.

And all this at a time when the British economy was teetering on the brink of collapse and revolution may have been in the air (Dugan, pp. 29-31); many of those sailors had families back home who were in extreme distress (Dugan, p. 66). Dissatisfaction with naval policy was enough that, when the windows at Number Ten Downing Street were broken, the general feeling was that it was in response to the heavy demands of the press gang, though Prime Minister William Pitt the Younger brushed it off as "a single pebble" (Wilson, p. 278).

To top it all off, Britain was already war-weary from the contest with France, and was so broke that payment in specie had been halted in many cases (M/D, p. 6). The nation had little energy for reform -- especially since the Navy was considered to be doing a rather poor job (M/D, p. 4); why try to reform a service that was so wrong-headed? The fact that this was the fault of the antique senior officers, not the seamen, does not seem to have crossed Parliament's mind.

The result of all this, in 1797, was a series of mutinies -- at a time when Britain's very independence depended on the fleet holding off an invasion; Britain's land allies had been defeated by Revolutionary France, and the French were looking across the channel to eliminate their chief rival.

There had been several recent mutinies -- on Culloden and Windsor Castle in 1794, and of course on the Bounty in 1789 (M/D, p. 8), plus the dreadful case of the Hermione (for which see "Captain James (The Captain's Apprentice)"). But those had been treated as individual acts. The events of 1797-1798 were different. The sailors wrote to the Admiralty, and to their former commander Admiral Howe (M/D, pp. 21-25), begging for relief. When there was no response, they tried Parliament (M/D, p. 27). Still nothing. When orders came for the fleet to sail, the sailors refused (M/D, p. 32).

M/D, p. 246, declare that "There can be no doubt, to any fair mind, that the mutinies, especially that at Spithead, were thoroughly justified."

The first mutiny (April 16-May 14, 1797) took place at Spithead, the fleet base outside Portsmouth; Keegan, p. 38, describes it as "a strike (for better pay and conditions) rather than a rebellion," and most other authorities agree -- the delegates who organized it decided that officers would be obeyed and all orders respected except those for going to sea (Dugan, p. 92; Guttridge, p. 50; M/D, pp. 36-37). Even Wilson, who does his best to sweep the whole thing under the rug (he never so much as mentions the brutal treatment meted out to the ringleaders of the Nore revolt), admits that "order, maintained by the mutineers, was perfect. No seaman was permitted to go on shore without what was called 'a Liberty Ticket,' and the very idea of handing over even a single vessel to France was suppressed by the seamen themselves with resolute determination" (pp. 278-279).

The sailors in fact hung ropes from the yardarms, by orders of their delegates, to hang sailors who violated discipline (M/D, p. 39). The delegates even ordered several ships which had been designated for convoy escort, which wanted to stay in Spithead, to sail and do their duty (M/D, p. 40). There was one incident in which several sailors were killed, but the officer involved fired first, and the delegates ordered him to be spared (M/D, pp. 83-84).

As Stokesbury says on p. 188, "This was not red revolution, as had happened across the Channel... this was simply a desperate reaction by men who had been pushed farther than humanity and decency could stand. The sailors were ready to fight the French if they came out, but they had finally had enough of rotten conditions, meager pay and rations, and officers who were often martinet and occasionally brutes.... It was in fact less of a mutiny than it was a sit-down strike."

The Spithead mutiny temporarily ended, after repeated attempts to browbeat the determined sailors, when pardons were offered and more money promised (Dugan, p. 104, describes about a 15% pay raise). The pardons came quickly (Dugan, p. 112, Guttridge, p. 53; M/D, p. 51, note that First Lord of the Admiralty Spencer himself brought the request to King George III). But it took parliament weeks to vote the funds (M/D, p. 70), and in that time, the mutiny heated up again (Dugan, p. 112) as sailors sought better food and less brutal officers.

Many officers were forced from their ships (Dugan, pp. 138-139; M/D, p. 89), and an admiral imprisoned in his cabin (Guttridge, p. 58; Dugan, p. 142; Davies, pp. 53-54; M/D, p. 81). Real
It is ironic to note that the Spithead strike was settled largely by the actions of Richard Howe (1726-1799), who previously had been co-commander with his brother William during the revolt of the American colonies; he was hauled out of retirement to deal with the Spithead problem (Dugan, p. 148). It was the last act 58 years of service to king and country. The Spithead outcome demonstrated fully his sympathy with ordinary people against the government of George III; even went so far as to set aside the bad officers (Guttridge, p. 58). Howe showed no respect for rank in the weeding process; those pushed aside included a Vice Admiral (John Colpoys, MP, KG, and former First Sea Lord), four captains, and 102 junior officers (Dugan, pp. 168-169), an average of somewhat more than two officers per ship. Some of the officers were re-employed, and all continued to be paid (M/D, p. 112), but Colpoys would never go to sea again (M/D, p. 97). The promise of pardon for the mutineers seems to have been kept without any reservations. M/D, p. 118, report that there seem to have been no instances of retribution over Spithead; several of the fleet Delegates were in fact promoted. One even became a midshipman within a year.

To the greatest extent possible, news of Spithead was kept quiet -- both to keep the French from acting and to prevent more widespread rebellion (Dugan, p. 130). Spithead, after all, wasn't the only fleet base in Britain. But not even the vigilance of the leading admirals could entirely silence the news (Woodman, p. 112). So the Spithead strike inspired the Nore mutiny (May 10-June 16). M/D, p. 126, suggest that the Nore mutiny was a sort of sympathy strike to make sure the Admiralty got the point. But it escalated (in part, perhaps, because the Nore sailors did not get to do anything about bad officers).

The ships at the Nore, and many of those at Yarmouth, wanted the same terms ("We just want the same treatment as the Spithead people," an envoy told Howe -- Dugan, p. 172), including the right to dispose of officers (Guttridge, p. 69), and didn't get them, and what they got, they got slowly. Nor was it clear that the sailors at the Nore were covered by the Spithead pardon (indeed, it was eventually decided that they were not; Dugan, p. 212; Guttridge, p. 66). Left dangling in the wind, the Nore mutineers kept increasing their demands, including even calling for change in the Articles of War (Guttridge, p. 64; Cordingly, p. 38), which was patently out of the question. Perhaps if there had been a Howe to deal with the Nore mutineers, things might have gone better. Even a sense of unit cohesion might have helped, since it would have promoted a greater sense of "family" between officers and men -- but there was none; the Nore was simply a place where a lot of ships gathered (M/D, p. 125). The men at the Nore were a very mixed lot. Many of the sailors there -- including Richard Parker, the titular leader of the coming mutiny -- were "quota men." With the navy being manned so heavily, it was almost impossible to impress enough sailors, so officials in all parts of Britain had to supply a certain quota of landsmen; they found them sweeping the streets and alleys and by paying bounties. Often the men they got were marginally fit -- older and unused to sea conditions. And more than a few were radicals; Thomas Payne's _The Rights of Man_ was very popular at this time (Dugan, p. 63). Valentine Joyce, the leader of the Spithead protesters, was one such; he had been a Belfast tobacco seller before serving a sentence for sedition.

This lack of unity was due to the fact that the Nore (near the mouth of the Thames off the Isle of Sheppey) wasn't a fleet base the way Portsmouth was; it was a rendezvous point (Dugan, pp. 177, 227). It was not, in modern terms, a "home port" for any of the ships stationed there, and the docking facilities were limited (Herman, p. 351). The ships located there were mostly in transit, on their way to join some other fleet. The ships there were there, essentially, by chance. There was no competent admiral to convey their demands, either. So they mutinied.

M/D, p. 252, say, "It is difficult to feel the same way about the people at the Nore [as about those at Spithead]. One's sympathy they have, but less of one's admiration and respect. It was, from the beginning, a muddle-headed affair. One can see no error in their action as long as it constituted a sympathetic strike in favour of their brethren at Spithead; but their behavior after they knew that the mutiny there was settled... partakes of the wild and foolish. One may, indeed one does, feel very much for them; there were still many wrongs which they suffered.... One may even grant that there was just cause for another mutiny; their conduct of it is what provokes criticism. To begin with, there was hardly any preliminary organization...."

The Nore revolt was a more thorough mutiny than at Spithead; the men were rowdier and more officers were set aside (M/D, p. 135). Strangely, the mutineers seem to have had no specific demands at first (M/D, p. 136).

And, somehow, two days after the mutiny began, the disobedient crews put themselves in the hands of Richard Parker. Dugan, p. 187, tells of him being chosen delegate from _Sandwich_; later he was made "President of the Delegates of the Whole Fleet"; p. 198. He was an unusual man even in this mixed-up flotilla.

Our data about his personal life is limited. Cordingly, p. 36, guesses his birth data as 1764, based on the fact that he was said to be 33 at the time of his death. But M/D, p. 269, states that he was born in Exeter in April 1767.

Parker had actually served at one time as a junior ship's officer, but had been cashiered for what Guttridge, p. 62, calls an "obscure infraction" and Cordingly, p. 37, labels "immoral conduct." M/D, in their notes on his life on p. 269, list no details on what happened. Whatever it was, he sent to serve belowdecks; Guttridge, p. 62, says that "in 1784 [he] was discharged for either disobedience or nervous disorder, perhaps both." Here again, however, there is uncertainty; Dugan, p. 198, says he was discharged in 1794 for rheumatism; Cordingly, p. 37, simply says he was sick. M/D, p. 269 says that he was "discharged sick." Perhaps he suffered from mental illness; M/D, p. 122, describe what sounds like a suicide attempt. Having married (perhaps 1791; M/D, p. 269) and gone into farming, he ended up in debtor's prison (Dugan, p. 198).

Even though he was a "political," as we might say these days, he had sea experience, so he was accepted back into the navy -- to meet the quota. At least he knew his way around the ship. His enlistment bounty was used to pay his debts (Cordingly, p. 37).

We have little evidence as to his motivations. Davies, p. 54, calls him "a misguided man, who was undoubtedly a demagogue more interested in leading a rebellion than in correcting genuine wrongs." Dugan, p. 199, thinks he was given his position at the head of the mutiny because he was an intelligent, educated man; because he had that history of being court-martialed for insubordination (something that would have earned him respect from the ranks) -- and because he wanted the job (although he would later deny this; M/D, p. 135). Despite his later role, he seems to have been surprised at the outbreak of the mutiny (M/D, pp. 134-135). M/D, p. 135, conclude that he was not a good leader; he could not dominate others.

The Nore mutiny was organized under the Admiralty's nose, with sailors on the depot ship Sandwich preparing an oath and a series of demands, then convincing other ships to sign on (Dugan, pp. 179-181). Unlike Spithead, it was not a "respectable mutiny"; even at the very start, there were instances of British ships firing on other British ships (Dugan, p. 185). And the Admiralty was far less patient, calling up soldiers very quickly (M/D, p. 147).

The rebellion even affected the ships at sea watching the Dutch; Admiral Duncan's fleet, based at Yarmouth, was also afflicted by insubordination (M/D, pp. 171-181). Some of these went to the Nore to reinforce the "Floating Republic" (M/D, pp. 182-183). Parker at one point had 13 ships of the line (Dugan, p. 262), plus lesser vessels, under his command. (Though ships joined the rebellion and gave it up at odd intervals; by the end, only two ships were still under delegate control.) Many ships were "half in" from the start -- e.g. Circe, watching the Dutch fleet in the Texel, had a mutinous crew on the gun deck, but held to her duty because her officers and a few loyal sailors controlled her helm and sails; Dugan, pp. 255-256.

This time, the Admiralty took a hard line, saying all grievances had been addressed (Dugan, p. 227). Naturally the mutineers did not accept this brush-off, and continued their strike.

But the Nore simply could not support such an action; the facilities weren't there. The mutineers eventually found themselves starved out. They blockaded London (Guttridge, p. 68), although they let fresh food through (Dugan, p. 264; M/D, p. 251, offers this as evidence that the sailors were not revolutionaries, since they could have done more). The Admiralty cut off supplies in return (Dugan, p. 237), which had not been done at Spithead (M/D, pp. 161-162; M/D, p. 186, says that the government blockaded the ships first rather than the reverse). To make their problem worse, many of the ships in the rebellious fleet had been poorly supplied to begin with; water and candles were in short supply (Dugan, p. 262), and some ships were low on wood for the stoves. On at least one ship, water was not only rationed but closely guarded (M/D, p. 219).

Parker, by the time the embargo started, found himself in an impossible situation. The authorities didn't trust him -- but several of his rebellious ships were wavering; many wanted to return to government authority. Parker at one point asked the men of the Sandwich if they wished to give in, and they did (Dugan, p. 243) -- and the fleet delegates responded by inducing a system where they elected a new Fleet President every day! (Dugan, pp. 243-244). If Parker gave in, he would be set aside. Dugan thinks he wanted to take the pardon but could not.

Meanwhile, Parliament was working on an act which would treat every sailor on a mutinous ship as a pirate (M/D, p. 192). This even though the sailors continued to cheer the King at every chance -- despite the fact that the King involved was George III! With this sort of behavior going on, there was obviously little hope of compromise.

The situation was turning into a race against time, though the mutineers had no way of knowing it: Would William Pitt's government fall, or would the mutineers starve? Voices against Pitt were numerous (Dugan, pp. 259-261), and bond prices were at record lows (Dugan, p. 265), but George III sustained his Prime Minister and the government held on by the skin of its teeth. The mutineers were also having troublemaking and implementing plans. They considered fleeing in their ships (M/D, pp. 207-208), but they could not agree on a destination (most were still too patriotic to surrender to France), and besides, they had no navigators. Increasingly, the leaders were clamping down on the rank and file -- in the early days of the mutiny, most of the punishments handed out by the delegates were for drunkenness or other genuine faults. By the end, the usual crime was "perjury," i.e. questioning their leaders (M/D, p. 218).

Gradually ships started slipping away from the Nore assembly (Guttridge, p. 67), though some were fired on as they sailed (M/D, p. 220). Parker tried to prevent bloodshed, but was ignored (M/D, p. 220-221). Having failed to get the sailors to listen, Parker then followed their will and manned a gun himself, seemingly working it in a frenzy (M/D, p. 221).

The attempts to halt the exodus failed. Even some of the delegates gave up (Dugan, p. 269). There was a scramble to obtain terms of surrender (M/D, p. 225). Not that terms were given; the instructions given to the admirals on that spot said that "no encouragement" could be given to "any proposition short of unconditional submission" (M/D, p. 227). Parker himself gave up while half a dozen ships were still holding out. He seems to have made no attempt to escape the government's reach (M/D, pp. 232-233).

The government didn't take any of that into account. As far as they were concerned, it was mutiny, and someone had to be punished. And Parker was the official scapegoat.

What followed reflected badly on Georgian justice. M/D, p. 238, are sure that any court would have condemned Parker to death, but the Admiralty didn't risk it. M/D, p. 239, consider Parker's trial fair, but Dugan strongly dissents, noting in particular the following: Parker was charged with civil offenses, but was treated as a mutineer and subjected to court-martial rather than set him before a jury (which might acquit him). The officers trying him clearly had conflicts of interest. He had no lawyer. He was denied access to evidence -- including even the transcripts of the trial. He was given only a week to prepare his defence (Dugan, p. 329), and was in a dark prison when not in court (M/D, p. 235). All he could do was operate by memory. And the prosecution had assembled an absurd case; many of the witnesses called had absolutely nothing to say, since they had never met or dealt with Parker (Dugan, pp. 332-333).

The verdict, naturally, was just what was expected:

"The court has heard witnesses... [and] is of the opinion that the whole of the charges were fully proved against Richard Parker."
"The court, therefore have determined that the said Richard Parker shall suffer death, and that he be accordingly hanged by the neck until dead on such day, and on board such ship, as the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty shall appoint" (Dugan, p. 348).

Dugan's version of events is extremely anti-George and pro-Parker, but he gives the impression that, had Parker been granted a fair trial (which of course was unlikely), he would have been allowed to live by a jury of the time. An honest military trial today would probably result in a bad conduct discharge and related penalties. He was disobedient -- but he was not treasonous. There was, of course, no possibility of appeal, save to the King, who had the brains of a sea slug (remember that this is George III, who had already caused the American Revolution, and the Spithead Mutiny, and was about to witness the 1798 Rising in Ireland). George a very high standard of personal sexual morality and absolutely no sympathy for anyone who did not think him the infallible viceroy of God on earth.

Logan-APedlarsPack seems to agree with Dugan that the trial was a mockery, though his view is less pro-Parker than Dugan: "Parker appears from the evidence to have obtained scant justice; and there can be no doubt that, being an educated man, and rather ambitious of being an orator, he was made the mouthpiece and the tool of harsher natures, whom even in death he did not betray" (p. 62).

On the other hand, Davies, p. 55, says of the trials, "Out of about four hundred [ringleaders], most were pardoned, some were flogged or imprisoned and twenty-eight were hanged. This may be considered a moderate response by the government since, strictly speaking, all mutineers were subject to only one punishment, and that death. On the other hand, even if it had wanted to, the government could not have hanged the whole navy."

The number of executions cannot be considered precise. Dugan agrees that over 300 of the 400+ alleged ringleaders were pardoned, but cites estimates of the number hanged ranging from 24 to 36 -- though mostly toward the high end of that range. Guttridge, who has no sympathy for the mutineers, claims on p. 72 that "sixty mutineers were condemned to death, imprisonment, or flogging. Probably no more than two dozen were hanged, most of them from the Sandwich [Parker's ship]." M/D, p. 242, say 400 were tried, 59 sentenced to die, 29 actually executed.

Such were the ways of Georgian justice that Parker's wife was never officially told he was on trial, and she was denied a final meeting with him. According to Cordingly, pp. 39-41, she hired three different boats to try to reach him; all were turned back. Her only communication with him after his condemnation was a letter he wrote (Dugan, pp. 351-352). Her only sight of him after he went off on his final trip was of his body hanging from a yardarm (Cordingly, p. 36).
Parker was hanged June 30. At the scaffold, there was hesitation about allowing him a final speech. But he cried out to the crowd at the last, avoiding any political references and appealed for mercy for all the other leaders of the revolt (Dugan, p. 356), obviously to limited effect.
The song reportedly describes the disappearance of Parker's body fairly accurately. Ann Parker had asked for the body and been refused; mutineers were denied proper burial (Cordingly, p. 42).
He was to be left in unconsecrated ground, but the widow and others stole the body and spirited it away. The authorities did catch up with her, but the church where the body was taken permitted a proper burial with appropriate ceremonies (Dugan, pp. 359-362).
Such was the navy's desire to wash away the memory of the Nore that the Sandwich, where Parker has been President of the fleet, was broken up soon after (Dugan, p. 363. Although it was pretty close to a hulk already, so breaking it up was not unreasonable).
Mrs. Parker outlived her husband by nearly half a century; Dugan (p. 458) reports that, in 1840, she was "seventy, blind, and friendless."
A French invasion during the period of the mutinies might well have succeeded, but the French were too confused to bring one about. England, utterly mismanaged by her government, survived by raw force and a great deal of luck. And, once her sailors were back on duty, they did well; ships from Yarmouth and the Nore helped win the great Battle of Camperdown against the Dutch (M/D,
p. 243), halting fears of invasion for a time.
There were any number of broadsides about the Nore and Spithead mutinies (Firth, p. 277, prints
"A New Song" about Spithead, and on ,p 280 has "British Tars Rewarded" on the same theme; p.
281 has "Parker the Delegate," an anti-Parker song to the tune of "The Vicar of Bray"), but few found their way into tradition, this amazingly widespread song being the primary exception. Dugan, p. 362, indeed notes that those who sold anti-Parker broadsides were attacked in the streets and their song sheets scattered and destroyed. That may be the best comment of all on the state of affairs in Georgian England; the Nore mutiny brought England close to disaster, yet so much was the government disliked that the mutiny's hero became a martyr. - RBW

Bibliography

- Cordingly: David Cordingly,Women Sailors and Sailors' Women, Random House, 2001 (I use the undated, but later, paperback edition)
- Davies: David Davies,A Brief History of Fighting Ships: Ships of the Line and Napoleonic sea battle 1793-1815, Carroll & Graf, 1996, 2002
- Firth: C. H. Firth,Publications of the Navy Records Society , 1907 (available on Google Books)
- Guttridge: Leonard F. Guttridge,Mutiny: A History of Naval Insurrection, Naval Institute
Press, 1992 (I use the 2002 Berkley edition)
- Herman: Arthur Herman,To Rule the Waves: How the British Navy Shaped the Modern World, 2004 (I use the 2005 Harper Perennial edition)
- Keegan: John Keegan,The Price of Admiralty: The Evolution of Naval Warfare, Penguin, 1988, 1990
- Logan: Logan'sPedlar's Pack; see the Ballad Index bibliography for this book.
- M/D: G. E. Manwaring and Donamy Dobree,The Floating Republic: An Account of the Mutinies at Spithead and the Nore in 1797, 1935 (I use the 2004 Pen & Sword paperback)
- Stokesbury: James L. Stokesbury,Navy & Empire, Morrow, 1983
- Wilson: P. W. Wilson,William Pitt, the Younger, Doubleday Doran, 1930
- Woodman: Richard Woodman,A Brief History of Mutiny, Carroll & Graf, 2005

Last updated in version 4.4
File: BrII117

Poor Pussy

DESCRIPTION: "Pretty little pussy kitten, Frisky, full of fun and frolic, Mortal on the mice and rats;
How I love the old black cat! Yes, I do! Ah, poor pussy! Poor old pussy! sitting so easy Under the stove." Boys attack the cat, sending her running back to her home
Poor Rail Road Boys

DESCRIPTION: "Poor rail road boys ain't got no home, He's here today, tomorrow gone." "I looked at the sun, and the sun was low, I said to the boss man, 'I must go.'" "...give me my time. He clapped his hands and gave me a dime." "One of these... my name'll be called"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (McNeil-SouthernMountainFolksong)
KEYWORDS: railroading work hardtimes nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
McNeil-SouthernMountainFolksong, pp. 160-164, "Roll On, John, Poor Rail Road Boys" (4 texts, 2 tunes, of which at least the last is "Roll On, John"; the others might be "Take This Hammer" or a mixture)
Roud #16845
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Take This Hammer" (lyrics) and references there
NOTES [53 words]: This is one of the great amorphous mass of railroad songs that are almost unclassifiable; McNeil, I think, deliberately set out to offer hard-to-file variants. If you feel like re-classifying all this stuff, be my guess; my classification differs from Roud's, and in this case, I make no claim of being more correct. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: MSMF160

Poor Rosy

DESCRIPTION: "Poor Rosy, poor gal, Rosy broke my poor heart, Heaven shall be my home. Before I stay in Hell one day, Heaven shall be my home." The singer has "hard troubles," and "trials", (he bids farewell to Brother Robert and Sister Lucy and turns to Heaven)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 7, "Poor Rosy" (1 text, 1 tune plus a variant form)
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 199-201, "Poor Rosy" (1 text, probably retouched, 1 tune)
Roud #11856
File: SBoA199

Poor Schnapps

DESCRIPTION: A "dutch" song. Corporal Schnapps, who is perhaps not overly bright, patriotically enlists in the army. Having faced battle, horrid food, and the scorn (and spit) of southern women, he now faces the indignity of having his girl run off with another man

AUTHOR: Henry Clay Work
EARLIEST DATE: 1864 (sheet music published by Root & Cady and by S. Brainard's Sons)
KEYWORDS: humorous foreigner Civilwar battle hardtimes courting infidelity elopement
FOUND IN: US(MW,So)
Poor Shepherds

DESCRIPTION: "Good people all draw near, you quickly shall hear Of a copy of verses composed." Due to floods, the shepherds have no place to go. There are many tasks they must try. Their eighteen pence a day is not enough to maintain a family

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (collected from Matthew Hunt by H. E. D. Hammond)

KEYWORDS: shepherd flood hardtimes work

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-ThePainfulPlow, #14, "Poor Shepherds" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #3323

File: PaPa014

Poor Sinner, A

DESCRIPTION: "Hark, sinner, hark, while I relate, What happened in Kentucky state. A poor young woman lately died; She dropped from all her wealth and pride." Led astray by a young man, she turned ungodly. Dying, she bids farewell; her mother says she will go to hell

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Scarborough)

KEYWORDS: death hell

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 63, "A Poor Sinner" (1 text)
Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, p. 73, (no title) (1 short text)

ST Br3063 (Full)

Roud #7846

CROSS-REFERENCES:

File: Br3063

Poor Smuggler's Boy, The

DESCRIPTION: Singer meets a boy who is mourning his father. The father was a smuggler; caught in a storm, their ship was wrecked and his father drowned. The boy has clung to a plank and been swept ashore. A rich lady hears his complaint and adopts him

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1888 (Ashton)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer, walking the beach on a stormy day, meets a boy who is mourning his father. The father was a smuggler who would, "venture out on the salt sea/For a keg of good brandy from the land of the free" (Holland). Caught in a storm, the ship has been wrecked and his father has drowned, despite the boy's efforts to save him. The boy has clung to a plank and been swept ashore. A rich lady hears his complaint, and adopts him

KEYWORDS: grief crime death drowning storm wreck father orphan

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #140, "The Poor Smuggler's Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Poor Soldier (I)

DESCRIPTION: "All out in the snow they are tonight, Far away from kin and home. God help the ones who fight for the right, And them who are done gone on. Poor soldier, hungry and cold (x2)."
The girl recalls her soldier’s departure and prays he is safe wherever he is

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl)

KEYWORDS: soldier separation nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 132, "Poor Soldier" (1 text,
1 tune)

ST Wa132 (Full)

Roud #5734

RECORDINGS:
Frank Proffitt, "Poor Soldier" (on FProffitt01)

NOTES [76 words]: The Warners claim this is a Civil War song, and so does the tradition in Frank Proffitt's family. They're probably right, but there is no reason why it could not have been sung in any other U.S. war fought in a cold climate.
The musical notes in Warner comment on how irregular the tune and meter are to this piece. It's simple truth; Frank Proffitt didn't really seem to have a tune; more of a sketch which he fleshed out irregularly to fit the words. - RBW

File: Wa132

Poor Strange Girl, The (The Forsaken Girl)

DESCRIPTION: "Willy, O Willy, for your sake alone, I left my own country, and likewise my home...
I am a poor strange girl, and far from my home." Floating lost love lyrics: He made her a promise.
She will leave Kentucky. "Go build me a castle on yon mountain high"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol2)

KEYWORDS: love courting abandonment travel floatingverses

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol2, pp. 69-70, "The Poor Strange Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #7032

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Down in the Valley" ("Go build me a castle" lyric) cf. "Poor Stranger, The (Two Strangers in the Mountains Alone)" ("O X, O X, it's for your sake alone" lyric and others)
cf. "The Lost Girl" (lyrics)
cf. "Charming Beauty Bright" [Laws M3] ("Don't you remember last ...day night" lyric)
cf. "The Sweet Sunny South (I)" [Laws A23] ("Here's adieu to old [somewhere]" lyric)

NOTES [68 words]: Almost every word of this occurs in some other song. But there are so many floating lyrics, from so many places, that it's hard to call it a version of some individual other song. I finally gave up trying to find all the source texts. It's just a jumble -- and so gets its own listing. If I had to file it with one other song, it would probably be "The Poor Stranger (Two Strangers in the Mountains Alone)." - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: BWV2069
 Poor Stranger, The (Two Strangers in the Mountains Alone)

DESCRIPTION: The singer wanders out alone and meets a girl, also alone. Each asks why the other is there. Both have had trouble with lovers at home and so ran away. They settle down to a happy life together.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1814 (broadside, Bodleian Johnson Ballads 365)

KEYWORDS: courting rambling

FOUND IN: US(Ap, SE, So) Ireland Britain(England(South), Scotland(Aber)) Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (11 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #32, p. 2, ("The lads of sweet Ury are roving young blades") (1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan4 831, "I Am a Poor Stranger" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, p. 487, "Poor Stranger a Thousand Miles from Home" (1 text, a short item which seems to combine "The Poor Stranger," "Farewell, Sweet Mary," and perhaps some floating items)
Randolph 59, "Two Strangers in the Mountains Alone" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 107, "A Poor Stranger Far from Home" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 138, "The Happy Stranger" (1 fragment)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 157, "The Rebel Soldier, or The Poor Stranger" (7 texts, 7 tunes, but only "A" and probably "F" are this song; the rest are "The Rebel Soldier")
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 106-107, "It Was a Young Man" (1 text fragment, 1 tune)
Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi 95, "A Stranger Far From Home" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: W. Christie, editor, Traditional Ballad Airs (Edinburgh, 1876 (downloadable pdf by University of Edinburgh, 2007)), Vol II, pp. 220-221, "The Poor Stranger" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST R059 (Partial)

Roud #272

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 365, "The Happy Stranger" ("As I was walking one morning in spring"), T. Evans (London), 1790-1813; also Firth c.26(56), Johnson Ballads 2505, "The Happy Stranger"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Lost Girl"
cf. "The Rebel Soldier" (meter, floating lyrics)
cf. "She Has My Heart Enclosed" (tune, per Greig/Duncan4)
cf. "The Poor Strange Girl (The Forsaken Girl)" (lyrics)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Poor Stranger
Sweet Europe
The Lads o' Sweet Newry

NOTES [580 words]: A common verse in this song is "The young men of Manory/Ury/Newry/..., they're all roving blades, They take great delight in courting fair maids; They'll hug them and kiss them and call them their own, And perhaps their own darling is moaning at home." Starting with Greig's fragment -- which is only that verse -- Steve Gardham made the connection for me to "The Poor Stranger" as well as to Christie and the broadside ballads. He goes on to note that "17thc contributors include 'The Wandering Maiden' in Pepys, and 'Shrowsbury for me' in Roxburgh and Pepys." In later notes he pointed out that Shrowsbury does not have that verse but is an ancestor of "Boys of Kilkenny," etc.

From what I've seen, "Shrowsbury For Me" does not belong here though it includes the verse "The young men of Shrowsbury are jovial blades, When they are in company with pretty maids. They court them completely with complements free, Then every man to his mind, Shrowsbury for me." I have added an entry to the Index for that song.

"The Wandring Maiden" seems a contributor to the theme and some lines, but not to "... call you his own ... waiting at home." See Joseph Woodfall Ebsworth, editor, The Bagford Ballads: Illustrating the Last Years of the Stuarts (Hertford, 1878 ("Digitized by Google")), Second Division, pp. 572-575, "The Wandring Maiden" or "True Love at Length United," dated "certainly, before 1670."

Digital Tradition, in a thread on "The Cuckoo and The Fourth Day of July" has a version of "The Cuckoo" with the lines "He'll hug you and kiss you, And call you his own, Perhaps his other darlin'
Is a-waitin' at home." Tim Jenkins writes that "Lomax's The Folk Songs of North America has the identical verse for The Cuckoo 'as sung by Jean Ritchie."

For another [connection] between "The Cuckoo" and the cluster of songs including "The Poor Stranger," "The Wandring Maiden," etc. see "The Young Man's Lamentation" and follow Steve Gardham's discussion pointed to there.

It is very easy for the happy ending to be lost. After the man asks her to marry, the woman asks "where is your country... what's the misfortune you do undergo That cause you to wander so far from your home And made us meet strangers in this desert alone?" He says he is from Newry -- or some place name that sounds like Newry -- and she says she knows all about the roving blades from that infamous place and she goes into the rant of our first note for this song about his having another sweetheart at home. He pleads innocent -- "I never was married" -- and she agrees to marry him. Sometimes his reply is lost, there is no happy ending, and she complains of lovers' misfortune in being misled as usual. For example, the Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed fragment follows "perhaps his old sweetheart was living at home" with the "Wagoner's Lad" floater, "hard is the fortune of all womankind...." See the Ellen Webb text for another example.

Fred McCormick answered my query about the possible source of the Owens fragment and pointed me to "The Poor Stranger" with his own fragment from "the Boys of Cockaigny, which was popular on the English side of the pond some years ago":

The boys of Cockaigny are stout roving blades,
No doubt they'll go roving with some other young maids.
They will kiss them and caress them and call them their own
While perhaps their true sweethearts lie weeping alone
Not to be confused with Norma Waterson's "The Chaps of Cockaigny," which is a version of "The Boys of Kilkenny." - BS

Last updated in version 6.0

Poor Thing

DESCRIPTION: "A maid all alone in a poor house did dwell.... Her hair was red and her age was nineteen -- Poor thing!" Her swain asks, "Will you fly by the light of yon star? For I am the i of the you that I are." Her father chases the man, who "flew up the flue."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi)
KEYWORDS: love courting nonsense wordplay
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 88, p. 215, "Poor Thing" (1 text)
Roud #4479
File: Hud088

Poor Tom

DESCRIPTION: Poor Peg knocks at the door and wants a shroud for poor Tom. "What shall us do?" "We'll take this cup and drink him up ... Poor Tom is dead and gone Boom (drink) Boom (drink)"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1679-1683 (according to Nicholson)
KEYWORDS: death mourning drink dialog nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,South),Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople 39, "A Harvest Song" (2 texts)
ADDITIONAL: Edward W.B. Nicholson, editor, Golspie: Contributions to its Folklore (London, 1897 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 201-202, 345-348, "Poor Tom" (2 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1563
File: ReSh039
Poor Wee Jockie Clarke
DESCRIPTION: Jockie Clarke sells newspapers and goes ragged; his father is a drinker and a tyrant. Jockie asks his mother to make him a jacket from his father's old coat. Jockie tells his mother that he looks uncommon neat since she has made him up the jacket.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1953 (MacColl)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Jockie Clarke sells newspapers and goes ragged; his father is a drinker, a tyrant to his wife and neglectful to his children. Jockie asks his mother to make him a jacket from his father's old coat; she does and it's a beauty, keeping him warm and holding plenty of potatoes in the pockets. Jockie tells his mother, "You'd think I'd both mother, father, and a home," and that he looks uncommon neat since she has made him up the jacket.
KEYWORDS: poverty pride request clothes commerce work father mother worker
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber),England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 236, "Poor Wee Jockie Clarke" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2135
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Faither's Old Coat
Fairther's Old Coat
File: K236

Poor Widow
DESCRIPTION: Singing game: "Here's a poor widow, she (lives/ies) her lone... She wants a man and cannæ get none." The widow or her daughter go seek a husband, "She may go round and choose her own"; the courting may or may not be successful.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1898 (Gomme)
KEYWORDS: play party courting
FOUND IN: Ireland Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H48f, p. 11, "Here's a Poor Widow" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST HHH048f (Full)
Roud #5105
File: HHH048f

Poor Working Girl, The
DESCRIPTION: "The poor working girl, may heaven protect her, She has such an awf'ly hard time, The rich man's daughter goes haughtily by, My God! Do you wonder at crime?" ("Her man drives his new model T And drinks rotten hooch till he's blind.")
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)
KEYWORDS: work poverty hardtimes crime technology
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 195, "The Poor Working Girl" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, p. 151, "The Poor Working Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
Johnson-BawdyBalladsAndLustyLyrics, p. 18, "The Poor Working Girl" (1 text)
Roud #4271
NOTES [17 words]: Not to be confused with the early twentieth century pop tune "Heaven Will Protect the Working Girl" - RBW
File: San195

Poor, But a Gentleman Still DESCRIPTION: "Don't think by my dress that I come here to beg, Though the sharp pains of hunger I feel; The cup of misfortune I've drained to the dregs, Though poor, I'm a gentleman still."
The singer describes how he became poor, pointing out that he is still honest

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1879 (stage performance, per Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills)
KEYWORDS: poverty
FOUND IN: US(MA,SE)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 103, "Poor, But a Gentleman Still" (1 text, 1
tune)
Randolph 829, "A Gentleman Still" (1 text) Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains, pp. 84-85, "I'm Poor But a Gentleman Still" (1 text, 1
tune)
Gilbert-LostChords, pp. 151-152, "Poor, but a Gentleman Still" (1 text)
ST FSC103 (Partial)
Roud #7337
File: FSC103

Pop Goes the Weasel

DESCRIPTION: Words can be anything, as long as they have the phrase "Pop goes the weasel." The 1853 text talks of a weasel in a henhouse, temperance issues, and relations between Uncle Sam and John Bull

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1853 (sheet music published by Berry & Gordon of New York)
KEYWORDS: animal technology nonballad nonsense humorous political FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,NE,SE,So)
REFERENCES (18 citations):
Wolford-ThePlayPartyInIndiana, pp. 83-84=Wolford/Richmond/Tillson-PlayPartyInIndiana, pp. 231-
232, "Pop Goes the Weasel" (1 text, 1 tune)
Byington/Goldstein-TwoPennyBallads, pp. 113-114, "Pop Goes the Weasel" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph 556, "Pop Goes the Weasel" (2 texts, 1 tune) Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 408-409, "Pop Goes the Weasel" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 556A)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 93, "Pop Goes the Weasel" (1 fragment) Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 107-108, "Pop! Goes the Weasel" (1 tune plus dance instructions) Huntington-FolksongsFromMarthasVineyard, pp. 60-61, "Pop Goes the Weasel" (1 text, 1 tune, probably for dancing, with several imported verses) Jackson-PopularSongsOfNineteenthCenturyAmerica, pp. 176-179, "Pop Goes de Weasel" (1 text, 1 verse)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #872, p. 325, "(Up and down the city road)"
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 47, "Pop Goes the Weasel" (4 texts, 1 tune)
Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 108, "(Round about the porridge pot)" (1 text)
Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty, p. 155, "Pop Goes the Weasel" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 158, "Pop Goes the Weasel" (1 text)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 107, "Pop Goes the Weasel" (1 text)
Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, p. 40, "Pop Goes the Weasel" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolkSingersWordbook, p. 34, "Pop Goes The Weasel" (1 text)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, pp. 440-441+, "Pop Goes the Weasel"
DT, WEASLPOP* POPWEAS2*

ST R556 (Full)
Roud #5249

BROADSIDES:
Murray, Mu23-y1:060, "Pop Goes the Weasel," James Lindsay (Glasgow), 19C, possibly a parody on another version of the piece
NLScotland, L.C.178.A.2(032), "Pop Goes the Weasel", James Lindsay (Glasgow), 1852-1859
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "A Ripping Trip" (tune)
Popeye the Sailor Man

DESCRIPTION: "I'm Popeye the sailor man, full stop, I live in a caravan, ..." He opens a door and falls through the floor, or when he goes swimmin' he kisses the women, or slept with Queen Mary, or slept with his granny and tickled 'er fanny ....

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)

KEYWORDS: playparty sailor

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,North))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 146, "Popeye the Sailor Man" (4 texts, 1 tune)

NOTES [120 words]: Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame: "Recordings in the 1980s show that the punctuation endings are going out of favor, and the song is now often ornamented only by the ending 'Too too' or 'Poo poop!', an echo of the tugboat whistle in the original cartoon song written by Sammy Lerner in 1932."

Lerner's lyrics began "I'm Popeye the Sailor Man, I'm Popeye the Sailor Man, I'm strong to the finish 'cause I eats me spinach I'm Popeye the Sailor Man." The "toot, toot!" was a sound effect (source: "Popeye the Sailor Man" on the National Institute of Health, Department of Health & Human Services (NIH) Kids' Pages site).

I'm sure Popeye lived in "a garbage can" and had no punctuation in Brooklyn in the 1940s, just as in Jemie. - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: OpGa146

Popular Gag Song

DESCRIPTION: "I was born in Jersey City In Texas way down south And that is just the reason why My voice is in my mouth." Assorted verses of contradiction, exaggeration, tautology, and nonsense, e.g. "There was people dying lately Who had never died before."

AUTHOR: unknown
Popular Wobbly, The

DESCRIPTION: "I'm as mild-mannered man as can be, And I've never done no harm that I can see..." but the singer ends up in jail, where "they go wild, simply wilder over me." They "go wild" because he is a union man; he suffers much in prison

AUTHOR: Words: T-Bone Slim
EARLIEST DATE: Early 1950s (recording - Pete Seeger)
KEYWORDS: IWW prison
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 70, "The Popular Wobbly" (1 text)
DT, POPWOBB*
Roud #9822
RECORDINGS:
Pete Seeger, "The Popular Wobbly" (on PeteSeeger05)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "They Go Wild, Simply Wild Over Me" (tune)
NOTES [110 words]: The Industrial Workers of the World (IWW or "Wobblies") was a radical syndicalist labor union. Founded in the late 1800s, it fought for the 8-hour day and for "One Big Union" rather than separate unions in various crafts or industries. It achieved its greatest successes in the American Northwest, particularly in the lumber trades (although it also fought hard in the textile-workers' strike in Lowell, Mass.) and inspired many songs and poems that have entered folk tradition. While membership has declined in recent decades, the union is still active and still radical.
"They Go Wild, Simply Wild Over Me" was a popular vaudeville song of the early 1900s. - PJS

File: FSWB070

Pork in the Cupboard

DESCRIPTION: "Oh there's pork in the cupboard, there's beef on the shelf If no one don't eat it I'll eat it myself." The rest is all "chin music."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: floatingverses nonballad food
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peacock, p. 91, "Pork in the Cupboard" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9956
RECORDINGS:
Mrs. Nellie Musseau, "Pork in the Cupboard" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Bridle and Saddle" (lyrics)
NOTES [127 words]: Most of Peacock's version is "chin music". Specifically, a text verse is "La da diddle la diddle la diddle dum da...." Peacock explains, "'Chin' or 'mouth' music is a vocal imitation of instrumental music and is used for dancing when a fiddle or accordion is not handy. Some singers ... become so proficient that they are often called upon even when instruments are available."

Newfoundland "chin music" is like, and serves the same purpose, as Irish "lilting" and Traveller "tuning." See, for example, Hall, notes to Voice11. - BS
This is evidently a local version of "Bridle and Saddle" or one of its equivalents. Ideally, we'd have a mechanism for tracking these floating elements. But we don't, and this version is localized enough to get its own entry. - RBW
Pork, Beans and Hard Tack

DESCRIPTION: "Our volunteers are soldiers bold, so say the people all... They leave their homes on starving pay to take the nitchies' (Indians') life." Fed poor rations, they are sent all around Canada by train, boat, and foot

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1887

KEYWORDS: soldier hardtimes Canada

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1885 - Second Metis uprising, which collapsed despite the failure of Canadian troops to defeat the enemy

FOUND IN: Canada

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong, pp. 127-129, "Pork, Beans and Hard Tack" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #4516

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Riel's Song" and references there (subject)

NOTES [88 words]: For the historical background to the Metis uprisings, see "Riel's Song." This song (which appeared in the University of Toronto Songbook only two years after the revolt) accurately describes the fate of the soldiers sent to pursue Riel. Sent west by rail, the troops had to finish their trek by boat and foot, with rations even worse than they enjoyed on the train. Having reached Metis country, they had great difficulty finding the enemy, and spent time as laborers. Then they were sent back, primarily by boat, to Winnipeg. - RBW

File: FMB127

Porter Rockwell

DESCRIPTION: "Have you heard of Porter Rockwell? He's the Mormon Trigger-right. They say he hunts for horse thieves When then the moon is shining bright. So if you steal a Mormon cow... Get the drop on Porter Rockwell Before he gets the drop on you."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah)

KEYWORDS: crime punishment theft

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1878 - Death of Orrin Porter Rockwell

FOUND IN: US(Ro)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #229, "Porter Rockwell" (1 short text)

Roud #10879

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Old Port Rockwell" (subject of Orrin Porter Rockwell)

NOTES [22 words]: For background on Orrin Porter Rockwell, a Mormon fanatic in just about every sense possible, see the notes to "Old Port Rockwell." - RBW

Last updated in version 3.8

File: Hubb229

Portlaire

DESCRIPTION: Irish Gaelic: The singer stops in Waterford for drinks and at "the full house of women there." He is visited by four women and will take a girl with him to Carrick in the morning.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (IRClancyMakem01)

KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage drink sex

FOUND IN:
Portland County Jail

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a stranger to your city, My name is Paddy Flynn. I got drunk the other night; The coppers pulled me in. Had no one to... go my bail. They locked me up for ninety days In the Portland County Jail." The song describes the hard cases in prison

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)
KEYWORDS: prison hardtimes
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 214-215, "Portland County Jail" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, p. 641, "Portland County Jail" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 69, "Portland County Jail" (1 text)
DT, PORTJAIL*
Roud #9858
RECORDINGS:
Art Thieme, "Portland County Jail" (on Thieme04)

Portmore

DESCRIPTION: "The lang woods o' Derry are ill to gae through." "My heart's in the Highlands wherever I go." He thinks of the valiant in Portmore: "O bonny Portmore, ye shine where you charm... When I look from you, my heart it is sore."

AUTHOR: Donald Cameron (source: Buchan)
EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (Buchan)
KEYWORDS: homesickness Ireland Scotland nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #32, p. 2, "Portmore" or "My Heart's in the Highlands" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Peter Buchan, Ancient Ballads and Songs of the North of Scotland (Edinburgh, 1875 (reprint of 1828 edition)), Vol II, pp. 150-151, 313, "Portmore"
The Illustrated Book of Scottish Songs from the Sixteenth to the Nineteenth Century, (London, 1854 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 297, "Portmore" [this is an acknowledged reprint, with some punctuation differences, of Buchan’s text and note]
W. Christie, editor, Traditional Ballad Airs (Edinburgh, 1881 (downloadable pdf by University of Edinburgh, 2007)), Vol II, pp. 180-181, "Portmore" or "My Heart's in the Hielans"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Strong Walls of Derry" (tune, per Christie)
cf. "Bonny Portmore" (derivative texts) and references there
NOTES [138 words]: Buchan: "It is well known to most poetical readers with how little success Burns endeavoured to graft upon this stock a twig of his own rearing ["My Heart's in the Highlands"]... The whole is now, for the first time, given complete from the recitation of a very old person."
See W. Christie, editor, Traditional Ballad Airs (Edinburgh, 1876 (downloadable pdf by University of Edinburgh, 2007)). Vol I, pp. 262-263, "Bell Gordon of Portmore," in which the singer leaves Bell Gordon, with no word about the Highlands. It includes the lines "Oh, bonny Portmore, ye delight me wi' charms! The more I look to you the more my heart warms! But when I look from you, my heart it is sore, To part wi' Bell Gordon and bonny Portmore." Christie says this was long sung in Buchan and is his mother's text augmented by two other "copies." - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
Porto Rico [Puerto Rico]

DESCRIPTION: Fragment: "Must I go to Porto Rico/Must I sail the dark blue sea?/Must I fight for you, my darling/Until death shall set me free?"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Cecil Sharp collection)

KEYWORDS: love travel fight war battle death lover soldier nonballad

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

- 1898: Spanish-American War, in which the U. S. captures Puerto Rico and other territories from Spain

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

- Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 249, "Porto Rico" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

Roud #3659

NOTES [55 words]: Barely even a fragment, but I include it on the chance it may turn out to be part of a full song that we find some day. - PJS

Roud lumps this with a fragment in Brown, which mentions Virginia rather than Puerto Rico, and which otherwise looked to me like "East Virginia (Dark Hollow)." Which just shows how mysterious the thing is.

File: ShAp249

---

Portrush Fishing Disaster (I), The

DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls going to sea in fine weather. As the ship sails home, a storm blows up. The singer asks that the sailors' names not be named, bids farewell to home, and tells his friends they will meet on "yonder shore"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: death ship disaster wreck storm

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

- Feb. 24, 1826 - The Portrush Disaster

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):

- Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H27b, p. 105, "The Portrush Fishing Disaster (I)" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #9047

File: HHH027b

---

Portrush Fishing Disaster (II), The

DESCRIPTION: The singer calls listeners to hear of four sailors who died at Portrush. The singer names the four. He notes that they died despite their skill; the wind was too strong. The singer hopes that the dead and their families will meet in heaven

AUTHOR: Daniel McIlreavy?

EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: death ship disaster wreck storm

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

- Feb. 24, 1826 - The Portrush Disaster

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):

- Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H27c, p. 105-106, "The Portrush Fishing Disaster (II)" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #9044

File: HHH027c

---

Ports are Open, The

DESCRIPTION: Closed ports ruined trade. Out of work tradesmen were wrecking steam looms, and could not pay high food prices. A royal "proclamation ... [will] admit foreign grain to our..."
markets. "Farmers quite distracted they'll go" but tradesmen will find jobs.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1815 (according to Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong)

KEYWORDS: war commerce farming nonballad political

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation): Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong 36, "The Ports are Open" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The World It May Wag" (tune)

NOTES [894 words]: The song refers to the cause of closed ports as a "Corporation Bill" which "some hundreds did kill While others it kept in high station It shut up our ports against peas beans and oats And it ruined the trade of our nation." The end of the policy is a royal proclamation that "the ports will stand open Till the twenty-fourth of December So parliament then when they do meet again Hope that too the poor will remember."

Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong: "This song was written in 1815 after the defeat of Napoleon Bonaparte at the battle of Waterloo. During the war between England and France the Government imposed severe restrictions on the import of cereals into British ports -- 'It shut up our ports against peas, beans and oats'. The price of corn was high.... Farmers invested capital in developing inferior land...; yields increased and profits rose accordingly, but the ending of the war was to change all that. British ports were once more opened and the effect on home prices was dramatic.... The song celebrates the opening of the ports. Farmers, of course, were angry.... For ordinary people, however it was a very optimistic period...."

This forecast of things to come in the near future presents a different picture of the effect of war on the economy than we see later in "The Grand Conversation Under the Rose" ("Come stir up the wars, and our trade will be flourishing") in the light of longer range harsh reality; also see the notes to "Ye Sons of Old Ireland."

The Jevons Index numbers for cereal prices from 1807 to 1818 illustrate the problem. The base year (index=100) is 1782: 1807 (173), 1808 (201), 1809 (211), 1810 (203), 1811 (182), 1812 (272), 1813 (256), 1814 (165), 1815 (137), 1816 (148), 1817 (198), 1818 (209). (source: British Financial Experience 1790-1830 by Norman J Silberling in The Review of Economics and Statistics, October 1919, Vol 1 No 4, Table 2, p. 283). In 1815 a corn law was passed allowing no cereal imports unless the domestic price reached a floor of 80s for 28 lbs (source: The Corn Laws: the Formation of Popular Economics in Britain edited by Alon Kadish, (London, 1996), Vol 1, p. xi).

The general problem of overplanting is behind the broadside Bodleian, Harding B 16(59c), "The Corn-Factor's Dream," H. Watson (Newcastle), 1817, which begins

A Corn factor sly, as the story is told,

Had a great stock of grain in his lofts still unsold

When harvest came on, which adverse to his plan,

Seem'd inclin'd to turn out well and ruin the poor man. - BS

This is in any case a strange view of trade during the Napoleonic Wars. It is certainly true that Britain had a bad tendency to mess with Irish trade -- e.g. building up the linen industry and then destroying it.

But the real problem in the early nineteenth century was the war with France. According to GodechotEtAl, p. 124, the Berlin Decree was issued on November 21, 1806. The purpose of this, according to Herold, p. 179, was to defeat Britain by economic blockade.

GodechotEtAl, pp. 126-127: "After the peace of Tilsit, and for the fourth time since 1793, France and England stood alone as adversaries.... Napoleon could no longer contemplate an invasion of England [due to Trafalgar]. Ever since the two powers became active foes, each had brandished the usual economic arm. England declared the coast of France in a state of blockade, and France renewed her prohibition against the importation of British goods, a practice that had been decreed as early as 1793 under the National Convention. At the beginning, these measures had not been very effective. However, little by little, war by blockade was perfected.

"In France for more than a century the premise had been accepted that the power of Great Britain, based upon its economic organization, was fragile. French economists... considered her system of credit abnormal. Her industry could prosper only by virtue of exportation to Europe. It ought, therefore, to be relatively easy to break down the system by excluding her exports from foreign markets; Great Britain would then be ruined and would not be slow to capitulate."

It was not the last time an enemy tried to strangle Britain, but it proved unfortunate because the French could only ban shipments to Britain -- whereas Britain could physically "stop" shipments along the coast using her navy. It also passed the Orders in Council, which barred neutrals from trading to France unless they sent their goods through Britain (which, along with impressment, was one of the leading causes of the War of 1812; see Berton, p. 45). There was a great deal of smuggling, and many of the countries of Europe found their own trade messed up (in this pre-railroad period, large shipments generally went by water or not at all). Napoleon’s Continental System would eventually collapse. But, before it did, it caused much hardship and poverty in Britain.

A second thing much restricting British trade was the shortage of sailors. To keep the Royal Navy up to strength, the press gangs were constantly active, grabbing sailors wherever they could find them (this would eventually be the primary cause of the War of 1812 with the United States). Even had the trade been possible, there were not enough crews to supply all the merchant ships. If there were no ships in Ireland, it was less because of British regulations than because of Napoleon. - RBW

Bibliography

Possim Sits on 'Simmon Tree, De

DESCRIPTION: "De possim sits on 'simmon tree And feeds himself quite fat, Put Manly on de stump for me, I'm dog he'll soon leave dat." "I now must go an' pick my toof, It akes so very bad, but since Reid's our Governor forsooth, I feels my pain so bad."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1850 (North Carolina Gazette)
KEYWORDS: animal political
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 164, "De Possim Sits on 'Simmon Tree" (1 text)
NOTES [75 words]: There is no reason to think this is a traditional song; it seems to have been a political piece from the 1850 North Carolina gubernatorial election, in which Democrat David Settle Reid (1813-1891) succeeded Charles Manley. If there was a significant issue in this campaign, I have been unable to discover it.
It does appear that Manley was a rather unimportant figure, compared to the distinguished Reid, who was congressman, governor, and Senator. - RBW

Possum Up a Gum Stump

DESCRIPTION: "Possum up a gum stump, Cooney in a holler, Little gal at our house, Fat as she can waller." The first two lines are characteristic (though the animals can vary); the last two lines can seemingly be anything.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: nonballad animal
FOUND IN: US(Ap,So)
REFERENCES (9 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 415, "Lynchburg Town" (3 texts plus 2 fragments, 2 excerpts, and mention of 2 more, all with the "Lynchburg Town" chorus, but "A" and "B" have verses from "Raccoon" and "Possum Up a Gum Stump and "D" and "E" are partly "If I Had a Scolding Wife" ("Lucy Long (I)")); only "C" seems to be truly "Lynchburg Town") Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 415, "Lynchburg Town" (4 tunes plus text excerpts, corresponding to "A," "B," "E," and a "J" version that apparently is not cited in Post-Rail Song
DESCRIPTION: "Put 'em up solid, they won't come down! Hey, ma laddie, they won't come down!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)
KEYWORDS: work nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 138, "Post-Rail Song" (1 short text, 1 tune)
File: San138

Pot Wrassler, The
DESCRIPTION: The camp cook tells cowboys he spent years riding the range but "now I'm a-wrassling the pots for a change." He can make sourdough and sort the big rocks out of the beans, and doesn't wipe the frying-pan on his jeans. He's old now and prefers this life
AUTHOR: Curley Fletcher
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Curley Fletcher, "Songs of the Sage")
LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer, a camp cook, tells cowboys he has put in a lot of years riding the range but "now I'm a-wrassling the pots for a change." He doesn't claim to be Delmonico, but he can make sourdough and sort the big rocks out of the beans, and doesn't wipe the frying-pan on his jeans. He's old and stiff now and prefers staying by the fire to riding and getting thrown KEYWORDS: age disability work food nonballad cook worker
FOUND IN: US(Re)
RECORDINGS:
Harry Jackson, "The Pot Wrassler" (on HJackson1)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Punchin' the Dough" (theme)
NOTES [68 words]: The cook on a cattle run was usually an old cowboy who could no longer do the work. It's hardly surprising that he looked on the cowboys as "kids" -- nor that he used his control over the chuck to keep the cowboys in line.
"Delmonico" is Lorenzo Delmonico (1813-1881), a Swiss immigrant who came to the United States in 1832 and largely established the upscale restaurant as a business form in America. - RBW
File: RcPotWra
Pot'ead Song, The
DESCRIPTION: "It was August the tenth, nineteen fifty-five, The men gathered together like bees in the hive" to harvest the "pot'eads" (whales) in Trinity Bay. Their techniques are described, and the whalers themselves, including author Woodman, short and with a hump
AUTHOR: Aubrey John Woodman (source: Cox-FolkMusicInANewfoundlandOutport)
EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Cox-FolkMusicInANewfoundlandOutport)
KEYWORDS: whaler moniker
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cox-FolkMusicInANewfoundlandOutport, pp. 51-53, "The Pot'ead Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [82 words]: According to StoryKirwinWiddowson, p. 389, a "pot-head" is a "Northern pilot whale (Globicephala melaena)" -- the whale known as "blackfish" in the United States. The term was in use from 1863. Young, p. 137, reports that "Up until 1972 potheads were hunted in Newfoundland and Labrador for their meat, which was mostly exported to fur farms. The most common method of taking potheads was to drive them ashore in groups. Almost always found in groups, potheads are very playful and vocal." - RBW

Bibliography

• Young: Ron Young, Dictionary of Newfoundland and Labrador, Downhome Publishing Inc

Potato Bug, The
DESCRIPTION: "It's just past ten years ... Since we heard of that plague of a fly." Every morning "I'll shake every stalk" and the bugs fall into his pan. As quickly as he catches them "they'll be over the sides" and escape. He should "carry a pan of hot coals"
AUTHOR: Lawrence Doyle
EARLIEST DATE: 1969 (Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland)
KEYWORDS: farming ordeal nonballad bug hardtimes
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 202-203, 253, "The Potato Bug" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13994
NOTES [22 words]: Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland: "[The potato bug] began arriving on the Island in significant numbers in the late 1880s." - BS

Potato, The
DESCRIPTION: "We have a loyal little friend, the potato," brought by Sir Walter Raleigh. Though there are varieties with fancy names, all are good. The singer hopes "our planters will plant more ... They are a vital food today in which we all must share"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)
KEYWORDS: food Ireland nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 81, "The Potato" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES: cf. "The Potato" (theme)
NOTES [177 words]: Was this song written before or after 1845? The answer would be interesting. The legend that Sir Walter Raleigh brought the potato to Europe is just that: Legend. There is no doubt that the plant came originally from South America, but no one knows who transported it across the Atlantic.
The dependence of Ireland on the potato was of course not voluntary. With the English having subdivided the Catholic lands into areas too small for proper farming, and with the rent laws making land improvements impossible (if a Catholic improved the land, his rent went up), there was no choice but to grow potatoes; it was the only food productive enough to support a family on the tiny plots the Irish were allowed.

Of course, potatoes needed little help from the growers, so the English accused the Irish of laziness -- but they had little choice. Especially with the population so high; even on improved land, it would have been hard to support the people of Ireland in the 1840s without the potato. All that, of course, changed with the Great Hunger in the 1840s. - RBW

File: OLcM081

Potterton

DESCRIPTION: There's no watch or clock needed at Potterton: "It was porridge time, and sowen time, And -- Come, lads, yoke." "Wi' cauld kail and tatties Ye feed us like a pig; While ye drink tay and toddy, And hurl [drive] in yer gig"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: farming work food ordeal nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan3 392, "Potterton" (2 texts)
Roud #5924
NOTES [19 words]: Greig/Duncan3 385 quoting Robertson, Song Notes: .. a protest of servants against the treatment they got." - BS
Last updated in version 2.4
File: GdD3392

Poulduff Fishermen, The

DESCRIPTION: On July 11 "a maid divine in tears approached me." Three sons had been drowned when their boat struck the wrecked Perseverance and sank. Some were rescued by "James Fitzsimmons and ... his worthy crew." The drowned men are named.

AUTHOR: Mogue Doyle
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast)
KEYWORDS: drowning sea ship storm wreck fishing
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
July 1, 1880 - "Poulduff fishermen were lost ... when their craft struck the wreck of the Perseverance" (source: Bourke in _Shipwrecks of the Irish Coast_ v1, p. 52)
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast, pp. 18-20, "The Poulduff Fishermen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #20529
NOTES [9 words]: Poulduff is on the northeast coast of County Wexford. - BS
Last updated in version 5.0
File: Ran018

Poulshone Fishermen, The

DESCRIPTION: A maid reports the disaster: April 3, 1863, at Courtown Harbour, four Poulshone boys drown "when a sudden squall capsized their yawl." Redmond and Kelly are rescued by "young Clancy and his crew" but Earle and Leary are lost.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast)
KEYWORDS: drowning sea ship storm wreck fishing
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Pound of Tow, The

DESCRIPTION: "A single man is free from strife." Before he and his wife married she "could do all kinds of country work" including spinning a pound of tow every night. Now she won't spin and spends on fashion instead and pawns his clothes to support her pride.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1841 (broadside, Bodleian 2806 c.18(250))

KEYWORDS: marriage clothes husband wife money

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1301, "The Weary Pun' o Tow" (3 texts, 2 tunes)

Roud #435

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.18(250), "The Pound of Tow" ("Come all ye jolly batchelors that would married be"), J. Jennings (London), 1790-1840

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "She's Aye Tease, Teasin'" (theme: the wife who won't spin) and references there

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Come All Ye Jovial Bachelors

NOTES [35 words]: Greig/Duncan7: ".. received by Mrs Harper from a sister of her father's, Mrs Jaffray, Mintlaw. Mrs Jaffrays mother (Mrs Harper's grandmother) had learnt it when a girl at Midmar: she was born about 1800." - BS

Last updated in version 5.1

File: GrD71301

Pounds, Shillings, and Pence

DESCRIPTION: "Pounds, shillings, and pence, The monkey jumped the fence. He went so high, he reached the sky, Pounds, shillings, and pence."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)

KEYWORDS: play party animal

FOUND IN: New Zealand

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 101, "(pounds, shillings and pence)" (1 text)

Roud #22189

File: SuSm101B

Poupore's Shanty Crew

DESCRIPTION: Describing life at the lumber camp of Tom Poupore "on the twenty-eighth of October in 1884," The crew builds a shanty. They celebrate the cook. The leaders of the team, and some of the members, are named. The singer concludes with a toast to the crew

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1966 (Fowke)

KEYWORDS: logger lumbering work

FOUND IN: Canada(Que)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fowke-LumberingSongsFromTheNorthernWoods #9, "Poupore's Shanty Crew" (1 text, tune referenced)

ST FowL09 (Partial)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
Poverty Knock

DESCRIPTION: "Poverty, poverty knock! Me loom is a-sayin' all day... Gaffer's too skinny to pay." "Up ev'ry morning at five, I wonder that we keep alive." The weavers are poorly paid and in pain. They get no help when injured. His daughter Lizzie is being courted

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (collected from Tom Daniel, according to Raven)
KEYWORDS: work hardtimes injury weaving courting family
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Jon Raven, _The Urban and Industrial Songs of the Black Country and Birmingham_, Broadside, 1977, pp. 88-89, "Poverty Knock" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #3491

File: JRVI125

Powder Monkey, The (Soon We'll Be in England Town)

DESCRIPTION: Jim was powder monkey killed on board Victory. In '98 "we chased the foe right into Bourky Bay" and destroyed their flag ship Orient. Jim was killed by musket "as the fight was just on won." He asks the crew "Give a kiss to dear old mother."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Creighton-NovaScotia); 19C (broadside, Bodleian LOCsinging as111260)
KEYWORDS: battle navy death sea ship mother

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Aug 1, 1798 - Nelson defeats the French in Aboukir Bay, Egypt

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 57, "Chanty Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 148, "The Powder Monkey" (1 text, 1 tune-chorus only)
Greig/Duncan1 144, "The Battle of Aboukir Bay" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST CrNS057 (Full)
Roud #1799

BROADSIDES:
LOCsinging, as111260, "The Powder Monkey," unknown, 19C

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Heiland Laddie" (similar chorus)

NOTES [157 words]: Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia has a verse and chorus as a chanty.
The "powder monkey" job could be handled by women and boys "whose task it was to pass gunpowder up from the magazine to the gunners" (see source for Aboukir Bay, below)
HMS Victory, while commissioned in 1778, was not in service in 1798. Nelson's [service in] Victory began in 1803 and continued until his death at Trafalgar in 1805 (Source: HMS Victory site) - BS
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas calls this a "shore sea-song" possibly from the music-hall, believes that it dates from the 1840s, and that it bears some relationship to "Donkey Riding." - SL

Last updated in version 2.4

File: CrNS057

Powder River (I - Lazy River)

DESCRIPTION: "Last time on that lazy old river... I met a girl who was more like heaven And her smile will last forevermore." He courts her and plans to take her away from the river, but a "spirit of the water" struck back; he mourns her amid the ruins of the flood

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1966

KEYWORDS: love courting river disaster flood death grief

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 61, "Powder River" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11076

NOTES [62 words]: The name of the river of this song is explicitly "Powder River," not "The Powder River"; the local custom is that you don't use an article before the name, ever. (See Helena Huntington Smith, The War On Powder River, University of Nebraska Press, 1966, p. 1). According to Smith, p. 9, the first big cattle drive on Powder River was organized by Moreton Frewen in 1879. - RBW

File: FCW061

Powder River Jack

DESCRIPTION: A description of Powder River Jack Lee, the cowboy singer, and his wife Kitty Lee. Jack was "not a boozer, and he never cared for cards," and he "loved his pretty Kitty" -- but "the old Sky Boss was needin' One more top hand," and Jack is killed

AUTHOR: "Colorado Bill"

EARLIEST DATE: 1946 ("Hoofs and Horns" magazine)

KEYWORDS: death cowboy recitation

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1946 - Death of Powder River Jack Lee in a car accident

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 38, "Powder River Jack" (1 text)

File: 0hr038

Powder River, Let 'Er Buck

DESCRIPTION: "Powder river, let 'er buck, A surgin' mass of cattle, Roundup wagons full of chuck, Horns and hooves a-rattle...." A description of the cows, horses, and cowboys to be met during a cattle drive.

AUTHOR: Powder River Jack Lee?

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (recording, Powder River Jack & Kitty Lee)

KEYWORDS: cowboy horse work travel nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 40, "Powder River, Let 'er Buck" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Powder River Jack and Kitty Lee's _Songs of the Range: Cowboy Wails of Cattle Trails_, Chart Music, 1937, pp. 4-5, "Powder River, Let 'er Buck" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11524

RECORDINGS:
Powder River Jack & Kitty Lee, "Powder River, Let 'Er Buck" (Victor 23527, 1930; Montgomery Ward M-4462, 1934; on AuthCowboys)

NOTES [108 words]: The phrase "Powder River, let 'er buck" was the motto of a Wyoming division (comprised largely of cowboys) during World War I. Powder River Jack Lee claims to have composed the song, and there is no evidence to the contrary -- but the slogan must have come from somewhere.
Incidentally, the name of the river is explicitly "Powder River," not "The Powder River"; the local custom is that you don't use an article before the name, ever. (See Helena Huntington Smith, The War On Powder River, University of Nebraska Press, 1966, p. 1). According to Smith, p. 9, the first big cattle drive on Powder River was organized by Moreton Frewen in 1879. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: 0hr040
Powderhorn
DESCRIPTION: "Out in the West you have often heard said The only good paint horse is one that is dead." The singer sets out to disprove the rule, describing the purchase of a cutting horse, Miss Aledo, that does a spectacular job
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1966
KEYWORDS: horse work cowboy commerce
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 70, "Powderhorn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11075
NOTES [23 words]: A cutting horse is used to cut off a steer from the herd. A good horse can make a cowboy's task much easier by outguessing the cattle. - RBW
File: FCW070

Powellton Labor Train Explosion, The
DESCRIPTION: "It was a cold December morn, The hour was about six o'clock, There came a vast explosion," throwing the Powellton labor train engine into the air. Many are killed and injured; listeners are told that their train too might explode someday
AUTHOR: Charles A. Hudson (source: Lyle)
EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (sent to James Taylor Adams by Elizabeth Hudson)
KEYWORDS: train death labor-movement warning
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Dec 27, 1934 - A train engine explodes near the mining settlement of Powellton, West Virginia, killing 17 and injuring 43 or more
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lyle-ScaldedToDeathByTheSteam, pp. 202-203, "The Powellton Labor Train Explosion" (1 text)
Roud #14032
File: LySc202

Powers of Whisky, The
DESCRIPTION: "There's nothing like whisky Makes Irishmen frisky" and girls also, even if sick. If a maid rejects you "drink enough, you'll find charms in a dozen beside ... you'll think you're in love with each girl that you meet." Whisky can subdue any grief.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1839 (Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
KEYWORDS: love drink nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 75-76, "The Powers of Whisky" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Kinnegard Slashers" (tune, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
File: CrPS075

Prairie Grove
DESCRIPTION: "Come ye gallant sons of I-o-way, come listen to my song... About the gallant charge at Prairie Grove, An' we an' Southern rebels on equal numbers strove." The singer describes a federal victory, the burial of the southern dead, and their widows' mourning
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Randoph)
KEYWORDS: battle soldier death Civilwar
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Dec 7, 1862 - Battle of Prairie Grove
FOUND IN: US(So)
NOTES [673 words]: The battle of Prairie Grove was one of the more confusing messes of the Civil War. It had little effect on the main war effort (though it contributed significantly to the Union conquest of Arkansas), and so is rarely mentioned in the histories.

McPherson, p. 668, gives this backdrop: "The transfer of Van Dorn's Confederate army [from Missouri/Arkansas] to Mississippi in the spring of 1862 had left northern Arkansas shorn of defenders. Samuel R. Curtis's small Union force began advancing toward Little Rock, slowed only by skittish militia and harassing guerrillas. Into the Confederate breach stepped Thomas C. Hindman, a political general five feet tall who made up in energy what he lacked in size. Hindman enforced conscription with a will that created a 20,000-man army of lukewarm Arkansans, hardened Teans, and Missouri guerrillas. This force deflected the enemy campaign against Little Rock and went over to the offensive in the fall, driving the Federals north almost to Missouri."

The Federals managed to recover -- but they split their forces. Two Union divisions, under Herron, were located near Springfield, Missouri; another, under Blunt, was in an advanced position south of Fayetteville, Arkansas.

The Confederate general Hindman, observing this deployment, saw an opportunity to defeat the Unionists in detail. He took his force -- somewhat smaller than the combined Union forces but much stronger than Blunt alone -- and on Dec. 6 attacked Blunt.

Unknown to Hindman, Herron's force had been ordered forward a few days earlier. When Hindman learned that Herron was approaching, he tried to get between the two Union forces. It didn't work. Herron managed to hold off Hindman until Blunt arrived. The Confederates -- many of them raw Arkansas troops who deserted at the beginning of the battle -- wound up abandoning the field. The battle was not a great Union success, but neither was it a great defeat. The Confederates retreated, and many of Hindman's conscripts deserted. In the aftermath, the Federals were able to occupy a large part of northern Arkansas. Herron received a promotion to Major General as a result -- being, at the time, the youngest Major General in the army (Warner, p. 228).

That seems to be typical of Hindman's career: Tucker, pp. 68-69, summarizes his career as follows:

"Thomas C. Hindman had been an enterprising soldier in the trans-Mississippi department, and his conduct in the later phases of the Chickamauga campaign was in sharp contrast with his lethargy in [a preliminary action at] McLemore's Cover. He had been an outstanding resident of Arkansas when the war broke and had played one of the leading roles with his stump speeches to take Arkansas out of the Union.

"Born in Knoxville, Tennessee, he had been educated in Lawrenceville, New Jersey, had been cited for conspicuous bravery in the Mexican War, had served in the Mississippi legislature as a staunch Jefferson Davis man, then had moved across the Mississippi River to Helena, Arkansas. A lawyer and a gifted speaker, he was sent by the Helena district to Congress in 1856.... Like George Pickett, he wore his hair in long curling locks and was something of a dandy in his civilian dress with his pink gloves and rattan cane. He has small and tended to be tyrannical.

"After secession, Hindman raised a regiment, commanded a brigade at Shiloh, where he was wounded, and because of his good fighting there became a major general. In command of the Confederate army at Prairie Grove, Hindman was at first aggressive and appeared to be winning, but he lost the battle by suddenly taking a defensive position and awaiting attack, thereby allowing his opponent, Brigadier General James G. Blunt, to unite his forces on the field. Hindman has been called a 'man of genius,' a man who would have been a good Secretary of War but was unable to command an army or plan a battle. However, he was to prove at Chickamauga that he could strike hard under competent leadership."

This song is item dA38 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW- RBW

Bibliography

- Tucker: Glenn Tucker,Chickamauga: Bloody Battle in the West, Konecky & Konecky, 1961
Prairie Song, A
DESCRIPTION: "The music springs under the galloping hoofs Out on the plains." Oh where are the traces of yesterday's ride?" "Oh, rest not my pony, there's youth in my heart... And there's room here to live and to love and to dare, Out on the plains"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1921 (Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys)
KEYWORDS: home horse travel
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys, pp. 129-130, "A Prairie Song" (1 text)
File: ThLo129

Praise of a Dairy, The DESCRIPTION: "In praise o a dairy I purpose to sing, But all things in order, first, God save the King." Eve was the first dairy-maid. Milk and honey existed before there was money. Milk is important in many excellent foods
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1877 (Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland)
KEYWORDS: food nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 444-446, "In Praise of a Dairy" (1 text)
  ST BeCo444 (Partial)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "Packington's Pound" (tune) and references there
File: BeCo444

Praise of Kinsale, The
DESCRIPTION: The singer is "a poor fisherman" praising "his own native town of Kinsale." There's "a Royal Hotel," races, dances, billiards, and cards. There are cold baths for fitness, hot baths for cures, "or if you're in health, just come here for a frolic"
AUTHOR: John Lander (source: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
EARLIEST DATE: 1831 (Haly broadside, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
KEYWORDS: commerce gambling sports dancing nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 215-217, "The Praise of Kinsale" (1 text)
NOTES [76 words]: Kinsale and Mallow are in County Cork.
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland: "This satirical song ["The Praise of Kinsale"], with the subsequent reply to it ["Kinsale versus Mallow"], are given from a broadside purchased by the Editor in 1831, at the shop of Haly, a ballad printer in Hanover Street, Cork. The were respectively entitled, 'Paddy Farrell, of Kinsale, to his Friend at Mallow;' and 'Answer of Thady Mullowny, of Mallow, to Paddy Farrell, Kinsale.'" - BS
File: CrPS215

Praise of Ploughmen, The DESCRIPTION: "Ye lads and lasses a' draw near, I'm sure it will delight your ear... To sing the Praise of Ploughmen.

Workers at other occupations may regard themselves as better, but the ploughman feeds them. The girl choruses, "Happy is the ploughman's jo."

Author: John Anderson
Earliest Date: 1906 (Greig/Duncan3); Grieg reports that it was written c. 1850
Keywords: farming, worker, food
Found In: Britain (Scotland, Aber)
References (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #164, pp. 1-2, "The Praise of Ploughmen" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 447, "The Praise of Ploughmen" (4 texts, 1 tune)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 242-243, "The Praise of Ploughmen" (1 text)
Roud #5579
Cross-References:
cf. "The Laddie That Handles the Ploo" (theme)
cf. "The Farmer is the Man" (theme)
cf. "Johnnie Cope" (tune, per Greig/Duncan3)
cf. "Come All You Jolly Ploughboys" (theme)
cf. "The Useful Plow" (theme)
Alternate Titles:
Britain's Isle
The Labours o' the Plooman
The Plooman
Notes: [14 words]: Greig: .. written about the middle of last century, or perhaps somewhat earlier." - BS
Last updated in version 2.4
File: Ord242

Praise of Saylors Here Is Set Forth, The

Description: "As I lay musing in my bed, Full warm and well at ease, I thought upon the lodging hard Poor sailors have at see." They face hunger, cold, and storm, although captain and boatswain and pilot fight hard against the seas. The singer wishes them well
Author: unknown
Earliest Date: before 1899 (Roxburghe Ballads); first printed in the seventeenth century
Keywords: sailor, ship, hardtimes, storm
Found In:
References (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 11, "The Praise of Sailors" (1 text)
Roud #V32242
File: PaSe011

Praise of Waterford, The

Description: "Waterford, thow loyall cytie" has been honored by Henry II, chartered by John, affirmed by Henry III, and so forth, through Henry VIII. "Quia to semper intacta manes" ends each verse echoing the Waterford motto.
Author: unknown
Earliest Date: 1824 (Ryland, _History of Waterford_, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
Keywords: royalty, political, Ireland
Found In:
References (2 citations):
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 312-320, "The Praise of Waterford" (1 text)
Cross-References:
cf. "The Mayor of Waterford's Letter" (structure)
Notes [3281 words]: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland: "The motto of 'Urbs intacto manet Waterfordia' ... was conferred on the city, with other honours, by Henry VII., for the conduct of the mayor and citizens against Perkin Warbeck."
"... there was soon to be another impostor [to Henry VII's crown after Lambert Simnel (see 'The Mayor of Waterford's Letter')], Master Perkin Warbeck from Tournai, whom the men of Cork felt convinced was Richard of York, the younger of the Princes in the Tower." (Williams/Fraser, p. 171)

Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland: "The date of this composition is satisfactorily fixed, by the twentieth and twenty-second verses, to be about 1545. In the former, Henry VIIIth's present to the city of Waterford of a sword of justice in 1523, is spoken of as "lately sent;" and in the latter, the term 'our triumphant king' (which would scarcely be applied to Edward VI), must have been written subsequent to 1541, when Henry assumed the title of King of Ireland." - BS

It seems unlikely (to put it mildly) that this was a genuine folk song -- but it is an interesting curiosity, because the manuscript of it contains marginal notes. These are not uncommon in manuscripts of, say, the Bible -- but rarely in poetry!

Still, if the scribe felt the urge for footnotes, how can I resist?

"Henry the Second, that noble Kinge" -- Henry II Plantagenet, reigned 1154-1189. Henry came to Ireland in 1171, taking advantage of local strife to build an enclave on the east coast; he invaded following the invasion of his own vassal the Earl of Pembroke, known as Strongbow (Golway, p. 11).

The reference to his son's honor is presumably to Henry's fourth son John, the future King John. Henry, during his life, divided up his kingdom (England, much of France, and Ireland) among his four sons. John was given Ireland -- though he quickly got himself in trouble by making fun of the native chieftains's appearance (Harvey, p. 52). John would reign over England and Ireland from 1199 to 1216, following the reign of his older brother Richard I (now usually known as Richard the Lion-Hearted, but at the time, he was likely to be called "Richard Yes-and-No," because he was so wishy-washy).

John's son was Henry III, who would face the rebellion of Simon de Montfort; he came to the throne as a boy, and so had a very long reign, 1216-1272.

Edward the First, reigned 1272-1307, was known for the work he did in organizing and codifying the laws of England; he did indeed grant many charters. "His son" was Edward II, reigned 1307-1327, when he was deposed.

"Edward the Third, of triumph most abundante," was the son of Edward II, and reigned 1327-1377. His triumphs were indeed abundant, though they in the end amounted to little: He started the Hundred Years' War, in the process of which he captured the Scottish king David II (Seward-Hundred, p. 69) he won the great Battle of Crecy against the French in 1346 (Seward-Roses, pp. 63-68), captured Calais (Harvey, p. 141) and finally, after his son the Black Prince had captured the King of France at the Battle of Poitiers in 1356 (Myers, pp. 24-25), negotiated the Treaty of Bretigny which gave England theoretical sovereignty over a third of France (Seward-Hundred, pp. 99-101, plus the map on p. 266).

The flip side is, Edward's reign also witnessed the Black Death (Myers, pp. 23-24), which -- apart from killing a large fraction of the population -- devastated the already-strained English treasury; England captured much of France, but proved unable to hold it; by 1374, Edward was "drinksodden and used up," (Seward-Hundred, p. 115), and there was a struggle over control of the government (Myers, pp. 28-29), which ended with the triumph of the king's son Edward the Black Prince -- who, however, died in 1376 (from what sounds rather like malaria, acquired perhaps in an invasion of Spain).

The conquest of France was already unraveling by the time of their deaths. Ashley, p. 604, says that Edward's "final year was spent in much loneliness and sadness aware that the administration about him was crumbling."

With the Black Prince dead, as well as Edward's second son Lionel (dead, perhaps of overindulgence, in 1368 shortly after wedding his second wife Violante Visconte; Saunders, pp. 134-135; on page 138, Saunders mentions speculation that Lionel was poisoned to reduce English influence in Italy), the throne passed to the Black Prince's son, the boy Richard II (ascended 1377, deposed 1399, died, probably murdered, 1400).

Richard had a very difficult minority, with English conquests in France slowly being lost and his barons quarreling. It didn't help that he was without a true heir; his first marriage was childless and, when his beloved first wife died, he apparently almost went mad (Harvey, p. 156). He eventually took as his second wife a very young French princess who was years from childbearing age. Harvey, p. 157, says that Richard made a very constructive visit to Ireland in 1394-1395, but soon after, he turned into a tyrant. When his uncle John of Gaunt died in early 1399, the last restraint on his behavior was lifted (Harvey, p. 159). Richard took over the vast Lancaster estates of Duke John (who had ruled what was almost a kingdom within a kingdom), thus disinheritng Gaunt's son Henry of Bolingbroke. Bolingbroke had already been exiled by Richard, and this was the final straw. When Richard took another trip to Ireland in 1399, Henry invaded England, and the despotic
Richard had angered so many barons that Henry had no trouble taking over. Henry ruled 1399-1413, but was never easy on the throne (Harvey, p. 163); he was not Richard's proper heir. (His claim, recall, came through Edward III's third son John, but the second son Lionel had left descendants by his first marriage. It's just that they were too young and powerless to be contenders for the succession in 1399.) Henry IV was unable to do anything about the disastrous situations in France and Ireland; it was all he could do to control his own barons and the Welsh revolt of Owen Glendower.

The song does not clearly distinguish between Henry IV and his offspring, but the "lusty Henry that conquered France" is Henry V (1413-1422). He didn't exactly conquer France, since there was still a portion that was independent -- but his battles did cause him to be declared the heir to the French throne in 1420 (Ashley, p. 611). Unfortunately, he died only two years later, leaving only a baby, the future Henry VI, as heir. (Incidentally, Henry V was "not" lusty; many English kings left a large collection of bastards, but Henry V seems to have been almost monkish in his habits; there is no record of any bastards, and little evidence of affairs; Earle, p. 87. He even dressed like a priest; Allmand, p. 438.)

If Henry V was less than worldly, Henry VI surely qualifies as the most out-of-it King in English history to that time. (The English did not start inbreeding the way most continental monarch did until the Hannoverian Succession in 1714. As a result, English monarchs were mostly sane, if often utterly wrong-headed. There were only two major instances of genetic defectives in the English royal family: Henry VI, who was the son of Katherine of France, the daughter of Charles the Mad -- and the descendants of Henry VII, who were "also" descendants of Charles the Mad; after Henry V died, Katherine formed a common-law marriage with Owen Tudor; their grandson was Henry VII.)

The song calls Henry VI "Henry the Holly [holy], that borne was in Wyndsoire." This is perhaps an attempt to cover up his notorious incapacity. But it was just that -- incapacity. He may not actually have been mentally retarded, but he certainly lacked the power of decision needed to rule (Ashley, p. 614), and at various times in the 1450s, he went mad. Inactivity was confused for piety by some, but there is no actual evidence that Henry was in any sense extraordinary in holiness. And, because he was always being pushed around by his advisors, he could be made to decree anything.

The song completely fails to note that "Edward the Strong" (Edward IV, reigned 1461-1470 and 1471-1483) deposed Henry VI (though Henry was briefly restored 1470-1471 before being re-deposed -- and, this time, killed). Edward IV was certainly the rightful King of England -- but he was merely a third cousin, twice over, several times removed, of Henry VI. He was able to take the throne only because Henry was incompetent to keep it. Thus, citing both Henry VI and Edward IV is about like citing charters from both Ahura Mazda and Ahriman -- some owe allegiance to one, some to the other, but few will recognize the authority of both.

Of course, that's nothing to calling Henry VII "Henry the Valiant." The guy never truly commanded a battle; the only major fight where he was present was the Battle of Bosworth, where he overthrew Richard III -- and most authorities agree that it was the Earl of Oxford who had field command (e.g. Gillingham, p. 244; Kendall, p. 435, or the notes to "The Children in the Wood (The Babes in the Woods)" [Laws Q34]). Henry's primary activity was to avoid getting killed when Richard III made his death-or-glory charge which was so noteworthy that not even Shakespeare could get it wrong. (Which is amazing, since the only other thing Shakespeare got right in "Richard III" was the names "Edward," "Henry," and "George." )

Valiant or not, Henry managed to take the throne (for details, see e.g. "The Rose of England." ) But it was a shaky throne; he faced many revolts, and two major plus several minor pretenders. For the problems Henry faced up to the time of the first major pretender, Lambert Simnel [referred to in the song as "Lambart [who] was crowned by false advertence"], as well as how Waterford stuck by Henry, see the notes to "The Mayor of Waterford's Letter." But not even crushing two revolts (Stafford's and Lambert's) spelled peace for Henry VII; the country was just too restive and he was just too efficient about collecting taxes (it was in his reign that the infamous Morton's Fork was invented -- named for John Morton, who came to be Archbishop of Canterbury and Chancellor. The Fork was a trick used by tax collectors: If a man lived in luxury, he had money which could be taxed; if he lived in poverty, he was saving money which could be taxed). Much of the country, for one reason or another, wanted a different king.

Kendall, p. 477, says that there had been "at least three other 'feigned boys." But the three after Lambert were quickly dealt with. Not so imposter #5. In 1491, Henry was confronted with the most serious pretender of all, Perkin Warbeck (called "Parkin" in the song). Warbeck was an interesting case, because several witnesses said he actually looked like a member of the House of York (Weir, p. 239; Poole, p.17). It's not impossible that he was an illegitimate son of Edward IV (who sowed enough wild oats to supply an entire stable of horses), but there doesn't seem to be any evidence for this, and Weir, p. 241, thinks it unlikely. She mentions a possibility that he was Richard III's son (a possibility also mentioned by Poole, p. 17) -- but the one Plantagenet whom Warbeck did "not" resemble was the short, dark Richard III.

According to Seward-Roses, p. 322, "'Pierrequin Werbecque' was born in Tournai in about 1474, the son of a boatman. Weir, p. 241, says that he eventually admitted to being "the son of John Warbeck, or Osbeck, and Katherine de Faro, his wife, both converted Jews living in Tournai where John was a minor official. When Peter (or Peterkin, as he was known) was small, the family lived for a time in London, where John Warbek earned a living by suppling carpets to the royal court." Whatever Warbeck's early history, he apparently arrived in Ireland in 1491 as the servant of a Breton silk merchant and, while walking through the streets of Cork dressed in his master's splendid clothes (Seward-Roses, p. 322; Weir, p. 242, describes him as modeling the outfits), was taken for a member of the Yorkist royal family."

Apparently that was enough for Warbeck and those around him. It was in Cork, in 1491, that he formally declared himself (Chrimas, p. 81). According to Weir, p. 236, he briefly claimed to be the Earl of Warwick, the son of King Edward IV's younger brother George of Clarence. Henry VII in his propaganda said that he also listed himself as the son of Richard III. But he soon settled upon the identity of Richard of York, the younger of Edward IV's two sons. (Probably he decided to adopt the persona of Richard, the younger of the Princes in the Tower, rather than Edward, the older, because they were close in age, or because Edward V had been known to more people. Chrimas, p. 82, also notes that it would be a bit embarrassing to return as a deposed King. But it is interesting to note that, if the bones said to be those of the Princes are indeed theirs -- and there can be no proof either way until the British Royal Family gives permission for DNA testing -- the elder suffered from dental problems that might well have killed him. So Richard was the prince more likely to still be alive. It is hard to imagine how Warbeck could have known that, however.)

Quite a few of the monarchs of Europe recognized him -- including, for a time, the King of France (Weir, p. 236), who received him with "appropriate honors" (Chrimas, p. 82). Henry finally talked Charles VIII out of supporting the pretender, but the Dowager Duchess of Burgundy, and her stepson-in-law, the Duke Maximillian, recognized him and gave him shelter in Flanders (Chrimas, p. 83). The Dowager Duchess was the sister of Edward IV, and must have known he was apretender (Poole, p. 17, says that she in fact helped coach him) -- but evidently would have preferred anyone to Henry VII. Apart from being an usurper, Henry VII had confiscated her English estates, according to Poole, p. 18.

In 1493, Warbeck returned to Ireland, that hotbed of Yorkist sympathy (Weir, p. 237). Henry VII sent Lord Poyning to Ireland in 1494 to stop him (Chrimas, p. 84). Poyning was able to lift the Earl of Desmond's siege of Waterford, which lasted from July 23 to August 4 (Chrimas, p. 86). Poyning did not manage to catch Warbeck -- but he did drive him back to Flanders, plus he forced the Irish parliament to pass Poyning's Law, which all but destroyed the Irish parliament; the English crown was given the right to control its meetings and negate any legislation which affected anything outside Ireland (Fry/Fry, p. 103). This particular law was responsible for many of the problems of Ireland over the next three centuries.

By 1495, Henry had rounded up just about all of Warbeck's English followers (Weir, p. 237; Seward-Roses, p. 322, claims he learned who they were by bribing a former Yorkist knight), and even executed Sir William Stanley (Kendall, p. 457) -- the man who, a decade earlier, had killed Richard III and put Henry on the throne! (Seward-Roses, p. 322, considers it significant that Stanley, who always had an eye to his own profit, thought Warbeck enough of a threat to Henry as to support him. It certainly is interesting -- but I'm not convinced Stanley "did" support Warbeck.

Being William Stanley, he may have simply tried to have a foot in both camps. But Henry -- unlike his relatively merciful predecessor Richard III, who always forgave the Stanleys -- wouldn't allow such things. Besides, he may have wanted Sir William's money; Poole, p. 18. For the whole Stanley mess, see the notes to "The Vicar of Bray" plus, again, the notes to "The Children in the Wood".)

When Warbeck attempted to land in England, he was driven off (Seward-Roses, p. 323); he then headed for Waterford, but Poyning drove him back. He ended up in Scotland, where James IV took him in and even married him to a relative (Chrimas, p. 88, who suggests that this means James thought he was legitimate; the poor woman, Katherine Gordon, would have three other husbands after Warbeck; Chrimas, p. 91 n. 2) -- but then came to dislike him and made him unwelcome; he headed once more for Ireland in 1497 (Weir, p. 238; Seward-Roses, p. 323). He finally managed to land in Cornwall (which had earlier risen in rebellion over Henry's impossible taxes; Chrimas, p. 90), but he didn't get much of a welcome (Chrimas, p. 91); when Henry's army arrived, Warbeck fled. He was captured, and for a time was treated well. But he tried to escape, and was captured again, tortured, and placed in close confinement near the very Earl of Warwick he had once impersonated (Seward-Roses, p. 323).
Weir, p. 238, speculates that this was deliberate -- the government was trying to lure them into a conspiracy. Certainly the government detected one -- even though Warwick was considered feebie-minded (Kendall, p. 349; Weir, p. 239; Seward-Roses, p. 324; Poole, p. 21 says that he was "of mediocre intelligence (if not a simpleton) and suffered from grave defects of character," while Potter, p. 168, quotes a contemporary report that he could not "tell a goose from a capon"). In 1499, Warwick was tried, and supposedly confessed; he was condemned to death. So was Warbeck.
As Poole, p. 21, says, Warwick's only crime was being the last (legitimate) male Plantagenet. At least, as a member of the nobility, he was merely beheaded (Chrimes, p. 92); Warbeck was hung, drawn, and quartered. To give Henry his minimal due, he was kind enough not to persecute Warbeck's wife (Poole, p. 22); he even gave her a pension.
Seward-Roses, p. 324, mentions Francis Bacon's belief that Warwick was killed because Ferdinand of Aragon had refused to marry his daughter to Henry VII's son until all possible Plantagenet pretenders were eliminated; as long as any were alive, there would be plots. Before his execution, Warbeck confessed -- or at least was said to have confessed -- that he was not the son of Edward IV. Warwick's turn followed soon after (Seward-Roses, p. 324, mentions the coming of another false Warwick, named Ralph Wulford, as helping to prompt this), without any such notable confession. The last great threat to Henry VII's illegitimate kingship was done. Could Warbeck have displaced Henry? It's an interesting question. After 1495, he had no chance. But there might have been a possibility in 1494 or 1495. So it was pretty significant when Waterford kept him from landing in Ireland.
Although one might argue that this marked the pinnacle of Waterford's career, the song does not end there. Having already praised the unwarlike Henry VII, it proceeds to the reign of his son Henry VIII (reigned 1509-1547), whom it calls "Henry the Tryumphant." Pretty good for a king who never really participated in a battle. (Maybe it refers to the fact that he didn't face any rebellions.) Henry VIII was the second son of Henry VII, and did not become crown prince until his older brother died, so he was given more clerical than military training (Ashley, p. 630). Henry did lead an army to invade France, conducting a couple of successful sieges and winning the so-called "Battle of the Spurs," (Ashley, p. 631) -- but this 1513 "victory" was really only a cavalry skirmish, and Henry then allowed himself to be bought off. A much more notable victory at this time was the English defeat of the Scots at Flodden (for which see, e.g., "The Flowers of the Forest"), but Henry had no part in that; it was the Howard Earl of Surrey who commanded the English force. Henry did go on to fight France in later years, but he did not lead the armies and there was little real fighting anyway. It seems clear that Henry VIII was still king at the time of this song, though, so little wonder that it buttered him up. -RBW

Bibliography

- Allmand: Christopher Allmand, Henry V, University of California Press, 1992
- Ashley: Mike Ashley, British Kings and Queens, Barnes & Noble, 2000 (originally published as The Mammoth Book of British Kings and Queens, 1998)
- Fry/Fry: Peter and Fiona Somerset Fry, The History of Scotland, 1982 (I use the 1995 Barnes & Noble edition)
- Gillingham: John Gillingham, The Wars of the Roses, Louisiana State University, 1984
- Golway: Terry Golway, For the Cause of Liberty, Simon & Schuster, 2000
- Harvey: John Harvey, The Plantagenets, 1948, 1959 (I use the 1979 Fontana paperback edition)
- Poole: Stanley B. R. Poole, Royal Mysteries and Pretenders, Barnes & Noble, 1993
- Saunders: Frances Stonor Saunders, Hawkwood: Diabolical Englishman, Faber and Faber, 2004
- Seward-Hundred: Desmond Seward, The Hundred Years War: The English in France, 1337-1453, 1978 (I used the 1982 Atheneum paperback)
Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition

DESCRIPTION: "Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition (x3), And we'll all stay free." The singer describes the mission he and his fellow soldiers are on and the dangers they face, but clearly expects to succeed

AUTHOR: Frank Loesser
EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (copyright)
KEYWORDS: soldier technology nonballad
FOUND IN: Canada
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, pp. 30-31, "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #24982
NOTES [101 words]: The story of this is that, during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, a chaplain was asked to say a prayer and came out with "Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition" so he could man an anti-aircraft gun. Wikipedia has a whole entry on the song and the remark, none of which I find particularly convincing. But the tale inspired Frank Loesser to write a song, and Loesser being Loesser (he was, among other things, was responsible for the music of "Guys and Dolls," the most popular musical of the classic type in Broadway history), it was popular enough to apparently go into tradition in a small way. - RBW

Praise, Member

DESCRIPTION: "Praise, member, praise God, I praise my Lord until I die. Praise, member, praise God, And reach the heavenly home." "Jordan's bank is a good old bank." "O soldier's fight is a good old fight." "I look to the east and I look to the west."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad soldier floatingverses
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 4, "Praise, Member" (1 text)
Roud #11859
File: AWG004A

Praises of Limerick, The

DESCRIPTION: Limerick "for true generosity, honour, fidelity ... one of us is worth ten of you [from nearby towns]." Our shopkeepers "charge us extravagant" but never "more than his conscience should bear." Our proper wives are "so dressy, so flirtish, so talkative"

AUTHOR: Dr MacDonnell (source: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
EARLIEST DATE: 1793 (_Anthologia Hibernica_, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
KEYWORDS: humorous nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 228-230, "The Praises of Limerick" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "My Name is Molly Macky" (tune, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
NOTES [39 words]: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland quoting the Memoirs of Sir James Campbell notes that MacDonnell's satirical song was not taken well in Limerick and "the young doctor was fain to make his escape in the night time, and never return." - BS

Pray All the Member

DESCRIPTION: "Pray all the member, O Lord, Pray all the member, Yes my Lord." "Pray a little longer." "Jericho da worry me." "Jericho, Jericho." "I been to Jerusalem." "Patrol all around me." "Thank God he no catch me." "Jump along Jericho."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 35, "Pray All de Member" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11990

File: AWG035

Pray for Us, Thou Prince of Peace

DESCRIPTION: "Pray for us, thou prynce of pes, Amici Christi Johannes." "To the now, Crystys der derling." John slept on Jesus's breast. He did not forsake Jesus when Jesus was before Pilate. Jesus was put into his care. So the song appeals to him

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: XV century (Bodleian MS. Eng. poet. e.1 and others)

KEYWORDS: Jesus religious carol foreignlanguage MiddleEnglish

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (11 citations):
Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols, #103, pp. 66-67, "(no title)" (2 texts)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #3776
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #6020

ADDITIONAL: Roman Dyboski, _Songs, Carols, and Other Miscellaneous Poems from the Balliol Ms. 354, Richard Hill's Commonplace Book_, Kegan Paul, 1907 (there are now multiple print-on-demand reprints), #19, pp. 11, "(Pray for vs to the prince of peace, Amice Crysty, Johannes)" (1 text, with some variant readings on pp. 171-172)

MANUSCRIPT: {MSEngPoetE1}, Oxford, Bodleian Library, MS. Eng. Poet. e.1 (Bodley 29734), folio 40
MANUSCRIPT: {MSCamTrinityO.3.58}, Cambridge, Trinity College MS. O.3.58
MANUSCRIPT: London, British Library, MS. Additional 5665, folio 37 (first copy), folio 48 (second copy, shorter)
MANUSCRIPT: London, British Library, MS. Harley 4294, folio 81
ST BrR3776 (Full)

NOTES [674 words]: Although I know of no traditional collections, Greene, p. 199, reports, "This carol is found in more different texts (as a carol) than any other. Stevens (p. 117) points out that it is 'the only polyphonic carol found in three different musical settings.'" Greene's version is in the third person, the other texts in the first, so it has undergone modification over time, although it is not clear whether this was oral or written change.
Davies, p. 335, says that six texts are known:
- Bodleian MS Eng. poet e. 1, XV century (the basis of Greene)
- Balliol MS. 354 (folio 222 recto; this is the famous Richard Hill manuscript, with the components written by 1537)
- British Library MS. Harley 4294. Composite, with the first half from the sixteenth century and the second half from the fifteenth. Has only two carols, although it has much other material, some poetic.
- Cambridge, Trinity College O.3.58 (1230) recto (dated to the early fifteenth century). A scroll of carols, in East Anglian dialect, which also contains one of the few copies of "The Agincourt Carol" (which see).

- British Library MS. Additional 5665 (with music). There are two copies of this song in this manuscript, which contains many musical settings of carols (in two or three parts) and processional music. The names of many of the composers are known, but they are not of much note today. Many of the texts are in French or Latin. Early sixteenth century; it contains a note from 1510. Some of the texts are in red, now badly faded. The "Ritson Manuscript," because Joseph Ritson donated it. Although there isn't much evidence that the songs in this manuscript are traditional, they are of very high quality; reading the texts in Greene, I repeatedly found myself thinking that THIS was a really good one -- and looked and found it in Additional 5665. This makes me suspect that perhaps Additional 5665 is built upon a collection of a particular author's poems. We don't know whose. But perhaps the "5665 Poet" should be considered the author of this poem. Given this strong popularity, it seemed to me that the song belonged in the Index.

The Latin "Amici Christi Johannes" means "Friend/Beloved (of) Christ John," i.e. "John the Friend of Christ." This is a reference to "the Beloved Disciple" of the Gospel of John. Nowhere is the Beloved Disciple named in that gospel, but it is a reasonable inference that it was John son of Zebedee -- Jesus's three closest disciples were Peter, James, and John, and it's not Peter (since Peter and the Beloved Disciple are distinguished on several occasions, e.g. John 21:20), and it is unlikely to have been James since James was probably the first of the Twelve to be executed (Acts 12:2). And Peter and John are often together in Acts (e.g. Acts 3:1), and Peter and the Beloved Disciple are often together in the Gospel of John. If the Beloved Disciple is indeed one of the Twelve listed in the three synoptic gospels, he almost has to be John. Since the Beloved Disciple is mentioned only in John, naturally all the references to him in this carol are from that gospel. He "lay on Christ's breast" in John 13:23. When Jesus was before Pilate, it was the Beloved Disciple who gained admission for Peter (John 18:15-16, although the disciple is not there called "beloved"). And Jesus consigned his mother to the hands of the Beloved Disciple in John 19:26-27.

The name "The Beloved Disciple" is the usual one in English for this person, because the Greek says "the disciple whom Jesus loved," the Greek verb being παθησεω, "agapao," the usual New Testament word for (non-romantic) love. Interestingly, in the Latin of John 13:23, 19:26, 21:20, the verb used to describe Jesus's feelings is not "amat" (related to "amici" as well as to our word "amor") but "diligebat"; the description of John as Jesus's "amici" is reasonable but not a direct allusion to the Latin of the Fourth Gospel.

For more about the famous anthology Bodleian MS. Eng. Poet. e.1 (Bodleian 29734), see the notes to "The Golden Carol (The Three Kings)." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: BrR3776

Pray On (I)

DESCRIPTION: "Pray on, pray on, Pray on them light over us, Pray on, pray on, The Union break of day. My sister, you come to see baptize In the Union break of day; My loved sister, you come to see baptize, In the Union break of day."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
 Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 97, "Pray On" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #12053

File: AWG097A

Pray On (II)

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Pray on brothers, O hally hallelujah, Pray on brothers, It ain't too late." Verse: "I washed my head in the midnight dew, The morning stars a witness too." Many verses float

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Barton-OldPlantationHymns)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious floatingverses
Pray, Pretty Miss
DESCRIPTION: "Pray, pretty Miss, will you come out to help us in our dancing?" She says "no" They say she is naughty and ask another girl. She says "yes" and they are happy with "a good miss"/"Jolly old lass" for dancing.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1882 (Allen)
KEYWORDS: dancing nonballad playparty
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North),Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1570, "Wha'll Come into My Wee Hoose?" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 41, "Pray, Pretty Miss" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Miss Allen, "Children's Game-Rhymes" in [Relics of Popular Antiquities, &c.] The Folk-Lore Record (London, 1882 ("Digitized by Google")), Vol. V, #16 p. 87, ("Pray, pretty Miss, will you come out to help us with our dancing?") "Yorkshire(Sheffield,)" (1 text)
Roud #12966
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Nuts in May" (tune, per Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
File: GrD81570

Prayer Is the Key To Heaven
DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Prayer is the key to heaven (x3), Faith unlocks the door (x2)." Verses: The singer recalls when "Jesus freed this soul of mine," "My head got wet with midnight dew, The morning star was witness too"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 171, "Prayer Is de Key of Heaven" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 146 in the 1901 edition)
ADDITIONAL: John Wesley Work, Folk Song of the American Negro (Nashville: Fisk University, 1915 ("Digitized by the Internet Archive")), p. 120, ("Prayer is the key to heaven") (1 fragment)
Roud #15234
NOTES [23 words]: In Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute's verses, every alternate line is "Faith unlocks the door." - BS
Last updated in version 4.0
File: Dett171

Prayerbook, The
DESCRIPTION: The singer's sweetheart borrows his pretty prayerbook that had made him the target of every maid at Mass. She never returned it because her father parted them. Now, without his prayerbook, he waits for some kind maid to cure his heart and marry him.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)
LONG DESCRIPTION: The singer had a pretty prayerbook so fine that at Mass fair maids would stare at him "in hopes to gain myself and same, we were so nice a pair." His sweetheart asked to borrow the prayerbook but kept it: "Since that time to me she did not speak." He says "It was your cruel father that first parted you and I." Now he waits "until some kind one takes me in hand and cures the heart that's sore.... The day's long passed away when I'd make you my bride... Some other lass will have the chance of wedding me some day."

KEYWORDS: courting love marriage rejection father

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 175, "The Prayerbook" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9717

RECORDINGS:
Elizabeth Cronin, "The Prayerbook" (on IREcironin01)
File: OCC175

Preacher and the Bear, The

DESCRIPTION: (Black) preacher goes hunting; he meets a grizzly bear. He climbs a tree and pleads with God (who delivered Daniel, Jonah, etc.) "if you can't help me/for goodness sakes don't help that bear" The limb breaks; he gets his razor out and fights

AUTHOR: Officially credited to Joe Arzonia

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (recordings, Arthur Collins, although he may have recorded it as early as 1903); for the idea, see "Allen's Bear Fight Up in Keene"; the song was reportedly published in 1904

KEYWORDS: hunting humorous animal clergy

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE,So)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 425, "The Preacher and the Bear" (2 short texts)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 425, "The Preacher and the Bear" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains, pp. 80-81, "The Preacher and the Bear" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4967

RECORDINGS:
Al Bernard, "The Preacher and the Bear" (Brunswick 312, 1929; Supertone S-2057, 1930; rec. 1928) (Harmony 645-H, 1928) (Vocalion 15643, 1927)
Virgil Childers, "Preacher and the Bear" (Bluebird B-7487, 1938)
Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet, "Preacher and the Bear" (Bluebird B-7205, 1937; Victor 27322, 1941; Victor [Canada] 27322, 1941)
Honeyboy & Sassafras, "The Preacher and the Bear" (Brunswick 585, 1931; rec. 1930)
Kentucky Thorobreds, "Preacher and the Bear" (Paramount 3036, 1927; Broadway 8128 [as Old Smokey Twins], n.d.)
John McGhee, "The Preacher and the Bear" (Gennett 6403/Challenge 392 [as George Holden], 1928)
Poplin Family, "The Preacher and the Bear" (on Poplin1)
Jesse Oakley, "Preacher and the Bear" (Supertone 9256, 1928)
Riley Puckett, "The Preacher and the Bear" (Columbia 15045-D, 1925) (Bluebird B-8083/Montgomery Ward M-7904, 1939)
Uncle Joe & his Banjo, "The Preacher and the Bear" (Cameo 1272/Romeo 506, 1927)
Unidentified baritone [prob. Arthur Collins], "The Preacher and the Bear" (CYL: Busy Bee 241, prob. 1905)
Albert Whelan, "The Preacher and the Bear" (Zonophone [UK], 1911)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Allen's Bear Fight Up in Keene" (theme of a bear fight and a prayer to God to help the human Preacher and the Slave, The

DESCRIPTION: The preacher comes and tells the hungry, downtrodden workers, "You will eat, by and bye, In that glorious land above the sky. Work and pray; live on hay. You'll get pie in the sky when you die." The song calls on workers to overthrow the system

AUTHOR: Words: Joe Hill/Music: "Sweet By and By"

EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (third edition of the Little Red Songbook, according to Stavis/Harmon; Foner, on p. 13 of The Case of Joe Hill, says it was composed "about" that year)

KEYWORDS: clergy political work food rebellion labor-movement IWW derivative

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (13 citations):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 221, "The Preacher and the Slave" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 222, "Pie in the Sky" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, pp. 856-857, "Pie in the Sky" (1 text, 1 tune)
Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, p. 146-147, "Pie in the Sky" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, p. 185, "The Preacher and the Slave" (1 text)
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, p. 17, "In the Sweet Bye and Bye" (1 fragment)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 375-376, "The Preacher and the Slave" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 306, "The Preacher and the Slave" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: (Barrie Stavis and Frank Harmon, editors), _The Songs of Joe Hill_, 1960, now reprinted in the Oak Archives series, pp. 10-11, "The Preacher and the Slave" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gibbs M. Smith, _Joe Hill_, 1969 (I use the 1984 Peregrine Smith Books edition), pp. 232-233, "The Preacher and the Slave" (1 text, showing the original Little Red Songbook cover and version; pp. 231-237 includes a catalog of Hill songs in the Songbook); pp. 238-239, 1 text, the first edition to have Hill's name); pp. 240-241 (1 text, a sort of quasi-official version)
Kenneth Lougee, _Pie in the Sky: How Joe Hill's Lawyers Lost His Case, Got Him Shot, and Were Disbarred_, iUniverse, 2011, p. 69, "The Preacher and the Slave" (1 text)

Roud #6912

RECORDINGS:
Arkansas Charlie (Charlie Craver), "You'll Get Pie In The Sky When You Die" (Brunswick 392, c. 1929)
Preacher Dunn

DESCRIPTION: "I heard about this outlaw. They called Preacher Dunn. And everybody knewed him claimed he was the devil's son...." The singer goes to where Preacher Dunn is kept and offers to ride him. He fails -- but the boss pays him $50 for the entertainment value

AUTHOR: probably Powder River Jack Lee

EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Powder River Jack & Kitty Lee Songbook)

KEYWORDS: horse cowboy humorous injury money

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

ADDITIONAL: Powder River Jack and Kitty Lee's _Songs of the Range: Cowboy Wails of Cattle Trails_, Chart Music, 1937, pp. 34-35, "Across the Gread Divide" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Zebra Dun" (theme of the un-ridable horse)

NOTES [32 words]: The plot of this is mostly "The Strawberry Roan," with just a bit of "The Zebra Dunn," but the lyrics seem original, so I am inclined to accept Powder River Jack Lee's claim of authorship. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: PRJL034

Preacher in the Dockyard Church, The

DESCRIPTION: "The preacher in the dockyard church One Sunday morning said" that one of the congregants had befouled himself. A sailor defiantly admits it. The preacher also insults a Wren and perhaps others

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)

KEYWORDS: clergy sailor

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, pp. 74-75, "The Preacher in the Dockyard Church" (1 text, tune referenced)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

File: Tawn057
Preacher in the Pulpit (I)
DESCRIPTION: "Preacher in the pulpit, Bible in his hand (x3), Devil in the meal-sack, shaking out bran." "Oh, Lordy, come this way (x3), Never let the (devil carry?) you away."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious devil nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 342, "Preacher in the Pulpit" (1 short text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 342, "Preacher in the Pulpit" (1 tunes plus a text excerpt)
File: Br3342

Preacher in the Pulpit (II)
DESCRIPTION: "Preacher's in de pulpit, Preachin' mighty bold, Preachin' for de money To save de sinner's soul." "I'm gwine de land on de shore (x3) And rest forevermo'." "When I gits in Heben, Want you to be there too; When I say, Thank God, I want you to say so too."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 343, "Preacher in de Pulpit" (1 short text)
Roud #11742
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "We Will Land on Shore" (lyrics)
File: Br3343

Preacher's Legacy, The
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, if poor sinners did but know How much for them I undergo, they would not treat me with contempt...." The preacher sets out to work in other areas, knowing that it will bring challenges. He hopes to go to heaven in the end
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1922
KEYWORDS: clergy travel
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 105, pp. 216-217, "The Preacher's Legacy" (1 text)
ST LPnd216 (Full)
Roud #6560
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Dying Preacher (Hick's Farewell)" (theme)
NOTES [38 words]: The nineteenth century seems to have seen several of these "departing-preacher-tells-folks-what's-wrong" songs. Reading this piece, I thought of a Baptist preacher who was kicked out by his congregation for being too strict. - RBW
File: LPnd216

Preaching for Bacon
DESCRIPTION: Tinker George, Methodist parson, often visited a farmer's wife to preach and get a piece of bacon. Her husband, "no Methodist he," sees his store of bacon shrink. He catches them at prayer, notices bacon in George's pocket and chases George away.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1867 (broadside, Bodleian 2806 c.13(61))
KEYWORDS: greed farming food wife clergy
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 278-279, "Preaching for Bacon" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 410)

ADDITIONAL: Notes and Queries (London, 1871 ("Digitized by Google")), January-June 1871, Fourth Series Vol. VII, p. 171, "[4th S, vi. 566]" "Parson and Bacon", ("A Methodist parson whose name it was George") (1 text)
Roud #1317

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.13(61)[only the last 6 of 9 or 10 verses are legible], "The Methodist Parson" or "Preaching for Bacon" ("A methodist parson whose name it was George") , J. Harkness (Preston), 1840-1866; also Firth b.26(315), Harding B 16(212a), "Preaching for Bacon"; Harding B 17(97a) [some words illegible], "The Flitch of Bacon"; Harding B 25(1249), "A Methodist Parson"

NOTES [128 words]: Note that George being a tinker, stated in the second line of the text, immediately invokes the stereotype of the gypsy or thief.
The Bodleian 2806 c.13(61) and and Notes and Queries texts both use a "Derry down, down, down, derry down!" chorus, without stating that "Derry Down" is the tune.
Notes and Queries: "This was heard from a genuine Northman, about the year 1823.... This song would appear at times to have been in use both by Roman Catholics and Protestants, and, of course, with such variations as to suit the requirements of both parties."
Referring to the "Notes and Queries" note, said to be "a Lincolnshire song" (source: Notes and Queries General Index Series the Fourth (1868-1873) Vols. I to XII (London, 1874 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 110). - BS

Last updated in version 2.6
File: WT278

Precious Jewel
DESCRIPTION: "A jewel on earth and a jewel in heaven/She'll brighten the kingdom around God's great throne." Singer mourns the girl who promised to marry him. "The angels called her to heaven one night." Earth has troubles and treasures, but is missing one jewel
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (recording, Roy Acuff)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer mourns girl he once loved; when she was 16 they courted, and promised to marry, but "the angels called her to heaven one night." He laments that Mother Earth has troubles and treasures, but is missing one jewel. Cho: "A jewel on earth and a jewel in heaven/She'll brighten the kingdom around God's great throne...She's broken my heart and she's left me to roam"
KEYWORDS: grief loneliness courting love ring death mourning lament lover
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Roy Acuff, "The Precious Jewel" (Conqueror 9324, 1939/Okeh 05956, 1940)
Frank Bode, "Precious Jewel" (on FBode1)
Elton Britt, "The Precious Jewel" (Bluebird B-8666, 1941)
Delmore Bros. "Precious Jewel" (Decca 5970, 1941)
Wade Mainer, "The Precious Jewel" (Bluebird B-8887, 1941)
Esco Hankins, "The Precious Jewel" (King 648, 1947)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Roane County Strike at Harriman, Tennessee" (tune)
File: RcPrecJe

Precious Lord
DESCRIPTION: "Precious Lord, take my hand, Lead me on, let me stand, I am tired, I am weak, I am lost...." The sing prays that the Lord guide and protect him or her, and "lead me (home/on)" (to heaven)
AUTHOR: Thomas A. Dorsey (1899-1993)
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (recording, Alphabetical Four)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Warren—EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit, pp. 176-178, "Take My Hand, Precious Lord" (1 text, 1 tune)
Courlander—NegroFolkMusic, pp. 255-257, "(no title)" (1 text, probably partial; 1 tune)
DT, PRECLORD*
Roud #21783
RECORDINGS:
Alphabetical Four, "Precious Lord Hold My Hand" (Decca 7546, 1938; partial version on AlphabFour01)
Johnny Brown, "Precious Lord, Take My Hand" (on USFlorida01)
Elder Effie Hall & congregation "Precious Lord, Hold My Hand" (on MuSouth09, Babylon)
Five Soul Stirrers, "Precious Lord" (Bronze 103, n.d.)
Brother Joe May [Thunderbolt of the Middle West], "Precious Lord" (Specialty 815, n.d.)
Selah Jubilee Quartet, "Precious Lord" (Decca 48003, rec. 1939)
Kinsey West, "Precious Lord, Take My Hand" (on BlackAmRel1)
NOTES [68 words]: According to LindaJo H. McKim, Presbyterian Hymnal Companion, Westminster/John Knox Press, 1993, p. 281, Thomas A. Dorsey wrote this in 1932 when his first wife dies. McKim claims is "the most popular black gospel song ever written" because it was favored by Martin Luther King. McKim, p. 405, adds that the original tune was composed by George N. Allen (1812-1877) in 1842, but that Dorsey adapted it. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: CNFM255

Precious Memories
DESCRIPTION: The singer looks back on events of the past: "Precious memories, how they linger,
How they ever flood my soul." The singer gives thanks for the reminders
AUTHOR: probably John B. F. Wright
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Harbor Bells)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Abernethy—SinginTexas, pp. 124-125, "Precious Memories" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4934
RECORDINGS:
Ellis & Dixon Spiritual & Vocal Group, "Precious Memories, pts. 1 & 2" (Chess 1642, 1956)
Wade Mainer, "Precious Memories" (Bluebird B-8848, 1941)
McDonald Quartet, "Precious Memories" (OKeh 45517, 1931; rec. 1930) (Banner 32592/Melotone 12520/Perfect 12852/Conqueror 8009, 1932)
Simmons Sacred Singers, "Precious Memories" (OKeh 45299, 1929; rec. 1928)
Sister Rosetta Tharpe, "Precious Memories" (Decca 48070, c. 1948)
Turkey Mountain Singers, "Precious Memories" (Bluebird B-5532, 1934)
Uncle Henry's Original Mountaineers, "Precious Memories" (Capitol 48035, 1949)
SAME TUNE:
Dreadful Memories (by Aunt Molly Jackson and/or Sarah Ogun Gunning) (Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, pp. 274-275; DT, DREDMEM; Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp.
385-386)
NOTES [70 words]: Richard Dress writes, "Penned by Texas songwriter John Wright in 1877, this Roy Acuff hit and Wade Mainer favorite was first published in V. O. Stamps first songbook Harbor Bells in 1925. The McDonald Quartette recorded it for Banner in 1932, the Royal Quartet for Decca in 1935, Claude Sharpe & the Old Hickory Singers for Columbia in 1945, and the Johnson Family Singers for Columbia in 1951 (crediting J. Wright)." - RBW
Last updated in version 4.5
File: oooPrecM

Precious Name (Take the Name of Jesus With You) DESCRIPTION: "Take the name of Jesus with you, Child of sorrow and of woe, It will joy and comfort give you, Take it then where're you go. Precious name, O how sweet." It is hope, it is a shield from temptation; all should fall at his feet and crown him

AUTHOR: Words: Lydia Odell Baxter (1809-1874) / Music: William Howard Doane (1832-1915)

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (High-OldOldFolkSongs); words reportedly written 1870 and the music in 1871

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Jesus

REFERENCES (1 citation):
High-OldOldFolkSongs, p. 37, "Take the Name of Jesus With You" (1 text)

NOTES [240 words]: John Julian, editor, A Dictionary of Hymnology, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes), pp. 304-305, has this to say about the author of this tune: "Doane, W. H., b[orn] in Preston, Connecticut in 1831, and educated for the musical profession by eminent American and German masters. He has had for years the superintendence of a large Baptist Sunday School in Ohio, where he resides.... His most popular melodies include 'Near the Cross,' "Safe in the Arms of Jesus,' "Pass me not,' 'More Love to Thee,' 'Rescue the perishing,' 'Tell me the old, old story,' &c." His work was as a composer, not a writer of lyrics.
Julian, pp. 118, tells us that author Baxter, "an American Baptist, was b[orn] at Petersburg, N[ew] York, Sept. 2, 1809, married to Mr. Baxter, and d[ied] in N[ew] Y[ork] June 22, 1874. In addition to her Gems by the Wayside, 1855, Mrs. Baxter contributed many hymns to collections for Sunday Schools, and Evangelistic Services." Julian lists nine songs of importance from her pen: "Cast thy net again, my brother," "Go, work in my vineyard," "I'm kneeling, Lord, at mercy's gate," "I'm weary, I'm fainting, my day's work is done," "In the fadeless spring-time," "One by one we cross the river," "The Master is coming," "There is a gate that stands ajar," and this. Of which it is said, "Written late in 1870, or early in 1871, for W. H. Doane, and published in Pure Gold, 1871." - RBW

File: High037

Pree Her Honey Mou'

DESCRIPTION: Boy meets girl on the way to Brewe. He begins to lift her apron and kiss her mouth. She rejects him. He would leave. She says, if he's kind, maybe she'll lift her apron. They have sex but he leaves her at the fair. Moral: don't let men lift your apron.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan7)

KEYWORDS: courting sex warning

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1407, "Pree Her Honey Mou'" (1 text)
Roud #7259

File: GrD71407

Presbyterian Cat, The (The Cameronian Cat)

DESCRIPTION: "There was an auld Seceder's cat, Gaed hunting for a prey, And ben the house she catched a mouse Upon the Sabbath day." The cat, returning home, is condemned by her owner for violating the Sabbath, read a lesson -- and executed

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1819 (Hogg-JacobiteRelicsOfScotlandVol1)

KEYWORDS: animal trial execution clergy

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland) US(NE)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Hogg-JacobiteRelicsOfScotlandVol1 22, "The Cameronian Cat" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan3 689, "The Presbyterian Cat" (1 text)
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 319-321, "The Cameronian Cat" (1 text)
DT, CAMERCAT

Roud #4576

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Auld Seceder's Cat

NOTES [59 words]: Hogg-JacobiteRelicsOfScotlandVol1: "This is another popular country song, and very old.... [It] is always sung by the wags in mockery of great pretended strictness of the Covenanters, which is certainly, in some cases, carried to an extremity rather ludicrous.... The air is very sweet, but has a strong resemblance to one of their popular psalm-tunes." - BS

Last updated in version 2.4
File: FVS319

Prescott's Confession
DESCRIPTION: Broadside. "Ye people all assembled here To see me suffer death, Draw near the guilty wretch and hear...." The singer denies insanity, tells how he lured his victim into the fields, describes his murder, and bids farewell
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Burt-AmericanMurderBallads)
KEYWORDS: homicide punishment execution
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
  June 1833 - "Prescott" murders his benefactor Sally Cochran and is apprehended by her husband
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 66-67, "Prescott's Confession of the Murder of MRS. SALLY COCHRAN, By a Private Individual at the Bar" (1 text, excerpted)
File: Burt066

Present Time is Oors, The DESCRIPTION: "Come, let us a' be hearty boys, the moments we are here" because we may have only a few years, "maybe only hoors" Don't bother accumulating wealth. "Let ministers say what they will" but drink, as they do, "laugh and sing, The present time is oors"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: death drink music nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Greig/Duncan3 550, "The Present Time is Oors" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6026
NOTES [49 words]: It is perhaps mildly ironic to observe that the singer says to ignore ministers, yet this is very much like the message of Jesus's parable of the Rich Fool (Luke 12:16-20), who builds barns for all his wealth, but then is told by God, "Fool! This very night your life is demanded of you." - RBW
Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD3550

Presented at Court
DESCRIPTION: "I may be wrong, but I presume... There are very few here in this room now Who've had an audience with the Queen." The singer hasn't, but describes it anyway, including the fancy clothes and ceremony -- and the twenty shilling fine for the drunk
AUTHOR: Words: Charles R. Thatcher (1831-1878)
EARLIEST DATE: 1864 (Thatcher's "Songs of the War")
KEYWORDS: humorous royalty drink money clothes
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, pp. 53-54, "Presented at Court" (1 text, tune referenced)
NOTES [29 words]: For brief background on Charles Thatcher's career, see the notes to "Where's
Your License?" For an extensive collection of his songs, see Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong.
- RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: BaRo053
President Wilson

DESCRIPTION: "Come out Virginia's noble son, We know that you are true, The people of our grand old land They have their hope in you... We'll cast our vote again." "A modest unassuming man." "And we shall win, our cause is just.... it's Wilson's name we hear."

AUTHOR: Words: John J. Friend

EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks)

KEYWORDS: political nonballad

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1912 - Woodrow Wilson becomes the Democratic nominee for President, and wins when Taft and Theodore Roosevelt split the Republican vote
1916 - Wilson re-elected

NOTES [3201 words]: Presumably a campaign song, but a very strange one, containing neither significant facts nor any real slogans. The only connection with reality that I can see is the mention that Wilson came from Virginia; according to DeGregorio, p. 411, (Thomas) Woodrow Wilson "was born December 28, 1856 at the Presbyterian manse in Staunton, Virginia."

He wasn't much of a Virginian, however; his parents married in Ohio, then moved to Virginia, where Wilson was born on December 28, 1856. But in 1858, the Wilson family moved to Georgia (Brands, p. 2), and "Tommy" Wilson said that his first memory was when word came in Georgia that Lincoln had been elected President and that war was coming (DeGregorio, p. 411). His family later spent time in South and North Carolina. His father even served in the Confederate army in the Civil War (Brands, p. 2). Wilson regarded himself as a southerner, even though he went to Princeton in 1875 and spent most of his life in the North.

It showed. Chace, p. 43, says Wilson's father had no problems with slavery, and "Woodrow Wilson was in essence a white supremacist." A Black newsletter editor declared, "Both by inheritance and absorption, he has most of the prejudices of the narrowest type of Southern white people against the Negro." His favorite movie was reportedly D. W. Griffith's famous, but famously bigoted, "The Birth of a Nation" (Brands, p. 133). When he became President, "Wilson presided over a policy of draconian segregation in the federal government, resulting in a significant loss of black patronage jobs and the extension of Jim Crow laws into federal agencies" (Chace, pp. 243-244). He wasn't much more willing to accept Italians or Poles or Czechs (Chace, pp. 135-136).

Calling Wilson "unassuming" is a bit of a stretch; he didn't think much of his looks, or even of his ability to present himself (DeGregorio, p. 409), but he placed an extreme value on his moral judgment. This even though he had some sort of learning problem and did not learn to read until he was ten years old (Brands, p. 3). "The Wilson historian Arthur Link notes the 'curious limitations in Wilson's intellectual processes.' As he told a reporter in 1916, he hadn't read a serious book through in the fourteen years after accepting the presidency of Princeton." Thus he avoided exposure to anything that might broaden his narrow-mindedness.

Despite this, he became fascinated with writing and debating (Brands, pp. 4-6), and proved surprisingly good at both. Indeed, at times he almost seemed to "be" his rhetoric; he said himself that, by comparison to Theodore Roosevelt, "I am a vague, conjectural personality, more made up of opinion and academic presuppositions than of human traits and red corpuscles" (Chace, p. 3).

He had few friends -- and very likely was too easily influenced by seeming friends such as Edward House as a result (Brands, p. 28 -- on p. 64, Brands suggests that he had no friends at all except for his wife, which is one reason why he became deeply depressed when she died, even though he had probably betrayed her not long earlier.)

Because his success was based on words rather than deeds, Wilson become noteworthy at a fairly young age. Jameson, p. 717, sums up the first forty years of his life thus: "Wilson, Woodrow, born in 1856, professor at Princeton College, has become prominent for his writings upon political science. He wrote 'Congressional Government, a Study in American Politics,' and 'The State;' also a historical book, 'Divison and Reunion, 1830-1860.'"

Wilson had a very unusual career before running for president. He tried law school but couldn't stand it and quit (Brands, p. 9); he did try to practice law, but was not comfortable with it (Brands, p. 10).

As a result, in 1883, he went to the new John Hopkins graduate school and studied political science (Brands, p. 11; Chace, p. 45). He went on to be a professor, lecturer, and author, not a politician (DeGregorio, p. 414). Ironically for the president in history's greatest war up to that time, he had no military experience at all -- he and his predecessor, William Howard Taft, were the only...
Presidents since Fillmore to have no military background at all when they became President. Wilson did apply for a State Department post in 1887, but didn't get it. His only political experience before becoming President, therefore, was his single term as governor of New Jersey (1911-1913) -- although he had also been President of Princeton for eight years (DeGregorio, p. 414). In that post, he spent most of his time cracking down on student behavior and trying to adjust the academic standards to meet his criteria (Chace, p. 39). (He had also changed what he called himself, ceasing to go by "Tommy" or "Thomas" and instead using the name "Woodrow"; Brands, p. 12).

Although sometimes regarded as a reformer, he was ultimately conservative -- he wanted to clean things up but not change things much, and "advocated one goal above all others -- social order" (Chace, p. 44). He generally did not side with unions and unionism, e.g. (Chace, p. 51), and supported "individual liberty" (Brands, p. 21), which would certainly be called a right-wing position today. He opposed a minimum wage (Chace, p. 206). "His treatment of crises in American History from Shays' Rebellion to the Pullman strike and the Haymarket affair was in the conventional ruling-class vein.... Wilson was not nearly so critical of the business community as of Populists and trade unions" (HofstadterTradition, p. 316).

Plus his Presbyterianism was fairly hard-line -- and very self-serving; he once told off a colleague to whom he owed a great deal that "God ordained that I should be the next president of the United States," In other words, he claimed that he could do what he wanted, including ignoring his political debts, because God had arranged that it would be so (Brands, pp. 24-25).

Stokesburt, p. 309, says of Wilson, "As a fervent believer in the most complete kind of democracy, he yet had a Cromwellian ability to conclude that whatever he himself wanted was what democracy wanted.... Wherever he went [during the post-World War I peace negotiations], he was hailed as a modern messiah, and he tended to take this as no more than his due." Chace, p. 46, comments that he "was lucky to have a wife who catered to his violent mood swings." Among other things, she let him go to Bermuda, alone, in 1907. Where it seems likely that the Great Moral Leader had an affair (Chace, pp. 46-47; Brands, p. 63). Later, he would send the woman, Mary Hulbert Peck, a gift of $7000 (Chace, p. 250). Details of what happened are few, but there isn't much doubt that Wilson left himself open to major scandal in this period.

Ironically, when Theodore Roosevelt learned of Wilson's transgression, he refused to use it as a campaign issue, saying, "Nothing, no evidence could ever make the American people believe that a man like Woodrow Wilson, cast so perfectly as the apothecary's clerk, could ever play Romeo" (Chace, p. 206).

Ellen Axson Wilson died of kidney disease in 1914, which would affect Wilson's future behavior (Brands, p. 63; Chace, p. 250, says that it was specifically Bright's Disease), of course no one could know of that in 1912.

He also had health problems. As early as 1896, he might have had a slight stroke, and another, perhaps worse, in 1906, along with a burst blood vessel in his eye. In 1908, he briefly lost the use of his right hand (Brands, pp. 122-123; Chace, pp. 45, 268).

By 1910, his attempts to bring changes to Princeton had aroused such opposition that he had little choice but to give up his post. He was fortunate that George Harvey wanted him to move to politics; this let Wilson resign with dignity to run for Governor of New Jersey (Chace, p. 50).

Wilson was very lucky to be nominated President. To give him his due, he did a good job of cleaning up the mare's nest of New Jersey politics (Morison, p. 839). But that was hardly enough to earn him a Presidential nomination -- except that the party was divided. It had "Bryan Progressives," it had Easterners (often immigrants), and it had the conservative South (Morison, p. 839). In 1912, a majority of the delegates were pledged to Champ Clark of Missouri. But the party required a two-thirds supermajority to nominate. And Clark could not achieve that, although he came very close -- so close that Wilson nearly dropped out of the contest. William Jennings Bryan, seeing that he could not earn the nomination himself, decided to back Wilson (Nevins/Commager, p. 405; Brands, p. 20; Chace, p. 155; for more details both on Clark and the Democratic nomination process, see the notes to "The Hound Dog Song").

It still took 46 ballots to nominate Wilson. Bryan gave Wilson his support on ballot #14; Wilson finally gained a majority on ballot #28, but still had only a slight lead on ballot #45, when suddenly everyone seemed to get tired and turn to him (DeGregorio, p. 415).

And, in 1912, earning the Democratic nomination meant being elected, because the Republicans were split. William Howard Taft had been Theodore Roosevelt's hand-picked successor in 1908, and in many ways he proved progressive; Nevins/Commager, p. 404, note that "He stepped up the prosecution of trusts; strengthened the Interstate Commerce Commission.... expanded the merit system in the civil service; and sponsored enactment of two amendments to the Federal Constitution -- one providing direct election of Senators, another authorizing an income tax."
But he was a sort of a frumpy liberal; a few measures, such as a tariff he accepted even though he didn't like it (and then absurdly called it the best bill ever passed by the Republicans; Chace, p. 34), caused the progressive to turn against him. At the Republican convention of 1912, Theodore Roosevelt and Robert M. LaFollette both ran against him (it was LaFollette who really began the revolt, in 1911; Neivins/Commager, p. 404). Where popular vote elected the delegates, Roosevelt won overwhelmingly (according to Chace, p. 113, he had taken 278 delegates that way, to 48 for Taft and 36 for LaFollette) -- but the party bosses, who chose most of the delegates, backed Taft, and he became the Republican nominee (Morison, p. 838. There is some dispute about just how "legal" all the maneuvers of the Republican National Committee were, but there is no question but that Roosevelt felt robbed; Chace, p. 116).

Roosevelt wouldn't accept that; he accepted the "Progressive" nomination, although most people called him the "Bull Moose" nominee. Certainly his was the most progressive political contention; not only were there Black delegates, the Progressives even allowed women delegates (Chace, p. 161). Taft, unfairly, was "put in the position of the 'conservative' candidate" (Hofstadter/Reform, p. 133).

Wilson, urged on by advisor Louis D. Brandeis, offered his vision of a "New Freedom," by which he did not mean, say, equal rights for women and minorities, or labor rights, but rather a control on monopolies (Chace, pp. 194-195). He openly scorned the idea of "government by experts" (Chace, p. 203), partly no doubt to appeal to populists but also (I suspect) because he had never himself managed to become expert on any subject that required interacting with actual facts.

At least Wilson campaigned. So did Roosevelt. Taft, who didn't like being President, mostly played golf (Chace, pp. 220-221).

In a truly complicating twist, there was an attempt to assassinate Roosevelt. He survived, but would-be assassin John Shrank did put a bullet in him. Roosevelt being Roosevelt, he actually went ahead with his planned speech (Chace, pp. 230-231). But eventually he had to rest. It resulted in a brief halt in the campaign (Chace, p. 235), which I suspect helped Wilson. Later, Taft's vice president James Sherman died (Chace, pp. 235-236) -- though that hardly mattered since Taft wasn't really campaigning anyway.

When the election came, Wilson won a mere 42% of the vote, with Roosevelt taking 27%, Taft 23%, and Socialist Eugene Debs 6% -- the best result ever for a Socialist, although it didn't win him any electoral votes (Chace, p. 238). Thus the two Republican candidates, who had once been close friends, garnered 50% of the total vote -- but Wilson had 435 electoral votes, to 88 for Roosevelt and 8 for Taft (DeGregorio, p. 417; Chace, p. 239). It was the lowest vote percentage for a winning candidate since Lincoln in 1860 (when there was a four-way party split), and America would not see the like until the election of Bill Clinton.

In the period before World War I, Wilson worked on systematic improvements in government. Some would be seen as very modern now, such as the actual implementation of the progressive income tax -- but it was a very small income tax, and it merely offset the reduction in tariffs (Brands, p. 34), which was a conservative proposal. He supported a watered-down version of Clayton Antitrust Act, which refined the scope of the older Sherman Anti-Trust Act but was not much different in intent (Brands, pp. 36-38). He founded the Federal Reserve, although it was some time before it really figured out its role (Brands, pp. 35-36). He also created the Federal Trade Commission (Chace, p. 244), but that too was of limited import. The Seventeenth Amendment to the U. S. Constitution, providing for direct election of senators, was approved early in his term, but it had been sent to the states before his election, so his credit for that is slight.

His outlook was quite parochial; he had studied American history, and it was his only real interest. Before his inauguration, he commented, "It would be the irony of fate if my administration had to deal chiefly with foreign affairs" (Brands, p. 42; Chace, p. 243). A year and a half later, said irony came to pass.... Indeed, almost from day one, he had to deal with the problem of a non-democratic Mexican government (Brands, pp. 44-45). His interventions there -- and his decisions to send troops to Haiti in 1915 and the Dominican Republic in 1916 (Brands, p. 50), demonstrate that his commitment to peace was not nearly as great as his supporters thought. But he was probably initially influenced by the pacifist William Jennings Bryan (Brands, pp. 54-55), who was his Secretary of State. All that would change when Bryan quit over the Lusitania sinking and Wilson's response (Brands, p. 62).

In late 1915, less than half a year after his first wife's death, Wilson remarried, taking Edith Galt as his second wife in December 1915 (Brands, pp. 67-68). The song refers to casting "our votes again," implying Wilson is up for re-election, and also speaks of "soldiers coming back once more," implying that World War I has started. Plus Wilson is called "President," not "candidate" or "governor." This implies that Friend's broadside is from 1916, not 1912 -- but it truly does not mention any issues of the 1916 election.
That election was very close; Theodore Roosevelt, who could perhaps have made the Progressive party a permanent institution by running again, instead effectively shut it down by deciding to support the regular Republican candidate Charles Evens Hughes (Chace, p. 252). The Socialists had split, and Eugene Debs wasn't on the ticket, so they weren't a factor (Chace, pp. 254-255; Debs and the Socialists would get 3.5% of the vote in 1920, but it was all downhill from there; Chace, p. 259). Initial reports had Hughes winning the popular vote, and some newspapers thought Hughes had won the election. But late results, especially from the West Coast, let Wilson eke out re-election (Brands, p. 72. Wilson won only 49% of the popular vote, to 46% for Hughes, but Wilson won every state west of the Mississippi except Oregon, South Dakota, Minnesota, and Iowa -- HammondAtlas, p. U-60 -- explaining his late surge).

The irony is that, before Wilson even started his second term, the Germans sent the Zimmerman Telegram to Mexico, and again geared up for unlimited submarine warfare, and Wilson had to decide how much provocation he would accept before he would go to war (Brands, p. 78). He asked for the declaration of war on April 2, 1917 (Brands, pp. 79-80).

In its aftermath came the draft (which Wilson had earlier opposed -- and Champ Clark, we might add, still opposed) and the sedition laws that resulted in the arrest of Eugene Debs among others (Brands, p. 84; Chace, pp. 256-258; Wilson seemed to like the law that muzzled his critics despite its obvious violation of the First Amendment). Wilson, the conservative-at-heart, was becoming a big-government man, though a rather corporate one. In 1918, the Democrats lost control of congress (Brands, p. 99) -- which cost Wilson much of his control over the peace process. His refusal to include Republicans in his negotiating team (Chace, p. 267) left them with no investment in the result, which surely cost the treaty votes. His blindness to others' thinking didn't help, either -- he couldn't keep up with slippery "allies" like Lloyd George and Clemenceau (Brands, pp. 109-111), so he ended up with a League of Nations which was too weak to actually promote collective security but not weak enough to satisfy his congressional opponents. And when he campaigned for it, he was confrontational and treated those whom he needed to convince as if they were opponents (Brands, pp. 118-119).

Wilson revealed some of his own opinions at the time: "'If I didn't believe that I was the personal instrument of God I couldn't carry on.' In contrast, Lloyd George remarked after the peace conference, 'I think I did as well as might be expected, seated as I was between Jesus Christ [presumably Wilson] and Napoleon [Clemenceau]'" (Chace, p. 268). You'd think, if God actually were using Wilson for something, that in addition to the call for the League of Nations, there would have been a message for Wilson not to be a bigot. And, perhaps, to stop being a jerk.... In the aftermath of all that effort, Wilson suffered another and worse stroke -- one so bad that it reportedly changed his personality (Brands, p. 123). But even that was just a foretaste of what was to come. It started with pain and shortness of breath. After hurrying back to Washington (he had been out campaigning for the League), on October 2, 1919, he fell in the bathroom, and thereafter was paralyzed on his left side. (Chace, pp. 124-125). His doctor, his personal advisors, and his wife never revealed how bad it was, but it was bad enough that Wilson never really fulfilled his duties again (Chace, p. 126). And, with the President unable to lobby for the League of Nations, and either unwilling or unable to compromise on the League treaty, the treaty failed (Brands, pp. 127-129; on p. 271, Chace comments that Wilson's "moral rigidity grew worse" after the stroke, which is amazing considering that he was already as ornery as a senile mule). So his best ever idea failed due to his health issue.

The conclusion on p. 131 of Brans is that "Woodrow Wilson lived too long and then died too soon." He lived until February 3, 1924, but he was never able to do anything after his major stroke (Brands, pp. 133-135). - RBW

Bibliography

- Chace: James Chace, 1912: Wilson, Roosevelt, Taft & Debs -- the Election That Changed the Country, Simon & Schuster, 2004
- HammondAtlas: (no author listed), The Atlas of United States History (Hammond; I'm using the edition copyrighted 1977 though I imagine there have been others)
- HofstadterTradition: Richard Hofstadter, The American Political Tradition, 1948 (I use the 1989 Vintage edition with a Foreword by Christopher Lasch)
- Jameson: J. Franklin Jameson, Dictionary of United States History 1492-1895, Puritan President's Proclamation, The

DESCRIPTION: "John brown died on a scaffold for a slave... Now God avenges the life he gladly gave... Freedom reigns today." "John Brown lives -- we are gaining on our foes." "John Brown's soul not a higher joy can crave -- Freedom reigns today."

AUTHOR: Words: Edna Dean Proctor
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar); almost certainly written 1862/1863
KEYWORDS: Civilwar Black(s) death execution memorial burial rebellion slavery
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1862 - Preliminary Emancipation Proclamation
1863 - Emancipation Proclamation
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, p. 25, "The President's Proclamation" (1 text, tune referenced)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "John Brown's Body" (tune) and references there
NOTES [71 words]: It is one of history's noteworthy ironies that the Emancipation Proclamation, listed as freeing the slaves, did not immediately free any at all; it declared freedom only for the Blacks in rebel-controlled territories, who of course could not be freed until the lands were taken over. But it did change the course of the Civil War.
Of course, John Brown was a genuine fanatic, and he had very little to do with freeing anyway. - RBW

Presidents, The (The Presidents in Rhyme)

DESCRIPTION: To the tune of "Yankee Doodle": "George Washington, first President, by Adams was succeeded, And Thomas Jefferson was next, For the people's cause he pleaded...." And so on, through as many presidents as the teacher can think up rhymes for

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: nonballad political derivative
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1789-1797 - Administration of George Washington
1797-1801 - John Adams
1801-1809 - Thomas Jefferson
1809-1817 - James Madison. War of 1812. (1815: Battle of New Orleans, fought by Andrew Jackson)
1817-1825 - James Monroe
1825-1829 - John Quincy Adams
1829-1837 - Andrew Jackson (who previously won the Battle of New Orleans)
1837-1841 - Martin Van Buren
1841 - William Henry Harrison (died in office)
1841-1845 - John Tyler (filled out Harrison's term; he was a near-Democrat in Whig's clothing, and his succession led to constitutional and legislative crises)
1845-1849 - James K. Polk (began the war with Mexico and annexed Texas)
1849-1850 - Zachary Taylor (died in office)
1850-1853 - Millard Fillmore
1853-1857 - Franklin Pierce
1857-1861 - James Buchanan
1861-1865 - Abraham Lincoln (assassinated)
1865-1869 - Andrew Johnson (a Democrat who succeeded Lincoln. The partisan Republicans in congress impeached him on trivial grounds and tried to deprive him of office, failing by only one vote in the Senate)
1869-1877 - Ulysses S. Grant (the victor, more or less, at the Battle of Shiloh in 1862)
1877-1881 - Rutherford B. Hayes
1881 - James A. Garfield (assassinated)
1881-1885 - Chester A. Arthur
1885-1889 - Grover Cleveland (first term)
1889-1893 - Benjamin Harrison
1893-1897 - Grover Cleveland (second term)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Randolph 877, "The Presidents" (1 text)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 390-391, "The Presidents" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 877)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Yankee Doodle" (tune) and references there

NOTES [122 words]: This song probably originated some time in the nineteenth century, and has been periodically extended. Randolph's version, for instance, extends into the second administration of Cleveland, but it has been extended at least as far as Franklin Roosevelt. - RBW
It's been further extended, by Oscar Brand (up through Eisenhower) and yours truly (through Bush [Senior]). No doubt the Clinton verse will be, er, interesting. - PJS
Given the political tendencies of most folk singers, I suspect Bush Junior will get some interesting verses of his own....

Another anonymous poem on this general theme, "Our Presidents" (which runs through Wilson) is found on p. 603 of Hazel Felleman's The Best Loved Poems of the American People. - RBW

File: R877

Press Gang (I), The
DESCRIPTION: The singer meets a press gang in London who ask if he'd join the fleet. He agrees after they tell "shocking lies" to him about life on board. Once on board he is flogged. He had run away from his wife but now would be happy not to go to sea again.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (ENMacCollSeeger02)
KEYWORDS: sea ship ordeal sailor pressgang lie abuse
FOUND IN: Britain(England(West))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople 62, "Man of War" (1 text)
DT, PRSSGANG
Roud #662
RECORDINGS:
Ewan MacColl and Peggy Seeger, "The Press Gang" (on ENMacCollSeeger02)
File: RcTPrGan

Pretend You're Red Watch
DESCRIPTION: "Pretend you're red watch when you're blue, It isn't very hard to do. Your oppo's station card will do, my friend, If only you'll pretend."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: sailor trick derivative
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 49, "Pretend You're Red Watch" (1 text, tune referenced)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Pretend" (tune)
Prettiest Little Girl in the County-O
DESCRIPTION: "Prettiest little girl in the county-o, Papa and mama both said so. All dressed up in calico, I'm gonna take her to the party-o. "I can get her if I want her."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recording, Gid Tanner, according to Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices)
KEYWORDS: courting clothes beauty
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, p. 111, "Prettiest Little Girl in the County" (1 tune with a few lyrics quoted in the notes)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #136, "Prettiest Little Gal in the County, O" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #5052
RECORDINGS:
Gid Tanner & His Skillet Lickers, "Prettiest Little Girl in the County" (Columbia 15315-D)

Prettiest Little Song of All, The DESCRIPTION: "When the pretty little birds are singing In the evening by the pale moonlight... It speaks to me in accents free Of one that's ever far and yet so near... The sweetest song I ever heard is one of home and mother."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: home mother nonballad separation
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 848, "The Prettiest Little Song of All" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7449

Pretty Betsey [Laws M18]
DESCRIPTION: Betsey loves William; her father so despises him that he brutally abuses Betsey. With Betsey's mother's help, William is able to pay a last visit, only to have Betsey die in his arms
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952
KEYWORDS: courting abuse death
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Laws M18, "Pretty Betsey"
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 75, "Pretty Betsey" (1 text)
DT 722, PRETBETS
Roud #1911
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Andrew Lammie" [Child 233] (plot)
NOTES [38 words]: This presence of this song in Laws is rather a curiosity: Laws knows only of the copy in Brown, and the notes to that book admit of no other version -- but Laws not only lists it as traditional but as being of British origin. - RBW

Pretty Betsy the Milkmaid (Blackberry Fold) [Laws O10]
DESCRIPTION: The squire sees Pretty Betsy, and offers to marry her. She begs him not to tease a poor girl. He gives her half of a broken ring as a token. He tries to seduce her, then rape her, but she fends him off. He gives in and marries her
AUTHOR: unknown
Pretty Boy Floyd

DESCRIPTION: "Come gather 'round me children, a story I will tell, About Pretty Boy Floyd, the outlaw; Oklahoma knew him well." The singer tells how Floyd turned outlaw when a deputy attacked his wife, and describes Floyd's many charities

AUTHOR: Woody Guthrie

EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (recording, Woody Guthrie)

KEYWORDS: outlaw police robbery help

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 227, "Pretty Boy Floyd" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, pp. 296-297, "Pretty Boy Floyd" (1 text, 1 tune)
- DT, BOYFLOYD*

Roud #11504

RECORDINGS:
- Woody Guthrie, "Pretty Boy Floyd" (on Struggle2)
- Pete Seeger, "Pretty Boy Floyd" (on PeteSeeger19) (on PeteSeeger41)

File: LoF227

Pretty Caroline

DESCRIPTION: A sailor tells Caroline that her parents had "pressed me on board of a man-o-war from pretty Caroline." He has returned rich. She asks that he show the gold ring and lock of hair that would identify him. He does. They marry.

AUTHOR: G. Brown? (source: broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3147))

EARLIEST DATE: before 1867 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3146))

KEYWORDS: courting marriage ring return sailor broken-token

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 677, "Pretty Caroline" (1 text)
- Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 88, "Pretty Caroline" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 73, "Pretty Caroline" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pretty Fair Maid (The Maiden in the Garden; The Broken Token) [Laws N42]

DESCRIPTION: A girl refuses to be courted by a stranger, saying she will wait for her love. The stranger counters that he may be slain, drowned, or unfaithful; she says she will be faithful anyway. He pulls out his locket, revealing him as her lost, and now rich, love.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1822

KEYWORDS: courting separation brokentoken

FOUND IN: US(Ap, MA, MW, SE, So, SW) Canada(Mar, Newf) Britain(England(All), Scotland(Aber)) Ireland West Indies(Bahamas)

REFERENCES (68 citations):
Laws N42, "Pretty Fair Maid (The Maiden in the Garden; The Broken Token)"
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 148-151, "A Sweetheart in the Army" (3 texts plus references to 2 more, 1 tune)
Randolph 55, "The Maiden in the Garden" (3 texts plus 1 fragment and 1 excerpt, 2 tunes)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 97-99, "The Maiden in the Garden" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 55A)
Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart1 11, "A Pretty Fair Maid" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 51, "A Pretty Fair Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 165-166, "The Broken Ring" (1 text, 1 tune)
McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks, pp. 45-47, "The Sailor and the Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2, "A Pretty Fair Maid in the Garden" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3, "Madam, I Have Gold and Silver" (1 text, starting with "Wheel of Fortune" but ending with a "Ripest of Apples" verse and ending with a Riley stanza, from this or some other ballad of this type)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4, "A Pretty Fair Maid Down in the Garden" (2 texts plus 12 excerpt, 14 tunes)
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 68, "Betty Fair Miss" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jones-MinstrelofTheAppalachians-Bascom-Lamar-Lunsford, p. 202, "The Pretty Fair Miss (Soldier's Return)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Smith-SouthCarolinaBallads, #XV, "A Pretty Fair Miss" (1 text, 1 tune)
Morris-FolkSongsOfFlorida, #186, "Pretty Fair Maid" (2 texts, 1 tune); #201, "Sailor's Return" (1 text, which opens with a "No, John, No" stanza)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 36, pp. 160-151, "A Pretty Fair Maid" (1 text); also 37, pp. 151-152, "Annie Girl" (1 text, which conflates 2 verses of "The Drowsy Sleeper" [Laws M4], 2 or 3 of "Wheel of Fortune (Dublin City, Spanish Lady)" or "No, John, No: or similar, and 3 verses probably of this)
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 72, pp. 118-119, "Pretty Fair Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol1, pp. 80-81, "Lover's Return" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, pp 7-9, "Pretty Fair Miss" (1 text, 1 tune); p. 89, "Pretty Fair Maiden" (1 short text)
Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #14, "Sweetheart in the Army" (1 short text, 1 tune, likely this although it's short enough -- just three verses about a lover in the army who might be dead -- that it might be a similar song)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 98, "The Broken Token" (6 texts, 6 tunes) Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 134-139, "Broken Ring Song" (5 texts, 2 tunes)
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 28, "Broken Ring" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 59, "Broken Ring Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 24, "Broken Ring Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, pp. 126-127, "Broken Ring" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 584-589, "Seven Years I Loved a Sailor" (3 texts, 3 tunes; the "C" text, "Flowery Garden," grafts the "Poison in a Glass of Wine" theme (cf. "Oxford City" [Laws P30]) as the ending)
Fowke/MacMillan-PenguinBookOfCanadianFolkSongs 65, "The Sailor's Return" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 63, "The Single Sailor" (2 texts)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 701-703, "A Sweetheart in the Army" (2 texts)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 15, "The Broken Token" (1 text)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #71, "Fair Maid Walking in Her Garden" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brocklebank/Kindersley-DorsetBookOfFolkSongs, p. 17, "A Fair Maid Walking All in Her Garden" (1 text, 1 tune)
OLochlann-IrishStreetBallads 2, "A Lady Fair" (1 text, 1 tune)
McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen 47, "The Lady Fair" (1 text, 1 tune)
OBoyle-TheIrishSongTradition, p. 34, "A Lady Fair" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 184, "Thérè Was a Lady In Her Father's Garden" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Graham-Joe-Holmes-SongsMusicTraditionsOfAnUlsterman 45, "A Maid in a Floewery Garden" (1 text, 1 tune)
OShaughnessy/Grainger-TwentyOneLincolnshireFolkSongs 7, "A Fair Maid Walking All in Her Garden" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wyman/Brockway-LonesomeSongs-KentuckyMountains-Vol1, p. 88, "The Sweetheart in the Army" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, pp. 77-78, "Soldier, Won't You Marry Me?" (1 text, in which, despite the title, the soldier asks the girl to marry, not the reverse)
Cambiaire-EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads, pp. 64-65, "The Soldier's Return (A Pretty Fair Maid)" (1 text)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 83, "The Cowboy's Return" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 91-92, "A Pretty Fair Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 46-48, "A Pretty Fair Maid" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 22, "Johnny Riley" (1 text, 1 tune)
McNeil-SouthernFolkBalladsVol1, pp. 80-81, "Miss Mary Belle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 68-69, "A Pretty Fair Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 326-327, "The Brisk Young Sailor" (1 text)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #23, p. 1, "The Sailor" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan 1038, "The Single Sailor" (26 texts plus a single verse on p. 617, 16 tunes)
Greig/Duncan 1201, "She Put Her Hand into Her Bosom" (1 fragment)
Lyle-CrawfursCollectionVolume2 89, "Mary and Willie" (1 text)
VaughanWilliams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs, pp. 104-105, "The Young and Single Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 625, "Maid and the Sailor"; Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Ox 307, "Maid and the Sailor" (2 texts)
Abrahams/Foss-AngloAmericanFolksongStyle, pp. 117-118, "A Pretty Fair Miss All in a Garden" (1 text, 1 tune); also pp. 222-223 (1 tune, partial text)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 92, "A Pretty Fair Maid" (2 texts plus mention of 4 more; the "B" text includes stanzas from "Wheel of Fortune (Dublin City, Spanish Lady)")
Bush-FSoCentralWestVirginiaVol3, pp. 81-82, "A Pretty Fair Maiden In the Garden"; pp. 83-84, "A Pretty Fair Damself" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, pp. 128-129, "The Fair Maid in the Garden" (1 text, 1 tune)
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, p. 41, "A Pretty Fair Miss" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H471, p. 317, "The Broken Ring" (1 text, 1 tune); also probably H818, pp. 317-318, "Green Garden" (1 text, 1 tune)
MacColl/Seeger-TravellersSongsFromEnglandAndScotland 27, "The Sailor's Return" (3 texts, 3 tunes)
JournalOfAmericanFolklore, Elsie Clews Parsons, "Spirituals and Other Folklore from the Bahamas," Vol. 41, No. 162 (Oct-Dec 1928), Toasts and other verses: Abaco p. 467, ("One day I was walkin' along the street") (1 text)
DT 462, JREILLY* JREILLY3* JREILLY5
ADDITIONAL: W. Christie, editor, Traditional Ballad Airs (Edinburgh, 1876 (downloadable pdf by University of Edinburgh, 2007)), Vol I, pp. 264-265, "The Poor and Single Sailor" (1 tune)
James P. Leary, Compiler and Annotator, _Wisconsin Folklore_ University of Wisconsin Press, 2009, article "Kentucky Folksong in Northern Wisconsin" by Asher E. Treat, p. 227, "A Fair Damsel in a Garden" (1 text, 1 tune, sung by Pearl Jacobs Borusky)
Roud #264
RECORDINGS:
Clarence Ashley, "Pretty Fair Damsel" (on CloseHomeMS)
Acie Cargill, Debra Cowan, Kristina Olsen, "The Unbroken Token" (on HcargillFamily) [this version seems to have been somewhat rewritten by someone in the Tyler family]
Mary Cash, "Lady in Her Father's Garden" (on IRTravellers01)
Daisy Chapman, "The Poor and Single Sailor" (on SCDchapman01)
Elizabeth Cronin, "There Was A Lady In Her Father's Garden" (on IRECronin01)
Cousin Emmy [Cynthia May Carver], "Pretty Fair Miss Out In the Garden" (Decca 24213, 1947; on ConstSort1)
Louise Foreacre, "Down in Grandma's Garden" (on Stonemans01)
Warde & Pat Ford, "The Soldier's Sweetheart" (AFS 4204 B1, 1938; tr.; in AMMEM/Cowell)
Sarah Hawkes, "Returning Sweetheart" (on Persis1)
Roscoe Holcomb, "Fair Miss in the Garden" (on Holcomb1) (on FOTM)
Maggie Murphy, "Seven Years Since I Had a Sweetheart" (on IRHardys0ns)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Pretty Fair Miss Out in the Garden" (on NLCR06)
Dellie Norton, "Pretty Fair Miss In Her Garden" (on DarkHoll)
Sarah Anne O'Neill, "Standing in Yon Flowery Garden" (on Voice10)
Mrs. Clara Stevens, "Seven Years I Loved a Sailor" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
Mrs. William Towns, "A Fair Maid Walked in her Father's Garden" (on Ontario1)
Doug Wallin, "Pretty Fair Miss in a Garden" (on Wallins1)
Martin Young & Corbett Grigsby, "Pretty Fair Miss in the Garden" (on MMOKCD)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 17(180a), "The Loyal Sailor," J. Ferraby (Hull), 1803-1838; also Harding B 11(4354), Firth c.12(335), "Young and Single Sailor"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "John (George) Riley (I)" [Laws N36] and references there
cf. "The Bleacher Lassie" (tune, per Greig/Duncan5)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Sailor's Return
The Single Soldier
John Riley (III)
Flowery Garden
The Sailor Boy
The Sailor's Return
Seven Years I Loved a Sailor
A Lady in Her Garden Walking
A Fair Maid
A Lady Walking
NOTES [547 words]: Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio's version of this piece may be the only one of these disguised love songs in which the man admits what he is: A creep who sneaks up on his faithful true love.
The second Sam Henry version, "Green Garden," is marked as Laws N42, but with a question mark. I understand the editors' hesitation, but there are enough links to other texts of the song that I think we can list it here. It's not as if we need another Broken Token ballad....
Paul Stamler suggested filing Art Thieme's song "That's the Ticket" here. Since this index occasionally pretends to something resembling scholarship, I couldn't bring myself to do it. But if you want to see the essence of Broken Token absurdity, that song on Thieme03 probably sums it up as well as is humanly possible. - RBW
The last three verses of Mary Cash's version on IRTravellers01 are the "Phoenix Island" verses from "O'Reilly from the County Leitrim": as a result, the suitor is finally rejected. Jim Carroll's notes to IRTravellers01 cite another version from Mary Delaney who "had the suitor even more firmly rejected:
For it's seven years brings an alteration,
And seven more brings a big change to me,
Oh, go home young man,
choose another sweetheart,
Your serving maid I'm not here to be."

Mary Delaney's "Phoenix Island" on IRTravellers01 is even more extreme (see notes to "O'Reilly from the County Leitrim," which generally ends unfavorably for the suitor).

Greig/Duncan6 seems a poorly remembered fragment of the Laws N42 broken ring verse with sexes reversed: "She put her hand into her bosom With fingers neat and small And pulled out the gay gold ring I gave her at the ball" instead of "He put his hand into his pocket, His fingers they being long and small, Pulled out the ring that was broke between them; And when she saw it she down did fall." If there had been another verse there might have been a reason to assign it somewhere else. - BS

The motif of a virtuous girl in a garden is an ancient one. A source that would have been well-known in medieval times is that of Susanna, found in the apocryphal/deuterocanonical additions to the book of Daniel. This story invited elaboration -- and, indeed, we find such elaboration in the Middle English alliterative poem "A Pistel of Susan." This was popular enough to survive in five manuscripts (which is a substantial number), with the earliest being from the late fourteenth century (see Thorlac Turville-Petre, Alliterative Poetry of the Later Middle Ages: An Anthology, Routledge, 1989, p. 120).

On p. 121, Turville-Petre adds, "Susan is based on the story of Susan and the Elders.... The poet makes two notable alterations. In place of the account of how the Elders secretly burned with lust for Susan.... (Daniel xiii.10-14), the poet substitutes an extended description of Susan's garden (ll. 66-117). He also adds a moving stanza describing Susan's farewell-meeting with her husband Joachim after her condemnation (ll. 248-60). The effect of both alterations is to focus attention and sympathy on Susan."

On p. 122, Turville-Petre declares that the story in the Pistel makes Susan a romance heroine, from which it is only one step to a ballad. He also compares the story of Emily in Chaucer's Knight's Tale, lines 1034-1055. - RBW

Pretty Fair Widow, The (Lillie Shaw II)

DESCRIPTION: Pretty widow Lillie Shaw goes out one day but does not return. A search party fails to find her, but finally traces of blood are found, and then her body. "They searched the Preston house" and find her clothes; E.B. Preston is tried and hanged

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl)

KEYWORDS: homicide trial execution

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 115, "The Pretty Fair Widow (or, Lillie Shaw)" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST Wa115 (Partial)
Roud #4628

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Lillie Shaw" (subject)

NOTES [63 words]: Although there are two songs on this subject, and this one at least spread enough to be collected three times, no one seems to have found details on the fates of Lillie Shaw and Jim Wilcox/E. B. Preston.

Frank Proffit, who supplied the Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl ballad, claimed the murder took place in the 1880s in Mountain City, Tennessee. - RBW

Pretty Girl I Left Behind, The

DESCRIPTION: (The cowboy?) "is born to ramble And to leave the range he's rode so long." The singer will got to Coulter Canyon and cross Clark's Ferry. He'll meet the cowboys and miss the girl he left behind. He gives her a ring and hopes she'll think of him

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore)

KEYWORDS: cowboy travel separation ring

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, pp. 150-151, "The Pretty Girl I Left Behind" (1 text, from a damaged recording; part of the first stanza is missing)

Roud #4894

File: SaKo151

Pretty Girl Milking Her Cow, The

DESCRIPTION: "O 'twas on a bright mornin' in summer When I first heard her voice singin' low As he said to a colleen beside him, 'Who's the pretty girl milkin' the cow?"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1835 (broadside, Bodleian Firth b.26(457))

KEYWORDS: love work rejection

FOUND IN: US(MW) Ireland Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (8 citations):
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, pp. 58-59, "The Pretty Maid Milking Her Cow" (1 text)
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 57, "Cailin Deas Cruite Na MBo" (1 text, 1 tune)
McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnnishowen 14, "Cailin Deas Cruite na mBo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Munnelly/Deasy-TheMountCallanGarland-Tom-Lenihan 13, "Cailin Deas Cruite na mBo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 40, "Who's the Pretty Girl Milkin' the Cow?" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Korson-PennsylvaniavSongsAndLegends, pp. 370-371, "The Pretty Maid Milking Her Goat" (1 text, 1 tune, clearly rewritten)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 29, "Colleen Dhas Cruthin Amoe" (1 text, possibly a short form of this); pp. 47-48, "Pretty Maid Milking Her Cow" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1926, p. 129, "Pretty Maid Milking Her Cow" (1 reference)

Roud #3139

RECORDINGS:
Tom Lenihan, "Cailin Deas Cruite Na mBo" (on IRClare01)
Michael Murphy, "The Pretty Fair Maid Milking Her Cow" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
J. W. Myers, "Pretty Girl Milking Her Cow" (Berliner 1772, late 1890s)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth b.26(457), "The Pretty Maid Milking her Cow," G. Walker (Durham), 1797-1834; also Harding B 25(1563), Firth c.18(163), Harding B 11(2386), Harding B 11(2846), "[The] Pretty Maid Milking her Cow"; 2806 b.11(99), "Colleen Dhas Crutha Na Mho" ("It was on a fine summer's morning"), W. Birmingham (Dublin), c.1867; also 2806 c.15(127), Harding B 19(79), "Colleen Dhas Crutha Na Mho"

Murray, Mu23-y1:029, "Colleen Dhas Crutha na Mho," James Lindsay Jr (Glasgow), 19C

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Peistie Glen" (tune)
cf. "Cailin Deas" (tune)

SAME TUNE:
Poverty and Wealth ("How empty our freedom, oft vaunted, How hollow our liberty fair") (by Maurice Enright) (Foner, p. 250)

NOTES [184 words]: O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland seems more complete than Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag. He hears her singing and professes to be "your captive slave for the future." She is not taken in by his profession, nor by his claim that "The Indies afford no such jewel" or that he would trade "the wealth of great Omar... Devonshire's treasure ... the lamp of Aladdin" to "live poor on a mountain With colleen dhas cruthin amoe." He warns "a young maid is like a ship sailing, She don't know how long she may steer" and he asks her to marry. Samuel Lover in Rory O'More (1836) quotes this fragment: "I saw a young damsel--twas Noreen; Her ringlets did carelessly flow Oh: how I adore you, ma voureen Ma Colleen dhas crutheen na mbho." - BS
Some of the "Colleen Deas/Dhas" texts have no mention of the Pretty Maid or the singing; I'm not sure they’re the same, but am listing them so you can decide for yourself.

Korson's text "A Pretty Maid Milking Her Goat," is clearly a rewrite with humourous aspects. I'd suspect it of being by William N. Allen (Shan T. Boy) if it were in Wisconsin; it has his feel. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1

File: San040

Pretty Girls of Liverpool

DESCRIPTION: Sailors are at sea while landlubbers stay at home with their girls. In danger the captain says "don't be faint hearted, You shall see your girls again In spite of Bonaparte." We'll go home to our girls; when our money is gone we "plough the seas for more"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 19C (broadside, Bod17024 Harding B 25(1561)); 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)

KEYWORDS: courting navy war parting money sea ship nonballad sailor

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

Roud #V3382

RECORDINGS:
Paddy Duggan, "We'll Go To Sea No More" (on MUNFLA-Leach)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Bod17024 Harding B 25(1561), "Pretty Girls of Liverpool," unknown, no date; also Bod13003 Harding B 11(3152), "Pretty Girls of Liverpool"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Dixie Brown [Laws D7]" (lyrics)
NOTES [26 words]: In spite of the MUNFLA/Leach song title the text there agrees with the text of the broadside that "when our money is all spent we'll go to sea for more." - BS

Last updated in version 4.2

File: MunLPGoL

Pretty Little Dear

DESCRIPTION: The singer decides it's time to wed. He meets a girl in London who has him spend a fortune for food and drink. He is beaten and sentenced to prison when a man says his girl is a thief. Now out of jail, he warns others against pretty ladies.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1845 (broadside, Bodleian Johnson Ballads fol. 119)

LONG DESCRIPTION: The singer decides it's time to wed. He visits the Quadrant in London where he falls for a girl. They kiss and they go for a walk. She says she's hungry and wolfs a huge meal, and thirsty and drinks herself drunk. They meet a man who beats him because he is pals with the girl who had stolen his watch and ring. He complains to the magistrate who sentences him and the girl to six months hard labor. Now he is out of prison and says "I'll court a lass that's homely." He warns others against pretty ladies.

KEYWORDS: courting warning prison theft drink food humorous

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1328, "Pretty Little Dear" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

Roud #7146

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads fol. 119, "A Pretty Little Dear" ("One morning very early a strange thought came in my head"), J. Pitts (London), 1819-1844; also Harding B 11(3155), Firth b.34(241), Harding B 25(63), "[A][The] Pretty Little Dear"; Firth b.25(333), "My Pretty Little Dear"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Oh Cruel" (tune, per broadside Bodleian Johnson Ballads fol. 119)
cf. "The Black Velvet Band (I)" (theme: man imprisoned, woman thief)
cf. "The Half Crown Song" (theme: the date that eats and drinks unbelievable quantities)
cf. "Bill Morgan and His Gal" (theme: the date that eats and drinks unbelievable quantities)

NOTES [32 words]: Greig/Duncan7 is a fragment; broadside Bodleian Johnson Ballads fol. 119 is the basis for the description.

"The Half Crown Song" cross-reference is a Flanagan Brothers song not indexed yet. - BS

Last updated in version 2.5
Pretty Little Duck, The
DESCRIPTION: Quack quack cried the pretty little duck Chick chick cried the swan oh But the old crock crows, -- Everybody noos That we'll all get a egg in the morning"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: nonballad bird
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1667, "The Pretty Little Duck" (1 text)
Roud #1752
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Green Woods o’ Airlie" (tune, per Greig/Duncan8)
File: Grd81667

Pretty Little Girl with the Strawberry Curls, The DESCRIPTION: "One day as I was walking my boyfriend was a-talking With the pretty little girl with the strawberry curls, And this is what he said to her, 'I L-O-V-E love you, I K-I-S-S kiss you." She says, "I have a boyfriend Sambo... from Alabambo...E-I-E-I-O Sambo"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1968 (NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal)
KEYWORDS: love hair courting rejection wordplay
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
File: NCF162PL

Pretty Little Miss
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, come along, my pretty little miss, Oh, come along, my honey, Oh, come along,my pretty little miss, I'll marry you next Sunday." "Oh, come along... I won't be home till Monday." "How old are you... I'll marry you next Sunday."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Owens, Swing and Turn)
KEYWORDS: playparty courting marriage nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty, p. 156, "Pretty Little Miss" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7938
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Fly Around, My Pretty Little Miss" (lyrics, theme)
File: Spurg156

Pretty Little Miss [Laws P18]
DESCRIPTION: The singer courts a young girl, eventually talking his way into her bed. In the middle of the night he prepares to leave. She reminds him of his promise to marry her. He tells her that sleeping with him was her choice. She bewails her fate, or is murdered
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1827 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfursdCollectionVolume2) +1818 (Garret, _Right Choyse and Merrie Book of Garlands I_)
KEYWORDS: seduction separation betrayal pregnancy homicide
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE,So) Britain(England(Lond,North),Scotland(Bord))
REFERENCES (10 citations):
Pretty Nancy of London (Jolly Sailors Bold)

DESCRIPTION: The singer writes to tell his love of the hardships endured by sailors. He describes a horrible storm he recently endured; "a sailor must yield to whatever may come." He assures Nancy he is remembering her as best he can.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1920 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)

KEYWORDS: storm sea love separation floating verses

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond)) US(SE,So) Canada(Mar,Newf)

REFERENCES (9 citations):
- Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #36, "Pretty Nancy" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Randolph 78, "Pretty Nancy of London" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Peacock, pp. 568-570, "Nancy from London" (1 text, 3 tunes)
- Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland 53, "Nancy of London" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 130, "Sweet William and Nancy" (1 text, mixed with "Green Grows the Laurel" and other material)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 130, "Sweet William and Nancy" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
- Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 33, "Nancy from London" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 49, "Lovely Nancy from England" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 284-287, "Nancy of London (Nancy from Yarmouth)" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Roud #407

RECORDINGS:
- Kenneth Pink, "Fair Nancy from London" (on NFAGuigné01)
Cyril Poacher, "Nancy of Yarmouth" (on Voice12)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Tall Grow the Rushes
NOTES [163 words]: Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 49: "This song should not be confused with 'Nancy of Yarmouth' or 'Jimmy and Nancy,' and so forth. Although it borrows heavily from other songs, it is a distinct and separate piece."
The "green grow the laurels" verse is Green grow the laurels and the tops of them small,
For love is a flower that hangs o'er us all,
For the green leaves will wither and the roots will decay,
But the red rose will flourish when my love comes from sea
The "ship in distress" theme is from "Nancy of Yarmouth". The "Green grow the laurels" verse has only those four words in common with Green Grows the Laurel (Green Grow the Lilacs) - BS Classifying versions of this song is indeed very difficult; Roud in fact includes a number of versions titled "Nancy of Yarmouth." The title also adheres frequently to "William and Nancy (II) (Courting Too Slow)" [Laws P5]. There are some fragments beyond classification. This is the best we can do.
- RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: R078

Pretty Polly (I) (Moll Boy's Courtship) [Laws O14]
DESCRIPTION: A married man comes courting Polly. While she is attracted, she cannot wed a married man. He offers to kill his wife; she begs him not to, promising to wait seven years for him. His wife conveniently dies just before the deadline; the two are married
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1827 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1)
KEYWORDS: courting love marriage death floating verses
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,SE) Britain(England(North),Scotland(Aber,Bord))
REFERENCES (11 citations):
Laws O14, "Pretty Polly (Moll Boy's Courtship)"
Greig/Duncan2 226, "Charming Mall Boy" (1 text)
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1 35, "Mall Bowie" (1 text)
Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 456-457, "Sir Arthur and Charming Mollee" (1 text)
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 10-11, "Sir Arthur and Charming Mollee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Purslow-TheConstantLovers, pp. 93-94, "Sr Arthur and Charming Molly" (1 composite text, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 56, "Pretty Polly" (1 text, with one floating verse from "The Cuckoo" and two from "On Top of Old Smokey")
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 68, "The Charming Moll Boy" (1 text)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #182, "Charming Nancy" (1 text)
Logan-APedlarsPack, pp. 348-349, "Moll Boy's Courtship" (1 text)
DT 594, PRETPOL
ST LO14 (Full)
Roud #195
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Noble Lord Hawkins
NOTES [74 words]: According to Stokoe (slightly amplifying Bell), "the Sir Arthur named is no less a personage than Sir Arthur Haslerigg, the Governor of Tynemouth Castle during the protectorate of Oliver Cromwell." Bell seems to be the only source for this assertion.
"Kittredge discusses the use of the cuckoo stanza (number 8 [in the Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio text]) in Journal 30, PP7 350-j52, i 'Ballads and Songs'" (note from the Digital Tradition). - RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: L014
Pretty Polly (II) [cf. Laws P36]

DESCRIPTION: Willie urges Polly to go riding with him "some pleasure [to] see" before they get married. Although she is "afraid of [his] ways," she comes, only to find her new-dug grave awaiting her. Willie kills and buries her and heads home (or out to sea)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1856 (Thompson-APioneerSongster)

KEYWORDS: homicide burial betrayal

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,Ro,So) Canada

REFERENCES (24 citations):

- Thompson-APioneerSongster 23, "Pretty Polly" (1 text)
- Randolph 153, "Pretty Polly" (2 texts plus an excerpt, 1 tune)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 64, "The Gosport Tragedy" (3 texts plus 1 excerpt and mention of 1 more; Laws lists the "A" text as P36A, and the rest as P36B, but "D" and probably "C" are "Pretty Polly")
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 64, "The Gosport Tragedy" (3 excerpts, 3 tunes; the "C" version is probably "Pretty Polly" and the others Laws P36B)
- Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 67, "Pretty Molly" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 64, "Pretty Polly" (1 text plus a fragment)
- Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 698-700, "The Gosport Tragedy" (2 texts, but only the second goes with this piece; the first is, obviously, "The Gosport Tragedy")
- Wyman/Brockway-LonesomeSongs-KentuckyMountains-Vol1, p. 79, "Pretty Polly" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Wyman/Brockway-LonesomeSongs-KentuckyMountains-Vol2, p. 110, "Pretty Polly" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, pp. 69-70, "Pretty Polly" (1 text)
- Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #11, "Purty Polly" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sulzer-TwentyFiveKentuckyFolkBallads, p. 12, "Pretty Polly" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Cox-FolkSongsSouth 89, "Come, Pretty Polly" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Cox/Hercog/Halpert/Boswell-WVirginia-A, #17A-C, pp. 73-78, "Pretty Polly," "Come, Polly, Pretty Polly" (2 texts plus an excerpt, 2 tunes; the "A" text is the full "Cruel Ship's Carpenter" version; "B" is the short "Pretty Polly (II)"; the "C" fragment is too short to tell but has lyrics more typical of the latter)
- Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, pp. 2-3, "Pratty Polly" (1 text, 1 tune); pp. 67-68, "Pretty Polly" (1 text)
- Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp 172-174, "Pretty Polly" (1 text, 1 tune, a composite version)
- Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 53-54, "" (1 text, very short even by the standards of this worn-down song)
- Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. 128-134, collectively titled "The Cruel Ship's Carpenter" but with individual titles "Pretty Polly," "Dying Polly," "Pretty Polly," "Pretty Polly," "Pretty Polly," "Oh, Polly!!" (6 texts; 5 tunes on pp. 395-398; of these only the "C" text has a ghost; in "D" and "E" there is no ghost but Willie's ship sinks; these presumably should file with Laws P36, while "A," "B," and "F" go here)
- Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #26, "Pretty Polly" (1 text)
- Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 84, "Pretty Polly" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 143-144, "Pretty Polly" (1 text)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 227, "Pretty Polly" (1 text)
- DT 311, PRETPOL2*
- Roud #15

RECORDINGS:

- Estil C. Ball, "Pretty Polly" (on LomaxCD1701, LomaxCD1705); "Pretty Polly" (AFS, 1941; on LCTreas)
- Frank Bode, "Pretty Polly" (on FBode1)
- Dock Boggs, "Pretty Polly" (Brunswick 132A, 1927); (on Boggs1, BoggsCD1)
- Coon Creek Girls, "Pretty Polly" Coon Creek Girls, "Pretty Polly" (Vocalion 04659/Okeh 04659/Perfect 16102, 1939; rec. 1938)
- Bill Cornett ,"Pretty Polly" (on MMOKCD)
- Cranford & Thompson, "Pretty Polly" (Melotone 45092, 1935)
- John Hammond, "Purty Polly" (Challenge 168, 1927)
- Lester McFarland & Robert Gardner, "Pretty Polly" (Brunswick 116, 1927)
- Ivor Melton & band, "Pretty Polly" (on Persis1)
- Pleaz Mobley, "Pretty Polly" (on JThomas01)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Pretty Polly" (on NLCR13)
Jean Ritchie, "Pretty Polly" (on RitchieWatson1, RitchieWatsonCD1)
Sauceman Brothers, "Pretty Polly" (Rich-R-Tone 457, n.d.)
Pete Seeger, "Pretty Polly" (on PeteSeeger16)
Lee Sexton, "Pretty Polly" (on MMOKCD, ClassOT)
B. F. Shelton "Pretty Polly" (Victor 35838, 1927; on BefBlues1)
Stanley Brothers, "Pretty Polly" (Columbia 20770, 1951)
Pete Steele, "Pretty Polly" (AFS 1587/1702, 1938; on PSTeele01, KMM)
Turner & Parkins, "Pretty Polly" (Superior 2635, 1931)
Jack Wallin, "Pretty Polly" (on Wallins1)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. esp. "The Cruel Ship's Carpenter (The Gosport Tragedy; Pretty Polly)" [Laws P36A/B], from which this ballad is descended at a great distance
cf. "Fair Eleanor (II)" (plot)
cf. "Pastures of Plenty" (tune)

SAME TUNE:
Pastures of Plenty (File: Grnw293)

NOTES [276 words]: This much-shortened form of "The Gosport Tragedy" has now taken on a life of its own. Although no clear line between the two can be drawn, I tend to call the piece "The Gosport Tragedy" if it includes the ghost and "Pretty Polly" if it omits.
Beth S. H. Brooks, "'Pretty Polly': A History of a Folk Song," article in Missouri Folklore Society Journal, Volume 27-28 (cover date 2005-2006, but published 2015), pp. 125-145, on p. 127 gives a sketch genealogy of the history of this song, starting with a 1720 broadside, "The Gosport Tragedy, or, The Perjur'd Ship-Carpenter," which was the direct source of "The Gosport Tragedy." This split into two lines of descent, the smaller being Laws P36A, "The Cruel Ship's Carpenter," the larger being "Pretty Polly," including Laws P36B. Brooks then classified some fifty versions of "Pretty Polly" into a "Standard Version" (18 examples), those with an "Altered Tune" (14 examples), and those with "Altered Lyrics" (18 examples).
One of Cox's texts (the C text, which also has a tune) was called by the informant "Young Beeham." There is no basis for this in the text of the song. One has to think this the result of some sort of confusion with "Young Beacham." - RBW

Pretty Polly (IV)
DESCRIPTION: Polly will not marry the singer; his poverty would grieve her parents. He replies, "Some say I am rakey... But I'll prove... that I'm guilty of nothing but innocent love." He sets out for New Orleans to marry another, but decides he loves Polly too much
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1924
KEYWORDS: love courting separation virtue rambling return
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates 133, p. 144, "Pretty Polly" (1 text)
Roud #4296
NOTES [23 words]: Although this piece consists largely of floating verses, the combined effect is unique and deserves to be considered a separate song. - RBW

Pretty Sally's Answer
DESCRIPTION: Sally loves Johnny. His master beats him when he stops work to be with her. At midsummer his time will be out and they will marry "in spite of all our alley"
Pretty Saro

DESCRIPTION: The singer loves Pretty Saro, but she shows no interest in him: "She wants a freeholder and I have no land." Nor can he write her a letter "in a fine hand" as he would wish to. In despair he vows to "wander by the river" (or kill himself?)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Lomax, North Carolina Booklet, according to Randolph)
KEYWORDS: love poverty river
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,SE,So)
REFERENCES (19 citations):
Randolph 744, "Pretty Saro" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune); cf. 745, "In Eighteen-Forty-Nine" (2 texts, 2 tune) and the Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi text cited below
High-OldOldFolkSongs, p. 11, "A Corting Miss Sarrow" (1 fragment, perhaps this although several lines could be from other songs)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 252, "Pretty Saro" (2 texts)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 252, "Pretty Saro" (6 tunes plus text excerpts)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 48, pp. 164-165, "Pretty Saro" (1 text, beginning with stanzas from "In Eighteen-Forty-Nine" and ending with "Pretty Saro," plus mention of 1 more text)
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 9, "Pretty Saro" (2 fragments, 2 tunes; the first text is solely this; the second begins with the first verse of "In Eighteen-Forty-Nine" and continues with a verse of "Pretty Saro")
Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. 327-328, "Pretty Saro" (2 texts, with local titles "Pretty Saro," "Pretty Sarah"; 2 tunes on p. 443)
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 99, "Pretty Sairey" (1 text)
List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, pp. 168-170, "Pretty Sarry" (1 text, 1 tune)
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 85, pp. 106-107, "Pretty Sarah" (1 text)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 76, "Pretty Saro" (4 texts, 4 tunes)
Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 39, "Pretty Saro" (1 text, 1 tune, with one stanza omitted)
Ritchie-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 68, "Pretty Saro" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 115, "Lone Valley" (1 text)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol1, p. 35, "The Foot of Yonders Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Chase-AmericanFolkTalesAndSongs, pp. 152-153, "At the Foot of Yonder Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 148, "Pretty Saro" (1 text)
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, Rebecca Cushman, "Two Mountain Portraits," Vol. IV, No. 1 (Jul 1956), pp. 4-5, "Pretty Saro" (1 text)
DT, PRETSARO* YONDRMTN
Roud #417
RECORDINGS:
Horton Barker, "At the Foot of Yonder's Mountain" (on Barker01)
Glen Neaves, "1809" (on Persis1)
Ritchie Family, "Pretty Saro" (on Ritchie03)
Jean Ritchie, "Pretty Saro" (on RitchieWatsonCD1)
Pete Seeger, "Pretty Saro" (on PeteSeeger40)
Pretty Susan, the Pride of Kildare [Laws P6]

DESCRIPTION: A sailor tries to win Susie's love; she rejects him because he is poor. Instead she gives her love to a rich man. The sailor goes back to sea but never finds another woman as beautiful as Susie.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1847 (Journal of William Histed of the Cortes); before 1844 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3331))

KEYWORDS: courting poverty beauty

FOUND IN: US(SE) Britain(England(South)) Canada(Mar) Ireland Australia

REFERENCES (14 citations):
- Laws P6, "Pretty Susan, the Pride of Kildare"
- Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 681, "Pretty Susan, the Pride of Kildare"; Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 343, "Pretty Susan, the Pride of Kildare" (2 texts)
- Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #1, The Pride of Kildare" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #54, "Susan, the Pride of Kildare" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 132, "Pretty Susie, The Pride of Kildare" (1 text)
- Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 131-133, "The Pride of Kildare" (1 text, 1 tune)
- OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 83, "Pretty Susan the Pride of Kildare" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 48, "Pretty Susan" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, pp. 72-73, "Pretty Susan" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi 88, "Pretty Susan" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Ives-21FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 24-25,83, "Pretty Susan, the Pride of Kildare" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Scott-ACollectorsNotebook-31TraditionalSongs, p. 32, "The Pride of Kildare" (1 text, 1 tune)
- cf. Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, p. 481, "Little Susie, the Pride of Kildore" (source notes only)
- DT 724, PRETSUSI
- Roud #962

RECORDINGS:
- Angelo Dornan, "Pretty Susan" (on Miramichi1)

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Harding B 11(3331), "Pretty Susan the Pride of Kildare," J. Howe (Hull), 1835-1843; also Harding B 17(246b), Harding B 11(3169). Harding B 11(3168). Firth c.18(89), Harding B 11(3167), 2806 c.16(68), Firth b.26(293), Johnson Ballads 3196, Firth c.16(437), Harding B 11(1717), Firth b.27(339), Firth b.25(496), Harding B 11(1110), Firth c.16(437), "Pretty Susan the Pride of Kildare"
- Murray, Mu23-y1:118, "Pretty Susan the Pride of Kildare," unknown, 19C

Price of Freedom, The

DESCRIPTION: "The night is dark about me, I hear the midnight bell, Before another midnight, It will ring my funeral knell." The singer's children are afraid, but the singer says, "Weep not above my ashes." "We to buy the toiler's freedom will pay the price and die."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1887 (Labor Enquirer)
KEYWORDS: labor-movement death execution
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1886 - Haymarket Riot
Nov 11, 1887 - Execution of Albert R. Parsons (who reportedly inspired this song) and four others for alleged complicity

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 446-447, "The Price of Freedom" (1 text)
Foner-AmericanLaborSongsOfTheNineteenthCentury, p. 229, "The Price of Freedom" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Annie Laurie" (tune) and references there

NOTES [333 words]: Kenneth Lougee, Pie in the Sky: How Joe Hill's Lawyers Lost His Case, Got Him Shot, and Were Disbarred, iUniverse, 2011, pp. 29-30, discusses the legal situation of the American labor movement in the late 1800s. In particular, he cites Oliver Wendell Holmes on how the law was applied at the time, based on the "needs of the day," and applies this to the Haymarket Riot.

"In 1886, after more than a decade of increasingly violent labor protests, a meeting was held at Haymarket Square [in Chicago]. The police mobilized a large force, which moved in to break up the meeting. Someone (and that someone was never identified) threw a dynamite bomb into the police ranks. This led to a general outbreak of violence, with casualties on both sides.

"Unable to indict the bomb thrower, the authorities charged the labor organizers. Ultimately, eight were convicted, with seven sentenced to death. This was the first great labor trial. Mass movements organized against the execution. Two sentences were commuted to terms in prison. The governor supposedly said that he would have commuted the other sentences had the labor leaders requested his action. Ultimately, four were hung, and one committed suicide before execution. Governor Altgeld pardoned the remaining leaders in 1890.

"There are some things that may be said for certain about this sad matter. The most important is that the leaders were unquestionably innocent of throwing the bomb. The second is that the case is an example of the bitter contest between labor leaders and the establishment.... The [Illinois Supreme] court's opinion cites for page after dreary page statements of various labor leaders. It must be admitted that the labor movement was largely composed of anarchists, but it must equally be admitted that the leaders had tried and failed to win concessions within the confines of elections and strikes.... The civic leaders in Chicago well understood that they were using the court system to intimidate and control labor." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2
File: CAFS2446

Pride of Glenelly, The

DESCRIPTION: In flowery verse and classical allusions, the singer praises the beauty of Glenelly and the woman who lives there. He describes her appearance. He claims that all the ancient beauties made their reputations with jewelry; the woman of Glenelly is real

AUTHOR: James Devine
EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: beauty nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H607, pp. 249-250, "The Pride of Glenelly" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13339

NOTES [40 words]: Hard to believe that anyone voluntarily sing this thing. The words are incredibly ornate, and it's littered with classical allusions. And it doesn't even say anything. But Sam Henry reportedly got it from a source other than the author. - RBW

File: HHH607
Pride of Kilkee, The

DESCRIPTION: Singer meets a maid going to Kilkee. He offers her a seat and asks her home. She rejects him as a seducer. He claims to be honorable. She agrees only to marry him. "Oh, her name I won't mention at all But I'll style her the Pride of Kilkee"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1974 (Munnelly/Deasy-TheMountCallanGarland-Tom-Lenihan)

KEYWORDS: courting marriage

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Munnelly/Deasy-TheMountCallanGarland-Tom-Lenihan 32, "The Pride of Kilkee" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #5217

RECORDINGS:
Tom Lenihan, "The Kilkee Maid" (on IRTLenihan01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ar Eirinn Ni Neosfainn Ce hi (For Ireland I Will Not Tell Whom She Is)" (tune, according Munnelly/Deasy-TheMountCallanGarland-Tom-Lenihan)

cf. "Seek Not from Whence Love She Came" (motif: hiding a sweetheart's name)

cf. "The Lisburn Lass" (motif: hiding a sweetheart's name)

cf. "Tons of Bright Gold" (motif: hiding a sweetheart's name)

NOTES [179 words]: In spite of the line "Who would blame me to make her my own" it is not clear, at the end, that they marry.

Kilkee is in County Clare, Ireland.

For other examples of hidden names see "Ar Eirinn Ni Neosfainn Ce hi (For Ireland I Will Not Tell Whom She Is)" and "Drihaureen O Mo Chree (Little Brother of My Heart)" and its notes.

Munnelly/Deasy-TheMountCallanGarland-Tom-Lenihan: "Obviously, the writer of Tom's song ["the Pride of Kilkee"] was familiar with the English version of 'Ar Eirinn Ni Neosfainn Ce hi.' Writing more than two decades after hearing these songs for the first time, I have not re-encountered them in oral tradition since, and know of no printed sources for either of them." But, in the notes to "Ar Eirinn Ni Neosfainn Ce hi," Munnelly/Deasy-TheMountCallanGarland-Tom-Lenihan: "The Clare Gaelic scholar Eugene O'Curry stated that this song was written originally about 1810 .... The song in English which Tom sings has been about for a good many years likewise, as is witnessed by the similar version which Freeman noted down in London in 1915...." - BS

File: RcPriKil

Pride of Logy Bay, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer is in love. His love's father comes to him and threatens to send his daughter away if the two continue to see each other. Her father arranges for her exile, but -- after many years of seeking -- the two find each other and are married.

AUTHOR: unknown (see NOTES)

EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)

KEYWORDS: love exile separation reunion father

FOUND IN: US(MA) Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 61, "The Pride of Logy Bay" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke/MacMillan-PenguinBookOfCanadianFolkSongs 47, "The Star of Logy Bay" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 134, "The Star of Logy Bay" (1 text, 1 tune)
Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, p. 110, "The Star of Logy Bay" (1 text, 1 tune) England-HistoricNewfoundlandAndLabrador, p. 58, "Star of Logy Bay" (1 text, 1 tune) DT, STARLOGY*

Roud #4421

RECORDINGS:
Omar Blondahl, "The Star of Logy Bay" (on NFOBlondahl01,NFOBlondahl05)
The McNulty Family, "The Star of Logy Bay" (on "The McNulty Family Entertains with Irish Songs," Copley Records DWL 9-604 LP (n.d.))
Clare O'Driscoll, "The Star of Logy Bay" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
May Whalen, "The Star of Logy Bay" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Pride of Newry Town, The

DESCRIPTION: Orphans William and Mary promise to wed, but poverty forces William to sea. He is long away, and Mary (thinking him dead) weds another. He returns; Mary drops dead when he arrives. Old and new suitors do battle; William kills his rival and returns to sea

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Hayward-UlsterSongsAndBalladsOfTheTownAndCountry)

KEYWORDS: love separation sailor reunion husband death fight betrayal

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H190, pp. 420-421, "Killeavy's Pride"; H798, pp. 421-422, "The Pride of Newry Town" (2 text, 2 tunes)
Hayward-UlsterSongsAndBalladsOfTheTownAndCountry, pp. 103-106, "Killeevy's Pride" (1 text)

Roud #4390

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Susan Carr" (plot)

NOTES [25 words]: In "Killeevy's Pride" (Henry and Hayward-UlsterSongsAndBalladsOfTheTownAndCountry) Mary ends as "a victim to false love in the Asylum of Belfast." - BS

File: HHH190

Pride of Pimlico, The

DESCRIPTION: Kitty Quinn comes to town "And made of every other lass about the place a foe Because she took their sweethearts." The men can't work, the drinkers give up drink, and the teetotalers take up alcohol. Soon there'll be 10000 victims of the Pride of Pimlico.

AUTHOR: Arthur Griffith

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (OLochlaine-MoreIrishStreetBallads)

KEYWORDS: love humorous drink

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlaine-MoreIrishStreetBallads, pp. 265-266, "The Pride of Pimlico" (1 text)

File: OLcM265
Pride of the Prairie
DESCRIPTION: "On the wild and woolly prairie, Not far from old Pueblo town, Lived a little girl named Mary, Eyes of blue and tresses of brown." A cowboy comes up and asks her to marry him. They agree, and ride off stealing kisses
AUTHOR: Words: Henry J. Breen/Music: George Botsford
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (sheet music)
KEYWORDS: cowboy love marriage
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation): Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 25, "Pride of the Prairie" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: 0hr025

Priest and the Nuns, The
DESCRIPTION: Pumping Shanty. A priest goes to France and finds seven nuns lying sick in the convent yard. He claims to be a doctor with a cane/stick that will cure them. He treats all the nuns and says he'll call again. choruses of "Ho, ho ho" and "Hal-ler-al-le-re."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1945 (Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips)
KEYWORDS: shanty bawdy clergy trick
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation): Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 166-167, "The Priest and the Nuns" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9146
NOTES [47 words]: The pattern of text and choruses is reminiscent of "Able Brown the Sailor" even though the words are completely different and for a shanty, rather tame. Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips gives no notes or history on this, though it would be easy to imagine much coarser versions. - SL
File: Harl1166

Priest and the Parson, The DESCRIPTION: "Ye sons and daughters of each profession [denomination], Give ear and listen to what I'll say, It is of a dialogue" between Catholic and Lutheran clergy. Scripture shows that there is one Church and Jesus died for all. Therefore Catholics are right
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1994 (Thomas and Widdowson)
KEYWORDS: religious clergy dialog
FOUND IN: Canada
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Roud #26999
NOTES [174 words]: In Newfoundland, this was sometimes regarded as a "Treason Song." For background on Treason Songs, see the notes to "The Prooshian Drum." The argument of this song is legitimately Biblical -- e.g. the statement in the song that "Thou art Peter. All on this rock I will build my church" Did he mention churches?" (implying that only one Church could be meant -- which must therefore be the Catholic church) correctly cites Matthew 16:18. But Greek , "ecclesia" is not the same as English "church"; it means "assembly," and the meaning "church" is how the Christian church decided to understand it after it had become an organized body.
However, the argument that one church must mean the Catholic church is patently flawed. Even if one rejects Protestantism as an innovation (which, of course, a Protestant would not accept), the Orthodox church is just as ancient and original as the Catholic church, and it doesn't have a non-Biblical office such as a Pope. Whatever the religious truth of the matter, the argument is not logical. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
Priest of the Parish, The

DESCRIPTION: "The priest of the parish has lost his considering cap, Some say this and some say that, But I say number (X)." The child who is called must respond: "What, I, sir?" "Yes, you, sir." "No, not I, sir." "Who then, sir?" The new player then calls the number

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)
KEYWORDS: playparty clergy
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 149, "(The priest of the parish)" (1 text)

File: SuSm149

Prince Edward Island Murder

DESCRIPTION: William Millman was "his mother's hope and joy" He "led [Mary Tuplin] astray," then murders her and sinks her body in the river with a heavy stone. The body is discovered and Millman executed on the gallows.

AUTHOR: Mrs. C. A. Barron? (Barren?)
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions)
KEYWORDS: seduction execution homicide mother punishment prison lover
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Jun 28, 1887 - Murder of Mary Tuplin by William Millman
1888 - Execution of Millman
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 140, "Prince Edward Island Murder" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 643-644, "Young Melvyn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 217-219, "The Millman Tragedy" (1 text)
ST CrNS140 (Partial)
Roud #1837
RECORDINGS:
Charlotte Decker, "Young Melvyn" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Millman Song" (subject)
cf. "The Murder of Mary Tuplin" (subject)
cf. "The Millman and Tuplin Song" (subject)
NOTES [174 words]: This song is item dF59 in Laws's Appendix II. Roud has at least five different numbers for this event:
Roud #1837: Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 140, "Prince Edward Island Murder" [Laws dF59]
Roud #4129: Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 285-286, "The Millman Song" (also Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 180-181, "The Millman Murder Trial") [LawsdF60]
Roud #9179: Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 46-47, "The Millman and Tuplin Song" (also Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi 50, "Young Millman")
Roud #9552: Shea, pp. 174-179, "The Millman Tragedy"
Roud #12463: Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland pp. 72-73, "The Murder of Mary Tuplin" - BS
In the Peacock/Decker version, "Millman" has become "Melvyn" (an easy error of hearing), but the song is clearly this.
Creighton's informant Ben Henneberry said the song was by "Mrs. C. A. Barren" of Halifax. Shay says Mrs. C. A. Barron. I've tentatively listed the former spelling first on the grounds that Henneberry was relying on memory.- RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: CrNS140
Prince Heathen [Child 104]

DESCRIPTION: Prince Heathen takes a girl against her will. He rapes her and offers her extreme cruelty, all to break her will. She never yields. At last her babe is born. After further abuse, bringing her close to death, her spirit fails; at last he acts human

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1818 (Buchan/Moreira-TheGlenbuchatBallads)

KEYWORDS: rape abuse pregnancy

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Child 104, "Prince Heathen" (2 texts)
- Buchan/Moreira-TheGlenbuchatBallads, pp. 153-154, "Prince Heathen" (1 text)
- Greig/Duncan7 1497, "Prince Heathen" (1 text)
- DT 104, PRINHEAT

File: C104

---

Prince Henry Song

DESCRIPTION: "Sing, sing, Prince Henry's side, The Jimmy looks on her with pride," because the ship is extremely clean. The officers are proud of the fact that "She's a tiddley ship," "For when she's in motion, She's the pride of the ocean."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead)

KEYWORDS: ship nonballad

FOUND IN: Canada

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, p. 44, "Prince Henry Song" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #29417

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "She's a Tiddley Ship" (tune)
- cf. "A Band of Banshee Airmen" (lyrics, tune)

NOTES [472 words]: Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead's notes talk about the one major action the Prince Henry engaged in as a warship, but the song fragment itself mentions none of that, and includes no indication of date. Hers was a complicated history. Canada had very little navy between the World Wars, especially of true seagoing ships (the small ships her shipyards were able to build, minesweepers and corvettes, were intended to stay close to land, although the corvettes in particular eventually ended up in convoy export). When she needed a larger ship, she had to get it from Britain.

Once World War II started, the Canadians wanted more ships -- but the British needed every ship they had and couldn't spare any. The Canadians hoped to trade some of their small ships for something bigger. "In March 1940 those hopes were dashed. The barter scheme collapsed because an equitable exchange could not be found. The British softened the blow by allowing Canada to let contracts for two Tribals [large destroyers] in British yarts, with two more to follow in 1941. In the meantime, the RCN [Royal Canadian Navy] had to fill the void with the three small liners it had purchased for conversion to armed merchant cruisers, Prince Henry, Prince David, and Prince Robert. These 6000-ton vessels, with a speed of 22 knots and a range of 6000 miles, were the most powerful ships in the RCN until the first Tribal entered service in 1943" (Milner, p. 83).

That statement requires some footnotes. The "Princes" were the largest ships in the Canadian navy, but I doubt anyone would have traded them for the smaller but much more capable destroyers of the "River" class such as the Saguenay (for which see "The Saguenay Song"); the destroyers had torpedoes as well as guns, were much faster, and could fight submarines. As a result, the destroyers were constantly busy, while the "Princes" mostly did odd jobs: "The Prince ships served far and wide in the early years of the war. They patrolled the Pacific, captured several German merchant ships, escorted the ill-fated Canadian contingent to Hong Kong, supported operations against the Japanese in the Aleutian Islands, and served in the Caribbean" (Milner, p. 83).

But they didn't stay in that role for long. Once it came time to invade France, they were converted once again, to troopships: "[T]wo of the Princes, David and Henry, were converted to assault ships" (Milner, p. 130) and participated in the landings in Normandy (Bercuson, p 204; he labels them "infantry landing ships").
Given that the Canadians had such a small pre-war navy (there were only 1900 professional navy men, according to Bercuson, p. 11), it’s no surprise that they were short of officers. Which perhaps helps explain why the officers of Prince Henry apparently confused cleanliness with effectiveness. - RBW

Bibliography

- Milner: Marc Milner, Canada's Navy: The First Century, University of Toronto Press, 1999

Last updated in version 5.1

File: Hopk044

Prince of Morocco, The (The Sailor Boy II) [Laws N18]

DESCRIPTION: A rich lady is in love with a sailor. Her father promises his daughter 12,000 pounds if she will leave her sailor. The sailor disguises himself as the Prince of Morocco to fool her father. They are married. The girl collects. The sailor reveals himself

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Randolph)

KEYWORDS: love disguise trick marriage

FOUND IN: US(NE,SE,So)

REFERENCES (7 citations):

- Laws N18, "The Prince of Morocco (The Sailor Boy II)"
- Randolph 88, "The Sailor Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 61, "The Young Prince of Spain" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 214-215, "The Sailor Boy" (1 text)
- Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster, pp. 38-40, "The Poor Sailor Boy" (1 text plus an excerpt, 1 tune)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 63, "The Prince of Morocco; or, Johnnie" (1 text)
- DT 449, PMOROCCO
- Roud #554

BROADSIDES:

- NLScotland, L.C.Fol.70(64a), "The Sailor Boy," Poet's Box (Dundee), c. 1890?

CROSS-REFERENCES:

ALTERNATE TITLES:

- The Poor Sailor Boy

File: LN18

Prince Robert [Child 87]

DESCRIPTION: Prince Robert asks his mother's blessing on his marriage; instead she poisons him. He sends for his wife. Arriving after the burial, she desires only a ring, but the mother will give nothing. She dies. From the graves grow a birch and brier which entwine.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1802 (Scott)

KEYWORDS: marriage poison homicide burial ring flowers stepmother

FOUND IN: US(Ap) Ireland

REFERENCES (8 citations):

- Child 87, "Prince Robert" (4 texts)
- Bronson 87, comments only
- Lyle/McAlpine/McLucas-SongRepertoireOfAmeliaAndJaneHarris, pp. 146-147, "Prince Robert" (1 text)
- Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-BritishBalladsFromMaine pp. 453-454, "Prince Robert" (notes only)
- Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 58, "Prince Robert" (1 text)
- Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates 26, pp. 121-123, "Prince Robert" (1 text) Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, pp. 61-62, "Harry Saunders" (1 text, 1 tune) texts)
Roud #55
RECORDINGS:
Jim Kelly, "Lord Abore" (on IREarlyBallads)
Frank Feeney, "Lord O'Bore" (on IREarlyBallads)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Harry Saunders
NOTES [46 words]: According to the liner notes for the Jim Kelly and Frank Feeney recordings, "no [other] sung version of this ballad is known." Jim Kelly learned the song from Frank Feeney who learned it "from his wife who was a Carlow woman." Of the Child texts, theirs is closest to 87c. - BS
Last updated in version 5.0
File: C087

Prison of Newfoundland
DESCRIPTION: "... listen to my sad tale, While I relate the hardship attending St. John's jail." Doyle lands at "Harvey's Wharf a cargo for to land." A witness lies; Doyle is sentenced to six months.
From a cell he watches "the lads and lassies" and dreams of Ireland
AUTHOR: Johnny Doyle?
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)
KEYWORDS: homesickness prison trial shore sailor prisoner Ireland
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Doyle-OldTimeSongsAndPoetryOfNewfoundland, pp. 48-49, "Prison of Newfoundland" (1 text, 1 tune): pp. 48-49 in the 3rd edition
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 90, "The Prison of Newfoundland" (1 text, 1 tune)
Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, pp. 46-47, "The Prison of Newfoundland" (1 text, 1 tune) Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 312-314, "The Prison(er) of Newfoundland" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, PRSONEWF*
Roud #4409
RECORDINGS:
Omar Blondahl, "Prison of Newfoundland" (on NFOBlondahl02)
Eddy Primroy, "Prisoner of Newfoundland" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Monica Rossiter, "The Prisoner of Newfoundland" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
NOTES [22 words]: Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing: "Mention of the Black Ball Line ... would seem to date the song in the vicinity of the late 1880's." - BS
Last updated in version 6.0
File: Doyl3048

Prisoner at the Bar, The (The Judge and Jury)
DESCRIPTION: "The judge was there, the jury too, And people from afar, A fair young lad of tender youth Was a prisoner at the bar." The young man's sweetheart argues the case; she simply asks judge and jury to remember their youthful love. The prisoner is freed
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recording, Peg Moreland)
KEYWORDS: love judge trial reprieve freedom crime
FOUND IN: US(Ap,So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Randolph 828, "The Prisoner at the Bar" (1 text, 1 tune)
ArkansasWoodchopper, pp. 58-60, "The Prisoner at the Bar" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3543
RECORDINGS:
Arkansas Woodchopper [pseud. for Luther Ossenbrink], "Prisoner at the Bar" (Gennett 7154/Supertone 9639, 1930)
Lulu Belle & Scotty, "The Prisoner At the Bar" (Conqueror 8594, 1935; Melotone 6-03-59, 1936; Vocalion 05487, 1940)
Prisoner for Life, A (I - Farewell to Green Fields and Meadows)

DESCRIPTION: "Farewell (to) green fields and (green) meadows, adieu; Your rocks and your mountains I now part from you." The singer, condemned to life in prison, laments all the various things -- nature, friends, whatever springs to mind -- he will be separated from.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1919 (Lomax - Cowboy Songs); 19C (Wolf)

KEYWORDS: prison separation lament

FOUND IN: US(Ap,So)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
- Randolph 164, "A Prisoner for Life" (4 texts, 3 tunes, of which the "B," and "D" texts and the "C" excerpt go with this piece; the "A" text is "The Irish Mail Robber" [Laws L15])
- High-OldOldFolkSongs, p. 13, "Fair Well Green Hills & Soft Meadows" (1 text)
- Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 170, "A Prisoner for Life" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1933, p. 130, "The Prisoner for Life" (1 reference)
- DT, PRSNRLIF* PRSNRLF2*
- Roud #4312

RECORDINGS:
- Jules Allen, "A Prisoner for Life" (Victor V-40068, 1929)
- Betty Laferty, "Farewell to Sweet Beaver" (on Crisp01)

NOTES [133 words]: Ozark folklore credits this to one William Alexander, who on January 21, 1890 was convicted of murder by Isaac Parker (known as the "Hanging Judge"). Originally sentenced to death, this was reduced to life imprisonment, and the story is that Alexander was eventually freed when the dead man turned up alive!

Several scholars have pronounced this story true, or at least possible, but Laws, and others, suspect this piece to be of Irish origin.

Last updated in version 3.5

File: R164

Prisoner's Song (I), The

DESCRIPTION: The singer laments his time in prison, and thinks of all that he would do if free. He recalls his crime. He misses his family and his sweetheart. He describes his hopes for freedom in complex metaphors: a ship on the sea, an eagle's wings, etc.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (recording, Vernon Dalhart)

KEYWORDS: prison lament love family

FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,So) Ireland Canada

REFERENCES (13 citations):
- Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 100, "The Prisoner's Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Randolph 746, "Meet Me Tonight" (4 texts, 1 tune, with the "C" text being probably this piece although the other three appear to go with "Meet Me Tonight in the Moonlight")
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 350, "The Prisoner's Song" (7 texts plus 1 fragment, 2 excerpts, and mention of 1 more; "A"-"C," plus probably the "D" excerpt, are "The Prisoner's Song (I)"); "E" and "G," plus perhaps the "H" fragment, are "Meet Me Tonight in the Moonlight"; "J" and "K" are "Sweet Lulur"); also probably 351, "Seven Long Years" (1 text, certainly mixed but containing elements characteristic of this song)
McNeil-SouthernMountainFolksong, p. 48, "The Prisoner's Song" (1 text, along with a text of "Meet Me in the Moonlight" and extensive history), culminating on pp. 50-51 with "Prisoner's Song (Tragic Romance)" (1 text, 1 tune)

Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 350, "The Prisoner's Song" (tune omitted to avoid copyright issues, but with a note and stanza showing that some of the words of the Dalhart song date to 1881); 351, "Seven Long Years" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)

Cox/Hercog/Halpert/Boswell-WVirginia-B, #27, pp. 193-194, "The Prisoner's Song" (1 text, 1 tune, collected in 1925 and almost certainly Dalhart-influenced)

Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, pp. 62-63, "I Wish I Had Someone to Love Me" (1 text, 1 tune, almost certainly Dalhart-influenced)

Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. 346-351, "New Jail/Prisoner's Song/Here's Adieu to all Judges and Juries" (1 text, not collected by Scarborough, of "Judges and Juries," plus 6 texts from her collections: "New Jail," "I'm Going To My New Jail Tomorrow," "New Jail," "Meet Me in the Moonlight," "The Great Ship," "Prisoner's Song"; 3 tunes on pp.449-450; the "A" fragment is probably "Meet Me Tonight in the Moonlight"; "B" and "D" are "New Jail" types; "C" is too short to classify; "E" is a mix of floating verse, "If I had a great ship on the ocean," "Let her go, let her go and God bless her," "Sometimes I'll live in the white house, sometimes I live in town..."; "F" may well have some Dalhart influence

Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 143, "Meet Me in the Moonlight" (1 text)

Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 218-219, "Seven Long Years in State Prison" (1 text, 1 tune)

Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 190-191, "Seven Long Years" (1 text, mostly "For Seven Long Years I've Been Married" but with two verses of "The Prisoner's Song (I)" or one of its various relatives)

ST FSC100 (Partial)

Roud #11730

RECORDINGS:

Clarence Ashley & Tex Isley, "Prisoner's Song" (on Ashley01)

Will Carter, "The Prisoner's Song" (Bluebird 33-0503, 1942; Bluebird [Canadian] 55-3202, 1943; rec. 1941)

Carter Family, "Meet Me By the Moonlight Alone" (Conqueror 8734, 1936/ARC 7-01-54, 1937; rec. 1935)

Kaplan's Melodists w. Vernon Dalhart, voc. "The Prisoner's Song" (Edison 51666, 1925)

Jimmie Davis, "The Prisoner's Song" (Decca 5966/Melotone [Canada] 45455, 1941)

Fats Domino, "Prisoner's Song" (Imperial 45 X5526, rec. 1958)

Buell Kazee [untitled fragment, under "On Top of Old Smokey"] (on Kazee01)

Bill Monroe & his Bluegrass Boys, "The Prisoner's Song" (Decca 46314, 1951)

Ezra Paulette & his Beverly Hillbillies, "The Prisoner's Song" (Vocalion 03263, 1936)

George Reneau "The Prisoner's Song" (Vocalion 5056/Vocalion 14991/Silvertone 3045 [as George Hobson], 1925)

Arthur Smith, "Kilby Jail" (on McGeeSmith1)

The Texas Drifter, "The Prisoner's Song" (Panachord [U.K.] 25250, 1932)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean" (tune)

cf. "Botany Bay"

cf. "Meet Me Tonight in the Moonlight"

cf. "New Prisoner's Song"

cf. "The Prisoner's Song (II)"

cf. "Sweet Lulur" (floating verses)

NOTES [693 words]: Disentangling the sources and versions of this song is almost impossible. Cazden et al believe that it was formed by the collation of two songs, one belonging to the "Botany Bay/Here's Adieu to All Judges and Juries" family and another being a variant of "Meet Me Tonight in the Moonlight/I Wish I Had Someone to Love Me." Various floating verses added to the mix, and a portion of "The Red River Valley" supplied the tune. (Others say the tune is "The Ship That Never Returned." Another part of the family, the "Seven Long Years in State Prison/I'm Going to the New Jail Tomorrow" group, uses a slightly regularized form of "My Bonnie.") Such an elaborate reconstruction can hardly be proved, but there is no doubt that this song has complex roots. The relationships between the texts can hardly be proved; I just hope we locate all of them!

Plus, of course, almost any version collected after 1924 may have been influenced by the Vernon Dalhart recording, which was certainly the first million-selling country side (exact numbers are uncertain, but sheet music sales exceeded one million, and at least two million discs were sold; some estimates put the total at 25 million or more!). The Carter Family also had "Meet Me Tonight in the Moonlight" version, which adds to the complications.

The Dalhart version was copyrighted in 1924 by Dalhart in the name of Guy Massey, a cousin of the singer. At one point, Dalhart claimed Massey wrote the words and he himself the tune. On other occasions, Dalhart claimed the whole song. He also said at one point that it was public domain. Dalhart managed to collect author's royalties, though -- and gave very little to Massey. It is fascinating to observe that the 1925 sheet music makes no mention of Dalhart at all. The cover page reads "The Prisoner's Song -- Ballad -- With Violin Obigato. Words and Music by Guy Massey." It was published by Shapiro, Bernstein & Co. It contains two arrangements of the song, a version for male quartette arranged by Jack Glogau and an uncredited piano arrangement. Contrary to the front cover, there is no part marked for the violin (although "a violin solo is suggested between the third and fourth stanzas"). There is a piano lead-in, which looks to me as if it may have been suggested by Adelyne Hood's and Carson Robison's fiddle-and-guitar performance -- at least, the bass line looks a lot like a guy strumming chords. The lyrics are identical to Dalhart's. The back cover features a sample of "The Convict and the Rose" by Betty Chapin (which does have a violin obligato). It looks as if it was rushed out once Dalhart had hit, even though his name is not to be found on it.

The above (except for the description of the sheet music) is mostly from Walter Darrell Haden, in his biography of Dalhart in Malone & McCulloh, Stars of Country Music. But he also offers a more complicated tale:

When Dalhart planned to record "The Wreck of Old 97" for Victor (he had already recorded it for Edison, and it was his biggest success to that time), they needed a flip side. To that point, Dalhart had been doing mostly operatic pieces, and didn't have much of a country repertoire. He showed the studio's music director a few lines written out (but not necessarily composed) by Massey. The Victor official, Nathaniel Shilkret, padded out the text and added a tune. Whatever the details of authorship (and I agree with Haden that this is a slightly-patched-up folksong), it launched Dalhart on a career in which he sold an estimated 50 million discs, cut some 3000 sides totalling about 1000 different songs, and recorded under dozens if not hundreds of names.

In an interesting folkloric touch, it is reported that the band at Belle Guinan's speakeasy the El Fay Club in New York would play "The Prisoner's Song" when someone turned up to try to enforce Prohibition (Deborah Blum, The Poisoner's Handbook: Murder and the Birth of Forensic Medicine in Jazz Age New York, Penguin, 2010, p. 52). - RBW

Mike Seeger classes "Kilby Jail" as being a variant of this song. The words don't look like it to me, but certainly the gestalt is the same, so I'll go along with him. - PJS

Last updated in version 5.1

File: FSC100

Prisoner's Song (II), The

DESCRIPTION: The singer envies a sparrow its liberty. He describes the hard lot of the prisoners, "reduced to skin and bone," bound to ball and chain. He warns others not to keep bad company, or they'll be like him, serving 27 years in the penitentiary

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (collected from Christina McAllister)

LONG DESCRIPTION: The singer, a prisoner, strolls to see a sparrow, envying the bird its liberty; he imagines it saying, "Cheer up, my lads, and don't be sad; some day you will be free." He describes the hard lot of the prisoners, "strapping fellows reduced to skin and bone," bound to ball and chain. He warns others not to stay out late or keep bad company, or they'll be like him, serving 27 years in the penitentiary
Prisoner's Song (V), The

DESCRIPTION: "Within this prison cell so dreary, I mourn away my weary heart." The singer must forever part from "my only darling." His love sends him a rose, and thinks him innocent, though he has "no hope of pardon." He will wear the rose as he is executed

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (collected by Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains from J. Ralph Vass)

KEYWORDS: prison love separation execution flowers

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains, p. 74, "The Prisoner's song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7325

NOTES [30 words]: This, like almost everything else in the Vass Family repertoire, sounds half-familiar; I have to think it's another of their rewrites of something else. But it's not clear what. - RW

File: Shel074

Private Still, The (The Gauger's Song)

DESCRIPTION: A guager believes a private (illegal) still can be found near Dublin. He asks Pat's aid, offering fifty pounds. Pat promises to lead him there. After a long trip, they see Pat's soldier brother: "They won't make him a corporal, so he's a private still"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1879 (broadside, LOCSinging sb30417b)

KEYWORDS: money drink soldier trick humorous

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenryrsSongsOfThePeople H103, pp. 55-56, "The Private Still" (1 text, 1 tune)
Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster 46, "The Gauger's Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Morton/Maguire-ComedayGoDayGodSendSunday 22, pp. 51-52,112,165-166, "The Gauger's Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 60, "A Private Still" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1936, p. 130, "A Private till" (1 reference)
DT, PRVTSTIL*
Roud #2342

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth c.14(272), "The Private Still" ("An exciseman once in Dublin at the time that I was there"), H. Disley (London), 1860-1883; also 2806 b.11(41), 2806 c.16(279), Firth b.26(131), Firth c.20(100), Harding B 11(3991), "The Private Still"
LOCSinging, sb30417b, "A Private Still," H. De Marsan (New York), 1864-1878

NOTES [68 words]: Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster: "A 'Gauger' was a member of the Revenue Police, who until their disbandment in the mid 1850s, had been charged with the suppression of illicit distillation - poteen making." - BS

Broadside LOCSinging sb30417b: H. De Marsan dating per Studying Nineteenth-Century Popular Song by Paul Charosh in American Music, Winter 1997, Vol 15.4, Table 1, available at FindArticles
Prodigal Son (I)

DESCRIPTION: Prodigal son, starving, decides to return home. His father embraces him, saying, "Kill the fatted calf." The elder son is jealous, but the father reassures him that he will inherit. Chorus: "I believe I'll go back home/And acknowledge I've done wrong"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE:

KEYWORDS: homesickness jealousy home separation return reunion Bible family father brother

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 39, #4 (1995), p, 102, "Prodigal Son" (1 text, 1 tune, indirectly based on the Dock Boggs version)

Roud #4489

RECORDINGS:

Dock Boggs, "Prodigal Son" (on Boggs1, BoggsCD1)

ALTERNATE TITLES:

I Believe I'll Go Back Home

NOTES [102 words]: This should not be confused with Rev. Robert Wilkins' song "That's No Way to Get Along", also a retelling of Luke 15:11-32; Wilkins' song was recorded by the Rolling Stones as "Prodigal Son." - PJS

The song "The Prodigal Son" in the Missouri Harmony does not appear to be the same piece either. In addition to the songs mentioned above, there are a number of hymns which speak of the prodigal son (a title not found in the Bible, we might note; a few translations mention the youth's "prodigal living," but the King James Version is not one of them), and the boy's exploits occasionally come up in other songs. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4

File: RcPS1

Prohibition Boys, The

DESCRIPTION: "Here is a lesson for you prohibitioners; Some wisdom it will teach; That the prohibition boys ought To practice what they preach." The song details various prohibitionists trying covertly to acquire liquor AUTHOR: Marshal Laughinghouse?

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: drink humorous

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCollectionNCFolklore2 309, "The Prohibition Boys" (1 text)

Roud #6632

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Prohibition Whiskey" (theme)

File: BRIII309

Prohibition Jingle of 1893, A

DESCRIPTION: "If you want to see your brother Fettered with a drunkard's chain, Vote for Kennedy Macdonald, Vote for Vogel an McLean. If you want to save your sister From disgrace and ruin and hell, Vote against the Liquor interest, Vote for Fraser, Stout, and Bell."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Auckland "New Zealand Observer," according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)

KEYWORDS: political New Zealand drink

FOUND IN:
Prohibition Whiskey
DESCRIPTION: "It's been ten years ago or more, If I've been rightly told, There was stealing done in Arapohoe Of whiskey old and new." A prohibitionist steals gin and passes it to his equally thirsty and dishonest friends. Brewers are warned about prohibitionists
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: drink humorous
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, p. 94, "A Prohibition Jingle of 1893" (1 text)
File: BaRo094

Promised Land
DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "(I will meet you in the Promised Land) (x2) (I will meet you) (x3) Meet you, Meet you, I will meet you in the Promised Land." Singer has a "mansion up on high Not made by hand" and a "(sister/brother) in the new graveyard That outshines the sun"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang)
KEYWORDS: floatingverses nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang, pp. 322-323, "Primus Lan'" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [18 words]: The description follows Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang but I do not repeat the dialect. - BS
Last updated in version 5.1
File: HPR322P

Promised Land, The
DESCRIPTION: "I have a father in the promised land (x2), My father calls me, I must go, To meet him in the promised land." "I have a Savior in the promised land." "I have a own in the promised land... When Jesus calls me, I must go." "I hope to meet you..."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1851 (source: hymnary.org)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Heart-Songs, p. 473, "The Promised Land" (1 text)
NOTES [45 words]: There are several songs with this approximate first line. This refers specifically to the version that repeats the "I have a (X) in the promised land" "twice", not once or three times. It is not, e.g., the one that usually has the tune "Martin" in shape note hymnals. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File: HeSo473

Prooshian Drum, The
DESCRIPTION: "An Orangeman lied and on his bed died And went to St. Peter for to let him in." He is denied entry because he was "cursed from... birth." A Freemason and Henry VIII have no better luck as the "rattled away on the Prooshian drum."
AUTHOR: unknown
Prop of the Land

DESCRIPTION: "Who is the prop and support of the land? Is it the rich or the poor I should ask?" "The prop of the land is the hard working man." He should have a fair day's pay for his work. Death calls all or the rich man would buy life while the poor would die.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1886 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(1683))

KEYWORDS: poverty commerce work hardtimes nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 105-106, "Prop of the Land" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Gl 155)
- Palmer-ThePainfulPlow, #15, "Prop of the Land" (1 text, 1 tune)

BROADSIDES:
- *Bodleian, Harding B 11(1683), "Here's a Health to the Hard Working Man" (*Who is the prop and support of the land"), H. Such (London), 1863-1885 LOCSinging, as105290, "Here's a Health to the Hard Working Man" ("Who is the prop and support of the land"), Taylor's Song Mart (London), no date NOTES [131 words]: Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames ends with toasts to the swan, "house of industry," "every poor man's wife that drinks a health to her country." "If life was a thing that money could buy, The rich would live and the poor might die," Toast lots of wine, beer, nice wife and 10000 a year. Roud assigns a separate number, Roud #1255, to the toast.
The sentiment, "If life was a thing that money could buy, The rich would live and the poor would die," is common enough. See, for example, "All My Trials" and "Prop of the Land" (and even "Wild Rover No More") in this index. One follow-on, though not here, is "But God's infinite wisdom has ordered it so, That the rich and poor to the grave must go."
Another "rich would live and the poor would die" indexed here is "The Panic Is On." - BS
Last updated in version 3.7
File: WT105

Prop of the Nation, The DESCRIPTION: "Who is the support of our country today, The rich or the poor? you may ask. No, it is the man with the toil-hardened hand Who forever you'll find at his task." The song describes the various accomplishments of the worker, from farming to construction
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl)
KEYWORDS: work worker
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 74, "The Prop of the Nation'
(1 text, 1 tune)
ST Wa074 (Partial)
NOTES [80 words]: Lena Bourne Fish, who sang this song for the Warners, thought it came from Rutherford B. Hayes's presidential campaign of 1876. There is, perhaps, some logic to this; Hayes, while not poor, was by no means as well-off as his Democratic opponent, Samuel Tilden. Hayes was also completely honest (a welcome change after the corruption of the Grant administration); it is sad to note that he became president as a result of Republican electoral chicanery in which he had no part. - RBW
File: Wa074

Prospecting Dream
DESCRIPTION: The singer dreams a dream of a miner's hard life. His long-tom falls in the river.
His supplies are scattered. His girl is far away. His strike comes to nothing. He goes to town, gets drunk, is beaten, loses his equipment, and winds up a thief
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1854 ("Put's Original California Songster") LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer, a prospector, tells of dreaming that he had lost his equipment and provisions, struck a rich lead, written home bragging of his find, and blown all his money on a spree. He hires out as a hardware clerk, gets fired, and is caught stealing. Chorus: "Oh what a miner, what a miner was I/All swelled up with scurvy so I really thought I'd die"
KEYWORDS: mining hardtimes drink dream poverty bragging theft disease
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 56, "Prospecting Dream" (1 text)
RECORDINGS:
Logan English, "Prospecting Dream" (on LEnglish02)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Oh! Susanna" (tune)
File: FSWB056
Prospector, The
DESCRIPTION: "Twelve years have I lived in this desolate place, Far from all habitation -- not even a face Have I seen...." He has seen "visions of gold in those canyons unmapped." Even though he knows the visions are foolish, he will stay in "the land of illusions"
AUTHOR: N. Howard Thorp
EARLIEST DATE: 1921 (Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys)
KEYWORDS: mining gold hardtimes
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys, p. 130, "The Prospector" (1 text)
File: ThLo130

Protestant Boys (I), The
DESCRIPTION: The Protestant Boys, "Orange and Blue," assemble to support the King. Appeal to William's spirit as model: "from Paypish or Frenchman ne'er to retire." "We hate [Catholics] as masters and love them as men," "God bless the people and God save the King!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1826 (_The Protestant, or True Blue_, Dublin, according to Sparling)
KEYWORDS: Ireland political religious
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hayward-UlsterSongsAndBalladsOfTheTownAndCountry, pp. 122-123, "The Protestant Boys" (1 text)
Roud #6531
NOTES [146 words]: Sparling: "In its original form dates back to 1689, but the version given is comparatively late. It is taken from 'The Protestant, or True Blue,' Dublin, 1826."
This is not the song usually referred to as "The Protestant Boys." That being the case it may be the song referred to by Colonel Blacker in Zimmermann's note below.
Zimmermann p. 297, fn 9, quoting William Archer Marching of the Lodges p. 193: "William Blacker, who also denied the existence of anti-Catholic songs in the Orange Lodges, cited as 'very much the reverse of uncharitable' a line from the charter song composed in 1796 by Captain Ryan: We hate them as masters [the Catholics], we love them as men" - BS
The reference to the French also hints at a date in the period 1795-1800, since this was the time when French intervention was constantly expected; see, e.g., the notes to "The Shan Van Voght." - RBW
File: HayU122

Protestant Boys (II), The
DESCRIPTION: "The Protestant Boys are loyal and true." They fought bravely at Derry, the Boyne and Aughrim against James who "with masses and Frenchmen the land would enslave." "Traitors shall tremble, Whene'er we assemble, For Protestant Boys shall carry the day"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c.1895 (Graham-TheOrangeSongster)
KEYWORDS: battle Ireland nonballad patriotic religious
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark 2, "The Protestant Boys" (1 text, 1 tune)
Graham-TheOrangeSongster, p. 11, "The Protestant Boys" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [179 words]: "The Protestant Boys" was the tune played by "The Old Orange Flute."
Zimmermann, pp. 296-297, quotes the Earl of Gosford's 1835 testimony to the House of Commons about disturbances in County Armagh: "There are very frequent disturbances there between the parties, and I have heard of parties of people going through the town and playing party tunes, which have been productive of annoyance. -- Q. What party? -- A. The Orangemen going through the town and playing party tunes. -- Q. What tunes? -- A. "Boyne Water", and "Protestant Boys", and "Croppies lie down". -- Q. Are those tunes deemed offensive by the Catholic people of that
The offense was freely given and advertised, as described in "The Aughalee Heroes": "It being the twelfth day of July, Our music so sweetly did play, And 'The Protestant Boys' and 'Boyne Water', Were the tunes we played going away." - BS
For the Siege of Derry, see "The Shutting of the Gates of Derry." For the Boyne, see "The Battle of the Boyne (I)." For Aughrim, see "After Aughrim's Great Diaster." - RBW

Protestant Dogs
DESCRIPTION: "Protesteant dogs Jump like frogs (stink like dogs, etc.), Do eat meat on Friday." Or "Proddy dog, proddy dog, Go to hell."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)
KEYWORDS: playparty animal food
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 127, "(Protestant dogs)"
(1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Catholic Dogs" (answer to this piece)

Protestant Maid, The
DESCRIPTION: A Protestant maid marries a Catholic who has a priest help convince her to convert. The priest plans a transubstantiation demonstration. She adds arsenic to the cake and he balks at eating it. Her husband is convinced to convert to Protestantism.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark)
LONG DESCRIPTION: "A pretty maid, a Protestant, got to a Papist wed" In spite of her husband's urging she would not convert. He brought a priest home to convince her. The priest planned a demonstration of transubstantiation. She agreed and volunteered to make the cake. As he prepared to eat it she told him she had added arsenic; if the cake was changed by transubstantiation, it should be harmless. The priest left without a taste, crying "'This is a cursed place.'" She replied, "'You are a cursed race.'" Her husband was convinced to convert "and quite forsake the system that's impure."
KEYWORDS: marriage trick poison ritual Ireland religious husband wife clergy food
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark 26, "The Protestant Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Old Orange Flute" (subject: religious conversion)
cf. "The Banks of Dunmore" (subject: religious conversion)
cf. "Garvagh Town" (subject: religious conversion)
cf. "Rosedale Waters (The Skeptic's Daughter)" (subject: religious conversion)
NOTES [125 words]: This almost sounds like an answer to "The Banks of Dunmore" -- with the addition, amazingly, of an actual experiment. Of course, there is the complication that the body can become relatively accustomed to arsenic, so possibly in the process of transubstantiation, the arsenic would remain behind -- and the alleged body of Christ would merely be subject to a high arsenic level which would kill the consumers. It would be an interesting experiment to try on, say, a child-abusing priest.
But the idea that anyone would be convinced by this is highly unlikely. For a discussion of the myriad arguments over transubstantiation, which is one of the many hard-to-bridge divides between Protestant and Catholic, see the notes to "The Banks of Dunmore." - RBW
Last updated in version 2.5
Proud Flora
DESCRIPTION: November 8, 1802, the Proud Flora is freighted and leaves Jamaica. In a storm they "throw out some of the lumber ... then the pipes of good wine and rich brandy we were forced to throw into the sea." They land safely the next morning.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1943 (Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast)
KEYWORDS: sea ship storm sailor
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast, pp. 95-96, "Proud Flora" (1 text)
Roud #20535
File: Ran095

Proud Lady Margaret [Child 47]
DESCRIPTION: Knight comes to court Margaret; he will have her or die. She says better men than he have died for her. She asks riddles; he answers and asks more. She agrees to wed, and lists her wealth. He calls her a liar; he is her dead brother come to humble her
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1803 (Scott)
KEYWORDS: death courting riddle ghost
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (15 citations):
Child 47, "Proud Lady Margaret" (5 texts, 1 tune) {Bronson's #1}
Bronson 47, "Proud Lady Margaret" (3 versions)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 47, "Proud Lady Margaret" (1 version: #1)
Chambers-ScottishBallads, pp. 256-259, "Proud Lady Margaret" (1 text)
Lyle/McAlpine/McLucas-SongRepertoireOfAmeliaAndJaneHarris, pp. 18-23, "Archerdale/ The Knight o' Archerdale" (2 texts, 1 tune) (Bronson's #1, with differences)
Buchan/Moreira-TheGlenbuchatBallads, pp. 115-118, "Archerdale" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan2 336, "Proud Lady Margaret" (2 texts, 1 tune) {Bronson's #3}
Dixon-ScottishTraditionalVersionsOfAncientBallads V, pp. 42-45, "The Bonny Hind Squire" (1 text)
Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 183-186, "The Bonny Hind Squire" (1 text)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 162-164, "Proud Lady Margaret" (1 text)
Leach-HeritageBookOfBallads, pp. 54-56, "Proud Lady Margaret" (1 text)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 26, "Proud Lady Margaret" (1 text)
Buchan-ABookOfScottishBallads 49, "Proud Lady Margaret" (1 text)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 161-162, "Proud Lady Margaret"; pp. 162-163, "The Courteous Knight" (2 texts)
DT 47, PRDMARG
Roud #37
File: C047

Proud Pedlar, The
DESCRIPTION: A pedlar offers his pack of gold to sleep with a lady. She accepts. He asks her to return his pack. She refuses. He tells her husband he had borrowed her mortar to grind spice with his pestle and she kept his Pack. The husband has her return it.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c.1750 (_Roxburghe Ballads, v. iii p. 656, according to Farmer)
KEYWORDS: adultery sex gold husband wife commerce
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan2 265, "The Pedlar" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: John Stephen Farmer, editor, Merry Songs and Ballads, Prior to the Year 1800 (1897). Vol I, pp. 247-250, "The Proud Pedlar"
Roud #5852
CROSS-REFERENCES:
Provincial Characteristics

DESCRIPTION: "A Connaught man Gets all that he can... bully and batter..." "A Munster man Is civil by plan... to cheat you." "An Ulster man Ever means to trepan... insolence..." "A Leinster man Is with all cup and can... calls t'other provinces knaves"

AUTHOR: Dr John Brenan (source: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
EARLIEST DATE: between 1812 and 1825 (_The Milesian Magazine; or, Irish Monthly Gleaner_, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)

KEYWORDS: Ireland humorous nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 125-126, "Provincial Characteristics" (1 text)
File: CrPS125

Psalm of Life, A

DESCRIPTION: "Tell me not in mournful numbers Life is but an empty dream, Chickens in their fitful slumbers, Are by no means what they seem." "Egg thou art and egg remainest." "Trust no hawk however pleasant." They leave "Hen tracks in the sand of time."

AUTHOR: unknown (parody of a Longfellow poem)
EARLIEST DATE: 1858 (Journal of the Pavilion)

KEYWORDS: chickens derivative humorous death bird home
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 315-316, "A Psalm of Life" (1 text, 2 tunes)
Roud #27313
NOTES [28 words]: Unlike most parodies, this one is genuinely funny. I'm amazed no one has picked it up.
This is, of course, a parody of Longfellow's "A Song of Life" (published 1838). - RBW

Pull Away Me Boy

DESCRIPTION: Alternate lines are a chorus, "Pull away me boy." The shantyman sings "And you hear me say." "And you do wha' me tell you." "And you go where me go."

AUTHOR: unknown

KEYWORDS: work shanty
FOUND IN: West Indies(Tobago)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Abrahams-DeepTheWaterShallowTheShore, pp. 36-38, "Pull Away Me Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [7 words]: Abrahams has this as a Tobago rowing song. - BS

Pull Doon the Chimneys

DESCRIPTION: "If ye live in the Whitfield hoosin' estate, If he live in Mid Craigie or doon the Seagate... Ye'll ken it's no' Bonnie in Bonny Dundee." Urban renewal has taken away most of the old town. Don't sit still or they'll pull YOU down and plant grass over you

AUTHOR: Catherine Smith (source: Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)
EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)
Pull for the Shore

DESCRIPTION: "Light in the darkness, sailor, day is at hand!" The sailor, clinging to the old boat (presumably meaning his sinful life) is urged to "cling to self no more" and "Leave the poor old stranded wreck, and pull for the shore."

AUTHOR: Philip P. Bliss (1838-1876)
EARLIEST DATE: 1872 (Bliss's collection _The Song Tree_, according to Julian)
KEYWORDS: ship religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
Roud #17400
BROADSIDES:
LOCSheet, sm1874 06588, "Pull for the Shore," John Church & Co (Cincinnati)/ George F. Root (Chicago), 1874 (tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Shore Sailor" (tune, lyrics)
cf. "Launch Thy Bark, Mariner!" (theme)
SAME TUNE:
Shore Sailor (File: Tawn113)
Stand for the Right ("Hope for the future, toiler, help is at hand; Hear ye the battle-cry that rings through the land") (Foner, p. 163)
NOTES [351 words]: This song has, at best, a very limited place in tradition; I include it because it has some connection with the story of the Titanic. Also, it has been recorded by Tom, Brad, and Alice, which may make it known to users of the Index. According to John Julian, editor, _A Dictionary of Hymnology_, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes), p. 150, "This hymn, 'The Life-Boat,' has attained to great popularity. The incident upon which it is based, that of the rescue of a ship's crew by a life-boat, is given in detail by Mr. Sankey in his Sacred Songs, &c. No. 99 (large edition)."
I'm surprised it isn't widely printed today; it wasn't in any of the nine early- to mid-twentieth century hymnals I checked (Baptist, Episcopal, two types of Lutheran, Methodist, Mormon, non-denominational military, Presbyterian, and one I'm not sure about). The tune is magnificent. Of course, the words are a bit un-hymn-like. And, with the exception of the phrase "bright and morning star" (for which see Rev. 22:16), the words do not appear directly Bible-inspired -- though the whole thing might be suggested by Paul's shipwreck in Acts 27. That phrase "bright and morning star" is interesting, by the way. The literal Greek text of Rev. 22:16 reads "the star the bright the morning." This isn't as clumsy in Greek as in English, perhaps, but I think it is an indication of the Aramaic habits of the writer. The King James Bible tried to preserve the feeling with its "bright and morning star" rendering; most of the newer translations simply say "bright morning star."
There is an interesting note on the dating: Laura Ingalls Wilder quotes this in _Little Town on the Prairie_, chapter 6. And it is sung by several men from a saloon (ironic, that). She quotes it again, in a more suitable context, in chapter 23. Wilder claims to have heard it at a time that is after the song was composed (1881, I believe), but not much after; either it spread quickly, or Laura misremembered where she heard it.
For more on Philip P. Bliss, see the notes to "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning." - RBW

Pulling Hard Against the Stream

DESCRIPTION: "In the world I've gained my knowledge, And for it have had to pay... Do your best for one another... Help a worn and weary brother Pulling hard against the stream." The singer advises helping those in need
AUTHOR: Harry Clifton (per Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick)
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Spaeth); 19C (broadside, LOCSinging as110820)
Pullman Strike, The

DESCRIPTION: "Near the town of Chicago, where riot holds full sway, The workingmen of Pullman are battling for fair play." The White House has declared them lawbreakers. Troops are called in, even though the workers merely want "fair pay."

AUTHOR: unknown (Foner-AmericanLaborSongsOfTheNineteenthCentury's version is attributed to "Willie Wildwave")

EARLIEST DATE: 1895 (Delaney's Song Book #7, according to Cohen)

KEYWORDS: strike labor-movement railroading

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
- 1894 - The Pullman Strike

FOUND IN:
- Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, p. 451, "The Pullman Strike" (1 text)
- Foner-AmericanLaborSongsOfTheNineteenthCentury, p. 245, "The Pullman Strike" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "A. R. U." (subject)

NOTES [11 words]: For background on the Pullman Strike, see the notes to "A. R. U." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: CAFS2451

Pump, Suck, Blow

DESCRIPTION: "Pump, suck, blow, Here we go, Diving is a hazard, Look at him Catch the trim, He's a silly bastard Flood from aft, Check main vents... Jimmy's got a bastard on And we don't give a toss"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1985 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)

KEYWORDS: navy technology nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, pp. 115-116, "Pump, Suck, Blow" (1 short text, 1 tune referenced)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. Heykens's "Serenade No. 1" (tune)
- cf. "HMS Ariel Song" (tune)

File: Tawn086
Pumpe-Vise
DESCRIPTION: Norwegian pumping shanty, with chorus in English. "Blow, blow, blow, blow! Land is coming in a-lee." Verses have no story, just general sailing rhymes. Verses are repeated twice before the chorus is sung.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (Brochmann's _Opsang Fra Seilskibstiden_)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage shanty ship
FOUND IN: Norway
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 507-508, "Pumpe-Vise" (1 text)
File: Hugi507

Punch and Judy
DESCRIPTION: "Punch and Judy fought for a pie; Punch gave Judy a knock in the eye. Says Punch to Judy, Will you have any more? Says Judy to Punch, My eye is sore."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1844 (Halliwell)
KEYWORDS: injury food
FOUND IN: REFERENCES (3 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 423, "Punch and Judy" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #223, p. 148, "(Punch and Judy)"
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 162, "Punch and Judy" (1 text)
Roud #12841
File: 002423

Punchin' Dough
DESCRIPTION: The cook points out to the cowboys that "While you're punchin' cattle I'm punchin' the dough." His life is much like theirs, except that he fights with food where they fight with animals. He intends to be "boss of this end of the show."
AUTHOR: Credited by Thorp to Henry Herbert Knibbs
EARLIEST DATE: 1921 (Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys)
KEYWORDS: cowboy cook food
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys, pp. 131-132, "Punchin' Dough" (1 text)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 37, "Punchin' Dough" (1 text, 1 tune) DT, PNCHDOUG*
Roud #5098
RECORDINGS:
Jules Allen, "Punchin' the Dough" (Victor V-40263, 1930; rec. 1929)
Harry Jackson, "The Round-Up Cook" (on HJackson1, CowFolkCD1)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Budd Lake Plains" (theme)
cf. "The Pot Wrassler" (theme)
NOTES [38 words]: The cook on a cattle run was usually an old cowboy who could no longer do the work. It's hardly surprising that he looked on the cowboys as "kids" -- nor that he used his control over the chuck to keep the cowboys in line. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: FCW037

Punchinello
DESCRIPTION: "What shall we do, Punchinello, ...?" "We'll do the same, Punchinello ...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
Punctuality

DESCRIPTION: The singer is not like "fidgety folks ... famous for being too soon." "Punctuality's all very proper"; he is always "exactly ten minutes too late." He misses trains, arrives to propose after his rival, and at death's door will take his medicine too late.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: humorous nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 657, "Punctuality" (1 text)
Roud #6083
File: GrD3657

Pup from Claodach, The

DESCRIPTION: Irish and English. The borrowed pup was so badly treated, poorly fed, homesick, and unhappy that it broke its chain and ran home, crossing "those bleak and barren ranges of Claodach"

AUTHOR: Sean Eoin O Suilleabhain (source: OCanainn-SongsOfCork)
EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (OCanainn-SongsOfCork)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage ordeal nonballad dog
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCanainn-SongsOfCork, pp. 94-95, "Pup from Claodach, The" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [48 words]: OCanainn-SongsOfCork: [The song] "concerns a pup that was loaned to the McCarthys of Claodach, which is just over the [Cork] county bounds.... It seems that the animal was not well treated by the McCarthys and both they and Claodach come in for a fair amount of criticism in the song." - BS
File: OCan094

Purple Boy, The

DESCRIPTION: A girl asks her "Purple Boy" the secrets given man from "King Solomon's high Temple Throne." He cannot reveal them. "Those Ribbon rascals I would defy." She wishes she were a man "that I could join in your Orange band." Girls should choose a Purple boy.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Tunney-StoneFiddle)
KEYWORDS: love ritual Ireland nonballad political
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Tunney-StoneFiddle, p. 133, "The Purple Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark 33, "The Purple Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
OBoyle-TheIrishSongTradition 21, "The Purple Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3478
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Dialogue Between Orange and Croppy" (subject)
NOTES [236 words]: "Following an affray at Loughgall in Co. Armagh in 1795 the Orange Order was founded, while the Yeomen were also established in June 1796. These were made up mainly of men from the Orange Lodges." (source: The 1798 Rebellion on the Hogan Stand site)

Zimmermann p. 19: "In some parts of Ulster, Protestant and Catholic tenants were mingled and contended for the land; the peasantry was thus divided into two camps, each having its oath-bound association. This led to a sort of religious war. At the end of the eighteenth century the Catholic "Defenders" were opposed to the Protestant "Peep o'Day Boys" or "Orangemen." The "Defenders were succeeded by the "Ribbonmen"

Zimmermann, p. 303: "Other Protestant organizations, such as ... the Royal Purple Chapter, developed parallel with Orangeism...."

Within the Orange Lodges, "Purple Marksmen" refers to one of the Master degree, above "Orange" and "Orange Markman," of the Orange Institution (source: "The Formation of the Orange Order 21st September 1795" in the anti-Orange Evangelical Truth at NIreland.com site). See Zimmermann's song references to "The Purple Marksman" [p. 315] and "The Purple Stream" [p. 303, fn. 39].

Tunney-StoneFiddle:
"... songs alluding to the ritual and secrets of the [Orange] Order are few and far between. Indeed, until 1952 when one William Coulter sang 'The Purple Boy' for Sean O Boyle, it was not sung outside the Lodge." - BS

File: TSF133

Push About the Pitcher

DESCRIPTION: "The silver moon, that shines so bright" shows "we've time to drink another pitcher." He'd rather drink and have fun than "work all day, and sleep at night, to grow much richer" He'd love a man "who loves a lass .. and boldly calls for t'other pitcher"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c.1770 (broadside, according to Logan-APedlarsPack);1844 (_The Quavers_) KEYWORDS: drink nonballad FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) REFERENCES (3 citations): Logan-APedlarsPack, pp. 234-236, "The Pitcher" (1 text) Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 92, "Joke and Push About the Pitcher" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 453) ADDITIONAL: The Quaver; or Songster's Pocket Companion (London, 1844 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 126, "Push About the Pitcher" ("The silver moon, that shines so bright") (1 text) ST WT092 (Partial) Roud #1253 CROSS-REFERENCES: cf. "Landlord, Fill the Flowing Bowl!" (theme: drink and good fellowship)) and references there NOTES [167 words]: Logan-APedlarsPack: "'The sneaking milksoap, Jimmy Twitcher' referred to in the fourth stanza, was [John Montagu] Lord Sandwich, an unpopular member of the administration [of George III], whose connection with Miss [Martha] Reay [or Ray] was brought prominently before the public in consequence of her having been murdered [on April 7, 1779] ... by an insane Clergyman, the Rev. Mr [James] Hackman...." The bracket notes are from Martin Levy, Love & Madness (New York, 2004), pp. 1-6. Twitcher is also mentioned in Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames. The reference in the song says "I dearly love a hearty man (No sneaking [or sniggering] milksoap Jimmy Twitcher) Who loves a lass and loves a glass ...." The "joke" in the Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames title is from the line "Let's jocundly push about the pitcher"; The Quaver has "Let's jocund push about the pitcher," which would work better with "jocundly." Logan's text avoids the problem with "We've time to call for t'other pitcher." - BS Last updated in version 2.6

File: WT092

Push Along, Keep Moving

DESCRIPTION: The singer attempts various enterprises, all ending in failure (e.g. when he opens a "whiskey shop," his wife demands all the drink for herself); after each failure, he sets out on a new adventure. Moral/refrain: "Push along, keep moving"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (The Theatrical Budget)
Push Boat

DESCRIPTION: "I'm working on a push boat from Catlettsburg to Pike... for old man Jeffies' Ike." The hard work and low pay of poling on the Big Sandy River are described. Much of the song is devoted to the relations between the singer and his girl, (Cynthie Jane).

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)
KEYWORDS: river ship work courting sailor
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES: Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 35-37, (no title) (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryMississippiRiverFolklore, p. 567, "Push Boat" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cray-AshGrove, p. 17, "Pushboat" (1 text, 1 tune)
Salt-BuckeyeHeritage-OhioHistory, pp. 48-49, "Working on a Pushboat" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #8088
CROSS-REFERENCES:
ct. "Liza Jane" (lyrics)
NOTES: This reminds me -- very strongly -- of "Liza Jane," and the two have assorted individual lines in common. I would not be surprised if they have a common origin. But they have drifted enough that we separate them. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: BMRF567

Push the Business On

DESCRIPTION: "Hire a horse," "steal a gig," "all the world shall have a jig." We do what we can to "pass the music on" or "push the business on"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1896 (Hinkson)
KEYWORDS: dancing nonballad playparty
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES: Greig/Duncan8 1616, "To Pass the Music On" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 105, "Push the Business On" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #12981
NOTES: Gomme's five versions (2.86-88) are pretty much the same. The "push the business on" in the game precedes a change in partners "until each girl has partnered each boy." - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: GrD81616
Pussiker, Pussiker

DESCRIPTION: "Poussikie, poussikie, wow! Where'll we get banes to chow? We'll up the bog, And worry a hogg, And then we'll get bones enow"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan8)

KEYWORDS: dialog animal food

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Greig/Duncan8 1674, "Pussiker, Pussiker" (1 short text)

ADDITIONAL: Robert Chambers, The Popular Rhymes of Scotland (Edinburgh, 1870 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 22, ("Poussikie, poussikie, wow")

Roud #13521

NOTES [9 words]: The current description is all of the Chambers text. - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: Grd81674

---

Pussy Cat, Pussy Cat, Where Have You Been?

DESCRIPTION: "Pussy cat, pussy cat, where have you been? I've been to London to look at the queen. Pussy cat, pussy cat, what did you there? I frightened a little mouse under her chair"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1805 (Songs for the Nursery, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)

KEYWORDS: dialog animal royalty

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))

REFERENCES (7 citations):

Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 191, "Chetie Cheitie Bawdrons" (1 text)

Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 428, "Pussy cat, pussy cat, where have you been?" (1 text)

Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #150, p. 116, "(Pussy cat, pussy cat, where have you been?)"

Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 1, "(Pussy, pussy baudrons)" (1 text)

Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 164, "Pussy Cat, Pussy Cat" (1 text)

Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 57, "Pussycat, Pussycat, Where Have You Been?" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Robert Chambers, The Popular Rhymes of Scotland (Edinburgh, 1870 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 23, ("Poussie, poussie, baudrons, Where hae ye been?") (1 text)

ST OO2428 (Partial)

Roud #15094

NOTES [71 words]: According to the Baring-Goulds, there was an incident similar to this during the reign of Elizabeth I, and many have thought the song refers to that. There is an English proverb, "A cat may look at a king," which is quoted, e.g., in Alice in Wonderland, chapter VIII, "The Queen's Croquet Ground." The idea also appears in Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #759, p. 759. Whether either is in any way related I do not know. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.3

File: 002428

---

Pussycat's Party

DESCRIPTION: A cat and her kittens have "a nice party to tea" one evening. "Then, in the midst of the fun, There came a loud knock on the door." They run away and don't come back.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)

KEYWORDS: party humorous animal

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):

OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 120, "Pussycat's Party" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #16254

RECORDINGS:

Elizabeth Cronin, "Pussycat's Party" (on IRECronin01)
Put a Watermelon Rind Upon My Grave

DESCRIPTION: "Put a watermelon rind upon my grave and let the juice run through, Put a watermelon rind upon my grave, that's all I ask of you. When my mama bake a chicken then(?) she bake it very fine, But nothing can compare with a watermelon rind. Put a...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1968 (NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal)
KEYWORDS: burial death food
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):

Put John on the Island

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Hail Hail, Put John on the island, Hail hail, Weep low Judgement's coming" Verses: "You've got Jesus hold him fast, The grace of God you shall receive" "Didn't know Christ was in the field, Till I heard the rumbling of the chariot wheel"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegroHamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: Bible nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegroHamptonInstitute, p. 160, "Put John on de Islan'" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 122 in the 1901 edition)
Roud #11824
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Oh, They Put John on the Island" (theme, first line) and references there
NOTES [75 words]: In Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegroHamptonInstitute's verses, every alternate line is "Weep low, Judgment's coming." - BS According to Revelation 1:9, John was "on the island called Patmos because of the word of God and the testimony of Jesus." Note that there is no sign he was exiled there; indeed, the general sense is that he voluntarily fled there (probably during the persecution of Domitian, reigned 81-96 C.E.). - RBW

Put Me In My Little Bed

DESCRIPTION: "Oh birdie, I am tired now, I do not care to hear you sing." The child asks the bird to go to sleep, and requests, "come put me in my little bed." The singer recalls her mother telling her "never, never go astray"

AUTHOR: Words: Dexter Smith / Music: C. A. White
EARLIEST DATE: 1870 (sheet music published by White, Smith & Perry of Boston)
KEYWORDS: orphan bird death mother
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,Ro,SE,So)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 279-280, "Put Me In My Little Bed" (1 text)
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 38, p. 53, "Put Me In My Little Bed" (1 text)
Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois, pp. 254-257, "Put Me In My Little Bed" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #95, "Come, Sister, Come" (1 text) Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 675, "Lullaby" (1 short text, 1 tune, which has the first verse but has lost the point of the song)
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, p. 131, "Old Lullaby" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #4339
RECORDINGS:
Leake County Revelers, "Put Me In My Little Bed" (Columbia 15292-D, 1928)
SAME TUNE:
Parody on: Put Me in My Little Bed ("Oh! once I was a little dreary," by Morris Stranksy") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 124)
NOTES [86 words]: Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety's notes to this song are confused. He claims that Spaeth refers to this song in Read 'Em and Weep -- but there is no such reference, at least in my copy. Spaeth does, however, mention the song in A History of Popular Music in America as one of several hits by C. A. White.
White seems to have had a thing about birds; his first big hit was "Come, Birdie, Come."
Spaeth claims that this song was the forerunner of the more popular "Put My Little Shoes Away." -
RBW
Last updated in version 4.3
File: Beld279

Put My Little Shoes Away

DESCRIPTION: "Mother dear, come bathe my forehead For I'm growing very weak...." The dying child bids farewell to friends and family, and asks mother to "Put my little shoes away." They were brought by Santa, and can eventually be given to the baby
AUTHOR: Words: Samuel N. Mitchell / Music: Charles E. Pratt
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (Chappell); 19C (Wolf); probably written 1873
KEYWORDS: death clothes family
FOUND IN: US(MW,NE,So)
REFERENCES (10 citations):
Randolph 715, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (2 texts plus a fragment, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 463-465, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 715A)
High-OldOldFolkSongs, p. 6, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (1 text)
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 10, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 116, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (1 text)
Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois, pp. 257-258, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (1 text)
Huntington-FolksongsFromMarthasVineyard, pp. 67-69, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, pp. 25-26, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1942, p. 130, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (1 reference) DT, PUTSHOES*
Roud #4340
RECORDINGS:
Big Slim Aliff, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (Decca 5329, 1937; rec. 1936)
Wilf Carter, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (Bluebird [Canada] B-4617, c. 1938; Bluebird B-9032 [possibly as Montana Slim], 1942; rec. 1936)
Chuck Wagon Gang, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (ARC 7-08-55/Vocalion 02983/OKehe 02983/Conqueror 8963, 1937; rec. 1936)
Cramer Brothers, [pseud. for Vernon Dalhart and -- probably -- Carson Robison] "Put My Little Shoes Away" (Broadway 8071, c. 1930)
Gentry Bros., "Put My Little Shoes Away" (Domino 0190 [as Smoky Mountain Twins]/Regal 8389 [as Smoky Mountain Twins]/Paramount 3040 [as Collins Bros.], 1927; Broadway 8071 [as Cramer Bros.], n.d.)
Girls of the Golden West, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (Bluebird 5226, 1933)
Lester McFarland & Bob Roberts, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (Brunswick 322, 1929; Supertone S-2038, 1930)
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (Decca 29645, 1955); (Brunswick 05567)
Riley Puckett, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (Columbia 15125-D, 1927; rec. 1926)
Red Fox Chasers, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (Supertone 9535, 1929; Montgomery Ward M-4963, 1936)
Fiddlin' Doc Roberts Trio, "Put My Little Shoes Away" (Conqueror 8208, 1933)
Vagabonds, "Little Shoes" (Montgomery Ward M-4239, 1933)
Henry Whitter, "Put Away My Little Shoes" (Okeh 45046, 1926)
NOTES [53 words]: The era of this song may explain its odd request: By the time of the Civil War, factory-made shoes were available, but were quite primitive, with no left and right hand versions. Shoes thus were easily acquired, but well-made shoes were becoming more of a luxury as the factory shoes made life harder for cobblers. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: R715

Put on the Silver Slippers
DESCRIPTION: Every other line is "Put on the silver slippers." Verses include floater "my old mistress promised me ... when she died she'd set me free ...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSealslands)
KEYWORDS: nonballad playparty floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSealslands, p. 118, ("I do I do I tries to do") (1 text)
File: Paap118

Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet
DESCRIPTION: "On the old farmhouse veranda there sat Silas and Miranda, Thinking of days gone by." They realize they have been married for fifty years. They leap up, forgetting the years, and go to town to celebrate all the happy times
AUTHOR: Words: Stanley Murphy / Music: Percy Wenrich
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Dean-FlyingCloud); apparently published 1909
KEYWORDS: love marriage
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Dean-FlyingCloud, p. 89, "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet" (1 text)
DT, GOLDWED3*
Roud #5491
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Put On Your Old Grey Bonnet
File: Dean089

Put the Traffic Down
DESCRIPTION: "Here comes Jones with his face so cross"; drink has left him destitute. "Here comes Squire Brown," rich from selling liquor. The singer calls for an end to the liquor trade: "Put it down, put it down, put the unholy traffic down!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (Randolph); reportedly used by Holy Rollers in 1898
KEYWORDS: drink political money
FOUND IN: US(Se)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Randolph 314, "Put the Traffic Down" (1 text plus an excerpt, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 267-269, "Put the Traffic Down" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 314A)
Roud #7790
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Yorktown Rum Seller
Old Jones
File: R314
Put Yer Shoulder Next to Mine and Pump Away
DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Formula verses about bringing a girl presents until she apparently allows herself to be seduced. Verse lines are repeated in choruses. Full chorus: "Put yer shoulder next to mine and pump away, pump away." (x2)
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Formula verses about bringing a girl presents until she apparently allows herself to be seduced. Verse lines are repeated in choruses. Full chorus: "Put yer shoulder next to mine and pump away, pump away." (x2) Once I had a girl, had a girl, had a girl (x2) she had me in a whirl. Chorus. I brought her presents one... she said I shouldn't have done, etc. I brought her presents two... and her heart she let me woo." and so forth, until "I brought her presents nine... the baby's doing fine."
KEYWORDS: shanty courting gift cumulative
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 508-509, "Put Yer Shoulder Next to Mine and Pump Away" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, pp. 374-375]
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Roll Me Over" (tune)
NOTES [20 words]: Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas says this was popular only on British ships. Very likely gave rise to "Roll Me Over." - SL
File: Hugi508

Put Your Finger in the Corbie's Hole
DESCRIPTION: "Put your finger in the Corbie's hole [or "in Tabby's house," or "in Foxy's hole"], Corbie's not at home. Corbie's at the back door, Picking at a bone." The game, if the victim does not escape soon enough, ends with the victim's finger being pinched
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1842 (Chambers, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)
KEYWORDS: playparty bird animal trick food
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland) New Zealand
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 172, "Put Your Finger in Foxy's Hole" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #598, p. 237, "(Put your finger in foxy's hole)" (1 short text)
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 183, "(Put your finger in Tabby's hole" (1 text)
Roud #22997
File: SuSm183C

Put Your Little Foot (Varsouvienna)
DESCRIPTION: "Put your little foot (x2) Put your little foot right there... Take a step to the right, Take a step to the left, But forever stay near." Further invitations to move closer follow: "Put... your arm around my waist... We will dance through the night."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1943
KEYWORDS: dancing nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 45, "Put Your Little Foot" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abernethy-SinginTexas, p. 82, "Put Your Little Foot" (1 text, 1 tune)
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 47, 79-80, 182, 218, 230, 241, "Varsoviana" (6 tunes)
Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 19, 31, 38, 66, 99-100, 137, "Varsoviana" (and variant spellings) (6 tunes)
RECORDINGS:
Glenn Ohrlin, "Varsouvienna" (on Ohrlin01)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Put Your Little Foot Right Out
Varsouvienne
NOTES [63 words]: The "Varsouvianna" (Varsouvienna, etc.; described as a variation on the mazurka) tune is very common, and is cited sporadically in the references here. How often it bears this particular set of lyrics is less certain; few if any of the Australian versions, for instance, have words. - RBW
Ohrlin remarks that "Put Your Little Foot" was usually the cue for a fight to start. - PJS
Last updated in version 4.5
File: 0hr045

Putting On Airs
DESCRIPTION: "No use talking (x2), The truth itself declares, If you act like the folks of fashion do, You're bound to put on airs." The singer doesn't want to mix in others' affairs, but he observes how both boys and girls dress up and put on airs
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929
KEYWORDS: clothes beauty courting nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MW,So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Randolph 460, "Putting on Airs" (1 text)
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 82, "You've Got to Put on Airs" (1 text)
ST R460 (Partial)
Roud #3773
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Boys Around Here" (theme)
cf. "Putting on the Style" (theme)
cf. "When Young Men Go Courting" (theme)
NOTES [30 words]: The last several verses of Randolph's text look almost like modifications of "Putting on the Style," but the first verse and chorus are different enough that I separate them. - RBW
File: R460

Putting On the Style
DESCRIPTION: A series of comments on the folly of those who put on false faces. Example: "Young man in a carriage driving like he's mad... He cracks his whip so lively just to see his lady smile, But she knows he's only puttin' on the style."
AUTHOR: unknown (see NOTES)
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Cox)
KEYWORDS: humorous vanity pride
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,So)
REFERENCES (10 citations):
Randolph 469, "Putting On the Style" (1 text plus an excerpt, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 320-322, "Putting On the Style" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 469A)
High-OldOldFolkSongs, p. 29, "Putting on the Style" (1 text)
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 132, "Putting On the Style" (4 texts, 1 tune)
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 109, "Puttin' On the Style" (1 text, 1 tune+variant form)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 184, "Putting On the Style" (text)
ArkansasWoodchopper, pp. 60-62, "Puttin' on the Style" (1 text, 1 tune)
Seege-American favoredBallads, p. 68, "Putting On The Style" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 24, "Putting On The Style" (1 text)
DT, PUTONSTY PUTONST2*
Roud #3767
RECORDINGS:
Vernon Dalhart, "Putting On Style" (Vocalion 15327, 1926) (Columbia 15082-D, 1926) (Edison 52118, 1927) Warde Ford, "Putting on the Agony" [with half a verse of, "Our Goodman"] (AFS 4200 B3, 1938; tr.;
in AMMEM/Cowell)
Pete Seeger, "Puttin' On the Style" (on PeteSeeger04); "Putting On the Style" (on PeteSeeger11) [Ernest Stoneman &] The Dixie Mountaineers, "Puttin' on the Style" (Edison, unissued, 1927)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Putting on Airs" (theme)
cf. "Sweet Sixteen" (theme)
cf. "The Truth Twice Told" (subject)
NOTES [286 words]: Cazden et al have very extensive notes about the origins of this song, which largely boil down to, "Hey, we found this song, and it belongs to us and our informant!" Nonetheless, their notes, and the existence of the several versions in Randolph, demonstrate that the song has become a true folk piece. - RBW
Seeger dates this song from the 1880s, but offers no documentation. - PJS
The earliest claim I've seen is that it has the authors as Percy Wenrich and Edward Madden (1878-1952). But I haven't yet found sheet music. Madden was responsible for songs like "By the Light of the Silvery Moon," so he could write. So could Wenrich, perhaps best known for "Put on Your Old Grey Bonnet," and "When You Wore a Tulip and I Wore a Big Red Rose." But Wikipedia claims that Wenrich was born in 1887 (died 1952), so he could hardly have been responsible for nineteenth century versions! Other sources give slightly earlier birth dates, but still awfully late for a song supposedly found in the nineteenth century. And what are the odds that Madden and Wenrich -- both in their primes when Dalhart was recording -- would not have taken notice when such a big name recorded their song?
And the version in Cox, collected in 1917, was reported to be from the informant's mother, which makes a nineteenth century date highly likely. Indeed, the first verse begins,
Eighteen hundred seventy one,
January the first,
Thought I'd write a poem,
If I could or durst.
It will be noted, however, that this verse doesn't scan as well as the others. But Randolph's informant Doney Hammontree said it was in "all the popular songbooks" in the 1890s. Still, the biggest single factor in its popularity was probably the Dalhart recording. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: R469

Qu'avec-Vous, Oui, Belle Blonde
DESCRIPTION: French. "Je m'endors, (x2), et j'ai soif et j'ai faim." The singer is tired and hungry; the sun is down and his blonde is gone. He asks what is wrong. He dislikes the town of Crowley. He wants the blonde and ignores the brunette
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (collected from Jesse Stafford)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage rejection
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 187-188, "Qu'avec-Vous, Oui, Belle Blonde (What's Wrong, Little Blonde)" (1 French text plus English translation, 1 tune)
NOTES [47 words]: Although Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry does not say that informant Jesse Stafford wrote this, I rather suspect he did; it's hard to believe that such a shallow tale of a man who seems to do most of his thinking with something other than his brain could last long in tradition. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.2
File: LoSi187

Quack, Quack, Quack
DESCRIPTION: "There were three ducks that I once knew, Pretty ducks, fat ducks they were too, But the one with a feather curled up on his back, Oh, he ruled the others with a quack, quack, quack." The behavior of the ducks and their leader is described
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: bird
Quaker (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "Verily high! Verily oh! Vivity vob like the shaker. All this wealth is awfully wrong And it terribly puzzles the quaker."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (recording, Bampton Morris and Jinky Wells); 1907 (_Fores's ..._ fragment); 1880 (_"Brummagem" Bright_ "parody?)

KEYWORDS: nonballad recitation

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))

RECORDINGS:

_Bampton Morris and Jinky Wells, "The Quaker" (on Voice16)

NOTES [101 words]: The current description is all of the Bampton Morris and Jinky Wells version on Voice16.

This is a dance tune. The words, which could be sung to the tune, may suggest the step. The lines are quoted as "Oh, this world is awfully rum, It terribly puzzles the Quaker!" in _Fores's Sporting Notes & Sketches_, (London, 1907 ("Digitized by Google")), Vol. XXIV, p. 33. A political verse - "In '74 the Tories came in, 'Oh Britain! what will awake her?' 'They're just as strong as ever they've been,' That's what puzzles the Quaker" - is in _"Brummagem" Bright_, (London, 1880 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 26.- BS

File: RcTQuak1

Quaker (II), The

DESCRIPTION: The Quaker is a ship with five hundred and fifty seamen. "By those blooming French dogs, we'll never be controlled." We fought them "till they could no longer stay." The war is over. A health to true girls and Lord Nelson "the best of all our crew"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (recording, Freddie James, RQMS Williams, G.W. Greening and Harry Hawkins?)

KEYWORDS: battle navy sea ship patriotic

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

Roud #3093

RECORDINGS:

_Freddie James, RQMS Williams, G.W. Greening and Harry Hawkins?, "The Quaker" (on Voice16)

NOTES [380 words]: A ship with 550 sailors would have to be a Ship of the Line. I can't find a line battleship named Quaker in any British records, pre- or post-Trafalgar. The closest I can see to a similarly-named ship is the 64-gun Caton. But that's hardly the most famous ship in the navy. We should probably just treat the ship name as an error. But it is probably not an error for the Caton. The song tells us several things: The ship fought the French, and it mentions Nelson. That means it has to be a ship from the Napoleonic Wars, and it probably fought at the Nile, Copenhagen, or Trafalgar, with the last being the most likely. And that, I think, solves it. "If" this song is historical -- and I do not claim that it is -- then the ship is almost certainly HMS Conqueror, which fought at Trafalgar under Captain Israel Pellew. According to Wikipedia, it had 573 sailors aboard at Trafalgar, which is a good match for the song's 550. And her role in the battle was significant and did result in a sort of surrender by the French. According to John Keegan, _The Price of Admiralty: The Evolution of Naval Warfare_, Penguin, 1988, pp. 75-76, "Conqueror's broadside seems to have been the decisive stroke [against the Bucentaure, badly mauled in the battle], the one that caused Villeneuve to have the imperial eagle thrown overboard." According to David Howarth, _Trafalgar: The Nelson Touch_, Galahad Books, 1969, p. 182, Conqueror was the ship that shot away the Bucentaure's main- and mizen-masts, leaving her unable to maneuver and effectively unable to fight. On p. 184, Howarth reports that Conqueror's marine captain James Atcherley had charge of the boat that accepted Bucentaure's surrender and took the French commander Villeneuve off his flagship to surrender. On pp. 184-185, Howarth adds that Conqueror had a major role in disabling the Santisima Trinity, the largest ship to take part in the battle. Thus, although Conqueror did not achieve the fame of ships like Victory and Royal Sovereign, it played a very major role at Trafalgar, well worthy of mention in song. And "Conqueror" is a name that would not sing well; it would probably have been pronounced "Conq'ror," from which it takes only the slightest error of hearing to get "Quaker." - RBW

Quaker, How is Thee?

DESCRIPTION: "Quaker, Quaker, how is thee? Very well, I thank thee. How's thy neighbor, next to thee? I don't know, but I'll go see."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren)

KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #66, "Quaker, How is Thee?" (1 short text)

File: Newe066

Quaker's Courtship, The

DESCRIPTION: The Quaker comes to court the girl. He offers her a ring and money; she tells him she wants a man to call her honey. He tells her she is pretty; she calls him a flatterer. He gives up; she tells him to "Find a Quaker girl to marry"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1856 (Thompson-APioneerSongster)

KEYWORDS: courting discrimination ring

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,NE,So) Canada(Mar,Ont)

REFERENCES (24 citations):

Thompson-APioneerSongster 41, "The Quaker's Wooing" (1 text)

Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, p. 265, "The Quaker's Wooing" (1 text, lacking any reference to a Quaker but probably this)

Randolph 362, "The Courting Song" (4 texts, 2 tunes, though Randolph's "A" text is rather tenuously related to the others); 363, "I'm Going Away to Texas" (3 texts, 1 tune, the "C" text appearing to belong here; "A" is "I'm Going Away to Texas" and "C" is perhaps "The Quaker's Courtship")

Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 295-297, "The Courting Song" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 362C)

Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 4, "Madam Mozelle, I've Come Courting" (1 fragment, too short to identify with certainty but perhaps this song); 8, "The Quaker's Wooing" (1 text, also short)

Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5, p. 525, "Quaker Courtship" (1 short text, 1 tune)

Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #203, "The Quaker's Courtship" (1 text)

Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 101, "The Quaker's Wooing" (1 text, 1 tune)

Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 276-278, "The Quaker's Wooing" (1 short text, 1 tune)

Fowke/Johnston-FolkSongsOfCanada, pp. 154-155, "The Quaker's Courtship" (1 text, 1 tune)

Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 23, "Quaker's Courtship" (1 text, 1 tune)

Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 158, "The Quaker's Wooing" (1 text, 1 tune)

Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, pp. 2-3, "Quaker's Courtship" (1 text, 1 tune)

Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 36, "A Sport Song" (1 text, 1 tune)

Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 407-408, "The Quaker's Wooing" (1 text)

Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 176, "The Quaker Song" (3 texts, 2 tunes)

Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 162, "Father Sent Me here A-Courting" (1 text, 1 tune, clearly this although no Quakers are mentioned)

Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, p. 35, "Madam, I Have Come A-Courting" (1 text, 1 tune)

Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 199-200, "Quaker's Courtship" (1 fragment, 1 tune, which might be either this or "Wheel of Fortune")
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 12, "The Quaker's Courtship" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryOfNewEnglandFolklore, p. 587, "Quaker's Courtship" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 108, pp. 223-224, "The Quaker's Courtship" (1 text)
Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #31, "Quaker Courtship" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Richard M. Dorson, _Buying the Wind: Regional Folklore in the United States_, University of Chicago Press, 1964, pp. 410-411, "Sober Quaker" (1 text)

ST R362 (Partial)
Roud #716
RECORDINGS:
Buell Kazee, [Madam, I Have Come A-Courting] (on Kazee01)

BROADSIDES:
LOCSheet, sm1878 x0003, "The Quaker's Courtship," Alex Forbes (unknown), 1878 (tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Keys of Canterbury"
cf. "No, John, No"
cf. "Wheel of Fortune (Dublin City, Spanish Lady)"
cf. "Jonathan's Courtship" (general tone and plot)

NOTES [136 words]: The "courting songs" listed in the cross-references have cross-fertilized heavily; one should examine texts carefully to see where a particular variant belongs.
One form of this in particular, "Madam, I Have Come A-Courting," has worn down so much that it some versions almost no elements left to allow identification. An example is Buell Kazee's version:

Madam, I have come a-courting, Oh dear, oh dear me. Come a-courting, not a-sporting....

Well if that is your desire, Fa da link dum, fa da day, You can sit and court the fire....
I've a ring worth many a shilling... You can wear it if you're willing....
I'll not have your ring or money... Want me a man to call me honey....

Intermediate texts such as Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety's, though, imply that such items probably belong here. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: R362

Quaker's Wife, The

DESCRIPTION: "The (Quaker's/Baker's) wife sat doon to bake, With all her bairns about her, She baked them every one a cake...." "And then the miller sat doon to play A tune upon the spinnet."
"Merrily danced the Quaker's wife, And merrily danced the Quaker."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1805 (_Songs for the Nursery collected from the Works of the Most Renowned Poets_, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)
KEYWORDS: cook food dancing
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) Ireland
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1734, "The Quaker's Wife" (3 texts, 3 tunes) Graham-Joe-Holmes-SongsMusicTraditionsOfAnUlsterman 61, "The Quaker's Wife" (1 fragment, 1
tune)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 432, "The Quaker's wife got up to bake" (2 texts) Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 87, "(The Quaker's wife sat doon to bake)" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Robert Chambers, The Scottish Songs (Edinburgh, 1829), Vol II, p. 594, ("The quaker's wife sat down to bake")
Roud #6479
File: MNSR087

Quand j'étais fille de quinze ans (When I Was a Fifteen Year Old Girl)

DESCRIPTION: French. When I was a girl all the boys came to my house to laugh and go to the ball and dance. No longer. I have a household to maintain and children to look after. Chorus:
"When I was a girl, Oh! What delightful joy to be a girl fifteen."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage marriage wife youth
Quand la Guerre Est Fini (Those Terrible Americans and their Souvenirs)

DESCRIPTION: Bastardized (literally) French: "Quand la guerre est finis, Les Americans parti, Laissez les pauvres Francaises Un souvenir Bebe." Verses tell the same story in different words: When the war ends, the American soldiers will leave French girls with babies

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe)

KEYWORDS: soldier foreignlanguage baby adultery abandonment bastard

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 55-57, "Quand la Guerre Est Fini (Those Terrible Americans and their Souvenirs)" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: NiM055

Quand le Boiteuse Va-t-au Marche (When the Lame One goes to Market)

DESCRIPTION: French shanty. No particular story, each verse line is repeated as a refrain. Full Chorus: "Ah! ma doue, quel trésor d'avoir épouse (2x), Un coeur tout en or!" "Oh, my dear, what treasure to have married, to have wed (2x) a heart of gold!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Hayet, _Chansons de bord_)
LONG DESCRIPTION: French shanty. No particular story, each verse line is repeated as a refrain. Full Chorus: "Ah! ma doue, quel trésor d'avoir épouse (2x), Un coeur tout en or!" "Oh, my dear, what treasure to have married, to have wed (2x) a heart of gold!" Some of the verses are reminiscent of "The Fire Ship" in the use of naval euphemisms, i.e. (in translation) "and then he furls her petticoat, clewing up her lower sails," "then to get goin' the smart topman, send up her the main topmast."

KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage shanty bawdy

FOUND IN: France

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 514-515, "Quand le Boiteuse Va-t-au Marche" (2 text, French & English, 1 tune)
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 110, "Quand la Boiteuse Va-t-au Marche" (2 texts, French & English, 1 tune)
File: Hugi514

Quantrell

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you bold robbers and open your ears, Of Quantrell the lion-heart you quickly will hear." Quantrell raids and burns Lawrence, Kansas, but allegedly he supports to the poor, and "a brave man or woman he'll never annoy."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1864 (Council Grove Press, according to Cohen)

KEYWORDS: outlaw

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Aug 21, 1863 - Quantrill's Raiders destroy Lawrence, Kansas, killing about 150 men.
May 10, 1865 - Quantrill is mortally wounded on his way to Washington (where he hoped to stir up trouble by assassination). He dies 20 days later.

FOUND IN: US(Ro)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 132-133, "Quantrell" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 493-494, "Quentill's Raid on Lawrence"
(1 text)
Finger-FrontierBallads, pp. 64-65, "Quantrell" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, QUANTRLL*
Roud #4094

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Charlie Quantrell" (subject) and references there

NOTES [85 words]: As is so often the case with outlaw ballads, this paints much too pretty a picture. For a brief background on Quantrill (the name used in Confederate records), see the notes to "Charlie Quantrell."

To tell this song from other Quantrell pieces, consider this first stanza:
Come all you bold robbers and open your ears
Of Quantrell the lion-heart you quickly will hear
With his band of bold raiders in double-quick time
He came to burn Lawrence just over the line.
This song is item dE33 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.0
File: LoA132

---

Quare Bungo Rye

DESCRIPTION: Sailor Jack meets a girl, who offers to sell him "old bungo rye." Jack thinks it a whiskey, and buys her basket. In it he finds a child. Jack declares the child to be "quare bungo rye," and has the child christened with that name

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1869 (Logan-APedlarsPack)

KEYWORDS: sailor drink children baby trick clergy

FOUND IN: Britain Ireland Canada(Mar,Newf) Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (7 citations):
- Logan-APedlarsPack, pp. 416-421, "Bung Your Eye" (1 text)
- Greig/Duncan2 305, "Bung Your Eye" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
- Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H700, pp. 277-278, "Mind Your Eye" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Peacock, pp. 895-896, "Young Bung'er-eye" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 39, "Jack the Sailor" (1 fragment, probably this though the chorus has swapped off somewhere, 1 tune)
- Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 211-212, "Blow the Man Down" (1 text, version "F" of "Blow the Man Down" sung to the tune of "Lowlands Low") [AbEd, pp. 166-167]

DT, QUARERYE

ST Log416 (Full)
Roud #2404

RECORDINGS:
- The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem, "Bungle Rye" (on IRClancyMakem02)
- Jacob Noseworthy, "Bung Your Eyes" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
- Anthony Power, "Bungle Rye" (on ITMA/CapeShoreNL)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Basket of Eggs" (plot and baby in basket motif) and references there
cf. "The Child in the Budget" (baby in basket motif)
cf. "The Oyster Girl" [Laws Q13] (mysterious--read female--"box" motif)
cf. "Bung Yer Eye" (chorus lyrics)
cf. "The Charming Young Widow I Met on the Train" (theme of the female leaving a baby)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- Queer Bungo Rye
- Quare Bungle Rye
- The Exciseman
- Bangeria

NOTES [183 words]: Re:the mysterious box motif. The Lesley Nelson-Burns site Folk Music of England Scotland Ireland, Wales & America collection includes a page by John Renfro Davis with text for this ballad as "Quare Bungle Rye" and a note that "This is a variant of The Oyster Girl." The note goes on to cite a Bodleian broadside for The Oyster Girl. It also cites as "variants and alternate titles" The Basket of Oysters, Bungerey, Queer Bungle Rye, Quare Bungo Rye, Young Bung-er'Eye, The Basket of Eggs, and Eggs in Her Basket.
The Oyster Maid/Basket of Eggs connection similarities are based on the motif of a sailor being fooled by a woman into taking something hidden in a basket which, in some versions, turns out to be a baby. While the parallels -- including the sexual symbolisms -- are obvious, these should be treated as three different ballads because of the differences in the punch lines.
The motif of the "box" with censored contents that cannot just be thrown away is even closer to the 1950 Phil Harris hit "The Thing" written by Charles R. Grean and set to the tune of "The Chandler's Wife." - BS

Quart Bottle
DESCRIPTION: "Hand me down the quart bottle... Here's four quarts of whiskey... As sure as that midnight train goes out I'm gonna get drunk again... when I get the fighting blues I'll sometimes think of you"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart2)
KEYWORDS: love train drink nonballad floating verses separation
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart2 54, "Quart Bottle" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [39 words]: Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart2 includes the following floating verse -- "Some say love's a pleasure" -- and floating lines "I hear the train a' comin' Comin' round the bend," though the tag line is changed from the usual floater. - BS

Quartermaster Corps, The (The Quartermaster Store)
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, it's beer, beer, beer that makes you feel so queer, In the corps, in the corps."
"My eyes are dim, I cannot see, I have not brought my specs with me." Similarly, "...cheese... brings you to your knees," and so forth with other army items
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook)
KEYWORDS: army soldier food disease nonballad
FOUND IN: Canada
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, pp. 84-85, "The Quarter Master's Stores" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 272, "The Quartermaster Store" (1 text)
DT, QMCORP*
Roud #10508
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Power in the Blood" (tune)
cf. "My Eyes Are Dim" (lyrics, sort of)
SAME TUNE:
The Valley of the Ruhr (File: Hopk120B)

Quasebe
DESCRIPTION: Dialect: "Vat de matter lady," he says, do something for me; my heart's breaking for Quasebe. Look at his face. He looks like an overseer. He takes what he wants. Beat him well.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2)
KEYWORDS: courting nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 185, "Quasebe" (1 text)
NOTES [58 words]: I'm not sure I understand any of this. There's little if any Scottish in this. Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 has no glossary for whatever dialect this is supposed to be. - BS
It looks rather "Dutch" to me (that is, imitation German, not a legitimate dialect). Could it possibly be a Jacobite dialect song about George I and his Germans? - RBW

Que Bonita Bandera
DESCRIPTION: Spanish language; Puerto Rican patriotic song: "What a beautiful flag, it is the flag of Puerto Rico"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (heard by Pete Seeger)
KEYWORDS: patriotic nonballad foreignlanguage
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Seeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 14, "Que Bonita Bandera" (1 text, 1 tune)

Queen Among the Heather
DESCRIPTION: Young man, hunting, spies a girl herding sheep among the heather. He is smitten; she is "the bonniest lassie that e'er I saw." He asks her to go with him; she demurs, saying he's a squire and she but a shepherd's daughter. He perseveres and succeeds.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)
KEYWORDS: courting love beauty farming lover nobility worker
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) US(MW) Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (9 citations):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 141, "The Queen Among the Heather" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #44, pp. 1-2, ("Far up yon wild and lofty glens") (1 text)
Greig/Duncan5 962, "The Lass Amang the Heather" (3 texts)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 433, "My Lovely Nancy" (1 text)
Stewart/Belle-Stewart-QueenAmangTheHeather, pp. xiii-xiv, "Queen Amang the Heather" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick, pp. 115-117, "Herdin Lambs Among the Heather" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi 74, "Herdin Lambs Amongst the Heather" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 51, "The Laird o' Drum" (1 fragment, listed as Child #236 but clearly a version either of this or "Heather Down the Moor"; the stanza form tentatively places it here)
ADDITIONAL: Chris Wright, "Forgotten Broadsides and the Song Tradition of the Scots Travellers" -- essay found in David Atkinson and Steve Roud, Editors, _Street Ballads in Nineteenth-Century Britain, Ireland, and North America: The Interface between Print and Oral Tradition_, Ashgate, 2014, pp. 87-90, "The Shepherd's Daughter" (2 texts plus a reproduction of a Poets Box broadside)

RECORDINGS:
Harry Lauder, "Queen Among the Heather" (Victor 60010, 1910)
Jeannie Robertson, "The Queen Among the Heather" (on FSBFTX13)
Belle Stewart, "Queen Amang the Heather" (on Voice15)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.15(240), "The Blooming Heath" ("As I was coming home, from the fair of Ballymena"), unknown, n.d.; also Harding B 11(331), 2806 c.14(60), "The Blooming Heath"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Heather Down the Moor" (plot, lyrics)
cf. "Bonnie Lass Among the Heather" (subject)
cf. "The Laboring Man's Daughter (The Knight's Dream)" (plot)
Queen Anne

DESCRIPTION: "Queen Anne, Queen Anne, you sit in the sun, As fair as a lily, as white as a wand, I send you three letters, and pray read one, You must read one, if you can't read all, So pray, Miss or Master, throw up the ball."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1900 (Halliwell, according to Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose)

KEYWORDS: playparty royalty nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England)

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose (note to) #187, p. 134 ("Queen Anne, Queen Anne, you sit in the sun")
Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #98, "My Lady Queen Anne" (1 text)

Roud #12755

NOTES [45 words]: This is connected by folklore to Anne of Great Britain (1665-1714; reigned 1702-1714), who is reported to have enjoyed sitting in the sun in gardens. But it can't have been an eyewitness account, since Anne was hardly fair of face and not particularly fair of hue. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.3

File: BGMG186N

Queen Anne's Dead

DESCRIPTION: About the death of someone (Queen Anne, Mrs. McKenzie, etc.). "'Queen Anne's dead.' 'How did she die?' 'With her right eye, Le kai, le kai.'" Or "...die? One finger up." Used with various games

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)

KEYWORDS: playparty royalty death dialog

FOUND IN: New Zealand

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, pp. 140-141, "(Mrs. McKenzie's dead)"); "(Queen Anne's Dead)" (2 short texts)

File: SuSm140
Queen Caroline

DESCRIPTION: "Queen, queen, Caroline, Dipped her hair in turpentine, Turpentine made it shine, Queen, queen Caroline"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan8)

KEYWORDS: nonballad royalty

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1643, "Queen Caroline" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Peter and Iona Opie, _I Saw Esau: Traditional Rhymes of Youth_, #8, "(Queen, queen, Caroline)" (1 text)
Henry Carrington Bolton, Counting-Out Rhymes of Children (New York, 1888 ("Digitized by Google")), #785 p.116, ("Queen, queen, Caroline")
Roud #13061

NOTES [400 words]: The current description is all of a Bolton text from Edinburgh. Except for spelling and punctuation differences, it is the same as Greig/Duncan8."And so began the mad, fantastic summer of 1820, the summer when international politics, sport and even the London season were forgotten. The Queen was the only subject of interest.... And in all four kingdoms the younger generation were chanting Queenie, queenie Caroline Washed her hair in turpentine .
a song which is heard in the slums of Dublin today" (Source: Joanna Richardson, The Disastrous Marriage; a Study of George IV and Caroline of Brunswick (1960, London), pp. 137-138.) - BS
There were in fact two Queens Caroline, great-grandmother-in-law (if there is such a thing) and great-granddaughter-in-law. Caroline of (Brandenburg-)Ansbach, 1683-1737, was the wife of George II; Caroline of Brunswick (1768-1821) was the wife of George IV, the eldest son of George III (who was the grandson of George II).
George II and Caroline of Anspach got along pretty well despite his infidelities. George IV was also a womanizer, and he and Caroline of Brunswick did "not" get along; OxfordCompanion, p. 169, calls their marriage a "spectacular disaster. According to her own testimony, intimacy was confined to the first night, and certainly the couple separated after the birth of their first daughter."
When George IV took the throne (1820), he supposedly offered her a pension to stay abroad and leave him alone. She refused it and came back to England after a long period abroad -- but died just weeks after George's coronation, which no doubt saved everyone (except her) a good deal of grief.
Lofts, p. 151, observes that her behavior once she and her husband parted was so scandalous as to prompt an investigation, although it found that she was merely indiscrete, not adulterous. But her indiscretion apparently reached the point of appearing toless in public (Lofts, p. 153). No doubt she was also quite capable of using turpentine to try to color her hair.
Macalpine/Hunter, pp. 247-250, suggest that Caroline's problem was porphyria, a disease she shared with her uncle George III and her first cousin and husband George IV. That George III had mental problems is certain; that the cause was porphyria (a genetic disease which both might have inherited from their common ancestors) is possible but in need of demonstration by DNA testing. - RBW

Bibliography

• Lofts: Norah Lofts,Queens of England, Doubleday, 1977
• Macalpine/Hunter: Ida Macalpine and Richard Hunter,George III and the Mad Business, Pantheon, 1969

Last updated in version 4.4
File: GrD81643

Queen Eleanor's Confession [Child 156]

DESCRIPTION: Queen Eleanor, dying, calls for two friars. King Henry decides to substitute himself and Earl Marshal. Eleanor confesses to many sins against Henry, often with the Earl. Henry reveals himself and wishes that he could tell the world what Eleanor said

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1723
KEYWORDS: trick humorous royalty disease clergy disguise
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1189 - Death of Henry II
1204 - Death of Eleanor of Aquitaine
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber),England(Lond))
REFERENCES (15 citations):
Child 156, "Queen Eleanor's Confession" (7 texts)
Bronson 156, "Queen Eleanor's Confession" (1 version)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 156, "Queen Eleanor's Confession" (1 version)
Buchan/Moreira-TheGlenbuchatBallads, pp. 200-203, "The Queen's Confession" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan2 208, "Queen Eleanor" (2 texts)
Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-BritishBalladsFromMaine pp. 462-465, "Queen Eleanor's Confession" (notes plus a text of Child A)
Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland3, pp. 127-132, "Queen Eleanor's Confession" (1 text, from "The Charms of Melody" rather than tradition) Percy/Wheatley-ReliquesOfAncientEnglishPoetry II, pp. 164-168, "Queen Eleanor's Confession" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 35, "Queen Eleanor's Confession"
(notes only)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 431-433, "Queen Eleanor's Confession" (1 text)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 181-182, "Queen Eleanor's Confession" (1 text)
Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 72, "Queen Eleanor's Confession" (1 text)
Niës-BalladBookOfJohnJacobNiës 48, "Queen Eleanor's Confession" (1 text, 1 tune)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN2274, "Queen Eleanor was a sick Woman"
DT 156, QECONFES
ST C156 (Full)
Roud #74
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rosamund Clifford" (subject)
cf. "Fair Rosamond" (subject)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Dying Queen
NOTES [11535 words]: It is generally assumed that this song refers to the relationship between England's King Henry II and his wife Eleanor of Aquitaine. If so, the element of error in this ballad is immense. Note the following:
* Eleanor (1122?-1204) outlived Henry Plantagenet (1133-1189) by fifteen years.
* Neither Earl Marshal nor King Henry took Queen Eleanor's maidenhead; she had previously been married to, and had two daughters by, Louis VII of France.
* Eleanor could hardly have poisoned Henry's mistress Rosamund Clifford; by the time Rosamund died, Henry had placed Eleanor under close arrest.
* Many versions refer to Whitehall. Whitehall was built for Anne Boleyn in the sixteenth century, three and a half centuries after the death of Henry II (Lofts, p. 85).
* William the Marshal was not an earl at the time Henry II died; he became an earl in the reign of Henry's son Richard I.
* Eleanor calls for a pair of friars to hear her confession. Presumably she wanted friars because they were itinerant; other clergymen would be permanently attached to an English diocese. But, according to Chambers, p. 156, friars were not supposed to hear confession. And certainly not two of them! This lack of knowledge of Catholic practice indicates that the song is post-Reformation.
So we must admit that the details are wrong. Could there, perhaps, be a faint bit of truth at the core? This is a long story -- and a difficult question to answer definitively. Reliable information about Eleanor is often lacking -- starting from the very beginning of her life. As Owen says on p. 3,
"There is no certainty as to the date and place of [her birth], though it is most commonly thought to have taken place in 1122, either in Poitiers or in the castle of Belin near Bordeaux."
Checking other sources shows just how much uncertainty there can be even about something as seemingly straightforward as this. OxfordCompanion, p. 359, gives her birth date as "c. 1122"; so too Meade, p. viii, and Ashley, p. 521. Warren-Henry, pp. 43-44n., says probably 1122 and no later 48, says she was eight years older than Henry II, which probably means 1125. McLynn, p. 8, says
1124, and defends this date on p. 28 (although the argument is based mostly on the date when her youngest son was born). Fawtier, p. 139, says she was 80 when she died, implying 1123 or 1124. Dahmus, p. 154, says she was 67 in 1189, and 82 at the time of her death, implying a birth date of 1121 or 1122.

Her name, "Eleanor," has been said to be properly "Alia-Aenor," "the other Aenor," after her unloved mother Aenor (Meade, p. 18). I wonder about this, however, since the name "Eleanor" was common in the following years -- unlikely if Eleanor of Aquitaine, that most-reviled woman, had been the first Eleanor.

Aquitaine, her duchy, had been a sort of autonomous fragment of Charlemagne's empire. In 951, William I became its duke, founding the line from which Eleanor sprang (Owen, p. 4). Over the next century and a half, the Dukes of Aquitaine increased their reach to include, e.g., Gascony. In 1071, this line gave birth to William IX, known as the "first of the troubadours" (Markale, p. 14). He did much to promote the ideal of Courtly Love (which, in an era when most marriages were political, in effect meant "fornication"). Owen, p. 7, quotes a thirteenth century source which calls William IX "one of the most courtly men in the world and one of the greatest deceivers of women."

William IX died in 1127, and his son William X in 1137 (Owen, p. 10; Markale, p. 17, says that William X died very conveniently, on a pilgrimage to Compostella, but can offer no actual evidence of funny business). Until then, there had been hope that he would beget a male heir, but his death obviously ended that possibility. That left William X's teenage daughter Eleanor as heir to Aquitaine, which by this time was actually larger -- and richer -- than the personal fief of the King of France (Kelly, p. 4). True, the Duchess of Aquitaine was a subject of the King of France -- but the King of France had only nominal authority over most of his dukes (Normandy too was only theoretically subject to French control; its Dukes generally ignored the French king).

From the moment her father died without a male heir, Eleanor became the most sought-after woman in Christendom. Some of that was because she was young and pretty -- but mostly, she was "rich". Aquitaine was hard to control, but since when did that bother a medieval nobleman? There seem to have been multiple plots to kidnap her in the weeks after her father's death (Kelly, p. 2). The best one, however, was that engineered by the old French king Louis VI. He arranged to have Eleanor married to his son Louis. He pulled it off just in time; Louis VI promptly died, and by the time the younger Louis and his new bride entered Paris, he was King Louis VII and she was his queen (Owen, p. 14; Kelly, p. 8).

The marriage, however, was not a success. Although both were young, they were very different. Eleanor was vivacious, intelligent, and a natural schemer. Louis -- who had been intended for the church until his older brother died (Kelly, p. 3) -- was neither clever nor lively; the most that can be said for him was that he was pious -- and even that was intermittent; he was much too easily angered, and occasionally involved in conflicts with the church (Owen, p. 20). Eleanor, according to Markale, p. 19, introduced daring fashions to Paris (Boyd, p. 34, suggests that the origin of Cinderella's lost slipper came from one of these items, although that is a long time for a folk motif to float).

She also introduced a number of rather frivolous games -- one of which was promptly banned as too risque. Louis the Boring can hardly have been pleased. (Many accounts report that Eleanor once said she had married a monk, not a man; Markale, pp. 27, 33, etc. Boyd, p. 51, gives his fourth chapter this title and suggests on p. 60 that Louis and Eleanor rarely slept together). Even so, the marriage might have limped along had Eleanor borne Louis a son -- and had it not been for the Second Crusade.

The First Crusade had resulted in the creation of four Crusader States, the Kingdom of Jerusalem, the Principality of Antioch, the County of Tripoli, and the County of Edessa. The latter three ran along the Mediterranean coast, with Antioch in the north, Tripoli in the middle, and Jerusalem in the south. The three states were entirely independent and weren't always friendly, but when it came to defending themselves from attack, their geography meant that they were mutually supporting, especially when they had naval help.

Not Edessa. The frontier of the Crusader States, it jutted off northeast from Antioch, with no direct access to Tripoli or Jerusalem and with Moslem emirates on three sides (see map on p. 109 of Runciman or on p. 301 of Oldenbourg).

In 1144, Zengi, the first great leader of the Islamic counterattack on the Crusader States, besieged Edessa. There were few defenders; its count, Joscelin II of Courtenay, had stripped the walls to build up a field army (Runciman, p. 235). The Byzantines refused to help; so did the people of Antioch. A force from Jerusalem came too late. On December 26, 1144, Edessa fell after a month-long siege. The Islamic reconquest had begun (Oldenbourg, p. 320).

Western Europe had never really supported the Crusader States properly (Runciman, p. 249). To build a strong state many colonists were needed -- and never came. (Even those who went on the First Crusade had mostly died along the way or been killed by the Turks.) Nor were many knights willing to make the long trip to Palestine to serve for a year or two. Outremer as constituted was sure to fall as soon as a strong enemy developed. But the loss of Edessa shook the Europeans out of their lethargy. The Second Crusade came about when a number of European leaders decided to take the cross and try to retake Edessa.

It should have been a brilliant chance. Zengi was murdered a year and a half after the capture (Runciman, p. 239), and his lands divided between his sons -- the elder had Mosul, the younger Aleppo (Oldenbourg, pp. 321-322). Nur-ed-Din, the new ruler of Aleppo, was to cause the Franks more trouble than ever Zengi did -- but first he had to consolidate his power. Had the Crusaders moved effectively, they might have kept him from amounting to much. But the Crusaders did not move effectively. A premature counterattack on Edessa made by the locals resulted in the remaining Christians being expelled from the city (Runciman, pp. 239-240). German crusaders under the Emperor Conrad were defeated and dispersed by the Turks (Oldenbourg, pp. 326-327), with the German Emperor himself abandoning the Crusade after barely surviving with a handful of his knights (Boyd, p. 89).

The Crusades always lost heavily in transit, and the French crusade was no exception; the management was bad and famine and bad weather took their toll along the way (Boyd, pp. 90-91). A portion of the French crusading force arrived safely in Palestine, but, not knowing the local conditions, was talked into attacking the Kingdom of Damascus (Oldenbourg, pp. 330-332). It seems to have been chosen because "there was no apparently softer target and the Europeans could not simply go home without doing anything" (Boyd, p. 107).

It was just too bad for Damascus, which was a relatively tolerant place, inhabited by Jews, Christians, and Muslims alike. It wasn't any good to the Crusader States, either, because Damascus was independent of Nur-ed-Din; the attack -- which failed -- merely softened up a potential ally so that it later fell to the Zengids (Oldenbourg, pp. 332-334). And the whole fiasco had torn the marriage of Louis and Eleanor to shreds. Eleanor and Louis had gone on the crusade together (Runciman, p. 262), although we don't know whether she talked him into it or he demanded it.

Explanations for her act are many; perhaps she wanted to follow in the footsteps of her grandfather William IX, who had gone on the First Crusade (Markale, p. 15); perhaps Louis didn't want to be parted from her (Markale, p. 25); perhaps he didn't trust her (Owen, p. 22; Boyd, p. 69, in fact has a report that Louis took an oath of chastity for the duration and wanted to make sure she didn't fool around); perhaps he thought her presence would make more of her subordinates serve in the Crusade (Markale, p. 26; Boyd, p. 73, credits her with recruiting many of her vassals); perhaps it was just that she had extreme influence over him (Fawtier, p. 27, although the sequel seems to demonstrate that this was not true); maybe the high-spirited but sheltered queen simply thought it would be a grand adventure (Boyd, p. 69).

Eleanor didn't like the Crusade much, as it turned out -- and, along the way, there were rumors that she had had an affair with her uncle, Raymond, Prince of Antioch. (Markale, p. 17, suggested that Eleanor and Raymond, her father's younger brother who had formerly been known as Raymond of Poitiers, may even have had a relationship before he set out to claim the Principality of Antioch. They may have been friendly, but Eleanor was probably too young for a physical relationship -- and even the gossips apparently said that "she", not he, declared against pursuing it farther, since they obviously could not marry.)

(It will tell you something about the attitudes of the time that Eleanor would later be accused of infidelity with a different uncle, even though she was in her forties and pregnant at the time; Boyd, p. 172.)

Probably the best chronicle for Outremer in this era is that of William of Tyre. He explicitly accuses Eleanor of infidelity (Meade, p. 106; Owen, p. 105). But he was writing twenty-odd years after the fact, and not of his own knowledge (Kelly, p. 62, argues that his data came from French royal sources, i.e. Eleanor's enemies) -- and, like many churchmen, he may have had a prejudice against women. William's statements do seem to prove that, by his time, Eleanor's reputation in Outremer was very bad (ironic, in that she was the mother of Richard I, and that it was her husband, not she, who decided against the assault on Aleppo).

We don't really know what happened in Antioch. Oldenbourg, p. 328, says, "There has been a good deal of argument about the nature of Eleanor of Aquitaine's relations with her uncle. Raymond, although he was getting on for fifty [most sources make him younger; Boyd, p. 64, says he was ten years older than Eleanor; Kelly, p. 30, makes him only eight years older than Eleanor, which would make him about 34 in 1148], must still have been a handsome man and was certainly more attractive than the dull, morose Louis. On the other hand, the Prince of Antioch was reputed to be a most faithful husband, and considering that he had not shown much interest in amorous exploits so far, it seems hard to believe that he should have tried to seduce his own niece. Whatever the truth of the matter, by explaining to the Queen the advantages of a campaign against Aleppo, Raymond of Poitiers drew on himself the jealousy of the King."

Boyd, p. 101, comments that Eleanor never really seems to have understood it when people started whispering about her. So she never did much to protect herself. It probably didn't help that Eleanor and Raymond doubtless conversed in their native Provencal rather than French (Kelly, p. 56). There had already been friction between the French- and Provencal-speaking Crusaders, and the former now came to despise the "degenerate" locals as well (Boyd, p. 100).

Similarly Runciman, p. 279, "In the end, a purely personal motive made up the King's mind for him [to go to Jerusalem instead of attacking Aleppo at once]. Queen Eleanor was far more intelligent than her husband. She saw at once the wisdom of Raymond's scheme; but her passionate and outspoken support of her uncle only aroused Louis's jealousy. Tongues began to wag. The Queen and the Prince were seen too often together. It was whispered that Raymond's affection was more than avuncular. Louis, alarmed for his honour, announced his immediate departure; whereas the Queen declared that she would remain in Antioch, and would seek a divorce from her husband. In reply Louis dragged his wife by force from her uncle's palace and set out with all his troops for Jerusalem." The attack on Damascus would follow.

Boyd's account on p. 103 is even more dramatic: "In the middle of the night, Eleanor was seized in her apartments and taken at sword-point by Galeran's men to St. Paul's gate." From there she was forced to accompany the procession to Jerusalem.

As Meade says on p. 107, "One would get the impression from these happenings that logic played little part [in Louis's decisions]. The situation was even more absurd, for underneath the welter of all the bickering and political maneuvering hid the real reason for Louis's inexplicable decision: the familiar emotion of jealousy. Put at its simplest, the king suspected that Eleanor had taken the prince as her lover."

There is at least one problem with Louis's hypothesis: according to Markale, p. 29, Eleanor and Louis spent only ten days in Antioch. Hard to have much of a relationship in a week and a half! And Raymond really does seem to have believed in moderation in all things; not only did he not fool around, he was highly unusual among noblemen of the time that he didn't even drink much (Kelly, p. 54; William of Tyre described him as "no glutton or drunkard or womanizer," according to Boyd, p. 98).

Markale, p. 30, claims that Eleanor declared that not only would she stay in Antioch, but she would withhold her vassals from the Crusade to use them against Aleppo. This would explain Louis's reaction, since withholding her forces would badly weaken the already depleted Crusading army. Boyd, p. 102, also suggests this. The more sober historians are less sure.

Markale declares on pp. 25-26 that "these rumors show that Eleanor was not greatly liked by a certain part of the clerical establishment -- or, at the very least, her attitude offended the right-minded, who are always predisposed to feel proper. In fact, there is no reason to suspect that that Eleanor was fickle or untrue to the king before the expedition to the East." The French writers may have been particularly predisposed against her because there was a history of conflict between the Church and the House of Aquitaine (Kelly, p. 19).

Boyd, p. 111, reports a rumor that she had a bastard child by Raymond that was murdered and buried. But there is no official record of this, and surely a charge that weighty would have been recorded!

This was going on in 1147-1148, when William the Marshal was probably a babe in arms and the future Henry II was just entering his teens.

All sources seem to agree that Louis and Eleanor's marriage never recovered, despite an attempt by the Pope to intervene (Owen, p. 28) which was successful enough that Eleanor bore a second daughter in 1150 (Markale, p. 33; McLynn, p. 9, suggests that the Pope told Eleanor that he sided with Louis in the matter of the divorce, which caused her to temporarily yield again to Louis. Boyd, p. 116, however suggests that the girl may have been born too soon to be the child of this reunion -- which, given his view of the situation, would almost hint that Louis raped his own wife...). Whatever the state of their relations, the two left the Crusader States in separate ships (Markale, p. 32). Louis may still have loved her, in his clumsy way (Owen, p. 29), but they clearly didn't understand each other. Boyd, pp. 103-104, thinks he was already trying to decide between divorce and some sort of treason trial -- and that he might have chosen the latter had they had a son.

Ordinarily, the solution to the royal couple's marital problems would have been to shove Eleanor in a nunnery, or perhaps keep her under guard (as Henry II was later to do). There was just one problem: Louis had no successor. Eleanor had given him two daughters, one before and one after the crusade (Owen, p. 29), but no son. He needed an heir (Warren-Henry, p. 44), and while France had not yet invented the Salic Law, it was clear that no one was prepared to have a daughter succeed. Louis had either to father a son by Eleanor, or have the marriage ended so that he could have a son by some other wife. And, obviously, whichever he did, it would be easier to do it with Eleanor's cooperation.

Kings rarely had trouble obtaining divorces at this time, and Louis and Eleanor could claim consanguinity as grounds. The problem with divorce was that it would force Louis to give up Eleanor's lands. (To be sure, Fawtier, p. 24, says that Louis hadn't been able to control Aquitaine anyway, so it was no loss. But if Eleanor's next husband had a son, then Aquitaine would go to him, rather than Louis's daughters by Eleanor; Warren-Henry, p. 44). Louis had no good choices. After much delay, he finally decided on divorce. In this he was probably encouraged by the famous Bernard of Clairvaux, Louis's famous (and famously sanctimonious) clerical advisor, who earlier had gone after Peter Abelard and who strongly disapproved of Eleanor (Kelly, p. 79).

It was about this time that Count Geoffrey of Anjou and his son Henry visited the Parisian court. Nominally vassals of King Louis, Geoffrey (like many French vassals) was effectively independent, so this was rather unusual. Gerald of Wales, who did not like Eleanor, claims she took Geoffrey into her bed (Owen, p. 30), even though Geoffrey's wife Matilda, the mother of Henry, was still alive. (It is interesting to note that both Geoffrey the father and Henry the son had wives who were much older than they -- and both quarreled violently with those wives, but never divorced them.) The idea of sleeping with the Queen certainly fits Geoffrey's character; he was known as a seducer. Still, the sources for the claim are suspect (Kelly, p. 77). But it would be little wonder if Eleanor found the Angevins -- the strongest French rivals to Louis -- attractive. It was not yet clear that Henry would become King of England, but just the combination of Anjou and Maine (Geoffrey and Henry's inheritance), Normandy (conquered by Geoffrey), and Aquitaine would be plenty to cause trouble in France. This is why Harvey, p. 49, calls the annulment "a step of inconceivable folly" by Louis. But he surely did not realize who would be Eleanor's next husband....

As soon as Eleanor obtained her divorce, people again started trying to kidnap her into marriage (Owen, p. 31; Markale, pp. 36-37; Warren-Henry, p. 45, Dahmus, p. 142, say one of those trying to capture her was none other than Henry Plantagenet's younger brother Geoffrey, who at 16 was only about half her age, according to Boyd, p. 122); clearly she needed a husband, if only to get them off her back.

So she promptly married Henry, even though he was about eleven years younger -- and a close enough relative that Henry had been barred from marrying Eleanor's daughter! (Kelly, p. 82). Romanticists claim they fell in love at first sight (McLynn, p. 9), which seems unlikely. But they certainly saw advantages to combining their forces (Kelly, p. 77). And, if nothing else, Henry was a lot smarter and more interesting than Louis (Markale, p. 39).

As Boyd says on p. 123, marrying him "not only solved her pressing need for a spouse strong enough to protect her domains from pressing enemies, but owed her a lifelong debt of gratitude for making him the most powerful man in France. Ironically, he would become in the course of time her most implacable enemy of all."

The marriage took place in May 1152, eight weeks after the divorce, even though King Louis -- whose ward Eleanor theoretically still was -- had not approved (Owen, p. 32; Fawtier, pp. 139-140). The French were angered by the haste of the marriage -- although, in years to come, Louis VII would marry his third wife only five weeks after his second died (Fawtier, p. 51; Boyd, p. 162, seems to hint that this raised suspicions of foul play), and at a time when he should have still been in mourning (McLynn, p. 10).

Many think the marriage had been arranged even before Eleanor's marriage to Louis was dissolved (Markale, p. 85), although there is no direct evidence for this. It was a gamble for Henry, in that he, like Louis, needed a son from her -- but what she could not do for Louis, Eleanor did repeatedly for Henry; they had five sons, four of whom (Henry, Richard, Geoffrey, and John) lived to adulthood.

In early 1153, having mostly pacified his continental domains, Henry invaded England (Warren-Henry, p. 49), to which he was proper heir (his mother Matilda had been the only surviving son of King Henry I. King Stephen, a younger son of Henry I's sister Adela, had gained the throne because no one wanted a female monarch). Late in 1153, after Stephen's oldest son Eustace died (Warren-Henry, p. 51), it was agreed that Henry would be accepted as Stephen's heir. In late 1154, Stephen died, and on December 19, 1154, the 21-year-old Henry was crowned King of England. Eleanor was crowned Queen at the same time (Warren-Henry, pp. 52-53).

She had already borne Henry a son, William (Boyd, p. 133), and although he died young, others would follow to formally join Aquitaine to the English crown.

Whereas Louis had kept Eleanor under his eye for almost their entire marriage, Henry II frequently left her behind as he went on his wanderings, at times even giving her some share in the government (Owen, p. 45), although he more often merely left her to sit and do nothing (Owen, p. 49); Warren-Henry, p. 260, says of her role, and that of the Queen Mother Matilda (who also had spells as regent), "their authority seems in practice to have been largely formal."
The fact that Henry so often left her behind would seem to imply that, in the early years of their marriage, he was not concerned about her fidelity, even though he didn't pay much attention to her or her opinions -- and was anything but faithful himself. As McLynn notes on p. 12, she was "almost permanently pregnant," making a high degree of carousing unlikely. They did apparently spend every Christmas together until 1165 (Boyd, p. 172).
To be sure, Henry would later on put her under close guard -- but that was for rebellion, not infidelity; she was by then past childbearing age. The flip side of this is, according to Markale, p. 41, he usually left her in England or Normandy, rather than Aquitaine, meaning that she could not conspire with her own vassals and was not around the people with whom she shared a culture.
The years after about 1160 were difficult for Eleanor. As the conflict between Henry II and Louis VII sharpened, she found herself with hostages to fortune on both sides: Her children by Henry were of course part of the English camp -- but her two daughters by Louis remained in France. (Louis had a similar conflict, in that one of his daughters by his second wife was in English hands, as wife to the future Richard I, but it doesn't seem to have changed his behavior; Owen, p. 49).
Boyd, p. 175, suggests that Henry in this period contracted a venereal disease and passed it to Eleanor. That he contracted one is certainly possible, but there seems little evidence that she caught it as well. Certainly it didn't shorten her life!
Boyd, p. 177, suggests that the estrangement between Henry and Eleanor became complete in 1167, the year Henry's mother Matilda died.
It was perhaps in 1166 that Rosamund Clifford first entered Henry's life (Owen, p. 56; Markale, p. 46; McLynn, p. 43, says 1165). Our details of her life are few. Owen, p. 114, suggests she was born c. 1140, but surely she would have been married by age 26; I suspect she was nearly a decade younger. Her father Walter de Clifford lived near the Welsh border; perhaps-Henry and Rosamund first saw each other during the Welsh campaign of 1165.
Henry had many mistresses in his life (at least, most authorities claim so, although Warren-Henry, p. 119, says that the evidence is insufficient, noting that his only two properly-documented illegitimate sons were probably conceived before he married Eleanor. Dahmus, p. 154, cautiously declares that Henry "may have been unfaithful to her before John's birth; he surely was afterward"), but the liaison with Rosamund was unusually overt. Gerald of Wales didn't comment on the match until 1174 (Owen, p. 115), but then fulminated that Rosamund should not have been called Rosa-mundi, the Rose of the world, but the Rose of unchastity, Rosa-immundi (Kelly, p. 150).
For all that Kelly and Markale are convinced that Eleanor resented Rosamund, they have no real evidence. Certainly there is no reason to think Eleanor acted on such feelings. Kelly, p. 153, observed that whatever vengeance Eleanor took was aimed at Henry, not Rosamund, and suggests that this was her reason for taking part in the rebellion of 1173. And Kelly admits on p. 152 that "[t]he story of the Queen's proffer of the dagger and the poison bowl must... be discarded," and that there was no maze in which Rosamund was hidden (cf. Markale, p. 47). Warren-Henry, p. 119, says that "Nothing, indeed, can be recovered for certain about Henry's relations with his wife until their obvious estrangement in 1173"; he argues that Eleanor would not have resented Rosamund because taking mistresses was so common at the time.
The maze at Woodstock was first mentioned in a 1378 translation and expansion of Gerald of Wales (Owen, p. 116) and elaborated in Fabyan's Chronicle of c. 1500 (Owen, p. 118 -- we note that Fabyan wasn't very accurate even for Fabyan's own time, let alone centuries earlier), while the bit about the dagger and poison comes from a fourteenth century London chronicle -- which, however, was so confused that it referred the whole affair to the reign of Henry III and Eleanor of Provence and dates it to 1262, more than half a century after the death of Eleanor of Aquitaine! (Owen, pp. 116-117).
We do note the interesting coincidence is that Chretien de Troyes, at about this time, was writing his Cliges, an Arthurian tale involving a woman in a labyrinth (Owen, p. 119) -- but he probably got this from Greek myth and later people applied it to Rosamund.
Rosamund went on to become extremely famous; Owen devotes pp. 121-148 to literary works about her, although the only one of these many poems and plays that shows any hint at all of being traditional is the one indexed as "Fair Rosamund." And, according to Owen, it was not until the fifteenth century that the song of "Fair Rosamund" was written.
Rosamund died in 1176 or 1177, having gone into a nunnery. Thus Eleanor could not have killed her, since the Queen was a captive at the time (Warren-Henry, p. 119). It is possible that Rosamund took the veil in despair -- because Owen, p. 73, suggests that this was the period when Henry II started paying attention to Alais/Alice, the daughter of Louis VII who had been betrothed to Henry's son Richard. Most of what we know about this is gossip -- although Richard eventually rejected Alice as his wife because his father had taken her (Gillingham, p. 160). There isn't even a firm date for this purported liaison; Boyd, p. 231, says she had a child by Henry but that the baby died, then on p. 250 reports that there were two children. McLynn, p. 91, suggests that the affair did not start until 1180. And Warren-John, p. 37, suggests that Philip Augustus made up the story and passed it on to Richard to make Richard rebel against his father.

Even though Henry and Rosamund were probably linked romantically by the late 1160s, it was not until 1173 that relations between Henry and Eleanor really turned bad. In that year, Henry's three oldest sons turned on their father. Owen, pp. 68-69, does not seem to think Eleanor had any part in encouraging the revolt, which began with a quarrel between the Old and Young Kings (no less a source than Dante blamed that on the troubadour Bertrand de Born, whom he placed in the eighth circle of hell as a result. In Dante, Bertrand "set the young king on to mutiny" according to the Ciardi translation of the Inferno -- see canto 28, lines 120-end. McLynn, p. 60, also considers de Born to have been a major influence on Henry the Younger; cf. Kelly, p. 223). Boyd, p. 204, also thinks the boys started it and Eleanor simply went along, and he suggests (p. 220) that Bertrand was stirring up trouble to cover an attempted affair.

Kelly, p. 150, says that "there was something very special about the famous case of Rosamund Clifford that deeply aroused the Plantagenet queen," and thinks this explains her revolt But McLynn points out on p. 43, Eleanor and Henry had married largely for political purposes; Eleanor must have known that it was likely that he would have affairs. McLynn, p. 44, suggests that Eleanor feared Aquitaine being absorbed into the Angevin Empire. This doesn't wash either, however, since Eleanor worked hard, in the reigns of Richard and John, to hold the Empire together. If Henry the Younger rebelled on his own, Gillingham, p. 64, is of the clear opinion that Eleanor encouraged the rebellion of at least Richard the second son and Geoffrey the third. This seems to be the consensus view; it is supported, e.g., by Markale, p. 48, and McLynn, pp. 40-41 (although he admits that Geoffrey was slippery enough to take any chance he could find to assert his own power). Warren-Henry, p. 119, says that no one at the time could understand Eleanor's part in the rebellion, and very tentatively suggests on p. 121 that it was because she had been so completely blocked from power. If so, then it makes sense that she might have encouraged her sons.

Eleanor's decision to rebel along with her sons Henry the Young King, Richard, and Geoffrey had the peculiar effect of causing Eleanor to side with her ex-husband Louis against her current husband! (Warren-John, p. 29). But Henry II prevailed -- Boyd, p. 204, suggests that this was due to unity of command on his side; the rebels had many leaders and no overall commander -- and Eleanor, realizing the rebellion had failed, and supposedly fled Aquitaine dressed as a man (Markale p. 51; Kelly, p. 183; Tyerman, pp. 195-196). The disguise failed; she was quickly captured.

It is interesting to note that Henry made terms with his sons, who remained free and even were given some additional money (Dahmus, p. 183), but punished Eleanor by putting her in confinement (Owen, p. 69). She would stay under close guard for about a decade, until after the death of the Young King in 1183 (Owen, pp. 71-72), although we know almost nothing else about her condition in this time. Owen, p. 72, notes that she was not even permitted to attend the funeral of her son.

Markale, p. 52, and Kelly, pp. 189-190, claim that Henry considered trying to get a divorce, presumably on the basis of consanguinity (plus treason). Kelly, p. 192, also suggests that Eleanor might have been forced into a monastery, with or without a divorce -- an idea which clearly had no appeal to her.

But Henry's situation in 1173 was unlike Louis's two decades earlier: He had plenty of sons -- if anything, too many, given their rebellious tendencies. No need to lose Aquitaine. What he might have done had Eleanor been childless, or not Duchess of Aquitaine, is anyone's guess -- but irrelevant. Kelly on p. 192 suggests that Henry wanted the divorce so that he could marry Alice of France -- but the chronology of this doesn't work well, since Alice was only about 13 in 1173, and by the time she and Henry were really involved (if they were), Henry seems to have settled down to keeping Eleanor as his wife, but imprisoned. Boyd, p. 207, thinks he offered her a choice of retiring to an abbey or imprisonment, and that she chose imprisonment, but he offers no supporting data. Boyd, pp. 212-213, says she was imprisoned, with few if any servants or companions, at Old Sarum near Salisbury, a tightly-guarded fortress with few comforts and few people nearby. His suggestion, p. 215, is that Henry wanted to force her to consent to an annulment of their marriage so that he could marry again -- and then disinherit her sons.

What is clear is that, in such close imprisonment, Eleanor could not have killed Rosamund, nor even arranged for the killing even if someone had been foolish enough to commit murder on her behalf.
Not everyone was happy about her treatment. Provencals wrote what, if the translation does not mask too much, was probably quite beautiful poetry about her fate (paraphrased from Owen, p. 72, and Meade, p. 279):

Where is the living she once enjoyed to the music of flute and drum?
Where is her court? Where is her family?
Captive of the King of the North Wind,
She lies, overcome by sorrow.
But let her not despair.
Return, O captive, if you can...

After the Young King's death, Eleanor was given slightly better treatment, although still carefully watched (Owen, p. 74; Markale, p. 54, and Boyd, p. 227, think this was just Henry using her again because of succession issues involving Richard and Aquitaine, but adds on p. 229 that she was given a little more freedom after she started cooperating with Henry). Her movements were still restricted -- e.g. when her third son, Geoffrey, was killed in a tournament accident (apparently trampled to death by horses; Boyd, p. 230), she was again denied the right to attend the funeral (Owen, p. 76). McLynn, p. 118, suggests she was again closely confined in 1188, when Henry II and Prince Richard had their final quarrel, but the evidence for this is weak.

Then Henry II died in 1189, cursing his sons for betraying him (Owen, pp. 78-79). Eleanor soon faced a new sorrow when her daughter Matilda died -- but she also regained her freedom when her favorite son Richard became king. (According to Kelly, pp. 248-249, it was none other than William the Marshal who was sent to free her -- but she had already been released by the time he reached her. And we should note that Richard promptly married the Marshal to the heiress of Gloucester, making him an earl for the first time. The Gloucester heiress was reportedly young and quite beautiful, and I know of no evidence that Marshal was unfaithful.)

Eleanor was not only free, she was now a power in the land -- Boyd, p. 239, remarks that her "mental and physical vigour on release was remarkable" for someone so old and so long imprisoned. She apparently had a seal made and used it to seal charters in England, where she had no formal authority except as delegated by Richard (Boyd, p. 240).

In her first years of freedom, she probably helped arrange Richard's marriage (Owen, p. 82), and helped run the kingdom while he was on crusade (Markale, p. 56, calls her the "true mistress of England" -- but this seems unlikely just because Richard wouldn't want to rely too much on a woman in her sixties who might die at any moment). She seems to have been instrumental in controlling the rebellion of Richard's brother John (Owen, p. 86). She may have cut back her involvement in affairs when Richard came home -- but only briefly. In 1199, Richard I died, a victim of his own combative instincts -- he was besieging a castle, and went too close to the walls, and was hit by an arrow -- and poor medical practice (Owen, p. 92).

Richard had never declared whether John, Henry and Eleanor's last son, or Arthur, the young son of Henry and Eleanor's third son Geoffrey, should succeed. Arthur had stronger hereditary right, but that did not mean much then (of the last seven English kings, Harold II, William I, William II, Henry I, Stephen, Henry II, and Richard I, at least five had not had hereditary right). And Arthur was still a boy, and under French influence anyway. Different parts of the Angevin Empire chose different kings (Warren-John, p. 51). Eleanor was influential in gaining support for John over Arthur in Aquitaine and elsewhere (Owen, p. 94; Tyerman, p. 196). Interestingly, William Marshal also helped tilt things John's way (Warren-John, p. 49). In the end, however, John had to make some concessions to Philip of France. They looked minor, but they were an omen of things to come (Warren-John, p. 55).

Markale, pp. 68-69, suggests that Eleanor decided to back John because she thought she could control his bad behavior. This makes no sense. Eleanor was by this time in her late seventies; John was 32 -- and had no children. She could not possibly hope to keep control until John's children were old enough to succeed. McLynn, p. 77, makes the even stranger claim that Eleanor "despised John," which makes it hard to believe that she would have supported his succession (McLynn can only justify this on the grounds that Eleanor hated Arthur more -- blaming her hatred on the trivial fact that the boy's mother Constance had named her son Arthur; McLynn, p. 90). John was to prove a disastrous king -- but at least some of that was due to the fragile situation left him by Richard; Arthur would likely have been as bad or worse.

1199 was a sad year for the dowager queen; her youngest daughter Joanna (born 1165) died shortly after Richard (Owen, p. 96), supposedly in childbirth after being separated from her husband (Boyd, pp. 308-309). Eleanor was left with only two living children, Eleanor (born 1161, and by this time Queen of Castile) and John; the latter two would outlive their mother. But even now, at the age at least 74 and probably 77, she continued to do diplomatic work for her children, for example helping to arrange a marriage between her granddaughter Blanche of Castile and the son of King Philip of France (Owen, pp. 96-97). Thus, even though none of Eleanor's children ever sat on the throne of France, her great-grandson did (Markale, p. 47).

Already by 1200 they were calling the new king "John Softsword" (Warren-John, pp. 56-57). Warren argues that the Angevin military machine was best suited to defence, not offence. But John, with an economy battered by Richard's constant need for funds, couldn't even defend very well. Richard had survived partly because Henry II had left him a substantial financial reserve (Warren-John, p. 61) and partly by selling every saleable item in England -- and, even so, he had had to make a new Great Seal in 1198 so he could repudiate his debts! (Warren-John, p. 62). John had no bank balance to fall back on, and no offices to sell; to his cost, he simply couldn't conduct operations on the same scale Richard had.

It is interesting to note that John's greatest military success was to save his mother. In 1201, Philip of France attacked Aquitaine and trapped Eleanor at Mirebeau. According to Warren-John, p. 71, she was by now bedridden, and certainly too old to make the sort of daring escape she had managed earlier in life. John made a forced march to rescue his mother (Owen, p. 99). In the process, he trapped a number of French soldiers and briefly caused Philip to halt his attacks (Warren-John, p. 79).

It was the last great moment of Eleanor's life. Not even she could control what came next. One of those captured in the rescue of Mirebeau was Arthur of Brittany, the disappointed claimant to the throne. (Defenders of Arthur should note that he had agreed to attack his own grandmother! -- Markale, p. 73)! If Arthur was anything like his father Geoffrey, the one Plantagenet whom "all" the historians seem to condemn (e.g. McLynn, p. 67, considers him to have combined the traits of his brothers Henry and John: Henry's handsome, convincing exterior and John's sneakiness and untrustworthiness), then he was a genuine threat to the public order.

But if Arthur might have been a lousy king, he was a good symbol. We don't know what happened to him, but he definitely was not seen after 1203 (Owen, p. 100). If John did not kill him, one of his vassals almost certainly did. The Bretons rose up to get their duke back in 1203, and John did not, and probably could not, produce him (Warren-John, p. 81). Warren's guess (Warren-John, pp. 82-83) is that John had personally killed Arthur while in a drunken rage. But exaggeration is easy; Markale, e.g. (p. 74) knows two near-contemporary accounts of Arthur's end (that John ordered him blinded and castrated, and that John killed Arthur himself) -- and makes up enough details to allow both to have happened.

Even if the disappearance of Arthur could be excused, John also refused mercy to many others who were at Mirabeau (Davis, p. 18). Many of those in the French territories turned against him. Warren-John, p. 80, considers the elimination of Arthur one of John's biggest mistakes. Mirabeau gave John several advantages -- and threw them away. People in England didn't care much about Arthur, and when, a decade later, the French king tried to bring it up with the Pope, the Pope officially branded Arthur a rebellious vassal and told the French to drop the issue (Warren-John, p. 84). But his death led the Bretons and others to turn firmly against John. And it was too late for Eleanor to rescue her last wayward son.

Owen, p. 101, makes the fascinating observation that, as Eleanor's life faded out, so too did the Angevin Empire. John had held his boundaries in 1201-1203, but in early 1204, the French attacked Normandy. There was very little resistance (Warren-John, pp. 88-89, suggests that Richard I's harsh hand had turned the Normans against the Angevins). Richard I's great defensive work, the Chateau Galliard, fell in March (Warren-John, p. 95), ruining John's plans to recover his losses. The road to Rouen -- the key to Normandy -- lay open, and so did the path to the Norman hinterland. Philip proceeded to capture the towns toward the coast, knowing that if he held western Normandy, John could not support an army sent to reinforce Rouen (Warren-John, p. 97). Rouen itself, surrounded by French outposts, surrendered on June 24 (Fawtier, p. 149). Normandy -- the home of William the Conqueror's dynasty, and the first major region over which Henry II had ruled directly -- was gone.

Even as that was happening, on April 1, 1204 (or perhaps during the night before), Eleanor of Aquitaine died. She was probably between 80 and 84 years old, and had been Duchess of Aquitaine for almost exactly 67 years, and Queen (either Queen of France, or Queen of England, or Dowager Queen) for all but a few months of that time. No English queen -- not even Queen Victoria -- held her title that long.

Eleanor is buried in Fontrevrault Abbey, near her husband and son Richard (Saul, p. 48); she may have died there, having finally retired from the world, although this is disputed (Owen, p. 102). It is interesting to note that the effigy on her tomb shows her holding an open book. An earlier sculpture of her, with Louis, also shows her holding a book (Boyd, p. 27; shown in his illustration 3). We don't see many others portrayed that way in this period -- e.g. John's wife Isabella, whose remains are in the same hall, is shown with her hands clasped. Richard I and Henry II, also buried there, hold Without her, John seemed to lose whatever effectiveness he had formerly had. Warren-John, p. 99, notes that while even Richard would likely have lost Normandy, he would have been in the thick of the fighting against the French. But "John stayed in England biting his nails." Little wonder the Normans gave in easily. The English did not give up hopes of regaining Normandy until after the Battle of Bouvines in 1214, and continued to claim the duchy until Henry III formally yielded it in 1259 (Fawtier, p. 149), but England was too enfeebled to mount a counterattack.

Personally, I can't help but have mixed but mostly positive feelings about Eleanor. Take away all the late accretions and you have a rich but sad story. She was frivolous in her youth, and her struggles against her husbands hurt them both -- but she was more sinned against than sinning. She clearly became a stateswoman in her later years, and probably would have been just as good when younger if only anyone had listened to her; she obviously had more brains than Louis at least. She clearly deserved a great deal of respect. But, in a misogynist world, respect is just what she didn't get. To this day, historians can fall victim to this; Harvey, p. 48, comments that "even the lapse of centuries is unable to blur altogether the sharp outlines of her impetuousity."

Yet Meade, p. xi, points out a credit to her given to few women: "Despite her association with these four kings [Louis, Henry, Richard, and John], she struggled to retain her own identity, and it is a measure of her success that 772 years after her death she survives not as Queen Eleanor of England or Queen Eleanor of France but simply as Eleanor of Aquitaine."

She certainly attracts lovers of scandal. Three of the biographies cited in this document (Kelly, Markale and Meade) strike me as more gossip than anything else, even though Kelly and Meade are reasonably well footnoted. I'd also consider McLynn far too willing to accept a possibility as a certainty.

Some of the authors admit the problems of seeing through their sources. Markale, p. 192, says that "the stories of Eleanor could be entitled altogether, 'Adultery Considered as One of the Fine Arts.' The hate and distrust she inspired is not sufficient to explain the number of love affairs attributed to the queen-duchess." He thinks that Eleanor was a woman who wanted freedom and was condemned as a result. Markale adds that the comparisons to the vicious and oversexed Roman empress Messalina (wife of Claudius I) are unfair; "Eleanor's case is entirely different -- and the adulteries she is assumed to have committed are far from proved." On pp. 196-197 he notes that the French in particular had a motivation to smear her, because her divorce from Louis so weakened the French monarchy.

Over the years, stories of Eleanor's infidelity multiplied -- Owen, pp. 104-112, documents how each chronicler seemed to make her blacker than the one before. An early biography of the troubadour Bernard of Ventadour suggests that Eleanor slept with him (Owen, pp. 40-41). Another French singer would accuse her of wanting to leave Louis for Saladin during their quarrel on the Crusade -- yet another absurdity, since Saladin at the time of the second crusade was an unknown youth of probably no older than thirteen and perhaps as young as ten (Meade, p. 106; Kelly, p. 62; Owen, pp. 105-106). Owen, p. 54, mentions a rumor that she was involved with another uncle, Raoul de Faye, in the 1160s -- although she was pregnant at the time.

As McLynn comments on p. 14, "Certainly there was something about Eleanor that could provoke people to hatred. Some described her as a latter-day Messalina while others said that the legend of Melusine [the demonic wife of a Count of Anjou] was a foretelling of her reign."

Much of the second half of Markale is about legends of Eleanor; on p. 194, he derives the stories of Eleanor from the "Adulterous Queen" motif in early Celtic legend, making her part of a fertility cult. Right.

So strong was the legend that, in later years, Anthony Munday in his plays about Robin Hood (written c. 1600) would present Eleanor as trying to seduce Robin (Dobson/Taylor, p. 222), even though she was in her sixties at the time of the action of the play.

Somehow, no one seems to have noticed these affairs at the time. To be sure, Markale, p. 13, says that Chretien de Troyes used Eleanor as the model for his Guinevere, and hence presumably for Guinevere's affair with Lancelot. But Markale, pp. 79-80, notes that when Eleanor's marriage to Louis was dissolved, the council involved formally refuted the charge of adultery. Although this might have been a political decision -- divorce on the grounds of adultery would have rendered her children illegitimate and would surely have caused her to contest the case.

Shakespeare made her a "cank'red grandam" in Act II, scene I of "King John," but given Shakespeare's record of falsehoods, that may be a compliment.

Moderns have a strong tendency to link Eleanor with the troubadours and the idea of Courtly Love -- which said, in essence, that love couldn't exist in marriage; only unattainable love was real. The link is certainly possible -- the troubadours, after all, originated in Aquitaine, and Eleanor's own grandfather was one of the founders of the movement. And Boyd, p. 29, says that one of Eleanor's...
"less glorious distinctions is to be the only woman recorded as having unleashed a war in support of a sister's right to marry the man she loved."

But Owen, p. 152, points out that the stories of Eleanor managing "Courts of Love" are exaggerated -- the main account is from one Andrew the Chaplain (cited on pp. 153-154 of Owen), and the "cases" Eleanor judges are too conveniently like the Queen's own history to be believable. Tyerman, p. 197, adds that some of the details about Eleanor's practices are "fiction"; she wasn't where the tales put her when they put her there.

And if Eleanor encouraged the troubadours, or even composed herself, that doesn't mean she engaged in actual hanky-panky.

What's more, Eleanor had a real reason to be against the conventions of courtly love -- because her grandfather had abandoned her grandmother and openly taken up with a concubine (Meade, pp. 15-16). Given all the trouble that caused, Eleanor would have had every reason to have tried to maintain a stable married life.

Warren-Henry, p. 583, comments that stories of Eleanor presiding over "courts of love" or the like "may have owed something to the flirtatious, romantic young woman who had at one time graced the court of Paris... but owed nothing to the matriarch and hard-headed politician that Eleanor became in later life."

Might Eleanor have slept with the future Earl Marshal? She did show him favor (Owen, p. 57). He helped rescue her from an ambush in 1168 (Kelly, p. 154), and when he was captured (after being stabbed from behind after unhorsing six enemies while himself fighting on foot, according to McLynn, p. 63), she contributed to his ransom (Boyd, p. 183). But he spent more time serving Henry II.

Although we don't know his exact age, it is surely relevant. Powicke, p. 17, says he was about 80 when he died in 1219, meaning he was born in 1139 -- but "eighty" is suspiciously round; I strongly suspect it was a chronicler saying simply that he was "very old," based on the Biblical "three score and ten" or even "four score." Plus, in 1189 while guarding Henry II's rearguard from an attack by Prince Richard, the Marshal was still skilled enough to deliberately kill Richard's horse while not injuring the Prince (McLynn, p. 114). This would be tricky for a 50-year-old; a later date for Marshal's birth seems far more likely. Kelly, p. 248, and Boyd, p. 236, make him only 35 in 1189 when Henry II died. This would mean he was born in 1153 -- probably impossible, since he was able to fight off six men in 1168. The best guess is that William Marshal was born in 1147 (so OxfordCompanion, p. 622; Tyerman, p. 285), although Owen, p. 57, implies he was a few years older.

If the 1147 date is correct, that makes the Marshal 25 years younger than Eleanor (he would outlive her by 15 years, dying in 1219). Even if we say he was born in 1139 (the earliest possible date) and Eleanor was born in 1125 (the latest possible date), she was 14 years older. Eleanor's oldest child, Marie, was born in 1145 (Owen, p. 20) -- quite possibly before the Marshal was born. Eleanor and Henry had married in 1152, when the Marshal was no more than 13 and probably only about five. Those facts obviously make it impossible for him to have taken her maidenhead. That doesn't make it impossible that he slept with her. But, even granting that Eleanor was considered a great beauty in her day, what are the odds that the Marshal would have wanted to sleep with a woman who was old enough to be his mother?

Marshal was only a younger son of a minor nobleman; he did not become an earl until 1189, after Henry II died, when Richard I allowed him to marry Isabella, the heiress of Pembroke (OxfordCompanion, p. 622). (Thus his proper title was "Earl of Pembroke," not "Earl Marshal." But everyone seems to have called him the "Earl Marshal"). But Henry II never knew him by that title. Nor would King Henry's promise not to write anything down have cut much weight, since his word was not particularly good.

I note that the Marshal fell out of favor with King John soon after Eleanor died, not to be restored until near the end of the reign. But the reason did not involve Eleanor: Marshal had conceded the loss of Normandy and done homage to the French for his estates there (Warren-John, pp. 114-115).

Although he was first famous as a fighter (Boyd, p. 188, says that he captured more than 500 men in tournaments!), Marshal also was noted as an honorable man, and came to be regarded as wise. When King John died in 1216 and someone was needed to govern the country during the minority of Henry III, the Marshal was not only given the job, he was given unusual powers: "The wish of those gathered together at Gloucester was that the old earl marshal should assume the responsibility for the protection of Henry and his kingdom. The marshal was reluctant.... [After a second request backed by Earl Ranulf of Chester, who arrived late], the marshal agreed. In the words of his biographer, he was given the baillie of the kingdom.... The marshal became rector of king and kingdom. He is so styled a few days later in the first reissue of [the Magna Carta]"
(Powicke, p. 2).
(The mere fact that he had a biographer is interesting; Tyerman, p. 286, says that he was "the subject of the first medieval biography of a layman who was not a king." Although it's a pretty folkloric biography; early in life, Marshal was taken prisoner by King Stephen, who threatened to hang him unless his father behaved. The father supposedly answered Stephen that he could produce even greater sons -- and Stephen led the lad live; Davis, p. 34. But this same story is told of other nobles, e.g. of Lord Strange, the son of Lord Stanley, when Lord Stanley was rebelling against Richard III. I'll believe such tales when they are properly documented....)

When John died, he had lost most of England; the Welsh were attacking across the Marches; the Scots had taken control of the northern counties, and either the French or rebel barons held London, Winchester (the site of the richest bishopric in the country; in effect, the second financial center), and Lincoln, plus all of the ports on the coastline toward France except Dover (Davis, p. 29). As a nation, England seemed doomed to be taken over by France. John's death helped, since it eliminated the personal animosities that led to the rebellions. But it was William Marshal who saved England.

The Marshal drove the invading French out of England, mostly by capturing the fortresses of Kent and the southeast and so cutting their communications with France (Powicke, pp. 9-10) and then winning a battle at Lincoln (Powicke, pp. 11-12), causing many of the rebellious English barons to return to their allegiance. The English paid a fairly big monetary settlement to speed the French on their way (Powicke, p. 14). Would the barons have trusted Marshal with their money if he were scandal-tainted?

The Marshal died in 1219 -- and declared that he should have no successor as regent, possibly to keep people from conspiring for the job (Davis, p. 49). As he lay dying, he consulted a number of spiritual advisors. He was worried about the wealth he gained at tournaments. He said farewell to his wife and daughters. He called upon the Papal legate Pandulf to help govern the kingdom until the young Henry III reached his majority. He made other arrangements (Powicke, p. 17). If he said anything at all about Eleanor, the record does not survive.

It is well-known that John was Henry II's favorite of his four sons (e.g. McLynn, pp. 76-77). But he was the baby of the family, born in 1166 (so Kelly, p. 103; Markale, p. 44; McLynn, p. 26; Owen, p. 55) or perhaps 1167 (so some chronicles). Since Eleanor and Henry were together relatively rarely in the 1160s, John was the obvious candidate for the cuckoo's egg. Would he have been Henry's favorite had there been any possibility he was illegitimate?

(Note that, while John was not as tall and splendid as his older brothers, he certainly had Angevin traits such as violent rages. McLynn, p. 94, describes what sounds like an obsessive-compulsive tendency toward biting his fingers when enraged which John shared with Henry II.)

Before you ask -- as far as I know, no DNA testing has been applied.

Bottom line: Although it is possible that Eleanor of Aquitaine had extramarital affairs (possible, but beyond proof), we have no evidence of it. (If you want my personal opinion -- I don't think she did. Yes, Eleanor schemed, and yes, she tried to manage her husbands, without success, and her sons, with better success. That doesn't make her a philanderer. Women are generally not as tempted to sleep around as men -- and the risk for them was higher.) And if she did sleep around, it probably wasn't with the Marshal.

Of course, it doesn't matter what she actually did -- what matters is what the person who wrote this ballad "thought" she did. And they thought the worst. More than a century ago, Bishop William Stubbs accurately wrote, "Few women have had less justice done them in history than Eleanor" (cited by Meade on p. ix).

In a footnote, although Marshall almost certainly did not sleep with a queen, his descendent did. Marshall had a daughter Eva, whose daughter Maud de Braose was the grandmother of Roger Mortimer of Wigmore (Mortimer, pp. 11-12). Mortimer would later become involved with Isabella of France, the wife of King Edward II -- and would be instrumental in the overthrow of Edward II. I have to mention another possibility, having to do with Courtly Love. The quasi-official doctrine of this movement was that "One cannot love one's own wife but must love the wife of some other man" (Wagenknecht, p. 243). Could this song be a send-up of the Courtly Love notion which somehow survived? The obvious difficulty being that this would require a very long survival of a song that would likely have originally been French. I don't really consider it likely.

Still, the chronology makes it certain that, if "Queen Eleanor's Confession" is based on actual fact, then Henry II and Eleanor of Aquitaine cannot possibly be the monarchs involved. Are there other possibilities to explain the song?

If one moves the story to the time of Henry III (reigned 1216-1272), who married Eleanor of Provence, we should note that by the time the third Henry married Eleanor at the age of 28 in 1236, the Marshal line was on the brink of extinction; Henry had hounded Richard the third Earl to death, leaving the earldom in the hands of his brother Gilbert (Davis, p. 100), who in turn was quarreling with Henry by Christmas 1238 (Davis, p. 122) and died in 1245 (Davis, p. 154). Besides, Henry and Eleanor seem to have had a good marriage (Davis, p.109); she was only twelve or thirteen at the time of her marriage, and seems to have been quiet and unassertive (Davis, p. 110);
the two never became involved in scandal. And after that, there are no instances of a King Henry marrying an Eleanor. (I do note, however, that Margaret of Anjou the wife of Henry VI was widely believed to have had an affair with a member of her court.)
The case of Margaret of Anjou, in fact, has a lot of similarities to this song -- enough that I almost wonder if it didn't contribute to it. Margaret was married to a Henry -- in this case, Henry VI. Unlike Eleanor, she was only in her mid-teens when she married, so she probably was a virgin at the time of her marriage. The context of the marriage was the Hundred Years' War -- the English were trying to hold Henry V's conquests in France, and failing, and were negotiating for a French marriage to try to obtain peace.
Henry himself was not involved in the negotiations. Instead, he appointed his friend, the Earl of Suffolk, to head an embassy. Suffolk made a deal. A proxy marriage followed, with Suffolk standing in for Henry VI (Griffiths, p. 487). Thus, as a sort of formal equivalency, Suffolk could be said to have married Margaret, and hence in a sort of formal way to have had her maidenhead. And, because Suffolk was so close to the royal family, and because Henry VI was utterly incompetent, it was rumoured that Suffolk had an affair with the queen and was the father of her only child, Prince Edward.
What's more, when Henry VI appointed Suffolk to his embassy, Suffolk -- knowing there was trouble brewing -- made conditions. He "requested a public declaration to him and his companions that no blame should attach to him and his companions should their mission fail, and this the king provided by letters patent under the great seal" (Griffiths, p. 484). And when Suffolk made the deal with the French, one of the concessions he made was to turn the county of Maine -- the key to holding Normandy -- over to the French. Also, it should be remembered that Henry VI claimed the crown of France. By negotiating as he did, Henry in effect conceded his right to that crown. Thus Henry VI, by marrying Margaret, in effect pledged "my living and my lands, my sceptre and my crown," as in the song.
All of which is interesting, but hardly enough to parallel the song. The key is an incident that took place when Margaret first came to England, before she met Henry VI. According to one chronicler, she was unwell when she arrived after a rough passage, and Henry took the opportunity to inspect her without her knowing what was going on: "When the queen landed in England the king dressed himself as a squire... Suffolk doing the same, and took her a letter which he said the King of England had written" (Griffith, p. 488).
The parallels are not perfect, but we have a King Henry in disguise, an earl thought to have had an affair with the Queen, and a king who gave that earl a promise. Quite a combination.
It occurs to me, furthermore, that there is a just-barely-possible explanation for this song, which actually fits the twelfth century, except that it does not involve King Henry II and Eleanor of Aquitaine.
Henry and Eleanor's eldest son was Henry "the Young King" (so-called because he was crowned as his father's successor while Henry II was still alive; Ashley, p. 522). Henry the Younger was married to Margaret, a daughter of French King Louis VII by one of his later wives (Ashley, p. 522).
What makes it interesting is that Gillingham reports (p. 89) that in the 1180s -- shortly before the death of Henry the Young King -- there were rumors that William the Marshal (not yet an earl) was the lover of Margaret the wife of Henry the Younger. And Margaret, although she had no power at all (Henry the Young King had very little, and she didn't share what he had), had been officially crowned as his Queen.
Henry had probably been jealous of Marshal even before that, since Marshal had a much stronger reputation as a fighter, and also was considered better surety for debts (McLynn, p. 64). When even his wife seemed to be showing a liking for Marshal (although there is no hint that it was sexual), the Young King dismissed Marshal from his entourage (McLynn, p. 65). But Henry "could never put a stop to the gossip nor put William on trial" (Gillingham, p. 89). As Warren-Henry puts it on p. 582, "Henry the Younger, refusing either to disbelieve the charges or to allow William to prove them false, deprived himself of the one man who could perhaps have dissuaded him from the ultimate foolishness of his behavior in 1182-1183."
Marshal, incidentally, offered to take on any three accusers (one at a time, of course), in a trial by ordeal to prove his innocence (Kelly, pp. 209-210). Because Marshal was such a noteworthy warrior, no one dared take up the challenge. And not even Henry the elder seemed to take the gossip seriously; when the younger Henry died, he gave Margaret a pension (Warren-Henry, p.
609).
Thus, if we replace Henry II with Henry the Young King, the Earl Marshal with William the Marshal who would later be earl, and Queen Eleanor with Queen Margaret, this song becomes possible. Apart from the pesky detail that Margaret outlived the Young King, anyway. And that Marshal was given his earldom by Richard I after both Henry the elder and Henry the younger were dead (Gillingham, p. 125).

Henry the Younger was eventually reconciled with Marshal. According to McLynn, p. 73, in the 1183 conflict between the Old King and his sons, the man who had accused Marshal of adultery concluded that Henry II would win their conflict and fled the Young King's entourage. The Young King concluded that the fellow was lying, and therefore that the Marshal was innocent -- although it hardly mattered at that point, since the Young King died so soon after. A slightly more reasonable possibility arises if we wait a generation. There "is" a link between an Earl Marshall and an Eleanor of the English royal family. The second Earl Marshal married Eleanor, the sister of Henry III (and hence the granddaughter of Eleanor of Aquitaine) in the 1220s (Davis, p. 65) -- although the relationship didn't last long; Marshal died in 1231, shortly after another marriage between the families; Marshal's sister married Henry III's brother Richard of Cornwall (Davis, p. 84). Eleanor Plantagenet then married Simon de Montfort (Davis, p. 117), who would later come very close to overthrowing Henry. Thus Eleanor Plantagenet might well have turned against Henry III, but she could hardly have cuckolded him since she never married him! The second Marshal's brother Richard, who became the third earl, ended up being branded a traitor by Henry III in 1233 (Davis, p. 93) -- which naturally forced him into rebellion, the first foretaste of the many troubles Henry would experience in his 56 year reign. Eventually Richard Marshal died, suspiciously, after a surgical operation (Davis, p. 98). Is it possible that the marriage of an obscure Earl Marshall and an obscure Eleanor (the sister, rather than the wife, of a King Henry) got projected back onto a more famous Henry, Eleanor, and Earl?

In any case, Owen, p. 161, says that for most of the Eleanor stories, "history has been the starting point for legendary development. With 'Queen Eleanor's Confession' the process has been reversed. There a popular tale had brought to the mind of some balladeer memories of the English queen as he understood her to have been; and he amused himself and us by casting her in the ready-made role he found there. Her 'confessions' are, of course, part of her legend; but the frame-story is from another, independent tradition." On p. 160 he notes that the theme of a husband hearing his wife's confession are found in a French fabliau and in Boccaccio. - RBW

Bibliography

- Ashley: Mike Ashley, British Kings and Queens, Barnes & Noble, 2000 (originally published as The Mammoth Book of British Kings and Queens, 1998)
- Chambers: E. K. Chambers, English Literature at the Close of the Middle Ages, Oxford, 1945, 1947
- Dahmus: Joseph Dahmus, Seven Medieval Kings, 1967 (I use the 1994 Barnes & Noble edition)
- Harvey: John Harvey, The Plantagenets, 1948, 1959 (I use the 1979 Fontana paperback edition)
- Lofts: Norah Lofts, Anne Boleyn, Coward, McCann & Geoghegan, 1979
Queen Mary (Auld Maid's Lament)

DESCRIPTION: The girl (perhaps "Queen Mary") is of an age to be courting but has no suitors. She dresses well, and goes out when she can, but finds no takers. Her mother laments the girl's fate, as does the girl herself

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1888 ("G.W.", "Girls' Game, from the Banks of Forth" in _Scottish Notes and Queries_)

KEYWORDS: loneliness courting playparty

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North),Scotland(Aber,High)) Canada(Newf) US(SW)

REFERENCES (11 citations):
Greig/Duncan7 1373, "Nae Bonnie Laddie Will Tak Me Awa" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan8 1605, "Queen Mary" (5 texts, 2 tunes)
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 62, "The Scotch Lassie" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 46, "The New Dress" (1 fragment, which appears to be this but might be "Nae Bonnie Laddie...")
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 79, "Queen Mary" (6 texts, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: Ed Cray,"Jump-Rope Rhymes from Los Angeles" in Western Folklore, Vol. XXIX, No. 2 (Apr 1970 (available online by JSTOR)), p. 124, ("My name is Queen Mary") (1 text)
Edward W.B. Nicholson, editor, Golspie: Contributions to its Folklore (London, 1897 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 198-199, ("My name is Queen Mary") (1 text, 2 tunes)
G.W., "Girls' Game, From the Banks of Forth" in [John Bulloch?, editor.] Scottish Notes and Queries (Aberdeen, 1889 ("Digitized by Google")), Vol. II, No. 6, November 1888, p. 91, "Sweet Mary" ("Sweet Mary, Sweet Mary! my age is sixteen") (1 text)
Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; note to #389, ("Queen Mary, Queen Mary, my age is sixteen") (1 short text)

Roud #6281

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Nae Bonnie Laddie tae Tak' Me Away (I)" (theme, lyrics)

NOTES [78 words]: The relationship between this piece and "Nae Bonnie Laddie tae Tak' Me Away (I)" is extremely vexed -- to the extent that it is impossible to tell which fragments go with which song. Frankly, I'd probably lump them if Roud didn't split them (and then, seemingly, mis-file some of the versions -- aided and abetted by Ford, who had two songs of this type). As a starting point, playparties and courting games go with this piece; full-fledged songs with the other. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.6
File: HHH230

Queen Mary's Men (New Year's Eve Carol)

DESCRIPTION: "This is good New Year's Even-night, We are all Queen Mary's men, And we've come here to claim our right, And that's before Our Lady." The singers travel the town asking for gifts of food. The offer good wishes for the residents

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1870 (Chambers)
KEYWORDS: food carol
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #152, p. 1, "Queen Mary's Men" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 641, "We Are A' Queen Mary's Men" (1 text, 1 tune)
Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 200, "Queen Mary's Men" (1 text)
Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 406-407, "Fragment of the Hagmena Song" (1 text)

DT, MARYMEN
ADDITIONAL: Robert Chambers, The Popular Rhymes of Scotland (Edinburgh, 1870 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 167-169, ("This night it is guid New'r E'en's night")

Roud #4584
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Besuthian" (subject)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Orkney New Year's Eve Carol

NOTES [185 words]: This song seems to be known mostly in the north of Scotland, where Catholicism held on long after the Reformation, so the reference to "Our Lady" probably does not indicate an early date.

The reference to "Queen Mary" is not very helpful in dating. Counting backward, queens of Britain named Mary were:

Mary of Teck, wife of George V (1867-1953)
Mary II Stewart, wife of William III (joint monarchy; reigned 1689-1694; born 1662)
Mary of Modena, second wife of James II (1658-1718); if she were meant, this would be an overtly political song, which seems unlikely

Queens Mary of England after 1400 were:
Mary I, queen regnant 1553-1558 (1516-1558)
Queens Mary of Scotland after 1500 were:
Mary Stuart, queen regnant 1542-1567 (1542-1587)
Mary of Guise, wife of James V and mother of Mary Stuart (1515-1560)
Mary of Gueldres, wife of James II (died 1463)

All of these save Mary II were Catholic (well, I'm not sure about Mary of Teck, but she's presumably too late, since she became queen in the year Greig/Duncan collected the song), but few of them are convincing candidates for the Queen Mary of the song. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.8
File: MSNR200

Queen of Elfan's Nourice, The [Child 40]

DESCRIPTION: The Queen of Elfland awakens to hear her child's (wet)-nurse weeping. The Queen of Elfland asks the reason; the nurse says that she is crying for her own son. The Queen of Elfland sets the nurse on the right road home (and on to heaven).

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1802/3 (Skene ms.)
KEYWORDS: separation children magic abduction
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (9 citations):
Child 40, "The Queen of Elfan's Nourice" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's (#1)}
Bronson 40, "The Queen of Elfan's Nourice" (1 version)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 40, "The Queen of Elfan's Nourice" (1 version)
Greig/Duncan2 328, "The Queen o' Elfin's Nourice" (2 fragments, 2 tunes) {Bronson's #1}
Wells-TheBalladTree, p. 240, "The Queen of Elfan's Nourice" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson does not print this tune but calls it a "happy borrowing from a Gaelic song on the theft of a child by the fairies}
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 7, "The Queen of Elfland's Nourice" (1 text)
Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 136, "(I heard a cow low, a bonnie cow low)"
(1 fragment of two stanzas, with no plot; it simply mentions the lowing cow, and might be an independent item grafted into the Child ballad)
DT 40, ELFANURS*
ADDITIONAL: Emily Lyle, _Fairies and Folk: Approaches to the Scottish Ballad Tradition_, Wissenschaflicher Verlag Trier, 2007, pp, 142-145, (no title) (1 text, 1 tune with variant forms)
Roud #3723
NOTES [232 words]: Tradition has it that fairies much preferred to have human women nurse their babies; according to Marc Alexander, _A Companion to the Folklore, Myths & Customs of Britain_, Sutton Publishing, 2002, p. 184, the earliest recorded English tale of a changeling was the story of Malekin, which was recorded by Ralph Coggeshall in the 1200s. Hence the legends about changelings and also odd stories such as this one about a human woman being kidnapped to Elfland. It strikes me that even the well-known tale of Rumpelstiltskin might be a variation on this. For discussion of this see Emily Lyle, _Fairies and Folk: Approaches to the Scottish Ballad Tradition_, Wissenschaflicher Verlag Trier, 2007, p. 128
Lyle discusses this ballad in particular on pp. 140-148. On pp. 140-141, she observes that Bronson's discussion of his one tune is not entirely accurate, because he did not have full details of how it was collected. See now Lyle's account for the correct history.
Lyle also suggests (p. 145) that the last ten lines of the text in the Skene manuscript (Child's sole text) do not belong with this ballad but come from "Tam Lin" [Child 39]. Child thinks they are from "Thomas Rymer" [Child 37]. Certainly they are inessential, as they discuss the roads to heaven and hell, whereas presumably the Queen of Elfland could simply set the nurse on the direct path and not reveal these secrets. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: C040

Queen of Hearts
DESCRIPTION: "To the Queen of Hearts goes the Ace of sorrow... Young men are plenty but sweethearts few; If my love leaves me, what shall I do?" The singer talks of her wealth and family, "But I'll leave them all to go with you."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973
KEYWORDS: love courting family travel
FOUND IN: Britain
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 153, "Queen of Hearts" (1 text)
DT, QUNHEART*
Roud #3195
BROADSIDES:
Murray, Mu23-y1:105, "The Wheel of Fortune," James Lindsay (Glasgow), 19C [extremely mixed, with the "Wheel of Fortune" verse, a thyme stanza, a bit of "Fair and Tender Ladies," a "Queen of Heart" verse, and more]
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Know My Love"
File: FSBW153

Queen of Hearts, She Made Some Tarts, The
DESCRIPTION: "The Queen of Hearts, she made some tarts, All on a summer's day. The Knav of Hearts, he stole the tarts, And took them right away. The King of Hears called for the hearts, And beat the knave full sore. The knave... vowed he'd steal no more."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1782 (European Magazine, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)
KEYWORDS: royalty theft cards
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 434, "The Queen of Hearts" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #235, p. 152, "(The Queen of Hearts)"
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 166, "The Queen of Hearts" (1 text)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 60, "The Queen of Hearts" (1 text)
Roud #19298
NOTES [113 words]: I don't know how popular this was before Lewis Carroll used it as the basis for the trial of the Knave of Hearts in Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, but of course it has been incredibly well-known since then. The Baring-Goulds (note 37, beginning on p. 149) print the whole European Magazine version of 1782, which is much longer than the common version, and involves the other suits as well as the hearts -- e.g. the King of Spards "He kissed the maids, Which made the Queen full sore...."
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel claims that Dodgson's take on the legend parodies Queen Victoria. But Dodgson was an extreme conservative, and strong monarchist; I flatly don't believe it. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.3
File: 002434

Queen of Scotland, The [Child 301]
DESCRIPTION: The Queen tries to seduce Troy Muir; he denies her. To punish him, she has him lift up a certain stone under which a serpent waits. A passing girl draws off the snake by cutting off her breast. Troy Muir marries her. Her breast regrows to suckle their son
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (Buchan)
KEYWORDS: seduction rejection trick animal injury rescue marriage childbirth royalty
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Child 301, "The Queen of Scotland" (1 text)
Roud #3878
File: C301

Queen of the Desperadoes
DESCRIPTION: "She was a two-gun woman, Belle Shirley was her name." Belle marries Jim Reed who was killed by "Morris." She then marries Mr. Starr and "moved to Younger's Bend." Her six other husbands and her dominance over them are briefly described.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1966
KEYWORDS: love marriage death
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 97, "Queen of the Desperadoes" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #11090
File: FCW097

Queen of the May
DESCRIPTION: Singer meets a young woman. She says she has come to gather may. He asks to go with her; she refuses, for fear of being led astray. He kisses her; they wander through the meadows as he picks may. Next morning he marries her to preserve her reputation.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1832 (Journal from the Bengal)
KEYWORDS: courting love sex marriage wedding
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,South,West))
REFERENCES (10 citations):
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 190-192, "Queen of the May" (1 text, 1 tune) Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 300, "Johnny the Ploughboy" (1 fragment) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Ox 235)
Cologne/Morrison-WiltshireFolkSongs, pp. 54-55, "The Queen of May" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 53, "As I Walked Through the Meadows" (1 text, 2 tunes)
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 58, "As I Walked Through the Meadows" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople 6, "As I Walked Through the Meadows" (1 text)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 107, "Queen of the May" (1 text)
Hammer-GarnersGay, pp. 18-19, "The Queen of the May" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #35, "Queen of the May" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, QUEENMAY*
Roud #594
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth c.18(154), "The Queen of May" ("When the winter is gone and the summer is come"), J. Pitts (London), 1819-1844; also Harding B 11(299), Harding B 11(2727), Johnson Ballads 3069, Johnson Ballads 804, Firth c.14(85), Johnson Ballads 1510 View 1 of 2[many lines illegible], "The Queen of May"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Now the Winter Is Past
The Handful of May
The Plowboy's Courtship
NOTES [46 words]: This reminds me a lot of "Green Bushes" (Laws P2). The imagery is largely the same, and there are reminiscences in the wording. But the end results are different. - RBW Although it's never made explicit, especially in Cecil Sharp, I know a line of asterisks when I see one! - PJS
Last updated in version 5.0
File: SwMS190

Queen Victoria's Welcome to Deeside

DESCRIPTION: "Ye hills and ye mountains surrounding Balmoral, ye groves and ye valleys, ye surely can tell," "The eighth of September will ne'er be forgotten... We ran and we jumpit... to welcome the Queen." Victoria and Albert's visit are toasted
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan1)
KEYWORDS: home royalty
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Sep 8, 1848 - Queen Victoria takes possession of Balmoral Castle
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan1 139, "Queen Victoria's Welcome to Deeside" (1 text)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 337, "Queen Victoria's Welcome to Deeside" (1 text)
Roud #5605
NOTES [316 words]: The details in the song are not really enough to date it (no real indication of place; a date on the eighth of September, but no year), but it does mention "the Queen and her consort and three bonnie bairnies," as well as mentioning that the queen's husband in Albert. Thus Queen Victoria (1819-1901; reigned 1837-1901) and Prince Albert (1819-1861) are clearly indicated.
There is one minor curiosity in the song. Balmoral had been tenanted by Sir Robert Gordon until 1847, when that worthy died unexpectedly. Victoria and Albert then leased the house. They in fact first arrived on September 8, 1848. But the song mentions only three children; by 1848, Victoria had no fewer than six: Victoria (future Empress of Germany), Edward (future Edward VII), Alice, Alfred, Helena, and Louise, with the oldest, Victoria, still a few months shy of eight years old.
One suspects a political motive to the song. This was the era of the Highland Clearances, and not everyone in northern Scotland was happy with the English monarchy....
There seem to have been a "lot" of songs written about Queen Victoria's visits to Scotland.
Broadsides on the theme include:
NLScotland, L.C.Fol.74(218), "The Queen's Visit to Scotland" ("The Queen is coming here they say, / To Scotland coming down"), unknown, n.d. but probably published in connection with an 1842 visit; also as Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 2781. NLScotland, ABS.10.203.01(128), "The Queen's Welcome to Scotland" [by Andrew Park] ("The queen she is coming, hurra! hurra! / To the land of the thistle, hurra! hurra!"); unknown, n.d.; same broadside as L.C.Fol.74(219b). There are also broadsides on Victoria's trip to Ireland, plus there is a sort of a parody on these praise ballads, Harding B 14(123), "The Queen's Return from Scotland," J. Paul (London), n.d.; also 2806 c.16(121a), "The Queen's return from Scotland," G. Jacques (Manchester), etc. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4

File: 0rd337

Queensland Overlanders

DESCRIPTION: The singer reminds the listeners of the well-known life of the Queensland drover. He describes the various men who engage in the profession, and their visits to town. The chorus is a toast: "Tonight we drink the health of every overlander."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Paterson's _Old Bush Songs_)

KEYWORDS: Australia travel work

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (9 citations):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 218-225, "The Overlander I," "The Overlander II," "The Overlander III" (3 texts, 3 tunes, very diverse [see the notes])
Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 164-165, "The Overlanders" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, pp. 114-116, "The Queensland Drover" (1 text, 2 tunes)
Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads, pp. 39-41, "The Overlander" (1 text)

DT, QNSLNDOV

ADDITIONAL: Bill Wannan, _The Australians: Yarns, ballads and legends of the Australian tradition_, 1954 (page references are to the 1988 Penguin edition), pp. 70-71, "The Overlander" (1 text)
Bill Beatty, _A Treasury of Australian Folk Tales & Traditions_, 1960 (I use the 1969 Walkabout Paperbacks edition), pp. 297-298, "The Overlander" (1 text)

Roud #9107 and 24817

NOTES [244 words]: The versions of this are sufficiently diverse that I think deliberate rewriting almost certain. But there is no clear data on the relationship between the versions, so I'm lumping them. I frankly was going to split the three versions in Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong -- the first is about how the overlander quarrels with stockmen and ordinary people, but they all take his cheque; the second is about how men of every nation are overlanders but the girls don't like them; the third is what I personally consider "Queensland Overlanders." But having started by lumping the songs in other sources, it's now very hard to split them. John S. Manifold, _Who Wrote the Ballads? Notes on Australian Folksong_, Australasian Book Society, 1964, p. 93, also regards the items as recensionally different. He takes the three versions printed by Anderson in Colonial Ballads and says that the first was printed in 1865, the second is a songster version from 1889 and regards it as a different song: "If there is a connection [between the two], I think it lies in plagiarism. The author of the 1889 version seems to me to have lifted such incidents as he wanted from the older song, probably because he had no droving experience of his own to draw on." In a way, though, it hardly matters, because only the third version was collected in the field. Roud seems to consider most versions to be his #9107, but one "Queensland Overlander" version got tagged as #24817. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: FaE164
conclusion that life is short
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (copy of broadside)
KEYWORDS: courting poverty death mourning
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Laws H14, "The Queenstown Mourner"
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 29-33, "In the Township of Danville/The Queenstown Mourner" (2 texts, 1 tune)
DT 683, QTNMOURN
ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 21, #2 (1972), p. 22, "The Queenston Warning" (1 text, 1 tune, the Sara Cleveland version)
Roud #2195
File: LH14

Queer Folk i' the Shaws, The
DESCRIPTION: "I thocht unto mysel' ae day I'd like to see a Race... Sae up I gat, an wash'd mysel', put on my Sunday braws, An' ... started for the Shaws!" He likes the races, but in his ignorance ends up in trouble with the law, and vows not to return again
AUTHOR: Janes Fisher ?
EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Ford)
KEYWORDS: racing horse drink money police prison punishment injury
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 97-99, "The Queer Folk i' the Shaws" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #121, pp. 1-2, "The Queer Folk o' the Shaws" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan2 237, "The Queer Folk i' the Shaws" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
DT, FOLKSHAW*
Roud #3803
File: FVS097

Quern-Lilt, The, or, Grinding Song
DESCRIPTION: "The cronach stills the dowie heart, The jurram stills the bairnie, But the music for a hungry wame's The grinding o' the quernie." Though people rejoice in other things, the grain from the quern keeps many fed
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Ord-BothySongsAndBallads)
KEYWORDS: work food nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 245, "The Quern-Lilt, or, Grinding Song" (1 text)
Roud #3938
NOTES [34 words]: Ord-BothySongsAndBallads believes that Jamieson produced this as an imitation, or perhaps an improvement, of an actual grinding song. It seems likely enough. I know of no purely traditional collection. - RBW
File: Ord245

Qui Veut Manger du Lievre (Those Who Wish to Eat Some Hare)
DESCRIPTION: French. Game song; "Those who wish to eat some hare / Need only for it run." Players portray hare and hunter. Ch.: "La belle, en vous amant / Perdrai-je mes peines?" "Since you don't love me, why am I wasting my time on you?"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage nonballad playparty love animal
QUIET VILLAGE TILTING, THE

DESCRIPTION: The singer tells about a "false, fickle maid" he loved in Tilting. But he is hopeful. "My bright hopes though shattered, they might yet revive, And kind fortune bring me a faithful young bride"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1980 (Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou)

KEYWORDS: courting infidelity

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 91, "The Quiet Village Tilting" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #26620

File: LeBe091

QUIGLEY AND PICCO

DESCRIPTION: "Come all good people, please pay attention Unto the lines which I write in grief; It's about a hero who is worse than Nero," John Picco. Quigly, far from home, sees Picco's light -- but is refused shelter because he's an Irish Catholic. He curses Picco

AUTHOR: Johnny Quigley (source: Michael Murphy)

EARLIEST DATE: 1891: "Originally published in the St John's Evening Telegram on 24 December 1891 (vol. 13/291:19) and reproduced as 'Quigley on Picco' in James Murphy's Old Songs of Newfoundland (1912)," according to the notes at ITMA/CapeShoreNL

KEYWORDS: hardtimes travel rejection

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Michael P. Murphy, _Pathways through Yesterday_, edited by Gerald S. Moore, Town Crier Publishing, 1976, pp. 162-164, "Quigley and Picco" (1 text)

Roud #30677

RECORDINGS:
Bernard Nash and Tom Murphy, "Quigley And Picco" (on ITMA/CapeShoreNL)

NOTES [156 words]: According to Michael P. Murphy, p. 147, Johnny Quigley and John Picco were real people. Quigley was born in County Wexford, Ireland, and came to Newfoundland in the early nineteenth century, working there s a carpenter, dying many years later in St. John's. Given the religious strife that afflicted Newfoundland, it is perhaps not too surprising that Picco refused Quigley shelter; Quigley frankly did not help his cause by (it would appear from the song) being a little too eager to talk about his heritage.

Murphy calls Quigley a "ballad writer of note," but the only other song I've seen attributed to him is "Jack Hinks." Most sources for that song spell his name "Johnnie Quigley," but of course that is a trivial distinction in nineteenth century Newfoundland, which was mostly illiterate.

In Newfoundland, this was sometimes regarded as a "Treason Song." For background on Treason Songs, see the notes to "The Prooshian Drum." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5

File: Murph162

QUITY BURNING, THE

DESCRIPTION: "Oh the burning of Quilty, you all know it well; When the barracks took fire Where the peelers did dwell." Everyone scurries to save what can be saved. "This old barracks is no harm to be gone, For many a poor fellow was shoved in there wrong"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1977 (IRClare01)
KEYWORDS: prison fire moniker police
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1920-1921 - The Black and Tan War
FOUND IN: Ireland
Roud #18471
RECORDINGS:
Mikey Kelleher, "The Quilty Burning" (on IRClare01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Cod Liver Oil" (tune) and references there
cf. "The Burning of Rosslea" (subject)
NOTES [71 words]: Notes to IRClare01: "The incident that gave rise to this song ... took place around 1920, when the Royal Irish Constabulary (RIC) barracks at Quilty, a fishing village a few miles south of Miltown Malbay, was set alight by the Republicans.
"Peelers" are police. Apparently, the barracks served also as a jail. (For more on "peelers" in general, and the RIC in the context of the Black and Tan War, see "The Rineen Ambush") - BS
File: RcQuiBur

Quilty Fisherman, The

DESCRIPTION: The French ship Leon strikes a rock off County Clare. "Eighteen men in six canoes," fishermen from Quilty, "cross the wild and stormy sea," "three miles," and "saved the captain and twelve men from the sinking ship"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1995 (IROConway01)
KEYWORDS: sea ship storm wreck rescue Ireland
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Oct 3-4, 1907 - French ship Leon XIII, bound for Shannon, "was lost in a hurricane on the Irish coast near Quilty, County Clare"; the crew of thirteen was rescued by eighteen fishermen from Quilty. (Source: "Brave Irishmen Rescued Sailors," _The Binghamton (N.Y.) Press_, Nov. 9, 1907, citing _The Clare Champion_ of Oct. 12, 1907)
FOUND IN: Ireland
Roud #25070
RECORDINGS:
Ollie Conway, "The Quilty Fisherman" (on IROConway01)
File: RcTQuiFi

Quitting Time Song

DESCRIPTION: Call and response cornfield holler. "Oh oh oh oh, I won't be here long. Oh oh oh oh, Dark don't catch me here." That's about it.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939
KEYWORDS: nonballad work
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Botkin-TreasuryOfSouthernFolklore, p. 744, "Quitting Time Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Arwhoolie
Hoolie

File: BSoF744

Quo' the Haddock to the Skate

DESCRIPTION: Disconnected couplets, lines, halflines, names and places. One coherent example: the eel, haddock and skate comment that London is far away so the haddock advises the eel to "crook your tail weel"

R.F.C.

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you poor distressed people And lend a willing ear to me; Your suffering will soon be ended For now we have the R.F.C." The government is helping the poor and homeless and hungry

AUTHOR: Buddy Preston

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)

KEYWORDS: hardtimes help political nonballad

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES: (1 citation):

Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 235-236, "R.F.C." (1 text)

NOTES [107 words]: This probably sounds like a New Deal song, but in fact the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was proposed by Herbert Hoover on December 8, 1931; it was approved by Congress in January 1932 and the RFC opened for business in February. The RFC, however, was not a relief program as such; rather, it was intended to prop up the banking and insurance system. Its financing ($500 million in government money and authorization to borrow up to $2 billion more), while adequate to keep the financial system working, was not enough to actually stimulate the economy, and it was really a failed half measure. Still, the RFC was retained until 1957. - RBW

File: ThBa13

---

Rab

DESCRIPTION: "Rab, Rab, Lead off, head! Come by, ladies, come by! Hit him in the head with a pone of bread... Pretty little girl to go with me... I'm gonne leave old Tennessee!... Rabbit soup's not good to eat... Rabbit soup'll rot your teeth."

Rabborison's Bonnet

DESCRIPTION: Rab Robison's bonnet covered his and his wife's head from the rain, was under his knees at church, was waved in the air when he swore, or as a bellows for fire, .... "It wasna the bonnet but the bean that was in it Made the hale parish talk"

Rabbi's Daughter

DESCRIPTION: "You are a Rabbi's daughter, And as such you must obey Your father without question...." "If a Christian you should marry, Your father's heart would break... You must leave him for my sake."
Rabbit Chase

DESCRIPTION: Humorous cante-fable description of chasing a rabbit. Part of the humor is that, unlike "fox chase" songs, not much happens: The old wife wants a rabbit (though she hardly knows what one is); the old man and dog blunder around preparing to catch it

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Charlie Parker)

KEYWORDS: hunting humorous animal dog family age

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, pp. 106-107, "Rabbit Chase" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
New Lost City Ramblers, "Rabbit Chase" (on NLCR10)
Charlie Parker & Mack Woolbright, "Rabbit Chase" (Columbia 15154-D, 1927, on Cornshuckers1)

NOTES [24 words]: Cohen notes that when he played this song for mountain people, they found it so amusing that they pulled out a tape recorder and taped "him". - PJS

File: CSW106

Rabbit Hash

DESCRIPTION: Patting Chant: "Oh rabbit, rabbit, rabbit, Rabbit a-hash An' polecat smash; Rabbit, rabbit, rabbit a-hash. Rabbit skip an'-a rabbit hop, An' a-rabbit eat my turnip top. Oh, rabbit, rabbit, rabbit a-hash! Oh, rabbit a-hash."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: animal food nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 238-239, "Rabbit Hash" (1 text, 1 tune, though the tune is really just a single note fitted to the music)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 168, "The Rabbit Skipped, The Rabbit Hopped" (1 short text)

Roud #10058

NOTES [110 words]: This is a sort of a dubious lumping of Lomax's and Brown's versions; Brown's text consists simply of the lines "The rabbit skipped, the rabbit hopped, the rabbit bit off the turnip top," and Brown did not note it as a patting chant. But it's easy to see how it could have shifted from one form to the other.

Roud links together several rabbit songs under one number: "Mister Rabbit," "Ole Mister Rabbit (I'll Get You Rabbit)," even "Rabbit Hash." All are about rabbits raiding gardens (something they certainly do) and the attempts to punish them for it (rarely successful, even with modern technology). But the forms are quite distinct, so I split them. - RBW

File: LxA238

Rabbit in the Log (Feast Here Tonight)

DESCRIPTION: "Rabbit in the log And I ain't got no dog." The singer, apparently poor and a rambler, perhaps a poacher, imagines how to catch the rabbit and describes how he will cook and enjoy it. He will sleep in a farmer's shed, etc.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1913 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: animal food hunting

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 166, "Rabbit in the Log" (1 fragment)
Coleman/Bregman-SongsOfAmericanFolks, pp. 72-73, "Nobody's But Mine" (1 short text, 1 tune, which may be combined with "Nobody's Business But Mine")

RECORDINGS:
Monroe Brothers, "Have a Feast Here Tonight" (Bluebird 7508)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
Rabbit in the Rail Pile

DESCRIPTION: "Rabbit in the rail pile, search him out quick, Gather, twist around him with a long pronged stick, Catch him on the north side, catch him on the eye, There you chase 'em to eye, eye, eye."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1992 (Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes)
KEYWORDS: animal hunting
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, p. 13, "Rabbit in the Rail Pile" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #25014
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rabbit in the Log (Feast Here Tonight)" (theme)

Rabbit Stole de Greens

DESCRIPTION: "Rabbit stole de greens (x2), Break down, Molly, hoo, hoo (x2)." "Big pot o' punkins, Little pot o' peas; De ole har smile To see de pot bile. Break down, Molly, hoo, hoo. (x2)"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: food animal
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 169, "Rabbit Stole de Greens" (1 text)

Raccoon

DESCRIPTION: "Raccoon has a bushy tail, Possum's tail is bare. Rabbit has no tail at all, 'cept a little bunch of hair." Verses about love, animals, anything at all: "Love it is a killing thing, Beauty is a blossom, If you want your finger bit, Poke it at a possum"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Cecil Sharp collection)
KEYWORDS: animal love nonsense floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,SE,So)
REFERENCES (15 citations):
Randolph 260, "Kitty Cain't You Come Along Too?" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 162, "De Possum Am a Cunning Thing" (2 short texts plus mention of 1 more); also 163, "The Raccoon Has a Bushy Tail" (1 text plus 2 fragments; the "C" text has the chorus of "Cindy"); also 415, "Lynchburg Town" (3 texts plus 2 fragments, 2 excerpts, and mention of 2 more, all with the "Lynchburg Town" chorus, but "A" and "B" have verses from "Raccoon" and "Possum Up a Gum Stump and "D" and "E" are partly "If I Had a Scolding Wife" ("Lucy Long (I)"): only "C" seems to be truly "Lynchburg Town"); also 17, "I Wouldn't Marry" (7 text (some short) plus 6 excerpts, 1 fragment, and mention of 5 more, of which "A" appears to mix this with "Coming Around the Mountain (II -- Charming Betsey)" and "I Won't Marry an Old Maid")
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 162, "De Raccoon Am a Cunning Thing" (1 tune plus a text excerpt); 163, "The Raccoon Has a Bushy Tail" (2 tunes plus text excerpts); 415, "Lynchburg Town" (4 tunes plus text excerpts, corresponding to "A," "B" (which go with this song), "E," and a "J" version that apparently is not cited in Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3)
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 226, "Children's Quatrains" ("De raccoon's tail am bushy") (1 short text)
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 83, "Raccoon's Got a Bush Tail" (1 text)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 186, "Raccoon" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warner-FolkSongsAndBalladsOfTheEasternSeaboard, pp. 12-13, "Raccoon" (1 text)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 225, "The Squirrel" (3 texts, 3 tunes)
Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 76, "The Squirrel" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol1, p. 105, "Raccoon Lullaby" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, p. 11, (no title) (1 fragment, 1 tune on p. 385. A single stanza: "Jay-bird pulled a two-mule plow, Sparrow, why don't you...;" this verse seems to float but has been found in songs of this type)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 165, "Old Bee Make de Honeycomb" (1 text, with most of the verses appearing to go here even though it has the "Old Bee" stanza also); also p. 169, (no title) (1 text, with verses probably from "Raccoon," unless they just floated in, while the chorus seems to be "Po' Liza Jane"); also sundry stanzas on pp. 169-170
Abbot/Swan-8Negro 4, "Squirl he tote a bushy tail" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 398, "Raccoon's Got A Bushy Tail"; p. 401, "The Squirrel" (2 texts)
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, (no author listed; collected Leonidas Betts, "Love," Vol. XX, No. 3 (Aug 1972), p. 144, "Love's a little thing Shaped like a lizard, Runs around your heard And jumps through your gizzard" (1 short text, a floating verse that is similar to many songs; the first line might be best known as "Love it is a killing thing")
ST R260 (Partial)
Roud #3444
RECORDINGS:
Pete Seeger, "Raccoon's Got a Bushy Tail" (on PeteSeeger08, PeteSeegerCD02)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Kemo Kimo" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Pains in My Fingers" (floating lyrics)
cf. "I Went to My Sweetheart's House" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Rat Coon, Rat Coon" (theme)
cf. "Bile Them Cabbage Down" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Mabel" (lyrics)
cf. "Old Coon Dog (I)" (lyrics)
NOTES [74 words]: As with all these floating-animal-verse songs, it's hard to tell where one begins and another ends. I group them as best I can.
It's interesting to note that both Randolph and the "A" text of Brown's "De Possum Am a Cunning Thing" share part of a chorus, "(Oh/Do) come along, Sandy Boy," even though this is clearly not integral to the song. Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana's chorus is "Get along home, home, home (x3), Down the riverside." - RBW
Last updated in version 6.1
File: R260

Race Between a Ford and Chevrolet

DESCRIPTION: Various string band musicians from the North Georgia region, such as Clayton McMichen and Riley Puckett, wager a jug of liquor on the outcome of the race between a Ford and a Chevrolet. The race is a tie, so the onlookers split the contents of the jug.
AUTHOR: Probably Oscar Ford
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (recording, Oscar Ford)
KEYWORDS: wager drink humorous racing technology
FOUND IN: US(SE)
Roud #15876
RECORDINGS:
Oscar Ford, "Race Between a Ford and Chevrolet" (Columbia 15634-D, 1930)
NOTES [15 words]: It is doubtful that the musician Oscar Ford was an objective observer of this contest. -PJS
Last updated in version 5.0
File: RcRBFaCh
Race of the Terrapin and the Deer

DESCRIPTION: The terrapin challenges the deer to a race. The deer agrees; the terrapin asks terrapins to hide by the path. When the deer calls out, "And where are you, terrapin?" the nearest terrapin answers, causing the deer to run faster till it is exhausted

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)
KEYWORDS: animal racing trick recitation
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, p. 504, "Race of the Terrapin and the Deer" (1 text with musical elements)
Roud #7818
NOTES [16 words]: This is a widely-known folktale, but here presented with music, so into the Index it goes. - RBW
File: Beld504

Race, A

DESCRIPTION: Recitation. Deerfoot John brags that he's the champion foot-racer; Windigo challenges him to a 500-yard race. Deerfoot, running stark naked and with a 40-foot starting lead, runs well, but loses. Deerfoot swears that next time he'll run with his pants on.

AUTHOR: Attributed to Long Joe, from the town of Cedar, Michigan
EARLIEST DATE: April 28, 1878 (published in newspaper)
KEYWORDS: bragging contest clothes racing sports recitation
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 36, "A Race" (1 text)
Roud #8852
NOTES [13 words]: Beck quotes an informant to the effect that this is a versified news story. - PJS
File: Be036

Rachel Dear/The Maine Water Side

DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls the sad day Rachel fell into the river Maine and drowned. She is found by her cousin. Her family, friends, and sweetheart mourn. The song closes with a description of her beauty

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: river death
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H62, pp. 148-149, "Rachel Dear/The Maine Water Side" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9451
NOTES [18 words]: One of the Sam Henry columns claims this is a true story and gives circumstantial details, but no dates. - RBW
File: HHH062

Rackyman Doo (Ring-Dang-Doo (II))

DESCRIPTION: Singer meets a young fellow, and asks whether he'd like to have a game on her rackyman doo. He asks what it is; she explains that it's soft, with hairs all round and split in two. She takes him to her father's cellar, gives him drink, and asks again

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: early 1960s (collected from Caroline Hughes)
KEYWORDS: sex bawdy derivative
FOUND IN: Britain(England), US(MW), West Indies
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Rafferty and Cafferty

DESCRIPTION: Parody of a stump speech: "My name is Barney Rafferty, that is my cognomen, Though some folks call me Barny, they're of the lower sort." Rafferty's only enemy is Mikey Cafferty; he urges voters to support Rafferty, not Cafferty

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Fahey-Joe-Watson-AustralianTraditionalFolkSinger)

KEYWORDS: political nonballad humorous recitation

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fahey-Joe-Watson-AustralianTraditionalFolkSinger, [p. 12, page headed "Mr. Watson then recited..."]], "Rafferty & Cafferty" (1 text)

ST FaWRafCa (Partial)

Roud #22600

File: FaWRafCa

Raffle at Kilbride, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer attends a dance, with a raffle to follow. When two bidders tie they fight -- "they smashed up lamps and crockery" -- and Hogan takes the prize: an ornery mare.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA-Leach)

KEYWORDS: fight violence dancing humorous moniker horse

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

Roud #30142

RECORDINGS:
Mr. Powers, "The Raffle at Kilbride" (on MUNFLA-Leach)

File: ML3RaaKi

Raftsman Jim

DESCRIPTION: "So her pop says, 'Nay,' and he lopes right away, And bobs right back the very next day; And he shuts one eye, And looks very sly, She gives her pop the sweet bye-bye."

Chorus: "There ain't no cub as neat as him, Dandy, handy raftsman Jim!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Russell)

KEYWORDS: ship sailor courting father

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, p. 840, "Raftsman Jim" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Charles Edward Russell, _A-Rafting on the Mississip'_, 1928 (republished 2001 by the University of Minnesota Press), pp. 209-211, "Raftsman Jim" (1 text, scattered across several pages, 1 tune)

NOTES [63 words]: Walter Havinghurst, _Upper Mississippi: A Wilderness Saga_, Farrar & Rinehart, 1937, 1944, titles a chapter on river life "Raftsman Jim," and quotes the chorus of this on p. 252. Russell's chapter of river songs is also titled "Raftsman Jim." Although Russell's seems to be the only full text collected, it appears that Raftsman Jim was fairly well known in river folklore. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.5

File: BAF840
Raftsmen, The

DESCRIPTION: French: "La ous-qu'y sont, tous les raftsmen?" The raftsmen are on their way to winter camp. They arrive, suffer the usual poor food, work in the woods, go home, and "to greet them come their ladies gay, Who help them spend their hard-earned pay."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925
KEYWORDS: logger work foreignlanguage worker lumbering
FOUND IN: Canada(Que)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Fowke/Johnston-FolkSongsOfCanada, pp. 74-75, "The Raftsmen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong, pp. 171-173, "The Raftsmen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 99 "The Raftsmen (Les Raftsmen)" (1 English and one French text)
ADDITIONAL: Edith Fowke and Richard Johnston, _Folk Songs of Quebec (Chansons de Quebec)_ , Waterloo Music Company, 1957, pp. 14-15, "Les Raftsmen" (1 French text plus English translation, 1 tune)

Raftsmen's Song (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "I believe some dust of the wanderlust has been molded with my clay. Though I long to come to my home sweet home, it's never long I'll stay." The singer describes his travels, talks of troubles faced by raftsmen, and considers the raftsmen's afterlife

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (Fowke)
KEYWORDS: logger work travel
FOUND IN: Canada(Ont)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fowke-LumberingSongsFromTheNorthernWoods #64, "The Raftsmen's Song" (1 text, 1 tune)

Ragged and Dirty Blues

DESCRIPTION: "Well I'm ragged, I'm hungry, I'm dirty too... If I clean up, sweet mama, can I stay all, all night with you?" The poor, homeless, orphaned stranger hits on the woman and complains that he wants to die. Then he decides to leave her whatever it takes

AUTHOR: unknown
Ragged Coat, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer, once poor, receives a large inheritance. As an experiment, he goes out in poor clothing -- and is despised. As soon as he displays money, he is treated kindly. He repeats the test, then notes "Many an honest heart beats beneath a ragged coat."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1850

KEYWORDS: poverty money clothes

FOUND IN: US(MA) Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (3 citations):

- Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 102, "The Ragged Coat" (2 texts, 1 tune)
- Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1950, p. 131, "The Ragged Coat" (2 references)
- ADDITIONAL: John Burke, _Burke's Christmas Songster 1920_, self-published, 1918 (PDF available on the Memorial University of Newfoundland site), p. 11, "The Ragged Coat" (1 text)

ST FSC102 (Partial)

Roud #30113

RECORDINGS:

- John Connors, "Ragged Coat" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

ALTERNATE TITLES:

- Don't Despise a Man Because He Wears a Ragged Coat

NOTES [20 words]: According to a broadside listed in Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, this was "As Sung by Ned Riley, with Unbounded Applause." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.4

File: FSC102

Ragged Leevy

DESCRIPTION: A slow leader line followed by response "O Ho" and a fast line. "Ragged Leevy ... Ragged like a jay bird" "Sweet potato ... Two in the fire" "Mr. x ... Going to build me a store fence" (see notes)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands)

KEYWORDS: nonballad shanty

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

- Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands 52, pp. 212-213, "Ragged Leevy" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:

- John Davis and the Georgia Sea Island Singers, "Raggy Leevy" (on LomaxCD1713)

NOTES [31 words]: Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands: "Used when 'blockin' heavy timber." Lomax, on LomaxCD1713: "Who was Raggy Leevy anyway?" John Davis: "He was the raggedest man on the job." - BS

Last updated in version 4.1

File: Parr052

Raggedy

DESCRIPTION: "Raggedy, raggedy are we, Just as raggedy, raggedy can be. Well we don't get nothing for our labor, So raggedy are we." Similarly, "Hungry, hungry are we"; "Homeless, homeless are we"; "Landless..."; "Pitiful..."

AUTHOR: John Handcox
Raggedy-Assed Cadets, The

DESCRIPTION: "The raggedy-assed cadets are on parade, on parade (x2), They joined the army for the air, But they'll play hell in getting there.... Rolling on, rolling on, By the light of the Silvery moon, A ha ha ha ha... The raggedy-assed cadets are on parade."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe)
KEYWORDS: soldier nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 181-183, "The Raggedy-Assed Cadets" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #15441?
File: NiMo181

Raghad-sa O Thuaidh Leat A Bho

DESCRIPTION: Gaelic. "A milking-woman sings to her cow, wishing it safe from any harm."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage animal nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 121, "Raghad-sa O Thuaidh Leat A Bho" (2 texts, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Elizabeth Cronin, "Raghad-sa O Thuaidh Leat A Bho" (on IRECronin01)
NOTES [17 words]: The description follows the "English Summary" provided by OCroinin/Cronin-
TheSongsOfElizabethCronin. - BS
Last updated in version 3.2
File: OCC121

Raging Canal (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "Come listen to my story, ye landsmen one and all, I'll sing to you the dangers of that raging canal." When the mules trip on a stormy night, the crew faces a wreck. The usual exaggerations, e.g. the cook's dress on a pole, are employed

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1851 (Journal of the Three Brothers); probably published 1844 (cf.
Dichter/Shapiro)
KEYWORDS: canal storm humorous cook
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 178-179, "The Raging Canawl" (1 text) Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 464-465, "(Erie Canal)" (2 texts, the second of which goes here; the first is "A Trip on the Erie (Haul in Your Bowline)"); pp. 471-474, "The Raging
Can-all" (1 text)
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 214-215, "The Raging Canal" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [174 words]: The Erie Canal, as originally constructed, was a completely flat, shallow waterway. The barges were drawn along by mules. Thus, apart from getting wet, storms posed little danger. As for needing a distress signal, one could always step off onto dry land.... The Lomaxes, in American Ballad and Folk Songs, thoroughly mingled many texts of the Erie Canal songs (in fairness, some of this may have been the work of their informants -- but in any case the Lomaxes did not help the problem). One should check all the Erie Canal songs for related stanzas. Harry Dichter and Elliott Shapiro, Early American Sheet Music: Its Lure and Its Lore, 1768-1889, R. R. Bowker, 1941, p. 48, mention sheet music of a song, "The Raging Canal!" This was published by C. G. Christman in 1844, and is described as "A Comic Song. Written and Sung by that Most Celebrated omi Singer P. Morris." Badly printed, the illustration shows a boat being tossed about by high waves on the canal. I would assume that is the ancestor of this song, but I cannot prove it. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2

File: San178

Raglan Road

DESCRIPTION: "On Raglan Road of an Autumn day, I saw her first and knew, That her dark hair would weave a snare That I might someday rue," "I loved too much, and by such and such Is happiness thrown away." The singer warns of the dangers of courting "an angel."

AUTHOR: Patrick Kavanagh (1904/05-1967)

EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (Harte)

KEYWORDS: love beauty

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (2 citations):

DT, RAGLANRD *
ADDITIONAL: Frank Harte _Songs of Dublin_, second edition, Ossian, 1993, pp. 14-15, "Raglan Road" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [50 words]: Although I know of no traditional collections, Harte thinks this is becoming a traditional song. There is an interesting reference to "The Queen of Hearts still making tarts." Is this a reference to "Alice," or to the rhyme Carroll used as the basis for the adventures in Wonderland? It's not clear. - RBW

File: Har014

Ragtime Cowboy Joe

DESCRIPTION: "The roughest, toughest man by far" in Arizona is Ragtime Cowboy Joe, who got his name because "He always sings raggy music to the cattle... On a horse that is syncopated gaited." But folks are advised not to cross him; his gun will make them dance

AUTHOR: Words: Grant Clarke/Music: Lewis F. Muir and Maurice Abrahams

EARLIEST DATE: 1912 (copyright)

KEYWORDS: cowboy music nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 107, "Ragtime Cowboy Joe" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 107, "Rag Time Cowboy Joe" (1 text)

DT, RAGTMOVJOE *

Roud #11097
Ragtime Tiffy, The

DESCRIPTION: "He's a ragtime tiffy, ragtime tiffy. Early every morning with a spanner in his hands, Walking round the engine room tighteing up the glands... Happy as the flowers in May, But if you ask him,, what he'd doing, He don't know what the bloody hell to say"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1985 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)

KEYWORDS: sailor navy work technology

FOUND IN: Britain

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 33, "The Ragtime Tiffy" (1 text)

File: Tawn018

Raid of the Reidswire, The DESCRIPTION: "The seventh of July, the suith to say," A raiding party gathers. Carmichael is the warden. All the folk of Liddesdale gater. Those who participate in the raid are listed.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1712-1724 (Bannatine MS); 1724 (Ramsay); 1803 (Scott) [see NOTES]

KEYWORDS: moniker battle borderballad

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Jun 5, 1575 - the Reidswire battle

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 365-370, "The Raid of the Reidswire" (1 text)
Chambers-ScottishBallads, pp. 64-69, "The Battle of the Reidswire" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: George Bannatyne and James Barclay Murdoch, editor, The Bannatyne Manuscript Compiled by George Bannatyne 1568 (Glasgow: Hunterian Club, 1896 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")) Vol.IV, Appendix III, #20 pp. 1097-1104, "The Song of the Rid Square Fought on the 7 of July, 1576" (1 text) [added to the MS 1712-1724; see Notes]
Michael Brander, _Scottish and Border Battles and Ballads_, 1975 (page references to the 1993 Barnes & Noble edition), p. 91, "Raid of the Reidswire" (1 excerpt); pp. 241-245 (1 full text)
ST MBra92 (Partial)

Roud #2863

NOTES [252 words]: Scott: "This poem is published from a copy in the Bannatyne MS. in the handwriting of the Hon Mr Carmichael, advocate. It first appeared in Allan Ramsay's Evergreen, but some liberties have been taken by him in transcribing it; and, what is altogether unpardonable, the MS, which is itself rather inaccurate, has been interpolated to favour his readings; of which there remains obvious marks" (p. 111). If you compare the three texts -- Bannatyne, Ramsay, and Scott -- line for line you will see differences, but few that affect the meaning.

The Bannatyne MS came into Carmichael's posession in 1712, so the dating of the earliest text we have so far is not earlier than 1712 nor later than 1724, when Ramsay printed it. Keep that date in mind as you compare II.81-84, without the long-s typography.: Bannatyne (c. 1712):
Up rose the laird to red the cumber, Which would not be for all his boast; What should we doe with such a number, Five thousand men into ane hoast?
Ramsay (1724)
Up raise the Laird to red the Cumber,
Quhilk wald not be for all his Boist,
Quhat suld we do with sic a Number,
Fyve thousand Men into ane Hoist?

Scott (1802)
Up rose the laird to red the cumber,
Which would not be for all his boast;
What could we doe with sic a number?
Fyve thousand men into a host.

Besides the differences caused by Ramsay's antiquing or scotticizing and Scott's editing, there are a few differences between Ramsay's and Scott's reading of Carmichael's handwriting. - BS

Last updated in version 4.0
File: MBra92

Railroad Accident at Richmond Switch, THE

DESCRIPTION: "On April nineteenth, seventy-three, Of this affair we heard, The worst disaster, said to be...." A bridge is out near Richmond Switch, and the Steamboat Train goes into the stream. The singer tells of unknown losses and wishes a mail train had gone first

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 2008 (Cohen)
KEYWORDS: train disaster death
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Apr 19, 1873 - The Richmond Switch accident
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 73-75, "The Railroad Accident at Richmond Switch" (1 text)
File: CAFS1073

Railroad Bill [Laws 113]

DESCRIPTION: Railroad Bill "never worked and never will"; he drinks, steals, and travels from town to town. His career finally ends when he is shot (and/or arrested). To the very end, all he does is "ride, ride, ride"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Odum, according to Cohen)
KEYWORDS: rambling robbery crime death train
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
March 7, 1897 - Death of Morris Slater, known as "Railroad Bill"
FOUND IN: US(SE) New Zealand
REFERENCES (17 citations):
Laws 113, "Railroad Bill"
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 122-131, "Railroad Bill" (2 texts plus many excerpts, 1 tune)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 384-385, "Railroad Bill" (1 text, 1 tune -- perhaps bowdlerized to eliminate Bill's death)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 504, "A Thirty-Two Special on a Forty-Four Frame" (1 two-line fragment, with lyrics sometimes associated with this song)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 504, "A Thirty-two Special on a Forty-Four Frame" (note only, stating that the tune cannot be found)
Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, pp. 194-195, "Railroad Bill" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 251-253, "It's Lookin' fer Railroad Bill" (2 texts plus some small pieces, which might be "Joseph Mica" rather than this)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 304, "Railroad Bill" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 118-120, "Railroad Bill" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 201-202, "(Railroad Bill)" (1 text)
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 79, "Railway Bill" (1 text, 1 tune, short and with little plot except a statement that Bill doesn't work like other railroad employees, but it has this chorus) (p. 57 in the 1972 edition)
Railroad Blues (I)

DESCRIPTION: Floating verses; "Went to the depot and I looked up on the board, It read, good times, children..."; "Where was you, mama, when the train left the shed..."; "Met a little Gypsy in a fortune telling place/She read my mind, and then she slapped my face."

AUTHOR: unknown (probably fixed up by Sam McGee)

EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (recording, Sam McGee)

KEYWORDS: railroading nonballad floatingverses

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Burton-TennesseeTraditionalSingers, p. 111, "(Railroad Blues)" (1 text)
- Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 190, "Railroad Blues" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 402-403, "The Railroad Blues" (1 excerpted text, 1 tune -- a subset of a song collected in 1915 and printed in JAFL, with fully 80 four-line stanzas, most of which could however be treated as double two-line stanzas and therefore sung as a true blues. It has floating verses from everywhere, which perhaps means it should file here. I don't list it as the Earliest Date, though, because it's so anomalous)

Roud #17787

RECORDINGS:
- Jelly Roll Anderson, "Good Time Blues" (Gennett 6181, 1927) (Herwin 92014, 1927) (one of these Railroad Blues (II)

DESCRIPTION: "I got the blues, but I haven't got the fare (x2). I got the blues, but I'm too damned mean to cry." "Some say the rolling blues ain't bad..." the singer concludes they have some other sort of blues. He laments his dead mother and sister gone astray.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: railroading death mother
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 243, "Railroad Blues" (1 text)
Roud #11646
NOTES [38 words]: As with most blues, this is a rather disjointed piece; it may be a version of "Railroad Blues (I)." But as that piece is more or less a unity, and Scarborough's version has no lyrics in common that I can see, I split them. - RBW
File: ScaNF243

Railroad Blues (IV)

DESCRIPTION: "Every time you hear me sing this ssng, You may know I've caught a train and gone." A letter tells the singer his love is sick. He tries to get home. The Big Four in Dallas has burned down. He will soon be gone; a man in trouble always takes a freight

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (Journal of American Folklore)
KEYWORDS: railroading nonballad love floatingverses
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Tristram P. Coffin and Hennig Cohen, _Folklore in America: Tales, Songs, Superstitions, Proverbs, Riddles, Games, Folk Drama and Folk Festivals_, Doubleday, 1966, pp. 74-75, "Railroad Blues" (1 text)
Roud #8902
File: CoCo074

Railroad Boomer, The

DESCRIPTION: "Come and gather all around me, listen to my tale of woe... Take a tip from one who's travelled, never start to ramblin' round, Yu're liable to get the wandr'rin fever." The singer plans to marry, but then hears a train; he asks to be buried by the tracks

AUTHOR: Carson J. Robison
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (copyright and first recording)
KEYWORDS: train travel rambling wife abandonment
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 390-393, "" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #24085
RECORDINGS:
Gene Autry, " Railroad Boomer" (OKeh 45417 [possibly as Johnny Dodds], 1930; rec. 1929
Frank Luther and Carson J. Robison, "The Railroad Boomer" (Victor V-40139 [as by Bud Billings
NOTES [45 words]: Somewhere in here, there's a joke about Robison writing a science fiction story about the future life of Woody Guthrie.
This is another of the songs in Cohen that comes from the railroad/hillbilly genre but that can't be shown to have circulated in oral tradition. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.1
File: LSRai390

Railroad Cars are Coming, The

DESCRIPTION: "The great Pacific railway, For California hail! Bring on the locomotive, Lay down the iron rail; Across the rolling prairies By steam we're bound to go." Even prairie dogs wag their tails and antelope stand at attention when the trains come.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)

KEYWORDS: railroading train nonballad animal

FOUND IN: US(MW,Ro)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 358-359, "The Railroad Cars are Coming" (1 short text, 1 tune)
- Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, p. 603, "The Railroad Cars, They're Coming" (1 short text)

ST San358 (Full)

Roud #10812

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Echo Canyon Song"

NOTES [195 words]: The first Transcontinental Railroad in the United States was the Central Pacific, completed in Utah in May 1860. This line went from Chicago to Omaha through Nebraska, Wyoming, Utah, and Nevada on its way to Sacramento and San Francisco.
But it cannot be the line referred to, since the song describes travelling through New Mexico.
Two major transcontinental lines went through the southern states. The Southern Pacific went from New Orleans through Houston, San Antonio, and El Paso to Los Angeles. This might be the reference, but this line barely touches New Mexico.
The Santa Fe railroad (or the Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe) fits much better: Starting from Saint Louis as the Missouri Pacific, it passed through Kansas City and then headed west and south through Kansas, a corner of Colorado, and New Mexico, through Santa Fe and Albuquerque to Los Angeles.
The Santa Fe line makes sense in another way: It replaced the old Santa Fe trail, making its opening welcome even to the animals (since they didn't have to travel it). The line reached Santa Fe in 1880, meaning that its construction was still part of living memory when Sandburg was collecting songs. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.5
File: San358

Railroad Corral, The

DESCRIPTION: "We're up in the morning ere breaking of day, The chuck wagon's busy, the flapjack's in play." The singer describes the hot, dusty, dirty work of the cowboy, and the long days and long trails. He rejoices to reach the end of the trip

AUTHOR: Joseph Mills Hanson (1876-)

EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly); listed as a traditional song by Lomax in 1910

KEYWORDS: cowboy travel work food

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (7 citations):
- Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys, pp. 132-134, "The Railroad Coral" (1 text)
- Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 77, "The Railroad Corral" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 185, "The Railroad Corral" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 113, "The Railroad Corral" (1 text)
- Tinsley-HeWasSinginThisSong, pp. 28-31, "The Railroad Corral" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, RRCORRAL*

ADDITIONAL: John I. White, _Git Along, Little Dogies: Songs and Songmakers of the American West_, 1975 (page references are to the 1989 University of Illinois Press edition), pp. 38-45, "Last Day with the Longhorns" (1 text, plus extensive discussion about how the song became popular)

Roud #4636

RECORDINGS:
*Bill Bender (The Happy Cowboy), "The Railroad Corral" (Varsity 5148, n.d.; rec. 1939)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Irish Washerwoman" (tune)

SAME TUNE:
The Irish Washerwoman (no Index entry, since it has no lyrics; this is the cross-reference entry for this melody)
Botany Bay Courtship (The Currency Lasses) (File: FaE068)
Corporal Casey (File: OCon021)
The Hold-Up (File: RDBW394)
Irishman's Shanty (File: GrMa109)
McTavish is Dead (File: PHCFS122)
Old Binnie (File: EM264)
Starving to Death on a Government Claim (The Lane County Bachelor) (File: R186)
Gold's a Wonderful Thing (File: Col034)
Things You Don't Often See ("There are strange sights in Auckland exciting surprise") (by Charles R. Thatcher) (Hoskins-Goldfield-Balladeer-LifeAndTimes-Charles-R-Thatcher, p. 185)
The Irishman's Epistle to the Officers & Troops at Boston ("By my faith but I think ye're all makers of bulls") (Rabson-SongbookOfTheAmericanRevolution, pp. 30-31)

File: LoF185

Railroad Daddy Blues

DESCRIPTION: "Every time I hear a freight train comin', Oh, I listen to the engine sob and moan. Lawd, Lawd, I've got them railroad daddy blues." The singer describes railroad life, wishes her daddy would come back, and rejoices when "my railroad daddy's home at last."

AUTHOR: Harve Burton?
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)
KEYWORDS: train separation reunion
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, p. 259, "Railroad Daddy Blues" (1 text)

File: ThBa259

Railroad Dinah Gal

DESCRIPTION: "As I went down to Simon's mill, There I found a very steep hill, The steers began to bellow and balk, And I began to cuss and talk. Railroad Dinah Gal, I'm going' over the mountains." "Me and old Dinah killed a sheep, Give old Dinah the head and feet."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: food animal railroading travel
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 493, "Railroad Dinah Gal" (1 short text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 493, "Railroad Dinah Gal" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #11763
File: Br3493

Railroadin' and Gamblin'

DESCRIPTION: Uncle Dave Macon surrealism. Singer has been in the state house and the court house; he is broke from gambling. Chorus: "Railroadin' and gamblin'/Pickin' up chips for mammy/Lawd, lawd, lawd/Take your feet out the sand, stick 'em in the mud."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (recording, Uncle Dave Macon)
LONG DESCRIPTION: More Uncle Dave Macon surrealism. Singer has been in the state house (prison?) and the court house, and is broke from gambling despite his mother's advice. "Lawd, that preacher got, ain't that a sin/Johnny get your whiskers cut, here comes the wind." Chorus: "Railroadin' and gamblin'/Pickin' up chips for mammy/Lawd, lawd, lawd/Take your feet out the sand, stick 'em in the mud." You figure it out.

KEYWORDS: prison gambling railroading nonballad nonsense
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Uncle Dave Macon, "Railroadin' and Gamblin'" (Bluebird 8325, 1940; on RoughWays2)
NOTES [25 words]: Almost certainly of minstrel origin; a few lines are in dialect. While I use the keyword "nonsense," I suspect there was meaning in the song once. - PJS
File: RcUDRaG

Railroading on the Great Divide

DESCRIPTION: "Railroading on the Great Divide/Nothing around me but the Rockies and sky/There you'll find me as the years roll by...." Singer wanders the country before landing on the Great Divide, and tells of the rails and ties he has laid there.

AUTHOR: Sara Carter Bayes
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (record, A. P. Carter Family)
KEYWORDS: pride rambling travel railroading work nonballad worker
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 528-529, "Railroading on the Great Divide" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
A. P. Carter Family, "Railroading on the Great Divide" (Acme 992, 1952)
NOTES [234 words]: Seldom cited, composed after World War II, but it has attained sufficient circulation in the revival that I index it. - PJS
This has been credited to Janette Carter, who recorded it in 1952 with her brother Joe and her parents A. P. Carter and Sara Carter Bayes; indeed, it was listed as by Janette in the earlier editions of this index. But Cohen corresponded with Sara Carter Bayes about the composition, so I'm following his lead.
This was recorded as part of a brief reunion of A. P. and Sara Carter (strictly musical, of course), which produced a handful of sides for the Acme label. The reunion cuts were not particularly successful (according to John Atkins, article "The Carter Family" in Bill C. Malone and Judith McCulloh, "Stars of Country Music," p. 110, Acme was a small label with no distribution channel and significant quality control problems; he also regards the instrumentation as weak in the absence of Maybelle).
A. P. kept at it with Acme until 1956, but with little reward; this was just about the only memorable product of the sessions. Had they tried the reunion a decade or so later, the folk boom might well have carried them to success -- but A. P. died in 1960. - RBW
A. P., Sara, Joe, and Janette recorded again in 1956, cutting an LP for Pine Mountain Records of Barbourville, KY. This song was also on that album, and in a spoken aside Sara proclaims her authorship. - PJS
Last updated in version 4.3
File: RcR0TGD

Rain and Snow

DESCRIPTION: Singer's wife gives him trouble, runs him "out in the cold rain and snow." She comes downstairs combing her hair, saying she'll no longer be mistreated; he kills her (lays out the body, then trembles with cold fear)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: Early 1960s (recording, Obray Ramsay)
KEYWORDS: marriage violence crime homicide corpse death wife
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
Roud #3634
RECORDINGS:
Dillard Chandler, "Rain and Snow" (on Chandler01, DarkHoll)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Nine Hundred Miles" (tune)
cf. "Reuben's Train" (tune)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Cold Rain and Snow

NOTES [43 words]: The liner notes to Chandler's recording lump this with "Sporting Bachelors." I demur; that's a humorous cautionary tale, while this is a tragedy. - PJS
It seems to me I've heard this done with a somewhat humorous twist, but certainly it's a distinct song. - RBW

_Last updated in version 3.5_
File: RcRaAnSn

---

Rain Come Wet Me

DESCRIPTION: "Rain come wet me, Sun come dry me, Stand back, white man, Don't come a-nigh me."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: storm
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  * Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 490, "Rain Come Wet Me" (1 short text)
  * Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 490, "Rain Come Wet Me" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #11605
File: Br3490

---

Rain Fall and Wet Becca Lawton

DESCRIPTION: "Rain fall and wet (Becca Lawton) (x2) Oh, brother, cry holy. Been back holy, I must come slowly. Oh, brother cry holy." "Sun come and dry Becca Lawton." "Do, Becca Lawton, come to me yonder." "Say, brother Tony, what shall I do now?"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen, Ware, Garrison)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  * Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 21, "Rain Fall and Wet Becca Lawton" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11973
NOTES [64 words]: I have a funny feeling that, if we could actually go back and ask the composer about this, it would have something to do with Noah's flood. But it's only a feeling: neither the word "flood" nor the word "Noah" occurs in the Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates version, and at least one of their informants claimed it had to do with a "prophetess" who baptized in the rain. - RBW
_Last updated in version 2.4_
File: AWG021

---

Rain, Rain My Savior

DESCRIPTION: "Takes a holy man to join us in the army of the Lord (x2), O rain, rain a rain, my savior, Rain, rain, the Lord sent it down, O rain, rain a rain my savior, Rain, rain, the Lord sent it down." "So glad I ever started in the army of the Lord...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Chappell)
Rain, Rain, Go Away

DESCRIPTION: "Rain, rain, go away, Come again some other day." Additional stanzas may have additional suggestions

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (Opie & Opie); a probable ancestor quoted by Aubrey in 1687 and another by John Howell in 1659

KEYWORDS: nonballad

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 435, "Rain, rain, go away" (10 texts)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #443, p. 205, "(Rain, rain, go away)"
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 169, "Rain, Rain, Go Away" (1 text)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 167, "Rain, Rain, Go Away" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Peter and Iona Opie, _I Saw Esau: Traditional Rhymes of Youth_, #161, "(Rain, rain, go way)" (1 text)
Tony Deane and Tony Shaw _The Folklore of Cornwall_, B. T. Batsford, 1975, p. 50, "(Rain, rain, go away, For little Johnny wants to play)" (1 short text)

Roud #19096

NOTES [83 words]: My general assumption is that, if I learned something from other kids, with a tune, then it qualifies as "folk song." By that definition, this fits, silly as it is.

Aubrey's 1687 version, as quoted by the Baring-Goulds, is Raine, raine, goe away,
Come again a Saterday.

Howell's version, quoted by the Opies, is Raine, raine, go to Spain,
Faire weather come againe.

The Opies even quote a classical Greek text begging the sun to come out. However, it doesn't mention rain, and is surely unrelated. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: BGGM443

Rainbow Division

DESCRIPTION: "And I'm one among the dying, A youth, not yet a man, From the old Rainbow Division, And a boy from Dixieland. His brother knelt beside him to hear what he might say." He asks that a message be sent to mother

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)

KEYWORDS: soldier death mother

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 736, "Rainbow Division" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [83 words]: According to William Rose Benet, editor, _The Reader's Encyclopedi_, first edition, 1948 (I use the four-volume Crowell edition, whihch I usually check it against the single volume fifth edition, but this entry was deleted, p. 904, the Rainbow Division was "The name of the 42nd Division of the United States Army which was made up of National Guard troops from all over the country. They were the first American troops in combat in World War I. Their insigne was a rainbow on a black field." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1

File: BrS5736
Raining Raining Raining (Grousing, Marching, Starving)

DESCRIPTION: "Raining, raining, raining, Always bloody well raining, Raining all the morning, And raining all the day," "Grousing... Always bloody well grousing, Grousing a the rations, And grousing at the pay." "Marching...." "When the war is over ... march no more"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang)
KEYWORDS: soldier hardtimes food travel
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, p. 45, "Raining" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10553
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Grousing
Marching, Marching, Marching
File: BrPa045B

Raise 'Em Up Higher

DESCRIPTION: "Raise 'em up higher, higher, drop 'em down (c3), Never know the difference when the sun goes down." "Twenty-one hammers fallin' in a line (x3), Nobody's hammer, buddy, ring-a like mine." The singer hopes his girl hears him and talks of work

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (various recordings from prisoners made by Bruce Jackson)
KEYWORDS: prison hardtimes separation
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 275-280, "Raise 'Em Up Higher" (5 texts, 2 tunes)
NOTES [23 words]: As with so much in Jackson, these songs are grouped rather arbitrarily, and some might perhaps be split off or lumped with other songs. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.4
File: JDM275

Raise a Ruckus

DESCRIPTION: A slave is told by his mistress that he would be freed when she died. The promise is long in coming true, and at last the singer takes things in his own hand. Having set off (down?)river, he intends to "raise a ruckus tonight."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1919 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: slave freedom escape party
FOUND IN: US(SE,So)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 499, "Raise a Ruckus Tonight" (2 texts plus 2 fragments; the "A" text, however, is "I'll Build Me a Boat")
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 499, "Raise a Ruckus Tonight" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 26, "Raise a Rukus" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 253-254, "Raise a Rukus Tonight" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 299, "Raise A Ruckus Tonight" (1 text)
Roud #10054
RECORDINGS:
Charlie Bowman & his Brothers, "Gonna Raise the Ruckus Tonight" (Columbia 15357-D, 1929; rec. 1928)
Warren Caplinger's Cumberland Mountain Entertainers, "G'wine to Raise a Rucas Tonight" (Vocalion 5222, 1928)
Carlisle Brothers (Cliff and Bill), "Gonna Raise a Ruckus Tonight" (Decca 5774, 1939/Minerva M-14158, c. 1941)
Bill Chitwood & his Georgia Mountaineers, "Raise Rough House Tonight" (OKeh 45236, 1928)
Raise Your Hands If They Are Clean

DESCRIPTION: "Raise your hands if they are clean, By your teacher to be seen; Raise them higher, turn them slow. They're almost white as snow."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Stout-FolkloreFromIowa); said to have been learned in 1895

KEYWORDS: nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 103, pp. 127-133, "Early Iowa School Songs" (11 texts, of which "F" is this song)

Roud #21643

File: Stou103F

Rakes of Mallow, The

DESCRIPTION: "Beauing, belleing, dancing, drinking, Breaking windows, damning, sinking, Ever raking, never thinking, Live the rakes of Mallow." This self-centered life continues until "they get sober, take a wife, Ever after live in strife"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1839 (Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)

KEYWORDS: drink party wine rake

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (4 citations):
O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 93, "The Rakes of Mallow" (1 text)
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 249-250, "The Rakes of Mallow" (1 text)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 164, "The Rakes of Mallow" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sandy Lent the Man His Mull" (tune, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
SAME TUNE:
Old Parson Brown ("Not long ago, in our town") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 116)
NOTES [95 words]: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland: "In 1750, Dr Smith thus describes Mallow, which was then a very fashionable watering-place:'... Here is generally a resort of good company during the summer months, both for pleasure and the benefit of drinking the waters....'"
Sparling: "Eighteenth century. The 'Rakes' were the sons of the Protestant gentlemen who frequented the 'waters' of Mallow." - BS
Broadside Bodleian, Harding B 40(11), "The Rakes of Mallow" ("Beauing, belling dancing, Rakes of Poverty, The

DESCRIPTION: Irish variant on "The Son of a Gambolier." The singer describes himself as "the rambling rakes of poverty... the son of a gambaleer." He likes drink, and lives shabbily, in used clothes and shoes. He wishes he had drink and sugar for all

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: drink rambling poverty
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H741, p. 50, "The Rakes of Poverty" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, SONGAMB2*
Roud #2964

BROADSIDES:
LOCSinging, as109580, "New Orleans Song of the Times" ("I am a rambling rake of poverty"), unknown, no date
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Son of a Gambolier (I)" (tune) and references there
SAME TUNE:
The Freight Handlers' Strike ("It was at Cooper's Institute, Jack Burke and I chanced to meet") (by Andrew A. Walls) (Foner, p. 238, with a broadside print on p. 240)
NOTES [25 words]: This is so close to "The Son of a Gambolier" that I'm tempted to list them as one song. But they're usually listed as separate, so here it stands. - RBW

Rakes of Stony Batter, The

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you roving blades, that ramble thro the City" our time is coming to have our way with women. Lots of sexual symbolism. "Come let us take a roam, up to Stony Batter, Keep your Wife at home, for humpers will be at her"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan7); 19C (broadside, Holloway and Black)
KEYWORDS: bawdy nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1455, "Hey for Stoney Batter" (1 fragment)
Roud #7153
NOTES [34 words]: Greig/Duncan7 is a fragment; Holloway and Black, Later English Broadside Ballads (Volume 1) 99, pp. 223-225 is the basis for the description.
Holloway and Black: "Stony Batter is a quarter of Dublin." - BS

Raleigh Song, The

DESCRIPTION: "What do we do when we leave the Raleigh? (x3), Early in the morning." "Run like hell for the nearest station." "Catch a train to civilization." "Run like hell to the nearest boozer." "Drink to the health of the boys of the Raleigh"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: ship sailor navy travel drink derivative
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Rally-Roh

DESCRIPTION: Gerry Foley's stormy adventure while hunting an otter bring him to the attention of a "big vessel" captain. The captain tries but fails to lure Gerry to sea and is scolded by Gerry's wife.

AUTHOR: George Curtin (source: OCanainn-SongsOfCork)

EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (OCanainn-SongsOfCork)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Gerry Foley tried kill a "water dog" [otter], but it escaped into the river. Gerry built a boat, loaded his rifle, and chased after the otter. After three weeks rowing he survived a gale, headed back to town, but ran into a rock on his way home. A captain of "a big vessel," having heard of the adventure, came to Gerry's home and offered Gerry money, land and mansion to go with him to sea. When Gerry refused the offer the captain took offense, saying "I came here for you all the ways from Kinsale, And allow me to tell you, I'm not going to fail" Gerry's wife Joan -- "as you know she is wicked and terrible bold" -- scolded the captain.

KEYWORDS: river storm wreck talltale animal wife

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCanainn-SongsOfCork, pp. 54-55, 122, "Rally-Roh" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [119 words]: OCanainn-SongsOfCork: "A typical composition of George Curtin who picked on a minor incident that happened to his neighbor Ger Foley. The hard facts of the case were that Ger spotted an otter in the river and tried to kill it. George heard of the incident and transformed the simple event into a saga ....."

This is a ballad in the not-exclusively-Irish tradition of river and canal boat tall tales like "The Clonmel Flood" and "The Wreck of the Gwendoline." In this case we are in on the ship-building phase as well as the sinking.

The sea captain had come all the way from Kinsale, about 14 miles as the gull flies, to recruit Gerry.

The title is from the chorus: "Rally-Roh Fal-de-dah Rally Roh fal-di-dee." - BS

File: OCan054

Rally, Boys, Rally (I)

DESCRIPTION: "Lead your partner up and down, I thought I heard them say, Lead your partner... I thought I heard....." "Rally, boys, rally, I thought I heard them say...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi)

KEYWORDS: dancetune nonballad

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 150, p. 295, "Rally, Boys, Rally" (1 short text)
Roud #4508
Rally, Boys, Rally (II)

DESCRIPTION: "Rally, boys, rally, the day is come at last (x2), Colored population can walk without a pass." "Had me an old shotgun, I called her Number One, Shot it at the rebels, you ought to see them run."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1954 (collected from Willard Keen by Boswell)

KEYWORDS: Civilwar Black(s)

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 56, pp. 94-95, "Rally, Boys, Rally" (1 short text, 1 tune)

Roud #11031

NOTES [57 words]: There are two traditional songs entitled "Rally, Boys, Rally" -- one from Mississippi, printed in Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi; one from Tennessee, printed by Wolfe from Boswell’s Tennessee collection. Both are very short, so it is possible that they are one song -- but the only words they have in common are the line "Rally, Boys, Rally." - RBW

Last updated in version 2.6

File: Hud150

Ram Song (II), The

DESCRIPTION: Pius bought a small, thin ram from Jenny. The boys play cards for the ram "but playing cards for rams in Lent -- it was a mortal sin." The ram grows big and fat and is slaughtered "to pay the boys to plow up the old graveyard"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland)

KEYWORDS: cards humorous animal

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland, p. 97, "The Ram Song" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #12451

NOTES [21 words]: Did something drop out of this song in which one of the gamblers dies? Until we find another version, we can hardly tell. - RBW

File: Dib097

Rambleaway

DESCRIPTION: Young man meets young woman. He says he's known as "Rambleaway" (after his wandering habit). In some versions the last verse cautions girls about men like him; in others the woman slips away, and he rambles around searching for her in vain.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1845 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3575))

KEYWORDS: courting rambling warning pregnancy

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South,North),Scotland(Aber)) US(NE)

REFERENCES (10 citations):
Greig/Duncan7 1485, "Ramble Away" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 31, "Sweet Kitty" ; 75, "Brimbledon Fair, or, Young Ramble-Away" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 166, "Ramble-away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 683, "Rambleaway" (1 text)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 32, "Derry Down Fair" (2 texts)
Rambler from Clare, The

DESCRIPTION: The rambler tells of beginning his career in the (County Tyrone), where (the women) first dubbed him the Rambler from Clare. Captured (by the English, he faces a stiff sentence) but escapes to America (and continues to pursue the women)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1867 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3218)); beginning 19C

KEYWORDS: rambling emigration

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) US(NE) Ireland

REFERENCES (6 citations):
- OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 68, "The Rambler from Clare" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 20, "The Rambler from Clare" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 46, "The Rambler from Clare" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 59, "The Rambler from Clare" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1961, p. 132, "The Rambler from Clare" (1 reference)

DT, RMBLCLAR

Roud #1531

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Harding B 11(3218), "The Rambler From Clare," J. Harkness (Preston), 1840-1866; also Harding B 11(3219), 2806 b.11(9), 2806 c.15(250), 2806 b.9(267)[some words illegible], Harding B 19(9)[some words illegible], Harding B 11(3217), Harding B 26(553), 2806 c.15(184), 2806 c.15(327), 2806 b.11(14), "The Rambler From Clare"
- Murray, Mu23-y1:008, "The Rambler From Clair," unknown, 19C; also Mu23-y4:026, "Rambler From Clare"
- NLSScotland, RB.m.169(104), "The Rambler from Clair," Robert M'Intosh (address obliterated), c.1855

NOTES [55 words]: In some texts, the rambler is an Irish rebel, and is forced to flee Ireland to escape prosecution. In others, he is a deserter from the English army. In many versions, however, he is just a young man out to have as much fun with the ladies as possible.
Rambler Song
DESCRIPTION: "He rambled across the seas, to see the first line (front line?) French, And there were all the Kapps Sigs, a-gossiping in French; And what they had to say that day is more than I can tell, But they all did promise faithfully to give the Kaiser hell."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Henry, from Dr. Finis K. Farr)
KEYWORDS: war travel France
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 250, "Rambler Song" (1 fragment)
NOTES [29 words]: I suspect this is a World War I version of "The Rambling Wreck from Georgia Tech" or a related song, but with only one stanza and no tune, I can't actually equate them. - RBW

Rambling Boy (III), The
DESCRIPTION: Jack the sailor and his girl spend the night and stop in a Green Street tavern where he is beaten by "turks and heathens." He is taken and "transported for theivery" to Van Diemans Land. Now in "transport blue," he will write her a letter if she is true.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (IRRCinnamond03)
KEYWORDS: sex fight farewell theft transportation unemployment sailor
FOUND IN: Ireland
ST RcRCTRaY (Full)
Roud #3083
RECORDINGS:
Robert Cinnamond, "The Rambling Youth" (on IRRCinnamond03)
NOTES [131 words]: The description is based on John Moulden's transcription from IRRCinnamond03 included in the Traditional Ballad Index Supplement. There appear to be missing pieces to the story. The text says Jack "can find no employ" [is a robbery missing at this point?] and he "took ... flight" with his "darling"; after their night together "she proved my overthrow." Were the "turks [cruel men] and heathens" in the tavern police? - BS More likely they are Catholics, I think. According to Eric Partridge's A Dictionary of Slang and Unconventional English, a "Turk" was a gutter word for Irishmen. If "Turk" is used in that sense, it seems reasonable to assume that Jack is English, and Protestant, and is claiming to have been attacked by Irish Catholics. No doubt a convenient excuse.... - RBW

Rambling Comber, The
DESCRIPTION: "You combers all, both great and small, come listen to my ditty." He is proud to be able to read, drink and fight; his failing is "I love strong beer; I am a rambling comber." He could comb "A dozen of wool," but his clothes are ragged; he seeks a girl
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (Lucy Broadwood collection)
KEYWORDS: work drink clothes
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #13, The Rambling Comber" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1473
File: PECS013
Rambling Irishman (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "I am a rambling Irishman, in Ulster I was born," but being poor, he leaves Lough Erne for Amerikay. He spends his last night with his darling. On his way, he dreams of his Nancy. When he arrives in Philadelphia, he urges every lad to "link with his lass"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 2010 (Graham-Joe-Holmes-SongsMusicTraditionsOfAnUlsterman)

KEYWORDS: love emigration separation dream

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Graham-Joe-Holmes-SongsMusicTraditionsOfAnUlsterman 63, "The Rambling Irishman" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Roud #3572
- File: GrHo063

Rambling Miner, The

DESCRIPTION: "I'm only a rambling miner, I work where I like best, In the coal mines of Kentucky, Or the copper mines in the west." But wherever he goes, the singer is gambling his life in the mines. He says he is doing it "So that the women and kids may eat."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)

KEYWORDS: mining rambling nonballad

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, p. 248, "The Rambling Miner" (1 text)

NOTES [32 words]: It is rather unfortunate that Thomas did not preserve a tune for this piece. The first two stanzas appear to be built upon "The Roving Gambler," but the final two look like something else. - RBW

File: ThBa248A

Rambling Round

DESCRIPTION: Singer describes rambling around cities and towns, and his life as a migrant fruit picker. He wishes he could settle down, but "I am just a refugee/As I go rambling round, boys."

AUTHOR: Woody Guthrie

EARLIEST DATE: 1940s (recording, Woody Guthrie)

KEYWORDS: loneliness rambling work worker migrant

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 118, "Rambling Blues" (1 text, 1 tune)
- DT, GORAM6B

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Goodnight, Irene" (tune)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- Rambling Round Your City
- As I Go Rambling 'Round

NOTES [36 words]: This song verges on the status of an autobiography of Woody Guthrie, and to the best of my knowledge has never been found in tradition. The tune is an adaption of Huddie "Lead Belly" Ledbetter's "Goodnight Irene." - RBW

File: CSW118

Rambling Soldier (I), The

DESCRIPTION: Soldier (sailor) describes the joys of rambling the countryside (of England): "I once was a seaman stout and bold, Ofttimes I plowed the ocean... For honor and promotion." In some versions he brags that he has a license to ramble, granted by the king.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1839 (broadside, Bodleian Johnson Ballads 256); c. 1817 (Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle broadside transcription)
KEYWORDS: rambling nonballad sailor soldier injury
FOUND IN: US(SE) Britain(England(Lond,South),Scotland(Aber)) Australia
REFERENCES (20 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 367, "The Jolly Soldier" (1 fragment plus mention of 1 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 367, "The Jolly Soldier" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #235, "Billy, the Rambling Soldier" (1 text)
Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 43, "The Rambling Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 85, "The Rambling Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Butterworth/Dawney-PloughboysGlory, p. 36, "The Rambling Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 684, "Rambling Sailor" (1 text)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 109, "The Rambling Sailor" (2 texts)
Browne-FolkSongsOfOldHampshire, pp. 63-65, "I'm a Bold and Rambling Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #110, "The Rambling Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hamer-GarnersGay, pp. 12-13, "The Rambling Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #16, "Rambling Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 174-175, "The Rambling Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan7 1477, "The Rovin' Sailor" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 326, "Dicky Johnston, or, The Roving Sailor" (1 short text)
Hamer-GarnersGay, "The Rambling Soldier" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 50-51, "The Rambling Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 92, "The Rambling Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Forget-Me-Not-Songster, pp. 110-111, "The Rambling Soldier" (1 text)
DT, RAMBSAIL* (RMBSAIL2*)
Roud #518
RECORDINGS:
Chris Willett, "The Rambling Sailor" (on Voice12)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 256, "The Rambling Sailor" ("I am a sailor stout and bold, long time I have ploughed the ocean"), J. Catnach (London), 1813-1838; also Firth c.12(275), Johnson Ballads 1230, Harding B 11(1670), Firth b.25(378), Harding B 11(3226), Harding B 11(4288), Harding B 15(250b), Johnson Ballads 966, Johnson Ballads 559, Harding B 20(142), Firth b.34(302), [The] Rambling Sailor; Harding B 11(3228), [The] Rambling Soldier ("I am a soldier blithe and gay"), W. and T. Fordyce (Newcastle), 1832-1842; Firth b.26(329), Harding B 11(835), Harding B 16(221a), Harding B 11(3227), Harding B 15(251a), Harding B 15(251b), Harding B 15(252a), Harding B 20(143), Harding B 17(251a), "Rambling Soldier"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Rambling Comber"

NOTES [180 words]: Sharp notes that on the older broadsides, the rambler was a soldier; in the newer ones, he is a sailor. - PJS
Sharp may be right about which version is the older. The Bodleian broadsides give no clear-cut answer; however, Harding B 16(221a), "Rambling Soldier" lists the tune as "Rambling Sailor"; it also lists the author as John Morgan. - BS
In Brown's version (which is only two stanzas), it appears that he is a sailor who later enlists in the American Revolutionary army. This may be a rewrite, but the text it too short to be sure.
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads's text says that the sailor has been granted a license to beg because he has lost a limb. Ordinarily I would consider this a significant enough distinction to split the songs, but the rest is the same; the lost limb appears (or fails to appear, perhaps) in only a single line. Exactly the same is true of Hamer's hort text (which Roud files separately under the number #21266). Perhaps a mixture with something like "The Forfar Soldier," or even a case of an injured veteran adopting the piece to his own case? - RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File: ShH43

Rambling Soldier (II), The DESCRIPTION: "I am a rambling soldier, From (Tipperary) come to (France), And poverty compelled my To fall out into ranks." "Cold weather is approaching, And I have no clothes to pack... They are all upon my back." The singer tells how he acquired his ragged outfit

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1862 (Fred May's Comic Irish Songster, according to Brown)
KEYWORDS: clothes soldier rambling
FOUND IN: US(SE,Ap)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 369, "The Rambling Soldier" (1 text)
  Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 54, pp. 91-92, "The Rambling Soldier" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #11032
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Son of a Gambolier (I)"
NOTES [156 words]: The notes in Brown quote the Fred May's Comic Irish Songster version, in which the singer apparently sailed from Tipperary and now is selling song sheets of the song. They suggest it as the ancestor of "The Son of a Gambolier (I)" -- with which song I lumped it until the second traditional version, in the Boswell collection, turned up.

It is interesting to note that neither the Brown nor Boswell versions have preserved the name "Tipperary" (Brown makes the singer's home "Tripling"; in Boswell, it's "Tiplin Cain"), but both have him go to France. This obviously suggests that the hero of the song, originally a poor emigrant, has enlisted in the British army. Since the song cannot be traced before 1862, and the last time British troops fought against the French was in 1815, I wonder if there might not have been a (lost) version in which the singer enlisted in the British army in World War I and ended up in the trenches. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.6
File: Br3369

Randy Dandy O

DESCRIPTION: Capstan or pumps shanty. Chorus: "Heave a pawl, o heave away. Way ay roll an' go. The anchor's on board an' the cable's all stored, timme rollockin' randy dandy o." Rhyming verses about sailing and women.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Robinson)
KEYWORDS: shanty sailor
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar) US
REFERENCES (4 citations):
  Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 116, "Galloping Randy Dandy O!" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 167-168, "Randy Dandy O" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, p. 135]
  DT, RANDDAND*
Roud #4702
NOTES [19 words]: Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas says that he and his sources cleaned this one up a good deal before printing. - SL
File: Hugi167

Rangey Ribs, The

DESCRIPTION: Patrick Cowley deals in cattle. He recalls the sickly scrawney "Rangey Ribs" Mickey Dubh sold to him as a thoroughbred. Pat couldn't sell him. His only use was to hang the wash. But when he died neighbors came to the burial from miles around

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen)
KEYWORDS: death commerce humorous animal
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen 58, "The Rangey Ribs" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [48 words]: McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen: "The song is well known in other parts of the country and has been recorded extensively in Co. Clare. Place names matter not. The song is part of the genre popular throughout the country in which broken down cattle are ridiculed." - BS
File: McB1058

Ransum Scansum
DESCRIPTION: "Ransum scansum, through yonder, Bring me a gourd to drink water. Dis way out and t'other way in, In my lady's chamber, Dis way out and t'other way in, In my lady's chamber." AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 131, "Ransum Scansum" (2 short texts, 1 tune; the second fragment has no title, but probably should be called "Aransom Shansom")
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Do, Do, Pity My Case" (lyrics) and references there
File: ScaNF131

Ranter Parson, The
DESCRIPTION: "It is of a sly ranter parson, For preaching he lived in great fame,.. but I must not mention his name." The parson desires a farmer's wife. The wife offers to sleep with him but slips a swarm of bees into the bed; he is left lovelorn and much bestung
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Vaughan Williams)
KEYWORDS: infidelity sex clergy husband wife trick bug injury humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #89, "The Ranter Parson" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2530
NOTES [56 words]: The similarity to Chaucer's "Merchant's Tale" will presumably be obvious, although this sort of trick is so common in folklore that there is no need to presume dependence. I suspect a recent broadside source, given the length of the piece and the fact that the informant said he often learned songs from (presumably printed) "ballets." - RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: VWP089

Rantin Willie Mair's Wife
DESCRIPTION: "Rantin Willie Mair's wife's awa wi' young MacKeelikin." She would not have been so foolish, says the singer, if she had been beaten when they met.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: infidelity marriage violence nonballad abandonment
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan6 1214, "Rantin Willie Mair's Wife" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6771
NOTES [20 words]: Greig/Duncan6: "Said to refer to a local person whose wife eloped with a military man, returned, and went away again." - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD61214

Rantin' Auld Maid, The
DESCRIPTION: The singer, "a rantin' old maid," goes to a singing class to catch a man. One asks her questions: which way do you go home; what's your lover like; what's your name; am I the lad you love? She answers each and says, at last, "ye've guessed richt noo"

Rantin' Laddie, The [Child 240]

DESCRIPTION: The lady has "played at the cards and the dice" with the rantin' laddie; now she has a child and is scorned. She sends a letter to the rantin' laddie -- who proves to be the Earl of Aboyne. He marries her and all are happy

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1803 (Skene ms.)

KEYWORDS: love courting marriage adultery bastard cards

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) US(Ap,NE)

REFERENCES (11 citations):

Child 240, "The Rantin' Laddie" (4 texts)

Bronson 240, "The Rantin' Laddie" (6 versions+1 in addenda)

Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 240, "The Rantin Laddie" (3 versions: #1, #3, #5)

Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #154, pp. 1-2, "The Rantin Laddie"; #156, pp. 2-3, "The Rantin Laddie" (3 texts plus 2 fragments)

Greig/Duncan5 976, "The Rantin Laddie" (5 texts plus two fragments from Greig on p. 604, 3 tunes)

Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-BritishBalladsFromMaine pp. 303-304, "The Rantin' Laddie" (1 fragment, 1 tune, a single "Rantin' Laddie" stanza with a "hush-a-bye" chorus perhaps from the mother to her bastard baby) {Bronson's #6}

Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, pp. 78-79, "The Rantin' Laddie" (1 text, 1 tune)

Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 597-598, "The Rantin' Laddie" (2 texts)

Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates 35, pp. 127-128, "The Rantin Laddie" (1 text)

Buchan-ABookOfScottishBallads 57, "The Rantin Laddie" (1 text)

DT 240, RANTNLAD*”

RECORDINGS:

Willie Mathieson, "The Bonny Rantin' Laddie" [fragment] (on FSBBAL2) {Bronson's #5.1}

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Binorie" (tune, per Greig/Duncan5)

ALTERNATE TITLES:

Aboyne's Bonnie Lady

NOTES [15 words]: The "rant" is a dance step, now found chiefly in Northumberland and surrounding areas. - PJS

`Last updated in version 4.2`

File: C240

Rantin', Roarin', Drunk on the Way

DESCRIPTION: Singer tells of getting drunk with his friends (all of whom he names) on the way to the lumber camp at Upyongo. At the end of the season, at home, they reminisce about how they got "drunk on the way."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks)

KEYWORDS: drink moniker logger

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 65, "Rattlin', Roarin', Drunk on the Way" (1 text)

Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 114, "Drunk on the Way" (1 text)
Ranting Highlandman, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets a Highlandman whose appearance and smile "my favour wan." He asks that she marry and "wee'l big a cot an buy a stock an do the best that ere we can." She expects him to return "though all my kin should scauld an ban" and she'd go with him.

AUTHOR: John Hamilton (1761-1814) (source: Whitelaw)

EARLIEST DATE: 1843 (Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong)

KEYWORDS: courting farming family

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan4 860, "The Rantin' Hielanman" (2 texts, 3 tunes)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, p. 110, "The Rantin' Hielanman" (1 text)

Roud #6253

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Rantin' Highlandman

NOTES [59 words]: GregDuncan4: "From Mary Duffus, servant, about 1852. Noted 1905." - BS

Apparently broadside Bodleian, 2806 c.11(21), "The Ranting Highlandman" ("Ae morn last owk, as I gaed out"), Sanderson (Edinburgh), 1830-1910 is this song but I could not download and verify it [though the words I could make out in the reduced image make the identity very likely]. - BS

Last updated in version 3.2

File: GrD4860

Ranzo Ray

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. First refrain "Ranzo, Ranzo, hurray, hurray" (or "away, away), second refrain usually "Hilo me Ranzo ray." Verses tell of destinations and cargos, i.e. "we're bound for Yokohammer, with a load o' grand pianners."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys)

KEYWORDS: shanty ship commerce travel

FOUND IN: Britain US

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 247-249, "Ranzo Ray" (3 texts, 3 tunes) [AbEd, pp. 179-182]
Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, XIX, p. 22, "The Bully Boat" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #327

CROSS-REFERENCES:
ct. "Huckleberry Hunting" (similar refrain)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Rando Ray

NOTES [31 words]: Bone, in his notes to "Reuben Ranzo," was of the opinion that the word "Ranzo" somehow seemed to suit the action of hauling, which might explain its use in both this song and that. - RBW

File: Hugi247
Rap 'Er to Bank
DESCRIPTION: "Rap 'er to bank, me canny lad! Wind 'er away, keep tornin! The bac-shift men are gannin' hyme...." The canaller recalls his father's life on the canal, and how he died in a fall of stones. The singer, too, is leaving the canal.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (Raven)
KEYWORDS: canal work death father
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Jon Raven, _Victoria's Inferno: Songs of the Old Mills, Mines, Manufacturies, Canals, and Railways_, Roadside Press, 1978, pp. 74-75, "Rap 'Er to Bank" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1786
File: JRVi074

Rap At The Door, A
DESCRIPTION: A rake visits a girl but his reputation as womanizer has preceded him. He gets no sympathy from her for a supposed injury. She says her parents would beat her if she introduced him. She will not be his next victim. He feels slighted but not heart-broken.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1869 (Logan-APedlarsPack)
KEYWORDS: courting dialog humorous nightvisit father mother rake
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Logan-APedlarsPack, pp. 363-364, "Indifference" or "A Rap at the Door" (1 text)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #139, pp. 1-2, "Rap at the Door" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan4 780, "Open the Door" (3 fragments, 3 tunes)
ST GrD4780 (Partial)
Roud #6124
NOTES [114 words]: Greig: "We have at one time or another got bits of this song along with a record of the tune; but in default of a complete copy we have fallen back on the version given in Logan's Pedlar's Pack of Ballads."
This ballad shares the text, but not the meaning, of the following lines with "A-Growing" [Laws O35]: "The trees are high, the leaves are green, The days are past that we have seen." In this song the woman sings these lines gleefully.
The insults to the rake in the text are not sufficiently hinted at in the description. For example, "O young man, I value you not, Altho' the hangman had your coat ... And yourself in a bottomless boat, With the Devil to row you ashore." - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD4780

Rarden Wreck of 1893, The
DESCRIPTION: A train heads for Cincinnati, but the engineer dies at Rarden station after jumping from the train when he saw an open switch. The fireman is crushed in the wreck. Chorus: "Did he ever come back? No, he never came back. His fate was easily learned...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1993
KEYWORDS: train wreck disaster death
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Grimes-StoriesFromTheAnneGrimesCollection, pp. 121-122, "Rarden Wreck" (1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, p. 215, "The Rarden Wreck of 1893" (1 text, filed with "The Wreck of the Old 97")
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Ship that Never Returned" [Laws D27] (tune & meter) and references there
cf. "The Train that Never Returned" (tune, theme)
File: DarNS215
Rare Clonmel

DESCRIPTION: The singer is leaving his home in Clonmel. He thinks of the places there he loved. "In ev'ry fight for Erin's right, Foul tyranny to quell, First in the field and last to yield Are the boys of Rare Clonmel!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE:

KEYWORDS: farewell home lyric nonballad patriotic

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 20B, "Rare Clonmel" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #9778

NOTES [20 words]: Clonmel is on the river Suir, South Tipperary. OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads has no information about the song. - BS

File: OLCM020B

Rare Willie Drowned in Yarrow, or, The Water o Gamrie [Child 215]

DESCRIPTION: Willie drowns in the (Yarrow). (Details of how and why vary greatly). His lover dreams a dream of woe. She sets out and finds Willie's body, and uses her hair to pull him from the water. In many accounts she (promises to) die for sorrow

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1733

KEYWORDS: death mourning courting drowning

FOUND IN: Britain(England,Scotland(Aber,Bord)) US(MW,So) Canada Ireland

REFERENCES (20 citations):
Child 215, "Rare Willie Drowned in Yarrow, or, The Water o Gamrie" (9 texts)
Bronson 215, "Rare Willie Drowned in Yarrow, or, The Water o Gamrie" (9 versions)
Chambers-ScottishBallads, pp. 152-153, "Willie's Drowned in Yarrow" (1 text); also pp. 154-155, "The Braes of Yarrow" (a "modern ballad" on this theme by Rev. John Logan)
Dixon-ScottishTraditionalVersionsOfAncientBallads XII, pp. 66-67, "The Water o' Gamery" (1 text)
Buchan/Moreira-TheGlenbuchatBallads, pp. 22-24, "The Water of Gamery" (1 text)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #113, pp. 1-2, "Willie's Drowned in Gamerie" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan6 1227, "Willie's Lost at Gamery" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Abrahams/Riddle-ASingerAndHerSongs, pp. 124-126, "Rare Willie Drowned in Yarrow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 22, "Rare Willie Drowned in Yarrow" (1 text, 1 tune, erroneously listed as Child 214) {Bronson's #4}
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 571-572, "Rare Willie Drowned in Yarrow, or, The Water o Gamrie" (1 text)
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 99, "The Braes o' Yarrow" (1 text which is mostly Child 214 but incorporates parts of Child 215)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 454-455, "Willie's Drowned at Gamerie" (1 text)
Fowke/MacMillan-PenguinBookOfCanadianFolkSongs 78, "Willie Drowned in Ero" (1 text, 1 tune)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 229-230, "Willie's Drowned in Gamery" (1 text)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 93, "Rare Willie Drowned in Yarrow" (1 text)
Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 62, "Rare Willie Drowned in Yarrow" (1 text)
DT 215, YARROW2* YARROW3*

ADDITIONAL: Peter Buchan, Ancient Ballads and Songs of the North of Scotland_ (Edinburgh, 1828 ("Digitized by Microsoft")), Vol I, pp. 245-248, 315, "Willie's Drowned in Gamery" (1 text)
W. Christie, editor, Traditional Ballad Airs (Edinburgh, 1876 (downloadable pdf by University of Edinburgh, 2007)), Vol I, pp. 64-65, "Willie's Drowned in Yarrow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; notes to #425, "But think na' ye my heart was sair?" (1 text)

Roud #206

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Dowie Dens o' Yarrow" [Child 214]
cf. "Susan Strayed on the Briny Beach" [Laws K19] (plot)
cf. "Willie's Drowned in Gamerie" (story)
cf. "Willie Drowned in Yarrow" (story)
Alternates Titles:
Willie's Rare

Notes: Several scholars, among them Norman Cazden, have claimed that this song is the same as Child 214, "The Dowie Dens o Yarrow/The Braes o Yarrow." Certainly there has been exchange of verses. However, I (following Leach), would maintain that there is a difference: "The Dowie Dens" is about opposition to a marriage; "Willie Drowned" is about the loss of a love. A brief summary of the whole discussion is found in Coffin's notes in Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland. It's not clear what he believes, except that the two songs are a mess and quite mixed. Which can hardly be denied.

Palgrave's Golden Treasury includes a piece (item CLXIII) titled "The Braes of Yarrow," credited to J. Logan, which is clearly built upon this theme -- but it looks like a literary rewrite. Palgrave's next item (CLXIV), "Willy Drowned in Yarrow," is the real thing, though probably somewhat touched up by his (unnamed) source.

Child lists "Annan Water" as an appendix to this ballad, though it appears to me that, if it's related to any of the Child ballads, it's #216, "The Mother's Malison, or, Clyde's Water." - RBW

Greig: "These two ballads ['Willie's Drowned in Yarrow' from Whitelaw's text, and 'Willie's Drowned in Gamerie' from Buchan's text] have got mixed up to some extent; but they are in the main so different that it is not easy accounting for the connection." And there is also Greig #87 "Willie's Drowned in Gamerie," indexed by that name, of which Greig's correspondent says, "it can have no connection with the 'Willy's Drowned in Gamrie,' as given in Buchan's Ballads of the North, nor yet the Lovers who were drowned in Clyde's Waters."

Buchan is Greig's source. Buchan has the story (also quoted by Child): "The unfortunate hero of this ballad, was a factor to the laird of Kinmundy. As the young woman to whom he was to be united in connubial wedlock resided in Gamery, a small fishing town on the east coast of the Murray Frith, the marriage was to be solemnized in the church of that parish, to which he was on his way, when overtaken by some of the heavy breakers which overflow a part of the road he had to pass, and dash, with impetuous fury, against the lofty and adamantine rocks with which it is skirted. The young damsel, in her fifteenth year, also met with a watery grave, being the wages of her mother's malison. This ballad will remind the reader of the Drowned Lovers, who shared the same fate in the river Clyde [see Child 216, 'The Mother's Malison, or, Clyde's Water']."

Re Greig's comment above, compare Buchan's text to Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, p. 456, "Willie's Drowned in Yarrow," cited for "Willie Drowned in Yarrow." - BS

_Rashy Muir, The_

Description: The singer recalls making love in the hills one night and helping his sweetheart to dress. When they got to town "I saw another did my love attend". "Wid ye forsake a' yere former vows An break the heart o a lover true?" She would, maybe for money.

Author: unknown

Earliest Date: before 1894 (Murison collection, according to Lyle, _Fairies and Folk_)

Keywords: courting, infidelity, sex, promise, floating verses

Found In: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

References:
- Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #118, p. 2, "The Rashie Moor" (1 text); #121, p. 2, "The Rashie Moor" (1 text plus 1 fragment)
- Greig/Duncan6 1215, "The Rashy Muir" (4 texts, 3 tunes)
- Roud #6261

Alternate Titles:
- O Will Ye Gang, Love, and Leave Me Noo?
- Will Ye Gang, Love

Notes: Greig/Duncan6: "Noted by George F. Duncan from mother's singing in 1875." The most common floating verse in the Greig/Duncan6 texts is "I lent my back against an oak I thought it was a trusty tree But first it bowed an then it break And so has my false love to me." - BS

_Last updated in version 2.6_
Raspberry Tart, The
DESCRIPTION: "She was a raspberry tart In her little poke bonnet, With a great big bunch Of thing-a-mees upon it; With a pinafore dress That was just the thing And a little toy dog On the end of a string... Bow wow!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1982
KEYWORDS: nonballad dog clothes
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, p. 29, "The Raspberry Tart" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [8 words]: Reportedly a fragment of a music hall song. - RBW
File: MCB029

Raspberry, Strawberry
DESCRIPTION: "Raspberry, strawberry, (Blackberry/Gooseberry Jam), Tell me the name Of your young man." Or, "Apple jelly, jam tart." "Does he like you?" "Will he marry you?" "What will he marry you in? Silk, satin, cotton, rags." "How will you get to the church?"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)
KEYWORDS: playparty food courting clothes travel children home
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 107, "(Raspberry, strawberry)," "(Apple jelly, my jam tart)" (2 texts)
Roud #19383
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "She Loves Coffee and I Love Tea" (lyrics, style)
NOTES [73 words]: Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren seems to say that this is the same as "She Loves Coffee and I Love Tea," and certainly they share a lot of questions. It looks to me more like they are separate songs that cross-fertilized, but you should probably see both. Roud separates them, but this is one of those cases where the extremes are clearly different but there is a lot of confusing stuff between the extremes. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.4
File: SuSm107A

Rat Coon, Rat Coon
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914
KEYWORDS: animal nonsense
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 265, "Rat Coon, Rat Coon" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7815
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Raccoon" (theme)
NOTES [34 words]: This could, from its text, be a fragment of "Raccoon" (or almost anything else). But the metrical pattern is different, so -- given that Randolph offers only one verse -- I classify the two as separate. - RBW
File: R265

Rata-tat-tat (Railroad camp shack rouser wake-up song)
DESCRIPTION: Couplets followed by "rata-tat-tat" with a stick beat on the shack door. "Wake up buddy it's hard but it's fair You had a good home but you wouldn't stay there." "Wake up buddy and sit on the rock It ain't quite day but it's four o'clock"

Ratcatcher's Daughter, The

DESCRIPTION: "Not long ago, in Westminster," a beautiful ratcatcher's daughter is courted by many. She prefers a sand-seller. They plan to marry. She falls into the Thames and dies (of the foul water?). He kills himself. The inquest says she died of "too much vet."

AUTHOR: reportedly Edward Bradly & Sam Cowell with additional lyrics by Charles Sloman, according to various non-scholarly internet sources

EARLIEST DATE: before 1866 (Bodleian broadside Harding B 11(416), etc.) (but see NOTES)

KEYWORDS: love courting suicide death river humorous

FOUND IN: Britain(England)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1966, p. 132, "The Rat-Catcher's Daughter" (2 references)
- New-Comic-Songster, p. 51, "The Ratcatcher's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Aline Waites & Robin Hunter, _The Illustrated Victorian Songbook_, Michael Joseph Ltd., 1984, pp. 69-71, "The Ratcatcher's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune, plus a reproduction of an early sheet music cover)

Roud #13883

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Harding B 11(416), "The Ratcatcher's Daughter" ("In Westminster, not long ago "), J. Harkness (Preston), 1840-1866; also Firth b.34(253)="Harding B 11(3233)="Harding B 15(252b)=Johnson Ballads 3320 ("Not long ago, in Vestminster"); Harding B 19(29); 2806 c.13(120); Harding B 11(415); Firth c.18(229); Harding B 11(3234); 2806 c.15(24); Firth c.18(228); Firth b.27(457/458)

SAME TUNE:
- Who Wouldn't Be a Digger ("A decided stop there's been of late To the tide of emigration") (by Charles R. Thatcher, in the "Colonial Minstrel") (Thatcher-ColonialMinstrel-Songsters, pp. 6-7)

NOTES [143 words]: According to one of the broadsides listed on p. 132 of Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, this was "Sung by John Winans of the Bowery Theatre, With Tremendous Applause." He was not, however, the original singer; that distinction appears to have belonged to Sam Cowell (for whom see the notes to "Billy Barlow (II)"). Whatever its source, the piece was popular enough that, in 1858, Charles Dodgson ("Lewis Carroll"), when taking a series of photos of the actor Quintin Twiss in the summer of 1858, included one titled "The Rat-catcher's Daughter"; a small reproduction is in Roger Taylor and Edward Wakeling, Lewis Carroll: Photographer, Princeton University Press, 2002, p. 152 (which also claims that there was a "verse mime by Harold E. Priestley" which inspired the photo. A very quick Google search failed to turn up any sign of such a piece by Priestley). - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: BdRatDau

Ratcliffe Highway

DESCRIPTION: The sailor wanders down Ratcliffe Highway (and stops at an ale-house. What happens thereafter varies, e.g. he meets a girl, he fights with the landlady, etc.). After his business is done, he welcomes the chance to return to sea, even on a lousy old tub

AUTHOR: unknown
Rathaspeck Boys, The

DESCRIPTION: Thomas Power and James Kehoe from Rathaspeck had "gained an honest livelihood by toiling on the land." They take a boat out in Wexford Harbour "to pass away their evening, engaged by line and hook." They can not swim and drown when their boat capsizes.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast)

KEYWORDS: drowning sea ship storm wreck fishing
Rathlin Song, A

DESCRIPTION: "Where the fulmar flies on Rathlin head O'er the lake on the cliff by the sea, My love and I, in days that are dead, Watched the white clouds floating free.... But my love flew away... And I sob like the mateless dove." She prays her love will return

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: love separation

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H696, p. 290, "A Rathlin Song" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: HHH696

Ration Blues (I Wonder What's the Matter)

DESCRIPTION: "Well, I wonder what's the matter, What's the matter with Captain Mac, He done got mad.... I've got the ration blues...." The singer tells of being sent out to cut wood, and sugar, but the land apparently does not yield even when cleared

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (recorded from Jesse Hendricks by Jackson)

KEYWORDS: work prison hardtimes

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, p. 85, "Ration Blues" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [108 words]: Jackson, noting that the Texas prison system did not ration prisoners' food, speculates that the version he recorded from Jesse "G. I. Jazz" Hendricks comes from a popular song which he cannot locate.

However, I note another Texas prison song, "I Wonder What's the Matter," recorded by the Lomaxes in 1934. I incline to think that that may have been the origin of this song. Perhaps commodity rationing during World War II would have brought in the references to rationing? Prisoners, after all, would have had a harder time swapping things, or buying them on the black market, than those outside, and so would be more affected by the restrictions. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4

File: JDM085

Ratta Madan-Law (Rat's Mother-in-Law)

DESCRIPTION: Jamaican patois: Rat's mother-in-law cuts Rat's shirt; Rat laughs. Rat's brother-in-law cuts Rat's waistcoat; Rat laughs. Rat's father-in-law hits Rat in the belly; Rat laughs so hard he falls down as if dead. Mongoose comes and kills Rat.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (Murray-FolkSongsOfJamaica)

KEYWORDS: hate marriage death humorous animal injury

FOUND IN: West Indies(Jamaica)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Murray-FolkSongsOfJamaica, pp. 31-32, "Ratta Madan-Law" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
Edric Connor with the Caribbeans and Earl Inkman, "Ratta Madan-Law" (on WIEConnor01)

File: JaMu031
Rattlesnake

DESCRIPTION: Various animals are asked about their characteristics, e.g. "Muskrat, muskrat, what makes you smell so bad? I've been in the bottom all my life Till I'm mortified in my head."
"Rattlesnake, rattlesnake, what makes your teeth so white?"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (recording, Land Norris)
KEYWORDS: animal questions dialog nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 83, "Rattlesnake" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 394, "Muskrat" (1 text)
Roud #6395
RECORDINGS:
Land Norris, "Muskrat" (OKeh 40404, 1925)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Mister Rabbit" (theme)
File: LoF083

Rattlesnake Bill

DESCRIPTION: "My name is Rattlesnake Bill, I was raised in a rattlesnake den, My daily occupation all of my life, Was taking women from good old men. And I wonder how long they're gonna let me live." The singer kills a lion; people flee from him

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1986(McNeil-SouthernMountainFolksong)
KEYWORDS: seduction talltale animal bragging
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
McNeil-SouthernMountainFolksong, pp. 29-30, "Rattlesnake Bill" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: McSMB029

Rattlin' Roarin' Willie

DESCRIPTION: Rattlin' Willie goes to the fair to sell his fiddle. Someone urges him, "O, Willie, come sell your fiddle... And buy a pint o wine!" He refuses; "The warl' would think I was mad." He plays in "guid company"; his wife(?) says "Ye're welcome hame to me."

AUTHOR: Robert Burns
EARLIEST DATE: 1803 (Scots Musical Museum, #194)
KEYWORDS: music commerce drink
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig/Duncan4 776, "Rattlin Roarin Willie" (1 text)
Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 91, ",(Johnny, come lend me your fiddle)" (1 text, which appears to mix elements from "Rattlin Roarin' Willie" with something rather like "Oh, Dear, What Can the Matter Be?")
DT, RTLNROAR
ADDITIONAL: James Johnson, Editor, _The Scots Musical Museum_ [1853 edition], volume II, #194, p. 202, "Rattlin, roarin Willie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6192
NOTES [73 words]: Like most Burns pieces, this has a traditional stub -- there is an item in Gammer Gurton's Garland,
John, come sell thy fiddle
And buy thy wife a gown.
No, I'll not sell my fiddle
For ne'er a wife in town.
(Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #91, p. 86; Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 267, pp. 239-240)
The Baring-Goulds mention a note by Sir Walter Scott that Willie was a real fiddler who was tried and executed for murder. - RBW
Rattling Bog, The

DESCRIPTION: Cumulative song about the "great chain of being." Sample: "On this branch there was a twig/Rare twig, a rattling twig/Twig on the branch and the branch on the tree and the tree in the bog/Bog down in the valley-o." Most versions complete a circle

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1877 (Miss M. H. Mason, _Nursery Rhymes and Country Songs_)

KEYWORDS: ritual cumulative nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond, South, West), Scotland(Aber)) Wales US(Ap, MA, MW, SE, So) Canada(Mar, Newf)

REFERENCES (38 citations):
- Randolph 459, "The Green Grass Grew All Round" (1 text)
- Warner-FolkSongsAndBalladsOfTheEasternSeaboard, pp. 27-28, "The Rattling Bog" (1 text)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 133, "The Pretty Pair Tree" (1 text)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 133, "The Pretty Pair Tree" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
- Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #220, "The Tree in the Wood" (1 text)
- Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 193, "And the Green Grass Grew All Around" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 141-143, "Premiest Little Tree" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, pp. 87-88, "The Green Grass Grew All Around" (1 text)
- Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #93, "Tree in the Mountains" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sulzer-TwentyFiveKentuckyFolkBallads, p. 25, "The Tree" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, pp. 174-175, "The Tree in the Valley" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 206, "The Tree in the Wood" (3 texts, 3 tunes)
- Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolkSongs 98, "The Tree in the Wood" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 116, "The Tree in the Wood" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, pp. 72-74, "Was wachst uff diesem Bam? (What Grows on This Tree?)"; pp. 75-77, "Was wachst in diesem Wald? (What Grows in This Forest?)" (2 German texts plus non-poetic English translations, 2 tunes)
- Reeves/Sharp-ThelidiomOfThePeople 104, "The Tree in the Wood" (2 texts)
- Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 36, "The Everlasting Circle" (4 texts)
- Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 182-183, "Down in the Lowlands There Grew a Tree" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 396)
- Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #147, "The Tree in the Wood" (1 text, 1 tune)
- OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart2 53, "The Tree On the Hill" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, pp. 56-57, "The Tree on the Hill" (1 text plus Cornish translation, 1 tune)
- Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #114, "The Tree in the Wood" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 58, "The Tree in the Wood" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 258-260, "The Tree in the Bog" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 92, "On This Hill" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, pp. 54-55, "The Tree in the Bog" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 107, "The Stump" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland 88, "The Tree in the Wood" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 200, "The Tree in the Wood" (1 text)
- Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 96, "An Wedhen War An Vre (The Tree on the Hill)" (1 Cornish text, 1 tune)
- Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #86, p. 2, ("In the Bogie there was a tree"); #87, p. 2, ("Down in yon valley there grows a tree") (1 text plus 1 fragment)
- Greig/Duncan 1668, "There Was a Tree" (4 texts, 2 tunes)
- Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #46, "There was a Tree Stood in the Ground" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 391, "The Green Grass Grew All Around" (1 text)

DT, RATLNBOG*
Rattling Railway Boy, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer left home at twenty two. He went from town to town working on the railroad with his "whole estate" in his handkerchief. His money went for drink. He met and married a girl but left her in May. She tells her baby "Your daddy's a Railway Boy"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen)

KEYWORDS: marriage rambling abandonment railroading baby rake wife

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):

McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen 59, "The Rattling Railway Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: McB1059

Raven and the Crow, The

DESCRIPTION: "The corbie with his roupie throat Cried frae the leafless tree... Come o'er the loch wi me!" The crow asks why he should come. He is told a farmer has plowed his field and seeded it; there is much corn to be had. The farmer shoots both birds

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Montgomerie)

KEYWORDS: bird death food farming

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 34, "The Raven and the Crow" (1 text)

NOTES [16 words]: I haven't met this elsewhere, but it feels enough like a traditional song that I'm indexing it. - RBW

File: MSNR034
Ravenal, The
DESCRIPTION: The trawler Ravenal, returning to St Pierre from the Grand Banks, is lost in a storm. "Wreckage was found on Lorie's shore. She may have struck a sunker, but such things we'll never know; We only know her eighteen men died in the waters cold"
AUTHOR: Isaac Harris
EARLIEST DATE: 1977 (Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou)
KEYWORDS: death sea ship storm wreck
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Jan 31, 1962 - Ravenal is "missing. Presumed iced up & capsized" (Northern Shipwrecks Database)
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 92, "The Ravenal" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #28986
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Schooner Marion Rogers" (tune)
Lories Beach is in Placentia Bay on the south Newfoundland coast.
Sunker: "A submerged rock over which the sea breaks, familiar form of SUNKEN ROCK, BREAKER, GROUNDER" (Source: Dictionary of Newfoundland English at site of Newfoundland and Labrador Heritage). - BS
Last updated in version 6.1
File: LeBe092

Razors in the Air
DESCRIPTION: "Come, my love, and go with me, Ah, my love, I'll meet you, Take you down to Tennessee, Meet you by and by." "Hoe de corm... Get away from dat window... Come some other night, For dar's going to be a fight, Dar'll razors a-flying in de air."
AUTHOR: unknown; sheet music reports it was "sung with great success by Barry Maxwell" but is copyrighted by William H. Kennedy
EARLIEST DATE: 1880 (sheet music published by Oliver Ditson & Co.)
KEYWORDS: love courting slave farming
FOUND IN: US(Se)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Winstock-SongsAndMusicOfTheRedcoats, pp. 245-252, "Razors in the air" (1 text, 1 tune)
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 155, "Remember Me" (1 short text, 1 tune, lacking the chorus and hence the mention of razors)
Roud #16086
NOTES [119 words]: This was recorded by the Kingston Trio in a version that doesn't seem particularly racist, but the original sheet music is clearly a minstrel song, in dialect. The sheet music says it was sung by "Barry Maxwell with the Haverly Mastodon Minstrels."
The title alone is indicative. According to Jon W. Finson, The Voices That Are Gone: Themes in Nineteenth-Century American Popular Song, Oxford University Press, 1994, p. 220, "razors [were] weapons usually associated with blacks in 'coon' songs." As an example of a razor song, he cites Monroe H. Rosenfeld's "Come Along Sinners," published in 1881 (the year after this song), which instructed Blacks to leave their razors if they wanted to attain salvation. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Wins245

Read 'Em John
DESCRIPTION: Leader sings: John brought the letter, put it on the table, and all the members read it. It said, "let me go!" Responses are "read 'em," "read 'em, let me go"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Davis and Georgia Sea Island Singers recording) Ready or Not

DESCRIPTION: Variation on the "Ready or not, here I come" game cry: "Ready or not, if I come and find you, You are It. And if I don't I'll still be It, So I'd better find you."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana)

KEYWORDS: nonballad playparty

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, p. 88, "Ready or Not" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #16815

File: List088A

Reap, Boys, Reap (Cold Stormy Weather, Who'll Be the Binder?)

DESCRIPTION: "It rains, it hails, it's cold stormy weather, In comes the farmer drinking all the cider, You be the reaping-boy and I'll be the binder. I've lost my true love and don't know where to find her." "Go into the ring and see if you can find her."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren)

KEYWORDS: playparty farming food

FOUND IN: US(MA,SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #22, "Who'll Be the Binder" (3 short texts, 1 tune)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5, pp. 527-528, "It Rains and It Hails" (2 short texts, 2 tunes)
Roud #3651 and 7920

ALTERNATE TITLES:
It Rains, It Hails
I'll Be the Reaper

NOTES [59 words]: Roud seems to divide this into two songs, "Reap, Boys, Reap" and "It Rains And It Hails." Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren's three texts are all very short but seem to partake of both forms. I've tentatively lumped them until I see a clear dividing line. One of the Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 tunes is very close to "Dixie." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1

File: Newe022

Reaphook and Sickle, The

DESCRIPTION: Harvest time. "With reaphook and sickle so well we'll clear the land." The farmer provides good brown beer. Singer's "charming creature," Nancy, binds the corn and brings it to the waggoner. Harvest done, threshing begins. "A health to all you farmers"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1888 (Sumner)

KEYWORDS: farming harvest drink nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,South))

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, pp. 66-67, "The Good Old Leathern Bottle"; p. 148, "The Reaphook and the Sickle" (2 texts, 3 tunes)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #14, "The Reaphook and Sickle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reason I Stay on Job So Long

DESCRIPTION: "Reason I stay on job so long, Lawd, dey gimme flamdonies an' coffee strong."
"Reason I love my captain so, 'Cause I ast him for a dollar, Lawd, he give me fo'." "Reason why I love Boleen, She keeps my house An' shanty clean." Etc.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934
KEYWORDS: work
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 46-47, "Reason I Stay on Job So Long" (1 text,
1 tune)
Roud #15568
File: LxA046

Reason Why, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer is picked up by a beautiful woman. She takes him to a house and then to bed: "You are the nicest boy I've seen today... I would love a jewelled ring." In the morning a man comes in and kicks him into the gutter. He pays and doesn't ask why

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1884 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3238))
KEYWORDS: love sex violence prison punishment trial beauty drink food wife children whore ring
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
Roud #1745
RECORDINGS:
Walter Pardon, "One Cold Morning in December" (on Voice15)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(3238), "The Reason Why" ("One night in cold December, I've reason to remember"), H. Disley (London), 1860-1883; also Firth b.28(13), Firth c.17(151), 2806 c.15(284), 2806 c.15(284), "The Reason Why"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Annie of the Vale" (tune, per broadsides Bodleian Harding B 11(3238), 2806 c.15(284) and Firth b.28(13))
cf. "The Young Man Badly Walked" (plot)
NOTES [129 words]: The description is based on Walter Pardon's version on Voice15.
The following description, based on broadside Bodleian Harding B 11(3238), tells a story with a different ending: The singer was picked up by a beautiful woman. She took him in tow. He paid for brandy and oysters. A dandy kicked him into the gutter. The police took him to the station-house.
Before a magistrate, his wife and children he is sentenced to 30 days.
Keywords combine both stories.
Walter Pardon's version has a simple chorus:
And she said, "Come, come along, old boy,
And don't look so bashful and shy
She really was a beauty. I thought it was my duty,
So I paid and never asked the reason why.
The broadside Bodleian Harding B 11(3238) version has each "chorus" modified to advance the story. - BS
File: RcTReWhy

Rebel Acts of Hyde, The

DESCRIPTION: "It's now I will relate, Though in a broken way, How the rich in Hyde Did carry the poor away." The singer tells how the people of the deep south and the rich carried the area from the Union, alludes to its recapture, and says that some stayed true

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: Civilwar political
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 281, "The Rebel Acts of Hyde" (1 text)
Roud #6644

NOTES [231 words]: The secession crisis of 1860/1861 proceeded in two stages: The seven deep southern states seceeded before Fort Sumter. The border states (Virginia, Arkansas, Tennessee, North Carolina) stayed loyal until Lincoln called for troops after Sumter. All four of the latter states had strong pockets of unionism. In Virginia, they were mostly in the western part of the commonwealth, and eventually gained their own state (West Virginia). The same might have happened in east Tennessee had Union troops been able to capture the area sooner. Arkansas unionism was mostly in the Ozarks, too remote for anyone to notice. North Carolina was more complicated. It didn't have a concentrated Union area, so Union forces could not hold. But unionism was probably stronger in North Carolina than any other Confederate state, and not confined to the mountains as in Virginia, Tennessee, and Arkansas. Hyde County and the town of Hatteras, the site of this song, are in fact on the eastern coast of North Carolina, Hyde County being on the north short of Pamlico Sound and Hatteras actually on the outer banks. Hatteras itself was captured by Union forces on August 28-29, 1861, the first real amphibious operation of the war, and conquest of the Pamlico area continued from there. This song almost sounds like a local's protest of loyalty in an attempt to curry favor with the occupying authorities. - RBW

File: BrII281

Rebel Soldier, The

DESCRIPTION: Floating verses about this lonely soldier's life. "It's grapeshot and musket, And the cannons lumber loud. There's many a mangled body with blankets for a shroud." Characteristic line: "I am a rebel soldier and far from my home."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1918 (Cox)
KEYWORDS: Civilwar separation home
FOUND IN: US(Ap,So)
REFERENCES (12 citations):
Randolph 246, "The Rebel Soldier" (1 text)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 277-278, "The Rebel Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 50, "The Rebel Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune -- an abridged composite version)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 76, "The Rebel Soldier" (2 texts, but only the first belongs here; the second is The Sweet Sunny South (I) [Laws A23])
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 117, pp. 258-259, "O Lillie, O Lillie," mostly "Rye Whiskey" but with some verses belonging here; also 116, p. 258, "I'll Eat When I'm Hungry" (1 fragment, a single stanza based on "Rye Whiskey" but probably belonging here: "I'll eat when I'm hungry, I'll drink when I'm dry, If the Yankees don't kill me, I'll live till I die")
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 91, "One Morning in May" (1 text, in which it is a "poor stranger" rather than a "rebel soldier" and with many floating lyrics)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 157, "The Rebel Soldier, or The Poor Stranger" (7 texts, 7 tunes, but A and probably F are "The Poor Stranger (Two Strangers in the Mountains Alone)")
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 136-138, "One Morning in May" (2 text, 1 tune, but only the "B" text, "The Troubled Soldier," belongs here; "A" is "One Morning in May (To Hear the Nightingale Sing)" [Laws P14])
Silber-CivilWarFull, pp. 215-216, "The Rebel Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber-SoldierSongsAndHomeFrontBalladsOfCivilWar, pp. 72-73, "The Rebel Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune) Saffel-CowboyPoetry, pp. 211-213, "Jack o' Diamonds" (1 text; this particular Lomax offering contains elements of "Jack o Diamonds/Rye Whisky," "The Wagoner's Lad," The Rebel Soldier," and others) NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, Daniel W. Patterson, "A Remarkable Collection of 'Song Ballets...','' Vol. XIV, No. 2 (Nov. 1966), pp. 35-36, "Song Ballet Rebel Soldier" (1 text, extremely mixed)
Roud #259
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Poor Stranger (Two Strangers in the Mountains Alone)" (meter, floating lyrics)
cf. "The Wagoner's Lad" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Jack of Diamonds' (floating lyrics)
cf. "In Eighteen-Forty-Nine" (floating lyrics)
cf. "The Blind Fiddler"
NOTES [90 words]: Randolph's version is specific to the Missouri campaigns of General Sterling Price, but more generic versions of the song are abundant.
The first line, interestingly, seems to float; Sharp, Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana, and Cox each have version from "One Morning In May" or the like (One morning, one morning, one morning in May, I heard a poor soldier lamenting and say"; another text (to the tune of "Rye Whisky") starts with lyrics from "Banks of the Nile" or something similar ("Oh Polly, oh Polly, it's for your sake alone"). - RBW
Last updated in version 6.1
File: R246

Rebel's Escape, The [Laws A19]
DESCRIPTION: The soldier relates the tale of his desertion. In prison, he gets the guard drunk and sneaks off. He crosses a river on a raft. Reaching home, he wakes his wife and children, who give him a meal and advise him to "go to Dixie's land."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Thomas, "Devil's Ditties")
KEYWORDS: prisoner escape war abandonment Civilwar desertion
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Laws A19, "The Rebel's Escape"
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 534-535, "War Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Thomas-DevilsDitties, pp. 146-147, "War Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 807, REBESCAP* WARSONG*
Roud #2207
NOTES [150 words]: Desertion was a chronic problem during the Civil War (which is the probable, though not certain, source of this song). Both armies were subject to disease and deprivation (the Southern due to lack of resources, the Northern due to pure incompetence and stupidity). And neither had a real system of leave, or a way to bring soldiers back to the colors.
This song, therefore, probably does match the experience of a fair number of unenthusiastic soldiers (especially as the draft took effect in the North).
On the other hand, deserting to the South probably wasn't a good idea; it left the soldier's family without his paycheck, it would subject him to punishment after the South lost -- and quite possibly it would force him into the southern ranks, where conditions were even worse. The South was so short of soldiers and supplies that they eventually started demanding deserters join their army. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.5
File: LA19

Rebellion of 1798, The
DESCRIPTION: Rebel exploits, poisonings and massacres are recounted, from Lord Edward Fitzgerald to Father Murphy, and their defeat at each turn by yeomen and Orangemen, in Kildare, Antrim, Ballynahinch, Wexford and Kilkenny. "Down, down, croppies lie down"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1798 (_Falkener's Dublin Journal_, according to Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)
KEYWORDS: rebellion battle death patriotic
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1798 - Irish rebellion against British rule (source: "1798 - Calendar of Events" at IrelandOn-Line site)
May 19, 1798 - Lord Edward Fitzgerald arrested
June 2-3, 1798 - Rebel defeat at Kilcock, Co. Kildare
June 7, 1798 - Rebel defeat at Antrim
June 13, 1798 - United Irishmen under Henry Monro defeated at Ballynahinch
June 21, 1798 - Government recaptures Wexford
July 2, 1798 - Father Murphy (1753-1798) captured, executed, and cremated.

Reborn Again
DESCRIPTION: "Reborn, soldier, going to reborn again, Oh, going to reborn again...." "Reborn again, reborn again, Oh, you can't get to Heaven till you're reborn again." "Paul, and Silas, dar in de jail... One watch while de other pray."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Bible floatingverses
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (3 citations): Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 256-257, "Reborn Again" (1 text)
Carawan/Carawan-AintYouGotARight, p. 15, "Reborn Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang, pp. 316-317, "Rebawn Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Benjamin Bilgen, "Reborn, Reborn Again" (on BeenStorm1)
NOTES [166 words]: The King James Bible refers to the need to be "born again" in John 3:3, 7 -- though most scholars now consider this a mistranslation. The Greek word ( , "anothen") means "again" and "from above," with the latter being the primary meaning, and the structure of the passage makes it clear that this is deliberate wordplay: Jesus is saying "You must be born from above"; Nicodemes interprets it as "born again." (The Gospel of John uses this sort of wordplay frequently.) - RBW
Benjamin Bilgen leads a congregation on BeenStorm1. The response to his lead is the clearest example I've heard to illustrate Sea Island "cross-rhythmic clapping." Dargan stresses the point in his book and writes, "The question arises as to why a shout style with various cross-rhythmic clapping patterns should be found only in Gullah-speaking coastal areas. In sum, the singing is no less unique than the language." [William T Dargan, Lining Out the Word (Chicago: Center for Black Music Research,2006), p. 41]. - BS
Last updated in version 5.1
File: ScNF256B

Recent Kanab Tragedy, The
DESCRIPTION: "In Kanab they will remember This Twenty-Fourth of July." "For two of the town's best men are lying In their coffins awaiting earth." "It happened because of hot anger -- A quarrel about their water right." Roundy kills Seegmiller, then kills himself
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Burt-AmericanMurderBallads)
KEYWORDS: homicide suicide family farming
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
July 23, 1899 - The Kanab murders
NOTES [86 words]: In Utah, water was (and is) a precious commodity; Burt-AmericanMurderBallads explains that each farmer was given a certain period of time to use the water in irrigation ditches. The Roundy/Seegmiller quarrel arose when Roundy accused Seegmiller of witholding some of the water he was due. Roundy murdered Seegmiller, and took his own life when he heard that one of Seegmiller's hands was coming after him. Burt-AmericanMurderBallads believes her mother, who certainly transcribed the piece, might be the author. - RBW

File: Burt243

Rechess Oh Rechess Boy

DESCRIPTION: Rechess (Richard) "walk are dip and are roll ... like a good sailin' boat." "Rechess no ha' foot fo' work nigger ground ... ha' foot fo turn Bella yeye [eyes]."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Elder-FolksongsFromTobago)

KEYWORDS: disability courting farming nonballad youth

FOUND IN: West Indies(Tobago)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Elder-FolksongsFromTobago 5, "Rechess Oh Rechess Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [48 words]: Elder-FolksongsFromTobago: "...Obviously this man suffers from partial palsy. Despite this however, the man's private life is respected. Although he 'no get foot' to work on the farm he can charm Bella, whom -- Elder's informant said -- he eventually married and they raised a family. - BS

Last updated in version 4.0

File: ElTo005

Record Makers

DESCRIPTION: "As we roll along we are all record makers, Records black and white, in the wrong or the right." Hearers are advised to be "ready when the train comes in."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 2010 (Grimes-StoriesFromTheAnneGrimesCollection)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad death train

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Grimes-StoriesFromTheAnneGrimesCollection, p. 128, "Record Makers" (1 short text)

File: Grim128

Recruit, The

DESCRIPTION: "Sez Corporal Madden to Private McFadden, 'Bedad, yer a bad'un! Now, turn out yer toes, Yer belt is unhookit...." The corporal rags on the recruit for all sorts of things -- until he gets thirsty; when the private buys him a drink, he relents

AUTHOR: Robert William Chambers (source: Shay and other poetry collections)

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions)

KEYWORDS: soldier drink recitation

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, ppp. 208-209, "The Recruit" (1 text)

Roud #9549

NOTES [22 words]: Although this seems to be fairly popular as a poem, I have no reason to think it was ever sung -- or passed on by oral tradition. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2

File: SBar208
Recruited Collier, The

DESCRIPTION: Singer tells of her lover, a collier now in the army. She is terrified; he's looking forward to the adventure. She points out the coals her family burns, which his hands hewed. He bids her farewell, asking her not to forsake him; she says her life is over.

AUTHOR: unknown (see notes)

EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (Pinto & Rodway, _The Common Muse_)

KEYWORDS: loneliness love army parting mining lover soldier worker trick drink recruiting

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 28-29, "The Recruited Collier" (1 text, 1 tune)
- DT, RECRUCOL*

RECORDINGS:
- Anne Briggs, "The Recruited Collier" (on IronMuse1, Briggs3, Briggs4)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- Jimmy's Enlisted

NOTES [562 words]: In the versions of this song that I've heard, the collier took the shilling after a sergeant got him drunk.

According to Chandler/Beckett, p. 168, "In the view of contemporaries, prevailing methods of enlistment, in which liquor and deception played a prominent part, adversely affected the number and quality of recruits. Though the regular resort to 'seduction, debauchery, and fraud' was persistently criticized, the traditional methods of inveigling 'the foolish, the drunken, the ungodly, and the despairing' into the army were not abandoned until after 1867. Haswell, p. 56, writes, "The politicians' dislike of the army ensured that the soldiers remained poorly treated and poorly paid. They had probably been induced to join up by unscrupulous recruiting sergeants who had filled them with drink until they had become too befuddled and confused to resist. Once recruited, they were decked out in clothes that were too elaborate and too tight for comfort, hopelessly impractical for the tasks given to them. Believed to be incapable of thinking for themselves [which to some extent was true, given the quality of the recruits], they were told nothing of their immediate future or of their commander's intentions. Several contemporary French military writers comment on the fact that, without officers to lead them, British soldiers, even in the middle of a battle, appeared to be lost.... It is hardly surprising that at the slightest opportunity they drank themselves into oblivion."

Pope, p. 118, speaking of the British army in the Napoleonic Wars: "Though its troops were the best (and most regularly paid) in Europe, the army attracted far fewer volunteers than the navy, partly because soldiers and marines were less well cared for, but also because they attracted none of the popular respect enjoyed by the sailors. Without the benefit of press gangs or conscription, regiments could only recruit from the very poorest sections of society, frequently resorting to sweeps of prisons and other illegal expedients." Even the regular pay was new; historically, Parliament had tended to under-pay its soldiers, going all the way back to the Commonwealth era. This situation persisted for about two centuries, from the time Cromwell's New Model Army started to disintegrate (Haswell, p. 30) until the 1867 reforms. Little wonder Parliament had to pass a Mutiny Act every year from 1689 to 1879 (Haswell, p. 31).

Despite what the girl said, the recruit feels perhaps less enthusiastic than determined to make the best of it. He certainly had no chance of becoming a brigadier, but a grenadier was perhaps possible -- if he was tall enough. Grenadiers didn't get much in the way of rewards -- but, since they were more trusted, they might at least be safer from the lash.

Though the traditional texts seem most often to be known as "The Recruited Collier," two of the three texts cited in Granger's Index to Poetry are filed under "Jimmy's Enlisted." There is no indication of authorship. I've seen Internet claims that the original was written by Robert Anderson -- but the common version was remade by A. L. Lloyd. Curiously, the version in Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs claims that it was written by Karl Dallas and copyrighted in 1955. Possibly Dallas too rewrote it, but we know the song (at least in the version attributed to Anderson) is older. - RBW

Bibliography

- Pope: Stephen Pope, Dictionary of the Napoleonic Wars, Cassell, 1999 (I use the undated edition)
Recruiting Sergeant (I), The
DESCRIPTION: Sergeant: "Mower, take my shiners bright," be a hero and mow down your enemies. Mower: No. If I go "the sword of war may mow down me"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames)
KEYWORDS: rejection army recruiting dialog nonballad farming
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 182, "The Recruiting Sergeant" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO G1 141)
Roud #1275
NOTES [18 words]: Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames: "Verses on an illustrated handbill, printed and distributed about 1800." - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: WT182

Red Bird
DESCRIPTION: "Red bird soon in the morning (x2), Red bird, red bird soon in the morning. (x2)"
"What's the matter with the red bird soon in the morning?" "Cat got the red bird soon in the morning." "Hog got the red bird soon in the morning."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (recording, Pete Seeger)
KEYWORDS: bird nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 405, "Red Bird" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Moses Asch and Alan Lomax, Editors, _The Leadbelly Songbook_, Oak, 1962, pp. 90-91, "Red Bird" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11682
RECORDINGS:
Pete Seeger, "Red Bird" (on PeteSeeger21)
File: FSWB405

Red Cap's Hole
DESCRIPTION: Ships caught in a gale are too far out to make Avondale or Harbour Main and ride out the weather in Red Cap's Hole. "When news got to their native homes" the "gallant band marched down by land To help the toilers home."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing)
KEYWORDS: help sea ship storm
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, pp. 95-97, "Red Cap's Hole" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [14 words]: The only names I recognize here, Avondale and Harbour Main, are in Conception Bay. - BS
File: Blon095

Red Herring, The
DESCRIPTION: Song describes the uses made of various parts of the herring, e.g., "Herring's eyes, puddings and pies/Herring's head, loaves of bread."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1903 ("Cape Cod Dialect"); Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook claims a manuscript version from 1831
KEYWORDS: fishing ritual cumulative nonballad humorous animal
FOUND IN: Britain(England(All)) Canada(Newf) Ireland
REFERENCES (17 citations):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 167, "The Jolly Red Herring" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 360)
Cologne/Morrison-WiltshireFolkSongs, p. 68, "Red Herring" (1 text, 1 tune)
VaughanWilliams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs, pp. 86-87, "The Red Herring" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 110, "The Red Herring" (1 text)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 296, "The Herring Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-FolksongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #26, "The Jolly Harrin'" (1 text, 1 tune)
MacColl/Seeger- TravellersSongsFromEnglandAndScotland 118, "The Jolly Herring" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reeves/Sharp-TheTheldiomOfThePeople 79, "The Red Herring" (1 text)
Hamer-GreenGroves, pp. 23-24, "The Herring's Head" (1 text, 1 tune)
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 126, "The Red Herring" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, pp. 24-25, "The Herring's Head" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #138, "Herrings' Heads" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gardham-EastRidingSongster 3, pp. 7, 42-43, "The Herring's Head"; "Bolliton Sands"; "The Dead Pig" (3 texts, 1 tune; the first two are "The Red Herring" but 3B, "The Dead Pig," is "The Sow Took the Measles")
Hamer-GarnersGay, pp. 16-17, "The Jolly Herring" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #109, "The Herring's Head" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryOfNewEnglandFolklore, pp. 578-579, "The Herring Song" (1 text)
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 50, "The Herring" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #128
RECORDINGS:
Johnny Doughty, "Herrings' Heads" (on Voice07)
Mikeen McCarthy, "The Herring" (on Voice14)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "The Sow Took the Measles"
 cf. "The Mallard"
 cf. "Alouette (!)"
 cf. "The Farmer and the Crow"
 cf. "The Derby Ram" (theme)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Herring's Head
The Herring's Heid
The Jovial Herring
The Jolly Red Herring
NOTES [93 words]: This is essentially the same song as the American "Sow Took the Measles" [and Roud lumps them - RBW]; "The Farmer and the Crow" (also American, but also found in Sweden) marries this song to "The Carrion Crow." -PJS
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland declares his "Herring Song" and "The Red Herring" to be the same. I'm not sure I agree; while the theme is the same, the lyrics and stanza form are different. But he's seen more versions than I have; I tentatively follow his lead. The danger, of course, is that Kennedy will lump anything with anything. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: VWL086

Red Iron Ore [Laws D9]
DESCRIPTION: A sailor tells of a trip he took on the E.C. Roberts. They set out from Escanaba with a load of ore, and at last wind up in Cleveland. Life aboard an ore boat was not pleasant, but the sailor is proud of the good time the ship made NOTES [894 words]: When this song was first indexed, I made several attempts to locate the E. C. Roberts, with partial success -- the Great Lakes has ships by that name, but I failed to identify one which was an ore carrier. Solomon Foster, using resources that hadn't been made available online when the Index was started, was able to identify it, but I'm going to leave my 2008 notes so you can know what not to look for:

There was an E. C. Roberts sailing Lake Michigan in 1871; she lost her jib boom in a collision near Chicago that April. An E. C. Roberts also grounded in the lakes in 1865. Possibly the same as the preceding, and surely the best candidate, is an E. C. Roberts mentioned on page 18 of Julius F. Wolff, Jr., Lake Superior Shipwrecks, (Lake Superior Port Cities Inc., Duluth, 1990). She was carrying ore in 1872 when she stopped at Marquette, Michigan. A major storm blew up, and because she was unloading coal, there was no way to get her moving quickly. She (and one other ship) had to be scuttled on September 18.

Curiously, Walton/Grimm/Murdok, p. 119, says that "The Roberts, 273 gross tones, was built in Cleveland in 1856 for Brown and Reddington of that city for the general carrying trade. It remained on the lakes for over half a century." One of Walton's infromants claimed to have sailed on her when she served as an ore carrier. I wonder if this is the right boat, though, since a general carrier would not make an ideal ore boat. And not even Walton can identify this particular trip.

Interestingly, Stanley Baby, who sang this song for Fowke, was the son of James Baby, who reportedly was mate on the E. C. Roberts in 1875, and another Fowke, informant C. H. J. Snyder also knew James Baby. But the data Fowke offers is not sufficient to identify the ship. If we look for vessels named the Roberts but with variations in the initials, there was a boat the E. K. Roberts which sailed the Great Lakes in the late nineteenth century. According to Wes Oleszewski's Ghost Ships, Gales & Forgotten Tales: True Adventures on the Great Lakes (Avery Color Studios, 1995), p. 100, she was active at the time of the gale of November 10-11, 1883. I do find it noteworthy that a ship named the Escanaba was active at this time, hauling other ships around Mackinac. I would bet a great deal that it's the same Escanaba even if it isn't the same Roberts.
Google searches reveal the E. K. Roberts as a steamer launched commissioned in 1883; renamed City of Windsor in 1890 and Michipicoten in 1910, she burned in 1927; she was originally a fish tug but later carried passengers.

Now the solution to the conundrum, which was found by Solomon Foster. What follows is a slightly edited version of what Foster sent me:

I think we can say with some confidence that the E.C. Roberts is this ship -- http://greatlakeships.org/2897492/data?n=64 -- the 1856 one mentioned in Walton et al. According to the database she was owned by one H. Rumage from 1866 through 1873. Given that some versions of the song speak of "Captain Harve Rummage" and that time period overlaps nicely with the periods of service of the Escanaba, Kate Williams, and Exile (not to mention three Minches), it would be a fantastic coincidence if the song were about some other E.C. Roberts.

The other ships:
- Tug Escanaba: http://greatlakeships.org/2901197/data?n=1
- Schooner Exile: http://greatlakeships.org/2900874/data?n=1
- The Minch is harder. I'm guessing it's Schooner Charles P. Minch: http://greatlakeships.org/2903457/data?n=3
  But based on the other dates I'm working with, it could conceivably be Schooner Anne S. Minch: http://greatlakeships.org/2903457/data?n=3 as they were both built in 1873, the last year H. Rumage was owner of the Roberts. (Though if the song was written at a time there were three Minches sailing out of Cleveland, it would be a bit odd to not be more specific naming her.)

The Exile was built in 1867, so combining that with the time H. Rumage was an owner gives us 1867-1873 as the time period for the events of the song. I don't see any obvious way to narrow it down further.

The 1866 owner is listed as "Rumage & Anderson". I've been assuming that was the same Rumage as "H. Rumage", but there was also a Solon Rummage active in Cleveland shipping. If that's the Rumage of Rumage & Anderson, then we'd have narrowed down the possible timeline to 1871-1873. But that's pure speculation.

(My thanks to Mr. Foster for freely giving me all these results!)

One of Walton's informants, J. Sylvester Ray, claimed that Billy Clark of Buffalo wrote the song, but a second informant, John W. Green, attributed it to Peter O'Donnell.

Walton lists this as second only to The Bigler in popularity with Great Lakes sailors.

The tune is a bit of a conundrum. Dean/Rickaby (whose version is reprinted by Lomax and Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin) and Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag use the Derry Down tune. The versions Walton collected do not have the Derry Down refrain, and are in major rather than minor; they seem to be based on "The Dreadnought" [Laws D13]. The by-blows listed in Walton ("Bound Away on the Twilight," "A Trip on the George C. Finney") seem to use the Dreadnought form. This is a matter which perhaps calls for further investigation. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: LD09

Red is the Rose

DESCRIPTION: The singer praises his love; they have promised faithfulness. But "It's all for the loss of my bonnie (brown)-eyes lass I'm leaving my homeland forever." Chorus: "Red is the rose that in yonder garden grows... But my love is fairer than any."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1980 (Sing Out!)
KEYWORDS: love separation emigration flowers
FOUND IN: Ireland US(NE)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
  DT, REDROSE* REDROS2*
  ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 28, #2 (1980), p, 22, "Red Is the Rose" (1 text plus a variant stanza, 1 tune, the Joe Heaney version, with the variants being from Sarah Makem)
  Harold Nestler, "Songs from the Hudson Valley" (article in _New York Folklore Quarterly_, Volume V, #2, Summer 1949), p. 93 "Come to the Highland" (1 text)
  CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "Loch Lomond" (tune)
NOTES [136 words]: Joe Heaney and Makem and Clancy both thought this older than "Loch Lomond," with which it shares a tune. While possible, I think this pretty unlikely. Obviously this is an emigration song, which hints at a nineteenth century date. Loch Lomond is probably eighteenth century. In terms of documented collections, "Loch Lomond" wins by about a century. Even if this is older, it may not be Irish. Note that Nestler's New York version, which has the Heaney/Clancy chorus and many of the same words, opens

Come to the highlands with me, my bonnie boy,
Come to the highland, my honey,
Come to the highland with me, my bonnie boy;
My love is fairer than any.
It also has an interesting verse in which the singer and Willy went walking: "He pulled the red flower and I pulled the blue; The blue is the fairest of any." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: So28n3a

---

Red Light Saloon, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer goes to (Bangor) on (July 4). (The train) being late, he is "forced" to visit the Red Light Saloon. Quickly recognized as a (logger/cowboy), liquor and women give him their attention. His "ellick" grows hard; he goes off with a five dollar girl

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps)

KEYWORDS: logger cowboy sex drink bawdy whore money

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar) US(MW,SW)

REFERENCES (5 citations):

- Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 249-250, "The Red Light Saloon" (1 short text, 1 tune)
- Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 11, pp. 74-76, "The Red Light Saloon" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 267, "The Red Light Saloon" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 49, "The Re-Light Saloon" (1 text)

DT, REDLIGHT* REDLITE2*

Roud #9424

NOTES [109 words]: In Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging's text, the singer ends up having sex with a five dollar whore. These days, that sounds cheap -- but Logsdon points out that that was a lot at the time apparently indicated in the song.

Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman's and Logsdon's texts are so different that I thought about splitting the songs. But Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman has only three verses; I suspect it has been shortened, either by Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman or his informant. Beck's version is also different, with no mention of a train at the end, but he too was keeping his texts clean. So I'm lumping them. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: Doe249

---

Red Lion

DESCRIPTION: "Red lion, red lion, com out of your den, Whoever you catch will be one of your men." The invocation for a game in which the designated lion attempts to tag or catch all the free players

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren)

KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad animal

FOUND IN: US(MA) Canada

REFERENCES (2 citations):

- Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #180, "Red Lion" (1 text)
- ADDED: Edith Fowke, _Red Rover, Red Rover: Children's Games Played in Canada_, p. 27, "Red Lion" (1 text plus description)

Roud #22541

File: Newe180
Red Mantle, The

DESCRIPTION: Singer asks her husband for a red mantle to wear to the fair. He buys it; but when she arrives at the fair she discovers fashions have changed, and "green mantles carried the day." She tears the red mantle to shreds and goes home in tears.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (NovaScotia1)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer tells her husband her desire: a red mantle to wear to the county fair. He replies that money is scarce, but he will do what he can. He buys it for her; she sets out for the fair, but when she arrives she discovers fashions have changed, and "green mantles carried the day." She tears the red mantle to shreds and goes home in tears.

KEYWORDS: pride poverty request clothes colors husband wife vanity

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 107, "The Red Mantle" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST RcTReMan (Partial)

Roud #2777

RECORDINGS:
Angelo Dornan, "The Red Mantle" (on NovaScotia1)

NOTES [85 words]: Political allegory? Fashion statement? - PJS

It's too bad we don't have more versions, to give us a clue where the song came from. Angelo Dornan, I suspect, would have called it a statement on the fickleness of fashion and women's wants; his text seems to have no political statement as such. But if, as is sometimes true, green is the color of mourning, and red of course the color of war and British soldiers' uniforms, this could indeed be a report of a change from, say, pro-war to anti-war sentiment. - RBW

File: RcTReMan

Red Plaid Shawl, The

DESCRIPTION: "One summer's morning I took a ramble" and meet a girl in "a red plaid shawl." The singer wants a kiss; she wants a treat. He says he is a clerk. With his money spent, she knocks him out. When he wakes next morning his coat, chain and watch are gone.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland)

KEYWORDS: crime courting robbery clothes trick

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 84, "The Old Plaid Shawl" (1 text)

Roud #V8342

BROADSIDES:

Bodleian, Harding B 20(59), "The Red Plaid Shawl", unknown, n.d.; also Harding B 16(222b), Firth b.27(141). "The Red Plaid Shawl"

NOTES [43 words]: Broadside Bodleian Harding B 20(59) seems more complete than O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland and is the basis of the description. I use the Bodleian Harding B 20(59) title as Name to try to avoid confusion with Francis Fahy's "The Ould Plaid Shawl." - BS

Last updated in version 5.1

File: OCon084

Red River Valley, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer and his love are parting (either may be singing, and either may be leaving). "Come and sit by my side [ere you leave me]; do not hasten to bid me adieu; just remember the Red River Valley, And the (sweetheart) who loved you so true..."

AUTHOR: "The Bright Mohawk Valley" claimed by James Kerrigan, 1896, but this is almost certainly not the original

EARLIEST DATE: 1910

KEYWORDS: separation river farewell

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,Ro,SE,So) Canada(West)

REFERENCES (25 citations):
Randolph 730, "The Red River Valley" (2 texts plus 2 excerpts, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 260, "Red River Valley" (1 text plus 2 excerpts and mention of 3 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 260, "Red River Valley" (3 tunes plus text excerpts)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 182, "The Red River Valley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #59, "The Red River Valley" (1 text)
Cambiaire-EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads, pp. 81-82, "Red River Valley" (1 text)
Fowke/Johnston-FolkSongsOfCanada, pp. 88-89, "The Red River Valley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke/MacMillan-PenguinBookOfCanadianFolkSongs 52, "The Red River Valley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 56, pp. 74-75, "Red River Valley" (1 text)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 130-131, "Red River Valley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-Lomax-FolkSongUSA 65, "Red River Valley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 56, "Red River Valley" (3 texts, 1 tune; the first text is "Red River Valley" and the third is the variant "Lost River Desert"; the second is a variant of "Nobody's Darling on Earth"); also 102, "Red River Gal" (1 text, 1 tune, consisting of square dance instructions set to this rune)
Welsch-NebraskaPioneerLore, pp. 32-34, "The Red River Valley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 511-512, "Red River Valley" (1 text)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-ARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 190-192, "Bright Sherman Valley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abernethy-SingingInTexas, pp. 148-149, "Red River Valley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Tinsley-HeWasSingingThisSong, pp. 208-211, "Red River Valley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, p. 124, "Red River Valley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 46-47, "Red River Valley" (1 text)
Silber-Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 115, "Red River Valley" (1 text)
Fireside-BookOfFolk-Songs, p. 146, "Red River Valley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, p. 457, "Red River Valley" cf. Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, p. 482, "Red River Valley" (source notes only)
DT, REDRIVAL*
ST R730 (Full)
Roud #756

RECORDINGS:
Gene Autry, "Red River Valley" (Columbia 20085/Columbia 37184, 1946)
Bascom & Blackwell, "Sherman Valley" (OKeh 45008, 1925)
Beverly Hillbillies, "Red River Valley" (Brunswick 421/Supertone S-2049 [as Stone Mountain Boys], 1930/Vocalion 03164, 1936)
Bud Billings Trio, "Red River Valley" (Victor V-40267, 1930; Montgomery Ward M-4058, 1933)
[Bud Billings is a pseudonym for Frank Luther; record may have been issued as by Bud Billings & Carson Robison]
Bob Brooks, "Red River Valley" (Columbia 15689-D, 1931)
[Bill] Childers & [Clyde] White, "Red River Valley" (OKeh 45208, 1928)
Luther Clarke & the Blue Ridge Highballers, "Bright Sherman Valley" (Columbia 15069-D, 1926)
Ned Cobben, "Red River Valley" (Harmony 901-H, 1929)
Arthur Fields, "Red River Valley" (Harmony 901-H/Velvet Tone 1901-V/Divco 2901-G/Puritone 1089-S, 1929)
Sid Harvreader, "Red River Valley" (Paramount 3141, 1928; Broadway 8202, c. 1930)
Kelly Harrell, "Bright Sherman Valley" (Victor 20527, 1926; on KHarrell01)
Hill Billies, "Red River Valley" (Regal Zonophone [UK] MR-1698, 1935)
Bradley Kincaid, "Red River Valley" (Champion 15710 [as Dan Hughley]/Supertone 9403, 1929; Champion 45098, c. 1935) (Vocalion 5476, c. 1930/Vocalion 04647, 1939) (Decca 5048, 1934)
Dr. Lloyd & Howard Maxey [Massey], "Bright Sherman Valley" (OKeh, unissued, 1927)
Bascom Lamar Lunsford, "Sherman Valley" (OKeh 45008, 1926)
Frank Luther & Zora Layman, "Bright Sherman Valley" (Decca 5028, 1934)
Harry "Mac" McClintock, "Bright Sherman Valley" (Victor 21421, 1928)
Lester McFarland & Robert A. Gardner, "Bright Sherman Valley" (Brunswick 169/Vocalion 5174, 1927; Supertone S-2031 [as Kentucky Mountain Boys], 1930)
Bill Mooney & his Cactus Twisters, "Red River Valley" (Imperial 1096, n.d. but post-World War II)
Holland Puckett, "The Bright Sherman Valley" (Challenge 329 [as by Harvey Watson]/Gennett 6433/Herwin 75562 [as by Robert Howell]/Silvertone 5064, 25064, 8153, 1927/Supertone 9254 [as by Si Puckett; issued 1929])
Hugh Cross & Riley Puckett, "Red River Valley" (Columbia 15206-D, 1927) (Bluebird B-8335/Montgomery Ward M-8481, 1940; rec. 1939)
Ranch Boys, "Red River Valley" (Decca 5045, 1934)
Goebel Reeves, "Bright Sherman Valley" (Melotone M-12186, 1931)
Texas Jim Robertson, "Red River Valley" (Victor 27552, 1941)
Carson Robison Trio, "Red River Valley" (Romeo 1233/Banner 0615/Perfect 12591/Jewel 5871/Conqueror 7492, 1930) (Clarion 5109-C, 1930) (Crown 3025, 1930)
Pete Seeger, "Red River Valley" (on PeteSeeger32)
Leo Soileau & his Four Aces, "Red River Valley" (Decca 5182, 1936; rec. 1935)
Carl T. Sprague, "Cowboy Love Song" (Victor 20067, 1926)
Ernest V. Stoneman and the Dixie Mountaineers, "Bright Sherman Valley" (Edison 51951, 1927) (CYL: Edison [BA] 5383, 1927)
Sunshine Sue w. Joe Maphis, "Red River Valley" (Astra 1215, n.d.)
Texas Drifter, "Bright Sherman Valley" (Melotone M-12186, 1931)
Art Thieme, "Red River Valley" [instrumental version] (on Thieme02) Vagabonds, "Red River Valley" (Bluebird B-5297/Montgomery Ward M-4479, 1934)

SAME TUNE:
When It's Hogcalling Time (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 158)
Gene Autry & Jimmie Long, "Answer to Red River Valley" (OKeh 03101/Vocalion 03101/Conqueror 8485, 1935; ARC 6-08-51, 1936; Conqueror 9512, 1940)
Hartman's Tennessee Ramblers, "New Red River Valley" (Bluebird B-6162, 1935' Bluebird B-8894 [as Tennessee Ramblers], 1941)

NOTES [633 words]: The Fifes consider their "Little Darling" text ("Come sit by my side, little darling, Come lay your cool hand on my brow, And promise me that you will never Be nobody's darling but Mine") to be a Red River Valley variant. As, however, the chorus does not fit the "Red River Valley" tune, and the rest of the words go with this "Nobody's Darling on Earth," I classify it there.

The Lomaxes are responsible for the claim that the original of this was Kerrigan's "Bright Mohawk Valley" text.

Fuld reports a claim by Fowke that this song predates the Kerrigan text, and that the original was sung as early as 1869 in Canada, referring to the Red River of the North. I know of no direct proof of this claim, but certainly there are early Canadian versions. Plus the song was recorded repeatedly in the early part of the twentieth century, with major variants in text and few versions mentioning the Mohawk Valley; this is certainly indirect evidence that the song is older than the Kerrigan version and originally referred to some other river, presumably either the northern or the southern Red. Given the nature of the texts found by Fowke, I think the reference is indeed to the Red River of the North.

This claim has been strongly supported by John Garst, whose research is far more detailed than mine; he deserves credit for searching through Fowke's work and pointing it out to me. In an interesting footnote, A. T. Emery and O. C. Jillson in 1863 published a song, "The Indian Lover," in which an Indian man courts a white woman. And Jon W. Finson, The Voices That Are Gone: Themes in Nineteenth-Century American Popular Song, Oxford University Press, 1994, p. 259, says that the tune of that piece "bears some resemblance to the tune of 'Red River Valley.'" Given that the Canadian versions involve an Indian WOMAN and a British MAN, did someone take the tune and reverse the roles? I don't know; I would say that the traditional song is much better, lyrically.

The "Sherman Valley" variant is interesting, because there is no significant river by that name. There is a town called Sherman in Texas, though, not far south of the Red River (it's almost due north of Dallas). There is also a Sherman Peak in Colorado, southwest of Denver; it has no connection with the Red River that I can see. - RBW

Polk Brockman, an early producer of country records, claimed to have changed the song's title to "Red River Valley" in order to make it more marketable, since there are so many Red Rivers in North America. His claim is not substantiated, and should probably be taken with many grains of salt.

[Similarly,] The record producer Frank Walker, who worked for Columbia during the 1920s, claimed in a 1962 interview that he had learned the song in his childhood and taught it to Riley Puckett as "Bright Mohawk Valley," but he (Walker) had changed the name to Red River Valley as that would appeal to more customers "because there was no one Red River in the United States but probably eight or ten. ... There is only one Mohawk River." Since Puckett's recording was made on November 3, 1927, and Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag had published it as "Red River Valley" earlier that year, Walker's claim is doubtful. Still, it's interesting that Puckett's 1927 Columbia... recording (with Hugh Cross) seems to have been the first one to bear that title. -PJS
I'd consider Walker's and Brockman's claims (the same claim?) to be more than questionable. If someone had encountered a "Mohawk Valley" text, he might have changed it, but why go from "bright Mohawk" to "Red River"? Why not, say, "Ohio valley," which would be more familiar than all the Red Rivers combined? And while I can't prove the date of the Red River title (although I think Edith Fowke could have), the evidence is strong that it is older. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: R730

Red Rock Canyon Fight, The
DESCRIPTION: "'Twas in camp we lay as you quickly shall hear, McKenzie came to us and bade us to prepare." They are to fight Indians in Red Rock Canyon. The enemy is the Cheyennes who killed Custer. The singer celebrates a thorough victory
AUTHOR: Words: William Earl Smith?
EARLIEST DATE: 1989 (but probably written 1876)
KEYWORDS: battle Indians(Am.)
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Nov 25, 1876 - Battle between the American forces of Ranald S. Mackenzie and Dull Knife's Cheyennes on the Red Fork of the Powder River
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp 571-572, "The Red Rock Canyon Fight" (1 text)
File: CAFS2571

Red Rocks of Bell Isle, The
DESCRIPTION: A Bell Island man is found wounded in a battle in which the Germans are defeated. He thinks of home and has a message to be carried to his mother and sweetheart at Wabana. "It's down with Adolph Hitler, God save our gracious King!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou)
KEYWORDS: war dying patriotic soldier
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 93, "The Red Rocks of Bell Isle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27022
NOTES [12 words]: Wabana is on Bell Island in Conception Bay, not far from St John's. - BS
Last updated in version 5.0
File: LeBe093

Red Rosey Bush
DESCRIPTION: "I wish I was a red rosey bush on thee banks of thee sea. Ever-ri time my true lover pased, He'd pick a rose off of me." "Wish I lived in a lonesome holler, where the sun..." "We have met and we had parted." "Wish I had a golden box to put my love in"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle)
KEYWORDS: floatingverses love nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, p. 62, "Red Rosey Bush" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7529
NOTES [21 words]: This is so massively composite that I couldn't even figure out where to file it. Ditto Steve Roud. So it gets it own entry. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.3
File: Boet062
Red Rover's Song, The

DESCRIPTION: "A merry life is ours, I trow, while o'er the billows' surge we go. Our birthright joy! to care unknown." "The skies may frown, or be they fair, we little look, and less we care." "But oh! our greatest joy will be: to feel, to know we're brace and free."

AUTHOR: words: Edmund Smith (1672-1710) / Music: Chevalier Sigismund von Neukomm (1778-1858) (source: Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)

EARLIEST DATE: before 1843 (source: Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)

KEYWORDS: sailor nonballad

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 49, "The Red Rover Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V36074

NOTES [42 words]: Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs calls lyricist Edmund Smith an "English bard." I never knew the definition of "bard" was "someone who knows nothing about the sea and whose so-called verses induce nausea." We're in the William McGonagall league here, folks. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: FrPi049

Red Sea

DESCRIPTION: "When Moses was leading the Israelites, Red Sea, Pharaoh tried to catch them just for spite, Red Sea. Oh, Pharaoh he got drowned...." The remaining verses are about Jesus and how he cares for and takes away the sins of the poor

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: religious disaster death

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 629, "Red Sea" (1 short text, with one stanza printed under #629 and the rest under #610!)
Wheeler-SteamboatinDays, p. 70-71, "Red Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10021

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Oh, Mary, Don't You Weep" (lyrics)

NOTES [111 words]: It's possible that this is a much-evolved version of "Oh, Mary, Don't You Weep"; they have lyrics in common and are both about the Exodus (at least in their first verses). But they had separated enough that I would consider them separate songs. It's worth noting that the Bible does not say that Pharaoh was drowned in the Red Sea (Sea of Reeds) -- though it doesn't say he wasn't, either. Exodus 14:27-28 reads "the Egyptians fled [into the sea], and YHWH scattered the Egyptians in the midst of the sea. The waters returned and covered Pharaoh's chariots and horsemen and all his army that had followed [the Israelites] into the sea; not one of them survived." - RBW

File: MWhee070

Red Sky at Morning

DESCRIPTION: "Red sky at morning, Sailors take warning, Red sky at night, Sailor's delight." The order of the lines may change, and it may be a shepherd or skipper or other occupation rather than a sailor.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE:

KEYWORDS: sailor warning nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MW,SE)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #446, p. 206, "(Rainbow i' the morning)"
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, pp. 170-171, "Red Sky at Night" (1 text)
Red Wing (I)

DESCRIPTION: Red Wing, "a pretty little Indian maid," is in love with a brave, but he has died in battle. "Now the moon shines down on pretty Red Wing... So far beneath the stars her love is sleeping, While Red Wing's weeping her heart away."

AUTHOR: Kerry Mills and Thurland Chattaway
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (copyright)
KEYWORDS: Indians(Am.) death battle
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SW)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol4, pp. 50-52, "Redwing" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 50, "Red Wing" (1 text, 1 tune)
Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 39, pp. 207-210, "Red Wing" (2 texts, 1 tune; the "A" text is "Red Wing (I)" while the "B" text is one of the bawdy parodies)
DT, REDWNG*

Roud #4784

RECORDINGS:
George W. Ballard & chorus "Red Wing" (CYL: Everlasting 1150, n.d.)
Homer Christopher & Raney Van Vink, "Red Wing" (OKeh 45097, 1927)
Dudley & McDonough "Red Wing" (Victor 17233, 1912)
Redd Evans & his Billy Boys, "Red Wing" (OKeh 4836, 1923)
Fox Chasers, "Red Wing" (OKeh 45477, 1930)
Frankie & Johnny, "Red Wing" (Conqueror 7976, 1932)
Mississippi John Hurt, "Redwing" (on MJHurt05) (fragment)
Buell Kazee, "Red Wing" (Brunswick 210, 1928; Supertone S-2057, 1930 [as Buell Kazee & Sookie Hobbs])
Kendall & Kelly, "Red Wing" (Champion 15582, 1928)
Fred Potter, "Red Wing, An Indian Fable" (CYL: Edison [BA] 541, n.d.)
Frederick H. Potter w. the New York Military Band, "Red Wing" (CYL: Edison [BA] 1543, c. 1912)
Riley Puckett, "Red Wing" (Columbia 15226-D, 1928; rec. 1927)
George Reneau, "Red Wing" (Vocalion 14896, 1924)
Walter Scanlan, "Red Wing" (Edison 52063, 1927)
Stone Mountain Entertainers [Blue Ridge Highballers], "Red Wing" (Broadway 8159, c. 1930; rec. 1927)
Floyd Thompson & his Hometowners "Red Wing" (Vocalion 5331, c. 1929)
Frank Welling & John McGhee "Red Wing" (Conqueror 7976, 1932)
Art Wenzel & his Ragtime Cowboys, "Red Wing" (Pan Am 027, n.d.)
Doc & Cy Williams & the Border Riders, "Red Wing" (Wheeling DW 1008, 1949; on Protobilly)
Male duet, "Red Wing" (Busy Bee A-128, c. 1907)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Red Wing (II)"
cf. "Union Maid" (tune)
cf. "Battle of the Falkland Islands" (approximate tune)
SAME TUNE:
Red Wing (II) (File: EM214)
Wreck of No. 3, The (Daddy Bryson's Last Ride) (File: LSRA2741)
The Moon Shines Bright on Charlie Chaplin (File: BrPa040B)
Union Maid (by Woody Guthrie) (Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, p. 300; Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 132; DT, UNIONMD; recordings on Almanac4, PeteSeeger01, PeteSeeger41, PeteSeeger48)
(Charlie Chaplin parody) (Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 211-212; see under "Red Wing (II)"

NOTES [14 words]: For more on composer Kerry Mills, see the notes on "Meet Me in St. Louis, Louis." - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: FCW050

Red Wing (II)

DESCRIPTION: Red Wing, the unafraid Indian maid, allows the cowboys intimacies, until she is made pregnant.

AUTHOR: original version by Kerry Mills and Thurland Chattaway

EARLIEST DATE: original version copyright 1907

KEYWORDS: bawdy parody whore childbirth Indians(Am.) derivative

FOUND IN: Australia US(MW,Ro,So,SW)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 214-216, "Red Wing" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArmsI, pp. 566-570, "Red Wing" (5 texts, 1 tune)
Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, p. 212, "Redwings" (sic) (1 tune, which Meredith et al seem to associate with the bawdy version)
Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 39, pp. 207-210, "Red Wing" (2 texts, 1 tune; the "A" text is "Red Wing (I)" while the "B" text is one of the bawdy parodies)
DT, REDWN2*

Roud #4784

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Red Wing (I)" (tune, form) and references there
cf. "The Moon Shines Bright on Charlie Chaplin" (lyrics)

NOTES [156 words]: As with most bawdy parodies, there may be several elements combined here. Cray-EroticMuse's version and most of Randolph's involve the Indian Maid quickly losing that distinction at the hand of cowboys. Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2's fragment of text talks about the ragged clothes of Charlie Chaplin (presumably in his "Little Tramp" role). Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging's "B" text has the girl so "afraid some buckaroo would ram it up her flue" that "she crammed it full of sand" to make sure he would not "reach the promised land" -- but it has the Charlie Chaplin chorus. How these elements came to combine, or separate, would need a more detailed study than I am in position to give. The "Charlie Chaplin" verse circulates separately (see "The Moon Shines Bright on Charlie Chaplin"), usually sung to this tune, but one suspects that this song is older and that the Chaplin parody verse just floated in. - RBW

Red-Haired Man's Wife, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer asks his sweetheart, by letter and in person, to leave her husband. She had sworn fidelity but married the red-haired man instead. She will not "break the command" He offers a way out: "For the Patriarch David had a number of wives"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1845 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(2188))

KEYWORDS: courting rejection wife husband marriage hair Bible

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (6 citations):

OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 97, "The Red-Haired Man's Wife" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, REDWIFE

ADDITIONAL: Bell/O Conchubhair, Traditional Songs of the North of Ireland, pp. 60-62, "Bean an Fhir Rua" ("The Red-Haired Man's Wife") [Gaelic and English] (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #3046

BROADSIDES:

Bodleian, Harding B 11(2188), "The Red Haired Man's Wife," J. Pitts (London), 1819-1844; also Firth b.25(347), Harding B 26(564), Firth c.18(83), "The Red Haired Man's Wife"; 2806 c.16(206), 2806 b.9(113), Harding B 25(1603)[some words illegible], "The Red Hair'd Man's Wife"

NOTES [448 words]: According to Milner and Kaplan, A Bonny Bunch of Roses, this is based on a Gaelic song, Bean An Fhir Ruaidh.

The argument that the Patriarch David was repeatedly married has its problems. There is the nitpicky one that, based on the standard definition, he was not a Patriarch; the Patriarchs preceded the Judges, and David was after.

More to the point, while David had many wives, and they produced many sons, the sons fought over the inheritance; eventually the oldest three died at the hands of their relatives. Solomon, the survivor, also took many wives, but they "turned away his heart after other gods" (2 Kings 11:3). Indeed, when David died, one of the wives (Bathsheba) manipulated David to put her son Solomon on the throne (1 Kings 1:11-40), even though he was to prove unfit for the job. So multiple wives seem to have been rather bad news.

Various others in the Bible had multiple wives, but the only significant patriarch to have multiple wives simultaneously was Jacob, who had two wives (Rachel and Leah) and two concubines, who collectively gave birth to the Twelve Tribes of Israel.

I know of no instance whatsoever of a wife in the Bible with multiple husbands. Unless you count the Woman of Samaria, anyway (John 4:16-19); Jesus said that she had had five husbands and was apparently cohabiting with a sixth man. But this was presumably sequential marriage -- and Jesus pretty clearly disapproved.

There is one interesting sidelight: Recent research seems to indicate that women are most likely to have affairs when they are at the most fertile time of their monthly cycle. The rest of the time, they aren't interested. This is unconscious; the women themselves are not aware of when they are fertile. It just seems to be the urge (found in many apparently monogamous creatures) for the female to get the best male genes. Maybe the singer showed up at the wrong time. Or maybe he was as genetically hopeless as the song makes him sound. - RBW

The song translated from Gaelic in Bell/O Conchubhair is quite different from the "Englished" version. Further, there is a story to be told that sets the stage: "Our song is no simple tale of lust. Fair lad and red-head were apprentices to the rich tailor. His only daughter and the fair lad were in love, betrothed to be married.... The foxy boy stole some silver knives of the tailor's and hid them in his rival's baggage [cf. Genesis 44]. Discovered. Three years in gaol. Came out to find his love married to the rogue." Now the song starts in either version; in the Gaelic he has no answer from her but the outcome is likely the same.
Hoagland's version follows the story told in Bell/O Conchubhair commentary. - BS
Last updated in version 6.1
File: OLoc097

Red, Rosy Morning, The
DESCRIPTION: "The sweet rosy morning smiles over the hills." Rise from sleep and hunt the fox or stag. At day's end, sport being over, we drink. "Let love crown this night ... and sport crown the day"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1889 (Smith)
KEYWORDS: hunting sex drink nonballad animal dog horse
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 58, "The Rosy Morn" (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 365); Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 58-59, "The Red, Rosy Morning" (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Ox 186) (2 texts)
ADDITIONAL: Laura Alex. Smith, "Old Songs of the Chase" in The Idler (London, 1899 ("Digitized by Google")) Vol. XV (Feb-Jul 1899), p. 850, "The Sweet Rosy Morning" (1 text, 1 tune).
Roud #21097
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Morning Was Charming" (same theme and shared lines)
NOTES [33 words]: The line "The merry merry Horn cries, come, come" is quoted in [anonymous], The Cheshire Huntress and the Old Fox Caught at Last, a Dramatic Tale (London, 1740 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 8. - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: WT058

Red, White, and Red, The
DESCRIPTION: The Confederate soldiers proudly boast of their new flag, "The Red, White, and Red!" They promise the guard their land, and proclaim, "They never will subdue us, that you will see. While there's Davis, Bragg, Beauregard, Johnson, and Lee...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl)
KEYWORDS: Civilwar patriotic bragging
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
June 10, 1861 - Battle of Big Bethel. Although trivial in size (some 6000 troops engaged, casualties totalling about 110), it was the first land battle of the war. Federal troops under Benjamin Butler ("Old Picayune," almost certainly the worst general of the war) were easily defeated by Confederates under John Bankhead Magruder
Nov. 8, 1861 - The Trent Affair (The Mason and Slidell Affair): The two Confederate diplomats are taken off the Trent by Captain Charles Wilkes of the San Jacinto in clear violation of the then-current international policy regarding neutral rights
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 22, "The Red, White, and Red" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 223, "On the Plains of Manassas" (1 text, with a stray reference to Manassas but otherwise this song)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 375, "The Red, White, and Red" (3 texts; the "A" text, with mentions of Mason and Slidell and Manassas, seems to be a later, expanded version)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 375, "Red, White, and Red" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
ST Wa022 (Partial)
Roud #769
NOTES [358 words]: This song is item dA36 in Laws's Appendix II.
Among the figures mentioned in this song are:
Magruder - John Bankhead Magruder, winner at Big Bethel, set aside after the Peninsula campaign
Old Picayune - Benjamin F. Butler, a complete military incompetent who always kept his job because of his Republican political connections. He seems to have been given his nickname after a (female) character in a minstrel song, Picayune Butler (see "Picayune Butler, Is She Coming to Town").

Davis - Jefferson Davis, Confederate president (at this time still a provisional president)
Bragg - Braxton Bragg, at the time of Big Bethel a general commanding part of the southern coast. He later was appointed commander of the Army of Tennessee
Beauregard - P.G.T. Beauregard, who had directed the bombardment at Fort Sumter and later held field command at First Bull Run (though his later career was not overly successful)
Johnson - almost certainly an error, either for Albert Sidney Johnston (first commander of the Tennessee army, killed at Shiloh) or Joseph E. Johnston, who preceded Lee in command in northern Virginia and held a succession of later posts
Lee - Robert E. Lee (who did not achieve a significant command in the Confederate army until 1862)
Stonewall - Thomas "Stonewall": Jackson, at the time of Big Bethel commanding a small force near Harper's Ferry but destined to command a famous brigade at First Bull Run and, of course, become Lee's chief subordinate and a southern legend.

"The Mason and Slidell Affair": James Mason and John Slidell were Confederate diplomats who were bound for London and Paris, were on the British ship Trent when it was stopped by the U. S. S. San Jacinto commanded by Charles Wilkes. Wilkes took off the diplomats, prompting a furor. Washington eventually gave in to British and French pressure and sent Mason and Slidell on to their destinations.
McCulloch: Ben McCulloch, a general in the west, one of the co-commanders at Wilson's Creek, killed at Pea Ridge. Despite the song, he never gave evidence of enough competence to truly frighten the Yankees, and he never was sole commander at a major battle. - RBW

Redbird and Jaybird
DESCRIPTION: "The jaybird sat on the redbird's nest. The redbird sat and mourned." Verses about the birds and their lives, with additional (floating?) material about partridges pulling a plow, a man riding a goose across a creek, etc.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: bird courting
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCollectionNCFolklore3 154, "Redbird and Jaybird" (2 texts; "A" appears to be mixed and "B" is a fragment)
NOTES [43 words]: Although the older of Brown's two sources lists the redbird as sitting on the jaybird's nest, the newer version, in which the jaybird moves in on the cardinal, is almost certainly correct. Jays are related to crows, and will make off with other birds' eggs. - RBW

Redemption Song, The
DESCRIPTION: Adam and Eve squander "the heritage of heaven." Christ confounds the sages in the temple, heals the sick, shares "the Pasch," is crucified, rises and "redeemed us all." "We're safe from Satan's wrath." "That will lead us home to Heaven and our Salvation"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Tunney-StoneFiddle)
KEYWORDS: death religious Jesus Bible
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tunney-StoneFiddle, pp. 47-48, "The Redemption Song" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Bean Dubh an Ghleanna" (tune, according to Tunney-StoneFiddle)
File: TSF047
Redesdale and Wise William [Child 246]

DESCRIPTION: Redesdale tells William that he can win any woman's favor "wi ae blink o my ee." William bets his head against Redesdale's lands that Redesdale cannot win his sister. Redesdale courts the sister, fails to win her (though he burns down her house)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1818 (Buchan/Moreira-TheGlenbuchatBallads)
KEYWORDS: courting sex gambling virtue wager
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber,Bord))
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Child 246, "Redesdale and Wise William" (3 texts)
Bronson 246, "Redesdale and Wise William" (1 version, properly associated with "Johnnie Cock")
Lyle/McAlpine/McLucas-SongRepertoireOfAmeliaAndJaneHarris, pp. 50-57, "Roudesdales" (2 texts)
Buchan/Moreira-TheGlenbuchatBallads, pp. 132-135, "Wise William and Redesdale" (2 text)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 144-146, "Reedisdale and Wise William" (1 text)
Roud #243
CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "The Fiddler's Bitch" (plot)
 cf. "The Twa Knights" (plot)
File: C246

Reedy Lagoon, The

DESCRIPTION: "The sweet scented wattle sheds perfume around Delighting the bird and the bee, While I lie and take rest in my fern-covered nest." The rambler relaxes and thinks back on the friends and the girl he has left behind. He misses them, but cares little

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964
KEYWORDS: rambling Australia separation
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, pp. 144-145, "The Reedy Lagoon" (1 text, 1 tune)
Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads, pp. 52-54, "The Reedy Lagoon" (1 text)
DT, REEDYLAG*
NOTES [106 words]: Although the author of this seems to be unknown, Manifold in his various writings is somewhat sarcastic about how it is treated as a folk song despite a lack of real evidence of traditionality. I agree that it sounds composed.
Gwenda Beed Davey and Graham Seal, _A Guide to Australian Folklore_, Kangaroo Press, 2003, p. 266, say of the Wattle "Folk name of the native [Australian] plant species Acacia. Wattle is a popular Australian icon, and is also favoured in folksong and popular verse for romantic and sentimental death scenes. Possibly due to this association, some people believe it is unlucky to have wattle in the house. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: PASB144

Reedy River

DESCRIPTION: "Ten miles down Reedy River, a pool of water lies, And all the year it mirrors the changes in the skies." The singer recalls riding with Mary Campbell to the pool. They build a homestead. But now "The wattle blossoms golden above my Mary's grave."

AUTHOR: Words: Henry Lawson (1867-1922) / Music: Chris Kempster
EARLIEST DATE: 1981 (recording, Bok/Trickett/Muir)
KEYWORDS: love courting river death burial racing farming
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
DT, REEDYRIV
ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 42, #1 (1997), p. 27, "Reedy River" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [140 words]: This is pretty definitely not traditional, but now well enough known among folkies that I included this entry as a placeholder to say it's not traditional.

Davey/Seal on p. 266 add of the Wattle "Folk name of the native [Australian] plant species Acacia. Wattle is a popular Australian icon, and is also favoured in folksong and popular verse for romantic and sentimental death scenes. Possibly due to this association, some people believe it is unlucky to have wattle in the house. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1

File: DTreedri

Reel o' Stumpie, The

DESCRIPTION: "Hap and rowe, hap and rowe, hap and rowe the feetie O, I thought I was a maiden fair 'Till I heard the grettie o't." The girl's father was a fiddle, her mother made mantie; she danced the "Reel o' Stumpie" and now must attend the child that is the result

AUTHOR: (adapted by Robert Burns)

EARLIEST DATE: 1800 (Scots Musical Museum)

KEYWORDS: courting sex children music

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (3 citations):

- MacColl-PersonalChoice, p. 22, "The Reel o' Stumpie, O" (1 text, 1 tune)
- DT, STUMPREL*

ADDITIONAL: James Kinsley, editor, Burns: Complete Poems and Songs (shorter edition, Oxford, 1969) #573, p. 678, "The Reel o' Stumpie" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #7252

CROSS-REFERENCES:

- cf. "Hap and Row" (lyrics, tune?)

NOTES [53 words]: Roud lumps this with "Hap and Row," from which it is presumably derived, but Burns did rewrite at least somewhat. Interestingly, Burns's text begins "Wap and rowe, wap and row," but I've always heard it sun "Hap and row(e). Evidently the versions cross-fertilized, so having them under one Roud number perhaps makes sense.

Last updated in version 6.1

File: RBReeStu

Reform and Whigs

DESCRIPTION: A wife complains of politics which has driven her husband "clean dementit." He has no time for work "to save us frae starvation" for worrying about the nation's problems. She begs him "Leave them wha can to mak' the laws ... let the nation look to itsel"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: nonballad political husband wife

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

- Greig/Duncan3 596, "Reform and Whigs" (1 text)

Roud #6046

CROSS-REFERENCES:

- cf. "The Quaker's Wife" (tune, per Greig/Duncan3)

File: GrD3596

Regular Army-O, The

DESCRIPTION: The volunteer joined the army three years ago, and has been suffering every since under "Sergeant John McCafferty and Corporal Donahue" as well as "forty miles a day on beans and hay." Captured by Indians, the soldiers at last escape army life

AUTHOR: Words: Edward Harrigan / Music: (adapted and arranged by?) David Braham EARLIEST DATE: 1874 (sheet music published by Wm. A. Pond & Co, New York

KEYWORDS: soldier army warning abuse
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Finson-Edward-Harrigan-David-Braham, vol. I, #3, pp. 11-14, "The Regular Army O!" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dean-FlyingCloud, p. 67, "The Regular Army, Oh" (1 text)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 177, "The Regular Army-O" (1 text, 1 tune)
Emerson-StephenFosterAndCo, pp. 124-126, "The Regular Army O!" (1 text)
DT, REGARMY*
ST LoF177 (Partial)
Roud #4747
RECORDINGS:
Mick Moloney, "The Regular Army O" (on HarriganBrahamMaloney)
NOTES [309 words]: For background on Harrigan, Hart, and Braham, see the notes to "The Babies on Our Block."
According to Moody, pp. 52, 261, this was introduced in the sketch "The Regular Army O!" on October 19, 1874. It "introduced the high-stepping Skidmores, the blackfaced guard that was to march and sing through the Mulligan series." That is, the Skidmores were the rival marching company that contended against the Mulligan Guard that was the subject of most of Edward Harrigan's most-loved plays.
The tune of this, at least as sung by Mick Moloney, is very close to the one I know for "Let Mr. McGuire Sit Down." Which perhaps makes it interesting that the music of this is not listed as written by David Braham but just "adapted and arranged" by Braham. According to Kahn, p. 153, this was "an enormously popular tune that spoofed contemporary recruiting methods and was alleged by one Regular Army officer, Captain Charles King, a novelist as well as a soldier, to have grievously curtailed enlistments; but actually the composers had merely appropriated and revised an old soldier song that troops sniping at the Indians had been chanting for quite some time previous."
I have a very curious sheet music copy of this, on green paper, which appears to be a modified facsimile of the original, with the original printing copied but extra space added between the staves to insert an additional verse about the Indian Wars. A small blurb added to the cover "(This song was to the Indian Wars what 'Hinkey Dinky, Parlez Vous?' and 'Sound Off!' were to World Wars I and II." The bottom space on the remaining pages attempts to explain the text of the song, especially the added verse 5. It took a lot of hunting, but I finally noticed a footnote saying "1962 edition, with additions and glossary, copyright by Don Rickey, Jr." -- but it doesn't list a publisher.- RBW
Bibliography

Last updated in version 5.2
File: LoF177

Reid Hoose
DESCRIPTION: "Reid Hoose it is a fairm toon It stands upon a knowe Ye maybe ken the fairmer o't For he's a muckle yewe."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: farming nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 362, "Reid Hoose" (1 fragment)
Roud #5905
NOTES [42 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan3 fragment. - BS
I have a feeling this is built upon "The Earl of Errol" [Child 231] or one of its metrical offspring, but there is no evidence of this except the form of the Greig/Duncan fragment. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD3362
Reid's Express

DESCRIPTION: "You'll get on board of Reid's Express to travel the icy rail" to the station at Badger Brook and lumber "just like a slave... 'twill carry you to your grave." "When I gets home no more I'll roam and the lumbering woods I'll shun."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: lumbering hardtimes logger
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peacock, pp. 757-758, "Reid's Express" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9800
RECORDINGS:
Everett Bennett, "Reid's Express" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
NOTES [182 words]: Badger Brook, later Badger, is not far from Bonavista Bay on the northeast coast of Newfoundland. - BS
The Reid Newfoundland Company built most of the Newfoundland Railway; hence the reference to Reid in the song title. For a bit more about the truly incredible bargain that put Robert Reid and his enterprise in charge of the Railway, see the notes to "The Wreck of the Steamship Ethie." For the hard times experienced by the men who worked on the railway, see "The Bonavist Line."
The claim that the workers earned $23 for three months' work is perhaps indicative. Peacock, dividing $23 by 13 weeks, comes up with $1.77 per week, or 25 cents per day. In fact (see again the notes on "The Bonavist Line") their normal pay was $1 per day, which presumably means $6 per week (since they would have Sundays, but probably not Saturdays, off) -- but $2.50 per week was deducted for their lodging, leaving $3.50 per week. Which happens to be almost exactly twice $1.77. So the workers in this song were being paid half the amount paid the railroad workers. This probably tells us something. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: Pea757

Reidh-chnoc Mna Sidhe (The Dark Fairy Rath)

DESCRIPTION: The singer "in search of my love" meets her and is warned. "'Touch me not, and approach me not near; I belong to this Rath, and the Fairy host here.'" He tries to hold her but she disappears.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1884 (Mangan's translation _Poets and Poetry of Munster,_ according to OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)
KEYWORDS: courting magic supernatural foreignlanguage abduction beauty separation
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (3 citations):
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 43, "The Dark Fairy Rath" (1 text, 1 tune)
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 122, "Re-chnoc Mna Duibhe" (7 texts)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 173, "The Dark Fairy Rath" (1 text)
"The original Gaelic of this song is attributed to George Roberts about whom, if he existed, nothing is known" (source: OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads). - BS Ben's description of the Gaelic of this read "Gaelic. The singer meets and falls in love with a woman taken by the fairies. She discourages his advances but he puts his arms around her. "But, when I glanced up, behold! nought could I see. She had fled from my sight as a bird from the tree!"
In the earliest known phase of Irish mythology, the Sidhe (Aes Sidhe, the People of the Hills) were the remnants of the Tuatha De Danaan, who had been defeated and driven underground by the Celtic invaders. Later the name came to be used of any generic fairy or sprite -- but the first sense may have more meaning in context.
A rath was the Irish name for a fortification or earthwork. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.1
File: OLCM043
Reign, Massa Jesus

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "O reign (x3) my Saviour, Reign Massa Jesus, reign, O reign salvation in my soul, Reign Massa Jesus reign." Verses: "I never shall forget that day ... Jesus washed my sins away" "I never felt such love before ... 'Go in peace and sin no more'"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 49, "Reign, Massa Jesus" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 175 in the 1909 edition)
Roud #15281
NOTES [24 words]: In Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute's verses, every alternate line is "Reign Massa Jesus, reign." - BS
Last updated in version 4.0
File: Dett049

Reign, Master Jesus

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, reign, oh, reign, Oh. reign my Savior, Reigh, Master Jesus, reign, Oh, reign salvation in my poor soul, Reigh, Master Jesus, reign." "I tell you now as I told you before... To the promised land I'm bound to go." "I never shall forget that day"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro, p. 72, "Reign, Oh Reign" (1 text)
Roud #12082
File: FSAN072

Rejected Lover, The [Laws P10]

DESCRIPTION: The girl tells the singer not to return; she prefers freedom to marriage. She later changes her mind; he is no longer interested. She warns others against her mistake

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: courting rejection loneliness
FOUND IN: Ireland US(Ap,MW,SE)
REFERENCES (15 citations):
Laws P10, "The Rejected Lover"
Cox/Hercog/Halpert/Boswell-WVirginia-B, #15, pp. 155-156, "You Can't Come Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, pp. 120-121, "The Rejected Lover" (1 text, 1 tune, although most of the lyrics float)
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, p. 66, "The Two Lovers" (1 text, 1 tune, probably this although the recording was imperfect and the song incomplete); p. 159, "The Rejected Lover" (1 text, 1 tune, Gainer's floating-lyrics text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 91, "Servant Man" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 91, "Servant Man" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 139-140, "Do Come Back Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 145, "You Can't Come Again" (1 short text)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 109, "The Rejected Lover" (10 texts, 10 tunes, but version "A" is actually a mishmash of floaters including "Who will shoe..." and "A-roving on a winter's night...")
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, pp. 50-51, "My Lost Love" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 136, "Once I Knew a Little Girl" (1 text, 1 tune, with gender roles reversed and many floating lyrics)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 136-137, "The Rejected Lover" (1 text)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H589, p. 344, "The Rejected Lover" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 495, REJCTLVR*
ADDITIONAL: James P. Leary, Compiler and Annotator, _Wisconsin Folklore_ University of Wisconsin Press, 2009, article "Kentucky Folksong in Northern Wisconsin" by Asher E. Treat, pp. 233-234, "I Once Knew a Little Girl" (1 text, 1 tune, sung by Pearl Jacobs Borusky and also by Mrs. M. G. Jabobs)
Roud #412
RECORDINGS:
Eddie and Gracie Butcher, "Don't Come Again" (on IREButcher01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Nancy (II)" [Laws P12] (theme)
cf. "The Slighted Suitor" (plot)
cf. "Braes of Strathblane" (plot)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Alexander
NOTES [372 words]: The notes to Henry/Huntington/Herrmann question the connection between their "Rejected Lover" song and Laws P10. They have a point; there isn't much lyric similarity. The plots are alike, however, and the form -- and the two are so widely separated in space that great divergences are possible. Plus there are almost no other versions clearly associated with the Henry text. It seemed easier to lump them.
The Henry text contains several odd Biblical allusions. First, "I'll travel to Mount Nebo, where Moses viewed the Ark." This is patently absurd. Mount Nebo is in Moab, many hundreds of kilometres from Urartu (Ararat), the resting place of the Ark. What Moses saw from Mount Nebo was the future homeland of the Israelites (Deuteronomy 34:1-5).
Equally strange is the reference to Mount Ararat as the place "where Noah did embark." The ark came to rest on the mountains of Ararat (plural! -- Genesis 8:4). But there is no reason to think he started there.
There are several mysteries about this song. Laws lists only the texts from Sharp, ignoring Brown and the various references there. The notes in Brown don't help; they link it with "The Lonesome (Stormy) Scenes of Winter" [Laws H12] -- which it may have influenced, but which is clearly not the same song.
Cox's and Fuson's versions seem to form a subgroup (which may even be an independent song which has mixed with this one), marked by the steady use of the title line "(You/I) (can't/need not) come again." Both versions, though rather defective, stress an exchange of letters (perhaps the young man has joined the army?); this may have been imported from "A Rich Irish Lady (The Fair Damself from London; Sally and Billy; The Sailor from Dover; Pretty Sally; etc.)" [Laws P9].
The Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin version, from Pearl Jacobs Barusky, is yet again different, in that the gender roles reverse and very many of the lyrics float. I thought about splitting it off -- especially since Laws didn't list a related version found in JAPL. And yet there are lyric similarities. Defining this piece is almost impossible; Roud before me threw up his hands and started lumping things like mad; I'm forced to do the same until someone can do a real study of the family. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: LP10

Relief of Derry, The
DESCRIPTION: "Dartmouth spreads her snow-white sail, Her purple pennant flying O: While we the gallant Browning hail, Who saved us all from dying" [Mountjoy] rams the blockade and seems stranded -- "we mourned our falling city" -- but "a favouring gale" frees it.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark)
KEYWORDS: battle rescue death Ireland patriotic food
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Jul 28, 1689 - Browning's ships break the 105 day seige of Derry (source: Kilpatrick [see Notes])
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark 8, "The Relief of Derry" (1 text)
Religion Is the Best of All

DESCRIPTION: "Oh it's come along fathers And don't you want to go, And join that happy company That's going on before." Chorus: "Religion is the best of all (x3), I feel it in my soul." Continues for mothers, brothers, sisters, etc.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SO)
REFERENCES (1 citation): Randolph 656, "Religion Is the Best of All" (1 text)
Roud #7579
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Am Going to Heaven" (lyrics)
File: R656

Religion So Sweet (I)

DESCRIPTION: "O walk Jordan long road, And religion so sweet. O religion is good for anything, And religion so sweet." "Religion makes you happy." "O member, get religion." "O I gwine to meet my savior." "I seek my Lord and I find him."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation): Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 13, "Religion So Sweet" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11847
RECORDINGS:
Lawrence McKiver and the McIntosh County Shouters, "Religion, So Sweet" (on McIntosh1)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Religion So Sweet (II)" (lyrics)
cf. "My Bible Leads to Glory" (lyrics)
File: AWG013A

Religion So Sweet (II)

DESCRIPTION: Baptizing song/sermon: "Let's go down to Jurdon (x2)... De ol' ribber Jurdon is mighty deep, but 'ligion is so sweet." The candidates are told of the benefits of baptism, told that Jesus requires it, and reminded of the "sweetness" of religion

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation): Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 582-583, "Ligion So Sweet" (1 text)
Roud #11061
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Religion So Sweet (I)" (lyrics)
cf. "Let's Go Down to the Water" (lyrics)
File: LxA582
Remember A, Remember B
DESCRIPTION: "Remember A, remember B, But first of all, remember me."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Henry, from Mary King)
KEYWORDS: love
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 232, (third of several "Fragments from Tennessee") (1 fragment)
NOTES [31 words]: This sounds like something from a greeting card to me, but Henry presents it as a fragment of a song, so we index it. Even though the above sentence is longer than Henry's fragment.... - RBW
File: MHAp232E

Remember Me (I)
DESCRIPTION: The singer's ship is ready to sail. He hopes his sweetheart and old Ireland boys will remember him. They spend the night drinking together and he sails away. He bids Killarney farewell. "Alas my friends I am away, Here's my hand but you have my heart"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 19C (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 26(567))
KEYWORDS: love emigration farewell sea ship Ireland nonballad friend drink
FOUND IN:
Roud #2995
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 26(567), "Remember Me" ("Our ship is ready to sajl [sic] away"), P. Brereton (Dublin), c.1867; also 2806 c.8(216), 2806 b.9(3), 2806 c.8(290), "Remember Me"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Our Ship Sails Ready to Sail Away" (shares opening verses)
NOTES [106 words]: Wright-Irish (Irish Emigrant Ballads and Songs) pp. 111, 170-173, has two versions of "Our Ship Sails Ready to Sail Away" and one of "Remember Me" and considers them to be variants of the same song. His longest version of "Our Ship ..." and his "Remember Me" share three verses almost exactly; "Our Ship ..." adds six 4-line verses and "Remember Me" adds five 4-line verses and, in these lines, the songs share no lines. "Our Ship ..." is a farewell to Nora, and besides to Dublin, Delgany and Wicklow; "Remember Me" is a farewell to old Ireland boys, and besides to Killarney. My inclination is to keep them as two separate songs. - BS
Last updated in version 5.1
File: BdRemMeI

Remember Me (II)
DESCRIPTION: "Remember days past, Remember me ... Oh Lord, remember me." "Remember dying days ... Oh Lord, remember me."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (USSealsland01)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Janie Hunter and the Moving Star Hall Singers, "Remember Me" (on USSealsland01)
Menhaden Fishermen, "Remember Me" (on USMenhadens01)
Southeast Alabama and Florida Union Sacred Harp Singing Convention, "Pisgah" (on USFlorida01)
NOTES [198 words]: The current description is based on the USSealsland01 text. The USSealsland01 hymn is the first track on the album and was apparently the opener for the festival. That suits its place as a hymn. It is very slow, without clapping or acceleration. The words are followed by the tune, hummed. It is typical of the Devotion as opposed to the later Service. "[T]he relatively somber mood of Devotion yields to the Service, whose rhythmic songs and sermon bring down the Holy Spirit" [Walter F. Pitts, Old Ship of Zion: The Afro-Baptist Ritual in the African Diaspora (New York: Oxford University Press, 1993), p. 24].
This may be a modified chorus of a version of Isaac Watts's "Alas And Did My Savior Bleed." See, for example, William Booth, Salvation Army Music (London: The Salvation Army Book Department, 1900 ("Digitized by Microsoft")) #58 p. 55, "Remember me." The chorus is "Remember me, remember me, O Lord, remember me; Remember Lord, Thy dying groans, And then remember me."
The Menhaden01 verse "I once was lost But now I am found Was blind But now I see" is shared with "Amazing Grace." As on USSeasland01, the hymn is very slow, and sung without clapping or acceleration. - BS

Last updated in version 4.2
File: RcJHReMe

Remember Me and My Old Woman

DESCRIPTION: "Remember me and my old woman Around the fire and it a boomen" (sic.; probably means "booming")

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1891 (Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore)

KEYWORDS: nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, p. 134, "(Remember me and)" (1 text)

File: SaKo134R

Remember Me Early

DESCRIPTION: "Remember me early, remember me late, Remember the night we swang on the garden gate."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Henry, from Mrs. Henry C. Gray, or her maid)

KEYWORDS: nonballad courting

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 239, (no title) (1 short text)

File: MHAp239A

Remember Me When Far Away

DESCRIPTION: "Remember me when far away And only half awake, Remember me on your wedding day And send me a slice of cake."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1884 (J. S. Ogilvie, "One Thousand Popular Quotations... Suitable for Writing in Autograph Albums")

KEYWORDS: food wedding nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MA,MW)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, pp. 123-124, "(Remember Me When Far Away)" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: J. S. Ogilvie, _One Thousand Popular Quotations Comprising the Choicest Thoughts and Sayings of Eminent Writers of All Ages, Together With Nearly Three Hundred Original and Choice Selections, Suitable for Writing in Autograph Albums_, J. S. Ogilvie, Publisher (New York & Chicago), 1884 (available on Google Books), p. 50 of Part II, "Remember Me When Far Away" (1 text)

NOTES [99 words]: This is one of many items Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore extracted from the autograph album of George Washington Franklin, which he maintained 1882 to 1895 or after. Web searches for this quote turned up more than a dozen versions of this, one of which even showed up in a national news story (which was the chief source of hits). Since this is clearly a parody, it must have been in oral tradition, though I cannot prove that it is a song. To the Ogilvie text, compare also a text on p. 58 of part II of Ogilvie: "Remember me when far, far of, Where the woodchucks die of the whooping cough." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5
Remember the Alamo
DESCRIPTION: "When on the wide spread battle plain, The horseman's hand can scarce restrain, His pampered steed.... Remember the Alamo," The singer hears the bugle blast, and declares that many Mexicans will die. He urges others to arms
AUTHOR: Words: T. A. Durriage ?
EARLIEST DATE: 1840 (Rough and Ready Songster, according to COhen)
KEYWORDS: battle war Mexico nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, p. 515, "Remember the Alamo" (1 text)

Remember the Glories of Brian the Brave
DESCRIPTION: "Remember the glories of Brian the brave... To light us to victory yet." Tell the invading Danes that we prefer "to bleed for an age ... than to sleep but a moment in chains." Do not let those that died "upon Ossory's plain" have fallen in vain
AUTHOR: Thomas Moore (1779-1852)
EARLIEST DATE: 1846 (Moore-IrishMelodies-1846)
KEYWORDS: battle nonballad patriotic Ireland
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Apr 23, 1014 - Battle of Clontarf. Victory and death of Brian Boru
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Moore-IrishMelodies-1846, pp. 8-10, "(Remember the glories of Brien the Brave" (1 text)
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 48, "Brian the Brave" (1 text)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 48, "Remember the Glories of Brian the Brave" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Edward Hayes, The Ballads of Ireland (Boston, 1859), Vol I, p. 111, "Brian the Brave"
Roud #12820
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 26(75), "Brian the Brave", The Poet's Box (Belfast), 1846-1852; also Harding B 15(33a), "Brian the Brave"
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Brien the Brave
NOTES [139 words]: Brian Boru (Bóruma), born c. 942, became king of Munster after the murder of his brother Mathgamain in 976, and then set out to become High King of Ireland. By about 1002, he was recognized as such by most major Irish lords. Although Brian's enemies are called Danes in the song, in fact they were Viking raiders allied with rebels from Leinster (see, e.g. Mike Cronin, A History of Ireland, p. 8; Peter and Fiona Somerset Fry, A History of Ireland, p. 56). The two sides met at the Battle of Clontarf, on Good Friday 1014, and Brian's Munster forces were victorious though he was slain. In practice, that was a defeat for Brian, since it ended the fragile Irish unity. The Vikings did go away, for the most part -- but that was more because Swein Forkbeard and his son Canute were conquering England than anything else. - RBW, (BS)
Last updated in version 6.1

Remember the Poor
DESCRIPTION: "Cold winter is coming with his keen cutting breath...." With the fields barren and the cold coming on, the listeners are urged to remember the poor. This is urged both because the listeners have something to spare and because it is the Christian thing
AUTHOR: Words: John Fielding / Music: H. T. Dyring (source: broadside LOCSheet, sm1877 01347)
EARLIEST DATE: 1812 (The Ulverston New Poetical Miscellany)
Remember the Poor Tramp Has to Live

DESCRIPTION: Singer, a tramp, tells how hard his life is, asks for understanding. Chorus ends "Remember that the poor tramp has to live"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (recording, Walter Morris)

KEYWORDS: poverty rambling begging hardtimes hobo

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 351-354, "The Poor Tramp Has to Live" (1 text plus a broadside print, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 357, "The Tramp Song" (1 text, a noticeably defective transcription)

Roud #11720

RECORDINGS:
Blue Ridge Singers, "The Tramp Song" (Columbia 15647-D, 1931; rec. 1930)
Dock Boggs, "Railroad Tramp" (on Boggs2, BoggsCD1)
Walter Morris, "The Railroad Tramp" (Columbia 15101-D, 1926)
Ernest V. Stoneman, "The Poor Tramp Has to Live" (matrix GEX 493-A recorded 1927, released 1927-1928 as: Herwin 75535 [as by Stoneman], Gennett 6044 [as by Ernest V. Stoneman and his Graysen County Boys], Challenge 324/Challenge 398/Champion 15233 [all as by Uncle Jim Seaney], Challenge 244/Silvertone 5001/Silvertone 8155/Silvertone 25001/Supertone 9255 [all as by Uncle Ben Hawkins]); "The Poor Tramp" (Victor 20672, 1927); Ernest V. Stoneman and His Dixie Mountaineers, "Remember the Poor Tramp Has to Live" (Edison, unissued, 1928); Ernest Stoneman [and Eddie Stoneman], "Broke Down Section Hand" (Vocalion 02655, 1934)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Tramp (II)" (plot)
cf. "The Tramp's Story" (plot)

NOTES: Boggs states he learned the song from a recording in the late 1920s, but as he doesn't give a name or title I left initially Boggs' recording as the earliest verified to date. The Walter Morris recording is placed here tentatively; if it can be verified as this song, it would constitute the earliest verified appearance. - PJS

I don't know what Boggs's source was, but Ernest V. Stoneman and the Stoneman Family recorded this on several occasions, the first in 1927. It appears possible that the Brown version (which comes from a manuscript collection) predates this, but unfortunately this is one of the many undated items in the collection; we don't even know when Brown received the manuscript. The first appearance of the song Cohen could find was a Wehman broadside, apparently in print by 1886; it lists Billy Kearney as the author, and the tune as "True As Steel." It is very different from the Stoneman text and doesn't even mention railroads. I'd call them recensionally different -- perhaps even separate songs -- and so leave the Stoneman recording as the earliest date, subject to Paul's caveat about the Morris recording. - RBW
File: RcRtPTHL

Remember Well and Bear In Mind
DESCRIPTION: "Remember well and bear in mind, A faithful/gentle/honest/tender friend is hard to fine, But when you find one kind and true, Never change the old one for the new."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1890 (autograph album of George Washington Franklin, according to Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore)
KEYWORDS: friend nonballad floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, p. 123, "(Remember well and bear in mind)" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "My Blue-Eyed Boy" (lyrics)
NOTES [125 words]: This verse seems to have floated, in whole or in part, into several songs, including "My Blue-Eyed Boy," but it apparently exists in isolation as well, so I've given it its own entry.
This is one of many items Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore extracted from the autograph album of George Washington Franklin, which he maintained 1882 to 1895 or after.
Web searches for this quote find many people attributing this to Laura Ingalls Wilder (although none of them actually said where she published it!). But Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore's quote precedes any of Laura's published writings, and Brewster apparently picked it up in Indiana. I'd call that traditional, although I wouldn't bet on it ever having been sung except as part of "My Blue-Eyed Boy." - RBW
Last updated in version 4.5
File: SaKo123R

Remember Well and Don't Forget
DESCRIPTION: "Remember well and don't forget, You have a friend that loves you yet."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Henry, from Mary King)
KEYWORDS: love friend
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 231, (first of several "Fragments from Tennessee") (1 fragment)
File: MHAp231A

Remon
DESCRIPTION: (Creole) French: "Mo parle Remon, Remon, Le parle Simon, Simon, Le parle Titine, Titine, Li tombe dans chagrin. O femme Romulus! O belle femme Romulus! O femme Romulus! O belle femme que ca voule mo faile!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 110, "Remon" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Removal of Napoleon'sAshes, The

DESCRIPTION: At Waterloo Napoleon was forced to yield. Marie Louisa wept and cursed the gold that bribed "False Grouchy." A monument is erected in Paris "to contain the ashes of his heart, And every Frenchman that passes by respectfully a tribute pays!"

AUTHOR: John Morgan (source: broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(116), Harding B 13(205), Harding B 11(3256), Curzon b.41(63) and Harding B 15(256a))

EARLIEST DATE: before 1856 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(116)); c.1845 (broadside NLScotland L.C.1270(016)) [see Notes]

KEYWORDS: battle separation betrayal France wife Napoleon

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
December 15, 1840 - Napoleon's ashes are returned to Les Invalides in Paris (source: "Hotel des Invalides" on Travel Channel site)

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 206, "Napoleon Bonaparte" (2 texts, 1 tune)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(116), "Ashes of Napoleon," J. Cadman (Manchester), 1850-1855; also Harding B 15(256a), Firth b.34(197), ["The Removal of Napoleon's Ashes"; Harding B 11(117), "The Ashes of Napoleon"; Harding B 13(205), Curzon b.41(63) [many words are difficult to read], Harding B 11(3256), "The Removal of Napoleon Buonaparte's Ashes"; Firth c.16(100), "Napoleon's Remains"; 2806 c.15(105), Harding B 19(14), "The Removal of the Remains of Napoleon, from St. Helena"

LOC Singing, as111620, "Removal of Napoleon's Ashes," unknown, 19C

NLScotland, L.C.1270(016), "The Ashes of Napoleon," James Kay (Glasgow), c.1845

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Wheels of the World" (for the charge that Grouchy betrayed Napoleon)
cf. "Napoleon Bonaparte (III)" (for the charge that Grouchy betrayed Napoleon)
cf. "The Royal Eagle" (subject: Marie Louisa's grief for Napoleon)
cf. "The New Bunch of Loughero" (theme: Marie Louise's grief for Napoleon)
cf. "Saint Helena (Boney on the Isle of St. Helena)" (theme: Marie Louise's grief for Napoleon)

NOTES [138 words]: The commentary for broadside NLScotland L.C.1270(016) states "James Kay worked in Glasgow as printer during the mid-1840s." - BS

Emmanuel Grouchy (1766-1847) commanded one of the wings of Napoleon's army in the Waterloo campaign, and his failure to arrive at Waterloo may have cost Napoleon the battle. The charge that he betrayed Napoleon occurs also in "Napoleon Bonaparte (III)" (see that song for a discussion) and in "The Wheels of the World," but there is no reason whatsoever to believe that it is true. Although the conceit is common in folk song, there is even less reason to think that Marie Lousia of Austria grieved for him, since she became involved with other men before he was even dead. (See the notes to "Saint Helena (Boney on the Isle of St. Helena)"; also "The Royal Eagle" and "The New Bunch of Loughero") - RBW

file: Moyl206

Reno Blues

DESCRIPTION: "I come home this morning, when my clock was striking two (x2) The first thing I saw was another man's hat and shoes." The singer leaves his girl and says he is going to Reno. He is never coming back. He will travel until his shoes break down, then die

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Three Tobacco Kings, according to Cohen)

KEYWORDS: love separation travel death

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsAREgionalEncyclopedia2, p. 614, "Reno Blues" (1 text)
Roud #21368

RECORDINGS:
Three Tobacco Tags, "Reno Blues" (Bluebird 7361, 1937)
Repenting Sinner, The
DESCRIPTION: "In tears I now lament the sinful life I spent It's time for to repent." "That's cheating... cursing... envying our neighbors, Lust and fornication and vile insinuations." "Old and young prepare... Pray both late and early... for God to show us mercy"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA-Leach); c.1867 (broadside, Bodleian Bod11415 Harding B 11(1109))
KEYWORDS: mercy nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
Roud #30114
RECORDINGS:
Mrs. K. McCarthy, "The Repentant Sinner" (on MUNFLA-Leach)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Bod23090 2806 b.9(208), "The Repenting Sinner" ("Good christains young & old give eure unto my scroll"(sic)), P. Brereton (Dublin), c.1867; also Bod4008 2806 c.18(262), Bod3997 Harding B 26(569), Bod9050 2806 c.8(130), Bod21971 Harding B 26(568), "The Repenting Sinner"

File: ML3ReSin

Report on the Condition of Locomotive #7
DESCRIPTION: "Thunder Lake Lumber Company, Rhinelander, Wisconsin" has an engine so bad that "the cylinders are oval where they ought to be round." Heating her up meant "every seam leaked and at every spot." But "she's a d-- good engine for the shape she's in."
AUTHOR: attributed to "'George Smith,' Engineer"
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Gard/Sorden)
KEYWORDS: railroading humorous derivative
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
NOTES [49 words]: Most of this can be sung to the tune of "Casey Jones," which I assume was the source. The first two lines, about the Thunder Lake company, may have been a patch-on to an earlier song (and might be the only contribution of the anonymous "George Smith" to whom Gard/Sorden attribute the piece). - RBW
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GaSor089

Requiem for the Croppies
DESCRIPTION: "The pockets of our greatcoats full of barley," the croppies fought with pikes and would "stampede cattle into infantry." "Until, on Vinegar Hill, the fatal conclave.... And in August the barley grew up out of the grave"
AUTHOR: Seamus Heaney (1939-) (source: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)
EARLIEST DATE: 2000 (Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)
KEYWORDS: rebellion battle death burial
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
June 21, 1798 - The Wexford rebels are defeated at Vinegar Hill
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 141, "Requiem for the Croppies" (1 text)
File: Moyl141
Rest of the Day's Your Own, The

DESCRIPTION: "One day when I was out of work a job I went to seek." He takes a job, is given a list of tasks and told that, once done, "The rest of the day's your own." The list is too long, so he messes up the tasks, is fired, and "The rest of my life's my own."

AUTHOR: J. P. Long an W. David, according to Palmer
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (Old Time Comic Songs, No. 1., according to Palmer)
KEYWORDS: work humorous escape hardtimes money
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #40, "The Rest of the Day's Your Own" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1485
File: PECS040

Restaurant Romance, A

DESCRIPTION: "A young man entered a restaurant To seek an evening meal" and orders "Salmonier," which is unavailable. He and the waitress argue and apologize and dream of their own restaurant and eventually become engaged

EARLIEST DATE: 1944 (Doyle-OldTimeSongsAndPoetryOfNewfoundland, 4th edition)
KEYWORDS: food courting love
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Roud #7306
File: Doyl4074

Resting In My Home

DESCRIPTION: When the singer dies the choir will sing, the preacher will preach and the singer will be buried but she won't be there. "I'll be resting in my home beyond the sky"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 2014 (USSeaIsland03)
KEYWORDS: death nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Minnie Gracie Gadson, "Beyond the Sky" (on USSeaIsland03)
File: RcResIMH

Restless Night, A

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you good people, I pray you draw near, A comical ditty you shortly shall hear" about the singer's visit to a tavern in Missouri. The meal was all right, but the beds were full of lice and fleas. The singer is happy to leave Missouri for Arkansas

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (Abrahams/Riddle-ASingerAndHerSongs)
KEYWORDS: drink travel hardtimes bug
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Abrahams/Riddle-ASingerAndHerSongs, pp. 85-87, "A Restless Night" (1 text, 1 tune)
McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks, pp. 51-52, "Durie Down" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2976
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "A Comical Ditty (Arizona Boys and Girls)"
File: Abrr085
Resurrection Morn, The

DESCRIPTION: "O run, Mary, run, Hallelu, hallelu, O run, Mary, run, Hallelujah!" "It was early in the morning." "That she went to the sepulchre." "And the Lord he wasn't da." "But she see a man a-comin'," "And she thought he was the gardener...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious Jesus resurrection Easter Bible
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 54, "The Resurrection Morn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12014
NOTES [202 words]: This is a pretty close paraphrase of John 20:1-17, though interpreted in the light of the other gospels
* Mary (Magdalene) came to the tomb early on Sunday morning (John 20:1)
* The tomb was empty (John 20:2, though this verse does not use the word "empty"; as a matter of fact, none of the gospels use the word "empty" to describe the tomb!)
* "She thought he was the gardener": John 20:15 (though John never says that Mary saw Jesus approach)
* "Oh touch me not": John 20:17
* "For I am not yet ascended": John 20:17
* "Tell to my disciples": John 20:17 again, though the word used in the Bible is not "disciples" but "brothers" (which, in Christian context, is probably to be read as "comrades, members of the Church"). The King James Bible translates this properly; the use of the word "disciples" is probably a memory of Matt 28:19 or some such
* "That the Lord is arisen": This is the one phrase in the song with no real ties to John; Jesus says in 20:17 that he is ascending, but that presumably means ascending to heaven.
* "So run, Mary, run": Mary runs to Peter and the Beloved Disciple in John 20:2; she does not run in 20:18, but merely comes/goes (same word in Greek). Close enough, though. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: AWG054

Resurrection of Christ

DESCRIPTION: "Go and tell my disciples (x3) Jesus is risen from the dead." "Go and tell Sister Mary [and Martha]." "Go and tell poor sinking Peter." Pilate, Doubting Thomas, and others are to receive the message also

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Smith-SouthCarolinaBallads)
KEYWORDS: resurrection Jesus religious nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Smith-SouthCarolinaBallads, p. 86, "Resurrection of Christ" (1 text)
File: ReSm086B

Retreat to Leeds

DESCRIPTION: "I'll be down to get you in a tram car, honey, Taxis cost too much money... We'll go down to the Robin Hood... Go in and have a few... Tomorrow night when I roll into Leeds." They will dance and cuddle even though he has a wife and kids at home

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead)
KEYWORDS: soldier dancing drink courting sex wife warning
FOUND IN: Canada
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, p. 134, "Retreat to Leeds" (1 text, tune referenced)
Roud #29418
File: Hopk134B
Retrospect

DESCRIPTION: "Was not the day (x3) dark and gloomy." "The enemy" built a position, "But Blessed be the Lord, the snare is broken." In language too reminiscent of the King James Bible, the singer gives thanks for military success and hopes for peace

AUTHOR: William Billings
EARLIEST DATE: 1778 (The Singing Master's Assistant, according to Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster)
KEYWORDS: war religious nonballad

Return of Charlie Horse, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer is spending an evening at Mahers and steps out for some air. Looking over Angel Pond, he sees the ghost of Charlie horse. When the mist closes in the singer loses sight of Charlie and goes back inside to tell the boys.

AUTHOR: Omar Blondahl
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing)
KEYWORDS: horse ghost
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, pp. 20-21, "The Return of Charlie Horse" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Concerning Charlie Horse" (tune, chorus, subject and references there)

Return of Pat Molloy

DESCRIPTION: Molloy returns to Dublin after four years in America and is stopped by "a castle-hack" who accuses him of being a Fenian. He is, but he has returned with money to take Molly and his mother to America. He and Molly marry and all move to New York.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1879 (broadside, LOCSinging as111690)
KEYWORDS: marriage emigration return reunion America Ireland patriotic money
FOUND IN: Ireland
RECORDINGS:
Brigid Tunney, "Wee Paddy Molloy" (on IRTunneyFamily01)
Paddy Tunney, "Paddy Molloy" (on IRPTunney02)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Pat Malloy" [Laws Q24] (character of Pat Malloy/Molloy)
NOTES [245 words]: Notes to IRPTunney02: "This is a song linked with the Fenian Rising of 1867. Many of the Fenians learned their soldiering in America during the Civil War and then returned to Ireland to fight their own battle."

Broadside LOCSinging as111690, which is longer than Paddy Tunney's version on IRPTunney02, is the basis for the description.

Broadside LOCSinging as111690 includes the note "Sung, with unbounded applause, by William H. Lindsey."- BS

Most scholars don't seem to link this to Laws Q24, "Pat Malloy," though Laws notes a sequel to that ballad, "Molly's Welcome to Pat Malloy." But in Laws Q24, we learn that Pat is in love with Molly, that he goes to America, and that he returns home at the end. This is a clear sequel to those events -- possibly a political rewrite, given the mention of the Fenians.

The Fenians were an organization devoted to freeing Ireland. The organization was founded in 1858 by James Stephens, and quickly spread; the British government felt the need to suppress the group in 1865. Stephens and others were taken prisoner; although he escaped, it turned him cautious; he no longer had the nerve to take aggressive action. That pretty well killed the group as an active set of rebels; their attempt at an Irish rebellion failed in 1867. - RBW

File: RcRoPaMo

Return of the Admiral, The DESCRIPTION: The admiral sees a shark -- a harbinger of death -- following his ship. He tries to be bold but dies that night. His body is dropped overboard and "never from that moment, save one shudder in the sea" do they see the shark again.

AUTHOR: B. W. Proctor (source: Hamilton)

EARLIEST DATE: 1832 (New-York Mirror)

KEYWORDS: burial corpse death sea ship animal sailor

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart2 44, "The Shark" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #12876

BROADSIDES:

Bodleian, Harding B 11(3268) "The Return of the Admiral" ("How gallantly, how merrily We ride along the sea"), J. Catnach (London), 1819-1844; also Firth b.25(599), Firth c.14(273), Johnson Ballads 1552 [almost entirely illegible], "The Return of the Admiral"; Firth c.12(342), "The Admiral"

File: OSY244

Returned Soldier, The

DESCRIPTION: French. A couple takes in a passer-by because their son is also a soldier. They worry about the boy. The passer-by reveals that he is their son

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)

KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage soldier separation reunion

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, p. 517, "The Returned Soldier" (1 text, reportedly incomplete)

NOTES [16 words]: Sort of a Riley ballad, only with the parents rather than the lover being the ones fooled. - RBW

File: Beld517A

Reuben and Rachel

DESCRIPTION: Rachel speculates to Reuben about "What a good world this would be If the men were all transported Far beyond the northern sea." Reuben, shocked, tries to fathom the idea; at last he offers marriage. Rachel accepts

AUTHOR: Words: Harry Birch / Music: William Gooch

EARLIEST DATE: 1871 (sheet music published by White, Smith & Perry of Boston)

KEYWORDS: dialog transportation courting love humorous marriage

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (6 citations):

Jackson-PopularSongsOfNineteenthCenturyAmerica, pp. 180-183, "Reuben and Rachel" (1 text, 1 tune)

Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 168-169, "Reuben and Rachel" (1 text)

Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, p. 460, "Reuben and Rachel"

Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 345, "Reuben, Reuben" (1 text)

Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 86, "Reuben, Reuben" (1 text)
DT, REUBRACH*
ST RJ19180 (Full)
Roud #15451
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Winnipeg Whore" (tune)
cf. "The Swede from North Dakota" (tune)
cf. "Napoleon (I)" (tune)
NOTES [31 words]: There is a children's game, "Jacob and Rachel" or "Reuben and Rachel," printed in Welsch-NebraskaPioneerLore, pp. 305-306. It is not listed as a musical game, but perhaps it is related. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.3
File: RJ19180

Reuben James

DESCRIPTION: Describes the sinking of the destroyer "Reuben James" by submarines off the coast of Iceland, the loss of 100 men [and the rescue of 44]. Chorus: "What were their names, tell me what were their names/Did you have a friend on the good Reuben James?"

AUTHOR: Words: Woody Guthrie & Pete Seeger w. the Almanac Singers
EARLIEST DATE: November, 1941
KEYWORDS: battle navy war death rescue ship derivative
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Oct. 31, 1941 - U. S. destroyer Reuben James, an old 4-stacker, is the first American ship sunk in World War II.
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Seeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 84, "Reuben James" (1 text, 1 tune)
(1 text, 1 tune, with additional notes on p. 86)
Roud #17624
RECORDINGS:
Woody Guthrie, "Sinking of the Reuben James" (on AmHist2)
Pete Seeger, "Reuben James" (on PeteSeeger41)
Pete Seeger & Sonny Terry, "Reuben James" (on SeegerTerry)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Wildwood Flower" (tune)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Sinking of the Reuben James
NOTES [3141 words]: There is some dispute over the authorship of this song; most alumni of the Almanac Singers say that Guthrie wrote the verses, Seeger added the chorus, but Seeger insists that other members of the group also contributed lyrics. - PJS

Seeger, in _Where Have All the Flowers Gone_, p. 86, says that Guthrie wrote the lyrics but no chorus, and that the Almanacs told him that no one else would be willing to sing his version. So Guthrie came up with a chorus, and also trimmed the song. So the best explanation would seem to be that it's almost all Guthrie, but with a lot of suggestions from the Almanacs.

The _Reuben James_ was named for the man who was credited with Stephen Decatur's life when both were serving on the _Intrepid_ (Paine, p. 430) during the wars with the Barbary Pirates. Decatur was leading a small fleet of Neapolitan gunboats against a similar force of Tripolitan gunboats. Decatur's own vessel captured an enemy, but Decatur's brother James was tricked when another ship offered a false surrender; as James boarded the enemy, the captain shot him in the head. Stephen Decatur, enraged by this act of treachery, went after the Tripolitan ship with the men he had left after putting a prize crew aboard his first conquest.

Decatur's men were badly outnumbered, but Decatur went straight for the man who had murdered his brother, "and within minutes the two were rolling around the deck in a deadly embrace.... As Decatur struggled to stay on top of the enemy captain, a Tripolitan seaman attempted to save his leader by aiming a savage blow of his scimitar at Decatur's exposed head. But before the blow fell, one of the wounded American crewman -- Reuben James in one account, but Daniel Frazier according to another telling -- threw himself under the pirate's sword, took the blow, and, amazing, lived to tell about it. Decatur was saved, and with his hand briefly freed as others tumbled upon him and the enemy captain, he slipped his hand into his pocket, cocked the hammer of his pistol, and through his pantaloons shot the pirate dead" (Utt, p. 83).

One has to suspect that James was really the one who saved Decatur, since the prejudice of the time might cause people to hid the heroism of a black man.

James continued to serve with Decatur for many years. He was captured by the British during the War of 1812, but he returned to the American navy when released after the war. In all, James suffered three injuries in combat, and retired from the Navy in 1836 (he had lost a leg); he died on December 8, 1838 (Parkin, p. 1).

There is a picture of the ship Reuben James facing p. 112 of Parkin, and Preston, p. 97, has a photo of her as she looked in 1939. She was one of the the four-stack flush-deck destroyers built by the U.S. Navy in the period 1917-1920. The ship was a member of the Clemson class (Bruce/Cogar, p. 306), which (according to Jane's, p. 144) were 310 feet long, 31 feet wide. Figures as to her displacement vary; Bruce/Cogar, p. 306, says 1190 tons; Paine, p. 430, 1090 tons; Worth, p. 308, 1100 tones; Jane's says the class was 1215 tons as designed. It was a huge class of ships; the Clemsons and the similar Wickes class totaled 273 ships, according to Parkin, p. 331 (for comparison, only 71 destroyers, in seven other classes, were built by the U.S. from 1923 to 1937; the Clemsons, despite their age, were the standard destroyers of the pre-World War II period). Because the ships were built in such large numbers, and so quickly (some in less than two months), they often were not very well-constructed (Alden, p. 3); there simply weren't enough construction sites to assemble high-quality ships at that pace.

There were many problems with the design; the boiler layout was inefficient, reducing their range, and the four stacks meant that they didn't have much deck space (Preston, p. 48) -- a real problem as they were loaded with more and more anti-submarine equipment! They also were armed only with 4" guns at a time when other navies were adopting 4.7" guns, and although they had lots of torpedo tubes, they were mounted on the beam rather than the centerline, making them less effective (since they could only be aimed to one side); they were "outmoded even by 1918 standards" (Whitley, p. 11)

The Clemson class as a whole was noted for being very "wet" forward, and for rolling badly even by destroyer standards; they also had "a turning radius larger than a battleship's" (Worth, pp. 308-309). They had been designed to have long range and be good at conducting torpedo attacks during a fleet action, so they were very long and lean -- and hence not maneuverable; "this suited them poorly for antiship work where agility was needed" (Reilly, p. 11). And they didn't even really have a very long range; on convoy escort, they didn't have enough spare fuel to make high-speed chases (MorisonAtlantic, p. 87). Nor was much done to improve them between the wars; there was no money for upgrades, and most of them spent at least some time rusting in the reserve fleet (Reilly, p. 12) -- indeed, some crews were assigned to crew two ships, alternating between two to keep both in some sort of working order (the "rotating reserve"; Alden, p. 17). When the Americans next designed a destroyer type, more than a decade later, they produced a new design with nothing in common with the four-stack classes.

The ships of the Clemson class were those that were "lent" to Britain before the U.S. entered World War II, although Reuben James was not one of the ships transferred. Although American critics dissented, the Americans really did have old destroyers to spare -- most of them had gone into mothballs before World War II, and needed real work to get back into sailing shape (Snow, p. 94), and a lot of them never did go back into service. But Britain had lost about half of the destroyers of its Home Fleet at Dunkirk; it needed ships desperately, no matter how broken-down and ill-made they were (Snow, p. 90).

The British, when they inherited some of them during World War II, had some scathing things to say about them:

Roll on the "Nelson," the "Rodney," the "Hood,"
This ship I'm on is no bloody good.
Roll on old peacetime and let us depart,
This four-funnelled bastard is breaking my heart. (Boase, p. 170. This is a version of "She's a Tiddley Ship"; see that song for other versions of this song).

This does not mean that the ships were entirely useless in World War II; the John D. Ford, in particular, was almost the only bright light in the horrid story of the Java Sea campaign of 1941-1942, where the Japanese swept aside a fleet of American, British, Dutch, and Australian ships; she received a Presidential Unit Citation for her service (Alden, p. 97; she survived the war, to be scrapped in 1945; Alden, p. 79). But the flush-deckers were so poor as destroyers that Alden, pp. 89-95, has an extensive list of those converted to other ship types: 22 minelayers, 14 seaplane tenders, 18 minesweepers, 36 high-speed transports, 42 "miscellaneous auxiliaries," and at least 14 unclassifiables such as target ships, water barges, and at least one fruit carrier!
All sources agree Reuben James was completed in 1920. She was initially fitted with four 4" guns and four sets of triple 21" torpedo tubes; her speed when new was 35 knots. She, like the other Clemsons, had no antisubmarine weapons when built (Alden, p. 30).

Immediately after World War I, Reuben James was involved in humanitarian missions and peacekeeping around Europe, and was one of the ships that celebrated the return of the Unknown Soldier to the U.S. (Parkin, p. 2). Later in the 1920s, she was frequently involved in United States interventions in Latin America (Paine, p. 430). In the years immediately before World War II, she was part of the Neutrality Patrol, being part of "Patrol 3" (MorisonAtlantic, p. 15n.) that watched over a region very roughly corresponding to the coasts of the Carolinas.

"The Rube" briefly went into mothballs in 1931, then guarded American interests in Cuba during the revolution there (Parkin, p. 2). She spent 1934-1939 in the Pacific before returning to duties in the Atlantic. Despite minor refits in the period between the two wars, by 1941, she was fairly "tired," and almost certainly somewhat slower than her 1920 speed (and probably less comfortable -- not that the flush-deckers had ever been comfortable). In March 1941, she became part of Destroyer Squadron 31, one of three destroyer groups assigned to the "Support Force Atlantic Fleet" -- i.e. convoy protection. One of the groups was made up of new destroyers, but both Squadron 31 (led by Captain Wilder D. Baker) and Squadron 30 consisted of old destroyers, mostly Clemsons.

At the time of her sinking, she was commanded by Lt. Commander H. L. Edwards (MorisonTwo, p. 37) -- who sounds like a bit of a cowboy; he was known as "Tex" and had been an Olympic wrestler (Roscoe, p. 23). She was part of a squadron commanded by Commander R. E. Webb (MorisonAtlantic, p. 94). She was based at Hvalafljótr, Iceland (a base the Americans had occupied somewhat earlier, without noticeable enthusiasm on the part of the Icelanders; MorisonAtlantic, p. 74ff.), and she sank while escorting convoy HX-156 from Argentina, Newfoundland (Paine, p. 430. Parkin, p. 3, says she was one of five American destroyers in the convoy escort -- but only one of the five ships had radar, so they had little ability to find U-boats. To make it worse, the radar-equipped destroyer was at the back of the convoy, according to Roscoe, p. 24, so it probably couldn't spot anything anyway).

The escort was not zig-zagging (MorisonAtlantic, p. 94). Internet sources say that it was because the ships of the convoy were having trouble with station-keeping, the escort had to sail straight courses to prevent collisions. This obviously made the escorts a better target. And it was a slow convoy, sailing at just 8.8 knots (Roscoe, p. 23); these always tended to have high casualties. Williams, p. 156, reports that the Reuben James was hit on the port side by a torpedo, and broke in two. The forward section promptly blew up. "The stern remained afloat for a further five minutes, as fuel split into the sea from the ruptured tanks and covered the survivors in a black, choking coat of oil. From the water men could hear the screams of those trapped inside as she sank. As the twisted remnants of the destroyer slipped under the water her depth charges exploded, killing many of those left struggling in the water. Only 45 of the 160-man crew were saved."

Snow, pp. 139-140, agrees that the Reuben James was guarding convoy HX-156 when Erich Topp's U-552 spotted her. He wanted to sink tankers, not destroyers, but the destroyer was in the way, so Topp fired two torpedoes into her. "The Reuben James was not a new ship; she was a four-stackder, older than many of the men who crewed her. She had no double hull, and fewer watertight compartments [than newer ships such as the Kearny, which had recently survived a U-boat attack; see below]. The torpedo ignited her forward magazine. The Reuben James split in two just in front of her fourth stack, and the forward part was gone in seconds, taking with it every officer and the captain, Tex Edwards. The stern stayed afloat for perhaps five minutes, giving some of the men there the chance to escape into the winter sea" (Snow, p. 140).

One of the survivors reported two explosions when the ship was hit (Parkin, p. 4), but that doesn't necessarily indicate two torpedo hits; explosion #2 may have been a secondary explosion. Crewmen on the aft section had time to take to life rafts, but soon after they got into the water, there was a third, underwater, explosion (as mentioned above, the crewmen thought it was her depth charges exploding as she went down; Parkin, p. 5), tossing the survivors back into the water. Still, the rafts may have saved some, since they weren't in the icy water as long as they would have been otherwise. The survivors were picked up by another destroyer, Niblack, which took them to Reykjavik; they were treated for their injuries and hypothermia and then sent back to the U.S. (Parkin, pp. 5-6; the Hilary P. Jones also was part of the search, according to Roscoe, p. 25).

Guthrie was (almost) correct in saying that 44 men were saved (give or take one), but since the ship's crew totaled 160 according to Williams, or 159 according to Paine, p. 430, (a very full complement; the ships were designed for a crew of about 100 in peacetime, 150-160 in wartime), the casualties actually totaled about 115, not one hundred. Observe that this means Reuben James had a full wartime crew aboard; she was not operating under peacetime conditions!
This is important because we need to keep in mind that the Reuben James was sunk five weeks "before" the United States officially joined the Second World War (Bruce/Cogar, p. 306). By this time, however, the U.S. Navy was unofficially escorting convoys to Britain. (Officially the navy was to take actions "short of war." But, as MorisonTwo observes on p.37, "'short of war' was not so very short for the Atlantic Fleet.") While U.S. ships normally did not sink submarines, they helped the British track them. Functionally, the American destroyers were making war on the German submarines. In fact, the U.S.S. Greer had actually fired on a German submarine (U-652) on September 4 (MorisonTwo, p. 36) after pursuing her for at least six hours (Williams, p. 154). (This was an extraordinarily complicated case where it's hard to say who really fired first -- a British plane had gone after the Germans and contacted the Greer; MorisonAtlantic, pp. 79-81). Thus German action against U.S. ships was not unjustified. "Admiral Raeder [commander of the German navy]... told Hitler that the president of the United States had declared war on Germany: 'There is no longer any difference between British and American ships!'" (Snow, p. 137). But Hitler did not, yet, agree. The Reuben James was not the first U.S. naval vessel to be attacked by the Germans in World War II. Apart from the incident between the Greer and U-652 which, as Parkin points out on p. 3, could perhaps be justified because the Greer was another Clemson class ship, and so had the appearance of the many Clemson class ships the British were using), the destroyer U.S.S. Kearny (which could not be mistaken for a British ship) was badly damaged on October 17 (Snow, p. 138; the Greer was one of the ships that came to her aid; MorisonAtlantic, p. 93), and the oiler Salinas was torpedoed on October 30 (MorisonTwo, p. 37). When U-562 sank the Reuben James the next day, it was not really much of an escalation -- but it came as a shock to the American people.

The sinking of the Reuben James, we must emphasize, did not cause the U. S. to go to war (indeed, the U. S. didn't declare war on Germany; Germany declared war instead). Even if it had, Guthrie's confident prediction that American battleships would engage the Germans was short-sighted. Some people say falsely that battleships were useless in World War II -- but while they had their uses, fighting the German navy wasn't one of them. Battleships are useless against submarines, and at the time the Reuben James was sunk, there was not one American battleship fast enough to catch "any" of the handful of German surface ships. It wasn't until the 27.5 knot North Carolina finished fitting out some months later that the U. S. actually had a battleship "mighty" enough (read: fast enough) to fight even against German surface navy. The North Carolina was the first big ship of what Pratt, p. 218, calls the "Roosevelt Navy," which was already adding destroyers and cruisers to the fleet; had peace lasted, the Reuben James would probably have been retired in the next few years. The ironic bottom line: Reuben James was far more useful as a symbol of German aggression than as an actual warship.

Roscoe, p. 25, declares "One question... was definitely answered. The attacks on GREER and KEARNY might conceivably have been the work of hotheaded submarine commanders. But the attack on REUBEN JAMES was obviously deliberate." In other words, an act of war. That being said, her sinking did not produce as much outrage as one might expect. Wortman, p. 313, says of the public response, "Rueful memories of the U. S. entry into World War One, driven by the same drip-drip-drip of torpedoed ships sinking beneath the Atlantic waves, muted the public outcry for revenge. As with the Panay on the Yangtze, many Americans continued to fault their own nation for having placed American ships in harm's way."

Although the U. S. did eventually put fast battleships to sea, there was never a serious conflict between major units of the American and German navies. The Germans had only a handful of major warships: The battleships Bismarck and Tirpitz; the battlecruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau; the panzerschiff Deutschland/Lutzow, Graf Spee, and Admiral Scheer; and the heavy cruisers Admiral Hipper, Prinz Eugen, and Blücher. (Two other cruisers of this class, Seydlitz and Lützow, were not completed and never served in the German navy; Paine, p. 66). The British did most of the work of hunting them down. They sank the Bismark in 1941 before the Americans joined the war (Paine, p. 64, or see the notes to "The Sinking of HMS Hood"). The British forced the Graf Spee to scuttle in 1939 (see "The Sinking of the Graf Spee"). The Tirpitz, Lützow, and Admiral Scheer were destroyed by British aircraft (Paine, pp. 520, 314, 5). Gneisenau, mined and bombed by the British, was scuttled in 1945 (Paine, p. 211). A British fleet destroyed Scharnhorst in 1943 (Paine, pp. 463-464). Of the cruisers, Hipper was sunk by British planes (Paine, p. 4), and Blücher was destroyed in the invasion of Norway (Paine, p. 66). Prinz Eugen was the only major German surface vessel to survive the war; it was used in the Bikini nuclear test, and eventually sank as a result of damage sustained (Paine, p. 407).

There was an ironic foreshadowing of the Reuben James's fate; in a 1939 pre-war naval exercise, she had been "sunk" by a submarine (Snow, p. 11).

Guthrie's original text was too long for singing, but might have made a decent epic poem; he not only listed every sailor, but described them, e.g. There's Harold Hammer Beasley, a first rate man at sea From Hinton, West Virginia, he had his first degree. (Snow, p. 141).
The last verse of this song as usually sung today ("Many years have passed...") was added by Fred Hellerman in the 1950s.
(And, sadly, we know the answer to Hellerman's question: The worst of men fight because it's an easy way to spread their genes.) - RBW

Bibliography

- Alden: John D. Alden, Flush Decks & Four Pipes, Naval Institute Press, 1965; revised printing with new preface and additional notes, 1989
- Jane's: Jane's Fighting Ships of World War I (1919; I use the 1990 Studio Editions reprint with modern foreword by Captain John Moore, RN)
- Preston: Antony Preston, Destroyers, Prentice-Hall, 1977
- Roscoe: Theodore Roscoe, Tin Cans (originally published as United States Destroyer Operations in World War II, 1953); I use the 1979 Bantam edition
- Snow: Richard Snow, A Measureless Peril: America in the Fight for the Atlantic, the Longest Battle of World War II, 2010 (I use the 2011 Scribner paperback)
- Worth: Richard Worth, Fleets of World War II, Da Capo, 2001

Last updated in version 5.2
File: PSAFB084

Reuben Ranzo

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Characteristic line: "Ranzo, boys, Ranzo." Typically concerns the life of Reuben Ranzo, a landlubber who "was no sailor" but wound up aboard ship and had to learn fast -- or, perhaps, had enough schooling to turn to navigation
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1882
KEYWORDS: shanty sailor
FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,NE,SE) Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (22 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 23-25, "Reuben Ranzo" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 104, "Reuben Ranzo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reuben Wright and Phoebe Brown

DESCRIPTION: Phoebe loves Reuben; her parents disapprove, and Reuben doesn't think much of them either. They determine to marry; her father grabs a shotgun. He accidentally kills his daughter. Reuben kills the father -- and awakes from his terrible dream

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1896 (Phineas Garrett's "One Hundred Choice Selections")

LONG DESCRIPTION: Phoebe loves Reuben; her parents disapprove, and Reuben doesn't think much of them either. The young people determine to marry, and start for the parsonage in the rain, while her father grabs a shotgun. Instead of hitting Reuben, he kills his daughter. Reuben kills the father, tears his hair -- and awakes from his terrible dream

KEYWORDS: hardheartedness courting elopement love violence homicide revenge death dream humorous recitation father children

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Reuben's Train

DESCRIPTION: Lyric piece about Reuben's train and travels. Versions vary widely; most contain a verse something like this: "Reuben had a train and he put it on the track, Hear the whistle blow a hundred miles."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Grayson & Whitter, as "Train 45")

KEYWORDS: train nonballad

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE)

REFERENCES (8 citations):
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 503-517, "Reuben's Train/Train 45/900 Miles" (2 texts plus excerpts equivalent to about three more, 2 tunes; the first text is close to "Reuben's Train," the second to "Nine Hundred Miles," but the article is mostly devoted to showing how the two songs mix)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 236, "Reuben's Train" (2 texts, with "A" being closer to "Nine Hundred Miles" than "B")
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 236, "Reuben's Train" (3 tunes plus text excerpts)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 133, "Reuben's Train" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #64, "Old Reuben" (1 text, 1 tune, with an extremely high number of floating verses)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, p. 32, "Old Reuben" (1 text, 1 tune, with so many verses characteristic of both "Reuben's Train" and "Nine Hundred Miles" that I'm filing it with both)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol5, pp. 34-36, "Reuben" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 302, "Reuben" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #3423

RECORDINGS:
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 503-517, "Reuben's Train/Train 45/900 Miles" (2 texts plus excerpts equivalent to about three more, 2 tunes; the first text is close to "Reuben's Train," the second to "Nine Hundred Miles," but the article is mostly devoted to showing how the two songs mix)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 236, "Reuben's Train" (2 texts, with "A" being closer to "Nine Hundred Miles" than "B")
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 236, "Reuben's Train" (3 tunes plus text excerpts)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 133, "Reuben's Train" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #64, "Old Reuben" (1 text, 1 tune, with an extremely high number of floating verses)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, p. 32, "Old Reuben" (1 text, 1 tune, with so many verses characteristic of both "Reuben's Train" and "Nine Hundred Miles" that I'm filing it with both)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol5, pp. 34-36, "Reuben" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 302, "Reuben" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #3423

RECORDINGS:
Emry Arthur, "Reuben Oh Reuben" (Paramount 3295, c. 1931; on BefBlues2)
Dock Boggs, "Ruben's Train" (on Boggs3, BoggsCD1)
Carolina Ramblers String Band, "Ruben's Train" (Banner 33085/Romeo 5345/Oriole 8345/Perfect 12818/Melotone M-13047; rec. 1932)
Bill Cornett, "Old Reuben" (on MMOKCD)
Elizabeth Cotten, "Ruben" (on Cotten02)
G. B. Grayson & [Henry] Whitter, "Train 45" (Victor 21189, 1928, rec. 1927, on GraysonWhitter01)
(Victor 21189, 1928, rec. 1927, on GraysonWhitter01)
(Gennett 6320, 1927/Champion 15447 [as by Norman Gayle], 1928)
Vester Jones, "Old Reuben" (on GraysonCarroll1)
J. E. Mainer's Mountaineers [or Wade Mainer], "Riding on Train Forty-Five" (Bluebird B-7298, 1937; Victor 27493, 1941)
Wade Mainer & the Sons of the Mountaineers, "Old Reuben" (Bluebird B-8990, 1941)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Riding on That Train 45" (on NLCR06, NLCRCD2; on ClassRR [as "Train 45"])
Poplin Family, "Reuben" (on Poplin01)
Wade Ward, "Old Reuben" [instrumental] (on Holcomb-Ward1)
Doc Watson, "Old Ruben" (on Ashley02, WatsonAshley01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Nine Hundred Miles"
cf. "Rain and Snow"
SAME TUNE:
Jack O'Diamond Blues (recorded by Blind Lemon Jefferson)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Old Reuben
NOTES [125 words]: I know two tunes for this piece. One resembles "Nine Hundred Miles" and "Rain and Snow"; these three songs seems to have cross-fertilized (so much so, in fact, that I literally cannot tell which one was the more direct ancestor of the Grayson & Whitter recording; I placed it there almost arbitrarily).
The other is that used by Frank Proffitt, who said of it, "This is one of the oldest simple banjo tunes.... It was generally the first tune learned, by playing two strings. There are about fifty different verses to this" (quoted by Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl). G. B. Grayson is said to have turned "Reuben's Train" into "Train 45" -- but they are still so close that I think they can be considered one song. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0
File: Wa133

Review of the Year

DESCRIPTION: "This year's been one continuous trouble, Squatters fighting hand in hand."
Squatters and shearsers are quarreling over wages; times are hard throughout Australia. The singer expects to win, and urges hearers to join the (shearers') union
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (AndersonStory)
KEYWORDS: worker hardtimes labor-movement sheep strike
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 199-200, "Review of the Year" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: AnSt199

Revive Us Again

DESCRIPTION: "We praise Thee, O God! for the Son of Thy love, for Jesus who died, and is now gone above." "Hallelujah! Thine the glory. Hallelujah! Amen. Hallelujah! Thine the glory. Revive us again." "We praise Thee, O God! for Thy Spirit of light." Glory to the Lamb
AUTHOR: W. P. McKay (source: Hymnary.org)
EARLIEST DATE: 1863 (date of composition, according to: Hymnary. org)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 357-358, "Revive Us Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27556
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Hallelujah, I'm a Bum (I)" (parody)
File: HGam357

Revolutionary Tea [Laws A24]

DESCRIPTION: Mother Britain is angry that her daughter America will not pay the tea-tax. The mother sends the daughter a great deal of tea and demands she pay the tax (on pain of a beating); the daughter dumps the tea into the ocean
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1889 (Kemp's Old Folks Concert Tunes, according to Cohen)
KEYWORDS: political rebellion commerce money patriotic
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Dec. 16, 1773 - Boston Tea Party. Americans protest the British tax on tea by dumping a shipload into Boston Harbor
FOUND IN: Canada(Ont) US(Ap,MW,SE)
REFERENCES (9 citations):
Laws A24, "Revolutionary Tea"
Cox/Hercog/Halpert/Boswell-WVirginia-B, #25, pp. 188-189, "Revolutionary Tea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 302-303, "There Was an Old Lady Lived Over the Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #1, "Revolutionary Tea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 53-54, "Revolutionary Tea" (1 text)
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 59-61, "The Rich Lady Over the Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong, pp. 54-56, "Revolutionary Tea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, pp. 8-9, "Revolutionary Tea" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 368, REVTEA*
Roud #1934
CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "Old Granny Wales (Granny O'Whale, Granua Weal)" (subject: The Tea Tax)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Old Lady Over the Sea
NOTES [22 words]: For background on the Tea Tax, see the notes to "Old Granny Wales (Granny O'Whale, Granua Weal)"; also "Taxation of America." - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: LA24

Revolutionary War Song
DESCRIPTION: "I'm almost ninety and nine, but I still remember the time, When the country was invaded by the British, One of freedom's noble sons, our brave George Washington, Made 'em skeeedadle from the happy land of Canaan. Ha ha (x4), Bound for the happy land..."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida)
KEYWORDS: political age
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #3, "Revolutionary War Song" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #5022
NOTES [53 words]: A nitpicky footnote: The song claims the British invaded America and George Washington made them flee. But the British did not invade America, since America was not an independent nation. The British stationed troops there. Of course, the British would invade (in 1812), but by then George Washington was dead.... - RBW
Last updated in version 3.7
File: Morr003

Reynardine [Laws P15]
DESCRIPTION: A lady meets Reynardine (the singer for most of the song). He courts her while bidding her not to reveal his name. He says he has a castle in the forest and that she can reach him by calling him. He then vanishes (?); she warns women against such rakes
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1845 (Journal from the Sharon)
KEYWORDS: courting seduction supernatural warning betrayal
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,NE,SE,So) Britain(England(South)) Ireland Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (15 citations):
Laws P15, "Rinordine"
Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster, pp. 64-66, "Renaldine, or The Mountains of Pomeroy" (1 text, 1 tune, plus a rewrite by Dr. George Sigerson)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 286-288, "Rinordine" (2 texts plus excerpts from 1 more)
Randolph 99, "Rinordine" (1 fragmentary text, 1 tune)
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 47, "Rinordine" (1 text, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 76, "Rinordine" (1 text)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan15 , Rinordine"" (1 confused text, 1
Rhyme for Entering Portsmouth Harbour

DESCRIPTION: "First the Nab and then the Warner, Blockhouse (Spit/Fort) and (Submarine) corner"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: sailor nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 40, "Rhyme for Entering Portsmouth Harbour" (2 short texts)
File: Tawn023

Rhyme of Old Steamboats

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (The Burlington Post, according to Russell)
KEYWORDS: river recitation nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Rhymes on Johnnie and Annie

DESCRIPTION: "Who'll do their courtin' With a right god will; Have courted long and have courted still? Johnnie and Annie." "Who never goes home until half past two? Johnnie." "Who thinks.... Young Jonnnie the most handsome and grand? Annie."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Stout-FolkloreFromIowa); reportedly learned around 1875

KEYWORDS: courting nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 103, pp. 127-133, "Early Iowa School Songs" (11 texts, of which "K" is this song)

Roud #21648

File: Stou103K

Rhynie

DESCRIPTION: Singer recalls his first job, working at (or for) Rhynie. The work is ill, the wages small, the rules onerous. The place is miserable, but he dare not leave before the season ends for fear of losing his fee. When it does end, he hits the road cheerfully

AUTHOR: John Riddel ? (source: Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #9, p. 2)

EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Ford 1899 series)

KEYWORDS: work hardtimes abuse farming worker

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 207-208, "Linten Lowrin" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 348, "Jock o' Rhynie" (7 texts, 3 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 268, "The Bogend Hairst" (1 text, a short version that might possibly be mixed with something else)

Roud #3090

RECORDINGS:
John Strachan, "Rhynie" (on FSB3)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Barnyards of Delgaty" (tune, chorus, theme)
cf. "Linton Lowrie" (tune)
cf. "The Cockies of Bungaree" (theme)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Rhynie's Jock
The Bonny Toon o' Huntly

NOTES [285 words]: I'm sorely tempted to lump this with, "Barnyards of Delgaty" -- they share the same theme, tune and chorus, and are clearly closely related. But there's no overlap in the actual words, and the man from whom, "Rhynie" was collected, John Strachan, also sang a separate version of "Barnyards," so I split them. - PJS

Greig #9 quoting a correspondent Mrs Corbet: "... I may mention that 'Jock o' Rhynie' and 'Bogieside' are both by the same author [John Riddel, again according to Mrs. Corbet, in Greig #28], but am of the opinion that he was not the author of the 'Barnyards o' Delgaty,' but rather that the author of that song has borrowed a good many of the verses belonging to 'Jock o' Rhynie,' with a few alterations." Greig/Duncan3 347 has more comments on the distinction between this song... and "The Barnyards o' Delgaty" and, in Greig/Duncan3 348, quotes Duncan's note to Greig agreeing that the songs are not the same.

Greig/Duncan3: "Duncan wrote to Greig on 1 February 1908 saying: 'Your last correspondent's statements (and Mr Milne's [see note to [Greig/Duncan3] 347 'The Barnyards o' Delgaty']) about the song beginning, 'In New Deer pairis,' etc. ending in 'jock o Rhynie' and being different from 'The Barnyards' agree with my own information."

Greig/Duncan3: "Greig notes in Ob. 20 [I don't find it there] that the octogenerian William Forsyth told him 'that he remembers as a boy hearing his mother sing "Jock o' Rhynie." This would carry the song back say to 1830."

Greig/Duncan3 has a map on p. xxxv, of "places mentioned in songs in volume 3" showing the song number as well as place name; Mains of Rhynie (348,349) is at coordinate (h2-3,v5) on that map [roughly 31 miles WNW of Aberdeen]. - BS

Last updated in version 2.4
File: RcRhynie

Ribber Ben Come Dung (River Has Come Down)

DESCRIPTION: Jamaican patois: Rattler can't cross the river. Then he takes a bamboo, log, stone, and makes a way to get across. Finally he comes over and dances on the river bank. The singer is glad he made it.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (Murray-FolkSongsOfJamaica)

KEYWORDS: river flood ordeal worksong

FOUND IN: West Indies(Jamaica)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

RECORDINGS:
Edric Connor with the Caribbeans and Earl Inkman, ("Ribber Ben Come Dung"),("De Ribber Ben Come Dung") (on WIEConnor01)
Louise Bennett, "How You Come Over" (on WILBennett01)

NOTES [5 words]: Call and answer digging song. - BS

Last updated in version 3.7
File: JaMu013

Ribbon Blade, The

DESCRIPTION: Roman Catholic Mick Sheridan passes a parade of Yeomen. They surround him and Colston says "he commands the Ribbon Blades." They jail him in Ballina and, when bribery fails to convince him to "make discovery," hang him.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Tunney-StoneFiddle)

KEYWORDS: Ireland execution prison political

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tunney-StoneFiddle, p. 132, "The Ribbon Blade" (1 text)

NOTES [172 words]: "Following an affray at Loughgall in Co. Armagh in 1795 the Orange Order was founded, while the Yeomen were also established in June 1796. These were made up mainly of men from the Orange Lodges." (source: The 1798 Rebellion on the Hogan Stand site)

Zimmermann p. 19: "In some parts of Ulster, Protestant and Catholic tenants were mingled and contended for the land; the peasantry was thus divided into two camps, each having its oath-bound association. This led to a sort of religious war. At the end of the eighteenth century the Catholic "Defenders" were opposed to the Protestant "Peep o'Day Boys" or "Orangemen." The "Defenders" were succeeded by the "Ribbonmen."

An example of the conflict is the "Battle of Crossgar," March 17, 1849 (source: 17 March 1849-Battle of Crossgar at the Orange Pages site).

Ballina is in County Mayo. - BS

For more on the Orange Order and its founding and the troubles it inspired, see e.g. the notes to "Dialogue Between Orange and Croppy, "The Grand Mystic Order' and"The Boys of Wexford," - RBW
Ric-A-Dam-Doo, The (Ring-Dang-Doo (III))

DESCRIPTION: A version of "Ring-Dang-Doo (I)" localized to Canada: "The Princess Pat's Battalion They sailed across the Herring Pond... And landed there with the Ric-A-Dam-Doo." The song describes their disorderly conduct and some of the battalion's members

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead)

KEYWORDS: soldier derivative war

FOUND IN: Canada

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, pp. 48-49, "The Ric-A-Dam-Doo" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ring-Dang-Doo (I)" (euphemism) and references there

NOTES [341 words]: This is obviously a member of the extended family of "Ring-Dang-Doo" songs, but it is entirely about one particular group of soldiers, and largely free of the sexual references in the main entry, so I've split it.

As the song says, the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry was created in the first world war, named for Princess Patricia of Connaught (1886-1976), the granddaughter of Queen Victoria by her third son Arthur, Duke of Connaught. She later became the Lady Patricia Ramsey. The organizers of the Canadian unit presumably chose to honor her because she was, for a member of Victoria's family, relatively modern and easy to sympathize with.

After World War I, most Canadian infantry units were shut down. According to David J. Bercuson, Maple Leaf Against the Axis: Canada's Second World War, 1995 (I use the 2004 Red Deer Press edition), p. 16, apart from reserves, there were only three active-duty regiments retained, the Royal Canadian Regiment, the Royal 22e Regiment -- and the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry. It thus retained its coherence all the way until World War II, when one of its battalions was made part of the First Canadian Division -- the first Canadian unit designated for overseas deployment. Because of British and Canadian politics, it was some time before the First Canadian went into combat, but it was one of the units involved in the 1943 invasion of Sicily (Bercuson, pp. 152-153) -- an invasion mentioned in the next-to-last verse of Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead's text; one suspects that most of the rest of the song was written before that, when the division, and the Princess Pat's, were stuck in Britain waiting for something to happen. From Sicily, the Canadians went to Italy and became involved in the long slow slog up the peninsula. This was a very difficult, expensive campaign; the Princess Pat's were particularly hard hit in fighting along the "Hitler Line" near Aquino and the Liri River (Bercuson, pp. 187-188). But, like most Canadian units, they fought well. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: Hopk048

Rich Amerikay [Laws O19]

DESCRIPTION: A young farmer is leaving Ireland. His rich sweetheart urges him not to go to a foreign land, but Ireland is too impoverished for him. Seeing that she cannot change his mind, she at last decides to go with him

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)

KEYWORDS: poverty courting emigration

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf) US(MA)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Laws O19, "Rich Amerikay"
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 97, "Rich Amerikay" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 27, "Wild Amerikay" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #1916

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Star of Donegal" (plot)

File: LO19
Rich and Rare Were The Gems She Wore

DESCRIPTION: A knight meeting a beautiful lady wearing gems and a gold ring asks why she is not afraid to walk alone in Ireland. She answers: "No son of Erin will offer me harm; For tho' they love woman and golden store, Sir Knight! they love honor and virtue more!"

AUTHOR: Thomas Moore (1779-1852)

EARLIEST DATE: 1846 (Moore-IrishMelodies-1846)

KEYWORDS: virtue beauty gold Ireland patriotic knight

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Moore-IrishMelodies-1846, pp. 19-20, "Rich and rare were the gems she wore" (1 text)
O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladsOfIreland, p. 111, "Rich and Rare Were The Gems She Wore" (1 text)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 100, "Rich and Rare Were The Gems" (1 text); p. 189, "Rich and Rare Were the Gems She Wore" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V13985

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth b.28(6a/b) View 6 of 8, "Rich and Rare Were the Gems She Wore", R. March & Co. (London), 1877-1884; also Firth b.26(338), "Rich and Rare Were the Gems She Wore"

NOTES [72 words]: Not one of Moore's hits; Granger's Index to Poetry doesn't mention a single anthology containing the piece, and I know of no traditional collections. Interestingly, however, Edward Harrigan, the New York writer of ethnic plays (for whom see "Babies on Our Block") quotes two lines of this in his book The Mulligans, implying some sort of folk currency. (See Edward Harrigan, The Mulligans, G. W. Dillingham, 1901, p. 51). - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1

File: OCon111

Rich Irish Lady, A (The Fair Damsel from London; Sally and Billy; The Sailor from Dover; Pretty Sally; etc.) [Laws P9]

DESCRIPTION: Sally at first scorns a suitor, then changes her mind and calls for him. She admits that she is dying for love of him. He informs her that he intends to dance on her grave. She takes three rings from her fingers for him to wear while dancing, then dies

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1808 (journal by Hannah Lowell of Plum Island, Massachusetts)

KEYWORDS: courting dying funeral revenge sailor

FOUND IN: US(Ap,NE,MW,Ro,SE,So) Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber)) Ireland Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (47 citations):
Laws P9, "A Rich Irish Lady (The Fair Damsel from London; Sally and Billy; The Sailor from Dover; Pretty Sally; etc.)" Bronson 295, "The Brown Girl" (49 versions, but very many of these, #1, #3, #8, #13, #16, #17, #19), #24, #25, #35, #36, #41, #44 are listed by Laws as "A Rich Irish Lady," as is #8 though it mixes with "The Death of Queen Jane"; #2, #5, #10, #15, #20, #21, #29, #32a/b, #34, #37, #38(a), #45, #47, #49 are apparently LP9 as well; #4, #6, #7, #11, #31, #38b, #39, #42 are fragments which appear more likely to be LP9; #14, #22, #23, #27 are fragments identified by Laws with LP9 though this cannot be proved; #9 (from Baring-Gould) is definitely the Child version, and #33, #48 probably; #18 is a fragment that might be part of "Glenlogie"; #26, #28 have no text; #30, #40, #43 might be either

Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 295, "The Brown Girl" (5 versions: #1, #20, #26, #41, #47, of which #41 and #47 are clearly this and some of the others might be)

Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #79, p. 1, "The Sailor from Dover" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan6 1219, "The Sailor from Dover," Greig/Duncan8 Addenda, "Waly, Waly, Gin Love Be Bonny" (11 texts, 6 tunes)

Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 44, "The Brown Girl" (7 texts plus 4 fragments, 11 editions, though the "D" fragment at least could be from "Glenlogie"; although listed as Child 295, every full text appears to be Laws P9; some of the fragments might be either)

{Bronson's #17, #16, #14, #18, #42, [F not in Bronson], #36, #35, #41, #46, #22}

Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol1, pp. 34-35, "Pretty Sally" (1 text, 1 tune)

Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-BritishBalladsFromMaine pp. 418-425, "Sally and Her True Love" (2 text plus 2 broadside versions, 3 tunes; the "A" text has an artificial happy ending carelessly grafted on} \{Bronson's #1, #1, #19\}
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 111-118, "A Brave Irish Lady" (5 rexts, 2 tunes; it appears that Laws does not consider one of these versions, probably version E, to be this song, but it certainly belongs to the same family) Randolph 40, "Pretty Sally of London" (5 texts plus one fragment, 3 tunes; it is possible that the fragment is Child #295) \{A=Bronson's #44, B=#24, F=#15\} Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 104-107, "Pretty Sally of London" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 40F) \{Bronson's #15\}
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 90, "A Brave Irish Lady" (3 texts)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 90, "A Brave Irish Lady" (3 excerpts, 3 Tunes)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #177, "The Brown Girl" (1 text, titled "Pretty Sally," listed as Child #295 but properly this piece) Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 27, pp. 128-130, "The Brown Girl" (2 texts, listed as Child #295 but clearly this piece) Hudson-FolkTunesFromMississippi 8, "The Rich Lady from London (The Brown Girl)" (1 text, 1 tune) \{Bronson's #25\} Davis-TraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 50, "The Brown Girl" (8 texts plus 2 fragments, all versions of this rather than Child #295; 3 tunes, all entitled "The Brown Girl"; 1 more version mentioned in Appendix A) \{Bronson's #42, #31, #23\} Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 59, "The Rich Lady From Dublin" (1 text, 1
tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 37-38, "A Rich Irish Lady" (1 text, 1 tune) \{Bronson's #45\}
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 40-41, "A Rich Irish Lady" (1 text, 1 tune) Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, p. 98, "There Was a Young Lady" (1 fragment; tune on p. 389) \{Bronson's #38b\}
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 26, "The Brown Girl" (1 text)
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 160-161, "The Irish Lady" (1 text, 1 tune) Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 244-2426, "The Fair Damsel from London" (1 text from the Green Mountain Songster) Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland4, pp. 285-291, "The Irish Lady, or Sally from London" (2 texts, one of them being from the Green Mountain Songster; 1 tune, lacking lyrics but said to be this piece)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 52, "Fair Lady of London" (1 text)
Niles-BalladBookOfJohnJacobNiles 64, "The Brown Girl" (1 text, 1 tune, listed as Child 295) Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 29, "Fair Sally (The Brown Girl)" (1 text, 1 tune -- a composite version) \{Bronson's #1\}
Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland 24, "Pretty Sally" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 114, "Pretty Sally" (4 texts plus mention of 2 more; Laws does not list the "B" text as belonging here, but it clearly does.)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol3, pp. 45-46, "A Rich Irish Lady" (1 text, 1 tune) Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, pp. 100-101, "Pretty Sarah" (1 text, 1 tune, which seems a little confused about who does the rejection but on the basis of lyrics belongs here rather than with Child 295)
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, pp. 42-43, "Pretty Sally" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #19, "The Brown Girl" (1 short text) VaughanWilliams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs, p. 92, "The Sailor from Dover" (1 text, 1
tune) \{Bronson's #10\}
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H72, pp. 374-375, "Am I the Doctor?" (1 text, 1 tune -- a version with the hatred toned down and with verses reminiscent of "Glenlogie")
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 111-112, "Pretty Sally" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 678-680, "The Brown Girl" (2 texts, but "B" is Laws P9)
Aston-Sailor, #70, "Sally and Billy" (1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 135-136, "A Rich Irish Lady" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 146, "A Rich Irish Lady" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN2324, "A seaman of Dover, sweet William by name"
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, W Amos Abrams, "Della Adams Bostic: Sweet Singer of Old Songs," Vol. XXI, No. 3 (Sep 1973), pp. 145-146, "Sweet Sally" (1 text)
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, W. Amos Abrams, "Pure Coincidence -- If Not, Why Not?," Vol. XXI, Rich Lady Gay, The

DESCRIPTION: "It was of a rich lady she had gold in store. She was loved by the rich and was good to the poor." She meets a ploughboy and gives him a letter. Later she proposes. He says she's "too good for a poor man's wife." They marry. She takes up house-keeping.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c.1975 (recording, Harry Upton)

KEYWORDS: love marriage farming money

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))

Roud #1714

RECORDINGS:

Harry Upton, "The Rich Lady Gay" (on Voice05)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Cupid the Plowboy" [Laws O7] (plot)

NOTES [232 words]: Maybe this is related to "Cupid the Plowboy" [Laws O7]. Here is a comparison of Harry Upton's "Rich Lady Gay" on Voice05 with Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland "Cupid the Plowboy [Laws O7]" 79, "The Plowboy" and broadside Bodleian Harding B 11(773) "Cupid, the Pretty Ploughboy":

 Rich Lady Gay:
A rich lady sees a plowboy in the fields and falls in love with him.
She tells him she has a letter for him. He reads it and says it must be for "some other much higher renowned."
Another day she meets him in the field but he says "you’re too good to be a poor man’s wife"
He admits he loves her.
She agrees to marry him.
They quickly go to church and are married.
She takes up housekeeping and they live happily.

 Cupid the Plowboy:
A rich lady sees a plowboy in the fields and falls in love with him.
She considers writing him a letter and thinks he’ll think her bold; nevertheless, she will do it.
She rejects a wealthy suitor because she loves Cupid, who "has caused me all this pain."
He hears her complaint and says he loves her.
She agrees to marry him.
They quickly go to church and are married.
They have plenty of gold and "each other do adore."
So far I have found no broadside for "Rich Lady Gay." Apparently, neither has Steve Roud.
The motif of the rich woman enjoying wifely chores not common among the wealthy is also in "The Golden Glove" [Laws N20]. - BS
File: RcRiLaGa

Rich Man and Lazarus, The
DESCRIPTION: "Come all thoughtless people by whom Adam came...." Listeners are reminded of Lazarus in heaven and the Rich Man in Hell. The song consists mostly of the lecture to the Rich Man which took place after he died.
AUTHOR: Edward B. Miller?
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad punishment Hell
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 55, "Dives and Lazarus" (1 text)
Roud #6567?
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Dives and Lazarus" [Child 56] (subject) and references there NOTES [119 words]: Jesus's story of the rich man and Lazarus is found in Luke 16:19-31 (the Lazarus of John 11, 12 is unrelated).
It's worth remembering that this is not something that actually happened in the Bible; rather, it is a story Jesus told as a warning.
The status of this piece is extremely dubious; it was reportedly collected from the author. Our general policy is to exclude such songs. But the whole story comes at so many removes that we can't prove Miller's authorship (or even, I suspect, his existence).
I nonetheless incline to agree that the song is not traditional; it's too weak.
I don't know if this is the Ed Miller who is also credited with "The Triplett Tragedy," but time and place make it possible. - RBW
File: BrII055

Rich Man, Poor Man, Beggar Man, Thief
DESCRIPTION: "Rich man, poor man, beggar man, thief, Doctor, lawyer, Indian chief." "Tinker, tailor, soldier, sailor, Rich man, poor man, beggar man, thief." Or other verses listing occupations.
Often used as a counting rhyme
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1842 (Halliwell); something similar occurs in Caxton's _The Game and Playe of the Chesse_, c. 1475
KEYWORDS: playparty worker nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MW,SE) Britain(England(North)) New Zealand
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #42, "Flower Oracles" (1 short text plus excerpts)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 502, "TInker, Tailor...." (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #517 n. 56, pp. 216-217, "(My Belief)"
Rich Merchant in Galway, The

DESCRIPTION: The sorrowful singer says "My love is tall and handsome, well shaped in every limb." Her father, a rich Galway merchant, advertises her 1400 pound fortune and sends her love "to plough the ocean"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (IRRCinnamond02)

KEYWORDS: grief love separation sea father lover sailor

FOUND IN: Ireland

Roud #6999

RECORDINGS:

Robert Cinnamond, "The Rich Merchant in Galway" (on IRRCinnamond02)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Disguised Sailor" (subject)

cf. "The Young Maid’s Love" (subject)

ALTERNATE TITLES:

My Love is Tall and Handsome

NOTES [53 words]: One factor distinguishing this ballad from other imprest-or-sent-away-lover ballads is that it is told by the woman. Cinnamond's version has only two verses but seems complete and, in any case, any additional verses do not seem likely to lead to a happy ending:
"when I think of my darling boy my sorrows do renew." - BS

File: RcTRMiGa

Rich Nobleman and His Daughter, The

DESCRIPTION: "It's of a rich nobleman lately, we hear." He has a daughter, who inherits when he dies. She falls in love with a (plowboy). She and her maid dress up as soldiers and "press" him with a "warrant of love." She appears in her own clothes. They happily marry

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1892 (Broadwood)

KEYWORDS: love courting disguise soldier cross-dressing trick marriage

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Broadwood-EnglishTraditionalSongsAndCarols, pp. 68-69, "The Rich Nobleman and His Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #1063

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Caroline and Her Young Sailor Bold (Young Sailor Bold II)" [Laws N17] (plot, lyrics)

NOTES [79 words]: My first glance at this instantly reminded me of "Caroline and Her Young Sailor Bold (Young Sailor Bold II)" [Laws N17]. They are in fact in many ways distinct: The girl's father is already dead, the boy is not actually impressed, and the cross-dressing is a trick. But I suspect that this song (not very widely known) was inspired by the Laws Ballad. Or, perhaps, the longer ballad wore down to the point that the plot no longer made sense, and was rebuilt to become this. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.8

File: LEBC068

DESCRIPTION: The singer has been courted by "a rich old miser" nearly four times her age. She marries him, but he becomes jealous without cause (and beat her). At last she retaliates by breaking a ladle over his head, teaching him to be civil

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames)
KEYWORDS: marriage age abuse punishment
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) US(MW,NE,Ro) Ireland
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Laws Q7, "A Rich Old Miser"
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 304, "The Miser" (1 fragment) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 545)
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 227-229, "The Ladle Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 46, "The Battle with the Ladle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 175, "A Rich Old Miser" (1 text plus an excerpt, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #129, "The Ladle Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 521, LADLESNG
Roud #1004
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "In Duckworth Street There Lived a Dame" (theme of being hit over the head with cookware)
File: LQ07

Rich Wedding Cake, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer is offered a piece of cake. In it are "insides of old concertinas," flute keys, trout hooks...." They "blow a spot off of the side" with a cannon. When he bites into it "my tooth crumbled off on a button Of a trouser rolled up on the waist."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: wedding food humorous talltale
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peacock, pp. 92-93, "The Rich Wedding Cake" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6467
RECORDINGS:
Everett Bennett, "The Rich Wedding Cake" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Trinity Cake" (theme: an inedible cake)
File: Pea092

Rich Widow, The

DESCRIPTION: "I am a rich widow, I live all alone, I have but one daughter And she is my own. Daughter, oh daughter, Go choose you a man, Choose you a good one, Or else choose none."
(The widow marries off her daughter, says she's bound to obey, and wishes her well)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2)
KEYWORDS: courting mother children marriage playparty
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord)) US(NE) Ireland
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 198, "The Poor Widow" (1 text)
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 19-20, "I Am a Rich Widow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong 23, "Here's an Oul' Widow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 40, "I Am a Poor Widow" (5 texts)
Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #186, "The Rich Widow" (1 text)
Roud #13181
File: Lins019
Richard (Irchard) of Taunton Dean

DESCRIPTION: Herchard/Irchard/Richard courts Miss Jane, saying, "I can reap and I can mow..." and earn his ninepence every day. She replies that she needs silks and satins. He perseveres, saying he has pigs and will inherit more if they marry; she consents

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1846 (Dixon-AncientPoemsBalladsSongsOfThePeasantryOfEngland); before 1830 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 17(254a))

KEYWORDS: courting marriage bargaining farming

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (7 citations):
- Dixon-AncientPoemsBalladsSongsOfThePeasantryOfEngland, Song #19, pp. 201-203,247-250, "Richard of Taunton Dean, or Dumble dum deary"; pp. 247-249, "Dicky of Ballyman, (Irish version of Dumble dum deary)" (2 texts)
- Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 369-373, "Richard of Taunton Dean" (1 text plus a text of "Dicky of Ballyman" in the noted)
- Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #163, p. 1, "The Minister's Daughter Jean," "The Parson's Daughter Jean" (2 texts)
- Greig/Duncan4 821, "The Minister's Daughter Jean" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
- Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, pp. 166-167, "Young Herchard" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 386, "Dick of Taunton Dene" (1 text)
- Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 110, "Dicky of Taunton Dean" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST RcIOTD (Full)
Roud #382

RECORDINGS:
- Aunt Fanny Rumble, "Richard of Taunton Dean" (on Lomax41, LomaxCD1741)
- Tony Wales, "Richard of Taunton Dean" (on TWales1)

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Harding B 17(254a), "Richard of Taunton Dean" ("Last new year's day, as I have heard"), T. Birt (London), 1828-1829; also Harding B 11(1343), "Richard of Taunton"; Harding B 25(1617), Harding B 17(253b), Harding B 11(3271), Harding B 25(1619)[mostly illegible], "Richard of Taunton Dean"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Lucindy, Won't You Marry Me?"

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- On New Year's Day
- Dick of Taunton Dean

NOTES [153 words]: Greig: "Version A ["The Minister's Daughter Jean"] retains the English style and language, while B ["The Parson's Daughter Jean"] shows the Scotticising process."
Without exception, the Greig/Duncan4 and Bodleian texts have Richard rejected (broadside Bodleian Harding B 17(254a): "Dick's compliments were so polite, That all the family laughed outright: So when he had no more to say, He mounted old Dobbin and rode away"; Greig/Duncan 821C ends "Your answer, Jean, is quite a treat I'm happy for once at my defeat If this be all you've got to say I'll bid you goodnight for I must away.")
From an undated flier "English Folk-Songs given by the London Glee Singers" [with words to the song]: "An old Somersetshire Folk-Song dating probably from 1716." From The Library of Congress American Memory Courtesy of the Special Collections Department, University of Iowa Libraries.
Search on the flier title as shown here. - BS

Last updated in version 5.0
File: RcIOTD

Richard and I

DESCRIPTION: The singer loves poor Richard. Her parents will have him transported if she insists on marrying him. On "the day we had planned to wed" he is taken and sent to Van Dieman's land. She and her servant girl go to Van Dieman's land. She and Richard marry.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1954 (Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs)

KEYWORDS: love marriage reunion separation abduction transportation family

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Richardson's Farewell

DESCRIPTION: "Injured Boston now awake While I a true confession make...." The singer, called "the Informer," got a "wretch of wretches" with child, but the crime was blamed upon a Parson. The singer confesses to every other evil and bids farewell

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Burt-AmericanMurderBallads)

KEYWORDS: pregnancy crime punishment execution clergy betrayal

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 179-181, "(The LIFE and humble CONFESSION of Richardson the Informer" (1 text); also p. 182, (no title) (a fragment of another broadside about Richardson)

NOTES [101 words]: This is one of those items that belongs in a bad songs contest. Ebenezer Richardson came to be known as "The Informer" during the 1760s as the American colonies tried to avoid British imports, and in the struggles of the time, Richardson accidentally shot and killed a boy named Christopher Sneider. Richardson was sentenced to death, but he eventually was pardoned.

The outraged populace could do nothing but pin every crime, natural and unnatural, on the fellow while dreaming of hanging him. This broadside is the result -- and it's as much a crime against humanity as anything Richardson ever did. - RBW

File: Burt179

Richie Story [Child 232]

DESCRIPTION: An Earl's daughter is courted by one or more noble lords, but loves none but her father's servant, Richie Story. He tries to dissuade her by pointing out his poverty. At last he gives in. She goes with him and is set to work in his household

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1803 (Skene ms.)

KEYWORDS: nobility love poverty servant courting family elopement

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Child 232, "Richie Story" (9 texts, but the text in the appendix is "When Will Ye Gang Awa'? (Huntingtower)" [Laws O23])
Bronson 232, "Richie Story" (9 versions, but #9 is "When Will Ye Gang Awa'? (Huntingtower) [Laws O23], and #7 and #8 may be as well)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 232, "Richie Story" (2 versions: #3, #7)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #99, p. 2, "Richard's Lady"; #95, p. 1, "Richie's Lady" (2 texts plus 1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan5 1051, "Richie Story" (7 texts plus a single verse on p. 633; 4 tunes plus two bars on p. 634)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 592-593, "Richie Storie" (1 text)
DT 232, RICHILAD*

Roud #97

CROSS-REFERENCES:

Notes [3067 words]: Child considers "The Duke of Athol" (="Huntingtower," Laws O23) to be a relative of this song, probably a rewrite. It should be noted, however, that the plots are by no
Incest, yes, homosexuality, no). As a matter of fact, children by two different mothers, and not even his enemies, who blackened his name in every way. That leaves Richard III. He was, unquestionably, both fertile and heterosexual (since he left three.

Of course, if the Richard involved isn't Richard I, our problem becomes worse, because there were only two other English Kings named Richard. Richard II was married very early in life, and his first marriage with Anne of Bohemia was singularly -- almost unbelievably -- happy (SaulII, p. 456). When Anne died while still in her twenties, Richard almost at once contracted a marriage to six-year-old Isabella of France (SaulII, p. 457). There are no reports of illegitimate children. Richard II never visited England; Ashley, p. 527. Boyd, p. 258, says that she was the first and only Queen of England never to set foot in the country). Richard himself was in the country for only about six months in his ten year reign; the rest of the time, he was on crusade or fighting in France. What's more, according to OxfordCompanion, p. 803, he was only twice in England even before he became king. There simply was no "time" for him to be chasing girls. Nor did he speak English to enable him to talk to English girls. (OxfordCompanion, p. 803 -- although an Earl's daughter in Richard's time would probably speak Norman French just as Richard did).

Of course, if the Richard involved isn't Richard I, our problem becomes worse, because there were only two other English Kings named Richard. Richard II was married very early in life, and his first marriage with Anne of Bohemia was singularly -- almost unbelievably -- happy (SaulII, p. 456). When Anne died while still in her twenties, Richard almost at once contracted a marriage to six-year-old Isabella of France (SaulII, p. 457). There are no reports of illegitimate children. Richard II is, it seems to me, impossible as a subject of this ballad.

That leaves Richard III. He was, unquestionably, both fertile and heterosexual (since he left three children by two different mothers, and not even his enemies, who blackened his name in every way they could, accused him of homosexuality. Incest, yes, homosexuality, no). As a matter of fact, there is reason to think that his illegitimate daughter Katherine was fathered while he was "in hiding," since his older brother Edward IV had been temporarily deposed. There is also a curious incident in Richard's career in which he had to go dig up his future wife, Anne Neville, who had been hidden by her sister and brother-in-law. (For details on all this, see the notes to "The Babes in the Woods," which are so huge that I'm not going to repeat all the citations.) Both Richard's affair with the mother of Katherine and his search for his wife have points of contact with this story. Plus, in a most interesting twist, Richard in the last years of the reign of King Edward IV spent most of his time handling affairs in the north of England. Ross -- who is not friendly to Richard -- declares on p. 44 that "Richard III is unique among medieval English kings in the extent of his connections with the north of England. By 1483 he had come to know the region and its people more thoroughly than any of his predecessors.... His wife and future queen, Anne Nevill, was heiress to the great northern connections of her family, stretching back for more than a century.... Further, Edward IV had made Richard heir to the Nevill affinity through the systematic grants to him of land and office formerly held by [Anne's father Richard Neville, Earl of] Warwick. By 1483 he had become the dominant figure in England north of the Trent."

Kendall, who is pro-Richard, has a more than fifty page section in his biography which he titles "Lord of the North" (pp. 122-180). Specifically (Kendall, p. 125), Richard was in charge of the West Marches toward Scotland; the East and Middle Marches being the charge of Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland (who was under Richard's authority but maintained his county's internal affairs). In other words, not only was Richard's power base in the north, but of the two northernmost counties, he was in charge of Cumberland (which is not Cumbernaud, but close), while the Earl of Northumberland ran Northumberland.

Dockray, pp. 112-113, catalogs grants made to Richard (at that time still Richard Duke of Gloucester) by his brother Edward IV. In 1471, he was given Penrith in Cumberland as well as properties in Yorkshire. In 1472, he was made Keeper of the Forests north of the Trent (giving authority in Cumberland). In 1475 he was made Sheriff of Cumberland for life. In 1478 he was Warden of the West Marches. In 1480, he was King's Lieutenant in all the north, and commissioner of array for Cumberland and other counties.

As Pollard puts it on p. 81, "[Richard's] achievement was recognized and rewarded in February 1483 by the creation for him of a county palatine comprising Cumberland and a large stretch of south-west Scotland which it was his declared intention to conquer." Thus we have a perfect fit of the surviving details: In Child's "F," we have Richie the ruler of "Cumbernaud," easily confused with Cumberland. In the unprinted Child text, he is King of England -- in other words, King Richard. And we know from history that Richard III, ruler of Cumberland, searched among servants to recover his future wife Anne Neville (Kendall, p. 126). If these portions of the ballad are original and integral, then the king almost has to be Richard III (who also has the advantage of being the most recent King Richard, and the one about whom a ballad most easily would survive).

What's more, Anne Neville had earlier been married to Edward, the Lancastrian Prince of Wales (Ross, p. 18), although the marriage pretty definitely was not consummated. And, since she had no brothers, she was half-heir, with her sister Isabel, of the richest property of England (her father, in addition to being Earl of Warwick by marriage, had been Earl of Salisbury by descent, and according to OxfordCompanion, p. 968, held two other earldoms as well). Once Isabel married the Duke of Clarence, Anne became the most eligible heiress in the country -- half the lords in England must have been sniffing after her, which again fits the story perfectly.

Except -- would anyone want to tell such a tale of a king who came to be portrayed as the worst monarch in English history? The villification was unfair, to be sure (even the anti-Richard Ross says on p. 228 that "No one familiar with the careers of King Louis XI of France, in Richard's own time, or Henry VIII of England, in his own country, would wish to cast any special slur on Richard, still less to select him as the exemplar of a tyrant") -- but so what? It's the reputation that matters in ballads.

Or was that why the name of Richard was cut out of most versions of the ballad? Once again, however, we must add a caution -- and a complicated one. Most versions of the song in Child refer to the Earl of Wigton. Wigton was, for starters, a Scots earldom. But even if we ignore that, it did not exist at a time when there was a King Richard. Poking around on the Internet, it existed briefly from 1341-1372, when Edward III was King of England, after which the property went to the Douglasses and the title in effect died. The title was revived by James VI and I, but this is after the death of Richard III. It was given to the Fleming family, who also held the lordships of Biggar and -- notably -- Cumbernault. So this almost has to be the family referred to in the song. And, indeed, Child quotes Hunter referring to an event of 1673 which almost has to be this incident. Child's conclusion is that the story of the courtier being a King is an accretion, and this is likely true. But, given the excellent fit of the details to the real situation of Richard III, I think we must allow at leat the possibility that a portion of an earlier song about Richard III and Anne Neville came to be grafted on to a more recent song about the Flemings of Wigton.

ADDENDUM: Richard I's sexuality

For much of the Twentieth Century, it was generally accepted that Richard I was homosexual. The evidence is equivocal. There are tales of him wildly chasing women (McLynn, p. 93; Tyerman, p. 258). He reportedly had an illegitimate son, Philip of Cognac (Ashley, p. 526), but that's nothing compared to his father's and brother's records of bastards. We don't even know who was the boy's mother; the evidence of his existence strikes me as inadequate to prove Richard was the father. Markale, p. 58, says of this that "It was a certainty that Richard was capable of procreating; he had a bastard son from his youth, probably the result of a moment of straying, for he was staunchly homosexual" -- and adds that his mother did not want him to marry the French princess Alice because Eleanor knew the marriage would fail. (But I note that Markale is very much a scandal-monger.)

On the flip side, Richard did not marry until he was in his thirties, and other than the mother of Philip of Cognac, he had no known mistresses. Nor did he have any children by his wife Berengeria. Saul3, p. 161, says that they spent much of their married life apart, seemingly because Richard desired it so. This is one of the props of the claim that he was homosexual. The other, according to Gillingham, p. 161, is that a hermit once told him "Remember the destruction of Sodom and abstain from illicit acts." Richard later did a penance for those "illicit acts" -- according to Boyd, p. 258, he was flogged in his underwear.

Gillingham goes on to vigorously deny that the Old Testament links the destruction of Sodom to homosexuality. He is right in the sense that there are many mentions outside the Pentateuch of the destruction of Sodom, and few of them make reference to that city's sexual practices. In Genesis 18:21, God merely refers to an "outcry" against Sodom and Gomorrah. But we have only one explicit description of sin in Sodom, and the sin is unquestionably homosexuality (Genesis 19:5). What's more, the men of Sodom want to rape two angels/messengers of God who had been sent to investigate Sodom's crime (Genesis 19:1). This is the only sin the messengers could have witnessed directly. I could build a case that the crime of Sodom was not homosexual but rather homosexual rape -- but that it involved homosexuality is pretty much beyond doubt. So, e.g., Owen, p. 91, is sure that the hermit charged Richard with homosexuality although he is not sure the charge is true, and Tyerman, p. 258, also seems to think that this is what the hermit meant although Tyerman strongly doubts the charge.

We also have a report that at one time he was pushed to go and live with his wife (Lofts, p. 39). But this doesn't automatically mean that he had rejected her, just that he liked to be where heads were being bashed.

I would add two other points, although each is pretty minor: When Richard went on crusade, he appointed as one of his justiciars William Longchamp, described by Gillingham, p. 218 as "small, ape-like and excessively fond of boys." (McLynn, p. 136, also mentions that Longchamp was "pilloried as a simian paedophile," although in his zeal to deny Richard's homosexuality, he also seems to deny Longchamp's.) Obviously a heterosexual king might appoint a homosexual bishop to a high post -- but it's probably more likely that a homosexual king would do so. Especially since Longchamp was anything but a good official; despite having a good income from his bishopric, he had sticky fingers, and was a nepotist, appointing relatives to many posts (McLynn, pp. 132-133). According to William of Newburgh, he was as grasping as if he had two right hands (Boyd, p. 249). Also, Saul3, p. 168, says that Richard was a strong supporter of monasteries and monasticism. A heterosexual king might of course feel that way -- but a homosexual king might be unusually supportive of organizations devoted to repressing ordinary sexuality.

And it's not absolutely clear, if Richard were homosexual, that we would have heard about it. The strong suggestion is that King William II Rufus was homosexual, but the chronicles don't say so. Edward II was accused of homosexuality, but even in his case, the word was rarely made explicit. Gillingham, who sounds to me like a bit of a homophobe, loudly denies Richard's homosexuality on p. 162, and claims there were no references to it prior to 1948. OxfordCompanion, p. 804, accepts Gillingham's arguments. Tyerman, p. 258, says that "almost nobody suggested that Richard was a homosexual until the mid-twentieth century." Harvey, p. 66, thinks Richard fell in love with Berengeria at first sight -- but while this obviously makes him heterosexual, it doesn't explain why he spent most of his life separated from her. McLynn, pp. 92-93, admits that there is some evidence for homosexuality, but denies the significance of most of it (certainly most of it is fairly ambiguous) and comes down hard against homosexuality. Ashley, p. 525, is wishy-washy. Runciman, writing probably in the 1940s when such references could have resulted in censorship, goes out on a limb to say Richard's "own tastes did not lie in the direction of marriage." Warren-John, p. 43, says Eleanor "bullied" Richard into marrying Berengeria, and also says that John until then thought it "inevitable" that Richard would die childless -- implying that he never expected Richard to marry, or have children by his wife. Markale, p. 54, brands Richard homosexual without qualification and without seeing need even to justify the statement (but shows in other areas a tendency to accept scandalous gossip as true). Boyd, p. 230, declares that Richard had "no desire for a wife."

I have to say that none of the evidence, in either direction, is convincing. Most of the statements of Richard's carnal exploits could in fact refer to his men. But the only direct evidence of homosexuality is the hermit's claim, which might be false. So I don't think we can definitively say whether he was heterosexual, homosexual, bisexual -- or asexual. The one thing that seems clear is that he spent very little time actually courting women, which makes it difficult to see him as the hero of this ballad. As McLynn says on p. 52 (quoting Gerald of Wales), Richard "cared for no success that was not reached by a path cut by his own sword and stained with the blood of his adversaries." - RBW

Bibliography

- Ashley: Mike Ashley, British Kings and Queens, Barnes & Noble, 2000 (originally published as The Mammoth Book of British Kings and Queens, 1998)
- Harvey: John Harvey, The Plantagenets, 1948, 1959 (I use the 1979 Fontana paperback edition)
- Saul II: Nigel Saul, Richard II (a volume in the Yale English Monarchs series), Yale, 1997

Last updated in version 4.1
File: C232

Richlands Women Blues

DESCRIPTION: Her husband is gone for a while and she is all dressed up and ready to go with the first "dude" that will take her in a car. "Hurry down sweet daddy, Come blowing your horn, If you come too late, Sweet mama will be gone"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1963 (MJHurt04)
KEYWORDS: infidelity clothes colors hair drink nonballad wife
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
DT, RICHLAND
RECORDINGS:
Mississippi John Hurt, "Richlands Women Blues" (on MJHurt04)
File: DTricla

Richmond is a Hard Road to Travel

DESCRIPTION: Singer, ostensibly a soldier in the Union army, sings of the difficulties involved in attempting to capture Richmond, VA. The Union generals have all failed badly. The singer wonders who will try next, as the Confederates, "fight like the devil"
AUTHOR: John R. Thompson? / Music: Daniel Emmett EARLIEST DATE: 1863 (sheet music published by A. E. Blackmar, according to Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer, ostensibly a soldier in the Union army, sings of the difficulties involved in attempting to capture Richmond, VA. McDowell is defeated by Stonewall Jackson, Fremont gets lost, Banks loses his supplies, the Galena, Monitor and Naugatuck are driven off, McClellan finds it hard going. Lincoln issues his Emancipation Proclamation, Pope is defeated at the second battle of Manassas, and Burnside's men are slaughtered. The singer wonders who will try next, as the Confederates, "fight like the devil"
KEYWORDS: battle Civilwar war derivative
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 331-334, "Richmond Is a Hard Road to Travel" (1 text, 1 tune)
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, p. 67, (no title) (1 short text, perhaps this though it refers to Jordan rather than Richmond; it looks like a mix of the original and the parody)
DT, RCHMDNDR *
RECORDINGS:
New Lost City Ramblers, "Richmond is a Hard Road to Travel" (on NLCREP4)
BROADSIDES:
LOCSinging, as111720, "Richmond a Hard Road to Travel" or "The New Jordan," unknown, 19C
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Jordan Am a Hard Road to Travel" (original song, tune)
SAME TUNE:
Jordan Am a Hard Road to Travel (File: R305)
NOTES [1105 words]: This parody of Emmett's "Jordan Am a Hard Road to Travel" was composed by an anonymous Confederate sympathizer, probably around 1864. - PJS
Actually, it was 1863. This is shown by the sheet music -- but also by the fact that the last battle mentioned is Fredericksburg (late 1862).
The verse which refers to McDowell is perhaps somewhat deceptive; Irvin McDowell was the first commander of what would later be the Army of the Potomac, and led it to defeat (over his protests) at First Bull Run/Manasses (July 21, 1861). The Confederates were commanded by Joseph E. Johnston, who arrived just before the battle with four brigades from the Shenandoah Valley, but the local commander was P.G.T. Beauregard, who usually gets most of the credit. (Though the real problem for the Unionists was that their troops were utterly raw.) Stonewall Jackson was only a brigade commander at Bull Run; his steadiness helped save the Confederates, but affected the overall battle only slightly.
"Wooley-Horse" Frémont and Nathaniel P. Banks commanded forces in the Shenandoah Valley in the Spring of 1862. Neither was competent, and there was no overall Valley strategy or commander, and as a result Stonewall Jackson was able to outmaneuver both (battles such as Kernstown, Mar. 23, 1862, though this was not part of the Valley Campaign proper, and a tactical defeat for the Confederates; McDowell, May 8, 1862; Front Royal, May 23; Winchester, May 25; Cross Keys/Port Republic, June 8-9).
Banks is called "Commissary Banks" because his supply wagons provided so much sustenance to Jackson's soldiers.
The verse about the 1862 campaign on the James River (mentioning the Galena, the Monitor, and the Naugatuck) also tells only part of the story -- omitting, e.g., the whole story of the blockade of Hampton Roads, including the battle of the Monitor and the Merrimac/Virginia (for these, see "The Cumberland Crew" [Laws A18]).

Drewry's Bluff was a high head above the James River below Richmond. It was the key position guarding Richmond against river assault. Union ships started in this direction early in the Peninsular Campaign, but no serious assaults could be contemplated until the waters of Hampton Roads were safe for Union vessels.

It was only after Norfolk was captured and the Merrimac scuttled (May 11) that the Federals were able to sail in force up the James River toward Richmond. The battle at Drewry's Bluff took place on May 15, 1862. The fleet included the new light ironclad Galena as well as the Monitor. (The Naugatuck was a non-ironclad, and of no particular account; in any case, according to Stephen W. Sears, The Gates of Richmond: The Peninsula Campaign, Houghton Mifflin, 1992, one of her big guns soon burst and she was out of action) The Galena was anchored below the guns on the bluff -- but her armor platting was not up to the job, and she had to retire damaged after using up her ammunition. The problems with her armor proved so bad that it was later removed and she served the rest of the war as a wooden boat. James L. Nelson, Reign of Iron: The Story of the first Battling Ironclads, the Monitor and the Merimack, Perennial, 2004, p.89, records an officer writing of her, "She is not shot-proof; ball came through, and many men were killed with fragments of her own iron."

This was hardly a surprise; Sears, p. 94, says: "The Galena was something of a makeshift, a conventional wooden gunboat with layered armor made of iron bars and plates bolted to the sides. She looked to a Union nurse 'like a great fish with iron scales.' Flag Officer Goldsborough was appalled when he first saw the Galena, calling her 'a most miserable contrivance' and refusing to send her into action until shields of boilerplate were installed inside the bulwarks to prevent the armor-securing nuts from flying off from the concussion of a hit and decimating the gun crews. Even with the improvement, Goldsborough said, 'She is a sad affair.'"

The Monitor also tried to take part in the attack on the Bluff, but her turret-mounted guns could not elevate enough to hit the target. (The other ships also had trouble in this regard.)

Thus the real moral of this story was not that the Union ships were inferior (in fact, their performance was better than Confederate equivalents) but that seagoing vessels were not equipped to assault land targets well above river level.

The reference to McClellan and the Peninsula is a reference to the Peninsular Campaign of March-July 1862. McClellan took the Army of the Potomac by sea down to the "Peninsula" between the James and York rivers, and set it marching northwest to Richmond. He was delayed for a long time at Williamsburg, where he prepared a regular siege -- but the defender there was Magruder, not Longstreet.

The Peninsular Campaign ended when Robert E. Lee (newly appointed to command the Army of Northern Virginia) tricked McClellan to giving up the siege of Richmond in the Seven Days' Battles (June 25-July 1). It was here that Longstreet (then a senior division commander) and the Hills (A.P. Hill and D. H. Hill, also division commanders) first came to prominence.

Pope is John Pope, appointed to command large portions of McClellan's forces after the Peninsular campaign. He managed to produce an amazing amount of bombast about having his headquarters in the saddle and seeing the enemy's backs -- but had his forces enveloped and smashed at Second Bull Run (August 29-30, 1862). Pope was relieved and sent west.

The song omits the Battle of Antietam (September 17, 1862), in which McClellan threw back Lee's ill-advised invasion of Maryland, returning to the plot at the Battle of Fredericksburg (December 12, 1862), at which the new Federal commander Ambrose Burnside threw pontoon bridges across the Rappahannock River in order to attack Lee in a prepared defensive position. The result, unsurprisingly, was a slaughter.

The song concludes by asking who would be next; the answer was Joseph Hooker, who lost the Battle of Chancellorsville. He was succeeded by George Meade, who won Gettysburg and kept command of the Army of the Potomac until the end of the war.

The attribution of the words to John R. Thompson is based on E. Lawrence Abel, Singing the New Nation: How Music Shaped the Confederacy, 1861-1865, Stackpole, 2000, p. 121. He reports that Thomson was the editor of the Southern Literary Messenger. This is apparently based on the 1863 sheet music, and we know how dubious those claims can be.... Abel observes that the poem gives most of the credit for the eastern victories to Stonewall Jackson rather than Robert E. Lee. - RBW
Richmond on the James

DESCRIPTION: The women mourn the fine men slain "On a blood-red field near Richmond, Richmond on the James." A soldier lies dying as his life-long comrade sadly watches. The dying man sends tokens to his family and sweetheart

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin)
KEYWORDS: battle Civilwar death farewell
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1862 - Peninsula Campaign. The Union army approaches Richmond for the first time, only to be repelled by Robert E. Lee in the Seven Days' Battles 1864-1865 - Grant's campaign against Petersburg and Richmond, eventually leading to the fall of the city

FOUND IN: US(MW,NE)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 229-230, "Richmond on the James" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 64, "Richmond on the James" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, RICHJAME*

Roud #4811

NOTES [37 words]: The notes in Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl speculate that this is an offshoot of "The Dying Ranger" [Laws A14]. This is possible, but no more than that; songs like this are a dime a dozen. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.6
File: Wa064

Rick Rick Toe

DESCRIPTION: "Rick, rick, toe, Here I go, If I miss, I come to this." Or "Tip, tap, toe," or "Tit, tat, toe," etc. Or "Tic, tac, toe, My first go, Three jolly (butcher) boys, All in a row. Stick one up, Stick one down, Stick one in the old man's crown."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)
KEYWORDS: playparty
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 150, "(Tic, tac, toe)"; "(Rick, rick, toe)"; "(Tip, tap, toe)"; "(Tit, tat, toe)" (4 texts)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ticky-Tack-Too" ("Tic Tac Toe" lyric)
cf. "Tic-Tac" ("Tic Tac Toe" lyric)
cf. "The Cobbler (III)" ("Tic Tac Toe" lyric)

File: SuSm150A

Riddles Wisely Expounded [Child 1]

DESCRIPTION: A knight arrives to court three sisters. The youngest goes to bed with him. He promises to marry her if she can answer his riddles. She does, and he either marries her or is revealed as the Devil.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1680 (broadside, Bodleian 4o Rawl. 566(193)); c. 1450 (ms. Bodleian Rawlinson D.328)
KEYWORDS: courting Devil riddle marriage family questions MiddleEnglish
FOUND IN: US(Ap,NE,SE,So) Britain(England(North,West,South),Scotland) Jamaica
REFERENCES (41 citations):
Child 1, "Riddles Wisely Expounded" (5 texts)
Bronson 1, "Riddles Wisely Expounded" (7 versions)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 1, "Riddles Wisely Expounded" (4 versions, #1, #3, #4, #5)
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfursCollectionVolume1 45, "The Unco Knicht's Wooing" (1 text)
Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, pp. 6-7, "There Was a Lady in the West"; Broadwood/ Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, p. 7, "The Three Sisters" (1 text plus 1 fragment, 2 tunes)
Williams-FolksSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 37, "The Knight" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 320)
Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 6, "The Three Sisters" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #4}

Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-BritishBalladsFromMaine pp. 429-430, "Riddles Wisely Expounded" (scraps and notes only)
Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland1, pp. 45-50, "Riddles Wisely Expounded" (1 text plus two riddle fragments possibly associated with this, 1 tune); also pp. 299-315, "Captain Wedderburn's Courtship" (3 texts plus two fragments, 5 tunes; the "A" text and the F fragment and tune are mixed with "Riddles Wisely Expounded")
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 47-51, "Riddles Wisely Expounded" (3 texts)
Leach-HeritageBookOfBallads, pp. 13-15, "Riddles Wisely Expounded" (1 text)
McNeil-SouthernFolkBalladsVol2, pp. 116-118, "The Devil's Nine Questions" (1 text, 1 tune)
Davis-TraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 1, "Riddles Wisely Expounded" (1 text; 1 tune entitled "The Devil's Nine Questions" and lacking the plot; the text is almost all riddles) {Bronson's #5}
Davis-MoreTraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 1, pp. 1-7, "Riddles Wisely Expounded" (1 text plus an excerpt from another, 1 tune)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 316, "Child Riddles" (1 text, 1 tune, lacking the plot but very close to the Davis-TraditionalBalladsOfVirginia version)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 1, "Devil's Nine Questions" (1 text)
Wells-TheBalladTree, pp. 169-170, "The Devil's Questions" (1 text, 1 tune)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 9, "The Riddling Knight" (1 text)
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 4, "Riddles Wisely Expounded" (2 texts)
Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 10, "Riddles Wisely Expounded" (1 text)
Niles-BalladBookOfJohnJacobNiles 1, "Riddles Wisely Expounded" (3 texts, 3 tunes, but only the first, "The Devil's Questions," is Child 1)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 86, "The Devil's Nine Questions" (1 text, 1 tune)
Chase-AmericanFolkTalesAndSongs, pp. 110-111, "The Devil's Questions" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hodgart-FaberBookOfBallads, p. 25, "Riddles Wisely Expounded" (1 text)
Botkin-TreasuryOfSouthernFolklore, p. 717, "The Devil's Nine Questions" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abrahams/Foss-AngloAmericanFolksongStyle, pp. 86-87, "The Devil's Nine Questions" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, p. 3, "The Devil's Questions" (1 text, 1 tune)
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, p. 36, "Nine Questions" (1 text, 1 tune)
Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic II, pp. 80-81, "Lay the Bent to the Bonny Broom" (1 tune, partial text)
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 56-57, "Lay the Bent to the Bonnie Broom" (1 text, 1 tune) {cf. Bronson's #1 and its comments on Bruce/Stokoe}
Jekyll-JamaicanSongAndStory 7, "The Three Sisters" (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 18-19, "Riddles Wisely Expounded" (1 text)
Morgan-MedievalBallads-ChivalryRomanceAndEverydayLife, pp. 23-24, "Riddles Wisely Expounded" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN2508, "There was a Lady of the North-Country"
DT 1, JNFRGNTL BONBROMQ* DEVLNINE *
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #4169
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #6685
ADDITIONAL: Karin Boklund-Lagopolou, _I have a yong suster: Popular song and Middle English lyric_, Four Courts Press, 2002, pp. 75-76, "(Inter Diabolus et Virgo)" (1 text)
Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #343, "There Was a Knight" (1 text)
MANUSCRIPT: Oxford, Bodleian Library, MS. Rawlinson D.328 (Bodleian 15444), folio 174 (the "Inter diabolus et virgo" text that is in Child's Addenda)
ST C001 (Full)
Roud #161
RECORDINGS:
Texas Gladden, "The Devil's Nine Questions" (AFS 5231 A1; on USTGladden01) {Bronson's #6}
"A Noble Riddle Wisely Expounded" or "The Maids Answer to the Knights Three Questions" by F. Coles (London), 1674-1679; also Douce Ballads 2(168b), "A Noble Riddle Wisely Expounded" or "The Maids Answer to the Knights Questions"

Cross-references:
- cf. "I Gave My Love a Cherry" (riddles theme)

Same tune:
- "Lay the Bent to the Bonny Broom" (tune, per broadsides Bodleian 4o Rawl. 566(193) and Douce Ballads 2(168b) -- though that may be just the "tune name" for this song)

Alternate titles:
- Jennifer Gentle
- There Was a Man Lived in the West

Notes [830 words]: This ballad is also, as "Sven Nordmand," found in Danish tradition.

"Lay the Bent to the Bonny Broom", cited in Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic, should not be confused with the version of "The Twa Sisters" that uses those words as a refrain. - PJS

In addition to the "Inter Diabilius et Virgo" text described below, Rollins, p. 170, #1959 is "A noble riddle, wisely expended" (registered March 1, 1675), which is thought to be this song although it's obviously beyond proof.

Chambers, p. 153, cites this as one of the two oldest verifiable popular ballads in the Child canon ("Robin Hood and the Monk" being the other). Both are found in manuscripts believed to date from c. 1450 -- in this case, Bodleian Rawlinson D.328. There are of course earlier pieces which have been claimed as ballads ("Judas," "St. Stephen and Herod," "Robin and Gandelyn"), but Chambers thinks the description misapplied in those cases. And certainly each of the three has un-ballad-like characteristics. Given that "Robin Hood and the Monk" [Child 119] appears never to have been found except in that one manuscript, "Riddles" is thus arguably the oldest ballad to have survived into the modern era of collecting. Fitting, then, that it is Child #1.

The caution is that Chambers is lumping the dialog "Inter diabilus et Virgo" with this (see Chambers, p. 156; to be fair, Child also included it). Given that that is mostly a riddle song, and our earliest riddle song is "I Gave My Love a Cherry" (sometimes lumped with "Captain Wedderburn's Courtship"), there is a real question of whether the two can be linked.

The article on this song by J. Barre Toelken makes the interesting observation that many of the riddles in this and other riddle songs permit of two answers, one clean (and hence safe for the woman) and one evil or sexually suggestive. Thus the woman must not only answer but give the safe answer.

Thompson, p. 43, says that the folk motif of the Devil's Riddles (his #812) is particularly common in Germany and the Baltic countries.

Bronson, pp. 97-98, makes another interesting point: Although the oldest recorded tune for this is that found in "Pills to Purge Melancholy," from the early eighteenth century, that melody "is patently related to 'The North-Country Lasse' (alias 'I would I were in my own country,' or 'The Oak and the Ash an the Bonny Ivy Tree')... and that again is clearly a variant form of 'Goddesses' in Playford's English Dancing Master, 1650, and this again relates to the Elizabethan tunes set for virginals by both Ralph and Giles Farnaby under the titles 'Fayne woulde I wedde' and 'Quodling's Delight.' Thus, although we cannot know when melody and text came together, both are clearly very old. - RBW

Jekyll-JamaicanSongAndStory's "The Three Sisters" is classified by Jekyll as an "Annancy" story. It is a cante fable following the Ashanti (West African) tradition: Three sisters all refuse to marry. Snake decides to try his luck, borrows fine clothes from a friend, and has an entourage carry him to the sisters' door -- which is barred with iron. He asks the eldest sister to unbar the door because "there is a stranger coming in." The youngest, who has supernatural powers, senses something wrong and sings that the door will remain barred. Snake then asks the middle sister and fails again when the youngest sister interferes. "An' the Snake turn to a Devil" and fails again with the youngest sister herself. The Devil sings "What is roguer than a woman kind" and the youngest sister answers "The Devil roguer than a woman kind." "Then the Devil fly from the step straight into hell an have chain round his waist until now." Among the Child texts this is closest to 1.C, which ends, "As sune as she the fiend did name, He flew awa in a blazing flame." Jekyll's tale seems affected by Revelation 20.1-3, quoting King James: "And I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years. And cast him into that bottomless pit, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season." Broadwood writes of Jekyll's "The Three Sisters": "Although the story of the monster outwitted by the maiden he tries to carry off is an almost world-wide motif, and is found in Africa among other countries, this particular version has evidently been in contact with European (English or Scottish) sources. This is shown not only by the fact that the suitor proves to be the Devil, but by the question and answer... This riddle appears in three versions of the ballad of [Child 1]" (Lucy E. Broadwood, "English Airs and Motifs in Jamaica" in Walter Jekyll, Jamaican Song and Story (New York: Dover Publications, 1966 (Reprint of David Nutt, 1907)), #7, p. 286, "The Three Sisters").

Bibliography

- Bronson: Bertrand Harris Bronson, The Ballad as Song (essays on ballads), University of California Press, 1969

Ride Away to Aberdeen

DESCRIPTION: The old man rides "away to Aberdeen to buy fite breid" [white bread]. When he returns he finds the old woman dead. He hits her on the ear with his club: "rise ... an' ate yer fite breid"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)

KEYWORDS: death food husband wife

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Greig/Duncan8 1690, "Ride, Horsie, Ride" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Walter Gregor, "Kilns, Mills, Millers, Mead and Bread" in Transactions of the Buchan Field Club 1892-1895 (Peterhead, n.d.), (30 Nov 1894), [Vol.III,] Bread and Games #4 pp. 157-159 (9 texts)

Roud #13034

NOTES [50 words]: Gregor: "This amusement may be made for the child by the mother or nurse dangling the child on her knee in imitation o friding, or, if the child is old enough, it receives a staff or piece of stick, which it puts between its legs, and then moves about as if riding, and repeats the words itself." - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD81690

Ride on, Jesus

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Ride on Jesus, Ride on, Ride on conquering King, I want to go to heaven in the morning (x2)." Verses: "If you see my mother (father, sister, brother), Tell her (him) for me, Meet me tomorrow in Galilee, Want to go to heaven in the morning (x2)"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (4 citations):

Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, pp. 148-149, "Ride on, Jesus" (1 text) (1 tune)

Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSealands 43, pp. 182-184, "Ride On Conquering King" (1 text, 1 tune)

Curtis-Burlin-NegroFolkSongs-TheHamptonSeries (!), pp. 3-12, "O Ride On, Jesus" (1 text with variants, 1 tune with variants)
Ride On, King Jesus

DESCRIPTION: "Ride on, King Jesus, no man can hinder me (x2)." "I was young when I begun, No man can hinder me. But now my race is almost done...." "King Jesus rides on a milk-white horse... The river of Jordan he did cross. "When I get to heaven gonna wear a robe"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad horse clothes travel

FOUND IN: US(SE,So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, pp. 184-185, "Ride On, King Jesus" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warren-EveryTimelFeelTheSpirit, pp. 74-75, "Ride On, King Jesus" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #12110

RECORDINGS:
James Garfield Smalls, "O Ride on Jesus" (on USSeaIsland03)

NOTES [26 words]: Roud lumps "Ride On, Jesus" and "Ride on, King Jesus," for obvious reasons, but the form is different enough that I very tentatively keep them separate. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: WarSp074

Ride This Train

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Who Lord who Lord who who Lord who gonna ride this train (x4)." Verses: "Will my mother ride this train, Will my mother ride this train?" "I went in the valley one day to pray, Soul got happy I stayed all day"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 2014 (USSealsland03)

KEYWORDS: floatingverses nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

RECORDINGS:
Minnie Gracie Gadson, "Ride Dis Train" (on USSealsland03)

NOTES [17 words]: In Gadson's verse alternate lines are "Who gonna ride this train"

Gadson: "That's a shoutin' song." - BS

Last updated in version 4.1

File: RcRiDTTr

Ride to Hell, The

DESCRIPTION: "Vince was a railroad engineer, His train a daily freight That roared through hills... Insanely testing fate." Vince the engineer is well known along his route. One day in 1923, running late, he hits a bad switch and dies. Now his ghost runs the route

AUTHOR: Denver Stull

EARLIEST DATE: 1982 (West Virginia Hillbilly, according to Lyle)

KEYWORDS: train death ghost
Ridge-Running Roan, The

DESCRIPTION: Singer vows to tame a wild horse. After 17 days of pursuit the cowboy ropes him, discovering that at some point he'd been saddled and bridled, but was still wild. The horse eventually throws him and runs back to the ridges with all of his gear.

AUTHOR: Curley Fletcher

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Curley Fletcher, "Songs of the Sage")

LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer hears of a wild horse and vows to tame it. After 17 days of pursuit the horse quits the ridges for softer ground and the cowboy ropes him, discovering that at some point he'd been saddled and bridled, but was still wild. Mounting, "I thought I was up on the hurricane deck/Of an earthquake and cyclone a-havin' a wreck." The horse eventually throws him and runs back to the ridges with all of his gear.

KEYWORDS: work animal horse cowboy worker

FOUND IN: US(Ro)

RECORDINGS:
Beverly Hillbillies, "Ridge Runnin' Roan" (Brunswick 599, c. 1932)
Tex Fletcher, "Ridge Runnin' Roan" (Decca 5302, 1936)
Harry Jackson, "The Ridge-Running Roan" (on HJackson1)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Strawberry Roan" (theme)

NOTES: There's clearly a relationship to "Strawberry Roan" (also by Fletcher), but the plots are different enough that I've split them. - PJS

Last updated in version 5.0

File: RcTRiRuR

Ridin' in a Buggy

DESCRIPTION: "I'm ridin' in a buggy, O yes, O yes, It's a golden bright buggy... O Candy, Candy gal, Woncha hurry, Candy gal, Swing your partner, Candy gal... Now choose two partners... And I wants a good rappin'."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1960

KEYWORDS: dancing courting nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 262, "Ridin' in a Buggy" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: LoF262

Ridin' of a Goat, Leadin' of a Sheep

DESCRIPTION: "Ridin' of a goat and leadin' of a sheep (x3), I won't be back till themiddle of the week."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)

KEYWORDS: animal sheep travel

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 677, "Ridin' of a Goat, Leadin' of a Sheep" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

Roud #17391

NOTES: The description is based on the Brown/Schinhan-
Ridin' on de Cable Car

DESCRIPTION: "Come hurry to de wicket And get a first-class ticket Risin' on de cable car." The singer describes the rider's experiences: Paying six cents to be jammed in a crowd on a hot day, having someone step on your toe, being harangued by a politician

AUTHOR: H. O. Lawrence?

EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Randolph)

KEYWORDS: travel technology

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 509, "Ridin' on de Cable Car" (1 text)
Roud #7593

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Climbing up the Golden Stairs" (tune)

File: R509

Ridin' the Smokestack

DESCRIPTION: "One night when logs were rafted Down to the planing mil The sparkling moonshine outside and in Was giving Del a thrill." Del sets out with a whoop; the log breaks loose -- but "Del found at port he'd ridden The shadow of the smokestack."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps)

KEYWORDS: humorous talltale trick logger

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 44, "Ridin' the Smokestack" (1 text)
Roud #18187

File: BeLo044

Riding a Raid

DESCRIPTION: "'Tis old Stonewall, the Rebel, that leans on his sword, And while we are mounting, prays low to the Lord." The cavalrymen are told to be ready; they are "riding a raid." The singer revels in the fighting capabilities of Stuart's cavalry

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1890 (Fagan, Southern War Songs, according to Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar); internal evidence implies a date before 1865

KEYWORDS: Civilwar battle

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
May 10, 1863 - death of Thomas Jonathan "Stonewall" Jackson
May 12, 1864 - death of J. E. B. Stuart

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 82-83, "Riding a Raid" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, p. 404, "Riding a Raid" (1 text plus a copy of the sheet music cover)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Bonnie Dundee (I)" (tune)

File: SCWF082

Riding Boy from Powder River

DESCRIPTION: "Riding boy from Powder River Rides the broncs until they shiver, Rides the gals until they quiver, He's the riding boy!"
Riding Boy from Powder River

DESCRIPTION: The name of the river of this song is explicitly "Powder River," not "The Powder River"; the local custom is that you don't use an article before the name, ever. (See Helena Huntington Smith, The War On Powder River, University of Nebraska Press, 1966, p. 1). According to Smith, p. 9, the first big cattle drive on Powder River was organized by Moreton Frewen in 1879. - RBW

File: Ohr039

Riding Down to Portsmouth

DESCRIPTION: A sailor falls in love with a pretty maid while "riding down to Portsmouth." After he promises to marry she sleeps with him and steals his gold watch and purse. He leaves the landlord his pony in pawn till he returns from the war.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1867 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 20(41))
KEYWORDS: sex theft whore sailor horse trick promise
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,West))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
O'Shaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart2 41, "Riding Down to Portsmouth" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #40, "Riding Down to Portsmouth" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1534
RECORDINGS:
Tom Willett, "Riding Down to Portsmouth" (on Voice02)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 20(41), "Riding Down to Portsmouth," J. Harkness (Preston), 1840-1866; also Harding B 11(1453), "Riding Down to Portsmouth"

NOTES [10 words]: Probably just as well that wedding didn't come off.... - RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: RcRdDTPo

Riding Herd at Night

DESCRIPTION: "Riding herd at night, a lonely exile singing," the singer falls into waking dreams of "the cot where my love lies dreaming of me." Even as he drives herds in Wyoming (a job he never imagined), his thoughts are in Ireland. He recalls the holidays there

AUTHOR: John Henry Macaulay
EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: emigration cowboy work separation homesickness
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H588, pp. 220-221, "Riding Herd at Night" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [10 words]: Bet you never thought you would see an Irish cowboy song. - RBW
File: HHH588

Riding in a Sleigh

DESCRIPTION: "Hitch her up, hold your horses! Or they'll get away. Oh, isn't it pleasant to kiss your sweetheart, Riding in a sleigh?" She asks how many bridges they'll cross. As they cross the ridge, he kisses her. Soon they will ride in a sleigh with a preacher

AUTHOR: Will S. Hays (source: Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
EARLIEST DATE: 1871 (original publication, according to Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
Riding on the Dummy

DESCRIPTION: "Of all the ways of travelling, by coach or carryall... the dummy beats them all." People step on each other's toes and bump into each other; people fall in each other's laps; etc. But the singer is happy "Riding on the dummy With the darling I adore."

AUTHOR: Words: Sam Booth/Music: Frederick G. Carnes

EARLIEST DATE: 1885 (sheet music)

KEYWORDS: courting travel technology

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Randolph 511, "Riding on the Dummy" (1 text)
- Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 485-490, "On the Dummy Line" (about "The Dummy Line (II)," but it includes a cover of the sheet music to this piece)

Roud #7595

NOTES [80 words]: Randolph reports, "The front part of the streetcars used in California in the early days was open and was called the dummy." Randolph's text is a curious mixture of themes; the first two verses describe the dangers of riding the dummy; the chorus describes the sights seen from the train and the pleasure of riding with one's darling; the final verse describes the lovers' visit to a park. One suspects a composite text. - RBW

This should not be confused with "The Dummy Line." - PJS

File: R511

Riding on the Tramway

DESCRIPTION: The singer sees a lady "looking out of a window at the New Tramway" The cost is only two pence. He gets on and sat next to her. He asks her to marry, she agrees, they marry and, he says, "we'll soon have fresh conductors on the New Tramway"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 19C (broadside, Bodleian Firth c.16(155))

KEYWORDS: courting marriage technology

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong 15, "The New Tramway" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #6988

RECORDINGS:
- Robert Cinnamond, "The Horse Tramway" (on IRRCinnamond01) (fragment; only the chorus and one verse)

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Firth c.16(155)[some words illegible], "Riding on the Tramway" ("It was on one summer's evening, not very long ago"), T. Pearson (Manchester), 1850-1899; also Firth c.26(5) [some words illegible], "Riding on the Tramway"

NOTES [62 words]: Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong: The horse-drawn Belfast Tramway system was opened in 1872. Unlike the horse-omnibuses, it ran smoothly on a metal track. "A journey in such a horse tram was much smoother, faster and quieter than that in a horse-omnibus jolting its way through cobbled streets."

Broadside Bodleian Firth c.16(155): "sung with immense success by Hyram Travers." - BS

File: Leyd015
Riel Sits In His Chamber o' State (The Marching Song; Capture of For Garry, or Riel's Retreat)

DESCRIPTION: "Riel sits in his chamber o' state, Wi' his stolen silver forks an' his stolen silver plate.... O hey Riel, are ye waking yet... For we'll take the fort this morning." Riel is defeated and embarrassed; the victors insult him and his failure

AUTHOR: Words: Alexander Hunter Murray

EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (MacLeod-SongsOfOldManitoba; reportedly written 1870)

KEYWORDS: derivative soldier prisoner Canada

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Nov. 2, 1869 - Louis Riel's men seize Upper Fort Garry, taking many prisoners. This song was written to be sung by a militia which hoped to retake the fort, but never got there
1870 - Collapse of Riel's rebellion

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
MacLeod-SongsOfOldManitoba, #7, pp. 47-50, "The Marching Song" (1 short text, 1 tune); #9, "The Capture of For Garry, or Riel's Retreat" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #25770 and 25771

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Johnnie Cope" (tune) and references there
cf. "Riel's Song" (subject of the Metis rebellion) and references there

NOTES [146 words]: According to MacLeod-SongsOfOldManitoba, Alexander Hunter Murray composed his first version of this, of a single verse and chorus, before a band of vigilantes went to try to rescue Riel's prisoners from Fort Garry. They failed. But Riel was later defeated, and Murray expanded his song, fiddling with the first verse and adding eleven more slanging stanzas but leaving the chorus alone. MacLeod considers the result two separate songs, and files them separately with a different song in between, and Roud follows this. I really don't agree; seven of the eight lines of the first version are retained in the second, and the eighth line is merely made more specific. The addition of the extra stanzas are much the same: Murray adds detail but doesn't change what the song is about. So I file the two together. In any case, there is little evidence that either is traditional. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
File: Macl07

Riel's Song

DESCRIPTION: French: "Quand je partis ma chere Henriette, Tu n'avais pas encore quinze ans." The singer (Riel?) left home before Henrietta was fifteen. With the fighting over, he has come home

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1960

KEYWORDS: family sister home separation return foreignlanguage

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1870 - Riel's uprising

FOUND IN: Canada

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong, pp. 124-126, "Riel's Song" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Chanson de la Grenouillere ('Song of Frog Plain,'Falcon's Song)" (subject)
cf. "Pork, Beans and Hard Tack" (subject)
cf. "The Toronto Volunteers" (subject)
cf. "Between the Forks and Carleton" (subject)
cf. "Chanson de Louis Riel" (subject)
cf. "Les Tribulations d'un Roi Malheureux (Misfortunes of an Unlucky 'King')" (background to Riel's Rebellion)
cf. "Chanson des Metis (Song of the Metis, or McDougall at the Border)" (background to Riel's Rebellion)

NOTES [449 words]: Tradition attributes this song to Louis Riel himself. Whether this is true we cannot tell, but the song fits the facts of Riel's life, and Riel is known to have written poetry.

Riel was born in 1844 to a Mètis (French-Indian cross-breed) family. In the late 1860s, the new Dominion of Canada began to organize the Red River region. This organization would have broken up the farms and deprived the Métis of their livelihood.
When their protests failed, Riel led a group of Métis to organize a "Republic of the North-West," and set conditions for joining Canada. Unfortunately, Riel made the mistake of executing a man by the name of Thomas Scott. The government sent a force of 1200 men to clear up the situation. In August 1870, Riel fled to the United States and the rebellion ended.
Ironically, the Canadian government granted most of the rights Riel had demanded to the inhabitants of the hastily-reorganized Manitoba district. Riel was back in Canada by 1871, and earned the informal thanks of the government for helping repel a Fenian raid. But when he was elected to parliament in 1873 and 1874, he was not permitted to take his seat; from 1874 to 1879 he was under formal sentence of banishment. Riel spent the time teaching school in Montana, and for a while was confined to a mental hospital.
In July 1883 Riel returned to Manitoba to attend the wedding of his sister. But in 1884, at the request of the Métis of Saskatchewan (now being pushed out of that province as they had been pushed from Manitoba fifteen years earlier), he organized a second rebellion. Although the Canadian army had trouble catching up with the Métis and their Indian allies, General Middleton fought skirmishes on April 24 and May 2, then defeated Riel at Batoche on May 12, 1885 when the entrenched Métis ran out of ammunition. After a trial which had something of the air of a circus (his attorneys claimed insanity; Riel himself said -- with some truth -- that he had only been responding to political necessity), Riel was hanged late in that year.
John MacDonald (1815-1891), the Canadian Premier, heard many appeals to commute Riel's sentence, but decided that Riel had to hang to keep Ontario happy. Quebec, however, was outraged, and some historians believe that the decline of the Conservative Party in Canada (until then the dominant political force) dates from Riel's hanging.
For songs about the second rebellion, see "Pork, Beans and Hard Tack," "The Toronto Volunteers," and "Between the Forks and Carleton."
Riel's career was poignant enough that it still inspires songs. Rather better than this, to my mind, is Bill Gallaher's "The Last Battle," recorded by Gordon Bok on "In the Kind Land." - RBW

---

Rifle Boys, The

DESCRIPTION: A girl loves one of Lord Hopkin's grenadiers. Her mother asks how she will get by on so little pay. The girl is not deterred. Her mother would confine her. The drum major leads the grenadiers out of town, breaking every girl's heart

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1855 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 15(257b))

KEYWORDS: courting parting army clothes Scotland mother soldier

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Greig/Duncan1 89, "The Hopkin Boys" (7 texts, 6 tunes)

Roud #588

BROADSIDES:

Bodleian, Harding B 15(257b), "Rifle Boys" ("The rout has come this afternoon, that we must march to-morrow"), E.M.A. Hodges (London), 1846-1854; also Firth c.14(191), Firth c.14(192), Firth c.14(193), Harding B 11(1940), Harding B 15(257a), Harding B 15(258a), Harding B 11(3861), "[The] Rifle Boys"

ALTERNATE TITLES:

Lord Hopkin

The Grenadiers are Marching

NOTES [154 words]: Greig/Duncan1: 'The 'Hopkin' or 'Hopetoun' version of this song applies to the Hopetoun Fencibles (1793-8) who wore red coats with light grey-blue facings." In the texts, the uniform seems to be the main attraction. - BS

Though this raises a complication in the mention of rifles. It is no great surprise that the girls would be attracted to the grenadiers over other soldiers; grenadiers were specially selected, and were generally taller, stronger, and healthier than ordinary soldiers. But -- they didn't carry rifles!

Until the invention of the Minie bullet, and the adoption of rifle muskets which used it in the 1850s, almost all infantrymen used smoothbore muskets. There were a few riflemen associated with each army, but they were few -- it took about two minutes to load, aim, and fire a muzzle-loading rifle, meaning that a smoothbore could fire about five times as fast. So riflemen were specialists, and Rifleman's Song at Bennington

DESCRIPTION: "Why come ye hither, redcoats? Your mind what madness fills?" The singer warns the British soldiers of danger in America. They are asked if there are no graves in Britain for them. He promises a quick death "If flint and trigger hold but true."

AUTHOR: Words: John Allison / Music traditional, set by John Allison
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (recording, Pete Seeger)
KEYWORDS: battle patriotic

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Aug 16, 1777 - Battle of Bennington
Oct 17, 1777 - Surrender of John Burgoyne at Saratoga

FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 25-26, "Riflemen's Song at Bennington" (1 text)
Botkin-TreasuryOfNewEnglandFolklore, pp. 543-544, "Rifleman's Song at Bennington" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 280, "The Riflemen At Bennington" (1 text)

RECORDINGS:
Pete Seeger, "Riflemen of Bennington" (on PeteSeeger32)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Fate of John Burgoyne" (subject: the Saratoga campaign) and notes there NOTES [1065 words]: Recorded by John and Lucy Allison. There is no reason to believe this song ever circulated in oral tradition. Those interested in other non-traditional poetry about Bennington might wish to consult William L. Stone, Ballads and Poems Relating to the Burgoyne Campaign, 1893 (I use the 1970 Kennikat Press reissue), pp. 215-233, which contains eight pieces about Bennington.

The Battle of Bennington was part of John Burgoyne's campaign that ended at Saratoga, for which see "The Fate of John Burgoyne." Burgoyne had a long supply train, running back all the way to Canada, and he really didn't have all that he needed for the campaign. So he was forced to forage to supply his troops: "Confronted by shortages of all sorts, except ammunition, Burgoyne listened to [Baron von] Riedesel's proposal to send an expedition as far east as the Connecticut River to forage for cattle and horses. Riedesel recommended that a large body be sent out in the expectation that it would return with meat for the troops and mounts for his horseless Brunswick dragoons. These Germans had found the march to Fort Edward [just north of Saratoga] a torture. Burgoyne... needed food, and he knew that bringing it from Ticonderoga [at the north end of Lake George, dozens of miles away through hostile country] would be almost impossible" (Middlekauff, p. 377).

Choosing to raid Vermont, he ordered Lt. Colonel Friedrich Baum -- a German who spoke no English! (Middlekauff, p. 377; Purcell, p. 20; Lancaster, p. 213, hints that this not only made it harder to talk to Americans they passed but even to deal with his own Indian allies) -- to take somewhere between 500 and 750 men to raid the Colonial supply center at Bennington. (Purcell, p. 20, estimates that Baum had 375 German mercenaries, 300 Canadians, Indians, and Tories, and just 50 British regulars; Jameson, p. 60, estimates 500 in Baum's force and 500 reinforcements). The Germans, being cavalrymen but having no horses, were weighed down with more equipment than infantry would have carried, and so moved slowly (Lancaster, p. 213). About twenty miles southeast of Saratoga, Bennington was the farthest British units advanced into the American colonies in the Saratoga campaign (see map on p. 375 of Middlekauff).

The colonial leader John Stark -- a good soldier (he had been a senior officer at Bunker Hill) although one who seemed constitutionally incapable of working with others (Purcell, p. 20; Marrin, p. 132, thinks he only rejoined the colors because he had heard an atrocity story) is believed to have had about 2000 men, although they were poorly organized (almost all were militia, which in the Revolutionary War translated as "individuals with guns who came and went as they pleased." (Middlekauff, p. 377), says that it was an army raised by New Hampshire, not the general colonial army, and raised mostly by one man, John Langdon). When Baum came in contact with these semi-soldiers, he dug in and called for reinforcements, but although Burgoyne sent about 600 men under Lt. Col. Heinrich Breymann, they were slow to arrive (Purcell, p. 21; Lancaster, p. 214, says they were slowed by rain that turned the roads to mud, plus Breymann kept insisting on parade formations, which meant that they could only move about half a mile an hour). While waiting for them, Baum built defensive positions, but they were not mutually supporting (Purcell, p. 21). And Baum seems not to have realized that the men in civilian clothes who were coming closer and closer were in fact soldiers. He held his fire until they had in effect infiltrated and surrounded his position (Marrin, p. 132). They opened fire at close range, meaning that Baum’s artillery was no help; he was surrounded by enemies who outnumbered him heavily. The irregulars (Canadians, Indians, Tories) quickly fled, leaving Baum’s regulars to keep fighting. The Germans eventually ran short of ammunition, and tried to cut their way out -- but then Baum was killed by a bullet to the head, and most of the remaining British and German forces surrendered.

When Breymann arrived, there was no one to reinforce, so he got into his own fight with the Americans. When he decided he had to retreat, it turned into a rout, although many of his men, unlike Baum's, made it back to Burgoyne. Purcell, p. 21, estimates British losses as 200 dead and 700 captured; American losses were less than 100. Jameson, p. 60, gives 207 British killed, 700 captured (so also Marrin, p. 134), 60-70 who returned to camp, against American losses of 14 killed, 42 wounded. Marrin, p. 134 says there were 30 American dead, 4 wounded (which is not a credible ratio, but the total could be right). Lancaster, p. 214, thinks Burgoyne lost 800 Germans -- perhaps his steadiest troops. Cook, p. 276, thinks the total was 900 lost -- 10% of the professionals in Burgoyne's army.

Which left Burgoyne having to decide what to do next. He hadn't gotten his supplies, after all, and his army was now significantly weaker. "[I]t is unlikely that Burgoyne would have halted his advance after Bennington to spend the winter in northern New York or to return to Canada. He was too proud and too savvy a political soldier.... Nevertheless, with his army now seriously weakened and his supply situation growing more precarious, he began messaging frantically to [General Henry] Clinton in New York [who was supposed to be approaching from the south to combine armies with Burgoyne]" (Cook, pp. 276-277).

Bennington had very nearly doomed Burgoyne's expedition. "The British were not isolated, whatever else they felt about their situation. But they were at a critical juncture and Burgoyne knew it. He had about a month's supply of food and his troops were in fairly good shape. They were far from the magazine on Lake Champlain, however, and with rather short supplies and lacking winter quarters they could not remain where they were -- on the east side of the Hudson and not close to Albany. Burgoyne might have pulled back to Ticonderoga, but he was averse to withdrawal, which everyone would have considered an admission of defeat. [Which, given his boasts earlier, would surely have cost him his job, and meant political trouble in London.] So he boldly and bravely decided to continue his drive to Albany" (Middlekauff, p. 377). He headed on -- into the arms of the American army of Horatio Gates and Benedict Arnold. - RBW

Bibliography

- Purcell: L. Edward Purcell and Sara J. Purcell,Encyclopedia of Battles in North America, Checkmark Books, 2000

Last updated in version 5.2
File: BNEF543
Rig-a-Jig

DESCRIPTION: "Rig-a-jig-jig and away we go, Away we go, Away we go; Rig-a-jig-jig and away we go. Heigh-ho, hiegh-ho, heigh-ho." Remaining lyrics are repetitions of these words

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)
KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5, pp. 528-529, "Rig-a-Jig" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Heart-Songs, p. 343, "Rig-a-jig" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Buffalo Gals" (lyrics)
NOTES [63 words]: As Schinhan notes, some versions of "Buffalo Gals" contain some of these lyrics; this piece may be related, but the form looks different. In the absence of a longer text than Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5's, I am forced to split it. The Heart-Songs version has verses about meeting a pretty girl who is a weaver's maid. This looks like something else again. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File: BrS5528

Rigby Johnson Chandler

DESCRIPTION: Floating lyrics, united by the refrain "Rigby Johnson Chandler" or similar. Examples: Old man went out to plow And he hooked up a hog with a Jersey cow"; "Two old maids sitting in the sand"; "[My woman] went to the circus and ran off with the clown."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1969
KEYWORDS: nonsense nonballad drink oldmaid floatingverses chickens
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 10, "Rigby Johnson Chandler" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11084
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Salty Dog" (floating lyrics)
File: FCW010

Right On, Desperado Bill

DESCRIPTION: "Railroad Bill was a desperado sport, Shot tin buttons off policeman's coat, And laid this body nowhere." "Railroad Bill, he's so mean, Stayed nowhere but down in New Orleans." "Some of the boys go sixty days, some got forty-nine... I got mine."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices)
KEYWORDS: violence police prison
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, p. 200, "Railroad Bill (II)" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [47 words]: Roud lumps Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices's "Railroad Bill" text with "Railroad Bill" [Laws 113], and certainly both involve a desperate character named "Railroad Bill," but Rosenbaum suggests it is a separate song, and the form is sufficiently distinct that I think he is right. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.6
File: Rose200

Rights of Man, The

DESCRIPTION: Shiel dreams of a meeting at Athlone. Granua says "Britannia No more shall rob you of the rights of man." A man from the sky brings a shamrock. Granua promised to free them before long. The meeting parts "in exultation" at daybreak as Shiel wakes

AUTHOR: Richard Lalor Shiel (1791-1851)
EARLIEST DATE: before 1886 (broadside, Bodleian 2806 b.10(214))
KEYWORDS: dream Ireland patriotic religious
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 18, "The Rights of Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 b.10(214), "Rights of Man" ("I speak in candour, one night in slumber"), H. Such (London), 1863-1885; also 2806 b.9(62), Firth b.26(432), "Rights of Man"
LOCSinging, as111750, "Rights of Man," unknown, 19C
NLScotland, RB.m.143(013), "Shiel's Rights of Man," unknown, c.1870
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Eileen McMahon" (aisling format)
cf. "Granuaile" (aisling format) and references there
NOTES [393 words]: Sheil was Daniel O'Connell's chief assistant when O'Connell founded the Catholic Association in 1823. (source: "Roman Catholic Relief Bill" in The Catholic Encyclopedia at the New Advent site. Also see "Richard Lalor Sheil" at the same site.)
Broadsides LOCSinging as111750 and Bodleian 2806 b.9(62) appear to be duplicates.
Broadside NLScotland RB.m.143(013) commentary: "Granua (also spelt Grainne). The daughter of the mythical Irish warrior and folk hero, Finn McCool, Granua is also used as a symbol for Ireland - much like the figure of Britannia is employed as a symbol for Great Britain." The man from heaven with the shamrock, "the three leaved plant ... it is three in one. To prove its unity in that community, That holds lenity the Rights of Man," could be Saint Patrick. Zimmermann p. 43: "According to a fairly recent legend, St. Patrick held a trefoil [shamrock] as an illustration of the Trinity. The plant had become a religious emblem and a badge of nationality about 1700. In 1778, the Cork Volunteers sang a song entitled 'The Shamrock Cockade', and by then the colour itself had acquired a political meaning."
Broadside LOCSinging as111750 is the basis for the description. The ballad is recorded on one of the CD's issued around the time of the bicentenial of the 1798 Irish Rebellion. See:
Franke Harte and Donal Lunny, "Rights of Man" (on Franke Harte and Donal Lunny, "1798 the First Year of Liberty," Hummingbird Records HBCD0014 (1998)) - BS
"Strongbow" is Richard de Clare (Richard FitzGilbert), one-time Earl of Pembroke (died 1176), who led the first English invasion of Ireland in 1170. Tom Paine (1737-1809) published The Rights of Man in 1791-1792, and it was an inspiration to the more intellectual of the 1798 rebels; most histories of the period contain multiple references to his writing. It's ironic to note that Ireland's French allies would imprison Paine for a time during the quasi-war with the United States -- and even more ironic that Paine's last major work before the 1798 was The Age of Reason, which attacked several important Catholic doctrines. For a discussion of this type of song as an example of the genre known as the "aisling," see the notes to "Granuaile."
There is, of course, a fiddle tune, "The Rights of Man." There is no reason to think the two have anything to do with each other. - RBW
File: BrdTRoM

Rigs o' Gorrachree, The

DESCRIPTION: Near Gorrachree the singer overhears Sandy and a chambermaid. Sandy seduces her. She says, "My maidenhood has got a fright and gane awa frae me." He considers it a joke he's played on fairer maids. He "hunts the beggar wives and sets them agee"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan7)
KEYWORDS: seduction rake servant
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1468, "The Rigs o' Gorrachree" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
Roud #7184
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Rigs of the Times, The DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Honesty's all out of fashion; These are the rigs of the times...." Detailing all the sharp business practices of the day, e.g. the butcher who charges two shillings a pound "and thinks it no sin" -- while placing his thumb on the scale!

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)

KEYWORDS: hardtimes poverty lie money landlord

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,South)) US(MA,MW,NW,Ro,SE,So) Canada(Newf) Australia

REFERENCES (23 citations):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 237, "The Rigs of the Time" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #25, "The Rigs of the Time" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-ThePainfulPlow, #13, "The rigs of the times" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henderson-VictorianStreetBallads, p. 31, "The Rigs of the Times" (1 text)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 433-434, "Song of the Times" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 332, "Hard Times" (2 texts plus a fragment and mention of 1 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 332, "Hard Times" (2 tunes plus text excerpts)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 89, pp. 215-216, "Hard Times" (1 text)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan,184 "Hard Times (1 text, 1 tune)
Welsch-NebraskaPioneerLore, pp. 51-53, "Hard Times" (1 text)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #186, "Hard Times" (3 texts)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 332-334, "Hard Times" (1 text)
Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 14-16, "The Rigs of the Times" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong, pp. 206-208, "Hard, Hard Times" (1 text, 1 tune -- a Canadian adaptation created by William James Emberly in 1936 to describe conditions in the Great Depression)
Fowke/MacMillan-PenguinBookOfCanadianFolkSongs 17, "Hard, Hard Times" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 57-59, "Hard Times" (1 text, 2 tunes)
Mills-FavoriteSongsOfNewfoundland, pp. 44-45, "Hard, Hard Times" (1 text, 1 tune)
Flanders-ChapBook Flanders-VermontChapBook, pp. 38-45, "Hard Times" (1 text)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 183, "Hard Times" (1 text, the first six verses being "Courting the Widow's Daughter" and the last seven being a reduced version, minus the chorus, of "The Rigs of the Times")
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 113-114, "Hard Times" (1 text, 1 tune)
Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, pp. 13-14, "Hard, Hard Times" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, RIGSTIME*

RECORDINGS:
Omar Blondahl, "Hard, Hard Times" (on NFOBlondahl01,NFOBlondahl02)
Ken Peacock, "Hard Times" (on NFKPeacock)
Mike Kent, "Hard Times" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Ned Rice, "Hard Times" (on PeacockCDROM)
J. W. "Charger" Salmons & friends: "The Rigs of the Time" (on Lomax41, LomaxCD1741)
Pete Steele, "The Song of Hard Times" (on PSteele01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Don't Come to Michigan" (lyrics)
cf. "Old David Ward" (lyrics)
cf. "How Can A Poor Man Stand Such Times and Live?" (subject)
cf. "The Steam Doctor" (lyrics)
cf. "Fine Times in Camp Number Three" (lyrics)
cf. "Here's First to Those Farmers" (theme)
cf. "The Mare and the Foal" (theme)
cf. "The Merchant’s Song" (subject: Newfoundland’s truck system) and references there NOTES [258 words]: Most scholars (e.g. Belden, Cox, Kennedy) assume that "The Rigs of the Times" (with chorus "Singing, Honesty’s all out of fashion, These are the rigs of the times, times, me boys, These are the rigs of the times") is the same as "Hard Times" (with a short chorus such as "these times, these (hard/queer) times").
Personally, I’m not convinced, as the two seem to fall into very distinct groups. But because the equation is so common, I’ve followed it in the index. - RBW Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing: "This ... was sent in by Paul Emberly, who informs that the lines were written by his late father." - BS
The Newfoundland versions of this are perhaps particularly bitter in their references to the merchant. This is probably due to the particular circumstances of Newfoundland. Because most supplies had to come to an outpost from elsewhere, there developed the so-called "truck system."
The locals would set up an account with the merchant, who would give them supplies on credit.
When they arrived with their loads of cod, the locals would give it to the merchant to pay off the debt -- assuming they had enough to pay off the debt. And it was of course the merchant, not the sometimes-illiterate fisherman, who calculated the amount of the debt, recorded it, and decided if the fisherman had paid it off. Many merchants were honest, but not all; little wonder if the Newfoundlanders viewed the merchants as a drought-stricken American farmer viewed the bank....
For more on this Newfoundland problem, see the notes to "The Merchant’s Song." - RBW DESCRIPTION: "Riley, Riley, where are you, Wo, Riley! Wo, ma-an!" "Riley's gone to Liverpool...

Riley
Riley's gone an' I'm goin too." "Wish I were Cap'n Riley's son... I'd lay around and drink good rum."
"Thought I heard my cap'n say... Tomorrow is our sailin' day."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1935
KEYWORDS: sailor ship work drink travel nonballad shanty
FOUND IN: US(SE,So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 278, "Riley" (1 text, 1 tune) Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSealIslands 53, pp. 214-215, "Good-bye My Riley-O" (1 text, 1
tune)
Roud #18160
RECORDINGS:
Joe Armstrong, John Davis and the Georgia Sea Island Singers, "Riley" (on LomaxCD1713)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ginny's Gone to Ohio" (lyrics)
NOTES [124 words]: I don't believe this is the same song we have indexed as "Jimmy My Riley."
The response lines are close but the leader's lines are too short. - BS
This is a pastiche of verses from various songs, e.g. "Leave Her, Johnny," "Ginny's Gone to Ohio" (which also has some resemblance in the tune), etc. Lomax related it to "Stormalong" (a connection I don't see). You can probably find other relatives if you look hard enough.
Ben Schwartz gave this description for Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSealIslands's "Good-bye
My Riley-O" version:
Response lines alternate between "O Riley O man" and "Bye bye my Riley o." Leader lines include
"Riley, Riley, where are you", "Riley gone to Liverpool (London Town, Mobile Bay)," "Riley gone and I'm going too"

Riley and I Were Chums
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, Riley and I were chums and always shared... Take my word whatever I done,
I handed it over to Riley." The singer gave Riley a share of his drink. When he is arrested, he gives Riley the warrant. When his wife is unpleasant, he gives her to Riley
AUTHOR: Words: (see NOTES) / Music: Felix McGlennon
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin)
Riley Luffsey

DESCRIPTION: "O'Donald and Luffsey (first names Frank and Riley) And Wannigan, known as Dutch..." were true friends and "never too bashful to shoot." "The Marquis de Mores... had recently come from France"; Luffsey dies in a shootout; de Mores is acquitted

AUTHOR: Clell G. Cannon ?
EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Burt-AmericanMurderBallads)

Riley, Riley (Ho, Riley, Ho)

DESCRIPTION: "Riley, Riley, where are you? Heh! Riley, Heh! Wish I was Captain Riley's son, Heh! Riley, Heh! I'd stand on the dock and drink good rum, Hey! Riley, Hey!"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore)

Riley's Farewell (Riley to America; John Riley) [Laws M8]

DESCRIPTION: Riley and his sweetheart are forbidden by her father to marry. Aided by the girl's mother, Riley goes to America and buys a plot of land. He comes back; the two set out for America. Their ship is wrecked on the way. Before dying the girl blames her father
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1847 (Journal of William Histed of the Cortes)
KEYWORDS: courting love mother father exile wreck death
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber),England(Lond)) US(Ap,MW,SE) Canada(Mar,Newf) Ireland
REFERENCES (26 citations):
Laws M8, "Riley's Farewell (Riley to America; John Riley)"
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #110, p. 2, "John Rylie" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan1 22, "John Riley" (6 texts, 2 tunes)
O'Shaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart2 40, "Reilly the Fisherman" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #56, "John Reilly" (1 text, 1 tune)
Purslow-TheConstantLovers, p. 114, "Young Reilly" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H468, pp. 441-442, "John Reilly the Sailor Lad" (1 text, 1 tune)
O'Lochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 7, "Reilly the Fisherman" (1 text, 1 tune)
O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 49, "O'Reilly the Fisherman" (1 text) Graham-Joe-Holmes-SongsMusicTraditionsOfAnUlsterman 37, "John Reilly the Sailor" (1 text, 1
1 tune)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 147, "John Reilly" (1 text, 1
1 tune)
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 39, pp. 89-90, "Jack Riley" (1 text, containing only the beginning portion of the song)
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 37, "John Reilly" (1 text, 1 tune) Thomas-DevilsDitties, pp. 166-167, "Riley Song"; "William Riley" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune); pp. 168-169, "Bound for Amerikee" (1 fragment, 1 tune, certainly a Riley song although it might not be this one)
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 105-108, "John Riley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 170-171, "Johnny Riley" (4 texts, 3 tunes)
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, pp. 102-103, "Young Riley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 60, "Johnny Riley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 90, "Riley to Ameriky" (1 text)
Peebo, pp. 698-700, "O'Reilly the Fisherman" (1 text, 2 tunes)
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 13, "John Riley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland 45, "Reilly the Fisherman" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 84, "O'Reilly the Fisherman" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke/MacMillan-PenguinBookOfCanadianFolkSongs 67, "Will O'Reiley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 43, "Reilly's Farewell" (1 text)
DT 463, RILYFRWL JREILLY4*
Roud #270
RECORDINGS:
Robert Cinnamond, "Young Reilly the Fisherman" (on IRRCinnamond03)
Michael Flanagan, "O'Reilly to America" (on IRClaire01)
Mrs. Edward Gallagher, "Young Riley" (on MRHCeighton)
Mike Kent, "John O'Reilly" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Jack Knight, "Willie Riley" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Sarah Anne O'Neill, "John Reilly" (on Voice04)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 17(257b), "Riley the Fisherman," A. Ryle and Co. (London), 1845-1859; also Firth c.12(287), Firth b.26(209), Harding B 11(1864), Harding B 11(1865), Harding B 11(3286),
"Riley the Fisherman"; 2806 c.16(201), "Riley's Farewell"
Murray, Mu23-y4:036, "John Riely," unknown, 19C
NLScotland, L.C.Fol.178.A.2(072), "John Reily," James Lindsay, Glasgow, c. 1870
CROSS-REFERENCES:
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Riley the Fisherman
John Rally
Willie Riley
Reilly
NOTES [33 words]: Not to be confused with the broken-token "John Riley." [Nor should the]
Rinaway Bride, The

DESCRIPTION: A couple decide to marry but she runs away from the wedding. Her parents run after her through Tweed and Kelso, but don't catch her. The bridesmaids laugh at the groom for being silly but the bridegroom's man chalks it up to woman's flightiness.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1751 (Yair's _Charmer_, Edinburgh, according to Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong)

KEYWORDS: wedding abandonment Scotland humorous father mother

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, pp. 124-125, "The Rinaway Bride" (1 text)

Roud #2876

NOTES [17 words]: Roud assigns this number to Ord's "The Runaway Bride" but that is a different song to the same theme. - BS

Rineen Ambush, The

DESCRIPTION: The IRA ambush Black and Tan lorries in Rineen, County Clare. "The Black and Tans put up their hands and the peelers too likewise." "Gallant Irishmen together should unite ... And have another ambush soon to fight the Black and Tans!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1974 (Munnelly/Deasy-TheMountCallanGarland-Tom-Lenihan)

KEYWORDS: rebellion battle patriotic IRA

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1920-1921 - The Black and Tan War
Sep 22, 1920 - A partly successful ambush of Black and Tans by the Mid Clare Brigade of the IRA was followed by a successful retreat (source: Munnelly/Deasy-TheMountCallanGarland-Tom-Lenihan).

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Munnelly/Deasy-TheMountCallanGarland-Tom-Lenihan 26, "The Rineen Ambush" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #5222

RECORDINGS:
Tom Lenihan, "The Rineen Ambush" (on IRTLenihan01)

NOTES [186 words]: Munnelly/Deasy-TheMountCallanGarland-Tom-Lenihan: "A large monument now stands at Rineen Cross in memory of that day's events and their appalling aftermath [reprisals by RIC and Black and Tans] which are still embedded deeply in the memory of the people of Clare. Sir Robert Peel established the Royal Irish Constabulary in 1812 and its success led, in 1829, to the Metropolitan Police Act for London. Originally the term "Peeler" applied to the London constabulary. (source: Sir Robert "Bobby" Peel (1788-1850) at Historic UK site.) In this song the term is applied to the RIC (Royal Irish Constabulary). - BS

The Black and Tans (for which see "The Bold Black and Tan") were a special English constabulary recruited to quell Irish violence. They failed, and in fact contributed to the brutality. For one song about the aftermath to this event, see the notes to "Mac and Shanahan." It will tell you something of the violence of the period that none of the six histories I checked (including three devoted specifically to this period, one of which is largely a catalog of atrocities) mentions any of these events. - RBW

File: RcRinAmb
Ring Around the Rosie

DESCRIPTION: Singing game, with lyrics something like "Ring around the rosie, A pocket full of posies, Ashes, ashes, We all fall down."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1881 (Kate Greenway's Mother Goose, according to Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
KEYWORDS: nonballad playparty
FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,NE,SE) Britain(England(All)) Ireland Canada(Newf) New Zealand
REFERENCES (13 citations):
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 49-50, "Ring Around 'Rosies" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 227, "Ring Around the Rosy" (1 text, tune referenced)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H48c, pp. 10-11, "Ring a Ring o' Roses" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 443, "Ring-a-ring o' roses" (4 texts)
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 48, "Ring a Ring o' Roses" (13 texts, 1 tune)
Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #62, "Ring Around the Rosie" (4 short texts, 1 tune)
Byington/Goldstein-TwoPennyBallads, p. 115, "Ring Around a Rosy" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5, p. 536, "Ring Around the Rosy" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #639, p. 253, "R (Ring-a-ring-a-roses)"
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 20, "(Ring a ring a rosie" (1 text plus a "Pop goes the weasel" variant)
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 180, "Ring-a-Ring o' Roses" (4 texts)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 146, "Ring-a-Ring o' Roses" (2 texts)
ST PHCF227a (Full)
Roud #7925
RECORDINGS:
Pete Seeger, "Ring Around the Rosie" (on PeteSeeger33, PeteSeegerCD03)
NOTES [225 words]: The words cited here are the ones I learned (I don't remember playing the game, but I've heard the song), and Pankake's text is almost identical. Presumably this is the form most common in the American Midwest. Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, however, cites older (and presumably more original) forms, and Gomme offers a variety with quite diverse refrains.
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose notes that some have connected this to the Great Plague. But they also observe that this is a very weak link, denied by most who have seriously studied the matter. The Opies merely state that it goes back the time of the plague -- and offer no direct proof even of that. The Opies also cite some possible non-English parallels; those which are in languages I can read do not strike me as truly parallel.
John Kelly, _The Great Mortality: An Intimate History of the Black Death, the Most Devastating Plague of All Time_, Harper Collins, 2005, pp. 20-21, has more explanation than most. According to him, the "ashes, ashes" of the third line are a reference to the bruiselike purple blotches which appeared on the bodies of some victims. These were known as "God's tokens" because they indicated that the sufferer was soon to die. He does, however, point out that this symptom is very rarely observed in modern plague. So this is a pretty weak link. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.5
File: PHCF227a

Ring Down Goliah

DESCRIPTION: On Sunday morning the singer, holding a bible, meets the devil.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1994 (Elder-FolksongsFromTobago)
KEYWORDS: Bible religious Devil
FOUND IN: West Indies(Tobago)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Elder-FolksongsFromTobago 16, "Ring Down Goliah" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
NOTES [114 words]: The current description is based on the Elder-FolksongsFromTobago
Elder-FolksongsFromTobago: "This song sometimes heard at wake-houses, other times among fisher folk, tells a tale about the devil and his fear of the Holy Bible. When the sailors sing it they tell the story about meeting the devil on board a haunted ship. On the other hand, The bongo kings tell the story of Goliah, a great master of the wake-house; Goliah who faces the Evil One in the form of an old bongo king and engages in a tournament of dancing the bongo all through the night. The devil cannot leave the compound where the wake is held because the Holy Bible is at the entrance to the compound." - BS

Last updated in version 4.0
File: ElTo016

Ring is Round, The
DESCRIPTION: "The ring is round -- the bed is square You and I would make a pair"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: courting nonballad ring
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1834, "The Ring is Round" (1 short text)
Roud #13601
NOTES [20 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan8 text. Greig/Duncan8: apparently a verse for a valentine or album. - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD1834

Ring My Mother Wore, The
DESCRIPTION: "This earth has many treasures rare In gems and golden ore, My heart hath one more treasure rare, The ring my mother wore." The child received it from the mother's dying hand, and will treasure it always AUTHOR: Louis Della?
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Randolph); copyrighted 1860
KEYWORDS: mother death ring
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Randolph 699, "The Ring My Mother Wore" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 474-475, "The Ring My Mother Wore" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 699)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2013, p. 135, "The Ring My Mother Wore" (1 reference)
Roud #7372
RECORDINGS:
[Roy Harvey and the] West Virginia Ramblers, "The Ring My Mother Wore" (Champion 16456, 1931)
File: R699

Ring Rose
DESCRIPTION: "Ring rose, the one I chose (x3), It's the (latest/lady) from Baltimore." "She can rock, tht lady, but she can't rock me (x3), It's the latest...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (Byington/Goldstein-TwoPennyBallads)
KEYWORDS: playparty love nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Byington/Goldstein-TwoPennyBallads, pp. 127-128, "Buzz" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: ByGo128
Ring the Bell, Watchman

DESCRIPTION: "High in the belfry the old sexton stands, Grasping the rope in his thin bony hands." He waits until he hears: "Ring the bell, watchman! ring! ring! ring! Yes, yes! the good news is now on the wing... Glorious and blessed tidings. Ring, ring the bell!"

AUTHOR: Henry Clay Work
EARLIEST DATE: 1865 (sheet music published by Root & Cady and by S. Brainard's Sons)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Work-SongsOf-Henry-Clay-Work, pp. 115-117, "Ring the Bell, Watchman" (1 text, 1 tune, a copy of the original sheet music)
Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 113-114, "Ring the Bell, Watchman" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, RINGBELL*

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Click Go the Shears" (tune)
cf. "Strike the Bell" (tune)
SAME TUNE:
Click Go the Shears (File: MA024)
Strike the Bell (File: PaSe123)
Oh Molly Reilly (Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, p. 159)
Palmer's Suits (Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, p. 180)

NOTES [252 words]: Like many Henry Clay Work songs, the lyrics to this were too vague to gain much hold in tradition, but the tune too good to ignore. There is a sailing parody, "Strike the Bell, Second Mate"; in Australia, it produced the well-known "Click Go the Shears."

In response to my comment above, Bob Bolton wrote the following:
"This is rather the reverse of the fact. H C Work's lyrics were, in fact, too specific to retain much hold in tradition! The song commemorates the moment when the Northern States' victory was announced ... in this case, by the ringing of the church bells. It probably sold... and was sung.... for a while after the Civil War - but quietly faded soon after as the country began to repair its formerly severed self. However, the song was already in print in other countries... in Australia certainly by 1868... and it entered into 'home songster' collections... and was still in the last version I saw (the one I bought a few decades back) of a collection published by Allens Music.
"On top of that... the tune proved to be a really good one for the newly popular Barn Dance ... and folklore collectors, working from the early 1950s report that this tune became the de facto standard for the Barn Dance in any country hall!
"Our Australian collecting experience was, initially confused by the fact that British sailors had also made a very popular parody of the same song... encouraging the Second Mate to ring the bell to call for a change of watch ... and a rest for the singers!"

-RBW
Last updated in version 4.4
File: DT-ringbe

Ring-Dang-Doo (I), The

DESCRIPTION: A young woman lets a lad ride her "ring dang doo," is kicked out of her house by her father for losing her maidenhead, and takes up prostitution. In some versions she gives her customers a social disease; in others her career ends when she dies of the pox

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE:
KEYWORDS: bawdy humorous disease sex whore
FOUND IN: Australia Canada Britain(England) US(Ap,MA,MW,Ro,So,SW), West Indies
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 182-186, "The Ring-Dang-Doo" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 147-151, "The Rang-a-Tang-Too" (4 texts, 2 tunes)
Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 51, pp. 240-244, "London Town" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, pp. 140-141, "Ringy Dang Doo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1880

RECORDINGS:
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rackyman Doo (Ring-Dang-Doo (II))" (euphemism)
cf. "The Ric-A-Dam-Doo (Ring-Dang-Doo (III))" (euphemism)
NOTES [27 words]: The first version in Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I (p. 147) is to the unrecognized melody of "The Irish Washerwoman," the second to "The Arkansas Traveler." - EC
Last updated in version 5.0
File: EM182A

Rinky Dinky Di-Lo
DESCRIPTION: A man loses his "leg," shot off by his mother-in-law; the doctor makes a wooden replacement; but the man cannot wear a spur on it; and things in the family go from bad to worse.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE:
KEYWORDS: bawdy injury doctor family
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 358-360, "Rinky Dinky Di-Lo" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [29 words]: This is one of a group of "mal-mariee" songs and ballads, Legman notes in Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, similar to "I Wish I Was Single Again," "Devilish Mary," etc. - EC
File: RL358

Rio Grande
DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Characteristic line: "[Heave] away, Rio... And we're bound for the Rio Grande." Most versions revolve about a sailor preparing to leave port, and the girl (or girls) he is about to leave behind (with or without regret)
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1894 (Alfred M. Williams, _Studies in Folk-Song and Popular Poetry_, pp. 1,8)
KEYWORDS: shanty sailor parting
FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,NE) Canada(Mar,Newf) Britain(England) West Indies(St Vincent)
REFERENCES (26 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 64-66, "Rio Grande" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 34-36 "Rio Grande" (1 composite text, 1 tune)
Bone-CapstanBars, pp. 114-115, "The Rio Grande" (1 text, 1 tune)
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, pp. 86-87, "Rio Grande" (1 text, 1 tune)
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 111-112, "Rio Grande" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 87-96, "Rio Grande" (8 texts plus several fragments, 2 tunes; the 5th text is a Norwegian version, "Opsang for 'Preciosa'") [AbEd, pp. 80-87]
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 28, "Rio Grande" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, XXI, p.24, "Rio Grand" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 66-68, "Rio Grande" (1 text, 1 tune)
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 146-148, "Rio Grande" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Beck-FolkloreOfMontpelier, pp.197-198, "Rio Grande" (1 text)
Shay-AmericanSeaSongsAndChanteys, pp. 21-23, "Away, Rio!" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 488-489, "The Rio Grande" (1 text+floating verses, 1 tune)
Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, p. 20, "Bound to Rio" (1 text)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 104, "The Rio Grande" (2 texts, 2 tunes); "I'm Bound For the Rio Grande" (1 text, 1 tune)
Terry-TheShantyBook-Part1, #2, "Bound for the Rio Grande" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abrahams-DeepTheWaterShallowTheShore, pp. 82-83, "Royo Groun" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warner-FolkSongsAndBalladsOfTheEasternSeaboard, pp. 34-35, "Away Rio" (1 text)
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 138-139, "Rio Grande" (1 text, 1 tune)
Heart-Songs, p. 451, "Were You Ever in Rio Grand" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 140, "The Rio Grande" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 93, "Rio Grande" (1 text)

DT, RIOGRAN

Frederick Pease Harlow, _The Making of a Sailor, or Sea Life Aboard a Yankee Square-Rigger_, 1928; republished by Dover, 1988, pp. 321-322, "Rio Grande" (1 text, 1 tune)

George Allan England, _Vikings of the Ice: Being the Log of a Tenderfoot on the Great Newfoundland Seal Hunt_ (also published as _The Greatest Hunt in the World_), Doubleday, 1924, p. 267, "(no title)" (1 text)

Roud #317

RECORDINGS:
- Almanac Singers, "Away, Rio" (General 5017A, 1941; on Almanac02, Almanac03, AlmanacCD1)
- Tom Cornell, "Rio Grande" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
- Fishermen's Group, Cadgwith, "Rio Grande" (on LastDays)
- Joseph Hyson, "Rio Grande" (on NovaScotia1)
- Minster Singers, "Rio Grande" [medley w. "Blow the Man Down"] (Victor 61148, n.d.; prob. c. 1903)
- Capt. Leighton Robinson w. Alex Barr, Arthur Brodeur & Leighton McKenzie, "Away Rio" (AFS 4232 A, 1939; on LC27 as "Rio Grande"; in AMMEM/Cowell)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Away for Rio,
Bound for the Rio Grande
Oh, Aye, Rio

NOTES [27 words]: The "Rio Grande" of this song is almost certainly not the river of southwestern North America, but rather the province Rio Grande do Sul of southern Brazil. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: Doe064

---

Riot in St. John's, The

DESCRIPTION: "Ye Liberals all, on you I'll call, I hope you will attend." "On the nominating morning... The Tories heist their colours for St. John's East did flock." Protestants attack Catholics; Clifford and others are killed. The singer condemns violence

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1994 (Thomas and Widdowson)

KEYWORDS: political religious homicide

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
- May 13, 1861 - the St. John's Riot

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

ST ThWi146 (Partial)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "In Lonely Belvedere" (subject)

NOTES [722 words]: In Newfoundland, this was sometimes regarded as a "Treason Song." For background on Treason Songs, see the notes to "The Prooshian Drum."

Newfoundland, for most of its history, was almost evenly divided between Catholics of Irish ancestry and Protestants of all stripes. The Protestants were not as united as the Catholics, but by 1855 they had the slight edge in numbers (Noel, p. 22), and Newfoundland politics came to be split almost entirely along religious lines, with the "Conservatives" being mostly Protestant, resulting in the "Liberals" being mostly Catholic. And the government structure -- which, e.g., for many years gave its educational funds to sectarian schools, making no attempt to found or support multi-religious schools -- didn't do much to heal the rift. And Responsible Government was still only a few decades old in 1861. So it is easy to see how conflicts could arise.

According to Cadigan, p. 128, the whole mess arose when Sir Alexander Bannerman, the Governor (British Empire representative) since 1857 took the excuse to dismiss a divided Liberal government that he seems to have personally disliked. (Noel, p. 83, calls Bannerman a "grossly prejudiced near-octogenarian who had shown nothing but malice toward his Liberal ministers and who had almost certainly engaged engaged in a conspiracy with the Conservative opposition to remove them.) He perhaps didn't have the authority to throw out the government, but it resulted in elections. "The only justification that an alarmed Colonial Office could find for his illegal and unconstitutional behavior was that it had better succeed -- meaning that the Conservatives had better secure a majority in the elections that were bound to follow" (Noel, p. 23). Cadigan, p. 129, describes the aftermath as follows:

Victory in the ensuing election hinged upon two districts in Conceptions Bay. Both sides used violence and intimidation, which quickly assumed class and sectarian overtones.... Tensions ran high throughout Carbonear and St John's, as Liberal supporters threatened or attacked the property of Conservative merchant candidates. Violence tainted the elections in the district of Harbour Main, where no Conservatives ran, and where rival groups of Roman Catholics fought each other.... The governor intervened, declaring the Harbour Main returns invalid. [In addition, the polls in Harbour Grace had never opened because of the acts of a local magistrate; Noel, p. 23.] The governor intervened, declaring the Harbour Main returns invalid. The Liberals believed they would have won the seats and, therefore, a majority in the House of Assembly. As it stood, the election result was fourteen Tory seats and twelve for the Liberals. When the legislature was called into session, [Catholic] Bishop Mullock and the Liberals encouraged public protest, which led to violence outside the Colonial Building. Troops dispersed the crowd by opening fire, killing three people [i.e. the Clifford, Fitzpatrick, and Father O'Donnell of the song] and wounding twenty, including a Roman Catholic priest." Noel, p. 24: "On the day the legislature opened a mob formed around the Colonial Building, stoned the governor's carriage, and were finally dispersed only after the troops had opened fire. The loss of life was not great -- three were killed and twenty wounded, one of the latter being a Catholic priest -- but the effect on the community was profound. Sectarianism had reached its inevitable nadir. Thereafter the Conservatives could govern alone if they were determined to do so, but only with military support...."

Thus the song's implication that ALL fault belonged with ALL Protestants is somewhat unfair; the Protestants had indeed engineered the election, but the Catholics had been responsible for some of the election violence, and they had started the riot. And it was the military, not Protestants in general, who started the shooting, BECAUSE it was a riot. Still, the Protestants -- or, rather, Bannerman and the merchants who controlled the Conservative party -- had made the first move, so it's easy to see why the Catholics blamed them.

Insofar as there was a compromise, it came when the government made it a policy to extend patronage and government appointments on a sectarian basis (Noel, p. 24), which hardly offered a long-term solution! - RBW

Bibliography

- Cadigan: Sean T. Cadigan, Newfoundland and Labrador: A History, University of Toronto Press, 2009
- Noel: S. J. R. Noel, Politics in Newfoundland, University of Toronto Press, 1971

Last updated in version 4.5
File: ThWi146

Ripest Apple, The

DESCRIPTION: "The ripest apple the soonest rotted, The purest love the soonest cold, A young man's words are soon forgotten...." The singer asks that he speak her name kindly, recalls how they loved, says she will be true, and says she will never find his like

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown; probably transcribed 1915)

KEYWORDS: lover betrayal separation nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 165, "The Ripest Apple" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 165, "The Ripest Apple" (1 excerpt, 1 tune) ADDITIONAL: Roy Palmer, _Ripest Apples_, The Big Apple Association, 1996, p. 12, "Ripest Apples" (1 text, 1 tune, with a chorus probably from "Wheel of Fortune (Dublin City, Spanish Lady)" but this first verse and a final stanza about how love changes)
Roud #6580
CROSS-REFERENCES:

Ripon Sword-Dance
DESCRIPTION: "Christmas time has now been approaching." The characters have come from far away. Room is made for each and each has his lines: General "Warrington" from Waterloo, Hieland laddie, Tom the tinker, Beelzebub, Big Head, St George and doctor.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1980 (recording, The Ripon Sword Dancers)
KEYWORDS: Christmas humorous nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
RECORDINGS:
The Ripon Sword Dancers, "Make Me a Room, For I Am A-Coming" (on Voice16)
CROSS-REFERENCES:

Ripping Trip, A
DESCRIPTION: About the troubles of a sailing trip to San Francisco, each verse ending "Rip goes the --" (boiler, engine, your money, etc.). The trip features a defective engine, a savage captain, poor food, disease, and poverty
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1858 (Put's Golden Songster)
KEYWORDS: sea gold mining hardtimes
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 14, "A Ripping Trip" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, RIPTRIP*
Roud #8059
RECORDINGS:
Logan English, "A Ripping Trip" (on LEnglish02)
CROSS-REFERENCES:

Rise and Shine
DESCRIPTION: "God said to Noah, there's gonna be a floody, floody.... (So) Rise and shine and give God the glory, glory... Children of the Lord." Noah builds the ark; the animals arrive, including elephants and kangaroos; it rains; it dries up
Rise and Shine (Bold Pilgrim)

DESCRIPTION: "Good morning, brother pilgrim, sir, pray tell to me your name, And where it is you're going to..." The other says his feet are shod with gospel peace, he carries a sword to fight his way into Canaan, his name is Apollyon. The singer refuses to join him

AUTHOR: D. Tucker (according to Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee)

EARLIEST DATE: 1883 (Marshall W. Taylor, _A Collection of Revival Hymns and Plantation Melodies_ , according to Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad battle

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 102, pp. 156-158, "Bold Pilgrim" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11040

NOTES [442 words]: I have to suspect that there is some confusion in the text collected by Boswell, because the third verse refers to the enemy (Apollyon) wearing Gospel peace but fighting his way into Canaan. It would make much more sense for the singer, not Apollyon, to be wearing the shoes of gospel peace.

The reference is clearly to the "whole armor of God," mentioned in Ephesians 6:11-13, which allows the wearer to "stand against the wiles of the devil." As part of this armor, the readers are told in 6:15 to have "the gospel of peace" as shoes on their feet.

The claim that the whole world belongs to Apollyon is reminiscent of the Temptation of Jesus in Matthew 4 and parallels -- the Devil offers Jesus "all the kingdoms of the earth" in that passage. The name "Apollyon" for the Devil is attested in the Bible, although rare. The name means "destroyer," and is found only in Revelation 9:11, as an equivalent of Hebrew "Abaddon," which comes from a word for to perish or be lost and is used in the Old Testament as a name for the land of the dead. Although in early Hebrew usage the name seems to have been ethnically neutral, it eventually came to mean a place where sinners are punished (InterpDict, p. 3). Ford, p. 145, observes that Abaddon is "personified in Job 28:22" but has little to say about the usage in the Apocalypse.

HastingsDict, p. 44, says that "As an angel Apollyon seems to have been regarded as equivalent to Asmodeus, king of demons, in Judaistic mythology, but our data are too few to warrant precise statements." In any case, the composer of this would be unlikely to know that. NicollEtAl, volume V, p. 408, suggests that the name "Apollyon" was a "gibe at Apollo... both Caligula and Nero aped the deity of Apollo." Again, however, the composer likely would not have known this.

Kiddle, p. 159, while acknowledging the possible connection with Apollo, thinks the author of the Apocalypse used the name "Apollyon" because it is linked to the word for destruction.

My collection of conservative Bible commentaries is not large, but Unger, p. 856, connects "Apollyon" with the mini-apocalypse of 2 Thess. 2:7-12. There are a few Greek parallels based on the word "destruction"; I doubt they would occur to someone working only with the King James Bible.

But why did the composer use "Apollyon" rather than "Satan" or "The Adversary" or some other such name? I can only suggest that the songwriter suffered from the same sort of love of obscurity that we find in the original author of the Apocalypse. This is typical of those who pay particular attention to this book that just barely managed to work its way into the Christian canon. - RBW

Bibliography

• Ford: J. Massyngberde Ford, Revelation (being volume 38 of the Anchor Bible), Doubleday, 1975
• HastingsDict: James Hastings et al, editors, Dictionary of the Bible, Charles Scribner's Sons, 1947
• InterpretersDict: [George Arthur Buttrick et al, editor], The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible, four volumes, 1962 (a fifth supplementary volume was published later)
• Kiddle: Martin Kiddle (assisted by M. K. Ross), The Revelation of St. John (being a volume in the Moffatt New Testament commentary), Harper and Brothers (no copyright listed but the preface is dated 1940)
• NicollEtAll: W. Robertson Nicoll, editor, The Expositor's Greek Testament, (no date listed but probably from the 1890s; I use the 1951 Eerdmans reprint)
• Unger: Merill F. Unger, Unger's Bible Handbook Moody, 1966 (I use the 1983 paperback edition)

Last updated in version 5.0
File: BoWo102

Rise Me Up from Down Below

DESCRIPTION: Shanty, with chorus "Whiskey-oh, Johnny-oh! Oh, rise me up from down below, down below, oh, oh, oh oh! Up aloft this yard must go, John! Rise me up from down below!" The verses describe "the world down below," where the "fires do roar," etc.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLiest DATE: 1951
KEYWORDS: shanty Hell
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, p. 47, "Rise Me Up from Down Below" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 281-282, "Rise Me Up From Down Below" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, p. 207]
ST Doe047 (Partial)
Roud #9440
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Whiskey Johnny" (identical chorus, different verses celebrating whiskey)

File: Doe047

Rise Out Your Bed

DESCRIPTION: The wife demands, "Rise out your bed, you worthless wretch, the sun's far in the sky." She has been working while he recovers from drink. They fight and argue -- until Craigilie comes by, when they declare the husband to be well

AUTHOR: Words: John Barr? (source: Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry)
EARLIEST DATE: 1861 (Barr, Poems and Songs)
KEYWORDS: husband wife drink fight trick
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 27, "Rise Out Your Bed" (1 text, 1 tune) (p. 18 in the 1972 edition)
RECORDINGS:
Barbie and Neil Colquhoun, "Rise Out Your Bed" (on NZSongYngCntry)
NOTES [74 words]: According to Gordon McLauchlan, editor-in-chief, New Zealand Encyclopedia, David Bateman Limited, 1984, p. 46, "BARR, John (1809-89) was born in Paisley, Scotland and emigrated to N[jew] Z[eland] in 1852, settling in Dunedin. He became a well-known poet and Rise Up Quickly and Let Me In (The Ghostly Lover)

DESCRIPTION: The singer arrives at his love's window and begs to come in. She asks who is there. He identifies himself, and she allows him to enter. When he leaves, he rejoices, "For late last night I've been with my lass." In other versions, his ghost bids farewell.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1826 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1)

KEYWORDS: nightvisit courting

FOUND IN: Britain(England(West),Scotland(Aber)) Ireland Canada(Mar,Newf,Ont)

REFERENCES (9 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #177, p. 2, ("Hearken, hearken, and I will tell you") (1 text)
Greig/Duncan4 783, "I Must Away" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1 14, "The Wandering Lover" (1 text)
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 34, "The Ghostly Lover" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario 41, "I'll Go See My Love" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 89, "Hearken, Ladies, and I Will Tell You, Or The Constant Lovers" (1 text)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 159, "A Health to All True-Lovers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #50, "O Who Is That?" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 63, "Here's a Health To all True Lovers" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
LaRena [Mrs Gordon] Clark, "I'll Go See My Love" (on ONEFowke01)
Jimmy McKee, "A Health To All True Lovers" (on FSBFTX15)
John Reilly, "Adieu Unto All True Lovers" (on Voice10)
Belle Stewart, "Here's a Health to all True Lovers" (on Voice06)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Will Put My Ship In Order" (lyrics, theme)
cf. "Love Let Me In (Forty Long Miles; It Rains, It Hails)" (plot)
cf. "Let Me In This Ae Nicht" (plot)
cf. "Willy O!" (theme)
cf. "I'm a Rover and Seldom Sober" (two verses)
cf. "The Light of the Moon" (theme: night visit ended by a crowing cock)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Open and Let Me In

NOTES [881 words]: This is a difficult conundrum, in that there are versions of this song with very similar words but plots with very different directions: One is a nightvisiting song, the other a ghost returning to his love after long absence.

In earlier versions of the Index, I split these two ballads, as "Rise Up Quickly" and "The Ghostly Lover" -- after all, the ghost is a pretty significant change; this was in contradiction to Roud, who lumped them.

Making things trickier still, one important text (Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland's) is "I Will Put My Ship In Order" without the first and last verses. It's not just the same plot; it's the same "words". The two assuredly have a common origin, though in fact the songs have different endings. But fragments could file with other songs.

It is amazing that Kennedy, who is an impossible lumper and included at least one completely unrelated text from Sam Henry in his notes, failed to observe the connection to "I Will Put My Ship In Order." Kennedy's text is incredibly composite in its choruses, taking items from "I'm a Rover and Seldom Sober" and "Love is Teasing." But the Ord-BothySongsAndBallads text implies that these are not an original part of the song. Many of the other versions have also picked up extraneous material.

The title I have assigned here is not based on any traditional version; I pulled it out of Kennedy's text because the extant titles were so unhelpful and inorganic to the texts.

Adding it all up, I wonder if this could possibly be a mix of "I Will Put My Ship In Order" and some lost Ghostly Lover song. Or is the "Ghostly Lover" version a mix of the nightvisiting version of this song with "The Grey Cock" or something of that type? In any case, it's a mess which admits of no easy solution. - RBW

Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland names its text "The Ghostly Lover" though the ghost does not appear. "Although the words do not seem to bear out the title, the White girls insist this is a song about a lover who was drowned, but rose from his watery grave to see his sweetheart once again." Another ghostly example is John Reilly's "Adieu Unto All True Lovers" on "The Voice of the People, Vol 10: Who's That at my Bed Window?," Topic TSCD 660 (1998): here the text is clearly what we are calling "Rise Up Quickly and Let Me In" with the "where is the blushes" verse from "Willy O!" added to provide the ghost. The discussion of the Costello version in the notes to "The Grey Cock, or, Saw You My Father [Child 248]" give a similar example in which verses of both "Willy O!" and "Rise Up Quickly and Let Me In" are inserted unchanged into another ballad.

"Rise Up Quickly and Let Me In" has distinguishing lines that stand out when verses are imported into another ballad. For example,

... "Who's that at my bed window, Disturbing me from my long night's rest?"
"I am your lover; sure pray discover...."
"...I'm wet, love, unto the skin." [as opposed to "I've got wet through all my clothes" in "Love Let Me In (Forty Long Miles; It Rains, It Hails)"].
"I'll be guided without a stumble....
It may begin with a treacherous journey that might have led the traveller to stumble:
"Over hills and lofty mountains, Oh dear! oh dear! I'm forced to go...."
"Let the night be dark as the very dungeon [or dunghill]..."
Greig/Duncan4: "There has been some crossing over of material between this night visiting song and [Greig/Duncan2] 338 'Willy O', which treats the subject of a dead lover's return."
Greig/Duncan4 783B is very close to Ord's text.

The cold and wet theme seems common in non-ghostly night-visit songs. Besides Kidson's "Forty Miles" see "Hey Lizzie Lass" and "Oh Tibbie, Are Ye Sleepin'." While the night visitor of "When A' the Lave Gaed to Their Beds" does not complain of being cold or wet he ends by declaring "I care na' for the hardest work, Nor wind nor rain I'll fear, While I am welcome back again To the arms of my dear."

The first verse of Greig's version is almost the same as the first verse of his text for "Hearken, Hearken"; the non-revenant sense of this version is made stronger by the verse: "Hearken, hearken, and I will tell you Of a lad and a country lass; Seven long years they've been a-courting, Many a jovial hour betwixt them passed."

Another wet lover song is "I Will Put My Ship in Order."
Speculation in Vaughan/Williams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs suggests Costello's "I'm your love and don't discover" line may be "'but I can't uncover' (can't reveal myself)." That might tie in with the "Grey Cock" ghost theory. However, as pointed out in the discussion of Costello's text under "The Grey Cock," that text takes its first five verses from this song. Here the line becomes entirely innocent. Ord has "it's your own true lover," and Fowke has "It's your true lover, so now uncover."

Another mysterious line from the Costello version - "The burning Thames I have to cross" - becomes somewhat less mysterious in these texts. In Fowke the line is "The burning tempest I have to cross." Ord has "The storm and tempest I mean to cross," explaining why the lover says "I am weary of my long journey, Besides I'm wet, love, unto the skin."

Fowke's source learned the song from her Grandad Watson whose ancestors came from northern England." - BS

File: Ord089

Rise Up, Dear Love

DESCRIPTION: Ainger asks a girl to open the door and let him in on a cold night. She tells him to return to the girl he was with the night before. He says he loves only her; contrary reports are false. She lets him in. She wonders why she left him outside so long.
Rise Up, Shepherd

DESCRIPTION: "There's a star in the east on Christmas morn, Rise up, Shepherd, and follow." The shepherd is advised to "Leave your sheep and leave your lambs" and follow the star to where Jesus is.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: Bible religious shepherd Christmas
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 253, "Rise Up, Shepherd" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 266, "Rise Up, Shepherd, an' Foller" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 373, "Rise Up, Shepherd, And Follow" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Ian Bradley, _The Penguin Book of Carols_ (1999), #85, "There's a Star in the East" (1 text)
Roud #15289
RECORDINGS:
Pete Seeger, "Rise Up, Shepherd, and Follow" (on PeteSeeger37, PeteSeeger42)
NOTES [169 words]: According to John Julian, editor, _A Dictionary of Hymnology_, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes), this first appeared in 1742 in Robert Seagrave's "Hymns for Christian Worship," in four stanzas of eight lines, with the title "The Pilgrim's Song." George Whitefield, a friend of Seagrave, published it in 1753 minus the third verse, which I suspect made it popular.
Julian, p. 1035, says Seagrave was born in 1693, educated at Clare College, Cambridge (graduated 1714), and became Vicar of his birthplace of Twyford. He was a Wesleyan pamphleteer. Julian says his texts deserve more attention, but the only other title he lists is "Now

Rise, My Soul, And Stretch Thy Wings

DESCRIPTION: "Arise, my soul, and spread thy wings, A better portion trace, Arise from transitory things To Heav'n thy native place." The universe will fade; listeners should prepare for another world. "Soon our Savior will return Triumphant in the skies."

AUTHOR: Robert Seagrave (source: Julian)
EARLIEST DATE: 1742 (see NOTES)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad river
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thomas-DevilsDitties, pp. 120-121, "Arise, My Soul, And Stretch Thy Wings" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #8887 and 15084
NOTES [169 words]: According to John Julian, editor, _A Dictionary of Hymnology_, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes), this first appeared in 1742 in Robert Seagrave's "Hymns for Christian Worship," in four stanzas of eight lines, with the title "The Pilgrim's Song." George Whitefield, a friend of Seagrave, published it in 1753 minus the third verse, which I suspect made it popular.
Julian, p. 1035, says Seagrave was born in 1693, educated at Clare College, Cambridge (graduated 1714), and became Vicar of his birthplace of Twyford. He was a Wesleyan pamphleteer. Julian says his texts deserve more attention, but the only other title he lists is "Now
May the Spirit's Holy Fire," which I've never heard of. The usual tune for this hymn is known as "Amsterdam," and this is the title under which it appears in many sources. Charles Wesley wrote a poem, "Arise, my soul, arise, Shake off thy guilty fears"; while it appears to derive from the same impulse, I wouldn't consider it the same. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0
File: ThDD120

Rise, Shine, for Thy Light Is-a-coming

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, rise, shine, for thy light is a-coming (x3). My lord says he's coming by and by." "Oh, wet and dry I intend to try, My Lord says he's coming by and.... To serve the Lord until I die." "This is the year of Jubilee... The Lord has set his people free."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro, p. 49, "Rise, Shine, for Thy Light Is-a-coming" (1 text)
Roud #11968
File: FSAM049

Rising in the North, The [Child 175]

DESCRIPTION: The Earls of Westmoreland and Northumberland, suspected of treason, go into rebellion, bringing in others such as Master Norton. They gather their forces, but are delayed in besieging a castle. Loyal forces defeat the rebels

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1750 (Percy folio)
KEYWORDS: nobility rebellion
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
  1558-1603 - Reign of Elizabeth I
  Nov 14, 1569 - Beginning of the northern rebellion
FOUND IN: Britain
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Child 175, "The Rising in the North" (1 text)
Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume II, pp. 210-216, "Risinge in the Northe" (1 text)
Percy/Wheatley-ReliquesOfAncientEnglishPoetry I, pp. 266-278, "The Rising in the North" (2 texts, one being that in the Reliques and the other being the manuscript copy)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 484-488, "The Rising in the North" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: [Cuthbert Sharp], _The Bishopric Garland, A Collection of Legends, Songs, Ballads, &c Belonging to the County of Durham_, 1834 (references are to the 1969 reprint), p. 6, "The Rising of the North" (1 text, from Percy)
Roud #4005
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Northumberland Betrayed by Douglas" [Child 176] (subject)
cf. "The Earl of Westmoreland" [Child 177] (subject)
cf. "Rookhope Ryde" [Child 179] (context)
NOTES [465 words]: According to David C. Fowler, _A Literary History of the Popular Ballad_, Duke University Press, 1968, p. 158 n. 25, this is one of eighteen ballads in the Child collection found only in the Percy Folio. The Percies of Northumberland and the Nevilles of Westmoreland were the great lords of the English north; on those rare occasions they agreed on anything, they could usually take Northumbria with them. The north was also conservative; in the period after Henry VIII created Anglicanism, Catholicism was strongest there. Which left them religiously isolated in the late 1500s; by 1569, Elizabeth was securely Protestant, and her (Catholic) heir Mary Queen of Scots was in her custody.
The "Rising in the North" did not actually begin in Northumbria; Thomas Howard, the Duke of Norfolk, first contacted the Spanish about giving the throne to Mary. His interest, however, was political (he resented the power of Elizabeth's favorites the Cecils); he quickly backed down. (Though he would rebel again in 1571 and be executed.) With the Duke of Norfolk out of the picture, the northern earls took over. They did not actually demand Elizabeth's overthrow -- but wanted Mary back on the Scottish throne and a restoration of Catholicism in England. The threat to replace Elizabeth with Mary was obvious.
The northern Earls succeeded in raising the north (including even Yorkshire, led by its sheriff Richard Norton), but they did not capture Queen Mary and could not bring the rest of the country to their banner (Holinshed says they gathered about seven thousand men, but even this may be exaggerated; such reports often are).
However large the rebellion was, it was dispersed by the end of December, with the rebels in full flight. Leonard Dacre tried to fan the flames in 1570, but he was easily suppressed. Some eight hundred rebels were executed.
For the sequel to this, see "Northumberland Betrayed by Douglas" [Child 176] and "The Earl of Westmoreland" [Child 177].
The aftermath was interesting. Printing at this time was heavily regulated in England; in theory, everything that was published was supposed to be approved. Yet, according to W. W. Greg, Some Aspects and Problems of London Publishing Between 1550 and 1650, The Lyell Lectures for 1955, Oxford University Press, 1956, p. 43, "of the considerable number of publications concerned with such a dangerous topic as the rising in the North in the autumn of 1569 not one sought the protection or advertisement of official imprimatur[.]
" Greg seems sure that some actually did, and the approval simply wasn't mentioned in the Stationer's Register (which is the basis for his statement), but it seems pretty clear that a lot of shady publications came out in this period. Could this be descended from one of them? I don't know. - RBW

Rising of the Moon,
The
DESCRIPTION: "Oh! Then tell me, Sean O'Farrell, Tell me why you hurry so...." The singer is told that the "pikes must be together at the rising of the moon." The pikes gather, but are spotted and defeated. The listeners are told, "we will follow in their footsteps."
AUTHOR: Words: John Keegan Casey (1846-1870)
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (reference in _The Nation_, Feb 23, 1867, according to Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion); c.1865 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
KEYWORDS: rebellion Ireland
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1798 - Irish Rebellion
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (10 citations):
O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 111, "The Rising of the Moon" (1 text)
Galvin-IrishSongsOfResistance, p. 35, "The Rising of the Moon" (1 text)
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 67, "The Rising of the Moon" (1 text, 1 tune)
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 69, "The Rising of the Moon" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 117, "The Rising of the Moon" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 322, "The Rising Of The Moon" (1 text)
Healy-MercierBookOfOldIrishStreetBalladsVol2, pp. 120-121, "The Rising of the Moon" (1 text, tune on p. 22)
DT, RISEMOON*
Kathleen Hoagland, editor, One Thousand Years of Irish Poetry (New York, 1947), pp. 550-551, "The Rising of the Moon" (1 text)
Roud #9634
RECORDINGS:
The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem, "The Rising of the Moon" (on IRClancyMakem03)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 b.10(189), "The Rising of the Moon," unknown, n.d.; also 2806 b.10(205), "The Rising of the Moon"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Wearing of the Green (I)" (tune) and references there
cf. "Bannow's Bright Blue Bay" (tune)

NOTES [443 words]: John Keegan Casey was a nineteenth century Irish patriot. He wrote this song in prison, where he died at the age of twenty-three. He was regarded as being very promising, but of course died very young; this is the only piece of his to have any wide circulation. The reference to "pikes" accurately shows one of the problems of the 1798 rising. The rebels in Wicklow, for instance, had over ten thousand men enlisted to their cause -- and guns for only a thousand of them, and too little powder even for that thousand weapons. Their alternative was the pike. These they had in sufficiency, since local blacksmiths could and did make them. And they also had the advantage of being easy to use: An illiterate farmer boys wouldn't know how to use a musket, but (in theory) anyone could figure out how to stick an enemy with a pike.

Of course, against real soldiers armed with firearms, they would have been quite useless. Pikes had been a genuine military weapon at the time of the last great battles in Ireland, the Boyne and Aughrim (see G.A. Hayes-McCoy, Irish Battles: A Military History of Ireland, pp. 219-220), but the ratio of musketeers to pikemen had been steadily rising; even at the Boyne, there were some regiments on the Williamite side with no pikes at all. And, by 1798, the bayonet had replaced the pike in all modern armies.

Still, the British were doing what they could to stop even pike production; Viceroy Camden was concerned about the way blacksmiths were turning them out (see Robert Kee, The Most Distressful Country, Volume 1 of The Green Flag, p. 68).

To add to the problems, the leadership of the United Irishmen were almost all in British custody by the time the of the 1798 uprising. The uprising was almost forced; the British were determined to root out all hints of rebellion; rather than be rounded up, the local cells went into revolt. But they no longer had leaders to coordinate their activities.

Robert Gogan, 130 Great Irish Ballads (third edition, Music Ireland, 2004), p. 34, says that in Casey's original, the rebels met by the Inny River, but he feared that this would bring extra British attention, so he changed it to the "shining river." - RBW

OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads, pp. viii-ix: "John Keegan Casey's 'Rising of the Moon' had to be included for the splendid air my grandfather John Carr of Limerick had to it. (I hate to hear it sung to 'The Wearing of the Green' -- a tune which does not suit at all)." The OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads tune is very much the tune as I remember Richard Dyer-Bennet singing it in the early 1950's (probably the one available on the 1957 LP Dyer-Bennet 4000). - BS

Risselty, Rosselty, Now, Now, Now

DESCRIPTION: The singer marries a woman who, from laziness, ignorance or slovenliness, does nothing right (milks the cow in the chamber pot, churns butter in a boot). In some versions she dies of shame (because "she pishit in the bed").

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1888 (Summer)

KEYWORDS: marriage food humorous husband wife

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,North,South),Scotland(Bord)) US(Ap,MW,NE,So)

REFERENCES (22 citations):
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 150, "Robin o Rasheltree" (1 text)
Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, pp. 92-93, "Robin-a-Thrush" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #98, "Willie Went to Westerdale" (1 text, 1 tune)
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 111, "Robin a Thrush" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-FolkloreOfMaine, p. 112, "Niggl'y, Naggl'y" (1 text, 1 tune, which must be this based on its form although there is little sign of the conflict between husband and wife)
LPound #118 pp. 236-237 "I Bought Me a Wife" (1 text)
Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, pp. 168-169, "Risselty Rosselty" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cox/Hercog/Halpert/Boswell-WVirgnia-A, #13A-C, pp. 57-60, "The Wife Wrapped in Wether's Skin," "Dandoo" (3 texts, 1 tune, but the "B" text omits the beating and has the husband run away; it may well be a version of this although it might alternately be Child #277 mixed with "Devilish Mary" [Laws Q4] or something like it)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol1, p. 21, "Nicketty-Nacketty" (1 fragment, 1 tune, so short that it might be this or "The Wife Wrap" or just some floating verses with this chorus)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 327, "He Courted Her in the Month of June" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 66-68, "Ti Risselty Rosslety"; Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 69-70, "John Dobber" (2 texts, 2 tunes) {Bronson's #61, #62}
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 34-36, "Ti Risselty Rosslety" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, p. 131, "Married Me a Wife" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 277, RISSROSS
ADDITIONAL: Lucille Burdine and William B McCarthy, "Sister Singers" in Western Folklore, Vol. IL, No. 4 (Oct 1990 (available online by JSTOR)), pp. 408-410 "There's a Piece of Bread A-laying on the Shelf" (1 text)
Heywood Sumner, The Besom Maker (London, 1888 ("Digitized by Google")), #477 p. 243, ("I married my wife by the light of the moon") (1 text)
J.A.C. Leland, "Two Folksongs from Ohio" in Western Folklore, Vol. VII, No. 1 (Jan 1948 (available online by JSTOR)), pp. 65-66 "The Shiftless Wife" (2 texts, including one added by the editors from Halliwell 1886)
Lucille Burdine and William B McCarthy, "Sister Singers" in Western Folklore, Vol. IL, No. 4 (Oct 1990 (available online by JSTOR)), pp. 408-410 "There's a Piece of Bread A-laying on the Shelf" (1 text)
Lucy E. Broadwood and J.A. Maitland, editors, English County Songs, (London, 1893), pp. 92-93, "Robin-a-Thrush" (1 text, 1 tune) [Not yet indexed as Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs pp. 92-93].
Roud #2792
RECORDINGS:
Chubby Parker, "Nickety Nackety Now Now Now" (Gennett 6077/Champion 15247 [as Smilin' Tubby Johnson]/Silvertone 5011, 1927; Supertone 9189, 1928) (Conqueror 7889, 1931)
Ridgel's Fountain Citians, "The Nick Nack Song" (Vocalion 5455, 1930; on CrowTold01)
Pete Seeger, "Risselty-Rosselty" (on PeteSeeger02, PeteSeegerCD01) (on PeteSeeger12)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Wife Wrap in Wether's Skin" [Child 277] (theme: difficult wife) and references there
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Cooper of Fife
The Wee Cooper of Fife
Bandoo
Gentle Virginia
Kitty Lorn
Kitty Alone
Dan-you
The Old Man Who Lived in the West
NOTES [614 words]: This song is usually considered a variant of "The Wife Wrap in Wether's Skin" [Child 277]. We (PJS and BS) believe this is a different song.
A text is "The Wife Wrap in Wether's Skin" if:
* the wife is beaten under a sheep's skin, or
* the wife's relatives and class are mentioned, or
* the wife states high-flown reasons for not working [for example, she fears "soiling a gay gold ring" or "high heeled shoe" or "shaming her gentle kin"] or
* the wife's high class is an issue, or * when the husband asks for dinner she tells him to make it himself, or
* the wife mends her ways, or
* the husband is a "wee cooper", or
* as a last resort for a small fragment, the chorus is a "Dandoo, dandoo ..." or "For gentle, for Jenny, my rosamaree ... As the dew falls over the green valley" variation.
If the wife is beaten the sheep's skin is crucial to distinguish the song from other wife beating songs like "The Holly Twig" [Laws Q6], "The Wicked Wife o' Fife" [Greig/Duncan7], "The Daughter of Peggy-O," or even Sumner's version of "Risselty, Rosselty, Now, Now, Now" [he beats her in the chorus, to no effect].
A text is "Risselty, Rosselty, Now, Now, Now" if:
* the wife is ignorant, slovenly, or stupid, but not shrewish or too fine to work, or
* the wife dies in bed

A "Risselty, Rosselty" wife never improves. Most refrains follow the pattern also found in "The Wee Cooper of Fife" version of Child 277 - "Nickety, nackity, noo, noo ... Sing, hey Willy Wallachie, how John Dugal alane, quo' rushitie rue, rue, rue" (Buchan-ABookOfScottishBallads) - but the usually nonsense words vary widely. For example

* "Nickety-nackety now, now, now ... Nickety-nackety hey John Dafferty, willopy, wallopgy, rusty coke wallacky, nickety-nackety, now, now, now" (Chubby Parker)
* "Nickety nackety, now, now, now ... High, willy, wally, and Jenny bang, doodle, sandy go vestego, now, now, now" (Leland)
* "Nickety Nackety, no, no, no ... Hi Willy Wally and Charlie Bill Doodle and Sandy go, Rusty go, no, no, no" (Leland)
* "Nickety shackety, now, now, now ... Nickety shackety, age of laffety, whistlecky whollecky, rusco quality, Nickety shackety, now, now, now" (Burdine/McCarthy)
* "Risselty-rosselty now, now, now ... Risselty-rosselty, hey bom-bosselty, nickety, knacklety, rusticah quality, willaby-wallaby now, now, now" (Pete Seeger)
* "Risselty-rosselty now, now, now ... Risselty-rosselty, hey bombosity, nickety nackity, retrical quality, willaby wallaby now, now, now" (also Pete Seeger)
* "Moppety, moppety, mono ... With a high jig jiggety, tops and petticoats, Robin-a-Thrush cries mono" (Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs)
* "Neagletie, neagletie, now, now ... Heich, wullie, williecoat, bang John Douglas, Robin o Rasheltree, now, now" (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2)
* "Hobblety bobblety how now ... With a heigh down ho down duffle green petticoat Robin he thrashes her now now" (Sumner)
* "A tidy housewife, a tidy one ... And I hope she'll prove a tidy one" (Halliwell)

The Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 150 "Risselty, Rosselty, Now, Now, Now" text, "Robin o Rasheltree" [E. B. Lyle, editor, Andrew Crawfurd's Collection of Ballads and Songs, Volume 2 (1996)], includes verses like "My wife she's a hure of aw the sluts She roastit a hen baith feathers and guts." Maybe the common form of "Risselty, Rosselty, Now, Now, Now" was a bawdy text that editors and some singers cleaned up: "this song was made for gentlemen, If you want any more ...." [Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs]. Crawfurd seems never to censor a text. - BS, PJS

Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs: "Sung by a nurse towards the end of 18th century." - BS

Last updated in version 6.0
File: C277RR

Rival Candidate, The

DESCRIPTION: "Since the days when diggers thronged the bars of fifteen-score hotels... Things in dreamy Hokitaka haven't ever been so brisk. 'Tis awakened by the Rival Candidate." There is much excitement as someone runs for parliament against Richard Seddon

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Wellington "Evening Post," according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)
KEYWORDS: political New Zealand humorous
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1893-1906 - Richard John Seddon (1845-1906) Prime Minister of New Zealand
1905 - the election described in the song. Harry Cowin runs against Prime Minister Seddon in the district of Westland. Cowin earns less than 10% of the vote as Seddon is overwhelmingly re-elected

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, pp. 105-106, "The Rival Candidate" (1 text)
NOTES [47 words]: In his later years in office, Richard John Seddon ceased to be a reformer -- and ruled his party with a heavy hand. So it is perhaps little surprise that there was much enthusiasm for the candidate who ran against him. For background on Seddon, see the notes to "Sir Joseph Ward." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2
River Go Down
DESCRIPTION: "The river goes up, The river goes down; Please, Lord, make that river stay down, River stay down. Keep our land safe and dry, safe and dry. The water is scaring the people away. Please, Lord, make the river go down...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1943 (Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends)
KEYWORDS: river flood
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, p. 466, "River Go Down" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7754
File: KPL466

River Lea, The
DESCRIPTION: Capstan shanty. One fine day in May sailor finds himself broke and ships aboard the (River Lea). He spends the rest of the song (and presumably rest of the voyage) singing of all things he won't do any more once this voyage is over.
AUTHOR: Sam Peck ?
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen)
KEYWORDS: shanty sailor ship
FOUND IN: US Britain
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, pp, 181-182, "The River Lea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 586-589, "The River Lea," "The Anglesey" (2 texts, 2 tunes -- the first being quoted from Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen) [AbEd, pp. 406-409]
ST Hugi589 (Partial)
Roud #351
CROSS-REFERENCES:
NOTES [68 words]: Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen says this was composed by a shantyman named Sam Peck. It obviously bears some relation to "Dixie Brown," though it has no mention of shanghaiing or robbery. Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas also mentions (though does not corroborate) Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen's claim, and states that it was quickly pulled into the popular shanty repertoire for use at the capstan. - SL
File: Hugi589

River Lee, The
DESCRIPTION: The singer describes the Lee by moonlight. For example, sounds of the "gurgling brook" at night are compared to "the lute's harmonious languor" rather than "the trumpet's clangour, Or the nerve-wounding fife"
AUTHOR: Richard Alfred Millikin (1767-1815) (source: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
EARLIEST DATE: 1818 (The Harmonica, written c.1803, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
KEYWORDS: river lyric music
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 220-222, "The River Lee" (1 text)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
An Ode to Cynthia
NOTES [24 words]: Richard Alfred Millikin is best-known for writing "The Groves of Blarney"; of works in this index, he also wrote "The Groves of Blackpool." - RBW
File: CrPS220
River of Babylon

DESCRIPTION: The singer, in captivity, recalls the loss of Zion and the wickedness of the captors who now ask to be entertained by holy songs; how can we sing them "in a strange land." The singer asks that God find his words and [unstated] thoughts acceptable.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Lewin-Forty Songs)
KEYWORDS: captivity grief request rejection exile home harp music ordeal Bible nonballad religious
FOUND IN: West Indies(Jamaica)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lewin-Forty Songs, pp. 85-86, "River of Babylon" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
"River of Babylon" combines Psalm 19 and Psalm 137. The text I use for quotes in this note is JPS Hebrew-English Tanakh (Philadelphia: The Jewish Publication Society, 1999) because I find it clearer than King James, especially in the parts hidden from clear view in the song. Psalm 19 begins, "The heavens declare the glory of God" and goes on to extoll the teaching, decrees, precepts, instruction, fear and judgments of the Lord; "Your servant pays them heed; in obeying them is much reward. Who can be aware of errors? Clear me of unperceived guilt." And then, as in the words of Melodians recording, "let the words of our mouth and the meditation of our heart be acceptable in Thy sight." In Psalm 19 this ending refers back to the words already spoken and the thought intended by those words. Melodians' words follow the sense of the beginning of Psalm 137: "By the rivers of Babylon there we sat down and ... wept when we remember Zion. But the wicked carried us away captivity require from us a song. How can we sing [Rasta] song in a strange land." The rest of Psalm 137 is not in the words of Melodians' or Lewin's texts. The text not sung begins with a refusal to sing holy songs for "our tormentors, for amusement"; harps are put away and before the singer would play or sing for their amusement his hand should wither, his tongue should stick to his palate, but -- in spite of not singing for them about Jerusalem -- he would "keep Jerusalem in memory even at my happiest hour." As for those "wicked: "Remember O Lord ... Jerusalem's fall; how they cried 'Strip her, strip her to her very foundations!' Fair Babylon, you predator, a blessing on him who repays you in kind what you have inflicted on us; a blessing on him who seizes your babies and dashes them against the rocks!"
Melodians, but not Lewin, follow "how can we sing..." by "let the words of our mouth and the meditation of our heart be acceptable...." But the singers know very well all of Psalm 137 that they have edited down. Instead of stating the rest of the psalm I believe they intend to imply it in the excerpt of Psalm 19 which asks for acceptance not only of the words they have sung, but of those they have thought but not sung. The song sounds innocent to those who don't know the references. - BS
Ben's notes make it clear that this is not the same as the "Waters of Babylon" song that I heard many, many years ago, "By the waters, the waters of Babylon, We lay down and wept, and wept, for thee Zion. We remember thee, remember thee, remember thee, Zion."
For those in the Orthodox Christian tradition, the psalm cited is numbered #136 rather than #137 as in the Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant traditions. - RBW
File: LFS085

River of Jordan, The

DESCRIPTION: Jesus meets John the Baptist, is baptized. King Naaman, a leper, calls for Elijah, he is to dip in Jordan and "wash your spots away." Jordan is far away, so the singer will find "an altar in an old-fashioned church/and my River of Jordan that will be"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1963 (recording, Poplin Family)
KEYWORDS: disease Bible religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
River of Life

DESCRIPTION: "Soon we'll come to the end of life's journey, And perhaps we'll never meet anymore, Till we get to heaven's bright city, Far away on the beautiful shore." A description of the beauties of heaven, where the singer obviously expects to go

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 85, "River of Life" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST Wa085 (Partial)
Roud #16394

RECORDINGS:
Buna Vista Hicks, "River of Life" (on USWarnerColl01)

File: Wa085

River Roe (I), The

DESCRIPTION: The singer wanders by the river, and comes by the Roe Mill, where Captain Moody and his workers are about their tasks. The singer must return home, but the Roe holds him entranced

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: rambling river nonballad

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H649, p. 171, "The River Roe (I)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13531

File: HHH649

River Roe (II), The

DESCRIPTION: The singer asks what place can "match the dark Roe." The singer recalls the history of Cooey na Gal and the church at Dungiven, then describes all the places along the Roe until the "tired" river flows into Loch Foyle.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: river nonballad

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H629, p. 171-172, "The River Roe (II)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13532

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Banks of the Roe" (for Cooey-na-Gal) and references there

NOTES [15 words]: For "Cooey-na-Gal" O'Cahan and Dungiven Priory, see the notes on "The Banks of the Roe." - RBW
File: HHH629

River Roe (III), The

DESCRIPTION: A nobleman's son meets a servant maid he won't name. "But her master's habitation is on the river Roe," He proposes. She promises to meet him the next day. They meet, she agrees, and they marry the next evening. "She has servants to attend her"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1863 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(152))
KEYWORDS: courting marriage nobility servant river

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, pp. 47-48, "The River Roe" (1 text)
Roud #V1045

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(152), "The River Roe", H. Such (London), 1849-1862; also 2806 b.9(236), 2806 b.11(202), Harding B 19(79), 2806 c.15(78), Harding B 26(578), 2806 b.11(230), 2806 b.11(206), "The River Roe"

NOTES [59 words]: A number of Bodleian broadsides have dropped the first two lines (something like "As I went out one evening all in the month of May, When Flora's flowering mantle had deck'd the meadow gay", or lines ending in "June" and "bloom") and start with the third line in O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland: "I espied a lovely fair one, and her did not know." - BS

Last updated in version 5.1
File: 0Con047

River through the Pines, The DESCRIPTION: "O Mary was a maiden when the birds began to sing, She was sweeter than the blooming rose so early in the spring...." She loves (Charlie), a shanty boy; the two are married. But he dies at his work; they are buried together

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy)
KEYWORDS: love courting marriage separation work logger death burial

FOUND IN: US(MW) Canada(Ont,Que)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy 30, "The River in the Pines" (1 text, 1 tune)
Rickaby/Dykstra/Leary-PineryBoys-SongsSongcatchingInLumberjackEra 30, "The River in the Pines" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 56, "The River in the Pines" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke-LumberingSongsFromTheNorthernWoods #37, "The River through the Pine" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
ST LoF056 (Partial)
Roud #669

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Town of Brandywine

NOTES [13 words]: As "The River in the Pines," this song is item dC33 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3
File: LoF056

River-Driver's Lament, The (I Am a River Driver)

DESCRIPTION: I went lumbering at sixteen and courted a pretty girl who caused me to roam. "Sure I'm a river driver and I'm far away from home." "Now I'm old and feeble and in my sickness lie Just wrap me up in my shanty blankets and lie me down to die."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)
KEYWORDS: courting death lumbering drink rambling floating verses logger
Found in: Canada (Newf, Ont)

References (2 citations):
- Peacock, pp. 759-760, "The River Driver's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Fowke, Lumbering Songs from the Northern Woods #59, "I Am a River Driver" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

Roud #4564

Recordings:
- Mrs. Peter Mushrow, "River Driver" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
- John T. O'Quinn, "The River Driver's Lament" (on Peacock CD-ROM)

Notes [87 words]: Floating verses include adaptations of "I'll eat when I'm hungry", "Build me a castle" and "I'm ... and a long way from home" and "wrap me up in my shanty blankets." - BS

Fowke's very short text ("I'll eat when I'm hungry and drink when I'm dry; If the water don't drown me I'll live till I die, If the water don't drown me while over it I roam, For I am a river driver and far away from home") could be just a lumberjack adaption of "Rye Whiskey," but it's close enough to Peacock to allow us to tentatively lump them. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2

File: FowL69

River, Stay Way

Description: "You keep going your way; I'll keep going my way; River, stay way from my door... You don't need my cabin; River, stay way from my door. Don't come up any higher; I'm so alone, just my bed and fire... Don't start breaking my heart."

Author: unknown

Earliest Date: 1932 (Henry; collected by Susie A. Blaylock from an unnamed source)

Keywords: river loneliness home nonballad

Found in: US (Ap)

References (1 citation):
- Henry, Songs Sung in the Southern Appalachians, p. 189, "River, Stay Away" (1 text)

Notes [37 words]: This is one of those items that could easily float in and out of any bluesy semiballad. I suspect that it did so, and probably belongs with something else in the Index. but without a tune, there is no way to say what. - RBW

File: MHAp189

River's Up and Still A-Rising

Description: "River's up and still a-rising, Just got back from a negro baptizing." "Farewell, mourners (x2), Goodbye, I'se gwine to leave you behind." Most verses are about improbable dress: "Had an old hat, had no brim, Looked like a blue jay sitting on a limb."

Author: unknown

Earliest Date: 1952 (Brown)

Keywords: humorous river nonballad clothes bird

Found in: US (Se)

References (2 citations):
- Brown, Belden, Hudson, Frank, C, Brown, Collection NC Folklore 3 326, "River's Up and Still A-Rising" (1 text)
- Brown, Schinhan, Frank, C, Brown, Collection NC Folklore 5 326, "River's Up and Still A-Rising" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)

Roud #16840

File: Br3326

Riverhead La'nchin' on Jubilee Day, The

Description: Men come from all around St Mary's Bay and as far as St John's on Jubilee Day "for to help Uncle Steve get the craft under way." Once the ship was "out in Riverhead Arm... we cheered for the King." There are toasts all around.

Author: unknown

Earliest Date: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)

Keywords: ship moniker

Found in: Canada (Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peacock, pp. 882-883, "The Riverhead La'nchin' on Jubilee Day" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9809

RECORDINGS:
Nicholas Davis, "The Riverhead Launching" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Patrick Rossiter, "The Riverhead La'nchin' on Jubilee Day" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]

NOTES [22 words]: This must be the Silver Jubilee Day for King George V, May 6, 1935. St Mary's Bay is on the southern shore of the Avalon Peninsula. - BS
Last updated in version 4.2
File: Pea882

Rivers of Texas, The (The Brazos River)
DESCRIPTION: The singer lists the various rivers of Texas he has seen, noting that "Down by the Brazos I courted my dear." But now she has left him, and "I never will walk by the Brazos no more."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: love courting separation river
FOUND IN: US(MW,So)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Randolph 201, "The Brazos River" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abernethy-SinginTexas, pp. 41-42, "Down by the Brazos" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, RIVTEXAS*
ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 36, #3 (1991), pp, 72-73, "Down by the Brazos" (1 text, 1 tune, from the Scragg Family)
Roud #4764
RECORDINGS:
Irene Carlisle, "The Brazos River" (AAFS-L30, 1942?)
Art Thieme, "Down by the Embarass" (on Thieme02) (on Thieme05)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Down by the Embarras (Illinois version)
The Rivers of Georgia

NOTES [216 words]: Paul Stamler notes that there are "non-Texas" versions of this song (see the alternate titles), though I have never encountered them. I know that at least one modern "folk" composer has created a localized version; I suspect the traditional versions are of similar origin. Though I am not sure which is the original. - RBW
As far as I can tell, the Texas version was first. I also gather someone tried to rewrite it for Nebraska, but they didn't have enough rivers to finish a verse. - PJS
An interesting point about this is that most of the river names are preceded by articles: "We crossed THE broad Pecos"... "down by THE Brazos I courted my dear." But one line reads "Red River runs rusty, the Wichita clear." This is apparently proper Texas usage: It is "Red River," not "The Red River" -- no matter what the context. There are several other Western rivers which are anarthrous (that is, do not take an article): Red River, Tongue River, Wind River, Powder River. (See Helena Huntington Smith, _The War On Powder River_, University of Nebraska Press, 1966, p. 1.) Why? I dunno -- but there are other nouns in English, or English dialects, which are arbitrarily anarthrous; consider the British versus American usage of the word "hospital" ("in hospital" as opposed to "in the hospital"). - RBW
Last updated in version 4.5
File: R201

Road is Rocky, The
DESCRIPTION: "The road is rocky, Lordy, But it won't be rocky long."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)
KEYWORDS: worksong
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 762, "The Road is Rocky" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Road Is Rugged, But I Must Go

DESCRIPTION: "Road is rugged but I must go, I must go to see my Lord." "It's a field of battle but I must go, I must go to see my Lord." "Got to pray so hard but I must go." "Jesus died and I must go."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1913 (Diton, according to Joyner-FolkSongInSouthCarolina)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad travel

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Joyner-FolkSongInSouthCarolina, p. 92, "Road Is Rugged, but I Must Go" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #21331

Road to Dundee, The

DESCRIPTION: "Cauld wind was howling o'er moor and o'er mountain" when the singer meets a girl asking her way to Dundee. He says he can't easily tell her, but will show her the way. As they approach the town, they exchange tokens and part. And no, they don't marry

AUTHOR: see NOTES

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan5)

KEYWORDS: travel courting

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) Ireland Canada(Newf,Ont)

REFERENCES (9 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #51, p. 2, "The Road to Dundee" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan5 971, "The Road to Dundee" (7 texts plus a fragmentary text from Greig on p. 600, 4 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 152-153, "The Road to Dundee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 63, "The Road tae Dundee" (1 text, 2 tunes)
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 95, "Sweet Carnloch Bay" (1 text, 1 tune)
Bennett/Downey-JeromeJustOneMoreSong 7, pp. 83-85, "The Road to Dundee" (1 text)
Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario 52, "The Road to Dundee" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, ROADDUND* RDUND2

ADDITIONAL: Chris Wright, "Forgotten Broadsides and the Song Tradition of the Scots Travellers" -- essay found in David Atkinson and Steve Roud, Editors, _Street Ballads in Nineteenth-Century Britain, Ireland, and North America: The Interface between Print and Oral Tradition_, Ashgate, 2014, pp. 93-98, "The Road and the Miles to Dundee" (copy of a broadside print); "Road to Dundee" (copy of a broadside print); "The Road to Dundee"

DT, ROADDUND* RDUND2

RECORDINGS:
Jerome Downey, "The Road to Dundee" (on NFJDowney01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Lass o' Glenshee" (tune, per Greig)

NOTES [58 words]: OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads lists the author of this as "Mackay," but Chris Wright says that Charles Gray of Anstruther published his earliest text of "Grim Winter" in 1811. Wright observes that Gray's song -- clearly an art song -- was very flowery, so someone (maybe even someone named Mackay) might have pruned the shrubbery along the way. - RBW

Road to Heaven, The

DESCRIPTION: "The road to heaven by Christ was made, With heavenly truth the rails are laid,
From earth to heaven the line extends... I'm going home to die no more." The Christian life is compared to a railway: "The Bible is the engineer," "God's love the fire," etc.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1854 (Chamber's Journal, according to Cohen)
KEYWORDS: railroading religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(NE,So)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 605-610, "I'm Going Home to Die No More/The Railway Spiritualized" (2 texts plus 2 broadside prints, 1 tune)
Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster, pp. 53-54, "The Spiritual Railway" (1 text plus an excerpt, 1 tune)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, p. 468, "The Railroad to Heaven" (1 text)
Randolph 600, "The Road to Heaven" (1 text)
Roud #7940
RECORDINGS:
Blue Ridge Gospel Singers (Buell Kazee, Lester O'Keefe, and others), "I'm Going Home to Die No More" (Brunswick 152, 1927)
BROADSIDES:
NLScotland, L.C.Fol.178.A.2(024), "The Spiritual Railway" ("The line to Heaven by Christ was made"), James Lindsay (Glasgow), c. 1855.
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Spiritual Railroad
NOTES [11 words]: FlandersEtAl report that the tune for this is "My Heavenly Home." - RBW

Road to Peterhead, The

DESCRIPTION: On the road to Peterhead the singer is invited to join a party of three score lads and lasses. He follows them to a house where he sees a bride. He joins the parade of "more than seven score and ten," and describes the feast and happy wedding
AUTHOR: William Lillie (source: Greig/Duncan3)
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: wedding dancing music
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast 52, p. 1, "The Road to Peterhead" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 613, "The Road to Peterhead" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #5631
NOTES [32 words]: Greig/Duncan3 quotes a note written about 1860 that Lillie wrote the song "on visiting a Penny Wedding at Sandhole, Longside." - BS
For another Penny Bridal song, see "The Blythesome Bridal." - RBW
Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD3613

Road to the Isles, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer hears "a far croonin'" calling him back to the Hebrides. He lists the places he will visit on his way home, and says, "If it's thinkin' in your inner heart the braggart's in my step, You've never smelt the tangle o' the Isles."
AUTHOR: Words: Kenneth Macleod
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Kennedy-Fraser/MacLeod-SongsOfTheHebrides)
KEYWORDS: home nonballad travel
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Kennedy-Fraser/MacLeod-SongsOfTheHebrides II, pp. 240-241, "The Road to the Isles" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cox-FolkMusicInANewfoundlandOutport, p. 59, "(The Road to the Isles") (1 fragment, a fiddler's mnemonic for a tune called "The Road to the Isles," presumably this although the tune is not transcribed)
DT, RDISLES*
SAME TUNE:
Beneath the Barber Pole (File:Hopk034)
NOTES [63 words]: On its face, this is just another pseudo-folksong by Kenneth Macleod to a Hebridean tune, but my father seems to have learned it orally. I suppose it was from some radio program, but who can tell? When in doubt, we index -- and add apologetic notes like these. It was at least well enough known that a Canadian in World War II used it as the tune for "Beneath the Barber Pole." - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: KFrII240

Road-Icer, The
DESCRIPTION: "There are some of us, I guess, Call ourselves self-made men an such, But then there was that other cuss Went out and iced the road for us."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan)
KEYWORDS: logger travel
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, p. 123, "The Road-Icer" (1 short text)
Roud #6509
NOTES [101 words]: The idea of icing a road seems mad today, used as we are to cars that skid on ice -- but it should be kept in mind that loggers were not carrying logs on wheeled trucks using paged roads; they were hauling them by human or animal power to a river. This meant that they needed as little friction as possible on the log-paths. Which means that the paths needed to be icy: "the logs were moved to the riverside by sleigh, in winter-time, because it was only on road of glare ice that land transportation was possible" (Bruce Catton, Michigan, A History, 1972, 1976 (I use the 1984 Norton edition), p. 105). - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: BBun123

Roaming in the Gloaming
DESCRIPTION: Singer recalls his "island cottage" far away where his "bonny Irish rose/Scotch bluebell" lived. Her parents were kind. "Almost every evening" the couple sat by the fire and sang about how they went roaming in the gloaming together.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)
KEYWORDS: courting nonballad father mother
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
Roud #30186
RECORDINGS:
Raymond Noseworthy, "Roaming in the Gloaming" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
NOTES [14 words]: This is not to be confused with 'Roamin' in the Gloamin" recorded by Harry Lauder. - BS
Last updated in version 5.2
File: RcRoitGl

Roane County Strike at Harriman, Tennessee
DESCRIPTION: Singer calls Harriman a "beautiful town." Mill workers strike; the owners call in the Roane County law. The company gets an injunction; strikers are arrested but released on bail. Singer may have to leave; he'll remember home's beauty
AUTHOR: lyrics probably by Henry Garrett
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (field recording, Henry Garrett) LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer praises Harriman, Tennessee as a "beautiful town." Mill workers there organize a union and strike; the owners call in the Roane County law. The company gets an injunction against the strike; the strikers are arrested but released on bail, "now we are out with our loved ones again." Singer says that if he has to leave "to seek re-employment" he'll always remember the beauty of his home.

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Oct 26, 1933 - workers at Harriman Hosiery Mill strike in an attempt to organize a local of the United Textile Workers of America as authorized by the new National Recovery Act. After nine months, the factory's "Blue Eagle" certification is removed, but the strike fails

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

RECORDINGS:
Henry Garrett, "Roane County Strike at Harriman, Tennessee" (AFS 3176, 1936)
Mike Seeger, "Roane County Strike at Harriman, Tenn." (on MSeeger02)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "In the Hills of Roane County"

File: RcRCSaHT

Roaring Boys of Pakefield, The

DESCRIPTION: "The roaring boys of Pakefield, Oh how they all do thrive, They had but one poor parson, And they buried him alive!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1974 (Porter); reportedly collected 1877

KEYWORDS: clergy drink humorous

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Enid Porter, _The Folklore of East Anglia_, Batsford, 1974, p. 131, "(no title)" (1 text)

Roud #25978

NOTES [66 words]: Frightening as this story sounds, it apparently is innocuous enough. According to Porter, the parson of Pakefield became extraordinarily drunk and fell asleep beside the sea. Locals who found him, unable to rouse him, thought him dead, moved his "corpse" to a more sheltered point in a sandy hollow. They were coming back with help to bury him properly when they discovered he was still alive. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2

File: EPor131

Roast Beef of Old England, The

DESCRIPTION: "When mighty roast beef was the Englishman's food, It ennobled our hearts and strengthened our blood." The singer complains about the new-fangled French ragouts, and recalls the good old days of Queen Elizabeth, the Armada -- and beef

AUTHOR: Richard Leveridge (c. 1670-1758)

EARLIEST DATE: 1855 (Chappell), but known to be in use at least a century before that

KEYWORDS: food royalty battle

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1558-1603 - Reign of Elizabeth (I)
1588 - Voyage of the Spanish Armada

FOUND IN: Britain(England)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic II, pp. 95-96, "The Roast Beef of Old England" (1 text, 1 tune)
Winstock-SongsAndMusicOfTheRedcoats, pp. 269-270, "The roast beef of old England" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: Reginald Nettel, _Seven Centuries of Popular Song_, Phoenix House, 1956, pp. 128-129, "(no title)" (1 text)

Roud #V11585

CROSS-REFERENCES:

NOTES [163 words]: Not, as far as I can tell, an actual folk song -- but, prior to the adoption of "God Save the King," this was as close as England, and particularly the English navy, came to having an anthem. It probably belongs here on that basis. There is some confusion about the authorship of the piece. All sources seem to agree that Richard Leveridge wrote at least the music. But some credit him with both words and music, some only the music. Henry Fielding is sometimes credited with the words. The likeliest explanation is that Fielding wrote some of the words for his play "The Grub Street Opera" (1731). Additional words came from others, possibly including Leveridge, in the decades which followed. Leveridge then supplied his new, and very popular, tune.

According to Nettel, p. 133, "Richard Leveridge... was a bass singer who died in 1758 at the age of eighty-eight, and who offered at the age of sixty to sing a song with any man in England for a wager of a hundred guineas." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2
File: ChWII095

Roasting Little Chipmunks

DESCRIPTION: "Now, friends, if you'll listen, I'll try to explain The terrible times in taking up claims." The men set out with heavy loads into the wild. All seek a claim. The bugs are terrible. The men argue over claims while eating chipmunks and other poor food

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps)

KEYWORDS: logger travel food animal hardtimes

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 39, "Roasting Little Chipmunks" (1 text)
Roud #18192

File: BeLo039

Rob Roy [Child 225]

DESCRIPTION: Rob Roy comes to the lowlands and captures a wealthy lady. He orders her to marry him; she refuses. He prepares to kidnap her, and allows no delay. They are married without her consent. He describes his valor and bids her be content

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1803

KEYWORDS: marriage abduction rejection

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Dec 8-9, 1750 - Abduction of Jean Key by Robert MacGregor

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(High)) US(NE)

REFERENCES (8 citations):
Child 225, "Rob Roy" (12 texts)
Bronson 225, "Rob Roy" (3 versions)
Chambers-ScottishBallads, pp. 155-157, "Rob Roy" (1 text)
Lyle/McAlpine/McLucas-SongRepertoireOfAmeliaAndJaneHarris, pp. 128-129, "The Lady o' Arngosk" (2 short texts)
Buchan/Moreira-TheGlenbuchatBallads, pp. 42-44, "Rob Roy" (1 text)
Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-BritishBalladsFromMaine p. 296, "Rob Roy" (1 text, possibly derived from print)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 583-585, "Rob Roy" (1 text)
DT 225, ROBROY

Roud #340

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rob Roy McGregor-O" (character of Rob Roy)

NOTES [136 words]: This song is accurate enough as far as it goes, but far from complete. Rob Oig ("Young") was the fifth son of Walter Scott's Rob Roy, and a real desperado. In 1736 (when he was perhaps no older than twelve), he shot a trespasser and was outlawed when he refused to appear in court.

After spending time in the British army, he returned to England and married for the first time (despite still being outlawed). When this wife died, he and his brothers determined to marry him to Jean Key, a wealthy widow of nineteen. This rough wooing took place as described in the ballad. In the sequel, the MacGregors were forced to release Jean Key (who died within a year), and both
James MacGregor (who organized the plot) and Robert MacGregor were eventually brought to trial; James escaped, but Robert was executed in 1754. - RBW

Rob Roy McGregor-O

DESCRIPTION: "Pardon now the bold outlaw, Rob Roy McGregor, O..." "Long the state has doomed his fall... Still he spurned the hateful law." "Scotland's fear and Scotland's pride... Your reward must now abide... Welcome now for auld lang syne"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1827 (Journal of the Galaxy)

KEYWORDS: outlaw pardon

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 264-265, "Rob Roy McGregor-O" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #27315

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Rob Roy" [Child 225] (character of Rob Roy)

File: HGam264

Robbers of the Glen, The

DESCRIPTION: "Stand, stranger, stand, your jewels give, Your gold I must obtain.... Resistance is in vain... We are the robbers of the glen." The robber recalls how he lost all his wealth to gambling, and lost his wife to a friend. He rejoices with his fellow robbers

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1864 (Journal of George M. Jones, according to Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)

KEYWORDS: robbery betrayal money gold gambling drink

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 82, "The Robbers of the Glen" (1 text; #60 in the first edition)

Roud #25316

File: FrPi082

Robbers' Retreat, The

DESCRIPTION: "Come fill up your glasses and let us be merry, For to rob bags of plunder it is our intent.... Then away, then away... To those caves in yonder mountains where the Robbers retreat.... Stand, stand and deliver, It is our watch-cry."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall)

KEYWORDS: robbery drink

FOUND IN: Britain(England(West))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 60, "The Robbers' Retreat - The Cadgwith Anthem" (1 short text, 1 tune)

Roud #3314

File: Gund060

Robbie Barron

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets and would have Robbie Barron, "a rovin' youth ... would have daizled both your eyes." Robbie asks that she walk with him "but other lasses followed us And that put Robbie mad." When he asks for a kiss she blushes.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan4)
Robbie Reave Her Apron

DESCRIPTION: Robbie beat his wife and tore her apron. "Robbie reave and Geordie sewed, An' Robbie reave her apron" When Robbie vowed to kiss her she refused and he tore her apron.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan7)
KEYWORDS: marriage rejection violence nonballad husband wife clothes
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1307, "Robbie Reave Her Apron" (1 text)
Roud #7203
File: GrD71307

Robe, The

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Oh the robe, the robe my Lord The robe is all ready now (x2)."Verses: "My mother's gone and left me here." "Christian trials just begun." "Ferry boat going to carry us over."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslzlands)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious clothes
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslzlands 42, pp. 180-181, "O de Robe" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: Parr042

Robbie and Granny

DESCRIPTION: Robbie and Granny go to town and spend half-a-crown on drink. On the way home Granny falls into a ditch. Robbie tries to pull her out, falls, "cursed her and ca'd her an auld drunken soo" and all she could do is cry "Pu' Robie, pu' [pull]."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: drink humorous abuse
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #161, p. 2, "Robie and Grannie" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 577, "Robie and Granny" (1 text)
Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 74, "Robbie an' Granny" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1579
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Robbie and Grannie
File: GrD3577

Robin

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, Robin, they tell me you're going away, And you've come to bid me goodbye." The singer knows what he will say, and hopes he will prove true. She knows he will see fairer, finer women. She begs him not to forget her and promises to dream of him.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin), from a copy supposedly made c. 1900
Robin Adair

DESCRIPTION: "What's this dull town to me? Robin's not near." The singer laments her missing Robin Adair, who is her only source of joy and mirth, who "made this town heaven and earth."

AUTHOR: Words: Lady Caroline Keppel

EARLIEST DATE: 1793 (Edinburgh Musical Miscellany)

KEYWORDS: love separation

FOUND IN: Britain

REFERENCES (5 citations):
- Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, p. 468, "Robin Adair"
- Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2016, p. 135, "Robin Adair" (1 reference)
- Heart-Songs, p. 288, "Robin Adair" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #102, "Robin Adair" (1 text)
- DT, ROBADAIR (cf. EILAROO.NOT)

Roud #8918

RECORDINGS:
- Inez Barbour, "Robin Adair" (Phono-Cut 5198, c. 1915)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Eileen Aroon" (tune)
- cf. "Sadly to Mine Heart Appealing" (portions of Stephen Foster's tune)

SAME TUNE:
- Eileen Aroon (File: RcEilAro)
- Newfoundland Love Song ("Meet me at the twilight hour, My Annie fair!") (James Murphy, compiler, _Songs & Ballads of Terra Nova_, Evening Telegram publishing, 1903 (available from the Memorial University of Newfoundland web site), p. 72)
- Hard Times/No Cash Is Here ("What's this dull down to me? No cash is here! Things that we us'd to see Now don't appear") (Foner, p. 25)
- Kathleen Aroon ("Why should we parted be, Kathleen Aroon!"; words by Louisa M. Crawford; music credited to Franz Abt in Heart-Songs) (Heart-Songs, p. 31; Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #91; Roud #V942)
- Soggarth Aroon ("Am I the slave they say?") (Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 113; Roud #V21055)

NOTES [82 words]: This is perhaps not a folk song in its own right. But as it uses the same melody as "Eileen Aroon," which pretty definitely does belong, I thought it best to include it.

Lady Caroline Keppel fell in love with Robin Adair (a surgeon, and so presumably below her station) in the 1750s, and wrote this song in consequence. She was eventually permitted to marry him (only to die in 1769 at the age of 32), but at the time the song was written, she thought she would not be allowed to wed Robin. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1

File: DTrobada

Robin Hood and Allen a Dale [Child 138]

DESCRIPTION: Robin observes a young man cheery one day, downcast the next. He is Allen a Dale; his bride-to-be has been betrothed to another. Robin goes in disguise to the church on the wedding day, calls in his men, and ensures she marries Allen after all.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1663 (garland)

KEYWORDS: Robinhood disguise love marriage

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (15 citations):
- Child 138, "Robin Hood and Allen a Dale" (1 text)
- Bronson 138, comments only; cf. Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic I, p. 173, "[Drive the cold winter away]"
This particular part of the Robin Hood story seems to have arisen in the seventeenth century. In the earliest versions of the legend (Sloane MS.), the betrayed lover is not Allen but Scarlock (Holt, p. 165), and Robin did not disguise himself as a minstrel but as a beggar (Dobson/Taylor, p. 172). But by the nineteenth century, Allen's name had become a regular part of the legend.

The gimmick of the song, of a minstrel sneaking into the enemy camp to gather information, is of course far older than the song itself. In English tradition, we in fact find a story of King Alfred the Great of Wessex sneaking into the Viking camp in the guise of an entertainer to spy out their plans (Hindley, pp. 192-193). This is, however, a late anecdote -- and even if King Alfred would take such a risk, and even if he had the musical skills to pull it off (unlikely), there is the non-trivial problem that Old English and Old Norse, while related, were distinct languages by this time; a Norse army would not be likely to want to hear an English singer.

Better-attested is the tradition that Richard I the Lion-Hearted was a troubadour -- and it is a simple fact that he once used disguise to try to sneak through Germany (Gillingham, pp. 223-224). I also read, somewhere, a report that, after his return from the Crusade, he disguised himself to recapture Nottingham. The attempt to sneak across Germany was, however, a complete failure; Richard was captured. The business did, however, cement the link of the king with minstrels, since a legend arose that a troubadour named Blondel wandered around Germany seeking Richard (Gillingham, p. 224), and locating him when Richard sang back a song that they, but no one in Germany, would know.

The first account of Blondel, however, occurs in a document written more than a half century after Richard's death. This tale, like the tale of Alfred, is merely folklore -- but it may have suggested plots like this one. It is interesting to note that the tale of Fulk Fitzwarin, which has many close links to the Robin Hood legend (again, see the information on the "Gest of Robyn Hode") contains a tale of a minstrel going to a castle in disguise and singing a song a prisoner is sure to recognize (Cawthorne, p. 107). This tale, surely, is related to the Blondel legend. Whether this particular item ever played a role in the Robin Hood story is altogether another matter.

Knight/Öhlgren, p. 486, claim that this plot became a Ballad Opera in 1751 -- but, given that the lovers were Leander and Clorinda and the old man who is Clorinda's unwanted fiancee is Sir Humphrey Wealthy, I incline to think that less a version of this ballad than just another retelling of the legend. - RBW

Bibliography

- AsserAlfredEtc: Alfred the Great, consisting of Asser's Life of King Alfred and other contemporary sources, translated with introduction and notes by Simon Keynes and Michael Lapidge, Penguin, 1983

Last updated in version 5.0
File: C138

Robin Hood and Guy of Gisborne [Child 118]

DESCRIPTION: Little John and Robin separate; Little John is taken after trying to stop an invasion by the Sheriff. Meanwhile, Robin meets Guy; they fight, and Robin slays Guy. He then takes his clothes and horn and rescues John

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1750 (Percy folio)

KEYWORDS: Robinhood outlaw fight rescue

FOUND IN: US(SE)?

REFERENCES (14 citations):
Child 118, "Robin Hood and Guy of Gisborne" (1 text)
Bronson 118, comments only; cf. Chappell/Woolridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic I, p. 277, "The Chirping of the Lark" (1 tune)
Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume II, pp. 227-237, "Guye of Gisborne" (1 text)
Percy/Wheatley-ReliquesOfAncientEnglishPoetry I, pp. 102-116, "Robin Hood and Guy of Gisborne" (1 text, rewritten and with lacunae filled by Percy)
Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 83-90, "Robin Hood and Guy of Gisborne" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 32, "Robin Hood and Guy of Gisborne" (1 text, said in the Brown collection to "certainly derive" from this piece, but this is a stretch. It may be this, but it is only a disordered fragment, which looks to me to combine aspects of several Robin Hood ballads; the only real link with this is the reported title "Robin Hood and Guy of Gusborne")
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 334-340, "Robin Hood and Guy of Gisborne" (1 text)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 116, "Robin Hood and Guy of Gisborne" (1 text, probably a modernized version of Child's text)
Gummere-OldEnglishBallads, pp. 68-76+320-321, "Robin Hood and Guy of Gisborne" (1 text, conflating Hales/Furnivall and Child)
Whiting-TraditionalBritishBallads 26, "Robin Hood and Guy of Gisborne" (1 text, probably a modernized version of Child's text)

Roud #3977

NOTES [521 words]: According to Fowler, p. 158 n. 25, this is one of eighteen ballads in the Child collection found only in the Percy Folio.

It is considered by J. C. Holt (following Child and others), to be one of the five "basic" Robin Hood ballads. (The earliest known copy (from the Percy folio) is somewhat corrupt, but shows survivals of a much older text, and seems to be at least two centuries older than the manuscript. It is noteworthy that a fragment of the same story, in dramatic form, appears on the back of a slip of financial sheets from 1475/6 C.E. For more details on chronology see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117]).

Observe that, although the modern version of the legend calls Guy of Gisborne "Sir Guy," implying that he is a knight, stanza 22 clearly says that he and Robin are both yeomen.
Even by the standards of early Robin Hood ballads, it's hard to say much about the origins of this poem. Part of that is because portions have been lost. Part of it is because the Percy Folio, our only source, is prone to rewriting the material it contains. And part of it is because, although the story goes back at least to the fifteenth century, the Folio is from the seventeenth, so there has surely been much evolution -- in form and dialect -- along the way.
Still, the name "Guy of Gisborne" is intriguing. Although our earliest Robin Hood texts are from the fifteenth century, there is good reason to think that they are reflections of the fourteenth (certainly not the twelfth and the reign of Richard II!). And the association with Yorkshire in the early ballads is strong.
And it so happens that there was, in Yorkshire in the fourteenth century, an important family named "de Gysburn." According to Christian D. Liddy on p. 80 of Goldberg, "John de Gysburn... had been the most influential citizen of York of his generation, gaining election to the office of mayor on four carations between 1371 and 1380"; his son-in-law would repeatedly be mayor a generation later.
And he had corrupt allies, and enemies in the town.
Sarah Rees Jones, on pp. 228-229 of Goldberg, calls him "Gisburn" and says that "His entire career in city politics was attended by pronounced conflict with other members of the civic elite, culminating in the riots in York in 1380-1 in which he was expelled from the city and violently sought to re-enter it." It sounds as if he belied to an elitist faction. The dating makes it quite possible that his father, grandfather, or uncle could have been a yeoman who made his money hunting down outlaws.
Note that I do not claim that this ballad is "about" the de Gysburns. Just that they would likely have been remembered in fifteenth century Yorkshire -- and very likely remembered as enemies of the common people, since they were opposed to the faction of the martyred Archbishop Scrope, widely held to be a saint by the common people. (For background on Scrope, see the notes to "The Death of Archbishop Scrope.")
Bronson notes that Chappell associated a tune with this piece, but that the association was Chappell's own, on weak grounds, and therefore does not cite the melody. - RBW
Bibliography

• Fowler: David C. Fowler,A Literary History of the Popular Ballad, Duke University Press, 1968
• Goldberg: P. J. P. Goldberg, editor,Richard Scrope: Archbishop, Rebel, Martyr, Shaun Tyas, 2007

Robin Hood and Little John [Child 125]

DESCRIPTION: Robin Hood meets John Little on a bridge. They agree to fight until one falls into the brook. Robin is dunked. He blows his horn for his men and offers John a place among them.
John accepts and is re-named Little John, though he is seven feet tall.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1685 (broadside by W. Onley; title mentioned 1624 in the Stationer's Register); it was in William Thackeray's broadside catalog by 1690
KEYWORDS: Robinhood outlaw fight
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber)) US(Ap,MW,SE) Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (15 citations):
  Child 125, "Robin Hood and Little John" (1 text)
  Bronson 125, "Robin Hood and Little John" (2 versions+ 1 in addenda) Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 125, "Robin Hood and Little John" (3 versions:
    #1, #2, #3)
  Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 202-207, "Robin Hood and Little John" (1 text)
  Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 296, "Robin Hood and Little John" (1 fragment) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Gl 134)
  Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, p. 67, "Robin Hood and Little John" (1 fragment)
  Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, pp. 19-20, "Robin Hood and Little John" (1 text, 1 tune) Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 9, pp. 20-21, "Robin Hood and Little John" (1 text, which looks like it was taken from a broadside and which does not seem to have had a tune)
Robin Hood and Maid Marian [Child 150]

DESCRIPTION: Robin, while Earl of Huntingdon, woos Maid Marian. Then, outlawed, he keeps to the wood, disguised. She dresses as a page to seek him. They meet and fight, unrecognized, till both are wounded. He calls a halt, she knows his voice, they celebrate.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1795 (Ritson)

KEYWORDS: Robinhood love courting fight disguise

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Child 150, "Robin Hood and Maid Marian" (1 text)
Bronson 150, comments only
Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 214-217, "Robin Hood Rescuing Maid Marian" (1 text)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 423-425, "Robin Hood and Maid Marian" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, RZN3, "A bonny fine maid of noble degree"

Stephen Knight and Thomas Ohlgren, editors, _Robin Hood and Other Outlaw Tales_, TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2000, pp. 493-498, "Robin Hood and Maid Marian" (1 text, based on the Onley broadside)

Roud #3992

NOTES [1771 words]: For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117].

It is noteworthy that Marian is not an original part of the Robin Hood legend; other than in this late and feeble piece -- which notably is preserved in only a single broadside; it was not found in the garlands -- she is mentioned only twice in all the ballads printed by Child (#145A, stanza 9, and #147, stanza 1). In neither case is she described as Robin's wife or beloved; she could be one of his men's wives, or a member of his band.
I observe that, in the tales of Robin's demise in the "Gest" and in "Robin Hood's Death" [Child 120],
Robin does not mention a wife or children when he dies -- even though he states that he never hurt a woman. Would he not commend his wife to John's care if he had one? Obviously she is a late addition to the tale. Where she came from must remain a matter of speculation.
It is widely believed that, in the May Games, Marian was initially the consort of the jolly, worldly, distinctly unchaste Friar Tuck (so, e.g., Child), and that she came to be Robin's prize based on their names.
Holt (p. 160) believes that the story of Robin and Marian derives from Adam de la Halle's thirteenth century play "Robin et Marion." In this romance, Marian is a shepherdess whose fidelity to Robin causes her to fend off a lusty knight. This legend entered the French May Games, and was used by John Gower. At some point Marian became Queen of the May Games. With Robin also a character in the games, their union was almost inevitable.
In fact, things may not be that complex. Mustanoja notes that Robin and Marion are typical names for rustic lovers in French and English romance. If Robin were to find a lover, the name Marion (Marian) was almost to be expected.
This pairing is also found in Scotland, although in slightly different form. Speaking of Robert Henryson (fl. 1462), GARnett-IHearAmericaSinging/Gosse, pp. 295-196, write, "Perhaps the most important of Henryson's performances is the lyrical pastoral of Robin and Makyne, not so much for its own merit, though this is great, than as the first revelation of the vast material for popular poetry in Scotch rural life. It is the old story of cross purposes. Makyne loves Robin, Robin is indifferent.
Makyne becomes desperate, lays open siege to him; Robin repels her. Makyne renounces him;
Robin, piqued into love, strives to regain her, but only to discover that
"The man that will nocht whan he may,
Sall have nocht quhen he wald."
Those wishing to see Henryson's poem may find it in volume II of Percy's Reliques. It looks rather affected to me (Henryson was one of many Chaucer imitators in this period), although some of this may be the result of it being taken from a printed version rather than from manuscript -- plus Percy himself was good at making things look affected.
Henryson's tale was told after the origin of the Robin Hood legend, but before the linking of Robin and Marian; it serves as another illustration of the standard link between Robin and Ma(whatever).
Olson's Broadside Index notes that this piece is "Smithson's parody of Robin Hood ballads," and Child observes that the broadside is signed S.S.
The strongest link between Maid Marian and Robin comes from the plays of Anthony Munday, described in the notes to the "Gest." It was he who linked Marian with Matilda FitzWalter (Holt, p.
162), whose alleged father Robert FitzWalter was a real opponent of King John (Tyerman, pp. 307, 313) but of whom no such stories are told in genuine history.
The absurd lateness of this particular song is shown by the mention in verse 3 that "neither Rosamond nor Jane Shore" could surpass Marian in beauty. It would not be unreasonable to find a mention of Rosamund (Clifford) in a Robin Hood ballad; she was the mistress of King Henry II, the father of Richard the Lion-Hearted and the great-great-grandfather of Edward II (Kings widely associated with the Robin Hood legend).
The mention of Jane Shore, though, is astonishingly anachronistic. Elizabeth Lambert, known as Jane Shore (for her story, see the song "Jane Shore") was the mistress of King Edward IV (died 1483) and was probably born in the 1450s. Sir Thomas More, who tells us most of what we know about her, had actually met her in old age in the sixteenth century (Cheetham, p. 205). She thus was active fully a century after our first known mention of Robin Hood as a legendary figure. A song which mentions her could hardly come from before 1475.
What's more, it could be a lot later. In an age before photography, when portraits had to be painted and copied by hand, the assumption was that the most beautiful women were kings' mistresses.
But, after the reign of Edward IV, there were few noteworthy royal mistresses. Edward IV's son Edward V was pre-pubescent when he was deposed (Ashley, p. 620). Richard III, who came next, lasted only two years and didn't have time for mistresses (and seems to have been puritanical anyway; Cheetham, pp. 204-205. His only illegitimate children were born long before he became king, and before he was married -- and we have no knowledge of the mother's name.). That strange, strange man, Henry VII, seems to have been very sexually unadventurous (Ashley, p.
624).
Henry VIII of course had mistresses, such as Bessie Blunt the mother of the Duke of Richmond, but they were forgotten in the tale of his many wives. Edward VI was a boy, too young for such things (Ashley, p. 636). Mary I and Elizabeth I were female; they obviously had no mistresses. James VI and I seems to have been homosexual; he had no known mistresses (Ashley, pp. 575-576). Charles I was another with a quiet home life (Ashley, p. 650). Thus the next king after Edward IV to have a noteworthy mistress was Charles II (ascended 1660), who had quite a collection, including Nell Gwyn. So, since there were no noteworthy beauties for almost two centuries after Jane Shore, this rather feeble item could be very late indeed.

Fully half the Robin Hood ballads in the Child collection (numbers (121 -- the earliest and most basic example of the type), 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 130, 131, 132, (133), (134), (135), (136), (137), (150)) share all or part of the theme of a stranger meeting and defeating Robin, and being invited to join his band. Most of these are late, but it makes one wonder if Robin ever won a battle. Knight/Ohlgren, p. 493, do make the interesting point that there is perhaps a feminist undercurrent here -- almost the only such in the Robin Hood corpus. For those wishing to see how little Munday's play about Robin has to do with the actual Robin Hood legend, without wanting to waste money on a text of the horrid thing, I've taken the cast of characters from pp. xiii-xiv of Munday and annotated them based on whether they have a role in the "Gest":

CHARACTER OF THE INDUCTION (none of whom occur in the early Robin Hood ballads)
Sir John Eltham
Skelton
Little Tracy
Clown

Characters of the dumbshow

CHARACTERS IN THE PLAY ITSELF (supposedly in order of appearance, although this does not appear correct to me)
* Gilbert de Hood, Prior of York and uncle to Robert, Earl of Huntingdon [Gilbert of the White Hand appears briefly in the "Gest," but he is not called "Hood" or said to be a relative of Robin]
* The Sheriff. [There is a Sheriff in the "Gest" and many other ballads]
* Justice Warman, Steward to Robert, Earl of Huntingdon; later Sheriff of Nottingham [No such person in the "Gest," and Robin was a yeoman and would not have had a steward]
* Robert Hood, Earl of Huntingdon
* Little John, his servant [Little John is the first person mentioned in the "Gest" other than Robin, but he too is a yeoman and not Robin's servant]
* Marian, his betrothed (after [line] 781, Matilda, daughter of Lord Fitzwater) [Not in the "Gest"]
* Eleanor, the Queen Mother [not in the "Gest." This is presumably Eleanor of Aquitaine -- who, by the way, wouldn't have spoken English]
* Lord Sentloe, conspirator against the Earl of Huntingdon [not in the "Gest"]
* Sir Hugh Lacy, conspirator against the Earl of Huntingdon [not in the "Gest"]
* Sir Gilbert Broughton, conspirator against the Earl of Huntingdon [not in the "Gest"]
* Mistress Warman [not in the "Gest," although the Sheriff's Wife plays a substantial role in "Robin Hood and the Potter"]
* Prince John [not in the "Gest," and by the way, John the Brother of Richard was not a Prince; there were no principalities in the Angevin Empire]
* the Bishop of Ely [not in the "Gest"; such clergy as we see are mostly from Yorkshire]
* Much, the Miller's son, a clown [in the Gest, but no clown]
* a messenger from Ely
* Simon, Earl of Leicester (after 781, Lord Salisbury) [Not in the "Gest" under either name]
* Lord Lacy, brother of Sir Hugh and father of Marian (after [line] 781, Lord Fitzwater) [Not in the "Gest" under either name]
* Lord Chester [Not in the "Gest"]
* Friar Tuck [Not in the "Gest," the "Monk," the "Potter," or the "Death," although he seems to have been the earliest member of Robin's band other than Little John, Much, Scarlock/Scathelock, and Gilbert]
* Ralph, Warman's Man [No "Ralph" in the "Gest"]
* Scarlet [see below]
* Scathelock [Scarlet and Scathelock are listed as brothers, but in the "Gest," there is ONE character, Scarlock or Scathelock, who eventually evolved in the late ballads into "Scarlet"; Munday has turned one character into two]
* First Collier [not many colliers in the time of Richard I, Mr. Munday.]
* Second Collier [see previous comment]
* Widow Scarlet, mother of Scarlet and Scathelock [no one in the "Gest" has noticeable parents, and one wonders why she's called Scarlet when only one of her sons bears that name!
* Sir Doncaster of Hothersfield [Sir Roger of Doncaster was involved in Robin's murder, but his name was Roger, not Doncaster, and he came from Doncaster, not Hothersfield, and he appears with the Prioress of Kirklees, whom Munday omits]
* Jinny, daughter of the Widow Scarlet [no sisters in the "Gest," either]
* a servant of the Prior
* another servant, messenger from York
* a Herald
* Earl of Leicester [we already had one of these, until he turned into Lord Salisbury!]
* Richmond [no Earl of Richmond in the "Gest"]
* Warman's Cousin
* Jailer of Nottingham
* Mistress Thompson [not in the "Gest"]
* King Richard [in the "Gest," the king is explicitly named "Edward"]
* Sheriff's men, Sir Doncaster's ruffians [in the "Gest," Sir Roger doesn't have any ruffians except the Prioress of Kirklees, with whom he is sleeping], Leicester's drum and ancient, soldiers, officers, attendants, Jailer's dog - RBW

Bibliography

- Ashley: Mike Ashley, British Kings and Queens, Barnes & Noble, 2002 (originally published as The Mammoth Book of British Kings and Queens, 1988)
- Garrett-IHearAmericaSinging/Gosse: Richard Garrett-IHearAmericaSinging and Edmund Gosse, English Literature: An Illustrated Record four volumes, MacMillan, 1903-1904 (I used the 1935 edition published in two volumes)
- Munday: Anthony Munday, The Downfall of Robert Earl of Huntingdon by Anthony Munday 1601 Malone Society Reprints, 1965 (listed as "prepared by John C. Meagher and checked by "the general editor," but no actual editor is listed on the title page)

Last updated in version 5.3
File: C150

Robin Hood and Queen Katherine [Child 145]

DESCRIPTION: The king proposes a wager with Queen Katherine, his archers against any she may choose. She sends for Robin and his men, giving them false names. They win and are revealed but the king has promised not to be angry with any in the queen's party.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1663 (garland); a song that was likely this one was entered into the Stationer's Register in 1656, and a broadside probably printed by 1655
KEYWORDS: Robinhood contest trick royalty
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (11 citations):
* Child 145, "Robin Hood and Queen Katherine" (3 texts)
* Bronson 145, (extensive) comments only
* Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 164-170, "Robin Hood and Queen Katherine" (1 text)
* Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume I, pp. 37-46, "Robin Hoode & Quene Kath[erine]" (1 text)
* Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 413-417, "Robin Hood and Queen Katherine" (1 text)
* Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, RZN10, "Gold tane from the Kings harbengers"
ADDITIONAL: Stephen Knight, editor (with a manuscript description by Hilton Kelliher), _Robin
Hood: The Forresters Manuscript_ (British Library Additional MS 71158), D. S. Brewer, 1998, pp. 53-61, "Robin Hood and Queen Catherin" (1 text, much longer than the printed versions known to Child)

Stephen Knight and Thomas Ohlgren, editors, _Robin Hood and Other Outlaw Tales_, TEAMs (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2000, pp. 563-580, "Robin Hood and Queen Catherin" (1 text, based primarily on the Forresters manuscript)

MANUSCRIPT: {MSForresters}, London, British Library MS. Additional 71158, the "Foresters Manuscript," item 9

Roud #72

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Robin Hood's Chase [Child 146]"

NOTES [513 words]: According to Knight/Ohlgren, this must have been in existence by 1655, because one of the Wood broadsides (Child's B.a) was printed by Grove, who ceased operations in that year. Given the uncertainty about most such dates, I decided to leave the other possible dates in the "Earliest Date" field. Rollins, p. 196, lists two broadsides which he thinks are this:

- #2266, "Renowned Robin Hood," registered March 12, 1656 by Francis Grove
- #2267, "Renowned Robin Hood," registered March 1, 1675

There is no historical "Queen Katherine"; the wife of King Stephen (reigned 1135-1154) was Matilda; the wife of Henry II (1154-1189, the first king usually associated with Robin Hood) was Eleanor of Aquitaine; Richard I (1189-1199) married Berengeria of Navarre; John (1199-1216) had as his primary wife Isabella of Angouleme; Henry III (1216-1272) married Eleanor of Provence; Edward I (1272-1307) married first Eleanor of Castile and then Margaret. Edward II married Isabella of France. Edward III married Philippa of Hainault. The first English Queen Catherine/Katherine was Catherine of Valois, daughter of Charles VI of France, who married Henry V of England in 1420 -- impossibly late for a historical Robin Hood, although she does precede the earliest known copies of the Robin Hood ballads. Nor was there a Scottish Queen Katherine.

Leach-TheBalladBook speculates that one of Henry VIII's wives (either Catherine of Aragon or Katherine Howard) is meant! This involves a major difficulty, pointed out in Cawthorne, p. 187: This ballad involves Friar Tuck, and while both of Henry VIII's Catherine were Catholic, friars would not have been popular in the reign of Henry VIII (especially in the time of Katherine Howard, after the dissolution of the monasteries. In any case, how can we possibly have a Robin Hood alive after the reformation?) Nonetheless, Knight/Ohlgren, p. 563, also think Catherine of Aragon is meant, because she was the one Queen Catherine who played an active role in English government -- and there are records of Henry VIII playing at Robin Hood.

I would have to say that Henry V seems genuinely more likely -- he of course was deeply involved in recruiting archers, and because his wife was not only foreign but a daughter of Henry's long-time enemy, she might well have been willing to show him up.

Ritson's answer is simpler: the several wives of Henry VIII named "Katherine" would have made the name "sufficiently familiar" to the writer of the text.

The sequel to this story is told in Child 146, "Robin Hood's Chase."

Most versions of the ballad are rather incoherent; it is possible that the broadside prints have been shortened. Knight, pp. 52-53, observes that the version in the Forresters Manuscript is about a dozen stanzas longer than most of the others (about a 20% increase in length), and that it resolves many of the inconsistencies.

For background on the Robin Hood legend, including a possible connection between this song and the story of Queen Isabella, the wife of Edward II, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117]. - RBW

Bibliography

- Cawthorne: Nigel Cawthorne, A Brief History of Robin Hood: The True History Behind the Legend, Running Press, 2010
- Knight: Stephen Knight, editor (with a manuscript description by Hilton Kelliher), Robin Hood: The Forresters Manuscript (British Library Additional MS 71158), D. S. Brewer, 1998
Robin Hood and the Beggar (I) [Child 133]

DESCRIPTION: Robin meets a beggar who asks charity. They fight. The beggar wins. Robin gives him his horse and clothes, goes on to Nottingham in the beggar’s attire. There he finds three of his band are to be hanged. He blows his horn to summon his men who rescue them

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: Before 1662 (Bodleian, Wood 401(23)); 1663 (garland)

KEYWORDS: Robinhood begging execution rescue disguise

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Child 133, "Robin Hood and the Beggar I" (1 text)
Bronson 133, comments only
Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 191-195, "Robin Hood and the Beggar" (1 text)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 385-388, "Robin Hood and the Beggar, I" (1 text)
Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume I, pp. 13-18, "Robin Hood, A Beggar, & the Three Squires" (1 text, of Child 140, with a text of "Robin Hood and the Beggar"=Robin Hood and the Beggar (I) [Child 133] in the notes)

ADDITIONAL: Stephen Knight, editor (with a manuscript description by Hilton Kelliher), _Robin Hood: The Forrester's Manuscript_ (British Library Additional MS 71158), D. S. Brewer, 1998, pp. 82-85, "Robin Hood and the Beggar" (1 text,very likely a composite from the broadsides)

MANUSCRIPT: {MSForresters}, London, British Library MS. Additional 71158, the "Forrester Manuscript," item 13

Roud #3391

BROADSIDES:

Bodleian, Wood 401(23), "Robin Hood and the Beggar," F. Grove (London), 1623-1661;

NOTES [156 words]: For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117].

Fully half the Robin Hood ballads in the Child collection (numbers (121 -- the earliest and most basic example of the type), 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 130, 131, 132, (133), (134), (135), (136), (137), (150)) share all or part of the theme of a stranger meeting and defeating Robin, and being invited to join his band. Most of these are late, but it makes one wonder if Robin ever won a battle. Rollins, p. 199, #2312, believes that the "Robin Hood and the beggar" registered March 12, 1656 by Francis Grove is this. The Grove entry appears to be the same as STC p. 474, #20590, "Robin Hood and the butcher," which is the Bodleian broadside by Grove cited above. This is attributed to "T. R."; the STC does not suggest who this might be, but the Bodleian web site conjectures T. Robins. The STC does not list anything by a "T. Robins." - RBW

Bibliography

• Rollins: Hyder E. Rollins, An Analytical Index to the Ballad-Entries (1557-1709) In the Register of the Company of Stationers of London, 1924 (I use the 1967 Tradition Press reprint with a new Foreword by Leslie Shepard)

Last updated in version 5.3
File: C145

Robin Hood and the Beggar (II) [Child 134]

DESCRIPTION: Robin asks money of a beggar who answers disdainfully. They fight. The beggar wins and goes off. Robin is found by three of his men. He sends two to avenge his disgrace. They ambush the beggar, but he bribes and tricks them and gets away.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1795

KEYWORDS: Robinhood fight rescue escape trick money
Robin Hood and the Bishop [Child 143]

DESCRIPTION: Robin sees a bishop with a large company and fears to be taken. He appeals to an old wife, trades clothes with her, returns to his men. She is taken for him, but they rescue her, take money from the bishop, make him say mass and ride away backwards.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1663 (garland); a song that was likely this one was entered into the Stationer's Register in 1656

KEYWORDS: Robinhood clergy disguise rescue

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (10 citations):
Child 143, "Robin Hood and the Bishop" (1 text)
Bronson 143, comments only
Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 119-122, "Robin Hood and the Bishop" (2 text)
Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland3, p. 117, "Robin Hood and the Bishop" (1 fragment of a single line, identified as this seemingly by title; there is no real reason to think it is this ballad)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 408-411, "Robin Hood and the Bishop" (1 text)
Niles-BalladBookOfJohnJacobNiles 47, "Robin Hood Rescuing Three Squires" (2 texts, 2 tunes, of which only the second could be this ballad, and even it is mixed with Child 140)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, RZN5, "Come gentlemen all, and listen a while"

Stephen Knight and Thomas Ohlgren, editors, _Robin Hood and Other Outlaw Tales_, TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2000, pp. 549-555, "Robin Hood and the Bishop" (1 text, newly edited from the sources)

MANUSCRIPT: {MSForresters}, London, British Library MS. Additional 71158, the "Foresters Manuscript," item 3

Roud #3955

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Robin Hood and the Bishop of Hereford" (plot, lyrics)

NOTES [188 words]: For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117].

Knight/Ohlgren, p. 554, mention a speculation that the secular powers shown by the Bishop here show this song to be a post-Reformation attack on Catholics. There is some sense to this, but some bishops did have secular powers. A notable example was the Bishop of Durham, whose position made him the de facto earl of Durham -- and who was based not too far from Robin Hood country.

On p. 555, Knight/Ohlgren suggest that the final elements of the forced mass and the bishop being mounted backward suggest a burlesque. Possibly -- but prisoners going to trial or execution were Robin Hood and the Bishop of Hereford [Child 144]

DESCRIPTION: The Bishop of Hereford enters Barnsdale and finds Robin Hood killing a deer. He tries to convince Robin Hood to come before the king. Robin refuses, gives the Bishop dinner, and then extracts the price -- several hundred pounds, plus a dance or a mass

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1670 (Forresters manuscript)

KEYWORDS: Robinhood hunting clergy money

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (11 citations):
- Child 144, "Robin Hood and the Bishop of Hereford" (2 texts)
- Bronson 144, "Robin Hood and the Bishop of Hereford" (3 versions)
- Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 144, "Robin Hood and the Bishop of Hereford" (2 versions: #2.1, #3)
- Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 207-210, "Robin Hood and the Bishop of Hereford" (1 text)
- Wells-TheBalladTree, p. 39, "Robin Hood and the Bishop of Hereford" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 411-413, "Robin Hood and the Bishop of Hereford" (1 text)
- Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 120, "Robin Hood and the Bishop of Hereford" (1 text)
- Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 70, "Robin Hood and the Bishop of Hereford" (1 text)
- DT 144, RHODDBSH*

ADDITIONAL: Stephen Knight, editor (with a manuscript description by Hilton Kelliher), _Robin Hood: The Forresters Manuscript_ (British Library Additional MS 71158), D. S. Brewer, 1998, pp. 39-43, "Robin Hood and the Bishop of Hereford" (1 text, longer than Child's text based on the garlands)

MANUSCRIPT: {MSForresters}, London, British Library MS. Additional 71158, the "Forresters Manuscript," item 7

Roud #2338

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Robin Hood and the Bishop" (plot, lyrics)

NOTES [1087 words]: For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117]. In that ballad, Robin's king seems to be Edward II, and the notes to that song detail some reasons why Robin -- if Edward II were his king -- might be particularly likely to pick on the Bishop of Hereford, who might (on this line of argument) have been Adam Orleton. The bishop in the 1320s: "Although Orleton had prospered under [Pope] Clement [V]'s regime and might have been elevated to the episcopal bench in any case, it was John XXII who regarded him with special favor, advancing him from one see to another and standing by his appointee in the teeth of Edward II's wrath" (Haines, p. 16).

In an interesting development, Orleton was in Rome negotiating with the Pope on behalf of Edward II when "during his return journey from Avignon [where the pope was then based]... the Earl of Pembroke [part of the same embassy] suffered the indignity of being waylaid at Etampes" (Haines, p. 17). It wasn't Orleton himself, but it was a member of his party.

Then, "on 15 March 1317 Richard Swinfield, bishop of Hereford, died. Exactly two months later Pope John, claiming the reservation of the see, appointed Adam Orleton in his place" (Haines, p. 17). Edward, who had another candidate in mind, went ballistic, going so far as to order Orleton to refuse the post. It's a moot point whether Orleton would have obeyed; it is likely that he had been consecrated before Edward's order reached him (Haines, p. 18). Still, Edward had his eye on Orleton thereafter -- and Orleton would be a key factor in Edward's 1327 deposition. Soon after, the Bishop of Worcester (a richer see than Hereford) died; once again, the English had a candidate, but once again, the Pope gave the post to Orleton (Haines, p. 29). And then, when the diocese of Winchester -- the richest bishopric in England -- came open, the Pope again translated Orleton despite English opposition that meant he didn't gain the full perks of the diocese until 1334-1336 (Haines, pp. 36-37).
Since the king in the "Gest of Robyn Hode" was an Edward, probably Edward II, the king in that piece, at least, would certainly have regarded Adam Orleton of Hereford as his enemy -- and Robin, the loyal ally of Edward, would likely have done the same.

What's more, in the 1320s, Orleton's properties were raided by outlaws (Haines, p. 49), although the circumstances do not resemble those in this song. At least some of these raids happened in 1322 when Orleton was in Yorkshire (Haines, p. 140) -- which happens to be where Robin Hood was based in the "Gest," and 1322 happens to be just when Edward II was visiting that part of the country (and meeting Robin, if one assumes that the king did indeed meet Robin). Haines, p. 65, thinks that Orleton's bishopric was particularly troubled by outlaws in the 1330s and 1340s as well, although he admits that the point is hard to prove. Still, it sounds as if there might have been some outlaw with a vendetta against Orleton.

In addition, Robin in the "Gest" had trouble with the Abbot of St. Mary's in Yorkshire, and one of the foundations in Orleton's diocese was that of St. Mary's in Winchester, and like St. Mary's in Yorkshire, it had a bad reputation for licentiousness (Haines, p. 75). It's not the same house -- indeed, the one in Winchester was a nunnery -- but it's easy to see how a confusion could have arisen.

What's more, the vendetta against the Orleton could have continued after he was translated -- two of his nephews later became Bishops of Hereford (Haines, p. 88). All this is, of course, purest speculation; we have no reason to think this song has any relation to the "Gest." But maybe a legend arose that the Bishop of Hereford was Robin's particular enemy. And, after his translation to Winchester, he was a particularly good target for robbery, just because he had so much money.

Orleton, who reported in 1338 that he was losing the sight in his left eye, became a semi-permanent resident of Farnham Castle in 1339, and died there in July 1345 (Haines, pp. 64-65). The choice of the Bishop of Hereford is one of several hints that this song may be based on older materials than most of the late Robin Hood ballads. The fact that Robin is here based in Barnsdale, not Sherwood, is another. Although the attestation for the ballad is late (first known from the Forrester's manuscript of c. 1670, and first published in the Aldermary garland of c. 1750), and the form of our extant copies is also late, the contents of the song give evidence of being early.

Another possibility for the Bishop of Hereford involved is John Stanbury, Bishop of Hereford from 1453 to 1474, or possibly one of his immediate predecessors. Stanbury was a member of the royal council of King Henry VI, and apparently attended council meetings regularly; (Wolfe, p. 275). The significance of this is indirect. Henry VI's inept government had lost all its territories in France, except Calais, in the 1440s and early 1450s (Seward, pp. 242-262). Plus Henry had let government finances go to ruin. The crown was technically bankrupt by the 1440s, and in 1450, the royal debt was equivalent to at least eleven years' income (Ross, p. 26).

By 1450, this ineptitude resulted in the popular rising known as Jack Cade's Rebellion (Wagner, p. 133). And popular protests continued over the next decade. By 1461, Henry VI had been overthrown.

What is interesting is that, in 1469, there was a rebel who was called Robin of Redesdale, who also called himself Robin Mend-All (Wagner, pp. 234-235). Scott/Duncan, p. 531, calls him an "avatar" of Robin Hood, This is a little deceptive; he was almost certainly a political agent operating on behalf of the Earl of Warwick. But the name does seem to suggest that he was trying to equate himself with Robin Hood.

And if a rebel of 1469 could allude to Robin Hood, so could an outlaw of (say) 1454. So it is just possible that the real Hereford of Henry VI's reign had a run-in with someone calling himself "Robin Hood" -- such things certainly happened in those lawless times, and an associate of Henry VI would be particularly vulnerable. We know, in fact, that the town of Hereford was captured by associates of the Duke of York (who was Henry VI's enemy and potential heir) in 1452 (Wolfe, pp. 303-304).

This is all pure speculation. I know of no instance of such a robbery in the 1450s. Nor have I any reason to think this ballad is historical. The pieces fit, but that's all we can say. - RBW

Bibliography

- Seward: Desmond Seward, The Hundred Years War: The English in France, 1337-1453, Robin Hood and the Bride

DESCRIPTION: Robin Hood's band meets a "prtty boy With a bow and bolt in his hand." The unnamed man laments that his love is to be married to another. They go to the church, and Robin arranges for the correct man to marry the girl.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1800 (Forresters MS, British Library Add 71158)

KEYWORDS: love marriage clergy Robinhood

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Stephen Knight, editor (with a manuscript description by Hilton Kelliher), _Robin Hood: The Forresters Manuscript_ (British Library Additional MS 71158), D. S. Brewer, 1998, pp. 7-9, "Robin Hood and the Bride" (1 text)
- _MANUSCRIPT: {MSForresters}, London, British Library MS. Additional 71158, the "Foresters Manuscript," item 2_

Roud #3298

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Robin Hood and Allen a Dale" [Child 138] (plot)

NOTES [88 words]: The Forresters Manuscript version of this song is clearly based on the same plot as "Robin Hood and Allen a Dale" -- but it has been extensively rewritten. The young man is never named, and the wedding is celebrated by an actual priest, whereas in "Allen a Dale," Little John humorously does the honors. Although Roud lumps this with the Child ballad, Knight thinks, and I concur, that this should be considered a separate poem -- although it is an open question whether it ever circulated outside the Forresters manuscript. - RBW

Robin Hood and the Butcher [Child 122]

DESCRIPTION: Robin goes to Nottingham in the guise of a young butcher who sells cheap and spends freely. The sheriff returns with him to the forest for bargain-priced cattle. He is shown deer, then captured and relieved of his gold. He is released for his wife's sake.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1662 (broadside Bodleian Wood 401(19))

KEYWORDS: Robinhood trick commerce robbery

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (11 citations):
- Child 122, "Robin Hood and the Butcher" (2 texts)
- Bronson 122, comments only
- Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 122-126, "Robin Hood and the Butcher" (1 text)
- Hales/Furnival-BishopPercyFolioManuscript, volume I, pp. 19-25, "Robin Hood and the Butcher" (1 text)
- Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 11, pp. 23-24, "Robin Hood and the Butcher" (1 text, which which does not seem to have had a tune and which appears to start in the middle and has other defects)
- Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 119, "Robin Hood and the Butcher" (1 text)
- Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, RZN4, "Come all you brave gallants & listen a while"

ADDITIONAL: Stephen Knight, editor (with a manuscript description by Hilton Kelliher), _Robin Hood: The Forresters Manuscript_ (British Library Additional MS 71158), D. S. Brewer, 1998, pp. 45-51, "Robin Hood and the Butcher" (1 text, with substantial differences from both the Percy and garland versions)
Robin Hood and the Butcher [Child 121]

DESCRIPTION: Robin learns of a friar's prowess and seeks him out. Each submits once to carrying the other over water, then the friar dumps Robin in. They fight long, then Robin's men and the friar's dogs enter the fray. The friar is invited to join the band.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1663 (garland)

KEYWORDS: Robinhood clergy fight outlaw

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (13 citations):
Child 121, "Robin Hood and the Butcher" (2 texts)
Bronson 123, "Robin Hood and the Curtal Friar" (1 version)
Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 146-151, "Robin Hood and the Curtall Fryar" (1 text)
Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume I, pp. 26-31, "Robine Hood & ffryer Tucke" (1 text)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 361-365, "Robin and the Curtal Friar" (1 text)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 118, "Robin Hood and the Curtal Friar" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, RZN13, "In summer time when leaves grow green"

72-76, "Robin Hood and the Fryer" (1 text, similar to several of the broadsides)
R. B. Dobson and J. Taylor, _Rymes of Robyn Hood: An Introduction to the English Outlaw_, University of Pittsburgh Press, 1976, pp. 159-164, "Robin Hood and the Curtal Friar" (2 texts, from the Percy Folio and a broadside)
Stephen Knight and Thomas Ohlgren, editors, _Robin Hood and Other Outlaw Tales_, TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2000, pp. 458-468, "Robin Hood and the Curtal Friar" (1 text, conflated from the Percy and garland texts)
MANUSCRIPT: {MSForresters}, London, British Library MS. Additional 71158, the "Foresters Manuscript," item 11
Roud #1621
NOTES [535 words]: This friar is otherwise known as Friar Tuck, so called because his frock is tucked up. Child says Curtal relates to the keeping of the "curtile", or vegetable garden, but acknowledges that others thought it meant he had a curtailed, or shortened, frock. - KK
For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117]. Knight/Ohlgren however note that the song does not refer to Friar Tuck by that name, even though the Percy Folio calls the song "Robin Hood and Fryer Tucke."
There is a record of a "Friar Tuck," though not in any way associated with Robin Hood. Two writs of 1417 mention a man of that name who had gathered a gang of outlaws in Surrey and Sussex. He remained at large in 1429 (though nothing was heard of him in the interval); his true name was reported to be Robert Stafford.
The association of Robin Hood and the Friar may have arisen from the May Games (in which both a Friar and Robin were characters), and the Friar may possibly have been associated with Friar Tuck because the latter was an outlaw.
Dobson/Taylor, p. 158, declare that the Friar's association with Fountains Abbey "can only be a post-Reformation fabrication." They give no reason for this statement. Fountains Abbey certainly existed during the Robin Hood era; according to Tatton-Brown/Crook, pp. 112-115, it was a Cisterian community founded in 1152 (meaning that it existed even in the time of Richard I), and it is in Yorkshire.
On the other hand, the fact that it is Cisterian means that it was inhabited by monks, not friars -- indeed, the first friars did not reach England until much later; the first were the Dominicans, who came to England in 1221 (Powicke, p. 24). This doesn't eliminate the idea of a friar being associated with Fountains, but it makes it less likely -- and it does make it impossible to date the Curtal Friar and Robin to the reigns of Richard I (died 1199) or John (died 1216).
Another problem is finding a friar hunting with dogs. First, dogs were barred from the royal forests unless their foretoes were clipped, or "lawed," to prevent them chasing game (Young, p. 41), and second, the Third Lateran Council had tried to prevent hunting with dogs altogether (Young, p. 44). I do note with interest that Fountains Abbey -- despite being founded on very poor land (Alexander, p. 98), apparently to ensure the poverty of its inhabitants -- seems to have spent a fair bit of money on minstrels, at least in the 1450s (Holt, p. 137). Could the Friar have come to be associated with Fountains because a minstrel came there and decided to praise his patrons?
Fully half the Robin Hood ballads in the Child collection (numbers (121 -- the earliest and most basic example of the type), 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 130, 131, 132, (133), (134), (135), (136), (137), (150)) share all or part of the theme of a stranger meeting and defeating Robin, and being invited to join his band. Most of these are late, but it makes one wonder if Robin ever won a battle.
Bronson has extensive notes on the dubious nature of the tune of this piece, which is from Rimbault based on an alleged handwritten copy no longer found in the book where Rimbault claimed to find it. - RBW
Bibliography

• Marc Alexander, A Companion to the Folklore, Myths & Customs of Britain, Sutton Publishing, 2002
• Holt: J. C. Holt, Robin Hood, second edition, revised and enlarged, Thames & Hudson, 1989
• Knight/Ohlgren: Stephen Knight and Thomas Ohlgren, editors, Robin Hood and Other Outlaw Tales, TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute
Robin Hood and the Duke of Lancaster

DESCRIPTION: "Come listen, my friends, to a story so new, In the days of King John... How the bold little Duke, of the fair Lancashire, Came to speak to the King...." He arrives in a tizzy, and argues with the king about "Robin Hood," but they reach no conclusion

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1727 (broadside printing, according to Dobson & Taylor)

KEYWORDS: political Robinhood

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

NOTES [407 words]: This is not a "true" Robin Hood ballad, even in the sense that the items in the various garlands are. It is, by consensus, from the reign of George I (reigned 1714-1727) or, just possibly, George II (reigned 1727-1760). Although it claims to be from 1202 (the third year of the reign of John, who was king 1199-1216), the reference to the Duke of Lancaster makes this absolutely impossible -- the title of "Duke" did not exist in the English peerage in 1202! "The title [of duke] was first conferred by Edward III in 1337 on the PRINCE OF WALES [i.e. Edward the Black Prince], making him Duke of Cornwall" (HistTodayCompanion, p. 249). The first Duke of Lancaster was Henry Plantagenet of Grosmont, who received the title in 1351 (HistTodayCompanion, p. 380). When he died in 1361, it went to his son-in-law John of Gaunt, Shakespeare's "time-honoured Lancaster," who was allowed to keep it even after his wife, Blanche of Lancaster, died (Hicks, p. 133).

After the death of Gaunt, the title should have passed to his son Henry of Bolingbroke. Henry however had to overthrow King Richard II to obtain his title (HistTodayCompanion, p. 376). Having gone ahead and rebelled, Henry went whole hog and took the throne himself, uniting the Lancaster dukedom and the crown. The Duchy of Lancaster is administered separately, but since that time, the reigning monarch has always been Duke of Lancaster (Kirby, p. 77). Thus there have been only two Dukes of Lancaster who have not been King of England: Henry of Grosmont and John of Gaunt. The only kings during their periods as Duke were Edward III and Richard II -- not John! Gutch speculated that this was a political piece. Dobson and Taylor are more specific: The "Duke of Lancaster" is in fact the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, Lord Lechmere (who thus had most of the powers of a Duke of Lancaster, but did not have Ducal honors). Robin Hood is the disguise for Robert Walpole, George I's primary minister; he apparently was called Robin Hood in other sources as well. Lechmere considered Walpole corrupt, and this is an allegory of Lechmere's confrontation with the King over the matter.

Even by the standards of the later Robin Hood ballads, it's pretty feeble. And it has no place in tradition. But I'm including it for completeness. For more on the genuine Robin Hood tradition, including his links with the Duchy of Lancaster, see the notes to "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117]. - RBW

Bibliography

- Hicks: Michael Hicks,Who's Who in Late Medieval England (1272-1485), (being the third volume in the Who's Who in British History series), Shepheard-Walwyn, 1991
Robin Hood and the Golden Arrow [Child 152]

DESCRIPTION: The sheriff of Nottingham plots to catch Robin by means of an archery competition. Robin and his men go, but dress differently and scatter in the crowd, so are not recognized. Robin wins. To gloat, he sends a letter to the sheriff, by arrow.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1777 (garland); the Forresters Manuscript version is from c. 1670

KEYWORDS: Robinhood contest disguise

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (5 citations):
- Child 152, "Robin Hood and the Golden Arrow" (1 text)
- Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 223-227, "Robin Hood and the Golden Arrow" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Stephen Knight, editor (with a manuscript description by Hilton Kelliher), _Robin Hood: The Forresters Manuscript_ (British Library Additional MS 71158), D. S. Brewer, 1998, pp. 25-33, "Robin Hood and the Sherriffe 1" (1 text, with substantial differences from Child's text as found in the garlands; Knight thinks some material has been included based on the "Gest")
- Stephen Knight and Thomas Ohlgren, editors, _Robin Hood and Other Outlaw Tales_, TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2000, pp. 541-548, "Robin Hood and the Golden Arrow" (1 text)
- Roud #3994

NOTES [139 words]: For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117].

This ballad seems more directly linked to the "Gest" than most, since the golden arrow of the seventh stanza is described in terms similar to that used of a golden arrow in the "Gest." Child thinks that the first 23 stanzas of this song are derived from the "Gest." The plot of the remainder, however, is different (and probably not as good, unless you like the Robin-as-trickster motif which is almost invisible in the "Gest"). The whole effect of this ballad is very late and rather feeble. The last stanza promises that listeners shall soon hear the "end" of Robin Hood. This is presumably a reference to the fact that, in the garland, "Robin Hood's Death" [Child 120] follows, which implies that this stanza, at least, is a rewrite. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: C152

Robin Hood and the Monk [Child 119]

DESCRIPTION: Robin Hood decides to take mass in Nottingham. He quarrels with Little John after a shooting match, and proceeds alone. A monk betrays him to the sheriff. John and Much trick the king into giving them his seal; they go to the sheriff and rescue Robin

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1475 (paleographic dating of ms. Cambridge Ff. 5.48)

KEYWORDS: Robinhood clergy captivity rescue MiddleEnglish

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (20 citations):
- Child 119, "Robin Hood and the Monk" (1 text)
- Bronson 119, comments only; cf. Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic II, pp. 53-54, "Oh, How They Frisk It, or, Leather Apron, or Under the Greenwood Tree"
- Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 340-349, "Robin Hood and the Monk" (1 text, probably a slightly modernized version based on Child)
- Leach-HeritageBookOfBallads, pp. 96-108, "Robin Hood and the Monk" (1 text)
- Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 327, "Robin Hood and the Monk" (1 text, based on Skeat's transcript with some modernization and emendations from Child)
- Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 52-65, "A Tale of Robin Hood" (1 text)
- Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 117, "Robin Hood and the Monk" (1 text, source not states; the spelling is modernized and some of the missing lines conjectured)
Robin Hood and the Monk (1 text, 1 tune -- another questionable JJJ collection; it appears to be a modern version created from whole cloth based on a summary of the plot in Child and with a few names distorted in an attempt at disguise)

Gummere-OldEnglishBallads, pp. 77-89+321-322, "Robin Hood and the Monk" (1 text. Source not stated, but probably Skeat, with some modernization)

Whiting-TraditionalBritishBallads 27, "Robin Hood and the Monk" (1 text, Child's text, modernized)

Hodgart-FaberBookOfBallads, p. 81, "Robin Hood and the Monk" (1 text)

Wells-TheBalladTree, pp. pp. 25-34, "Robin Hood and the Monk" (1 text)

Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #1534

DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #2586

ADDITIONAL: R. B. Dobson and J. Taylor, _Rymes of Robyn Hood: An Introduction to the English Outlaw_, University of Pittsburg Press, 1976, pp. 115-122, "Robin Hood and the Monk" (1 text, newly edited from the manuscript)

Stephen Knight and Thomas Ohlgren, editors, _Robin Hood and Other Outlaw Tales_, TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2000, pp. 31-56, "Robin Hood and the Monk" (1 text, newly edited from the manuscript)

Iona & Peter Opie, The Oxford Book of Narrative Verse, pp. 22-32, "Robin Hood and the Monk" (1 text. modernized from Dobson & Taylor)

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #148, "In Summer" (1 fragment, consisting of the first five verses)

MANUSCRIPT: {MSCambridgeFf5.48}, Cambridge. University Library, MS. Ff.5.48, folio 128

MANUSCRIPT: London, British Library, Bagford Ballads i.6 (loose fragment)

Roud #3978

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Robin Hood and the Twenty Pounds of Gold (title used by Niles)

NOTES [2718 words]: This is considered by J. C. Holt (following Child and others), to be one of the five "basic" Robin Hood ballads. (For more details on the history of the legend see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117]). It is also, in terms of the date of the manuscript, widely regarded as the oldest surviving Robin Hood piece (though in fact, except for John Jacob Niles’s probable fake, it does not seem to survive outside the one manuscript). This point we will have cause to reconsider below.

Chambers, p. 153, makes another claim -- that this is, along with "Riddles Wisely Expounded" [Child 1] the oldest true popular ballad in the Child collection (both are found in manuscripts which have been dated c. 1450). All earlier ballad-like pieces he discounts as not truly folk. Since the text of "Riddles" he refers to is probably not ancestral to the later sun ballad, that would make this the oldest popular ballad in the Child collection.

Bronson observes that Chappell associated a tune with this piece, but that the association was Chappell's own, on weak grounds, and therefore does not cite the melody. The Opies, pp. 386-387, quote Dobson/Taylor, p. 113, to the effect that this was more likely recited than sung. This is clearly possible (indeed, the last stanza calls it a "talkyng," although that term can mean more than just speech), and certainly the length of the piece makes it nearly sure that it is a minstrel piece rather than a true ballad.

It has several times been noted (e.g. by Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 52) that this is much the most violent of the early Robin Hood tales, with no fewer than 15 people being killed, several of them, such as the Monk's page, being apparently innocent.

Apart from the loose page in the Bagford Ballads, which is too short to be of much help, we have only one copy of this, in the Cambridge manuscript.

The Cambridge manuscript, according to the Opies, p. 386, is sort of a do-it-yourself minstrel kit: 135 pages not only of tales but also prayers and prophecies, although Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 22, declares it as "a priest's anthology of texts which served his pastoral and personal needs." According to Dobson/Taylor, p. 114, both these suggestions come from pp. 80-81 of Fowler (whose chapter 3, pp. 65-93, is entitled "Rymes of Robyn Hood), though Fowler's main claim is that it "seems to have served primarily as a priest's source book." I would have to say that, at first glance, the hypothesis that it is a minstrel's book seems far more likely, since it also contains a version of "King Edward and the Shepherd" (a variant on "King Edward the Fourth and a Tanner of Tamworth" [Child 273]) and "The [T]ournament of Tottenham," a humorous romance which Sands, p. 314, files under "Burlesque and Grotesque" and suggests is a spoof on chivalry. It is hard to imagine what use a priest could make of these materials.

Furthermore, the pages of the manuscript were not ruled (Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 30). Professionally produced manuscripts tended to have lines and borders marked in with a sharp point or a piece of lead. The book does not appear to be the work of someone trained in a scriptorium -- an argument against a clerical source.

On the other hand, there were two main scribes involved in copying the manuscript (Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 29, although their assignment of scribes makes it appear that several folios were copied by a third scribe). This makes it effectively impossible to suppose that it is a single minstrel's collection of useful materials -- although it is possible that a later copyist took an existing book and added the final section (which contains "Tottenham," the "Monk," and several other pieces). However, the portions copied by both scribe A and scribe B are quite diverse and appear to represent similar interests. So odds are that both halves were compiled at the same time.

Ohlgren/Matheson, pp. 31-32, has a list of the manuscript's full contents; so also Hartshorne, pp. xi-xvii, with somewhat more detail. There are 28 surviving items by Ohlgren's count, 27 by Hartshorne (there are no titles, so the divisions between items can be arbitrary). Nearly half are clearly religious (Ohlgren/Matheson, p.32, counts 11 religious items, including instructions for parish priests, plus three cautionary exempla, although I question one or two of these). Five are prognostications or prophecies. A few are reference works. And then there are the romances. It's a very mixed bag, with several items a minstrel is unlikely to need (although, as already mentioned, it's hard to imagine a priest using some of them, either).

Ohlgren has a strong argument for the view that it was assembled for a priest, in that the manuscript contains an inscription by Gilbertus Pylkyngton (Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 21). If this is indeed the priest Gilbert Pilkington ordained 1465 in Lichfield, which seems reasonable, then the argument for a priestly owner is obviously very strong.

I should note, however, that the inscription (given on p. 33 of Ohlgren/Matheson) appears to be a scribal colophon rather than an inscription of ownership -- the formula is very close to that used at the end of Biblical manuscripts to declare the end of a book and give the scribe's name. Hartshorne, p. x, for instance, declares unequivocally that Pilkington is the scribe, not the owner (while denying the statement found in some sources that Pilkington authored the material in the manuscript).

What is more, it is not unknown for such colophons to be copied verbatim from a source manuscript to a copy. Yes, including the name of the original scribe! Ohlgren, pp. 33-35, mentions earlier discussions of this phenomenon, but doesn't really tell his readers how often it happened. Nor does he mention the existence of forged colophons. Colwell, pp. 142-147, demonstrates a case of a manuscript (designated 1505 in New Testament catalogs) written probably in or after 1445 C.E. which had a colophon claiming it was from the year 1084. The Latin Gospel Book of Dimma has a faked attribution to Dimma (Hopkins-James, p. xlvi). This list could easily be multiplied.

Odds are that Gilbert Pilkington was not famous enough to have manuscripts forged upon him. Still, that leaves us with three possibilities: That Pilkington owned the manuscript, that he wrote it, or that he wrote the copy of "The Northern Passion" to which the colophon is attached and which was copied verbatim into the Cambridge manuscript. As a minor variant on these, since the "Northern Passion" is a translation of a French original, it is not impossible that Pilkington was the translator.

Ohlgren/Matheson, pp. 24, 60-61, suggests that Pilkington was interested in the subject of sanctuary, which is abused in the "Monk," which is why he included the piece. This is possible, of course, but that's only a small part of the "Monk."

I am not saying that Ohlgren's suggestion is wrong; he may well be right. But the data is not sufficient to prove it.

If, however, the piece was copied because of the abuse of sanctuary, it might be a dating clue, because in 1471 the topic of sanctuary could have become very hot. In the aftermath of the Battle of Tewkesbury, a number of Lancastrian lords fled to Tewkesbury abbey. King Edward IV, who had firmly reclaimed his throne by winning at Tewkesbury, hauled them out, subjected them to brief trials, and executed them (Gillingham, p. 207).

There is agreement up to this point about Edward's actions. But there is no agreement at all as to whether Edward IV had the right to behave as he did. If Tewkesbury could be considered a sanctuary, then Edward's action was contrary to church and civil law. If this viewpoint is accepted, one might even consider the "Monk" to be a sort of allegory of Tewkesbury, only with a happy ending. Certainly the timing is about right.

Unfortunately for this argument, the issue of Tewkesbury as a sanctuary seems been more a matter of controversy to modern historians (most of them anxious to blacken Richard III, Edward's brother) than to contemporaries. Edward's contemporary apologist had pointed out that Tewkesbury abbey was not an accredited sanctuary, so Edward had the right to enter it and seize his opponents (Gillingham, p. 207; Kendall, pp. 119-120). Ross, p. 172, does not even mention the issue of sanctuary, although he does mention an oath by Edward IV to spare those inside (taken in ignorance that there were so many high-value rebels in the abbey). Warkworth's Chronicle, as cited by Dockray, p. 86, also mentions Edward's pardon but not the right of sanctuary. The Croyland Chronicle, one of the few inside sources, does not even mention the issue of the abbey (Dockray, p. 88).

On the whole, I think Ohlgren's argument about Sanctuary is weak, particularly since the "Monk" is from Scribe B and the "Passion" is from Scribe A, meaning that they might not have had the same interests. Yes, some churches had the right of sanctuary, and yes, there are instances of its abuse (both by those falsely claiming sanctuary and by those who forcibly took them out of sanctuary). But the Nottingham church mentioned in the "Monk" is unlikely to have had the right of sanctuary. Ohlgren (Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 62), devotes considerable detail to the wording of stanza 30/line 120, just before the first break in the text. He is convinced it reads that the first hand wrote that Robin ran into the STREET, but that this was corrected to into the CHURCH, implying that he sought sanctuary. But this is based only on visual scans of the old, damaged copy (more on this below).

On pp. 64-65 of Ohlgren/Matheson, Ohlgren suggests that the relationship between Robin and Little John has Biblical analogies, even mentioning Jesus and John the Baptist as an analogy. I firmly agree that there is much Biblical material adopted into the Robin Hood legend, especially the "Gest" (see the notes to the "Gest" regarding sources), but I really don't see any analogy in this instance, and even Ohlgren admits it is "not fully developed."

Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 47, suggests that the Tottenham material was included in the manuscript because the Church disapproved of tournaments and so would like a joke about them. Ohlgren on p. 55 points out that there are several Marian items in the Cambridge manuscript, so Robin's devotion to the Virgin might also explain why a priest would want such a piece.

Other notes about the manuscript: Sands, p. 313, says that "Tottenham" (which exists in two copies, both bad) is in a northern dialect, which is perhaps significant given that it is in the same manuscript as a Robin Hood poem. Matheson, in studying the "Monk" itself, notes that A Linguistic Atlas of Late Mediaeval English declares another part of the manuscript, the "Northern Passion," to be in the dialect of west Derbyshire (Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 194). On p. 199 of Ohlgren/Matheson, Matheson also declares for west Derbyshire as the source of the dialect in the "Monk" -- although we must always keep in mind that the dialect features might be from the author or from the scribe; all we can really say about the poem is that this seems to affirm a northern origin.

Although several sources have dated the manuscript c. 1450, as mentioned above, this dating is dubious -- sufficiently so that I have changed the "earliest date" from c. 1450 to c. 1475. Dobson/Taylor, p. 114, declare that the cursive style used in the book "would appear to date from the period after rather than before c. 1450, the date customarily assigned to it." And while I do not accept Ohlgren's hypothesis that Gilbert Pilkington wrote the volume, the fact that he was a scribe is named in a colophon makes it highly likely that the book was written after his 1465 ordination. This means that a date of 1450 is impossibly early. (Which in turn raises the possibility that the "Monk" is not the oldest copy of a Robin Hood poem after all.)

Hartshorne, p. xii, writing of the "Tale of King Edward and the Shepherd" in the Cambridge volume, says that the language may be "as old as Edward IV" (reigned 1461-1470 and 1471-1483). Of course there is very little to distinguish the language of the time of Edward IV from that of his immediate predecessors, but if the poem is truly of the time of Edward IV, then the poem can hardly have been copied before that!

Another argument about date comes from the contents of the book. Stephen Knight opined that the "cumly King" of stanzas 83-84 must be Edward IV; others have argued that Edward III was known as the "Comely King" (a description also used in stanza 353 of the "Gest"). For reasons described in the notes to the "Gest," I do not consider this at all compelling. Neither is "King Edward and the Shepherd" a guaranteed reference to Edward IV, since there seem to be versions of this story pointing to kings as early as Henry II (there is some discussion of this in Fowler, pp. 84-93). But probably the most common king in the piece is Edward IV, who, to repeat, reigned 1461-1470 and 1471-1483. The combined indications are that the manuscript dates not from c. 1450 but from some decades later, during the reign of Edward IV or one of his successors. Certainly there is nothing in the writing to preclude this.

The primary manuscript is in very poor shape; not only have two sections of the poem been entirely lost, but most of the rest is badly stained (a photo can be found on p. 63 of Ohlgren/Matheson). Dobson/Taylor, p. 114, say that the dump which so affected the page has not really made the manuscript illegible -- but it wasn't just damp. The manuscript had already been damaged in the time of Jamieson, and he responded by applying chemicals to the text (Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 30). It appears Jamieson didn't know which glop he was putting on the manuscript -- he just bought it from a bookseller. This is extremely unfortunate. Some of the reagents used in the nineteenth century include ammonic sulphydrate, potassium nitrate, potassium bisulfate, and Gioberti tincture -- successive coats of hydrochloric acid and potassium cyanide (!).

Supposedly (according Thompson, p. 65), the "most harmless [reagent] is probably hydro-sulphuret of ammonia." Similarly, M. R. James wrote that "ammonium bisulphide... unlike the old-fashioned galls, does not stain the page" (unfortunately, I have lost the exact source of this quote).

This will tell you how damaging were the other dozen or so reagents used in the nineteenth century. Hydro-sulphuret of ammonia is a hair dye, with acid properties. It is certainly capable of damaging manuscripts.

Whatever Jamieson used, it clearly stained the pages. On top of everything else, Jamieson didn't know how to apply the reagent he was given. Reagents should never be painted or brushed onto the manuscript; they should be patted on. But Jamieson clearly brushed his glop across the page, smearing the ink. If he hadn't called himself a scholar, the word "vandalism" would surely have applied.

Ohlgren, who had access to the manuscript, laments that it hasn't been given a better examination. Any Bible scholar, who has had to deal with numerous damaged manuscripts and palimpsests, can second this; I really wish someone would give it a good going-over with all the other tools of modern manuscript studies. Someone really, really, needs to photograph the manuscript under ultraviolet and infrared light!

There is another book about the volume, Janay Young Downing, A critical edition of Cambridge University MS FF. 5.48 (1969). I have not seen it; it seems to be unobtainable..

In incidental footnotes, this poem is quoted as the headnote of Chapter 24 ("Nuthanger Farm") in Richard Adams's beloved novel Watership Down. Also, one of the lines is "And Robin was in merry Sherwood, As light as leaf on lynde." (The "As light as leaf on lynde" line also occurs in "Adam Bell, Clim of the Clough, and William of Cloudesly" [Child 116], making me wonder if that piece didn't borrow it from a Robin Hood ballad.) I can't prove that they are connected, but one of J. R. R. Tolkien's earliest Middle-earth poems was "Light as Leaf on Lindentree," published in 1925 and apparently begun around 1919-1920 (ScullHammond, pp. 522-523). It is the first expression of the romance of Beren and Lúthien, one of the foundation-stones of his writings. - RBW

Bibliography

- Chambers: E. K. Chambers, English Literature at the Close of the Middle Ages, Oxford, 1945, 1947
- Gillingham: John Gillingham, The Wars of the Roses, Louisiana State University, 1984
- Ross: Charles Ross, Edward IV, 1974 (I use the 1997 paperback edition in the Yale English Monarch series with a new introduction by R. A. Griffiths)
- Sands: Donald B. Sands, editor, Middle English Verse Romances, Holt Rinehart and Winston, 1966
- Thompson: Sir Edward Maunde Thompson, An Introduction to Greek and Latin Paleography, Oxford, 1912 (I use the recent reprint, undated but probably from the 1990s)
Robin Hood and the Pedlars [Child 137]

DESCRIPTION: Robin Hood, Will Scarlett, and Little John try to stop three pedlars, succeeding only by sending an arrow into one of their packs. They fight. Robin appears to be slain. His antagonist administers a supposed healing balsam, making him puke on reviving.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1847 (Gutch)

KEYWORDS: Robin Hood fight injury medicine trick humorous

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Child 137, "Robin Hood and the Pedlars" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Stephen Knight and Thomas Ohlgren, editors, _Robin Hood and Other Outlaw Tales_. TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2000, pp. 626-632, "Robin Hood and the Pedlars" (1 text, which is a modernized version of Child's transcription)

Roud #3987

NOTES [165 words]: For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117].

Fully half the Robin Hood ballads in the Child collection (numbers 121 -- the earliest and most basic example of the type), 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 130, 131, 132, (133), (134), (135), (136), (137), (150)) share all or part of the theme of a stranger meeting and defeating Robin, and being invited to join his band. Most of these are late, but it makes one wonder if Robin ever won a battle. This is perhaps the ultimate example -- it has gone from Robin the excessively pugnacious to Robin the drug- addled. The date cannot be absolutely proved; the manuscript containing it has materials copied as early as the seventeenth century and as late as the nineteenth. This alleged ballad (really a farce) is in the nineteenth century portion, And it certainly feels nineteenth century -- frankly, in reading this, I feel like I'm reading Edward Lear. Not the content, of course, but the style.

- RBW

Robin Hood and the Potter [Child 121]

DESCRIPTION: A potter defeats Robin. Robin disguises himself as the potter. He sells pots in Nottingham, giving some to the Sheriff's wife. She invites him home. He offers to take the Sheriff to Robin. Robin robs the Sheriff, sending him home with a horse for his wife.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1795 (Ritson); manuscript copy almost certainly made by 1505, and probably before 1470

KEYWORDS: Robin Hood fight trick disguise gift MiddleEnglish

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (9 citations):
Child 121, "Robin Hood and the Potter" (1 text, with "The Playe of Robyn Hode" in an appendix)
Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 60-70, "Robyn Hode [and the Potter]" (1 text)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 352-360, "Robin Hood and the Potter" (1 text)
Niles-BalladBookOfJohnJacobNiles 44, "Robin Hood and the Potter" (1 text, 1 tune -- as dubious as any other JJN Robin Hood ballad. In this case, he claimed it was from, ahem, the wife of "Potsie" Cobb. Like the Niles text of "Robin Hood and the Monk," this text is a summarization of the plot of the Child version in what appears to be deliberately dumbed-down verse)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #1533
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #2585

ADDITIONAL: R. B. Dobson and J. Taylor, _Rymes of Robyn Hood: An Introduction to the English Outlaw_. University of Pittsburg Press, 1976, pp. 125-132, "Robin Hood and the Potter" (1 text, newly edited from the manuscript); also a facsimile of the first page of the manuscript facing p. 124

Stephen Knight and Thomas Ohlgren, editors, _Robin Hood and Other Outlaw Tales_. TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2000, pp. 57-79, "Robin Hood and the Potter" (1 text, newly edited from the MANUSCRIPT: {MsRichardCalle}, Cambridge, Cambridge University Library MS. Ee.4.35 (Part I), folio 14

Roud #3979

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Potter and Robin Hood

NOTES [2744 words]: This is considered by J. C. Holt (following Child and others), to be one of the five "basic" Robin Hood ballads. (For more details on the history of the early texts, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117]). Although early, the "Potter" can hardly be considered an original piece; there is a similar story told of Hereward the Wake, the English rebel against the Norman Conquest. Hereward, knowing an attack on his stronghold of Ely was coming, decided to try to spy out the plan. Leaving the island, he met a potter, and persuaded him to lend the outlaw enough pots to pretend to be a potter. Hereward then visited the Norman camp, and (pretending not to understand French) learned what he needed to learn to foil the plot (Keen, p. 18). On pp. 23-25, Keen notes that the story was also told of Eustace the Monk, who was constantly disguising himself in one way or another -- and Eustace wasn't even English; he was from Flanders. Clearly the tale was adapted to Robin Hood rather than original to him. It is widely stated that "Robin Hood and the Butcher" [Child 122] is an updated version of this song. This is highly likely, but, given the number of similar tales, we perhaps must consider the matter not quite proved; the "Butcher" might just possibly be derived from a tale of Hereward or Eustace or someone.

Fully half the Robin Hood ballads in the Child collection (numbers (121), 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 130, 131, 132, (133), (134), (135), (136), (137), (150), with this one being the earliest) share all or part of the theme of a stranger meeting and defeating Robin, and being invited to join his band. Most of the others are late, but it makes one wonder if Robin ever won a battle. Paul Stamler offers the following only-mildly-exaggerated description of the typical ballad of this type: "Robin Hood meets just about anyone and they quarrel about something really stupid. Robin picks a fight, and since the other person is always bigger, stronger, and a better fighter, he wins. Robin then makes nice with him and invites him to join all the other people who've beaten him up. Somewhere during all this, Robin raises an extremely symbolic horn to his lips. Privately, everyone in Robin's band agrees that Robin would do better if he stayed on his meds." This is probably the earliest, and in many ways the best, example of this genre, though it is hardly typical (since it has a second part dealing with the trick played on the Sheriff). This makes its date and origin a matter of real importance. In this case, we have more information than usual. The sole manuscript of the Potter, Cambridge Ms. EE.4.35, appears to have been owned by someone who wrote his name, in Latin, as Ricardo Calle; his merchant's mark and signature ("Iste liber constat Ricardo calle") is in the manuscript (a copy can be seen on p. 71 of Ohlgren/Matheson).

The hand used for this colophon is not overly neat, and I notice some minor differences with the letterforms used in the text of the "Potter" itself (there is a specimen facing p. 124 of Dobson/Taylor), but they are similar enough that they might be from the same scribe. (If so, then Calle was not the neatest writer; Dobson/Taylor, p. 124, say that the manuscript shows curious orthography and erroneous repetitions.)

I am not a paleographer, but the curved subscripts of the "Potter" manuscript clearly did not come into use until the fifteenth century and continued into the sixteenth (see the samples on pp. 480-490 and 540-560 of Thompson). Solely on the basis of the writing, a date c. 1500 for the manuscript (as given, e.g., by Child) seems about right.

So who was Ricardo Calle? Ohlgren believes the owner was a man he titles Richard Call, a servant of the Pastons of Norfolk (Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 21). We know a good deal about this Richard Call from other sources, although I've never seen another source use the surname "Call"; most give him the name "Calle" -- so e.g. Paston/Davis, p. 178; Caster, p. 131; Kendall, p. 394. The Pastons sometimes called him by the initials "R.C." (Paston/Davis, p. 177), but often spell it out as "Richard Calle"; (e.g. Fenn/Ramsay, vol. I p. 109); in vol. I p. 36, we find the man himself signing his name "Richard Calle". There are quite a few letters from Calle in the Paston correspondence (e.g. Paston/Davis, p. 17=Fenn/Ramsay, Vol. II, p. 25 is a love letter to Margery Paston). The earliest Robin Hood play, which parallels the story of "Robin Hood and Guy of Gisborne" [Child 118], also gives indications of being from the Paston archives, and we know that one of the Paston servants had played Robin Hood in a drama. Thus there is a strong Paston link to our earliest substantial Robin Hood materials, making it likely that the Pastons' Call, or some member of his family, was indeed the owner of the manuscript.
Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 72, suggests that Calle died some time after 1504, and conjectures that he was born around 1431. Castor, p. 215, suggest that he was in his late thirties when Margery Paston was 20 or 21, which comes to about the same date. He is first mentioned in one of the Paston letters from 1453 (Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 72). Paston/Davis, p. 61, says that he became head bailiff of the Paston lands around 1455, four years before the death of Sir John Fastolfe in 1459, which set in motion a decades-long inheritance problem involving the Pastons (and, as a result, Calle). Calle kept the post for at least a quarter of a century. The Pastons spent many years struggling to make good their claim to the Fastolfe inheritance (cf. Wagner, p. 196; Kendall, p. 394. According to Castor, pp. 155-156, Calle was imprisoned in 1461 as an innocent sort-of-bystander in the dispute).

In 1469, against the family's wishes, Calle married a Paston daughter. (John Paston III exploded to John Paston II, "he shall never have my good will for to make my sister to sell candle[s] and mustard at Framlingham"; Paston/Davis, p. 177=Fenn/Ramsay, vol. II, p. 24). Castor, p. 215, thinks that their anger was the result of a family which was itself newly risen in status not wishing to have any links to those of lower classes. But, given the state of the conflict between the Pastons and their neighbors, it appears Calle was vital enough to the Pastons that they did not deprive him of his office even though he had stolen their daughter (Kendall, p. 400).

There is no record of an earlier marriage for Calle, although it is hard to believe that a man who was seemingly adult in 1453 would have waited that long to become engaged. (Margery Paston was much younger; Castor, p. x, estimates her as born c. 1448 and most online estimates place her birth between 1447 and 1450.)

Richard Calle and Margery had three sons, John, William, and Richard, before Margery Paston Calle died, probably in or before 1482 (Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 73). Paston/Davis, p. xxix, states that she was dead by 1479; Castor, p. x, gives her death date as c. 1480. On p. 284, Castor adds that Margery was not included in her mother's 1482 will -- although she admits this might have been a matter of long-held pique over Margery's marriage. Their oldest son may have been named for her Paston grandfather or uncles; at least, when Margaret the mother of Margery died, she left the substantial sum of 20 pounds to John Calle son of Richard (Kendall, p. 400; Castor, p. 284).

Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 73, says that after Margery Paston died, Richard Calle remarried and had two additional sons, Andrew and John. There are sundry references to Richard Calle in rental records from 1508/1509, and a chancery reference that can be dated sometime between 1500 and 1515. We should note that the 1508/1509 reference is to Richard Call, not Calle (but, of course, spellings of names were not really standardized at that time).

There is another issue. The inscription in the "Potter" manuscript is not in the same hand as Richard Calle's letters in the Paston correspondence -- a point even Ohlgren admits (Ohlgren/Matheson, pp. 73-74), although his suggestion is that the scribe of the book added the inscription on Calle's behalf. This raises a real problem. Can we be certain that the Richard Calle of the Cambridge manuscript is the same as the Calle of the Paston letters? Many scholars have said they were not. It is true that there would not have been many literate Richard Calles in fifteenth and sixteenth century England -- but one who would have been literate was Richard Calle junior, the third son of Richard Calle and Margery Paston Calle.

This is an issue of significant concern, because there are three indications of date in the Cambridge manuscript. One, the weakest, is the handwriting, since it tells us little except that the book is probably fifteenth or sixteenth century. The second is the ownership mark of Richard Calle. The third is a precise but ambiguous date reference. The manuscript refers to the "espences of ffleshe at the mariage of my ladey Margaret, that sche had owt off Eynglonde." This has been taken to refer to the marriage of Margaret Tudor, the elder daughter of Henry VII of England, to James IV of Scotland in 1503 (Dobson/Taylor, p. 123). But if Ohlgren is right about Richard Calle Senior owning the manuscript, this would mean that Calle was about seventy at the time it was written -- not an impossible age, but hardly the way to bet. Ohlgren's data on Calle would have us believe he lived until at least 1508, but this is a weak reed.

There are two other possibilities: Either the Calle involved is Richard Calle junior (in which case all difficulties disappear, since he was probably born around 1475), or the Margaret is some other royal Margaret.

Ohlgren, even though he thinks Richard Calle senior was the owner of the book, plumps for the second possibility. Ohlgren/Matheson, pp. 21, suggest that the wedding involved was that of Margaret of York, the sister of King Edward IV, who married Charles Duke of Burgundy in 1468 (Wagner, p. 160). This certainly fits Calle senior's dates -- and there are references in the Paston letters to the event; Ohlgren suggests based on a few hints in the letters that Calle may even have been present (Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 75).
But the phrasing of the inscription is interesting. It sounds as if this Margaret had to be given some sort of grant to pay her expenses. This fits an earlier royal wedding, that between King Henry VI and Margaret of Anjou. Margaret brought no dowry at all, except a brief truce in the Hundred Years' War (Gillingham, p. 59), and even that was at the cost of major territorial concessions. And, because the English were broke, she had to be granted property in Lancashire to pay her expenses (Rubin, p. 231). The whole wedding was so obscure that most chroniclers didn't even know where it took place! This fits the description in the manuscript very well.

Admittedly the marriage took place in the 1440s, which is before any known references to Richard Calle, but this is not impossibly early. Thomas Wright, indeed, referred the manuscript of the "Potter" to the reign of Henry VI (1422-1461, briefly restored 1470-1471). Wright also dated the "Monk" to the reign of Edward II, a dating of which Dobson/Taylor, p. 123n1, are frankly contemptuous, but in the case of the "Potter" Wright may have been onto something.

"Robin Hood and the Monk" [Child 119] is usually described as the oldest Robin Hood ballad. But the strong evidence (discussed in the entry on that ballad) is that it must date from 1465 or after, later than the usual dating cited by Child, etc. If the Margaret of the inscription in the "Potter" is indeed Margaret of Anjou, then we must redate the "Potter" early enough to make it probably the earliest Robin Hood ballad, and it might be the earliest even if the Margaret of the inscription is Margaret of York.

Ohlgren quotes Julia Boffey as saying that the manuscript of the "Potter" appears to be the work of "someone used to writing [but] not a professional scribe" (Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 69). Based on the lack of ruling and other characteristics described by Boffey, this sounds right -- the scribe was literate, and indeed wrote quite frequently, but did not as a matter of course write books, and did not know the scribal methods of ruling the pages to assure an attractive result.

Turning to the manuscript's contents, Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 69, count no fewer than six different hands involved, although (based on Ohlgren/Matheson's folio count) the main hand is responsible for some 90% of the text, including the entire text of the "Potter" (the tenth of 17 items in the manuscript, based on the list on p. 70 of Knight/Matheson, and one of only two items in the book longer than three folio).

Several of the items are clearly for educating children. Others are religious -- one consists of four proverbs in English (at least two of which Richard Calle quoted to his wife in letters; Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 80). These appear, interestingly, to be from the Wycliffe translation -- which was, of course, very heterodox. It is also ironic, because "The Miracle of the Lady who Buried the Host" is a thoroughly unlikely justification of the doctrine of transubstantiation, which had been Catholic dogma since 1215 but which was denied by Wycliffe. All of these pieces, however, are short. The four longest pieces in the manuscript are the most interesting:

* "The Adulterous Falmouth Squire" -- a tale known in eight copies, and seemingly intended as an exemplum, or story with a moral attached. The key story involves two brothers who die on the same day. The younger, who was innocent of fornication, is in heaven; the older, who was an adulterer, is in hell suffering extreme torture.
* "The Cheylde and hes Stepdame" -- Otherwise known as "The Frere/Friar and the Boy." This too was popular enough to be found in multiple manuscripts, and was printed by Wynken de Worde, perhaps around 1500. A more recent version is found on pp. 250-254 of Briggs. Asbjornsen and Moe had a Norwegian version known in translation as "Little Freddie and His Fiddle." This is interesting in light of Calle's marital story, because it is a tale of a boy with a wicked stepmother, who one day shares his meal with a stranger and is rewarded with gifts (a bow that cannot miss, and a pipe that always makes the hearers dance, plus the power to cause his stepmother to break wind or, in cleaned-up versions, suffer laughing fits) which save him from his troubles. Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 85, say that the version in the Cambridge MS. has a different ending from the usual versions. It is fascinating to note that another copy of "The Friar and the Boy" was also bound with the Wynken de Worde print of the "Gest" (Ohlgren/Matheson, p. 117).
* "Robin Hode and the Potter"
* "The Kynge and the Barker." A unique text, printed by Child as an appendix to "King Edward the Fourth and a Tanner of Tamworth" [Child 273], it is one of the many sorts of tales of a commoner meeting the king in disguise. Child considers it to be ancestral to ballad #273, although he says that it has been much modified over time.

Ohlgren sees many reasons why Richard Calle might have liked the tale of the "Potter." Ohlgren/Matheson, pp. 25, 82, suggests that Calle had reason to enjoy the idea of a sheriff being outwitted, having himself suffered badly at the hands of a sheriff during the interminable conflicts between the Paston family and the other Norfolk landowners -- he even expressed a hope for a better sheriff in future. And on pp. 80-81 Ohlgren argues that Calle would have liked the image of Robin flirting with the sheriff's wife, a woman above his station, just as Calle courted Margery Paston. He also thinks this might have influenced Calle's decision to include "The Cheylde and the Stepdame."

On the other hand, the "Potter" also sees Robin Hood violating the standards of the merchant class by selling pots too cheaply (charging just three pennies rather than the usual five). Ohlgren/Matheson, pp. 88-89, thinks Calle would approve of this trickery, but I strongly doubt that a man from a family of grocers would like being so badly undercut. And on pp. 89-90, Ohlgren starts edging toward claiming Robin Hood learned game theory, or at least Adam Smith style economics, in the course of the ballad. This would perhaps be possible in the Tudor era, when the great joint stock companies were formed, but this goes against Ohlgren's claim of a Yorkist date.—RBW

Bibliography

- Briggs: Katherine Briggs, British Folktales (originally published in 1970 as A Dictionary of British Folk-Tales), revised 1977 (I use the 1977 Pantheon paperback edition)
- Castor: Helen Castor, Blood & Roses: The Paston Family in the Fifteenth Century, Faber & Faber, 2004
- Fenn/Ramsay: John Fenn, editor, revised by A. Ramsay, Paston Letters, two volumes, Charles Knight & Co., 1840 ("Digitized by Google." The Google edition combines both files in one PDF; page references are to volume I or II and page)
- Gillingham: John Gillingham, The Wars of the Roses, Louisiana State University, 1984
- Rubin: Miri Rubin, The Hollow Crown: A History of Britain in the Late Middle Ages, Penguin, 2005
- Thompson: Sir Edward Maunde Thompson, An Introduction to Greek and Latin Paleography, Oxford, 1912 (I use the recent reprint, undated but probably from the 1990s)

Last updated in version 5.3
File: C121

Robin Hood and the Prince of Aragon [Child 129]

DESCRIPTION: Aragon has encircled London, demanding its princess, unless three champions defeat him and his two giants. Robin Hood, Little John, and Robin's nephew Will Scadlock do so, gaining pardon. Will gains the princess and is reunited with his father.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1749; it was in William Thackeray's broadside catalog by 1690

KEYWORDS: Robinhood fight royalty pardon

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Child 129, "Robin Hood and the Prince of Aragon" (1 text)
- Bronson 129, "Robin Hood and the Prince of Aragon" (1 version)
- Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-BritishBalladsFromMaine pp. 233-240, "Robin Hood and the Prince of Aragon" (1 text, 1 tune, which even the editors admit is full of absurdities and whose verses Bronson calls "rather deplorable") (Bronson's [#1])
- Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, RZN18, "Now Robin Hood, Will Scadlock, and little John"
- Roud #3983

NOTES [271 words]: For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117].
This is an instance where oral tradition didn't do anything for a ballad; Child calls his text vapid, and the New Brunswick version from J. P. A. Nesbitt (found in Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth) could almost be held up as an example of "when ballads go bad."

It is probably obvious that there isn't a hint of history in this ballad; the attacker in the ballad is a Turk, but Aragon was a Christian state, centered around Barcelona. The Aragonese could not have hoped to attack England until after the union with Spain.

The whole business might have been suggested by the bad blood between Spain and England over the marriage of Henry VIII and Catherine of Aragon -- but that of course didn't end in invasion. Oh, plus there was no earldom of "Maxfield" in the Robin Hood era.

There are any number of other anachronisms and absurdities in the ballad, but it's really not worth the effort to document them.

Personally, I suspect that name "Aragon" is an error of hearing for "Ottoman." This would explain how the prince can be an infidel. (True, Spain had been for a time held by Moslems, but it wasn't called Aragon then!). But what can we have but scorn for a balladeer who heard the name "Ottoman" and confused it with "Aragon"? Obviously there is no truth in the thing. Especially since the Ottoman Empire did not conquer Constantinople until 1453, well after Robin Hood's latest possible date, and although the Ottomans eventually threatened Christian Western Europe, they were no threat to the west until after Byzantium fell. - RBW

Robin Hood and the Ranger [Child 131]

DESCRIPTION: Robin is stopped from killing a deer by a forester. They fight. Robin is bested and offers the other a place in his band. He blows his horn to summon his men, the forester joins them, and all celebrate.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1777
KEYWORDS: Robinhood fight
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Child 131, "Robin Hood and the Ranger" (1 text)
Bronson 131, "Robin Hood and the Ranger" (2 versions)
Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 198-201, "Robin Hood and the Ranger" (1 text)

Roud #933

NOTES [259 words]: For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117].
There is a curiosity about this piece, since the title in the garlands is "Robin Hood and the Ranger," yet the song consistently calls Robin's opponent a "forester." The latter is much the older title, dating back to Norman times; Charles R. Young, The Royal Forests of Medieval England, University of Pennsylvania Press, 1979, p. 163, notes that the office of ranger seems to have been instituted in the early fourteenth century, with the first clear and dated reference being from 1341. Thus if Robin meets a ranger, he cannot have been from the time of Richard I; he would have to be from the reign of Edward II or later, with Edward III the most likely king. But since the reference to a ranger is only in the title, which presumably was applied to the piece long after the history of rangers had been forgotten, it tells us nothing.

We do note that the office of ranger seems, from an early date, to have paid better than the office of forester (Young, p. 164). Thus a ranger would presumably be much less willing to join Robin's band than a forester.

Fully half the Robin Hood ballads in the Child collection (numbers (121 -- the earliest and most basic example of the type), 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 130, 131, 132, (133), (134), (135), (136), (137), (150)) share all or part of the theme of a stranger meeting and defeating Robin, and being invited to join his band. Most of these are late, but it makes one wonder if Robin ever won a battle.

-RBW

Robin Hood and the Scotchman [Child 130]

DESCRIPTION: "Bold Robin Hood to the north he would go... with valour and mickle might... To fight and recover his right." Robin meets a Scotsman, and offers him a job providing he can pass a test of strength. The Scot pummels Robin and joins his band

 Robin and the Tanner [Child 126]

DESCRIPTION: Robin Hood meets a tanner in the woods; they fight. After two hours Robin blows his horn. Little John comes running; Robin says the other has tanned his (Robin's) hide. Little John offers to continue the battle; Robin says no, praising the tanner's skill.

Robin Hood and the Shepherd [Child 135]

DESCRIPTION: Robin comes upon a shepherd and demands to know the contents of his bag and bottle. The shepherd defies him. They fight. The shepherd wins. Robin blows his horn. Little John answers the call but the shepherd thrashes him as well.

Knight, p. 34, does make the interesting note that this is one of the few ballads of Robin meeting his match in which nothing happens afterward -- it is just a story about a fight. Child considered to be a particularly feeble example of the genre as a result. - RBW

Roud #3985
NOTES [126 words]: For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117].

Fully half the Robin Hood ballads in the Child collection (numbers (121 -- the earliest and most basic example of the type), 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 130, 131, 132, (133), (134), (135), (136), (137), (150)) share all or part of the theme of a stranger meeting and defeating Robin, and being invited to join his band. Most of these are late, but it makes one wonder if Robin ever won a battle.

Knight, p. 34, does make the interesting note that this is one of the few ballads of Robin meeting his match in which nothing happens afterward -- it is just a story about a fight. Child considered to be a particularly feeble example of the genre as a result. - RBW

File: C135

Robin Hood and the Tanner [Child 126]

DESCRIPTION: Robin Hood meets a tanner in the woods; they fight. After two hours Robin blows his horn. Little John comes running; Robin says the other has tanned his (Robin's) hide. Little John offers to continue the battle; Robin says no, praising the tanner's skill.

Robin Hood and the Tanner [Child 126]

DESCRIPTION: Robin Hood meets a tanner in the woods; they fight. After two hours Robin blows his horn. Little John comes running; Robin says the other has tanned his (Robin's) hide. Little John offers to continue the battle; Robin says no, praising the tanner's skill.

Robin Hood and the Tanner [Child 126]

DESCRIPTION: Robin Hood meets a tanner in the woods; they fight. After two hours Robin blows his horn. Little John comes running; Robin says the other has tanned his (Robin's) hide. Little John offers to continue the battle; Robin says no, praising the tanner's skill.

Robin Hood and the Tanner [Child 126]

DESCRIPTION: Robin Hood meets a tanner in the woods; they fight. After two hours Robin blows his horn. Little John comes running; Robin says the other has tanned his (Robin's) hide. Little John offers to continue the battle; Robin says no, praising the tanner's skill.

Robin Hood and the Tanner [Child 126]

DESCRIPTION: Robin Hood meets a tanner in the woods; they fight. After two hours Robin blows his horn. Little John comes running; Robin says the other has tanned his (Robin's) hide. Little John offers to continue the battle; Robin says no, praising the tanner's skill.

Robin Hood and the Tanner [Child 126]

DESCRIPTION: Robin Hood meets a tanner in the woods; they fight. After two hours Robin blows his horn. Little John comes running; Robin says the other has tanned his (Robin's) hide. Little John offers to continue the battle; Robin says no, praising the tanner's skill.
Robin Hood and the Tinker [Child 127]

DESCRIPTION: A Tinker asks help arresting Robin Hood for 100 pounds. Robin tricks him into drinking himself to sleep. On waking he learns his companion was Robin. He finds Robin; they fight. Robin yields, then blows his horn for reinforcements. The Tinker joins them.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1777; c. 1670 (Forresters manuscript); it was in William Thackeray's broadside
Robin Hood and the Valiant Knight [Child 153]

DESCRIPTION: The king sends a knight with 100 to arrest Robin. The knight goes alone to Robin to request surrender. Robin refuses and battle ensues. The knight (retires/is killed) but Robin, wounded, sends for a monk whose bloodletting ends his life. The men scatter.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1741

KEYWORDS: Robinhood knight battle injury death clergy

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (4 citations):

Child 153, "Robin Hood and the Valiant Knight" (1 text)
Bronson 152, comments only

Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 228-230, "Robin Hood and the Valiant Knight" (1 text)

Roud #3995

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Robin Hood's Death" [Child 120] (subject)

NOTES [161 words]: We've all heard of revisionist history, but whoever heard of revisionist mythology? Child comments, "Written, perhaps, because it was thought that authority should in the end be vindicated against outlaws, which may explain why this piece surpasses in platitude everything that goes before." Dobson and Taylor declare, "this song certainly has strong claims to be regarded as the least distinguished Robin Hood ballad ever composed." And, indeed, how many ballads include a rhymed version of a epitaph?

It will be noted that this contradicts the standard legend of Robin Hood's death, long since established by Child #117 and Child #120.

I also noted that the metre matches that of the "Yarn of the Nancy Bell." Suitable, for such a piece of accidental humor. I find it amazing that it was actually printed multiple times. Forget the story. It just plain sounds stupid.

For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117]. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: C153
Robin Hood in Greenwood Stood

DESCRIPTION: "Robyn hod in scherewod stod hodud and hathud hosut and schof flour, And thuynti arowus he bar In hits hodus." Or "Robyn hode Inne Greenwode Stode, Godeman was hee." Or he might stand in Barnsdale. Or elsewhere

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE:

KEYWORDS: Robinhood MiddleEnglish

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (6 citations): Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #1830.5
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #4508 [the Barnsdale version, attributed to John Rastell], #4509 [the "schere wod"/Sherwood version

Karin Boklund-Lagopolou, _I have a yong suster: Popular song and Middle English lyric_, Four Courts Press, 2002, p. 93, "(no title)" (1 text)

MANUSCRIPT: New Haven, Yale University, Beinecke Library, MS. Takamiya Deposit 51 [Sotheby's, 24 June 1980, lot 33], folio 1 [DIMEV #4508]
MANUSCRIPT: Lincoln, Lincoln Cathedral Library MS. 132, folio 100 [DIMEV #4509, with Latin parallel]

NOTES [440 words]: This is an entry made based on speculation. There is no extant ballad "Robin Hood in Greenwood Stood." It was Wilson, p. 139, who suggested, correctly I think, that this text is all that remains of a lost ballad.

The evidence for oral transmission comes from the fact that there are diverse copies of the text. The first text quoted in the description is from MS. Lincoln Cathedral 132, which also has the text in a Latin translation. They are written on what seems to have originally been a blank page. The fact that the Lincoln Manuscript places Robin in Sherwood is interesting, since most early ballads put him in Barnsdale, but unless the graffito can be firmly dated, it does not prove that Robin was associated with Sherwood at an early date. The best guess as to the date is early fifteenth century (Wilson, p. 140); Boklund-Lagopolou, p. 93, quotes a date of c. 1410. The only other piece of Middle English poetry in the manuscript is also an English/Latin diglot.

The second text in the description is from a Wiltshire parliamentary roll for 1432, which lists as participants "Adam, Belle, Clyme, Ocluw, Willyam, Cloudeles, Robyn, hode, Inne, Grenewode, stode, Godeman, was hee, lytel, Joon, Muchette, Millerssou, Scathlok, Reynoldyn" (Public Records Office C219/14/3, part 2, number 101; Holt, p. 69; there is a very poor facsimile on p. 70). Thus in 1432, Robin wasn't in Sherwood, he was just in the greenwood in general.

The Barnsdale version also occurs in a manuscript fragment sold at Sotheby's in 1980 and now in the Yale University Library; I know very little about this particular version, which has a different second line, or the manuscript containing it.

In 1429, the phrase "Robin Hode en Barnysdale stode" was, for some reason, used as a legal formula (Dobson/Taylor, p. 3), and apparently was quoted many times in legal contexts after that, although no one seems to know why. This probably explains the John Rastell quotation cited in the references; Rastell printed a lot of legal books and may have been trained in the law (Plomer, p. 51).

Fowler, p. 70, mentions a version "Robyn Hode in Barnysdale Stood, mentioned in Nicholas Udall's 1542 version of Erasmi Apothegmata. Thus we eventually find Robin in both the forests he haunts in ballads, plus generically in the greenwood. Fowler, p. 159 n. 28 says that this was printed by John Rastell, who was not of the Wynkyn de Worde/Robert Copland/William Copland connection responsible for most of our early Robin Hood prints.

Thus, although we don't know what the original of this was about, or when it originated, it seems to have been widely perpetuated. - RBW

Bibliography

- Boklund-Lagopolou: Karin Boklund-Lagopolou, I have a yong suster: Popular song and Middle English lyric, Four Courts Press, 2002
Robin Hood Newly Revived [Child 128]

DESCRIPTION: Robin sees a young man skillfully kill a deer, offers him a place, is answered disdainfully. They fight. Impressed, Robin asks the stranger who he is. He is Robin's sister's son, who has slain his father's steward. Robin makes him next under Little John

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1663 (Garland)

KEYWORDS: Robinhood fight family

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (9 citations):

Child 128, "Robin Hood Newly Revived" (1 text)
Bronson 128, comments only
Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 152-163, "Robin Hood and the Stranger" (1 text)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 380-383, "Robin Hood Newly Revived" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, RZN7, "Come listen a while you Gentlemen all"
DT 128, RHNEWREV

ADDITIONAL: Stephen Knight, editor (with a manuscript description by Hilton Kelliher), _Robin Hood: The Forresters Manuscript_ (British Library Additional MS 71158), D. S. Brewer, 1998, pp. 101-104, "Robin Hood and the Stranger" (1 text)
Stephen Knight and Thomas Ohlgren, editors, _Robin Hood and Other Outlaw Tales_., TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2000, pp. 499-506, "Robin Hood and Will Scarlet" (1 text, based on the Onley broadside)
MANUSCRIPT: {MSForresters}, London, British Library MS. Additional 71158, the "Foresters Manuscript," item 16
Roud #3956

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Bold Pedlar and Robin Hood" [Child 132] (theme)

NOTES [237 words]: For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117].

Fully half the Robin Hood ballads in the Child collection (numbers (121 -- the earliest and most basic example of the type), 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 130, 131, 132, (133), (134), (135), (136), (137), (150)) share all or part of the theme of a stranger meeting and defeating Robin, and being invited to join his band. Most of these are late, but it makes one wonder if Robin ever won a battle. This particular Robin Hood ballad does have interesting aspects, however. Robin's unknown opponent turns out to be Young Gamwell, his nephew -- a name possibly related to Gandelyn, hero of the romance of the same name. And he is taken into the band as Will Scarlet -- and the earliest ballad versions of Robin Hood's band seems to have consisted of four men, Robin, Little John, Much the Miller's Son, and Will Scarlock/Scathelock/Scarlet. This raises the possibility that there is some old tradition behind the broadsides. The language of the ballad, however, can hardly be older than the seventeenth century, and the poetry is poor.

There is some dispute about the relationship between this song and "The Bold Pedlar and Robin Hood" [Child 132]; see the notes to that song.

The Forresters manuscript is one of several sources to call this "Robin Hood and the Stranger," but it is likely that several pieces used that name. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: C128

Robin Hood Rescuing Three Squires [Child 140]

DESCRIPTION: Robin learns from (a women/their mother) that three men are to be hanged for deer-killing. He meets a (palmer/beggar) who confirms this. Robin insists on trading clothes, goes disguised to Nottingham, blows his horn for his men, and rescues the three.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1750 (Percy Folio)
KEYWORDS: Robinhood execution disguise rescue
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,South,West),Scotland) US(NE,SE)
REFERENCES (22 citations):
Child 140, "Robin Hood Rescuing Three Squires" (4 texts)
Bronson 140, "Robin Hood Rescuing Three Squires" (7 versions+2 in addenda) {Bronson's #3}
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 140, "Robin Hood Rescuing Three Squires" (3 versions: #3, #5.1, #7)
Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume I, pp. 13-18, "Robin Hood, A Beggar, & the Three Squires" (1 text, with a text of "Robin Hood and the Beggar"=Robin Hood and the Beggar (I) [Child 133] in the notes)
Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 210-214, "Robin Hood Rescuing the Widow's Three Songs from the Sheriff When Going to be Executed" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan2 243 (plus 1 verse on p. 547), "Robin Hood and the Squires" (2 texts)
O'Shaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart2 42, "Robin Hood Rescuing Three Squires" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #32, "Robin Hood and the Three Squires" (1 text, 1 tune)
Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-BritishBalladsFromMaine pp. 2420-242, "Robin Hood Rescuing Three Squires" (1 text)
Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland, pp. 69-72, "Bold Robin Hood Rescuing the Three Squires" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #2}
Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland3, pp. 107-116, "Robin Hood Rescuing Three Squires" (3 texts, with A1 and A2 being variant versions from the same informant, 1 tune) {Bronson's #2, with some small variants}
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 140, "Robin Hood Rescuing Three Squires" (1 text with variants from several performances by the same informant)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 33, "Robin Hood Rescuing Three Squires" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 341, "Robin Hood Rescuing Three Squires" (1 text)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 122, "Robin Hood and the Widow's Three Sons" (1 text)
Grison-PenguinBookOfBallads 69, "Robin Hood and the Sheriff" (1 text)
Niles-BalladBookOfJohnJacobNiles 47, "Robin Hood Rescuing Three Squires" (2 texts, 2 tunes, the second perhaps being mixed with Child 143)
Chase-AmericanFolkTalesAndSongs, pp. 124-126, "Bold Robin Hood" (1 text, 1 tune, clearly this piece although it has many floating lyrics, e.g. from "The House Carpenter") {Bronson's #4}
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 87-90, "Robin Hood Rescuing Three Squires" (1 text)
DT 140, RH3SQUIR*
ADDITIONAL: Stephen Knight and Thomas Ohlgren, editors, _Robin Hood and Other Outlaw Tales_, TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2000, pp. 476-485, "Robin Hood Rescues Three Young Men" (1 text,based on one of the garlands)
Roud #71
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Robin Hood and the Old Maid
Robin Hood and the Old Woman
NOTES [338 words]: For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117].
Knight/Ohlgren, p. 513, notes the interesting fact that this is the only ballad incident to appear in the plays of Anthony Munday, who seems to have distorted the Robin Hood legend into a very different (and less attractive) direction after the appearance of his plays in 1598-1599.
Knight/Ohlgren think that Munday borrowed the story. I am not sure I agree. The ballad feels like a seventeenth, or even eighteenth, century composition, by a literary hack who is trying to imitate true ballad style (and not succeeding very well). I would not be surprised if the poem takes the incident from Munday rather than the reverse.
And yet, it is Child's opinion that "Robin Hood Rescuing Will Stutly" [Child 141] is an "imitation" of this piece, which means it must predate the 1663 garland which contains "Will Stutly." Also, there are several garland prints of this, all undated, but this strongly hints at a date before 1675. Possibly well before.
Even so, it's odd that this relatively weak piece is one of the few Robin Hood ballads to survive into the twentieth century, and is one of the popular, if not the most popular, in the canon.
The relevant portion of Munday's "The Downfall of Robert, Earle of Huntington" is scene 7, starting on p. 329 in Knight/Ohlgren; the scene begins with line 910, and in the Knight/Ohlgren text opens

Warman
Master Frier, be briefe, delay no time.
Scarlet and Scathlock, never hope for life.
Here is the place of execution,
And you must answere lawe for what is done.
Note the curious fact that Munday has turned Scarlet and Scathelock (the forerunner of Will Scarlet; we meet Scathelock in the "Gest of Robyn Hode") into two separate people!
Both "Robin Hood Rescuing Three Squires" [Child 140] and "Robin Hood Rescuing Will Stutly" [Child 141] open with variants on "Robin Hood in [the] greenwood stood," but this line is very much older; see the (shadow) entry for "Robin Hood in Greenwood Stood." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
File: C140

Robin Hood Rescuing Will Stutly [Child 141]

DESCRIPTION: One of Robin's men, Will Stutly, is to be hanged. Robin and his men swear to rescue him or die trying. At the gallows Little John leaps from a bush, unbinds Will, and gives him a sword. They fight back to back as the archers chase the sheriff and his men

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1663 (garland)

KEYWORDS: Robinhood execution rescue fight

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (11 citations):
Child 141, "Robin Hood Rescuing Will Stutly" (1 text)
Bronson 141, "Robin Hood Rescuing Will Stutly" (1 version)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 141, "Robin Hood Rescuing Will Stutly" (1 version)
Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 178-183, "Robn Hoods (sic.) Rescuing Will Stutly" (1 text)
Davis-TraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 32, "Robin Hood Rescuing Will Stutly" (1 text, 1 tune entitled "The Rescue of Will Stutly") {Bronson's [#1]}
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 402-403, "Robin Hood Rescuing Will Stutly" (1 text)
Wells-TheBalladTree, before p. 213, "Robin Hood's Rescuing Will Stutly" (reproduction of a broadside text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, RZN21, "When Robin Hood in the Green wood"
DT 141, ROBHDSST*

ADDITIONAL: Stephen Knight, editor (with a manuscript description by Hilton Kelliher), _Robin Hood: The Forrester's Manuscript_ (British Library Additional MS 71158), D. S. Brewer, 1998, pp. 93-97, "Robin Hood and Will Scathlock" (1 text)
MANUSCRIPT: {MSForresters}, London, British Library MS. Additional 71158, the "Forresters Manuscript, item 15
Roud #3957

NOTES [159 words]: For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117].
Child considers this to be an "imitation" of "Robin Hood Rescuing Three Squires [Child 140]." One or the other of these seems to have been known to the author of the Sloane MS. life of Robin (British Library, Sloane MS. 780), which presumably would date the story (as opposed to the song) before 1600.
Note that the Forresters version makes the victim "Will Scathlock," another name for the man whose name was eventually fixed as "Scarlet," rather than Will Stut(e)ly, who is unknown in the older tradition.
The broadside in Wells-TheBalladTree lists the tune as "Robin Hood and Queen Catherine."
Both "Robin Hood Rescuing Three Squires" [Child 140] and "Robin Hood Rescuing Will Stutly" [Child 141] open with variants on "Robin Hood in [the] greenwood stood," but this line is very much older; see the (shadow) entry for "Robin Hood in Greenwood Stood." - RBW
Robin Hood Was a Forrester Bold

DESCRIPTION: "O Robin Hood was a forrester good As ever drew bow in a merry greenwood, And the wild deer will follow, will follow." "Little John with his arms so long, He conquered them all with his high ding dong, And the bugles did echo, did echo."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1829 (_The Young Lady's Book_)

LONG DESCRIPTION: "(O/Bold) Robin Hood was a forrester good As ever drew bow in a merry greenwood, And the wild deer will follow, will follow." "Little John with his arms so long, He conquered them all with his high ding dong, And the bugles did echo, did echo." We'll follow the summons of the bugle to hunt the deer. A friar "absolves all your sins" and routs his squire's foes with his oak stick. Mary, the forester's pride, is "the queen of all beauty"

KEYWORDS: Robinhood

FOUND IN: US(Ap) Britain(England)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 34, "Robin Hood" (text)
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 237, "Bold Robin Hood" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 390)
ADDITIONAL: _The Young Lady's Book_ (London, 1829 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 419, ("Oh, bold Robin Hood, was a forrester good") (1 verse)
The Quaver; or Songster's Pocket Companion (London, 1844 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 223, "Bold Robin Hood" (1 text)

Roud #1303

NOTES [131 words]: Cox's text is only a fragment of what was presumably a longer ballad (probably a late broadside, though I find no reference in the Broadside Ballad Index to this particular text). It doesn't look like any of the Child "Robin Hood" ballads, either. But it is traditional, so here it sits until someone figures out its ancestry. - RBW

If the Quaver text of three verses is the source for current versions it shows that this is not a Robin Hood ballad fragment. See the following note. "The regimental march of the Royal Sherwood Foresters was arranged ... from the old English glee, 'Bold Robin Hood was a Forester good'" (source: A.E. Lawson Lowe, Historical Record of the Royal Sherwood Foresters; or Nottingham Regiment of Militia (London, 1872 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 60fn). - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: JHCox034

Robin Hood's Birth, Breeding, Valor, and Marriage [Child 149]

DESCRIPTION: Robin and his mother visit her brother, who makes Robin his heir and gives him Little John as a page. Robin takes Little John to his band in the forest. He meets shepherd Clorinda who impresses by shooting a buck. They go to Titbury feast and are married.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1716; Wing dated one of the broadsides before 1685, according to Knight/Ohlgren

KEYWORDS: Robinhood family mother brother servant outlaw marriage

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Child 149, "Robin Hood's Birth, Breeding, Valor and Marriage" (1 text)
Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 107-114, "RObin Hoods Birth, Breeding, Valour, and Marriage" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, RZN17, "Kind gentlemen will you be patient awhile"

ADDITIONAL: Stephen Knight and Thomas Ohlgren, editors, _Robin Hood and Other Outlaw Tales_, TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2000, pp. 527-540, "Robin Hood's Birth, Breeding, Valour, and Marriage" (1 text, based primarily on the Roxburghe copy)

Roud #3991

NOTES [420 words]: Child notes that this ballad has several elements at variance with the bulk of the Robin Hood tradition. - KK
That is being very polite to a rather dreadful piece of hack work. For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117]. As for this monstrosity, well, Child gave it a bit of what it deserves when he notes that "The jocular author of this ballad... would certainly have been diverted by any one's supposing him to write under the restraints of tradition." Knight/Ohlgren, p. 527, note that the texts borrows many materials not in the Robin Hood tradition, and concludes with a hope that the King will have heirs. They suggest that this is a wish for Charles II (reigned 1660-1685), who in fact had no legitimate children, which caused the throne to go to his Catholic brother James and eventually producing the Glorious Revolution. This seems highly likely, but is not a logical necessity, since there were other childless English kings. One of them, of course, was Richard I, who by the mid-seventeenth century had become the usual King of the Robin Hood story. The ballad implies that Robin is no longer a pure yeoman, as he was in the early ballads; he is the nephew of a "Squire Gamwell" (compare the Young Gamwell of "Robin Hood Newly Revived" [Child 128]), and his mother is the niece of the romance hero Guy of Warwick. The song rings in not only the Pindar of Wakefield but also Adam Bell and Company. To top it all off, Robin's love is not Maid Marian (who, admittedly, is no part of the early legend, but at least comes from the May Games) but Clarinda (Queen) of the Shepherdesses. Just in case that isn't unreality enough for you, consider the claim in the third stanza that Robin's father could should an arrow a distance of two miles and an inch. (It would never do to forget the inch!) Of course, a little work with the basic formulae of physics shows that, if we assume no air resistance and that Robin's father shot at an exact 45 degree angle (the optimal angle for propelling an object the maximum distance), the arrow would have needed an initial velocity of about 177 meters per second to cover that distance before falling to earth. That's about 635 kilometers per hour. Or 380 miles per hour. I don't know the ballistic properties of an arrow well enough to calculate the effects of air resistance, but I would estimate that, in English conditions, the arrow would have to be fired at least 900 kilometers per hour/550 miles per hour. Right. - RBW

Robin Hood's Chase [Child 146]

DESCRIPTION: Robin leaves London after the feats of Child 145. The king, repenting of his pardon, goes after him. Robin leads a chase through many towns, back to London, then to Sherwood. The king returns to London to learn cunning Robin had sought him there.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1663 (garland)

KEYWORDS: Robinhood royalty escape

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Child 146, "Robin Hood's Chase" (1 text)
Bronson 146 comments only
Ridson-RobinHood, pp. 170-173, "Robin Hoods Chase" (1 text)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 418-420, "Robin Hood's Chase" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, RZN9, "Come you gallants all, to you I do call"

ADDITIONAL: Stephen Knight, editor (with a manuscript description by Hilton Kelliher), _Robin Hood: The Forresters Manuscript_ (British Library Additional MS 71158), D. S. Brewer, 1998, pp. 123-126, "Robin Hoods Chase" (1 text, close to the 1670 garland)

MANUSCRIPT: {MSForresters}, London, British Library MS. Additional 71158, the "Foresters Manuscript," item 19

Roud #3989

NOTES [85 words]: It should perhaps be noted that the wife of Henry II (the "King Henry" of most Robin Hood ballads; reigned 1154-1189) was named Eleanor. The first Henry to have a wife named Katherine was Henry V (reigned 1413-1422); Henry VIII (1513-1547) married several Katharines. But both these kings are far too late for Robin Hood's era. For further details, see the entry on "Robin Hood and Queen Katherine" [Child 145].

For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117]. - RBW
Robin Hood's Death [Child 120]

DESCRIPTION: Robin Hood, feeling ill, travels to (Kirkly-hall) to be blooded. The prioress sets out to bleed him to death. Only as he nears death does Robin realize what is happening; he calls to Little John. It is too late to save Robin; he arranges for his burial.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1750 (Percy Folio), and the basic plot is in the "Gest of Robyn Hode" from 1534 or earlier; there is a possible Stationer's Register mention from 1691.

KEYWORDS: Robinhood death burial medicine betrayal

FOUND IN: US(MW,SE)

REFERENCES (18 citations):
- Child 120, "Robin Hood's Death" (2 texts)
- Bronson 120, "Robin Hood's Death" (1 version)
- Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 120, "Robin Hood's Death" (1 version)
- Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 231-233, "Robin Hood's Death and Burial" (1 text)
- Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume I, pp. 50-58, "Robin Hoode his death" (1 text)
- Davis-TraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 30, "Robin Hood's Death" (1 text, 1 tune entitled "The Death of Robin Hood") {Bronson's [#1]}
- Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 349-352, "Robin Hood's Death" (1 text)
- Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 345, "Robin Hood's Death" (1 text)
- Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 125, "The Death of Robin Hood" (1 text)
- Niles-BalladBookOfJohnJacobNiles 43, "Robin Hood's Death" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Gummere-OldEnglishBallads, pp. 90-93+322-323, "Robin Hood's Death" (1 text)
- Hoddgart-FaberBookOfBallads, p. 94, "Robin Hood's Death" (1 text)
- Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 69-73, "Robin Hood's Death and Burial" (1 text)
- Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, (no number; perhaps should be ZRN23?), "When Robin Hood and Little John"

DT 120, ROBHDTH*

Stephen Knight and Thomas Ohlgren, editors, _Robin Hood and Other Outlaw Tales_, TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2000, pp. 592-601, "The Death of Robin Hood" (1 text, a composite of the Percy folio and English Archer versions)

Roud #3299

RECORDINGS:
- Art Thieme, "The Death of Robin Hood" (on Thieme02) (on Thieme06) [with introductory verses from other Robin Hood ballads]

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Robin Hood and the Valiant Knight" [Child 153] (subject)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- Robber Hood's Death

NOTES [809 words]: Although the earliest surviving text of this is from the Percy Folio (probably c. 1650, but this cannot be proved), and the datable English Archer version is even more recent, there is a likely Stationer's Register entry, "The death and burial of Robin Hood" (October 17, 1691, by Joseph Walker; Rollins, #499, p. 49).

This is considered by J. C. Holt (following Child and others), to be one of the five "basic" Robin Hood ballads. (For more details on chronology see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117]). The earliest known copy (from the Percy folio) is very defective, but the general idea of the song seems to be at least two centuries older than the manuscript -- the basic story of the betrayal of Robin Hood by the prioress of Kirkless is also in "A Gest of Robyn Hode," which was first printed no later than 1534 and was probably written more than half a century before that. And Richard Grafton's chronicle of 1569 reports that he was killed at "a certein Nunry in Yorkhire called Birklies" (for text see Knight/Ohlgren, p. 29).

Holt, pp. 200-201 n. 12, points out that Fowler suggested the "Death" was derived from the material at the end of the "Gest" rather than used as a source of the "Gest." Chronologically this is of course possible, but -- as Holt points out -- this is highly unlikely. There is too much in the "Death" which is not found in the laconic story in the "Gest." It is possible that both are derived from a common legend, but if there is dependence, the "Gest" is surely dependent on the "Death."

This is perhaps the most popular of the core Robin Hood ballads (note that it is one of only eight Robin Hood pieces for which we have an authentic tune, from Davis); fragments have been found in America as recently as the twentieth century. Still, none of the early ballads was widely known; the popularity of Robin Hood in song seems to derive from the early garlands, which omit this and all the other medieval Robin Hood stories.

Much of the early Robin Hood legend has parallels in the romance of Fulk FitzWarin, and the tale of the death may be an example. In the ballad, it is Red Roger/Roger of Doncaster who helps arrange Robin's death, and stabs Robin after he has been bled; Robin then decapitates Roger. In the tale of Fulk, that outlaw, in one of his innumerable conflicts with King John, finds himself in a fight. Sir Ber(n)ard de Blois attacks him from behind; Fulk spins around and kills him -- nearly cuts him in half, in fact (Cawthorne, pp. 145-146). The similarity to this story is obvious, although the general idea is so common that it might be coincidence. In any case, Fulk survives, which Robin does not.

The Percy version of this is very long, and badly defective, meaning that we are missing many details. Much that remains is confusing -- e.g. we meet an old woman "banning" Robin Hood. Why? We don't know. Most authorities assume she is cursing him -- but Knight/Ohlgren, p. 592, point out that it properly means "lament" -- possibly she is forecasting his death.

The tale in the "Death" goes far toward discrediting one modern "reconstruction" of the Robin Hood legend, which would have us believe that Robin died in 1247 at the age of 87. Ignore the fact that sick old men of 87 who are bled have a tendency to spontaneously die, so that murder is a gratuitous assumption (a point made on p. 86 of Hole). The key point is that Little John is still around and capable of breaking down locks. Every legend of Robin includes John. He may have been a few years younger than Robin, but not much. If Robin is 87, Little John is also too old to play the role he does in the "Death." So this reconstruction simply does not fit this ballad.

Child in his notes on the "Death" suggests a parallel to "Sheath and Knife" [Child 16], where the girl asks her brother to shoot her and bury her at a spot she chooses. It seems to me, however, that this in fact reverses the motifs. In "Sheathe and Knife," she chooses the spot, and the bow is relatively incidental (perhaps he uses the arrow so that he does not have to slay her with his own hand). In the "Death," the bow and arrow is essential and the spot trivial. If anything, the analogy is to something such as "John Henry" [Laws I1], who dies with his hammer in his hand.

Phillips/Keatman, p. 5, suggest another analogy, to the death of King Arthur in which the king returns his sword -- the gaining and losing his sword representing, presumably, the gain and loss of his power. One could see such a beginning-and-ending motif arising in the case of Robin Hood also, but it seems to me that it is in fact lacking -- we don't have half of the tale! We have no knowledge of how Robin became either outlaw or archer, and while the last arrow of some versions of this song is highly symbolic, it isn't found in the earliest text of the "Death.: - RBW

Bibliography

- Cawthorne: Nigel Cawthorne, A Brief History of Robin Hood: The True History Behind the Legend, Running Press, 2010

Last updated in version 5.3
File: C120
Robin Hood's Delight [Child 136]

DESCRIPTION: Robin Hood, Little John, and Will Scarlock are met in the forest by three keepers. They fight. The keepers get the better of it. Robin asks to blow his horn but is refused. Robin invites them to compete at drinking sack instead. They become friends.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1663 (garland)

KEYWORDS: Robinhood fight drink

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Child 136, "Robin Hood's Delight" (1 text)
Bronson 135, comments only
Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 187-190, "Robin Hoods Delight" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, RZN20, "There's some will talk of Lords and Knights"

ADDITIONAL: Stephen Knight, editor (with a manuscript description by Hilton Kelliher), Robin Hood: The Forsters Manuscript_ (British Library Additional MS 71158), D. S. Brewer, 1998, pp. 142-134, "Robin Hood and the Forsters 2" (1 text, generally close to the garlands)

MANUSCRIPT: {MSForresters}, London, British Library MS. Additional 71158, the "Forsters Manuscript," item 21

Roud #3986

NOTES [82 words]: For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117].

Fully half the Robin Hood ballads in the Child collection (numbers (121 -- the earliest and most basic example of the type), 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 130, 131, 132, (133), (134), (135), (136), (137), (150)) share all or part of the theme of a stranger meeting and defeating Robin, and being invited to join his band. Most of these are late, but it makes one wonder if Robin ever won a battle.

- RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: C136

Robin Hood's Golden Prize [Child 147]

DESCRIPTION: Robin, disguised as a friar, asks alms of two priests in the wood. They claim that they were robbed and have nothing. Robin follows them and forces them to reveal the gold they are carrying. He makes them vow never to lie or cheat in the future

AUTHOR: unknown (Wing suggested Laurence Price, whose initials appear in one early copy)

EARLIEST DATE: 1663 (garland); what seems to be this ballad was registered 1656 in the Stationer's Register and Wing dates one broadside version to 1650

KEYWORDS: Robinhood money clergy lie

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (9 citations):
Child 147, "Robin Hood's Golden Prize" (1 text)
Bronson 147, comments only
Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 174-177, "Robin Hood's Golden Prize" (1 text)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 420-422, "Robin Hood's Golden Prize" (1 text)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 123, "Robin Hood's Golden Prize" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, RZN11, "I have heard talk of Robin Hood"

ADDITIONAL: Stephen Knight, editor (with a manuscript description by Hilton Kelliher), Robin Hood: The Forsters Manuscript_ (British Library Additional MS 71158), D. S. Brewer, 1998, pp. 2-5, "Robin Hood and the Preists" (1 text, with few significant differences from the broadsides)

Stephen Knight and Thomas Ohlgren, editors, Robin Hood and Other Outlaw Tales_, TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2000, pp. 556-562, "Robin Hood's Golden Prize" (1 text, newly edited from the sources)

MANUSCRIPT: {MSForresters}, London, British Library MS. Additional 71158, the "Forsters Manuscript," item 21

Roud #3990

NOTES [244 words]: For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117].

Hyder E. Rollins, An Analytical Index to the Ballad-Entries (1557-1709) In the Register of the Company of Stationers of London, 1924 (I use the 1967 Tradition Press reprint with a new Foreword by Leslie Shepard, p. 200, #2315, is "Robin Hods goolden pryse," registered June 2, 1656 by Francis Grove.

Wing's attribution of this piece to Laurence Price seems to be widely accepted; Chappell mentioned it in his book on the Roxburghie Ballads, and Knight, p. 77, says that it is "apparently written" by Price. Dobson/Taylor, p. 48, seem to have no doubts in the matter. This would explain the strong anti-clerical tone of the piece; Price was active in the middle part of the seventeenth century (Chappell dates his work "before the restoration"), when England was extremely anti-Catholic.

Price himself is such an obscure figure that (as of October 2010) he doesn't even have a Wikipedia entry. Nor have I found biographies of him in my literary references. The few poems I've manage to find (such as those in Chappell) did not impress me. This is not among the broadsides attributed to Price on p. 467 of A. W. Pollard, G. R. Redgrave, et al, A Short-Title Catalogue of Books Printed in England, Scotland & Ireland And of English Books Printed Abroad 1475-1640, The Bibliographical Society [of London], 1963. To be sure, Price could have written it after that. - RBW

Bibliography

- Knight: Stephen Knight, editor (with a manuscript description by Hilton Kelliher), Robin Hood: The Forrester's Manuscript (British Library Additional MS 71158), D. S. Brewer, 1998

Robin Hood's Hill

DESCRIPTION: "Ye bards who extol the gay valleys and glades.... never once mentioned sweet 'Robin Hood's Hill.' "Near Gloucester, it has a view, a clear spring, and good vegetation. Boys and girls sport there. The singer would not trade it for all the riches of Peru

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1877 (Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland); said in Notes and Queries to be from an eighteenth century manuscript
KEYWORDS: home money nonballad
FOUND IN: Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 461-462, "Robin Hood's Hill" (1 text)
ST BeCo461 (Partial)
File: BeCo461

Robin Hood's Progress to Nottingham [Child 139]

DESCRIPTION: Robin at age 15 falls in with 15 foresters in Nottingham. He intends to enter a shooting match. They taunt him with his youth. He wagers on his ability and wins by killing a hart, but they refuse to pay. He kills them all, escapes to the merry green wood.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1663 (garland; title found 1656 in the Stationer's Register)
KEYWORDS: Robinhood hunting contest escape money youth
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (12 citations):
Child 139, "Robin Hood's Progress to Nottingham" (1 text)
Bronson 139, "Robin Hood's Progress to Nottingham" (2 versions)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 139, "Robin Hood's Progress to Nottingham" (1 version: #1)
Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 115-117, "Robin Hoods Progress to Nottingham" (1 text)
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 69-70, "Robin Hood's Progress to Nottingham" (1 text (composite from 2 singers), 1 tune) {Bronson's #2}
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 7, "Robin Hood's Progress to Nottingham" (1 fragment, 1 tune) {Bronson's #1}
Robin Redbreast's Testament

DESCRIPTION: The singer asks the robin how long it has been there; it says twenty years, but now it's sick and would make its testament. He gives parts of his body to the Hamiltons, to serve them, and others to repair bridges. He scorns the wren who mourns for him.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1776 (Herd)

KEYWORDS: bird death lastwill farewell

FOUND IN: Ireland Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (10 citations):

- Lyle/McAlpine/McLucas-SongRepertoireOfAmeliaAndJaneHarris, pp. 120-123, "Teedle ell O/Robin's Tes'ment" (2 texts)
- Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #141, pp. 1-2, "Robin's Testament" (4 texts plus 1 fragment; the fifth of these is Herd's 1776 text)
- Greig/Duncan3 646, "Robin's Testament" (5 texts, 2 tunes)
- Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 182, "The Redbreast" (1 text)
- Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, p. 569, "The Robin's Testament" (1 text)
Robin Tamson's Smiddy [Laws O12]

DESCRIPTION: The singer has been sent to the smithy to have the mare shod. While there he woos the smith's daughter behind her father's back. The girl dislikes his poor clothes; he says she can mend them. She decides to run off with him rather than live an old maid.

AUTHOR: Alexander Rodger (1784-1846) (source: Whistle-Binkie)

EARLIEST DATE: 1842 (in Whistle-Binkie, as "My Auld Breeks, air the Corn Clips")

KEYWORDS: clothes courting elopement horse

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North),Scotland(Aber)) US(MW) Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (12 citations):
Laws O12, "Robin Tamson's Smiddy"
Logan-APedlarsPack, pp. 365-367, "My Minnie Ment My Auld Breeks" (1 text)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #139, p. 1, "Robin Tamson's Smiddy" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan5 1009, "Robin Tamson's Smiddy" (4 texts, 4 tunes)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, p. 165, "My Mither Ment" (1 text)
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 82-84, "Robin Tamson's Smiddy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, pp. 4-5, "Robbie Tamson's Smiddie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 67, "Robin Tamson's Smiddy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 39, "Robbie Tampson's Smitty" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 14, "Robbie Tampson's Smitty" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT 671, RTSMITY

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth b.25(573), "Robin Thompson's Smiddy," J. Moore (Belfast), 1846-1852; also 2806 c.16(207)=Harding B 11(3301), "Robin Thompson's Smiddy"; Harding B 11(2103), "Duddy Brees" or "Robbin Thompson's Smiddy"; Firth b.26(528), "Robin Tamson"; Harding B 11(1018), Harding B 11(331), "Duddy Brees";

NLScotland, L.C.Fol.70(42b), "Robin Tamson's Smiddy," Poet's Box (Dundee), c 1880-1900

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Cornclip" (tune, per Whistle-Binkie)
Robin the Smuggler

DESCRIPTION: Old Robin brewed "the pure mountain bead, The Forres and Elgin folk liked it gweed." "As the Tuesdays and Fraidays cam roon' The cairtie was packit [by Robin and his wife] wi' peats for the toon, Wi' a keg in the middle." They have not been seen recently.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan2)
KEYWORDS: crime drink
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan2 261, "Robin the Smuggler" (1 text)
Roud #5851

NOTES [84 words]: Greig/Duncan2: "Cf. 'The Kellas Peatfutherer' in the Elgin Courant and Courier of 24 March 1939, where it is said that the song was written by James Simpson from Mortlach about 1850 and was usually sung to the air of 'Muirlan' Willie'. The subject was Robert or Robbie Milne (1792-1870), a crofter at Newton of Kellas."
Greig/Duncan2: "Learnt twenty-two years ago, from a man who had been feed in Morayshire and got it there. Noted 21st February 1907. This air is a version of 'Muirland Willie'...." - BS

Last updated in version 2.4

File: GrD2261

Robin's Alive

DESCRIPTION: "(The bird/robin) is alive, and alive like to be, If it dies in my hand you may backsaddle me." A "hot potato" game in which a burning stick is passed hand to hand after the player with the stick repeats the rhyme

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren)
KEYWORDS: play party bird
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #76, "Robin's Alive" (1 short text)
File: Newe076

Robyn and Gandeleyn [Child 115]

DESCRIPTION: Robyn hunts deer. Just after felling one he is himself slain by an arrow. His knave Gandeleyn seeks its source, finds Wrennok the Dane, challenges him, and avenges Robyn.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1430 (British Museum -- Sloane MS. 2593); printed by Ritson 1790
KEYWORDS: hunting death fight revenge MiddleEnglish
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (12 citations):
Child 115, "Robyn and Gandeleyn" (1 text)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 332-334, "Robin and Gandeleyn" (1 text)
Ritson-AncientSongsBalladsFromHenrySecondToTheRevolution, pp. 71-74, "The Death of Robin Lyth" (1 text)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 112, "Robyn and Gandeleyn" (1 text)
DT 115, RHGANDYN
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #1317
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #2194
Stephen Knight and Thomas Ohlgren, editors, _Robin Hood and Other Outlaw Tales_, TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2000, pp. 227-234, "Robyn and Gandelyn" (1 text, newly edited from the sources)
NOTES [2333 words]: Dobson/Taylor, p. 255, declare -- correctly, I think -- that "Few medieval lyrics have been subjected to more diverse and often ludicrous interpretations" than this song. They mention Ritson's connection with one Robin Lyth who lived near Flamborough, and Robert Graves's suggestion that it is a New Year's wren song!

Fowler, p. 11, postulates that there was a first English ballad -- by which he does not mean a traditional song that tells a story but one that has music and certain stylistic characteristics. He is not referring to the oldest surviving ballad (whether that be "Judas" [Child 13] or something else), but the one that created the genre. He is not certain that this prototype ballad survives, but if it does, he suggests (note 21, and again on p. 42) that this might be it. Chronologically, maybe, since it is almost certainly older than the Sloane Manuscript that contains it, but the postulate that there was a single prototype ballad strikes me as very daring.

Chambers, p. 131, thinks that this is a sort of proto-Robin Hood ballad, with Gandelyn to eventually become "Young Gamwell" or "Gamelyn." Boklund-Lagopolou, p. 86, based on a form of literary criticism that strikes me as having about as much relation to valid criticism as numerology bears to algebra, also suggests that "it is probably not too farfetched to call the Sloane poem the first Robin Hood ballad." This even though Robyn in this song does not die at the hand of the prioress of Kirklees, one of the oldest characteristics of the tradition. Child dismisses this notion, and rightly I think. Dobson/Taylor, p. 256, also deny any connection with Robin Hood.

Chambers more significantly observes that the source (Sloane MS. 2593) contains many carols, and believes that this was intended to be sung at Christmas. This is basically bunk (it doesn't help that Chambers's definition of carols is based on dance, which is where carols started, but it isn't what is usually meant in popular speech).

Items which are in the Index and are found in Sloane 2593 include:

• A Babe Is Born All of a May
• Blessed Be That Maid Mary
• A Carol for St. Edmund's Day
• As I Lay Upon a Night (Alma Redemptoris Mater)
• Father of Heaven, Blessed Thou Be (Make Ye Merry for Him That Is Come)
• The First Day of Yule
• I Gave My Love a Cherry (as " have a yong suster")
• I Sing of a Maiden that Is Makeless
• In the Vale of Abraham
• Jesu was born in Bethlehem Judea
• O Mary Mother
• Of a Rose, a Lovely Rose
• Robyn and Gandeleyn [Child 115]
• Saint Stephen and Herod [Child 22]
• Saint Nicholas
• Saint Thomas of Canterbury
• This Endris Night

The manuscript is dated c. 1450 by Child, a date followed by Dobson/Taylor, p. 255, and by Knight/Ohlgren, p. 227, but c. 1400 by Fletcher, p. 34; "earlier fifteenth century" by Davies, p. 153; similarly Greene, p. 173; and "fifteenth century" by Luria/Hoffman, p. 236. Sidgwick & Chambers claim the reign of Henry VI, i.e. mid-fifteenth century. I have used the compromise date of c. 1430. The manuscript is quite plain, and the writing appears to have been done rather quickly (it is much less elegant than the court hands of the period); I frankly think most of these datings rather more precise than the handwriting justifies. The name "Johannes Bardel" or "Bradel" appears on the last page, in a hand that many think is the same as the scribe of the manuscript (Sidgwick/Chambers-EarlyEnglishLyrics, p. 303), but this does not seem to be widely accepted.

Greene, p. 173, says that the manuscript consists of texts without music. The manuscript is defective, having lost at least 47 leaves at the beginning. Greene believes it to be from Bury St. Edmunds, probably from the (Benedictine) monastery there. It has a carol in honor of St. Edmund, for whom Bury was named. The dialect is East Anglian.

Boklund-Lagopolou, pp. 64-66, summarizes the contents of the Sloane manuscript: 74 items, 57 of which meet her (and Greene's) definition of a carol. 41 of them (including 33 of the "carols") are about Biblical history, Jesus, Mary, or saints. Ten (including nine of the "carols") are exhortations to repent, often stressing the dangers of death and hell. So "religious" items. Ten more (nine "carols") seem intended to teach secular/worldly wisdom. Eleven are clearly secular items, often humorous. (I'm not sure what happened to the remaining two; I'm trying to summarize a catalog that is somewhat sloppy.) A few are in Latin or have Latin refrains. Since this is one of the secular songs, it is clear that it is part of a rather small minority of pieces in the manuscript, but not a trivial one.

If this isn't a Robin Hood song, it may nonetheless have some very indirect connections with that corpus. As with several of the older Child ballads ("Hind Horn" [Child 17], "King Orfeo" [Child #19], "Blancheflour and Jellyflorice" [Child 300]), this may connect with a Middle English romance. The romance in this case is "Gamelyn," which can be found e.g. in Sands, pp. 156-181 (who mentions a critical edition published by Skeat in 1884 as The Tale of Gamelyn; there are a number of reprints. For a bibliography of "Gamelyn," see Rice, pp. 259-262).

The plot in brief: Sir John of Boundys, dying, leaves his property to his sons John, Ote, and Gamelyn. Gamelyn is set aside. Placed in bondage by his brother, he is freed by Adam the Spencer; they take revenge and flee to the greenwood. The oldest brother, now sheriff, declares him an outlaw. Gamelyn comes to the court, is taken prisoner, but is set free when Ote stands his bail. Gamelyn attacks the court, gains his freedom, and is pardoned by the King.

The similarities of "Gamelyn" to the Robin Hood cycle are obvious, and it is possible that "Robyn and Gandelyn" is a worn down version of the romance; they are about as close as "Hind Horn" and "King Horn" (i.e. not very). But that doesn't make the ballad an ancestor of the Robin Hood corpus; rather, it is at best a cousin.

More interesting is the relationship between "Robin and Gandelyn" and "Gamelyn." The author of "Gamelyn" is unknown, but the "language is generally that of Chaucer's time" (Sands, p. 155). This would make "Robyn and Gandelyn" more recent than "Gamelyn," but not by much. This does not of course tell us which plot is older.

"Gamelyn" is one of the best-attested of the Middle English romances, though the reason is "bizarre" (Chaucer/Benson, p. 1125): It's included in many manuscripts of Chaucer! The Cook's Tale ends abruptly (Keen, p. 78, speculates that Chaucer decided the story he had in mind was too raunchy to use), and it appears that some scribes, feeling the need to supply a complete story, plugging in this account -- a rather poor fit; the seven-stress lines don't match the rest of the Canterbury Tales, and it features a lot of alliteration (Keen, p. 80), which is not at all typical of Chaucer. The temptation is to think that it is a modification of a poem in alliterative verse, presumably springing from the fourteenth century alliterative revival that produced "Piers Plowman" and "Sir Gawain and the Green Knight."

There are some 16 manuscripts in Manley and Rickert's "c" and "d" groups of The Canterbury Tales, the two groups which include "Gamelyn," though not all of these copies are complete; we also find it, e.g., in the well-known Harley 7334.

Even if "Gamelyn" were found in a larger fraction of Canterbury Tales manuscripts, or in better ones (it is not found in the great Hengwrt and Ellesmere copies), it would be hard to regard it as Chaucerian. Keen, p. 89, remarks that Gamelyn is a rough, common man, an opponent of the aristocracy -- a character who would certainly not appeal to Chaucer, who (while not a nobleman himself) spent his whole life in their company. I would add that Chaucer would surely not be fond of a hero whose only skill is with his fists.

Keen, p. 79, also notes that "Gamelyn" is an unusual romance in that it is surprisingly real -- it's about common people, living ordinary lives, and there is no magic. It even goes into details about the problems of moving about in an untended forest. This, obviously, is another reason why it is rather unlike Robin Hood; the core Robin Hood ballads ignore the difficulties of living in the greenwood.

None of this, to be sure, has any real connection to "Robin and Gandelyn."

Knight/Ohlgren, pp. 227, connect "Robin and Gandelyn" to Robin Hood not on the basis of the name Robin but rather the name "Gamelyn," plus the mention of Wrennoch, which has associations with the tale of Fulk Fitzwarin, often considered a source for the "Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117]. In the tale of Fulk, Wrennock was the son of Morris of Powys, one of Fulk's enemies. I wonder personally if there isn't more going on here. I don't think the poem is about wrenning, but could Wrennock be a diminutive for a wren name? After all, Jenny Wren was the wife of Cock Robin. I do not claim that this is a song about a love triangle between Robin, Wren(nock), and Gandelyn, but it's easy to see how such an idea could arise. And where is Donne? Doncaster? Any answers must be speculative, but it might be worth investigating.

The text of this ballad, existing in only one copy, is in rather bad shape. Not that there appears to be much missing, but there are a number of oddities in the text. Some have claimed that it was written as prose. It wasn't, really; there were symbols for line and stanza breaks. But most lyrics in the Sloane MS. have line breaks. Boklund-Lagopolou, p. 83, believes the difference in this case is because the Sloane MS. is small, and the lines in "Robyn and Gandelyn" were long, so the scribe had to write them continuously. Whatever the scribe's intent, Child made a number of emendations in the text, some accepted by those who came after him, some not. Among these:

Stanza 1, line 4: "Thynge" (subject, matter) for MS. "gynge" (gang, company?). A reasonable conjecture, but if "gynge" can mean "company," it is perhaps not needed.

Stanza 4, line 5: "gode Robyn." The MS. omits "Robyn." This might be an error, but perhaps another word is meant. We might even read "Gandelyn" instead of "gode Robyn."

Stanza 7, line 6: "Til I se [his] sydis blede." Not really a necessary conjecture on Child's part; if we add the word "his," then the line means, in effect, "Till I see [the murderer's] sides bleed"; if we omit, we have "Till I see [someone's] sides bleed."

Stanza 13, line 3: "sancothys." An obscure word, and others have read the writing differently anyway. It seems pretty clear that it means the region between the legs, however.

As a final note, I've been told that this is among the hardest Child ballads to understand (perhaps not surprising, given its age). So here is my attempt at a non-poetic version in Modern English:

Robin lies in [the] green wood bound.

1. I heard a song of a clerk
   All at yon wood's end,
   Of good Robin and Gandelyn
   There was no other subject.
Robin lies in [the] green wood bound.

2. Active thieves those young men were not,
   But bowmen good and noble;
   They went to the wood to get some meat
   If God would send it to them.

3. All day those two young men travelled
   And meat found they none.
   Until it was close to evening;
   The young men wanted to go home.

4. Half a hundred of fallow deer
   They came upon,
   And all of them were fair and fat, I know,
   But none of them were marked;
   "By dear God," said good [Robin],
   "Of these we shall have one."

5. Robin set his jolly bow,
   Therein he set an arrow;
   The fattest deer of all,
   Its heart he cleft in two.

6. He had not flayed the deer
   Not half out of its hide
   [Before] there came an arrow out of the west
   That felled Robert's pride.
7. Gandelyn looked east and west,
   To every side,
   "Who has my master slain?
   Who has done this deed?
   I shall never from the greenwood go
   Until I see his sides bleed.

8. Gandelyn looked east and looked west
   And searched under the sun;
   He saw a little boy,
   He was named Wrennok of Donne.

9. A good bow in his hand,
   A broad arrow therein,
   And four and twenty good arrows
   Bound up in a sheaf.
   "You beware, you [be]ware, Gandelyn,
   Or you'll get some of this.

10. "You beware, you [be]ware, Gandelyn,
    You'll get plenty of this."
   "I'm up for another [contest]," said Gandelyn;
   "Misadventure to the one who flees!"

11. "Where shall our target be?"
    Said Gandelyn.
    "Each at the other's heart!"
    Said Wrennock again.

12. "Who shall fire the first shot?"
    Said Gandelyn.
    "And I shall fire before,"
    Said Wrennock again.

13. Wrennock shot a very good shot,
    And didn't shoot very high;
    [It went] through the fork of his breeches;
    It touched neither thigh.

14. "Now have you fired the first [shot at] me";
    Thus to Wrennock he spoke.
    "And through the power of Our Lady
    A better shot I shall fire at you."

15. Gandelyn bent his good bow
    And set therein an arrow;
    He shot through his green kirtle;
    His heart he cleft in two.

16. "Now you shall never boast, Wrennock,
    At ale or at wife,
    That you have slayne good Robin
    And his knave Gandelyn.

17. "Now you shall never boast, Wrennock,
    At wine or at ale,
    That you have slain good Robin
    And Gandelyn his knave." - RBW

Bibliography

- Boklund-Lagopolou: Karin Boklund-Lagopolou, I have a yong suster: Popular song and Rock About My Saro Jane

DESCRIPTION: The singer, despite "a wife and five little children," decides to "take a trip on the big Macmillan." The troublesome operations of the boat are described. Chorus: "Oh, there's nothing to do but sit down and sing And rock about my Saro Jane."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Uncle Dave Macon)
KEYWORDS: ship river love work
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 63, pp. 103-105, "Captain Tom Ryman (Rockabout My Saro Jane)" (1 text, 1 tune, reported to be the full Uncle Dave Macon which Macon never recorded)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 47, "Rock About My Saro Jane" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax- FSNA 277, "Rock About, My Saro Jane" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryOfSouthernFolklore, p. 747, "Rock About, My Saro Jane" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 92, "Rock About My Saro Jane" (1 text)
DT, SAROJANE
Roud #10052
RECORDINGS:
Uncle Dave Macon, "Rock About My Saro Jane" (Vocalion 5151, 1927; also probably issued as Brunswick B-1024, 1929, Brunswick 80091, Brunswick BL-59001, Coral MH-174, n.d.; on TimesAint03)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Rock About My Saro Jane" (on NLCR14)
NOTES [64 words]: Lyle Lofgren once searched for the "big Macmillan" mentioned in this song, with little luck. But Les Caraher eventually sent him data for a likely identification: "It turns out there was a boat that plied the Mississippi all during the Civil War as a supply boat. It was called the 'MOSES McLELLAN'. It is not hard to imagine that name changing to 'the big MacMillan' is it? - [RBW]
Last updated in version 2.8
Rock Candy
DESCRIPTION: "Johnny he did sell me, And Robert he did buy me, He took me down to Alabam', Learned me how to make rock candy. Rocked that lady, but you can't rock me (x3), Learned me how to make rock candy."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty)
KEYWORDS: playparty food nonballad commerce
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty, pp. 161-162, "Rock Candy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #28874
File: Spurg161

Rock Island Line (I), The
DESCRIPTION: "The Rock Island Line is a mighty good road, The Rock Island Line is the road to ride." About life in general, engineering on the Rock Island Line, and anything else that can be zipped into the song
AUTHOR: Clarence Wilson? (see NOTES) (heavily adapted by Huddie Ledbetter)
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (recording, Kelly Pace et al)
KEYWORDS: railroading train nonballad floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 472-477, "The Rock Island Line" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 102, "Rock Island Line" (1 text)
DT, ROCKISLL
ADDITIONAL: Moses Asch and Alan Lomax, Editors, _The Leadbelly Songbook_, Oak, 1962, pp. 80-81, "Rock Island Line" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #15211
RECORDINGS:
Lead Belly, "Rock Island Line" (on ClassRR)
Kelly Pace & group of prisoners, "Rock Island Line" (AFS 248 A1, 1934; on LC8, LCTreas)
NOTES [684 words]: How much of this is genuinely "folk" is hard to tell. The earliest version collected [was] at Cummins Prison Farm (Arkansas) in 1934. The collection was made by John & Ruby Lomax; Lead Belly was their driver. Working from this and perhaps some floating material, Lead Belly created a song which he interspersed with patter about railroad work. The Weavers regularized this, and Alan Lomax added "new material"; one wonders if the prisoners would have recognized the result. - PJS, RBW
The core of the song performed by Lead Belly on his Library of Congress and early Asch recordings hews pretty closely to the version recorded by the prisoners; the Lomaxes' additions, if any, seem to have been minimal.
One of the verses found in revival versions is present [in the Pace recording on 1934], ("Jesus died to save me in all of my sin/To God, we goin' to meet Him again"), as is the standard chorus. Mr. Pace's name is spelled "Kelly" throughout LC8, but,"Kelley" on LC10. - PJS
Norm Cohen spelled it "Kelly," and Stephen Wade, who knew Pace, spells it "Kelly" as well; I'd consider that pretty definitive. Wade's full exposition is found in his book "The Beautiful Music All Around Us: Field Recordings and the American Experience."
Cohen also documents the evolution of the song, starting from an Arkansas work song. Lead Belly, as noted, probably learned it in 1934. When he recorded it for the Library of Congress in 1937, he used a subset of the Pace verses, with a line of patter about cutting trees; the song is still a work song.
When Lead Belly recorded it again in 1944 for Capitol, he had added a couple of verses not from Pace ("I may be right and I may be wrong"; "A-B-C double X-Y-Z") and had a new line of railroad patter. Soon after, he recorded it for Folkways, in what seems to have become the canonical version, ending with him telling the railroad agent, "I fooled you."
It's unfortunate we don't have more information about how Lead Belly performed the song in concert in these years. It's quite a demonstration of "live fire" folk process, though. - RBW
But we do; Lead Belly's only known live recording, made some six months before his death in 1949, includes "The Rock Island Line." He performs the patter as he does on his Folkways recordings, along with the additional "A, B, C" verse from the Capitol 78. He introduces the piece as a work song. -PJS

Although most sources don't trace this earlier than Pace's work song version, it turns out that there is a back story. I first met it in Billy Bragg's book, Roots, Radicals, and Rockers: How Skiffle Changed the World, Faber & Faber, 2017 (I use an Advance Reader Edition with no table of contents or index, so the pagination may be a little off), p. 8-15, has a story of this song's origin. He had his information from the Wade book cited above.

Bragg, following Wade, says that the actual Rock Island Line, in 1930, reported that its employee Clarence Wilson, a wiper, had composed a song "Buy Your Ticket Over Rock Island Lines," which was sung by his group "The Rock Island Colored Quartet." The chorus of that was clearly the same as this (although not identical to Lead Belly's version). Whether it was the actual original of this song I cannot prove; if the date is right, it doesn't leave much time to evolve into the Kelly Pace version. But who knows when Wilson started singing his version? The Lead Belly version, though, still appears to derive from Pace. And, because Pace's version was only two verses long, Lead Belly riffed on it -- in stages; his several recordings all use the same chorus, but he used different filler material, and gradually built up a story about the song; the evolution of his version is as described above.

Bragg also states that Lonnie Donegan's recording of this was what started the whole skiffle boom in Britain. Odd, since Donegan's recording is both vocally and instrumentally inferior to Lead Belly's -- but of course most hadn't heard Lead Belly. And perhaps the British had trouble with Lead Belly's pronunciation. As a northerner, I know I do, on some of his songs. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3
File: FSWB102

Rock Me to Sleep, Mother

DESCRIPTION: "Backward, turn backward, oh time in your flight, Make me a child again just for tonight, Mother, come back from the echoless shore... Rock me to sleep, mother, rock me to sleep." There is no love like a mother's

AUTHOR: Words: Elizabeth Akers Allen (source: Felleman) / Tune: Ernest Leslie (source: Heart-Songs)

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Heart-Songs)

KEYWORDS: mother death separation nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Heart-Songs, p. 432, "Rock Me to Sleep, Mother" (1 text, 1 tune)
- ADDITIONAL: Hazel Felleman, Best Loved Poems of the American People, pp. 371-373, "Rock Me to Sleep" (1 text)

Roud #11721

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Backward, Turn Backward (!)" (tune)
- cf. "Cowboy Again for a Day" (tune, lyrics)

NOTES [167 words]: This it is quoted by Laura Ingalls Wilder in chapter 19 of Little Town on the Prairie, but since Laura wrote that book much later, it cannot be used as a date peg. This is fairly well-known as a poem (Granger's Index to Poetry has ten citations for it), and seems to have been a popular source for parodies. Granger's cites one that begins "Backward, turn backward, O time with your wheels," and J. S. Ogilvie, One Thousand Popular Quotations Comprising the Choicest Thoughts and Sayings of Eminent Writers of All Ages, Together With Nearly Three Hundred Original and Choice Selections, Suitable for Writing in Autograph Albums, J. S. Ogilvie, Publisher (New York & Chicago), 1884 (available on Google Books), p. 101, has a piece, "Speed slowly and gently, oh Time, in thy flight, Let thy bounties be great and thy afflictions light. Deal out full measure from thy store of wealth, Give peace and plenty, success and good health."; another variant is on p. 24 of the second part of Ogilvie. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0
File: HeSo432
Rock o' Jubilee

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, rock o' jubilee, poor fallen soul, O Lord, do rock o' jubilee." "I have no time to stay at home." "My father(s) door wide open now." "Mary, girl, you know my name." "The wind blow east, he blow from Jesus."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 25, "Rock o' Jubilee" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: AWG025

Rock of Ages (I)

DESCRIPTION: "Rock of Ages, Cleft for Me, Let me hide myself in thee." The singer admits to the inability to meet God's demands, and asks forgiveness and protection

AUTHOR: Words: Augustus Montague Toplady (1740-1778)/Music: Thomas Hastings (1784-1872)
EARLIEST DATE: 1775 (first stanza; remainder of text 1776, both in "The Gospel Magazine"; music published 1832)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (9 citations):
Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, p. 202, "Rock of Ages" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 296, "Rock of Ages" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warren-EveryTimIFeelTheSpirit, pp. 250-251, "Rock of Ages" (1 text, 1 tune)
Heart-Songs, p. 421, "Rock of Ages" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 357, "Rock of Ages" (1 text)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, pp. 469-470, "Rock of Ages"
DT, ROCKAGES*
ADDITIONAL: Charles Johnson, One Hundred and One Famous Hymns (Hallberg, 1982), pp. 120-121, "Rock of Ages" (1 text, 1 tune)
John Julian, editor, _A Dictionary of Hymnology_, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes), pp. 970-972, "Rock of ages, cleft for me" (1 text plus assorted variant stanzas)
Roud #5429
RECORDINGS:
Buice Brothers, "Rock of Ages" (Bluebird B-5722, c. 1934; rec. 1931)
Henry Burr, "Rock of Ages" (Columbia 1781, 1904)
Peerless Quartet, "Rock of Ages" (Paramount 33010, 1919)
Hamlin Male Quartet, "Rock of Ages" (Supertone 9267, 1928)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rock of Ages (II -- Hide Me Over the Rock of Ages)"
NOTES [998 words]: Augustus Montague Toplady (1740-1778) is most famous for writing the words to this song, which he published in his own _Gospel Magazine_ in 1775-1776. (According to Reynolds, p. 186, he published one stanza in 1775 in an article signed "Minimus." The rest of the words came the next year.) The context of the full version is, to say the least, odd; it begins with a discussion of Britain's national debt, followed by some Calvinist rhetoric, both disguised as a dialogue, then the poem (Julian, pp. 970-971). This was in four stanzas; Toplady revised the fourth stanza in 1776. The text was later revised at several points by T. Cotterill, starting in 1815; still later, there was a Methodist revision. According to Julian, p. 1693, there was a sort of a legend at Blagdon, where Toplady was curate from 1762 to 1764, that Toplady was once caught in a thunderstorm at Blagdon, took shelter between two great piers of rock in a glen, and was inspired to write this song as a result. But although Toplady was indeed curate at Blagdon, he did not publish the first verse of the poem for another eleven years after he left there, and the whole text did not appear until the twelfth year. Nor did Toplady ever mention any such thunderstorm. Nor is there any early evidence for the claim, although it apparently was widely known in the nineteenth century. Julian formally labels it unproved; the impression he gives is that it was simply false. Toplady's article gives a different sort of context (Reynolds, p. 186): Toplady for some reason sat down to figure out how many sins a person would commit in a lifetime, and concluded that in eighty years a man would manage 2,522,880,000 sins. This, I suggest, tells us more about Toplady than about sins. One hates to think how many sins we commit today, with computers to make us more efficient....

Johnson, p. 120, gives a brief biography of Toplady which seems to consist mostly of denomination-jumping. He is said to have been "always in frail health," which explains his early death. The immediate cause of death, according to Kunitz/Haycraft, p. 519, was tuberculosis, which he contracted in 1775 -- the same year he published the first stanza of this song. This was 13 years after his ordination in 1762 (Stulken, p. 383).

Julian, p. 1182, gives this account of his early years: "The life of Todlay has been repeatedly and fully written, the last, a somewhat discursive and slackly put together book, yet matterful (sic.), by W. Winters (1872). Summarily... he was born at Fareham, in Surrey, on November 4, 1740. His father, Richard Toplady, was a Major in the British army, and was killed at the siege of Carthagena (1741) soon after the birth of his son. His mother placed him at the renowned Westminster school, London. By-and-by circumstances led her to Ireland, and young Augustus was entered at Trinity College, Dublin, where he completed his academic training, ultimately graduating M.A."

He is credited with two volumes of religious lyrics. Nonetheless Granger's Index to Poetry lists only seven of his works which made it into their voluminous database (and it appears that two of those are actually alternate names for this piece). This is of course the one most cited (twelve times under various titles). It is also the only work of his cited by Benet (p. 1129), who does not call him a hymn-writer but does call him a controversialist.

The description seems apt. Kunitz/Haycraft, p. 519, say that he was "First converted to the ministry by a follower of John Wesley [one James Morris, according to Johnson, Toplady become the most extreme of Calvinists." Wesley and the Methodists were the most Arminian of denominations -- that is, they absolutely denied predestination. And predestination -- God arbitrarily and capriciously granting salvation at whim -- is the cornerstone of Calvinist doctrine (not that Calvinists put it that way, but we need to understand how each side saw it. Calvinists see Arminians as a bunch of sloppy bleeding hearts; Arminians see Calvinists as a bunch of Nazis with no compassion or flexibility.)

Christians can disagree on such things and perhaps still work together. Not Wesley and Toplady. As Kunitz/Haycraft continue, "The rest of [Toplady's] life was devoted to a crusade against Wesley and Wesleyan doctrines. What is curious is that in this violent controversy both Wesley and Toplady, men of high principles, broad learning, and unimpeachable character, descended to a fish-wife level of public disputation." Similarly Stulkin, p. 383: "because of his extreme views and volatile temper he came into conflict with John Wesley... and the resulting bitterness lasted for many years."

The general tone of his writings is clearly revealed in the titles of some of his books (NewCentury, pp. 1081-1082): The Doctrine of Absolute Predestination, Stated and Assured (published when he was only 29), The Church of England Vindicated from the Charge of Arminianism (published in that same year of 1769), and Historic Proof of the Doctrinal Calvinism of the Church of England. Toplady, incidentally, is wrong. Although the Anglican church was never as Arminian as the Methodists, neither was it historically Calvinist. The seventeenth century of course saw attempts to turn it in that direction, but the key point of the Puritan Movement, and the Civil War, and the Commonwealth, is that Calvinism ultimately "failed" to take over the Church of England. Toplady was arguing a case which had been lost eighty years before he was born.

For another song by Toplady, see "Jesus At Thy Command." The composer of the usual music, Thomas Hastings, was far less controversial; he published the music for this song in 1832. Although prolific (Stulkin, p. 384, credits him with almost a thousand tunes), little of his music is remembered today.

Although Hastings composed the common tune, a Lutheran work, The Parish School Hymnal of 1926, gives a second melody, credited to Richard Redhead. - RBW

Bibliography

- Johnson: Charles Johnson, One Hundred and One Famous Hymns, Hallberg, 1982
- Julian: John Julian, editor, A Dictionary of Hymnology, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes)
- Kunitz/Haycraft: Stanley J. Kunitz and Howard Haycraft, Editors, British Authors Before 1800: A Biographical Dictionary, H. W. Wilson, 1952 (I use the fourth printing of 1965)
- NewCentury: Clarence L. Barnhart with William D. Haley, editors, The New Century
Rock of Ages (II -- Hide Me Over the Rock of Ages)

DESCRIPTION: "Way down yonder in the lonesome valley, clef' for me, clef' for me (x2), Way down yonder in the lonesome valley, Let God's bosom be my pillow. Hide me over the rock of ages, clef' for me, clef' for me." "What you gon' do when the world's on fire?"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1921 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad floatingverses

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 547, "Rock of Ages" (1 text plus a fragment and mention of 1 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 547, "Rock of Ages" (3 tunes plus text excerpts)
Jones-MinstrelOfTheAppalachians-Bascom-Lamar-Lunsford, p. 222, 'Hide Thou Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 204, "Hide Thou Me" (1 text, probably a mix, with the form of "Rock of Ages (II -- Hide Me Over Rock of Ages" but verses from "Jacob's Ladder")
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 61, "Rock of Ages" (1 short text, 1 tune, difficult to classify but with a "Hide Thou Me" refrain which perhaps links it with the Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands song)

Roud #5429

RECORDINGS:
Lester McFarland & Robert Gardner, "Rock of Ages" (Brunswick 190, 1928)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rock of Ages (I)"

NOTES [33 words]: The notes in Brown suggest that this is an "adaption" of the standard "Rock of Ages." Most likely, since the phrase "rock of ages" is assuredly not Biblical. But this is clearly a separate song. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1

File: Br3547

Rock the Cradle, John

DESCRIPTION: "Rock the cradle, John ... Mony [a] man rocks another man's child And thinks he's rockin his own ... Although the babe be not your own Oh rock the cradle"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan7)

KEYWORDS: infidelity marriage nonballad bastard children husband wife

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1450, "Rock the Cradle, John" (2 texts, 2 tunes)

Roud #7278

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rocking the Cradle (and the Child Not His Own)" (theme)
cf. "Hushie Baa, Ee-a-Baa" (theme)

File: GrD71450

Rock to See the Turkey Run

DESCRIPTION: "Rock to see de turkey run, Run, run, run, run, Rock to see de turkey run, Run, run, run, run, Rock to see de turkey run, Run, run, run.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: bird nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 196, "Rock to See de Turkey Run" (1 short text)
File: ScaNF196

Rock-a My Soul
DESCRIPTION: "Rock-a my soul in the bosom of Abraham (x3), Oh, rock-a my soul," "When I went down to the valley to pray... My soul got happy and I stayed all day." "When I was a mourner just like you... I mourned and mourned till I come through."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 73, "Rock o' My Soul" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNFolklore3 573, "Good Lordy, Rocky My Soul" (1 text)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 306, "Oh, a-Rock-a My Soul" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 357, "Rock-a My Soul" (1 text)
Roud #11892
RECORDINGS:
Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet, "Rock My Soul" (Bluebird B-7804/Montgomery Ward M-7596, 1938; RCA Victor 20-2921, 1948; on Babylon)
Taylor sisters, "Rock-a My Soul" (on HandMeDown2)
NOTES [100 words]: The reference to Abraham's bosom alludes to the story of the Rich Man and Lazarus (Luke 16:19-31). In 16:22, Lazarus dies and is carried to Abraham's bosom. Although the phrase does not occur elsewhere, it came to have the sense of "heaven."
It is interesting to note that the version they shoved down our throats as children ran "Rock-a my soul," which sounded like someone rocking on a rocking chair or in a cradle. But Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates give it as "Rock o' my soul" -- i.e. "Rock of my soul."
This, as a reference to God, is more Biblical and much more comprehensible. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.0
File: FSWB357B

Rock-A-By Ladies
DESCRIPTION: "Four little prisoners here in jail, here in jail, Four little prisoners here in jail...." The four are charged with shooting "the old man instead of the son." The required "dollar and a half to set them free" is given and they are released
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: playparty trial freedom
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 579, "Rock-a-by Ladies" (1 text plus fragments from other sources)
Roud #502
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "London Bridge Is Falling Down" (tune & meter)
File: R579

Rock-A-Bye Baby
DESCRIPTION: The nursery rhyme: "Rock-a-bye baby on the tree top, When the wind blows, the cradle will rock...." Folk versions often add more verses (or make changes to the first), e.g. about the farmer who goes hunting to feed the baby

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: text: 1784 (Gammar Gurton's Garland, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes); tune: 1884 (see notes)
KEYWORDS: lullaby
FOUND IN: US(SE,So) Ireland Canada(Mar) Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (14 citations):
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 190, "Rocky By Baby, By-O" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan8 1552, "Hush-a-Ba Baby On a Tree Top" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H591a, p. 6, "Heezh Ba" (1 text, 1 tune)
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 138, "Siuba-in Baby" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 113, "Rock-a-Bye Baby in the Tree-Top" (1 text with variants)
McNeil-SouthernMountainFolksong, pp. 124-125, "Rockabye, Baby" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 86, "Rockaby Baby" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 22, "Hush-a-bye, baby, on the tree top" (2 texts)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #550, p. 224, "(Hush a by Baby)"
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 184, "Rock-a-Bye, Baby" (1 text)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 174, "Hush-a-Bye, Baby"; p. 176, "Rock-a-Bye, Baby" (2 texts)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 408, "Rock-A-Bye, Baby" (1 text)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, pp. 468-469+, "Rock-a-Bye Baby"
ADDITIONAL: Robert A. Fremont, editor, _Favorite Songs of the Nineties_, Dover Publications, 1973, pp. 235-238, "Rock-a-Bye Baby" (1 text, 1 tune, 1886 sheet music crediting words and music to Effie I. Canning)
ST Wa190 (Partial)
Roud #2768
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "What'll I Do with the Baby-O" (words)
cf. "Tony Went Walking" (lyrics)
SAME TUNE:
Van Buren 1840 campaign song ("Hush-a-bye baby, Daddy's a Wig, Before he comes home Hard cider he'll swing") (Paul F. Boller, Jr., _Presidential Campaigns_, second revised edition, Oxford University Press, p. 75)
NOTES [355 words]: The first reported printing of the words to this piece is from about 1765, in "Mother Goose's Melody." It does not seem to have become a song -- or at least to have adopted its current melody -- until 1872, when Effie I. Crockett (1857-1940) allegedly sang it to an infant she was babysitting. The result was published in 1884, with Crockett adopting the pseudonym "Effie I. Canning."
In the Sam Henry text, the song starts with the singer recalling being "airy and handsome" and going out partying; but "noo I am auld... fittin' for nae thin' but rockin' the cradle. Rockin' the cradle is nae work, ava," then breaks into the standard lyrics. It's probably a composite, but with only six lines of the original, most of which are similar to floating material, the other half is probably beyond identification; there are points of contact with "Rocking the Cradle (and the Child Not His Own)."
The Montgomeries (Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes #134) have a piece which looks vaguely related, beginning, "Hoolie, the bed'll fall! Who'll fall with it? Two eyes, two hands, And two bonnie feet."
According to folklore (or at least Katherine Elwes Thomas), this originally referred to the Old Pretender, James III son of James II of England, and the whole stanza refers to James II's deposition as a result of having a Catholic heir. Uh-huh. The only reason I can see for this is the fact that (according to the Opies) the melody is related to "Lilliburlero." Distantly related -- and, in any case, the setting of the tune is more recent than the words. For myriad other attempts to wring meaning from the lyrics, including even a link to the Egyptian god Horus, see the Opies' notes. - RBW
There are examples on the Library of Congress American Memory site of other melodies for the song and other texts incorporating the tree top verse:
LOCSheet, sm1881 16221, "Lullaby Baby Upon the Tree Top," White, Smith & Co. (Chicago), 1881; also sm1881 14963, "Lullaby Baby Upon the Tree Top" (tune)
LOCSinging, sb10078a, "Dig, Dig, Dig" or "Hush-a-bye Baby," unknown, n.d.; also as102980, "Dig, Dig, Dig" or "Hush-a-bye Baby" - BS
Rock, Chariot, I Told You to Rock

DESCRIPTION: Biblical statements linked by the refrain "Judgement goin' to find me!" E.g., "Rock, Chariot, I Told You to Rock, Judgement goin'... Won't you rock, chariot, in the middle of the air... I wonder what chariot comin' after me...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (recording, Rich Amerson et al)

KEYWORDS: Bible religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 50-52, "(Rock, Chariot, I Told You to Rock)" (1 text); p. 227, "Rock Chariot" (1 tune, partial text)

ADDITIONAL: Harold Courlander, A Treasury of Afro-American Folklore, Crown Publishers, 1976, pp. 1345-346, "Rock, Chariot" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #10961

RECORDINGS:
Rich Amerson, Earthy Anne Coleman & Price Coleman, "Rock Chariot, I Told You to Rock" (on NFMAla2)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ezekiel Saw the Wheel" (subject)

NOTES [18 words]: This is based on Ezekiel's vision in Ezekiel 1, but with hints of the Assumption of Elijah (2 Kings 2). - RBW

Last updated in version 3.5

File: CNFM050

Rock'd in the Cradle of the Deep

DESCRIPTION: "Rock'd in the cradle of the deep, I lay me down in peace to sleep; Secure I rest upon the wave, For thou Oh! Lord, hast power to save." The singer reiterates a simple faith: God can save, the storms cannot harm me, I will sleep sound whatever happens

AUTHOR: Words: Emma Hart Willard / Music: Joseph Philip Knight

EARLIEST DATE: Words: 1832 / Music: 1840

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Jackson-PopularSongsOfNineteenthCenturyAmerica, pp. 184-189, "Rock'd in the Cradle of the Deep" (1 text, 1 tune)
Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 62-63, "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" (1 text)
Heart-Songs, pp. 196-197, "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2022, p. 136, "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" (2 references)
ADDITIONAL: Reginald Nettel, Seven Centuries of Popular Song, Phoenix House, 1956, p. 170, "(no title)" (1 text)

Harry Dichter and Elliott Shapiro, Early American Sheet Music: Its Lure and Its Lore, 1768-1889, R. R. Bowker, 1941, p. 56, describes the sheet music

Roud #23548

RECORDINGS:
James Cherry, "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" (Berliner 0964X, 1896)
Edison Quartet, "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" (CYL: Edison 2217, c. 1897)
William F. Hooley, "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" (Victor 3067, 1904)
J. W. Myers, "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" (Zonophone 322, 1905)
Original Bison City Quartette, "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep") (CYL: Ohio Phonograph Co., no #, c. 1893)
Standard Quartette. "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" (CYL: Columbia 2247, rec. c. 1895)
Frank C. Stanley, "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" (Victor 4867, 1906)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Drover's Dream" (quoted in that song)

SAME TUNE:
Locked in the Stable with the Sheep (cf. Spaeth, _A History of Popular Music in America_, p. 84)
File: RJ19184

---

Rock's Poteen

DESCRIPTION: The singer's "soul for every ill prepares, Whilst I've poteen to cheer me." He prefers Rock's poteen to Briton's ale and beer. Wine is for "stupid sots." "Then fill your glass of sparkling juice That never met a gauger's nose."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1839 (Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)

KEYWORDS: drink nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 78-79, "Rock's Poteen" (1 text)

NOTES [70 words]: Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster: "A 'Gauger' was a member of the Revenue Police, who until their disbandment in the mid 1850s, had been charged with the suppression of illicit distillation -- poteen making."

Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland: "From 1802 to June 1806 ... no less than 13349 unlicensed whisky-stills ... were seized in Ireland.... This song, in praise of poteen, is copied from Captain Rock in London, No.2" - BS

File: CrPS078

---

Rocking the Cradle (and the Child Not His Own)

DESCRIPTION: The old man laments "about rocking the cradle and the child not his own." Though at the time he had been happy to marry a lighthearted lass, he now finds her out at parties all the time (or keeping company with other men)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1900 (broadside, Bodleian 2806 b.9(282))

KEYWORDS: marriage age wife husband children infidelity bastard

FOUND IN: Ireland US(MW,SE,So) Britain(Wales) Canada(Newf) Australia

REFERENCES (11 citations):
Randolph 393, "Rock All Our Babies to Sleep" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 166, "Show Me the Man Who Never Done Wrong (or, Rocking the Baby to Sleep)" (1 text, 1 tune -- a curious version in which it appears at first that it is the woman, not the man, who is betrayed)
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 168-169, "The Wee One"; p. 266, "Rock All Our Babies" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 212, "Rocking the Cradle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Tunney-StoneFiddle, pp. 143-145, "Old Man Rocking the Cradle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 478-479, "The Milkman's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 240-241, "As I Went A-Walking One Fine Summer's Evening" (1 text, 1 tune); also pp. 242-244, "Run Along, Little Dogies" (1 text, 1 tune, mostly "Get Along, Little Dogies" but with lyrics imported from "Rocking the Cradle (and the Child Not His Own)"
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 192, "The Old Man's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune); also 190, "Run Along, You Little Dogies" (1 text, 1 tune, mostly "Get Along Little Dogies" but with a chorus partly from this piece!)
ArkansasWoodchopper, pp. 20-21, "While I Rock Our Babies to Sleep" (1 text, 1 tune, probably slightly cleaned up and with an added yodel)
Hamer-GreenGroves, p. 53, "Lullaby" (1 fragment, 1 tune, too short to be properly identified)
DT, ROCKCRAD ROCKCRA2
Roud #357

RECORDINGS:
Robert Cinnamond, "Rocking the Cradle" (on IRRCinnamond02)
John Doherty, "Rocking the Cradle" (on FSBFTX19)
Fay & the Jay Walkers, "Rock All Our Babies to Sleep" (Paramount 3100/Broadway 8093, 1928)
Richard Hayward, "County Mayo Fragment" (Rex 15016A/matrix DR 11812-2, 1947)
A. L. Lloyd, "Rocking the Cradle" (on Lloyd2, Lloyd4)
Uncle Dave Macon, "Tossing the Baby So High" (Vocalion 5013, 1926)
Neil Morris, "Rock All the Babies to Sleep" (on LomaxCD1707)
Charlie & Bud Newman, "Rock All Our Babies to Sleep" (OKeh 45431, 1930; rec. 1928)
Riley Puckett, "Rock All Our Babies to Sleep" (Columbia 107-D, 1924)
George Reneau, "Rock All Our Babies to Sleep" (Vocalion 14997, 1925)
Jimmie Rodgers, "Rock All Our Babies to Sleep" (Victor 23721, 1932; Regal Zonophone [UK] MR-2200, 1936; rec. 1930)
Paddy Tunney, "The Old Man Rocking the Cradle" (on Voice01); "Rocking the Cradle" (on IRPTunney01)
Dave Turner [pseud. for Dick Parman], "Rock All Our Babies To Sleep" (Supertone 9374, 1929)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 b.9(282), "Rocking the Cradle," J.F. Nugent & Co. (Dublin), 1850-1899; also Harding B 19(65), 2806 c.15(202), "Rocking the Cradle"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Unhappy Jeremiah (The Brats of Jeremiah)" (plot)
cf. "Hush-a-Bye, Baby" (plot)
cf. "How Sad" (theme of the husband having to do his wife's work and care for the baby)
cf. "Seoithin Seo" (tune, according to Sean O Boyle, notes to David Hammond, "I Am the Wee Falorie Man: Folk Songs of Ireland")

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Tossing the Baby So High (Uncle Dave Macon version)

NOTES [120 words]: An Irish legend has it that the chorus, "Hi-ho, hi-ho, my laddie, lie easy. For perhaps your own daddy might never be known. I'm seein' and sighin' and rockin' the cradle, And nursing the baby that's none of my own," was sung by the Virgin Mary to the baby Jesus. In English, no doubt. - RBW

Also collected and sung by David Hammond, "Rockin' the Cradle" (on David Hammond, "I Am the Wee Falorie Man: Folk Songs of Ireland," Tradition TCD1052 CD (1997) reissue of Tradition LP TLP 1028 (1959)) - BS

Hamers's single- stanza text is, flatly, too short to identify and may be an independent piece. Roud files it here on the basis of a few words, and I've done the same because I know of no clear versions of this text." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2
File: R393

Rocks and Gravel

DESCRIPTION: "Rocks and gravel makes a solid road (x2), Takes a do-right woman to satisfy my soul." Unrelated verses, largely about the ways a man can go wrong (and, perhaps, abandon his woman)

AUTHOR: Alan Lomax & W. B. Richardson ?
EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (copyright)
KEYWORDS: drugs gambling abandonment
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 77, "Rocks and Gravel" (1 text)
File: FSWB077A

Rocks and the Mountains, The

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "The rocks and the mountains shall all flee away, And you shall have a new hiding place that day." Verses: "Doubter (Mourner, sinner, sister, mother, children) (x2), give up your heart to God, And you shall have a new hiding place that day"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Marsh)
KEYWORDS: Bible nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 161, "Oh, the Rocks and the Mountains" (1 text) (1 tune)
Rocks of Bawn, The

DESCRIPTION: Singer warns fellow-laborers not to hire with any master without knowing what the work will be. He describes his decrepit condition, and declares that even the British army would offer a better life (but he has not been invited to join).

AUTHOR: Martin Swiney (?) (attribution by Dominic Behan, according to Munnelly/Deasy-TheMountCallanGarland-Tom-Lenihan)

EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Collected by Sam Henry)

KEYWORDS: disability poverty farming work army boss worker

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H139, p. 42, "The Rocks of Bawn" (1 text, 1 tune)
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 23, "The Rocks of Baun" (1 text, 1 tune)
Munnelly/Deasy-TheMountCallanGarland-Tom-Lenihan 4, "The Rocks of Bawn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Behan-IrelandSings, #75, "The Rocks of Bawn" (1 text, 1 tune, modified)

DT, ROCKBANN

Roud #3024

RECORDINGS:
Seamus Ennis, "The Rocks of Bawn" [incomplete] (on Lomax42, LomaxCD1742)
Joe Heaney, "The Rocks of Bawn" (on Pubs1, Voice05)
Tom Lenihan, "The Rocks of Bawn" (on IRTLenihan01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Lovely Jane from Enniskea" (tune)

SAME TUNE:
Lovely Jane from Enniskea (File: MoMa005)

NOTES [122 words]: In the seventeenth century, Cromwell's army's drove the Irish "to Hell or to Connaught" -- to the submarginal lands of the western coast, where life was exceptionally hard. - PJS

Although it is quite true that the Irish were concentrated in the poorest lands, especially in the far west (note that almost all native speakers of Gaelic are in the west), Cromwell is hardly the only guilty party (though his guilt was extreme; see the notes to "The Wexford Massacre"). The British initially settled in the "Pale" around Dublin, and most later colonists also landed in the east. Thus there was a constant westward pressure on the native Irish -- especially those unwilling to accept British institutions such as the Anglican church. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.0
File: Dett161

Rocks of Scilly, The [Laws K8]

DESCRIPTION: The singer leaves his new wife to go to sea. Lonely, he fears a disaster -- and meets one when a storm runs his ship onto the Rocks of Scilly. Another singer tells how only four sailors survive, not including the first singer. His wife dies of sorrow

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1825 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 28(83))

KEYWORDS: sailor storm wife death

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar,Newf) Britain(England(West,South)) US(NE)

REFERENCES (9 citations):
Laws K8, "The Rocks of Scilly"
Forget-Me-Not-Songster, pp. 51-53, "Rocks of Scilly" (1 text)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #45, "The Rocks of Scilly" (1 text, 1 tune)
Purslow-TheConstantLovers, p. 87, "Scilly Rocks" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 200-201, "Rocks of Scilly" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 62, "The Rocks of Scilly" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 50, "The Rocks of Scilly" (1 text)
Beck-FolkloreOfMaine, pp. 175-176, "The Scilly Rocks" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT 400, SCILLRCK
Roud #388
RECORDINGS:
Kate McCarthy, "Seafaring Song" (on MUNFLA-Leach)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 28(83), "Rocks of Scilly," W. Armstrong (Liverpool), 1820-1824; also Firth c.12(118), Harding B 17(261a), Harding B 16(231a), Harding B 11(3303), "[The] Rocks of Scilly"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Gentle Boy (Why Don't Father's Ship Come In)" (theme)

NOTES [47 words]: "The Isles of Scilly -- 40 miles off the extreme western tip of England -- are a beautiful, sometimes wild, place where more ships have been wrecked than anywhere else in the world." (Source: Tresco Times -- The Last Piece of England quoted at the Tresco Isles of Scilly site) - BS
Last updated in version 6.0
File: LK08

Rocky Road (Green Green)

DESCRIPTION: Playparty, with several possible plots, but typical chorus "Green green, rocky road, Some (young) lady's green. Tell me who you love, tell me who you love...." In one game, a girl is called into a circle, calls a boy, and so forth

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (recording, children of Lilly's Chapel School)
KEYWORDS: playparty courting
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, p. 154, "(Green, Green, Rocky Road)" (1 text); p. 277, "Green Green Rocky Road" (1 tune, partial text)
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, pp. 227-228, "Old Green Field" (1 text)
Roud #15657 and 18175
RECORDINGS:
Children of Lilly's Chapel School, "Green Green Rocky Road" (on NFMAla6, RingGames1)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Green Green
Green Green Rocky Road
Red Green
Red Light Green Light

NOTES [84 words]: This should not be confused with the shape-note hymn "Rocky Road," nor with the pop-folk song "Green, Green," both of which are separate songs.
The version of this song usually sung by revival singers was adapted by Len Chandler from the traditional song found in Courlander. The folk-revival version also incorporates lyrics from "Rosie, Darling Rosie," which was also collected and recorded by Courlander. - PJS
Roud separates "Old Green Field" as #18175, but the two songs look very alike to me. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: CNFM154

Rocky Road to Dublin, The

DESCRIPTION: An emigrant from Tuam recounts his comical misadventures on the way to England. He is flirted with in Mullingar, robbed in Dublin, put with the pigs on board ship, and ends in a brawl with "the boys of Liverpool."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1867 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3304))
KEYWORDS: emigration humorous Ireland
FOUND IN: Ireland US
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Hodgart-FaberBookOfBallads, p. 207, "The Rocky Road to Dublin" (1 text)
Henley/Huntingdon-Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H44, pp. 178-179, "The Rocky Road to Dublin" (1 text, 1 tune)
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladsOfIreland, pp. 19-20, "Rocky Road to Dublin" (1 text)
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 51, "The Rocky Road to Dublin" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
American Quartet, "Along the Rocky Road to Dublin" (Victor 17900, 2926; rec. 1915)
Sam Ash, "Along the Rocky Road to Dublin" (Little Wonder 254, 1915)
Liam Clancy, "The Rocky Road to Dublin" (on IRLClancy01)
Marguerite Farrell, "Along the Rocky Road to Dublin" (Columbia A1920, 1916; rec. 1915)
Osey Helton, "Rocky Road to Dublin" (Broadway 5122A, c. 1931)
Edward Herborn & James Wheeler, "Rocky Road to Dublin" (Columbia A2217, 1917)
Bill McCune & his Orch. "Along the Rocky Road to Dublin" (Vocalion 04281, 1938)
Premier Quartet, "Along the Rocky Road to Dublin" (CYL: Edison [BA] 2817, n.d.)
Allen Sisson, "The Rocky Road to Dublin" [instrumental] (Edison 51559, 1925)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(3304), "Rocky Road to Dublin," J. Harkness (Preston), 1840-1866; also Harding B 18(417), Johnson Ballads 2804 [same as LOCSinging as203070]; Harding B 11(454), "Rocky Road to Dublin"

LOCSinging, as203070, "The Rocky Road to Dublin," H. De Marsan (New York), 1864-1878 [same as Bodleian Harding B 18(417)]; also as111860, "The Rocky Road to Dublin"

NOTES [110 words]: [Tune listed in broadsides LOCSinging as203070 and Bodleian Harding B 18(417) as "Irish Jig." True, but hardly helpful... - RBW/BS)
Although presumably of Irish origin, this was known in the United States at an early date. Edward Harrigan, in his novel The Mulligans (G. W. Dillingham, 1901), p. 141, has this song being used in a parade of Irishmen. It was also cited as being played in Australia in Steele Rudd's On Our Selection no later than 1903. - RBW
Broadside LOCSinging as203070: H. De Marsan dating per Studying Nineteenth-Century Popular Song by Paul Charosh in American Music, Winter 1997, Vol 15.4, Table 1, available at FindArticles site. - BS
Last updated in version 6.1
File: Hodg207

Rocky Road to Jordan (Long Summer Day)

DESCRIPTION: "Out a sweetheart hunting, long a summer day." "Where shall I find her, long a summer day?" "Here is where I found her, Rocky road to (Jordan/Georgia)." "Walk and talk together...." "Hurry, boys, hurry." "Sailing 'round the ocean."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: courting playparty
FOUND IN: US(Ap,So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Randolph 590, "Rocky Road to Georgia" (1 text)
Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty, pp. 133-134, "Long Summer Day" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #7650
File: R590

Roddy McCorley

DESCRIPTION: "Oh see the fleet-foot host of men..." who are hurrying to stage a rescue. "For young Roddy McCorley goes to die on the bridge of Toome today." They are too late. The song recalls McCorley's actions; he would not turn traitor even to save his life

AUTHOR: Words: Ethna Carberry (1866-1902)
EARLIEST DATE: c.1798 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
Roderick McDonald

DESCRIPTION: "I met river-driver eleven years ago, "brow wrinkled and with silver hair, with a Scottish brogue. He had much experience on the river, and boasted of even more. Now he's a boss, and tight-fisted. He hopes for a fine burial monument

AUTHOR: Larry Gorman (1846-1917)

EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (Ives-LarryGorman)

KEYWORDS: lumbering river boss

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Ives-LarryGorman, pp. 87-89, 199, "Roderick McDonald" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune)

Roud #25114

File: LaGoRoMc

---

Rodney's Glory

DESCRIPTION: "Good news to you I will unfold, 'Tis of brave Rodney's glory." In 1782 Rodney defeats De Grasse and the French fleet off Fort Royal. Five French ships are captured and thousands slain. "Now may prosperity attend Brave Rodney and his Irishmen"

AUTHOR: Eoghan Rua O Suilleabhain (Owen Roe O'Sullivan) (1748?-1784) (source: Hoagland; cf. Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)
EARLIEST DATE: before 1845 (broadside, Bodleian Firth c.12(24))
KEYWORDS: battle navy death sea ship
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
April 12, 1782 - Admiral George Brydges Rodney defeats French Admiral the Count De Grasse at the Battle of the Saintes in the Caribbean and brings the captured French ships into Fort Royal
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 8, "Rodney's Glory" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Kathleen Hoagland, editor, One Thousand Years of Irish Poetry (New York, 1947), pp. 349-351 "Rodney's Glory" (1 long text)
Roud #23749
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth c.12(24), "Rodney's Glory," J. Pitts (London), 1819-1844
NLScotland, L.C.Fol.70(133a), "Rodney's Glory," unknown, c.1890
NOTES [505 words]: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815: "Serving with Rodney was a thirty-three-year-old Irishman -- the Gaelic poet Eoghan Rua O Suilleabhain from Sliaabh Luachra.... He took part in the engagement with De Grasse and composed this song ... as a way of ingratiating himself with his commander and thereby obtaining his discharge. The ploy was apparently unsuccessful...." - BS
According to Herman, pp. 316-318, George Brydges Rodney (1718-1792) was anything but a good example: although he made captain at the astonishing age of 23, he "had an unquenchable greed for money that corrupted everything he touched. He stole from captured prizes... and cheated other officers out of prize money. He treated everyone with high-handed arrogance... He was also a degenerate gambler, and the outbreak of war found him in France, hiding from debtor's prison." Similarly Brumwell/Speck, p. 31, describe him as having "a difficult temperament and notorious hunger for prize money." He bankrupted himself with gambling and in bankrolling his campaigns for parliament.
But he was known as a fighter, so he was pulled out of retirement to command the Leeward Islands station during the late stages of the American Revolution. (He was thoughtfully supplied with several officers to watch over his accounts and actions.) It was a rather desperate time for Britain; the navy was still recovering from severe budget cuts under the Prime Minister Grenville in the 1760s (Cook, pp. 56, 114-115).
In 1780, at Cape Finisterre (the so-called "Midnight Battle"), he changed naval rules by attacking from the windward, making it impossible for a defeated enemy to simply flee. This was vital to saving Gibraltar (Brumwell/Speck, p. 331).
But his great victory was the Battle of the Saintes. Britain had lost at Yorktown the year before, and de Grasse's fleet which has won the naval part of the Yorktown campaign threatened to destroy the British position in the Caribbean as well. Britain was in extreme danger -- the British had written off the American colonies, but the Spanish and others were now joining the French in their war on Britain (Stokesbury, pp. 168-169, 172).
De Grasse, based at Fort Royal at Martinique, was supposed to rendezvous with the Spanish and attack Jamaica. Instead, Rodney caught him on April 12. According to Dupuy/Johnson/Bongard, p. 637, he sank one ship and captured five (a sixth of the French fleet). Keegan/Wheatcroft, p. 265, however, says he captured nine ships then and after. Stokesbury, p. 173, credits Rodney with capturing five ships including De Grasse's flagship, "which they battered to a pulp. De Grasse was a broken man." Despite these discrepancies, every source seems to agree that his win at the Saintes allowed Britain to continue its mastery of the sea, allowing it to remain a great Colonial power even after the loss of the American colonies...
Rodney was rewarded with a peerage and a pension of 2000 pounds a year, although even this was not sufficient to pay his debts (Brumwell/Speck, p. 332). - RBW
Bibliography

• Brumwell/Speck: Stephen Brumwell and W. A. Speck,Cassell's Companion to Eighteenth-Century Britain, Cassell & Co., 2001
• Keegan/Wheatcroft: John Keegan and Andrew Wheatcroft,Who's Who in Military History
Rody McCorley

DESCRIPTION: Rody McCorley is betrayed in Ballyscullion by Dufferin and McErlean. Testimony that he was "a foe unto the crown" leads to prison in Ballymena and hanging "upon Good Friday... Convenient to the Bridge of Toome"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)

KEYWORDS: rebellion betrayal execution prison trial Ireland patriotic

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
February 28, 1800 - Rody McCorley hanged in Toome. (source: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 citing John Moulden) [but see NOTES]

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (3 citations):
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 21, "Rody McCorley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 122, "Rody McCorley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Graham-Joe-Holmes-SongsMusicTraditionsOfAnUlsterman 13, "Come Tender-Hearted Christians" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #5279

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Roddy McCorley" (subject)

NOTES [288 words]: OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads: "This is the authentic 1798 ballad"
The Fiddler's Companion site says "McCurley was a County Antrim rebel leader in the rising of 1798."
The rebels [were] defeated at Antrim in June 1798. If any of this is accurate he might have been executed Good Friday, April 6, 1798 or, more likely, March 22, 1799 [but see Moylan's note].
The ballad is recorded on two of the CD's issued around the time of the bicentenial of the 1798 Irish Rebellion. See:
Roisin White, "Rody McCorley" (on "The Croppy's Complaint," Craft Recordings CRCD03 (1998); Terry Moylan notes)
Franke Harte and Donal Lunny, "Roddy McCorley" (on Franke Harte and Donal Lunny, "1798 the First Year of Liberty," Hummingbird Records HBCD0014 (1998)) - BS
Graham-Joe-Holmes-SongsMusicTraditionsOfAnUlsterman notes a newspaper report that it was ROGER MacCorley who was executed on February 28, 1800 and buried beneath the gallows by the Bann.

Few histories even mention McCorley. The only one I found to allude to him was A. T. Q. Stewart, The Summer Soldiers: The 1798 Rebellion in Antrim and Down, Blackstaff Press, 1995. On p. 156, we learn, "If the Toome rebels are remembered at all, it is because of Roddy McCorley. A young Presbyterian from Duneane whose family had been evicted from their farm after the death of his father, he was in hiding for nearly a year after the Rebellion before being betrayed, tried by court martial at Ballymena, and hanged 'nera the Bridge of Toome' on Good Friday, 1799."

In the footnote to this passage (on p. 271), Stewart adds, "Though hardly mentioned in the Presbyterian annals, Roddy McCorley is a major figure in nationalist mythology because he became the subject of a famous song." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: OLCM021

Roger and Dolly (I)

DESCRIPTION: Roger taps Dolly's window; she won't let him in. He asks if he has a rival. She won't deny it. He starts to drown himself but, in the water, thinks better of it. Dolly wants Roger to return but he finds another lover. Dolly fears she will die an old maid.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1750 (Ramsay); 1886 (Halliwell: nursery rhyme version)
Roger and Dolly (II)

DESCRIPTION: Roger, "tripping it over the plain" bows to Dolly, "milking of the cows," and goes "tripping it back again." She asks him to come back "or else my poor heart will burst." He refuses to come back saying she may lack his company "until the last day you die"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1750 (Ramsay)
KEYWORDS: courting rejection farming
FOUND IN:

ADDITIONAL: Allan Ramsay, The Tea-Table Miscellany: or, A Collection of Scots Sangs (in four vols) (London, 1750 (eleventh edition) ("Digitized by Google")), (Vol. IV,) p. 430, "Roger and Dolly" ("As Dolly was milking of the cows") (1 text)

NOTES [8 words]: See "Roger and Dolly" (I) for a similar story. - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: TTM4430

Roger and Nell (Roger's Courtship)

DESCRIPTION: "'Twas early in the summer time and pleasant was the weather, When Roger would wooing go." He dresses in his best, with a rusty sword and a few pence; he offers Nell his home and horse and other furnishings; she accepts; they happily marry

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (Purslow-TheConstantLovers)
KEYWORDS: love courting wedding money
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Purslow-TheConstantLovers, pp. 78-79, "Roger and Nell" (1 composite text, 1 tune)
Roud #1666
File: PCL078

Roger the Ploughboy

DESCRIPTION: Roger meets milk-maid Sue. He would take her to the fair to buy hair ribbons. She eventually agrees. In a grove "he gave her a ribbon to roll up her hair." She said it could not be bought at a fair. They marry. "Roger continues to roll up her hair"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1886 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(2578))
KEYWORDS: love marriage seduction
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 141, "Young Johnny Was a Ploughboy" (1 text)
Roud #17772
RECORDINGS:
Paddy Tunney, "The Lark in the Morning" (on Voice05) [a mixture of "The Lark in the Morning" and "Roger the Ploughboy"]

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(2578), "Roger the Ploughboy" ("Young Roger the ploughboy was a crafty young swain"), H., Such (London), 1863-1885; also Firth b.34(258)[some words are illegible], "Roger the Ploughboy"; 2806 c.16(113), "Roger the Plow Boy"

NOTES [61 words]: The description is based on broadside Bodleian Harding B 11(2578).
See recording Paddy Tunney, "The Lark in the Morning" (on Voice05). The first verse is a fragment of "The Lark in the Morning"; the second is a fragment of "Roger the Ploughboy." - BS
Is it just me, or does this sound like someone is trying to stick a happy ending on "Oh, Dear, What Can the Matter Be?"

Last updated in version 2.7
File: BdRotPlo

Roger's Courtship
DESCRIPTION: Roger's father instructs the boy in how to find a wife. He should dress in his best and kiss each pretty girl he meets. He meets (Grace/Nell), and tries his procedure. She slaps him. He asks how she dare reject such a fine specimen as he, then goes home
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: courting rejection father clothes
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber)) Ireland
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #151, p. 1, "Roger" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan4 760, "Roger" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 171-172, "Old Mother Hooligan" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Gl 166)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H820, pp. 257-258, "Roger's Courtship" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #575
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Jan's Courtship
Roger and Nell
Robin's Courtship
I'll Awa to My Mither I Will
NOTES [12 words]: Greig/Duncan4: "Learnt from father forty-five years ago. Noted 1905." - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: HHH520

Rogue, The
DESCRIPTION: The girl walks down the street "like a good girl should" followed by a rogue, a sailor, a knave or some such. She rather coyly seduces him. (He coyly gets her pregnant.)
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1750 (Percy Folio)
KEYWORDS: bawdy sex seduction pregnancy
FOUND IN: US(So) Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Kinloch-TheBalladBook XXVII, p. 82-83, "The Knave" (1 text)
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 187-190, "The Rogue" (2 texts, 1 tune)
DT, KNAVEKN NAVENAVE*
ADDITIONAL: Frederick J. Furnivall, _Bishop Percy's Folio Manuscript: Loose and Humorous Songs_, printed by and for the Editor, London, 1868, p. 108, "A Dainty Ducke" (1 fragment)
Roud #8156 and 5132
RECORDINGS:
Lizzie Higgins, "Auld Roguie Grey" (on LHiggins01)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
A Gob Is a Gob
Knaves Will Be Knaves

NOTES [41 words]: I think [Roud #5136 and #8156] are really the same song, and if I were calling the shots I would lump them under "The Rogue," Lizzie Higgins' version ends up after her "bairnie" is born with the "auld Roguie" returning to her and marrying her. - DGE

Last updated in version 5.3
File: RL187

Roi du Bal, Le (King of the Ball)

DESCRIPTION: French. Twelfth Night ritual song. Singers toast the "rights" of the King of the Ball, paying him honor. The king demands champagne, saying he can't sing without it.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes)

KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage nonballad request ritual drink wassail

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes, p. 92, "Le Roi du Bal (King of the Ball)" (1 text + translation, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Somerset Wassail" (subject) and references there

NOTES [91 words]: According to Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes, in the old Northwest (Indiana) territory, on Twelfth Night single people would gather at the home of the oldest lady of the community, who had baked a cake with four beans hidden in it. The four young men whose pieces of cake contained the beans would be acclaimed as kings, and would each put on a King's Ball, beginning the next day and continuing at weekly intervals. Each king would select a queen, presumably his sweetheart; the ladies furnished the refreshments while the men paid the fiddler. - PJS

Last updated in version 2.5
File: BerV092

Roisin Dubh (Dark Rosaleen)

DESCRIPTION: Gaelic. The singer laments being kept from his dark Rose. He warns that help is coming from the Pope but they will be apart. He would do anything if he could be with her. The end of the world will come before she would die.

AUTHOR: see notes

EARLIEST DATE: 1963 (IRPTunney02)

KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage love war separation nonballad

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (8 citations):
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 178, "Roisin Dubh" (1 English text, with the translator not indicated)

Charles Sullivan, ed., Ireland in Poetry, p. 60, "Dark Rosaleen (1 text) [translated by James Clarence Mangan (1803-1849)]

Donagh MacDonagh and Lennox Robinson, _The Oxford Book of Irish Verse_ (Oxford, 1958, 1979), pp. 56-58, "Dark Rosaleen" (1 text) [translated by James Clarence Mangan (1803-1849)]

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #192, "Dark Rosaleen" (1 text)
Roud #32189

RECORDINGS:
Paddy Tunney, "Roisin Dubh" (on IRPTunney02)

NOTES [337 words]: Hayes: "This impassioned ballad, entitled in the original 'Roisin Dubh' (or The Black Little Rose), was written in the reign of Elizabeth by one of the poets of the celebrated Tirconnellian chieftain, Hugh the Red O'Donnell. It purports to be an allegorical address from Hugh to Ireland, on the subject of his love and struggles for her, and his resolve to raise her again to the glorious position she held as a nation before the irruption of the Saxon and Norman spoilers."
Sparling: "Mangan ... always maintained that it was in reality a love-song with an infusion, but no more, of allegorical meaning."
Sparling p. 136 states that "Furlong's version is much more literal but this [Mangan's version] conveys a better idea of the intense fire and passion of the original."
Paddy Tunney sings a Gaelic three verse version on IRPTunney02. The notes to that album have a translation by either Tunney or Peter Boyle. The published translation among ADDITIONAL references closest to that translation is Eleanor Hull's seven verse translation [Hoagland pp. 145-146], though parts of other translations are recognizable. The description is based on Eleanor Hull's and James Clarence Mangan's version. - BS

Hoagland attributes this to Owen Row Mac Ward, who presumably is the poet of Red Hugh O'Donnell mentioned by Hayes. (For Red Hugh, see the notes to "O'Donnell Aboo (The Clanconnell War Song)"). It seems reasonable to attribute the poem to the sixteenth century, given the references to religious persecution, but while that is surely the earliest possible date, there is nothing in the song to prevent a seventeenth century date, or even one from the early eighteenth, I think. (Sullivan attributes it to the nineteenth century, which seems improbable.) Kinsella says that Mangan's translation is "from the Irish of Costello."
The translations are so diverse that it is sometimes difficult to see them as from the same original. Some of this may be because the translators (notably Paidraic Pearse) had axes to grind. - RBW

Roll Along, Wavy Navy

DESCRIPTION: "Roll along, Wavy Navy, roll along (x2), If they ask us who we are, We're the RCNVR, Roll along, Wavy Navy, roll along." The sailors joined for pay, for glory, for the chance to go to sea, but have found very little of any of these

AUTHOR: Words: P. D. Budge and R. Pope (source: Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead)

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (source: Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead)

KEYWORDS: sailor navy hardtimes

FOUND IN: Canada

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, p. 74, "Roll Along, Wavy Navy" (1 text, tune referenced)

ST Hopk074 (Partial)
Roud #29419

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Roll Along, Covered Wagon" (tune)

NOTES [622 words]: The RCNVR was the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, the second string of reserves, behind the Royal Canadian Navy (RCN) and Royal Canadian Naval Reserve (RCNR).

Bercuson, p. 11, reports, "Like the army, the RCN consisted of a professional core and two militia-like auxiliary forces: the Royal Canadian Naval Reserve and the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve. The professional core numbered about 1900 at the outbreak of the Second World War. These men were careerists, but the training they received... was well short of what would be required when war broke out. The RCNR had been set up in 1923 with an authorized establishment of 500 men in nine ports. In fact, it was usually only half that size through most of the interwar period. RCNR members were required to have a maritime occupation in civilian life and to possess a professional knowledge of ships and the sea. They received four weeks of training each year aboard RCN vessels. Members of the RCNVR (referred to as the "wavy-navy" because of the wavy gold stripes on the cuffs of its officers' uniforms) came from virtually all walks of life.... They were treated to thirty evenings of training during the winter and two weeks at sea in the summer. There were never more than 1500 member of the wavy-navy between the wars."

Milner, p. 62, says that "The volunteer reserves formed the corps of [director of the Naval Service Rear Admiral Walter] Hose's new national navy. For the first time, citizens from all walks of life and from all across the country could participate in their navy. Naval reserve divisions were immediately opened in Halifax, Saint John, Charlottestown, Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton, Calgary, Vancouver, and Victoria. Most of these were 'half companies' of fifty men, officered by men of standing within the community who served without pay. Saint John and Winnipeg were allotted full companies, while in Montreal two half companies, one English and one French, were raised.

"By all accounts the volunteer reserve companies were an instant success.... [Pay Commander Woodhouse wrote that] 'Most of the companies have a waiting list of 40 to 50 men.' ... All this was done on a shoestring." Men were not paid, and most of the equipment was scrounged or bought by the officers; "By 1939 there were 113 officers and 1292 rating in the RCNVR... The hardest task for the tiny interwar RCN was to get all these would-be sailors to sea, 'which is regarded by them as the greatest pleasure of their service.'" [Compare this to the song's comments about lack of pay, glory, and time at sea.] It sounds as if this was really the main reason most of these inland boys joined; Milner, p. 63, tells a story of a half-company that was actually given a day's training aboard a Royal Navy vessel -- and heard the word "war" mentioned. Most of the reservists vanished immediately after.

This lack of training meant that the Wavy Navy crews often found themselves in way over their heads when World War II forced a dramatic expansion in the Canadian navy: "Crewing of the new ships therefore depended on the RCNVR, whose recruits usually had no previous marine experience. For many of the newly built warships, the only experienced officer (sic.) available was often the captain, a member of the RCNR -- a merchant marine officer in civilian life -- whose knowledge of naval operations relied on courses and some service in small coastal or harbour defence vessels" (Sarty, p. 41).

Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead describes the authors of this song as crewmen of HMCS Saguenay. For the destroyer Saguenay, one of the few significant ships in the pre-war Canadian navy, see "The Saguenay Song." - RBW

Bibliography

- Milner: Marc Milner, Canada's Navy: The First Century, University of Toronto Press, 1999

Last updated in version 5.0
File: Hopk074

Roll and Go (I)

DESCRIPTION: Capstan shanty. "O Sally Brown she promised me, a long time ago. She promised for to marry me, Way-ay roll and go." Combination of "Sally Brown" and "A Long Time Ago" with an entirely different tune.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys)

KEYWORDS: shanty sailor courting parting

FOUND IN: Britain

REFERENCES (3 citations):
-Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 167, "Roll and Go" (1 text, 1 tune -- quoted from Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys) [AbEd, p. 134]
-Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, X, p. 12, "Roll and Go" (1 text, 1 tune)
-Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, p. 107, "Roll and Go" (1 text, 1 tune, presumably this since it omits any mention of Sally Brown)

Roud #2628

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "A Long Time Ago" (refrain)
cf. "Sally Brown" (verses)
NOTES [73 words]: Sharp seems to be the only source for this. Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas classed it as separate from it relatives (“Sally Brown" and "Long Time Ago") though if it had to be declared one or the other, I'd put it with "Sally Brown" as they are both usually used as capstan shanties. - SL
Roud agrees; he lumps it with "Sally Brown."
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea's version is unusual; it doesn't mention Sally and is listed as a hauling shanty. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: Hugi167A

Roll and Tumble Blues
DESCRIPTION: "I rolled and I tumbled and I cried the whole night long." The singer woke up not knowing right from wrong. His woman mistreated him but her "trouble come some day" He walked away
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (recording, Hambone Willie Newburn)
KEYWORDS: sex rejection parting nonballad lover
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Hambone Willie Newburn, "Roll and Tumble Blues" (OKeh 8679, 1929; on StuffDreams2)
Moses Williams, "Rolling and Tumbling" (on USFlorida01)
File: RcRoTuBl

Roll Bele
DESCRIPTION: "Role bele for Jen Jen oh, O roll bele Ting a ling"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (Elder-FolkSongAndFolkLifeInCharlotteville)
KEYWORDS: dancing nonballad
FOUND IN: West Indies(Tobago)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Elder-FolkSongAndFolkLifeInCharlotteville, pp. 52, 56 "Roll Bele" (2 texts, 2 tunes
NOTES [51 words]: The current description is based on the Elder-Charlottville text. Elder-FolkSongAndFolkLifeInCharlotteville, p. 17, classifies this as "drum dance music."
Elder-FolksongsFromTobago, p. 35: Bele is a dance "associated with reel dance sessions which include British originated types like reels and jigs."- BS
Last updated in version 4.0
File: ElCh5256

Roll Call Songs
DESCRIPTION: "There is Daniel Robb and Milly, Thomas Boswell, Jackson's Billy...." Or "Painter's Jake and Lawyer's Joe, Pat and Jack and Ervino...." The song, which obviously varies from school to school, lists and counts off the students in a particular class
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Stout-FolkloreFromIowa); versions supposedly date back to 1865
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 103, pp. 127-133, "Early Iowa School Songs" (11 texts, of which the "C" and "D" texts are this song type)
Roud #21645 and 21646
File: Stou103C

Roll Down Dem Bales o' Cotton
DESCRIPTION: "Roll down dem bales o' cotton (x3), I ain't got long to stay here now."
AUTHOR: unknown
Roll In My Sweet Baby's Arms

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Roll in my sweet baby's arms (2x)/Lay around the shack till the mail train comes back/Roll in my sweet baby's arms." Floating verses, e.g. "Ain't gonna work on the railroad/ Ain't gonna work on the farm"; "Where was you last Friday night...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (recording, Buster Carter & Preston Young)

KEYWORDS: humorous nonballad floatingverses separation

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 178, "I'll Roll In My Sweet Baby's Arms" (1 text, 1 tune)
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, pp. 230-231, "Ain't Gonna Work on de Railroad" (1 short text, possibly this although it might be from one of the Lulu songs)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 159, "Roll In My Sweet Baby's Arms" (1 text)

DT, ROLLBABY*

Roud #17473

RECORDINGS:
Buster Carter & Preston Young, "I'll Roll In My Sweet Baby's Arms" (Columbia 15690-D, 1931)
Lester Flatt & Earl Scruggs, "Roll In My Sweet Baby's Arms" (Mercury 6372, c. 1951)
Monroe Brothers, "Roll In My Sweet Baby's Arms" (Bluebird B-6773, 1937)
New Lost City Ramblers, "I'll Roll In My Sweet Baby's Arms" (on NLCR03)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "Late Last Night When Willie Came Home" (words)
 cf. "My God, How the Money Rolls In" (words)

NOTES [25 words]: Paul Stamler lists this as a humorous song. I thought I should add that the versions I've heard have been done "straight," often with a blues feel. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: CSW178

Roll Me From the Wall

DESCRIPTION: The singer is courted by young men who wish to roll her from the wall. Her parents force her to marry an impotent old man. He dies and leaves her land and money. She marries a young man who does roll her from the wall but spends all her money.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster)

KEYWORDS: age marriage sex death money

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster 11, "Roll Me From the Wall" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: Roger deV. Renwick, _Recentering Anglo/American Folksong: Sea Crabs and Wicked Youths_, University Press of Mississippi, 2001, p. 62, "Roll Me From the Wall" (1 text)

Roud #8302

CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "Maids When You're Young Never Wed an Old Man" (theme) and references there

NOTES [154 words]: Jim Carroll's notes to IRTravellers01: "Arranged or 'made' marriages were very much an accepted part of rural life in Ireland up to comparatively recent times... Women from poor house-holds which were unable to support the whole family would readily marry older farmers looking for a housekeeper, or maybe widowers with young children to care for." - BS

There was an additional reason for this well-attested problem: The shortage of land in pre-famine Ireland. Since a boy could not marry until he had land to support his family, he had to wait until his father died -- and even that might not leave enough property for marriage. So there was a shortage of eligible young men, forcing the women either to wait themselves (which meant more burdens on their parents) or to marry a widower.

Of course, the plot predates Irish overpopulation issue. This is basically the story of Chaucer's Wife of Bath, minus a few husbands. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1
File: MorU011

Roll Me Over

DESCRIPTION: The singer begins with number one, "when the fun has just begun," and progressing to number ten, when "it's time to start again."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE:
KEYWORDS: bawdy shanty humorous
FOUND IN: Australia Britain(England) US(All) New Zealand
REFERENCES (3 citations):
  * Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 325-327, "Roll Me Over" (2 texts, 1 tune)
  * Randolph/Legman-RollMelnYourArms I, pp. 389-392, "Roll Me Over" (4 texts, 1 tune)
  * Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, p. 135, "Roll Me Over" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #10133

RECORDINGS:
  * Larry Vincent's Pearl Trio, "Roll Me Over" (Pearl 50, c. 1949)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
  * cf. "Yo Ho, Yo Ho"
  * cf. "Drive It On"
  * cf. "Put Your Shoulder Next to Mine and Pump Away" (tune)
  * cf. "Kissing Song (II -- She Just Kept Kissing On)" (form)

SAME TUNE:
  * Put Yer Shoulder Next to Mine and Pump Away (File: Hugi508)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
  * Roll Me Over in the Clover

NOTES [57 words]: This is perhaps the most popular formula song in the English language. - EC

Hugill thinks this derived from the shanty "Put Yer Shoulder Next to Mine and Pump Away," with which it shares a tune. I wouldn't be surprised if the kinship goes the other way. Even more likely to be a descendant is "Kissing Song (II -- She Just Kept Kissing On)." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: EM325

Roll on the Aeroplane Navy

DESCRIPTION: "I'm sick and tired of the Navy, Of being a bloody AB... My chances in the Navy are small, So roll on the Aeroplane Navy, Were they won't want no flatfoots at all." He currently serves as a stoker, but in the Aeroplane Navy, there will be no need for such

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Hamphire Telegraph, according to Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: worker Navy technology nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  * Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, pp. 98-99, "Roll On the Aeroplane Navy" (1 text)

NOTES [268 words]: Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy suggests that the tune of this might be "Botany Bay." It looks like a better fit for "Rosin the Beau" to me, but I'm just guessing.

Tawney reports this came from a sailor in the Prince of Wales "when she arrived for the first time at Dover in 1909" and witnessed airman Louis Blériot cross the channel -- a first.

If the dating is right, the airman certainly was prescient, since the first time an aircraft took off from a ship was in 1910 (Preston, pp. 8-9), and 1911 before one managed a landing (Preston, pp. 9-10), and while seaplane carriers and cruisers with floatplanes came to exist in World War I, it wasn't until 1917 that a plane managed to land on the first prototype aircraft carrier, HMS Furious (Preston, p. 17-18), which marked the first time a ship could really take care of planes (the earlier experiments had involved temporary platforms which made the ships less capable in combat and so unacceptable in wartime).

The Prince of Wales that the writer supposedly served on was not the famous World War II battleship that fought against the Bismarck and was sunk by the Japanese in late 1941; rather, it was a ship that was already obsolete in 1909; she was a member of the Queen class of 1904.

These were "pre-dreadnought" battleships, with four 12" guns and coal-burning triple-expansion engines (Wragg, p. 177); although ships of this class were still around as late as World War I, no one dared use them for much. But their inefficient reciprocal engines meant that they would require a lot of work by stokers, which helps explain this song. - RBW

Bibliography

Last updated in version 5.1

File: Tawn074

---

Roll on the Boat that Takes Me Home

DESCRIPTION: "I went ashore in Singapore, And there I broke my leave," to return to learn that "You're due for a forty-two And a mansion on the hill" -- i.e. a transfer. "Roll on the boat, the boat that takes me home, Free from this land of pox and fever"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)

KEYWORDS: navy travel bug hardtimes home

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, pp. 64-65, "Roll on the Boat that Takes Me Home" (1 text)

File: Tawn047

---

Roll on the Ground (Big Ball's in Town)

DESCRIPTION: Floating verses: "Let's have a party, let's have a time/Let's have a party, I've only a dime"; "Work on the railroad, sleep on the ground/Eat soda crackers, ten cents a pound." Chorus: "Roll on the ground, boys, roll on the ground (x2)."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (recording, Billy Golden)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Floating verses, mostly concerning high life: "Get on your big shoes, get on your gown/Shake off those sad blues, Big Ball's in town"; "Let's have a party, let's have a time/Let's have a party, I've only a dime"; "My love's in jail, boys, my love's in jail/My love's in jail, boys, who's going her bail?" And "Work on the railroad, sleep on the ground/Eat soda crackers, ten cents a pound." Chorus: "Big Ball's in Boston [Nashville], Big Ball's in town/Big Ball's in Boston, we'll dance around." Or, in the other common version, "Roll on the ground, boys, roll on the ground (x2)."

KEYWORDS: prison dancing drink humorous nonballad floatingverses dancetune

FOUND IN: US(SE,So)

REFERENCES (4 citations):

Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 234, "Working on the Railroad" (1 text plus two unrelated fragments, the "B" and "C" fragments probably belong here; the "A" text is a jumble starting with "Working on the Railroad" but followed up by what is probably a "Song of All Songs" fragment)

Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 200, "Big Ball's In Town" (1 text, 1 tune)

Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 199, "Roll On The Ground" (1 text)

DT, ROLLGRND*

Roud #12114 (and probably others)

RECORDINGS:

Warren Caplinger's Cumberland Mountain Entertainers, "Big Ball in Town" (Brunswick 241, 1928)

Delmore Brothers, "Big Ball in Texas" (Bluebird B-7560/Montgomery Ward M-7474, 1938)
Georgia Yellow Hammers, "Big Ball in Memphis" (Victor V-40138, 1929)
Billy Golden, "Roll on the Ground" (Berliner 0539, c. 1900; Victor A-616, c. 1901; rec. 1899) (CYL Albany 1131 [as "Roll On de Ground"], n.d.) (CYL: Lambert 5077 [as "Roll on de Ground"], n.d. but c. 1900) (Victor 16804, 1911 [as "Roll on de Ground"]; rec. 1905)
Al Hopkins & his Buckle Busters, "Roll on the Ground" (Brunswick 186, 1927)
J. E. Mainer's Mountaineers, "Big Ball's in Town" (King 622, 1947)
Fate Norris & his Playboys, "Roll 'em on the Ground" (Columbia 15435-D, 1929)
Gid Tanner & His Skillet Lickers, "Big Ball In Town" (Columbia 15204-D, 1927)
Taylor-Griggs Louisiana Melody Makers, "Big Ball Up Town" (Victor 21768, 1928)
Thaddeus C. Willingham, "Roll on the Ground" (AFS, 1939; on LC02, LCTreas)
Unidentified artist [label reads "Negro Shout"], "Roll on the Ground" (Busy Bee 67, c. 1904)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Big Ball's in Boston

NOTES [89 words]: Harry Oster has reported an anti-Semitic variant from Louisiana, "Hook Nose In Brooklyn." - PJS
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook report "This tune is the sort that exists only for itself and its suitability on the banjo, the words being only very freely attached and often with reference to a drunken state." This seems to be true of most variants, except perhaps for the prejudiced version mentioned by Paul. - RBW
Maybe so; the piece, however, seems to have begun life as a "coon song" -- a popular minstrel piece. - PJS
Last updated in version 4.3
File: CSw200

Roll On Weary River, Roll On

DESCRIPTION: "Roll on, weary river, roll on, Don't take me away with your song, Your waters are deep, many secrets they keep...." "I'm down by the river alone, No place on earth to call home...."
The singer, poor and lonely, asks the river to stay away from her home

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1976 (recording, Hedy West)
KEYWORDS: river loneliness hardtimes nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
_ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 28, #2 (1980), p, 27, "Roll On Weary River, Roll On" (1 text, 1 tune, as sung by Hedy West and learned from her grandmother)
File: Sov28n2b

Roll On, Boys

DESCRIPTION: "Roll on, boys, You make your time; I am so broke down, I can't make mine." "I once was young, As you must see; But age has got The best of me." "Someday you'll think Of me I know When you are old And cannot go." Other verses of hard work and old age

AUTHOR: adapted by John Daniel Vass?
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (collected by Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains from John Daniel Vass)
KEYWORDS: work hardtimes age nonballad floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains, p. 47, "Roll On, Boys" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #16845
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Take This Hammer" (lyrics, theme)
NOTES [138 words]: This song is quite a conundrum. It seems clearly related to the "Roll On, Buddy" versions of "Take This Hammer," but it never uses either the words "Roll on, buddy" or "take this hammer," and much of the song is about the worker failing because of age.
Plus we know that the informant, John Daniel Vass, was capable of rewriting a song; Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains has several instances of items Vass reworked from traditional materials. Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains does not say that that happened here, but it seems the best explanation. On that basis, I'm classifying this very tentatively as its own song, but one that clearly should be linked with the extended "Take This Hammer" family.
Roud includes it in a song family that should perhaps be called "Roll on John," but it remains a conundrum. - RBW

_Last updated in version 5.2_
_File: Shell047_

Roll On, Buddy (II) [Roll On, Buddy, Roll On]

_DESCRIPTION:_ Assorted verses: "I'm going to the East, Karo" "You'd better quit your rowdy ways/
You'll get killed some day" "My home's down in Tennessee." Cho: "Roll on, buddy, roll on...You wouldn't roll so slow/If you know what I know/Yes, roll on, my buddy, roll on"

.AUTHOR: Lyrics: Charles Bowman/tune: traditional

_EARLIEST DATE:_ 1928 (recording, Charlie Bowman & his Brothers)

_KEYWORDS:_ travel death _floatingverses_ nonballad home wife homesickness

_FOUND IN:_ US(Ap,SE)

_RECORDINGS:_
- Charlie Bowman & his Brothers "Roll On, Buddy" (Columbia 15357-D, 1929; rec. 1928)
- Monroe Bros. "Roll On Buddy" (Bluebird B-6960, 1937)
- Sam & Kirk McGee, "Roll On, Buddy" (on McGeeSmith1)

_CROSS-REFERENCES:_
- cf. "Roll In My Sweet Baby's Arms"
- cf. "Rock About My Saro Jane" (tune)
- cf. "Take This Hammer" (chorus -- the "Roll On, Buddy" variant)
- cf. "Way Down in Tennessee" (II) (lyrics)

_NOTES [110 words]:_ This should not be confused with the "Roll On, Buddy" variant of "Take This Hammer"; although it was assembled by Charlie Bowman, who also was involved in assembling
"Nine-Pound Hammer" as a delimited song when he was a member of Al Hopkins & his Buckle Busters, this is an entirely separate song. I use "floatingverses" as a keyword mostly because of the "rowdy ways" verse; the rest don't seem to have exact analogues elsewhere.

Further research shows that the author, Charlie Bowman, was not only familiar with the other "Roll On, Buddy," but held the copyright on that song, having assembled it from traditional fragments in collaboration with Al Hopkins. - PJS

_Last updated in version 4.5_
_File: RCR0BR02_

Roll On, Columbia

_DESCRIPTION:_ Tribute to the Columbia River, the development along it, and the Bonneville Power Administration that manages both: "Roll on Columbia, roll on (x2), Your power is turning our darkness to dawn, So roll on, Columbia, roll on."

.AUTHOR: Woody Guthrie

_EARLIEST DATE:_ 1941

_KEYWORDS:_ technology nonballad river

_FOUND IN:_

_REFERENCES (5 citations):_
- *Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica_, pp. 348-349, "Roll On, Columbia" (1 text, 1 tune)
- *Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica_ 233, "Roll On, Columbia" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, pp. 166-167, "Roll On, Columbia" (1 text, 1 tune)
- *DT, ROLCOLUM_

_ADDITIONAL:_ Tom Nash and Twilo Scofield, _The Well-Travelled Casket: Oregon Folklore_, Meadowlark Press, 1999, p. 41, "Roll On, Columbia" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #17660

_RECORDINGS:_
- Pete Seeger, "Roll On, Columbia" (on AmHist2) (on PeteSeeger41)

_CROSS-REFERENCES:_
- cf. "Goodnight Irene" (tune)

_NOTES [106 words]:_ I've seen people claim that the tune Woody used was "Goodnight Irene"; others say it's "My Bonnie." I guess he managed to modify it enough to fool at least a few people....

- RBW
"My Bonnie"? Naah. This is "Goodnight Irene", almost unchanged. - PJS
Obviously true of the chorus. The verse has been altered to a slightly greater degree. Not that it really matters.
Incidentally, although the Grand Coulee Dam is no longer "the biggest thing built by the hand of a man," more than three quarters of a century after Woody wrote this song, it is still reported (in 2019) to be the single most productive hydroelectric plant in the world. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: SBoA348

Roll Over
DESCRIPTION: "There were ten in the bed, and the little one said, 'Roll over, roll over.' So they all rolled over and one fell out." "There were nine in the bed..." "There was one in the bed And the little one said, 'Good night.'"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973
KEYWORDS: nonballad humorous
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 386, "Roll Over" (1 text)
File: FSWB386C

Roll the Boat Ashore (Hog-eye I)
DESCRIPTION: Tales of sailing or mountain life, held together with a chorus such as "With a hog-eye! Roll the boat ashore and a hog-eye (x2). All she wants is a hog-eye man." Typical verse: "Who's been here since I been gone? (Someone) with his sea-boots on."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)
KEYWORDS: nonballad shanty
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 186, "Row the Boat Ashore" (1 text, with all the verses changed to land pursuits)
Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, p. 836, "The Hog-Eye Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 380, "Hog-Eye" (1 fragment, seemingly a ruined version of the chorus, 1 tune)
ST San380 (Partial)
Roud #331
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sally in the Garden" (many floating verses)
NOTES [135 words]: Paul Stamler points out a connection between this and "Sally in the Garden," which often mentions Sally being involved with a hog-eye man. Given that both songs are rather amorphous, it can be difficult in the case of short or excerpted texts to tell which is which (and, indeed, Roud appears to lump them).
Nonetheless I would maintain that they are separate songs, based on form. This one is a shanty. Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen's version is perhaps typical: it has a long (three and a half line) chorus, and the verses have more syllables than "Sally in the Garden." For an example, see the Supplemental Tradition.
Whall suggests that "hog-eye" in this case has nothing to do with the usual sexual meaning; a "hog-eye" reportedly was a California coastal barge, and the reference to the Gold Rush. - RBW
File: San380

Roll the Cotton Down
DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Characteristic line: "Roll the cotton down." The young man (from Alabama) joined the (Black Ball) line (and now looks back and describes the curious doings on a Black Ball vessel)
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan1)
KEYWORDS: shanty sailor floating verses
FOUND IN: US (MA, MW) Britain (Scotland (Aber))
REFERENCES (9 citations):
  Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 33-34, "Roll the Cotton Down" (3 texts, 1 tune)
  Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 62-63, "Roll the Cotton Down" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Bone-CapstanBars, pp. 84-86, "Roll th' Cotton Down" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 62, "Roll the Cotton Down" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 144-145, "Roll the Cotton Down" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 152-158, "Roll the Cotton Down," "De Runer Von Hamburg (The Runners of Hamburg)" (9 texts-2 in German, 1 tune. The fifth version is basically "Paddy Works on the Railway," sixth is "A Long Time Ago." In the German versions the characteristic line "roll the cotton down" is frequently replaced with "Oh, come, a beer for me.") [AbEd, pp. 123-126]
  Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 98-99, "Roll the Cotton Down" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Greig/Duncan1 3, "Roll the Cotton Down" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2627
RECORDINGS:
  Capt. Leighton Robinson w. Alex Barr, Arthur Brodeur & Leighton McKenzie, "Roll the Cotton Down" (AFS 4232 B2, 1939; on LC27, in AMMEM/Cowell)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "A Long Time Ago" (tune, floating lyrics)
cf. "Roll, Alabama, Roll" (tune)
cf. "Lower the Boat Down" (similar tune)
cf. "Run, Let the Bullgine Run" (tune)
File: Doe033

Roll the Tater (Rolly Rolly)

DESCRIPTION: "Don't you think he's a nice young man? Don't you think he's clever? Don't you think that him and me Would make a match forever? Rolly roll, roly roll, Rolly roll the 'tater." The singer likes music/dancing so much that she wants to join the Shaker band
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (JAFL 28)
KEYWORDS: courting dancing food
FOUND IN: US (So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  Randolph 582, "Roll the 'Tater" (1 text)
  Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty, pp. 165-166, "Roll the 'Tater" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7670
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Weevily Wheat" (floating lyrics, meter)
NOTES [44 words]: Randolph believes this song completely unconnected to "Weevily Wheat." But my immediate reaction on reading the piece was to think of that song, and the tune printed by Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty is similar. No wonder ballad indexing is so hard! - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: R582

Roll the Union On

DESCRIPTION: "We're going to roll, we're going to roll, we're going to roll the union on." Verse: "If the (boss, scabs, etc.) get(s) in the way, we're going to roll right over him (them)...we're going to roll the union on"
AUTHOR: Probably John Handcock/Handcox
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (recording, John Handcock)
KEYWORDS: labor-movement nonballad boss scab worker
FOUND IN: US (SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
DT, ROLUNION*

RECORDINGS:
John Handcock, "Going to Roll the Union On" (AFS 3237 A2, 1937)
Pete Seeger & Chorus, "Roll the Union On" (on PeteSeeger01)

NOTES [57 words]: John Handcox (with an X) was a sharecropper and organizer; he apparently based the song on the hymn "Roll the Chariot On" (which seems to be not the same as "We'll Roll the Old Chariot Along" as found in Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag; they share a verse, but not the tune or meter). I have been unable to find a copy of "Roll the Chariot On". - PJS

File: DTroluni

Roll the Woodpile Down

DESCRIPTION: Pumping or capstan shanty. Verse lines end with "way down in Florida" and "an' we'll roll the woodpile down." Full chorus: "Rollin' rollin' rollin' the whole world round. That brown gal o' mine's down the Georgia Line, an' we'll roll the woodpile down."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas)

KEYWORDS: shanty worksong

FOUND IN: West Indies US

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 160-161, "Roll the Woodpile Down" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, p. 128]
DT, WOODPLDN*

Roud #4443

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Haul the Woodpile Down

NOTES [154 words]: Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas states that this is the sea version of "Haul the Woodpile down." [Indexed as "Hold the Woodpile Down," which is a more Dave Maconish version of the title. - RBW] Probably originated in the West Indies of American south, and was popular at sea right up to the end, one of Hugill's sources remembers it sung on board as late as 1920. Technically this could have been entered under "Hold the Woodpile Down"; however that entry kept making references to "Roll the Woodpile Down" and there was no entry for that cross-reference so I decided to add one, especially since this is likely the original that Uncle Dave Macon's version came from. - SL

This is a complicated question; the original is by Harrigan and Braham, which perhaps got converted to this, which then got Dave Maconized. Probably the two should have been handled differently, but they're staying split for historical reasons. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: Hugi160

Roll Them Simelons

DESCRIPTION: "O Miss Mary, I am so sorry, Bound for Texas, I am so sorry. Roll them simelons, roll 'em round, Keep them simerlons rollin' down. Roll them simelons, roll 'em down, All them pretty girls down town."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi)

KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 157, p. 302, "Roll Them Simelons" (1 short text)
Hudson-FolkTunesFromMississippi 30, "Roll Them Simelons" (1 short text, 1 tune)

Roud #4511

File: Hud157

Roll Your Leg Over

DESCRIPTION: In this quatrain ballad, singers hypothecate that if the girls were ducks, rabbits, bricks, etc., they would be drakes, hares, masons, and euphemistically enjoy lustful pleasures.

Roll, Alabama, Roll

DESCRIPTION: The Alabama is built in Birkenhead by Jonathan Laird. After a long career of commerce-raiding, the Kearsarge catches her off Cherbourg and sinks her

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925

KEYWORDS: shanty battle navy Civilwar

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

May 15, 1862 - Launching of the C.S.S. Alabama

June 19, 1864 - The Alabama sunk by the U.S.S. Kearsarge

FOUND IN: US(MA) New Zealand

REFERENCES (10 citations):

Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 35-37, "The Alabama" (2 texts, 1 tune)

Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 65, "Roll, Alabama, Roll" (1 text, 1 tune)

Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 159, "Roll, Alabama, Roll!" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, pp. 126-127]

Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 122, "Roll, Alabama, Roll" (1 text, 1 tune)

Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 122-123, "The Alabama" (1 text, 1 tune)

Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 245-247, "Roll, Alabama, Roll" (1 text, 1 tune)

Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 350-351, "The Alabama" (1 text)

Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 252-253, "Roll, Alabama, Roll" (1 text, 1 tune)

Silber-SoldierSongsAndHomeFrontBalladsOfCivilWar, p. 70, "Roll, Alabama, Roll" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, ROLLALAB*

Roud #4710

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Roll the Cotton Down" (tune)

cf. "Mars Foreverymore" (form)

NOTES [1027 words]: When the Civil War began, the Confederates had neither navy, nor merchant fleet, nor significant shipbuilding capability; all rested in the hands of the North. Facing economic strangulation, the South explored every avenue to build a fleet. And in their Navy Secretary Stephen Mallory they had perhaps the most creative of all Jefferson Davis's cabinet officers; it is probably not coincidence that Mallory was the only Confederate cabinet officer to serve for the entire existence of the Confederacy.
Early in the war, the British were willing to help the Confederates build a navy. One of the ships built for this purpose was the Alabama, a fast commerce-raider. Built by Jonathan Laird, Ltd. at Birkenhead near Liverpool, the Federals protested her building from first to last, but somehow the papers never quite came through in time. (Nevins, pp. 266-267, describes how American Minister to Britain Charles Francis Adams kept bringing new details to the British government about the Alabama. The British government theoretically agreed to try to stop work on the ship, but the local customs inspectors ignored their instructions. Stokesbury, p. 252, describes how Laird kept the whole thing quiet by simply calling the hull "No. 290.")

After the completion of the hull in 1862, the Alabama sailed for the Azores to pick up arms and her Captain, Raphael Semmes (brother of the Confederate General Paul Semmes, killed at Gettysburg), who was the former commander of the raider Sumter and considered "the most distinguished fighter in the Confederate navy" (Randall/Donald, p. 450). The crew reportedly "was mostly English and included very few Southerners" (Randall/Donald, p. 450).

Paine, p. 12, claims that the Alabama was, in terms of ships seized, the most successful commerce raider of all time; he credits her with destroying 55 ships and capturing ten more which were released on bond. McPhersonCry, p. 547, credits her with 64 victories in her two year career. Jameson, p. 12, lists her tally as "sixty-five vessels and $10,000,000 worth of property." Randall/Donald, pp. 450-451, lists her as having taken 62 merchant ships plus the larger navy vessel Hatteras. Catton simply says (p. 386) that she sank more than "threescore ships" while noting (p. 128) that one of her victims was the Alert, the ship in which R. H. Dana served his "Two Years Before the Mast." Boatsman, p. 4, claims she took care of 69 ships. Although she once ran the blockade to enter the Confederate port at Galveston, the Alabama was generally unable to stop at Confederate ports, which were blockaded; when she needed repairs in 1864, she stopped at the French port of Cherbourg. An American got off word of her presence there, and the Kearsarge was waiting when the Alabama sailed. Soon after the Alabama crossed the three mile limit, the Kearsarge moved in; the Confederate ship sank some forty minutes later. Her crew was rescued by a British yacht.

According to Pratt, p. 151-152, there wasn't much difference in actual fighting power between the Alabama and the Kearsarge. (Paine, p. 12, lists Alabama with 6 32-pounders plus a 110-pounder and a 68-pounder; she could steam at 13 knots and carried a crew of 148. On p. 285, Paine lists Kearsarge as having two 11" pivot guns and 4 32-pounders; her crew was 160 and her speed 11 knots McPhersonWaters. McPhersonWaters, p. 204 says Alabama had 6 32-pounders, a 68-pound smoothbore, and a 7-inch/110 pound Blakely rifle; the Kearsarge had four 32-pounders, two 11-inch Dahlgren smoothbores, and a 30-pound rifle).

But raw fighting power rarely settles battles. The Kearsarge was a well-drilled ship with properly-trained gunners. Alabama, which constantly had to change bases, could never lay in an adequate supply of powder and shot, so her gunners were much less accurate. Browne-BL, p. 584, declares "The firing of the Alabama was rapid and wild, getting better near the close; that of the Kearsarge was deliberate, accurate, and almost from the beginning productive of dismay, destruction, and death." Of course, Browne was the surgeon of the Kearsarge, so he was biased. But the assessment seems to be true; McPhersonWaters, p. 204, says "The Alabama fired faster but wider, logging 370 shots to the Kearsarge's more disciplined and accurate 173. One of the Alabama's 110-pound rifle shells smashed into the Kearsarge's sternpost -- a potentially fatal shot, but it failed to explode." And Kearsarge had those two very heavy 11-inch guns -- Dahlgrens were "ship-killers." As a result, Kearsarge was able to score many more damaging hits and destroy her opponent while taking very little damage. Only three men on the Kearsarge were wounded (Browne-BL, p. 585), although one injury proved moral.

Both sides claimed that the other had fired at the Alabama ran up the white flag (Browne-BL, p. 586). But Alabama was already sinking, and only a few shots were fired.

The Alabama was a great success, but few ships followed her. The Americans demands for reparation, known as the "Alabama Claims," caused the British to stop building ships for the Confederacy. In all the claims covered the damage done by eleven ships; the total bill was $19,021,000, largely due to the Alabama, the Shenandoah, $6,488,320; and the Florida, $3,698,609 (according to Boatner, p. 5). The Americans were finally paid in 1873. Boatner, p. 5, says the amount was $15.5 million, which figure is also quoted by Stokesbury, p. 252; Randall/Donald, which devotes half a dozen pages to the neutral tribunal which adjudicated the claims, says that the figure was $1,929,819 in gold; I suspect some of the discrepancy lies in conversion rates.

According to Delgado, p. 122, the wreck of the Alabama was found off Cherbourg in 1984, and some artifacts have been recovered.- RBW

For a broadside on the same subject see LOCSinging, as112570, "The Sinking of the Pirate Alabama," J. Magee (Philadelphia), 1864; also hc00026b, "The Sinking of the Pirate Alabama"; cw103190, "Kearsarge and Alabama" attributed to Silas S. Steele, "Tune: 'Teddy the Tiler,' or 'Cannibal Islands.'" - BS

Bibliography

- Boatner: Mark M. Boatner III, The Civil War Dictionary, 1959 (there are many editions of this very popular work; mine is a Knopf hardcover)
- Browne-BL: John M. Browne, "For God's sake, do what you can to save them!" article in Clarence C. Buel and Robert U. Johnson, editors, Battles and Leaders of the Civil War, four volumes, 1888. For convenience of transport, I used the version of the article printed in the abbreviated one-volume edition "edited" (read: hacked down almost to uselessness) by Ned Bradford, 1956; page references are to the 1979 Fairfax Press edition.
- Catton: Bruce Catton, Never Call Retreat (being the third volume of The Centennial History of the Civil War), Doubleday, 1965 (I use the 1976 Pocket Books edition)
- Delgado: James P. Delgado, Lost Warships: An Archaeological Tour of War at Sea, Checkmark, 2001
- Hendrick: Burton J. Hendrick, Statesmen of the Lost Cause: Jefferson Davis and His Cabinet, Literary Guild of America, 1939
- Nevins: Allan Nevins, The War for the Union: War Becomes Revolution 1862-1863 [volume VI of The Ordeal of the Union], Scribners, 1960
- Stokesbury: James L. Stokesbury, Navy & Empire, Morrow, 1983

Last updated in version 6.0
File: Doe035

Roll, Boys, Roll

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Oh Sally Brown she's the gal for me, boys Roll, boys roll boys roll. Sally Brown she's the gall for me boys, Way high Miss Sally Brown."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas)
KEYWORDS: shanty sailor
FOUND IN: West Indies
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 170, "Roll, Boys, Roll!" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, pp. 137-138]
NOTES [39 words]: Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas got this from his friend "Harding the Barbarian," a black sailor and shantyman from Barbados. Harding said it originated in the West Indies and was popular in ships which carried chequerboard crews. - SL
File: Hugi170

Roll, Jordan, Roll (I)

DESCRIPTION: "My brother sitting on the tree of life And he heard when Jordan roll, Roll, Jordan, Roll, Jordan, Roll, Jordan, Roll." "O preacher, you oughta been there." "My sister sitting on the tree of life." "He comes, he comes, the Judge severe." Etc.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1862 (Lucy McKim: see Notes)
Roll, Jordan, Roll (II)

DESCRIPTION: Humorous verses for "Roll, Jordan, Roll," e.g. "Kate went a-fishing the other night, Roll sweet Jordan roll, She broke eleven hooks and never got a bite..." "[A chicken] sneezed so hard with the whooping cough It sneezed its head and tail both off."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Randolph)

KEYWORDS: humorous nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE,So)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Randolph 303, "Roll, Jordan, Roll" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 469, "Way Down Yonder on Cedar Street" (1 short text)

Roud #6697

NOTES [35 words]: Brown's six-line fragment is not in the same form as Randolph's song, and doesn't mention the Jordan. But they start with the same lines; in the absence of real data to classify the Brown text, I lump them. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1

File: R303
Rolled the Stone Away

DESCRIPTION: "In ancient days, when Israel's host in darkest bondage lay, The mighty power of God was shown, He rolled the stone away. He rolled the sea away, He rolled the sea way. With Jesus ever near, No foe I have to fear. He rolls the sea away."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: Bible religious Jesus nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 630, "Rolled the Stone Away" (1 fragment)
Roud #11930
NOTES [31 words]: The Brown text looks very composite (what exactly was rolled away -- the Red Sea or the stone closing Jesus's tomb?) -- but with so little text, we can hardly separate the components. - RBW
File: Br3630

Roller Bowler

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Short refrain: "Hooray you roller bowler." Full refrain: Timme high-rig-a-jig and a ha ha ha, Good morning ladies all." Verses concern courting or at least chasing women.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys)
KEYWORDS: shanty courting
FOUND IN: Britain West Indies
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 348-349, "Roller Bowler" (3 texts, 1 tune) [AbEd, pp. 260-263]
Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, XII, pp. 14-15, "Roller, Bowler" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #8283
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Good Morning, Ladies All
NOTES [31 words]: Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas says [this is] of Negro-Irish origin. Sharp's version was collected in Bristol, but it was also well known among the West Indian Sugar and Rum Traders. - SL
File: Hugi348

Rollicking Boys Around Tandragee, The

DESCRIPTION: The song is about Tandragee, its "darling colleens" and "rollicking boys." Other places have their fine points but Tandragee has its wonderful dancers, bold men and rare singers. "The gem of oul' Ireland is Tandragee"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (IRTunneyFamily01)
KEYWORDS: dancing music Ireland nonballad home
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tunney-StoneFiddle, pp. 91-92, "The Rollicking Boys Around Tandragee" (1 text)
Roud #3106
RECORDINGS:
Michael Gallagher, "The Rollicking Boys Around Tandragee" (on IRTunneyFamily01)
Paddy Tunney, "The Rollicking Boys Around Tandragee" (on IRPTunney03)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Bunch of Green Rushes that Grew on the Brim" (tune, according to Tunney-StoneFiddle)
NOTES [161 words]: This song strings together references to other songs: "The House That Jack Built," "The Praties They Grow Small," "Donnybrook Fair," "Irish Jaunting Car," "The Rakes of Kildare," ...; and famous men: Robert Emmet, Burke, Dan O'Connell and Thomas Moore. Tunney-StoneFiddle: ".". a good-humoured swipe is made at quite a few sacred cows.... 'That', he [the singer] maintained, 'is the satire to slay all stage-Irishmen!'" - BS
Heather Preston tells us, "Tandragee (formerly known as Tanderagee) was nearly 90% Protestant and famous in Ireland for having very Puritanical attitudes toward things like singing and dancing, not to mention pubs. So the song was composed to annoy the heck out of the straight-laced citizenry of Tandragee; it's not just 'stage Irishmen' who would be slain by the level of satire." Those wishing to see supporting evidence about Tandragee may consult the "Demography" section of the Wikipedia article on Tandragee [checked February 2020]. -(RBW)

Last updated in version 5.1
File: TSF091

---

Rollin' Dough Blues

DESCRIPTION: "Been to your house ... been told ... You roll up that gal like grandma roll up her dough." "You take my rider ... can't keep her long ... she sure gonna come back home." He can't leave her because "she's got a dead man finger and a black cat bone"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (StuffDreams1)

KEYWORDS: infidelity love sex magic nonballad lover nonballad

FOUND IN:

RECORDINGS:
- Jack Gowdlock, "Rollin' Dough Blues" (on StuffDreams1)

NOTES: Three line blues: the first line is repeated -- more or less -- and the last line completes the thought. - BS

Last updated in version 5.2
File: RcRoDoBl

---

Rollin' Home by the Silvery Moon

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Chorus: "Rollin' home (x4) by the light of the silvery moon. Happy is the sailor who has shipped aboard a whaler, when she's rollin', rollin', rollin', rollin' home."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Chorus: "Rollin' home (x4) by the light of the silvery moon. Happy is the sailor who has shipped aboard a whaler, when she's rollin', rollin', rollin', rollin' home." Verses run "Here's to the good ol' beer (claret, rum, etc) mop it down" (also x4). The verses get more bawdy after finishing with the available beverages.

KEYWORDS: drink sailor shanty bawdy

FOUND IN: US Britain

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 180-81, "Rollin' Home by the Silvery Moon" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: Hugi 180

---

Rollin' Sam

DESCRIPTION: "Rollin' Sam, Rollin'; Rollin' Sam, Rollin'; Some folks say, Rollin' Sam, Rollin'; Sam won't steal, Rollin' Sam, Rollin'... I caught Sam in my corn field; Rollin' Sam, Rollin'; Rollin' Sam, Rollin'"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore)

KEYWORDS: floatingverses nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 234, "Rollin' Sam" (1 short text)

Roud #18159

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Some Folks Say that a Preacher Won't Steal" (lyrics) and references there

File: KiWa234R
Rolling Down to Old Maui (Mohee)

DESCRIPTION: The sailors, having spent many months in Kamchatka and the Bering Sea, are happy to flee the northern gales and return to temperate climes in Maui/Mohee. The look forward to seeing the girls.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1858 (Journal from the Atkins Adams)

KEYWORDS: whaler return sailor sea Hawaii

REFERENCES (6 citations):
- Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 27-28, "Rolling Down to Old Mohee" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp.53-55, "Rolling Down to Old Maui" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, pp. 197-198, "Rolling Down to Old Maui" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 228-230, "Rolling Down to Old Maui" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 120-121, "Rolling Down to Old Maui" (1 text, 1 tune)
- DT, MAUI1* MAUI2* MOHEE3*

Roud #2005

RECORDINGS:
- A.L. Lloyd, "Rolling Down to Old Maui" (on Lloyd9)

NOTES [129 words]: The anticipation with which the whalers viewed Hawaii in this song seems to be real, although it was usually Honolulu to which they sailed. A. B. C. Whipple, Yankee Whalers in the South Seas, Doubleday & Company, 1954, p. 183, writes of Honolulu, "Here the earliest whalemen of the nineteenth century found a somnolent tropic town with a beautiful and well-protected harbor. They turned it into the pesthole of the Pacific. 'Cape Horn,' the whoorehouse district, was so named because of the truism that the whalemen hung their consciences on the Horn on the voyage out and picked them up again on the way home. The district was known all over the world for its riotous debauches, and the whalemen accordingly felt called upon to go on their wildest sprees in Honolulu." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.1

File: SwMS027

Rolling Home (I)

DESCRIPTION: The sailors are "Rolling home, rolling home, rolling home across the sea, Rolling home (to wherever home is)." They describe they voyage, the girls or whatnot they have left behind, and the joys of returning to home (and sweethearts).

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906

KEYWORDS: ship travel return reunion

FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,NE) Australia Canada(Mar,Newf) Britain(England)

REFERENCES (19 citations):
- Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 155-160, "Rolling Home" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 52-55, "Rolling Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 133-136, "Rolling Home" (2 texts, 1 tune)
- Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 182-191, "Rolling Home" (4 texts- 3 English, 1 German; 3 tunes) [AbEd, pp. 146-149]
- Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 39, "Rolling Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Huntington-FolksongsFromMarthasVineyard, pp. 75-77, "Rolling Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 134-136, "Rolling Home"; "Sailing Home from England" (2 texts, 1 tune)
- Shay-AmericanSeaSongsAndChanteys, pp. 141-143, "(Rolling Home)" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 139140, "Rolling Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 54-55, "Rolling Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, p. 95, "Rolling Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, p. 40, "Rolling Home to Merry England" (1 text)
- Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 116, "Rolling Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Browne-FolkSongsOfOldHampshire, pp. 87-89, "Rolling Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 72-74, "Rolling Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
Rolling Home (II)
DESCRIPTION: "Rolling home, rolling home, rolling home, rolling home By the light of the silvery moon! Happy is the day When you draw your buckshee pay And you're rolling, rolling, rolling, rolling home."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang)
KEYWORDS: home money
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, p. 43, "Rolling Home" (1 text)
Roud #10555
File: BrPa043A

Rolling in the Dew (The Milkmaid)
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1842 (Halliwell), according to Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland
KEYWORDS: courting love dialog seduction
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,Ro,So) Britain(England(Lond,South, West),Scotland(Aber)) Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (33 citations):
Randolph 79, "The Milking Maid" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 52, "The Milkmaid" (1 text)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 132, pp. 277-278, "The Milking" (1 text plus mention of "numerous" others)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 100, "Mary Jane the Milkmaid" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #75, "Where Are You Going, My Pretty Maid?" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 68-70, "Sacramento" (3 texts, 2 tunes, with the third text deriving its tune from this piece; the other two texts are independent)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 92, 210-211, "Rio Grande" (1 fragment, version "c" of "Rio Grande," with the text of this song and the chorus of "Rio Grande") [AbEd, p. 85]; "Blow the Man Down" (1 text, version "e" of "Blow the Man Down" sung to the that tune as well as those of "Rio Grande" and "Goodbye, Fare-ye-well") [AbEd, pp. 165-166]
Greig/Duncan4 811D, "I'm Gaun to the Wood"; Greig/Duncan4 812, "Rolling in the Dew" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Porter/Gower-Jeannie-Robertson-EmergentSingerTransformativeVoice #38, pp. 180-181, "Rolling in the Dew" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 44, "Dabbling in the Dew" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople 24, "Dabbling in the Dew" (1 text)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 27, "Dabbling in the Dew" (2 texts)
Copper-SongsAndSouthernBreezes, pp. 238-239, "Rolling in the Dew" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 407, "Mummers' Song" (1 text)
Purislow-TheConstantLovers, p. 80, "Rolling in the Dew" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brocklebank/Kindersley-DorsetBookOfFolkSongs, p. 13, "The Milkmaid" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 28, "Where Are You Going?" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolksongs #67, "Dabbling in the Dew" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 189, "Rolling in the Dew" (1 text, 1 tune); also 94, "Pelea era why moaz, moes fettow teag? [Where Are You Going To, My Pretty Maid?]" (1 text + Cornish translation, 1 tune)
OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart2 56, "Where Are You Going To My Pretty Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leather-FolkLoreOfHerefordshire, p. 205, "The Milkmaid's song" (1 censored excerpt, 1 tune)
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 112, pp. 228-229, "The Milkmaid"; p. 230, "The Pretty Milkmaid" (2 texts, neither of which recounts the seduction)
Cox-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, p. 150, "Where Are You Going, My Pretty Fair Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 46, "My Pretty Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 317, "Where are you going to, my pretty maid?" (3 texts)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 43, "Where Are You Going to, My Pretty Maid" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN242, "As I walked forth one summers day" ("Dreadful expansion of 'Where are you going my pretty maid, I'm going milking sir, she said'"")
DT, DABBLDEW* MILKMDFR*
ADDITIONAL: Jon Raven, _The Urban and Industrial Songs of the Black Country and Birmingham_, Broadside, 1977, pp. 14-15, "Dabbling in the Dew" (1 text, 1 tune)
Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #219, "Dabbling in the Dew" (1 text, probably cleaned up)
Roud #298
RECORDINGS:
George Maynard, "Rolling in the Dew" (on FSB2CD, Maynard1, Voice10)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth b.26(348), "Where Are You Going My Pretty Maid?", H. Such (London), 1863-1885; also Firth b.34(275) View 2 of 2, "Where Are You Going My Pretty Maid"
LOCSheet, sm1882 21563, "O Where Are You Going, My Pretty Maid?", J. M. Russell (Boston), 1882 (tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The New-Mown Hay"
cf. "I'm Goin' Away to Texas" (dialog format, characters and attitude)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Where Are You Going, My Pretty Fair Maid?
NOTES [356 words]: A number of the versions of this piece, such as Pound’s two and the main Opie text, end seemingly BEFORE the seduction; the man asks the girl about her wealth, and she replies, "My face it is my fortune," whereupon he abandons her. I suspect, however, that these versions are bowdlerized, with the seduction eliminated from the middle.

In some cases this may be editors' bowdlerization, but it may have happened naturally in a few instances (note that Laura Ingalls Wilder actually quotes such a version in chapter 13 of By the Shores of Silver Lake!). - RBW

Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO has this as a Inglesham Mummers' Play Song. This is an example of a song of courting, rejection, and, in this case acceptance, inserted into a mummers' "wooing" or "plough" play. For other examples and some discussion see "Sweet Moll." - BS

One of the reasons milkmaids were held in such romantic esteem was for their smooth, fair, and un-pockmarked skin, which came from their contact with cowpox and resultant immunity to smallpox -- thus the milkmaid’s remark, "My face is my fortune."

Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland's Cornish words are a revivalist translation from the English. - PJS

There seem to be several pieces of this sort floating about. Gammer Gurton's Garland and others have one running,

Little maid, pretty maid, whither goes thou?
Down in the (forest/meadow) to milk my cow.
Shall I go with thee? -- No, not now;
When I send for thee, then come thou.

(See Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #101, p. 90; Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes, p. 280, #313.) I suspect it is actually this, not "Rolling in the Dew," that Kennedy is citing for his date. I also suspect it is a cleaned-up version designed for public consumption.

Similarly, I suspect that Cox, who cites the "Universal Songster" of 1829, was looking at a clean version.

Robert Burns, it appears, collected a true "Rolling in the dew makes the milkmaid fair" text (thanks to Jonathan Lighter for pointing this out), but he did not supply details of the collection. Nonetheless this makes it clear that the song dates at least to the eighteenth century. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: R079

Rolling Log Blues

DESCRIPTION: Singer has been "drifting and rolling ... looking for my room and board" ... "drifting from job to job, Gonna fix it." "Get me a pick and shovel." Her man is in jail "and the judge won't let me go his bail."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (StuffDreams2)
KEYWORDS: poverty love rambling work nonballad lover judge prisoner
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lottie Kimbrough, "Rolling Log Blues" (on StuffDreams2)
File: RcRoLoBl

Rolling Neuse, The

DESCRIPTION: "When Greene's horn blew a long, loud blast, At early day's bright dawning, In slumber my heart was pulsing fast. I was dreaming of the morning When Nancy would be my youthful bride." As he prepares to fight, he prays for her happiness

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: battle love courting dream
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 366, "The Rolling Neuse" (1 short text)
Roud #11746
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Wind That Shakes the Barley" (subject)
NOTES [132 words]: Brown's informant listed this as a fragment, and so it appears to be. As it stands, it looks rather like "The Wind That Shakes the Barley," though whether that comparison would stand in a full-length version is not clear.
Greene is doubtless Nathaniel Green (1742-1786), who had a long career in the Continental (American Revolutionary) army. In October 1780 he was given command of what would now be called something like the southern theatre of the war. He successfully lead Cornwallis around by the nose, and despite minor setbacks, captured most southern cities by the end of 1781.
The Neuse River flows into Pamlico Sound in North Carolina, but this cannot be used to date the song more precisely; the soldier seemingly is not serving on the Neuse but thinking of his home near it. - RBW
File: Br3366

Rolling River (II)
DESCRIPTION: "Passing sheep and rocking pony, My wife died and no baloney, Ha ha ha, rolling river, My wife died and left me a widder." "All night long I want your daughter, To milk my cow and tote my water. "Some old man's gonna lose his daughter"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: love courting river death
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 68, "Rolling River" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11373
File: Brne068

Rolling Sailor, The
DESCRIPTION: "Don't you see the ships a-coming? Don't you see them in full sail?" They are coming ith the girl's "little rolling sailor" aboard. She rejoices, and says sailors are better than soldiers. She hopes the wars end soon and the press gangs ended
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Palmer)
KEYWORDS: sailor separation reunion soldier pressgang
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 64, "The Rolling Sailor" (1 composite text, 1 tune)
Roud #3505
File: PsSe064

Rolling Stone, The [Laws B25]
DESCRIPTION: Hard times leave a husband wanting to move to (California/Wisconsin); his wife wishes to stay at home. She wins the argument by pointing out that they might be killed by Indians on their way
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1856 (Thompson-APioneerSongster)
KEYWORDS: poverty hardtimes travel settler
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,NE,Ro,So)
REFERENCES (15 citations):
Laws B25, "The Rolling Stone"
Thompson-APioneerSongster 57, "Wisconsin" (1 text)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 351-352, "The Rolling Stone" (1 text plus mention of 1 more)
Randolph 194, "The Rolling Stone" (4 texts, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 186-188, "The Rolling Stone" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 194A)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 100, "The Stone that Is Rolling" (1 text)
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 87, "The Rolling Stone" (1 text, 1 tune)
Rolling Wheels

DESCRIPTION: "Rolling wheels across the desert, Oh! How happy we will be, When we reach old Mserata On the road to Tripoli." As the singer rides the "Rolling wheels across Italia," he looks forward to seeing "blue Pacific waters" and thinks of those who won't return

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1944 (Cleveland-NZ-GreatNewZealandSongbook)
KEYWORDS: war travel nonballad New Zealand death
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cleveland-NZ-GreatNewZealandSongbook, pp. 64-65, "Rolling Wheels" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roman Charity (The Virtuous Wife)

DESCRIPTION: "In Rome I read a nobleman The Emperor did offend" and is sentenced to death by starvation and thirst. But one of the nobleman's daughters gains permission to see him as long as she carries no foodstuffs -- and keeps him alive with her breast milk

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1723 (A Collection of Old Ballads)
KEYWORDS: royalty punishment father children rescue food
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 345-350, "The Virtuous Wife: A New Song" (1 extremely long text, 2 tunes)
Roud #27535
File: HGam345

Romish Lady, The [Laws Q32]

DESCRIPTION: A young woman is a closet Protestant (she reads the Bible and refuses to worship angels). Her Catholic mother has her imprisoned. Tried before the Pope, she is burned at the stake. She pardons her tormentors while blaming her mother for her fate

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1586 (stationer's register)
KEYWORDS: religious death execution
FOUND IN: Britain(England) US(MW,SE,So)
REFERENCES (21 citations):
Laws Q32, "The Romish Lady"
Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin 2, "The Romish Lady" (1 text)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 450-455, "The Romish Lady" (5 texts; it appears that Laws omits version "C" from his list, but it is clearly the same piece)
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 19, "Romish Lady" (1 text, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 97, "The Romish Lady" (1 text)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 149, "An Account of a Little Girl Who Was Burnt for Her Religion" (1 text)
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 40-43, "The Romish Lady" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph 604, "The Death of a Romish Lady" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 56, "The Romish Lady" (1 text with variant readings)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 56, "The Romish Lady" (3 excerpts, 3 tunes)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #209, "The Romish Lady" (1 text)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 28, pp. 137-139, "The Death of a Romish Lady" (1 text)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 113, "The Romish Lady" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 284-285, "The Romish Lady" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 168-169, "The Romish Lady" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. 175-178, "A Lady's Daughter of Paris," with local title "There Was a Romish Lady" (1 text; tune on p. 404)
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 49, "The Death of a Romish Lady" (1 text plus a fragment)
McNeil-SouthernFolkBalladsVol2, pp. 94-97, "The Romish Lady" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 25, pp. 63-66, "The Death of a Romish Lady" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN1518, "It was a Ladies Daughter, of Paris properly"
DT 540, ROMSHLDY*
Roud #1920
NOTES [318 words]: This song obviously dates to a time when Catholic-Protestant tensions were high, though it is not clear whether this dates it from before Henry VIII's break with Rome (1533), or during the reign of Mary I (1553-1558).
The song is known to have been in existence in the time of Charles II, 1660-1685, and a fragment is apparently found in John Fletcher and Francis Beaumont's 1611 play "The Knight of the Burning Pestle." (I say "apparently" because the reference is extremely brief. All that we have are the title -- "A Lady's Daughter of Paris, Properly" -- and part of the first line -- "It was a lady's daughter..."; it is unusual in that it is a ballad "not" sung by Merrythought.)
Many of the charges leveled here are, sadly, true though overblown. The statute "De hereticomburendo" was enacted in England in 1401 (it had passed earlier in most continental countries) -- but very few English martyrs other than Tyndale were burned.
The Catholic laity was long forbidden to read scriptures -- but Catholic translations of the Bible into English first appeared in 1582.
Most of the other implied charges (e.g. worship of idols, slavish adherence to priests) are traits shared with at least some Protestant churches.
Curiously, in a piece so clearly controversial, there are no direct scriptural quotations. The claim "I'll live by faith forever" obviously is based on Romans 1:17 and its host of parallels; the phrase "the pride of life" is an allusion to 1 John 2:16 (KJV; NRSV renders "pride in riches"); the injunction "shed not a tear for me" may hark back to Luke 23:28; the statement "while my poor body is burning, my soul the Lord shall see" is reminiscent of the last minutes of Stephen (Acts 7:55f.); her forgiveness of her persecutors also refers back to Stephen (Acts 7:60) as well as Jesus's pardon of his killers (Luke 23:34 in the KJV; many early Bible manuscripts omit this verse). - RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: LQ32

Rondo for Sledging

DESCRIPTION: "For we're shy, single, disengaged, free as the stars above, Yes, we're shy... looking for someone to love. There be rabbits in the mountains, shepherds in the hills, But red-headed Kitty sets the pace that kills, So we're shy, single... ."

AUTHOR: based on a piece by Charles Jefferson Tyus and Effie Tyus
EARLIEST DATE: 1989 (Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea)

KEYWORDS: love nonballad

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, p. 140, "Rondo for Sledging" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #8342
NOTES [77 words]: This appears to be a fragment of a 1921 foxtrot (with I think some ragtime influence), "I'm Free, Single, Disengaged Looking for Someone to Love," with words by Charles Jefferson Tyus and music by Effie Tyus; it is said to have been recorded by Fred Feild (yes, that is the correct spelling). I will believe that it is traditional when (A) Kinsey reports where he learned it, and (B) someone shows me any other traditional song with the word "disengaged" in it! - RBW

File: Kins140A

Rookery, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets a maid and accompanies her home "in Blarney Lane, convenient to the Rookery." She invites him to her room for sport and whisky punch. He wakes drunk, minus twenty pounds, a watch and coat. The neighbors laugh. Young men be warned

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (OCanainn-SongsOfCork)

KEYWORDS: sex seduction robbery drink whore warning

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCanainn-SongsOfCork, pp. 42-43, "The Rookery" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Gold Watch" [Laws K41] (plot) and references there

File: 0Can042

Rookhope Ryde [Child 179]

DESCRIPTION: The singer curses those who raid Rookhope. Northern thieves descend upon Rookhope when most of the high officials were away. But the raiders are seen, pursued, and taken in battle. The singer praises those who repelled the raid

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1792 (Ritson, collected from George Collingwood, who reportedly died 1785)

KEYWORDS: poaching robbery punishment

FOUND IN: Britain

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Child 179, "Rookhope Ryde" (1 text)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 384-387, "Rookhope Ryde" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: [Cuthbert Sharp], _The Bishopric Garland, A Collection of Legends, Songs, Ballads, &c Belonging to the County of Durham_, 1834 (references are to the 1969 reprint), p. 14, "Rookhope Ryde" (1 text)

Roud #4008

NOTES [68 words]: Child dates this "ryde" (raid) to the time of the Rising in the North (for background, see "The Rising in the North" [Child 175]), and this seems likely enough. However, neither the song itself nor outside sources give enough details to make this verifiable. The only other evidence is implicit: The Rising distracted or removed so many lords, sheriffs, and bailiffs that it made such a vast raid possible. - RBW

File: C179

Rookie's Lament

DESCRIPTION: "I ain't been long in this here army, Just a few days since I arrive." The new recruit complains about sergeants, drill, hiking, cavalry, cavalry horses, military medicine, military discipline, and anything else that springs to mind

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934

KEYWORDS: army soldier hardtimes

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 548-551, "A Rookie's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #15543
Room Enough
DESCRIPTION: "My Lord says there's room enough, Room enough in Heaven for us all. My Lord says there's room enough, So don't say away." Sisters, brothers, sinners, backsliders are told, "Don't stay away."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (Work)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE,So)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Arnold-FolkSongsOfAlabama, p. 177, "Room Enough" (1 text, 1 tune)
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 245, "Don't Stay Away, People" (1 text)
Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 94-95, "My Lord Says There's Room Enough in Heaven for Us All" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12313
NOTES [67 words]: Jackson notes that this is used as a church and camp song -- but also notes its suitability for field work because it is so easy to improvise; all the lead singer has to do is come up with a noun to start a line, and then repeat it a few times and go into the chorus.
The song perhaps is inspired partly by John 14:2, which says that "In my father's (house/mansion) there are many (rooms/mansions)." - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: JDM094

Room In Dar
DESCRIPTION: "O my mudder is gone, my mudder is gone, My mudder is gone into heaven my Lord, I can't stay behind. Dar's room in dar room in dar Room in dar in de heaven, my Lord, I can't stay behind." Repeat with father, angels; also "I've been on de road."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1870 (Higginson, according to Joyner-FolkSongInSouthCarolina)
KEYWORDS: religious death mother father nonballad home travel
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Joyner-FolkSongInSouthCarolina, p. 85, "Room in Dar" (1 text)
Roud #21327
File: Joyn085

Room Was So Cold and Cheerless, The
DESCRIPTION: "The room was so cold and cheerless and bare," almost without furniture and with broken windows. The cradle sits empty, the woman is dying of hunger and cold. Her husband is a drunkard and will not reach Heaven
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Henry, collected from Rachel Brackett)
KEYWORDS: death abandonment husband wife drink clergy Bible Hell warning
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 116-117, "The Room Was So Cold and Cheerless" (1 text)
NOTES [133 words]: The song states in the final stanza, "A verse in the Bible, the minister read, 'No drunkard shall reach heaven,' it said."
There is no verse in the Bible which uses those precise words. The reference is, I believe, to 1 Corinthians 6:9-10, which reads, "Fornicators, odolators, adulterers, male prostitutes, sodomites, thieves, the freedy, the drunk, the ill-tongued, bandits -- none of these will inherit the Kingdom of God." However, Paul goes on to say that the readers used to be these things, but were freed by the work of Jesus. Although all of these things are (seemingly) sinful, as I read the passage, it is not the sin but the attitude of the sinner which determines salvation. I grant that this is a fairly subtle distinction -- clearly it was lost on the author of this song. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5
File: MHAp116

Roon-Moo'ed Spade, The

DESCRIPTION: "Geordie Mill wi' his roon moo'ed spade Is wishin' aye for mair fouk deid," because he hopes to sell the bodies to anatomists. When a porter brings a casket to his door, Geordie and Robbie set out to sell a body. Robbie eventually repents
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (A. H. Miller, Haunted Dundee, according to Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)
KEYWORDS: burial trick corpse humorous money
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 8, "The Roon-Moo'ed Spade" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #22216
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Black Cook" (subject: sale of dead bodies for anatomical studies)
cf. "Burke's Confession" (subject: sale of dead bodies for anatomical studies)
NOTES [45 words]: The sale of bodies was depressingly common in Scotland in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries; doctors wanted them to demonstrate anatomy. For background on this, see especially "The Black Cook"; for the so-called "anatomist murders," see "Burke's Confession." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5
File: Gath008

Rooster Blues

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "'We got to rock tonight baby' (3x) We got to rock tonight." Animal A tells animal B something; then animal B answers animal A (See notes for examples).
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (recording, Lightnin' Slim)
KEYWORDS: courting dialog humorous nonballad animal chickens
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Mississippi Fred McDowell and unidentified musician, "Little Red Rooster" (on USMississippi01)
Lightnin' Slim, "Rooster Blues" (Excello 2169, 1959)
NOTES [76 words]: For the most part McDowell follows Lightnin' Slime's verses. For example: "The little red rooster told the little red hen, 'I ain't been to see you since God knows when.' The little red hen told the little red rooster, 'You don't come around, daddy, like you used to.'"; "The old black cat told the little grey mouse, 'I've got a mind to chase you round this house.' The little gray mouse told the old black cat, 'Look here daddy, don't tease me like that.'" - BS

Last updated in version 5.1
File: RcRooBlu

Root, Hog, or Die (Confederate Version)

DESCRIPTION: Various cracks about the incompetence or cowardice of the Yankees, ending by saying "We'll make the Dutch (or Old Abe, or any other tempting target) root hog or die." Also praises the confederate armies in extravagant terms
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1864 (various Confederate songsters, according to Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar)
KEYWORDS: Civilwar parody patriotic
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Aug 10, 1861 - Battle of Wilson's Creek
FOUND IN: US(So,SE)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 361-362, "Root, Abe, or Die" (1 text)
Randolph 248, "Root Hog or Die" (1 text, with an element of "The Bonnie Blue Flag" mixed in)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 372, "Root Hog or Die" (1 short text, perhaps mixed)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 372, "Root Hog or Die" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 240-242, "Flight of Doodles"; p. 243, "Root Hog or Die (Southern Version)" (2 texts, 1 tune)

DT, ROOTHOG2*

Roud #7829

CROSS-REFERENCES:
*cf. "Root, Hog, or Die" [Laws B21] and references there
*cf. "The Jolly Union Boys" and references there (concerning Battle of Wilson's Creek)

NOTES [147 words]: Randolph's version of this song is very specific to Missouri; see his notes. Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety's version, at first glance, has almost nothing in common with Randolph's brief and mixed-up version. But both are from the Ozarks, and both involve the Missouri campaigns of Nathaniel Lyon and the Battle of Wilson's Creek. If they aren't the same piece, they are communal efforts on the same theme. Close enough.

Brown's short text is another matter; it seems more generically Confederate, and refers to Fort Sumter. But it's too short to file separately. And Silber's two texts are both clearly Confederate adaptations of "Root, Hog....": they all seem to be one-shots, not worth separating out. For the complex background to the Battle of Wilson's Creek, see the notes to songs in the cross-references, notably "The Jolly Union Boys" and "Joe Stiner." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1

File: R248

Root, Hog, or Die (V)

DESCRIPTION: Minstrel song? "Root, Hog, or Die," with some "Walkin' in the Parlor" verses: "The greatest ole nigger that I eva' did see, Looked like a sick monkey...." "I come from Alabama with a pocketful of news...." Cho: "Chief cook and bottle washer....."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Allsopp)
KEYWORDS: cook work nonballad floating verses food
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):

Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2026, p. 136, "Root Hog or Die! No. 2" (5 references)

ADDITIONAL: Fred W. Allsopp, Folklore of Romantic Arkansas, Volume II (1931), p. 161, ("Root, Hog, or Die")

CROSS-REFERENCES:
*cf. "Root, Hog, or Die" [Laws B21] and references there
*cf. "Walkin' in the Parlor" (lyrics)

File: FWA161A

Root, Hog, or Die (VI -- Cowboy Bawdy variant)

DESCRIPTION: The singer heads to Arizona to punch cattle. He takes a holiday in Phoenix, where was pretty girl says she will "see what I can do for your root, hog, or die." He contracts a venereal disease; "that's why I lost the head of my root, hog, or die."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1976 (collected by Logsdon from Riley Neal)
KEYWORDS: bawdy cowboy sex disease disability
FOUND IN: US(SW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):

Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 22, pp. 140-142, "Root, Hog, or Die" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3242

CROSS-REFERENCES:
*cf. "The Gay Caballero" (theme of disease destroying sexual organs)
*cf. "The Fire Ship" (plot) and references there

File: Logs022
Root, Hog, or Die (VII -- Sailor version)

DESCRIPTION: "'twas on the 24th of March we got underway, Bound to the Western Bank on a bright and sunny day." The sailor complains about his work, about getting wood from a fellow named Carter, and about the cook

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (Beck-FolkloreOfMaine)

KEYWORDS: sailor hardtimes derivative

FOUND IN: US (NE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Beck-FolkloreOfMaine, pp. 215-217, "Root, Hog, or Die" (1 text)
Roud #4732
File: BeMe215

Root, Hog, or Die [Laws B21]

DESCRIPTION: The singer arrives in California broke and takes a job making hay. He soon gambles his pay away, gets drunk, and lands in jail. A friend pays his fine; he warns against the dangers of playing poker

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1910

KEYWORDS: poverty drink gambling prison reprieve

FOUND IN: US (So)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Laws B21, "Root Hog or Die"
Randolph 422, "Root Hog or Die" (5 texts, mostly short and perhaps excerpted, 3 tunes)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 347-349, "Root Hog or Die" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 422C)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 57, "Root, Hog, Or Die" (1 text)
DT 598, ROOTHOG3
Roud #3242

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Root, Hog, or Die (II)"
cf. "Root, Hog, or Die (III)"
cf. "Root, Hog, or Die (IV)"
cf. "Root, Hog, or Die (V)"
cf. "Root, Hog, or Die (Confederate Version)"

SAME TUNE:
[All the other Root, Hog, or Die songs]
New Jers-A ("Come, kind friends, all draw near," by C. A. Boggs) (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 107)
Union Root Hog or Die [1] ("Now gentlement all listen, a story you shall know") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 163)
Union Root Hog or Die [2] ("Away down in South Carolina, they're kicking up a muss") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 163)

File: LB21

Root, Hog, or Die! (II)

DESCRIPTION: A bull-whacker recalls good times in Salt Lake City when his Chinese whore could roll her hog eye, and he would root hog or die.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE:

KEYWORDS: bawdy whore foreigner

FOUND IN: US (So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 576-582, "Root, Hog or Die!" (4 texts, 1 tune)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 11, "Root Hog or Die" (2 texts, 1 tune, with the "A" and "B" texts being different forms of the song. "A" appears to be a cleaned-up version of this form.)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Root, Hog, or Die" [Laws B21] and references there
NOTES [94 words]: The supplemental texts supplied by Legman in Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I are more interesting than the one stanza fragment that Randolph collected. - EC
[Note: Randolph actually collected five "clean" versions of this piece, but all -- except that listed as "Root Hog or Die (Confederate Version)" -- are quite fragmentary. - RBW]
I am not entirely sure that the Fife "A" text is a variant of this piece (though it starts in the same way). But if it isn't, it needs its own entry -- and I'm tired of the proliferation of "Root Hog or Die" versions.... - RBW
File: RL576

Root, Hog, or Die! (III -- The Bull-Whacker)

DESCRIPTION: A "Western" "Root Hog" version, with the singer herding cattle and keeping an eye out for local wildlife. He complains about the hard life and bad food, but also talks about the pretty girls
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934; Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah's source claimed to have learned it around 1888
KEYWORDS: work travel animal whore
FOUND IN: US(Ro)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #157, "The Bull Whacker" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 171, "Root, Hog, or Die" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 430-432, "The Bull-Whacker" (1 text)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 11, "Root Hog or Die" (2 texts, 1 tune, of which the "B" text, "The Philosophical Cowboy," appears to belong here)
DT, ROOTHOG1*
Roud #4292
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Root, Hog, or Die" [Laws B21] and references there
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Philosophical Cowboy
NOTES [32 words]: The final verses of this version resemble the bawdy text (Root, Hog, or Die II), and one wonders if this version might not have been cleaned up. But the lead-in is completely different. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.8
File: LoF171

Root, Hog, or Die! (IV)

DESCRIPTION: "I'll tell you all a story that happened long ago, When the English came to America... The Yankees boys made 'em sing 'Root hog or die.'" The singer describes various English defeats: the Tea Party, Bunker Hill, Yorktown, Baltimore, New Orleans
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (a text reported by Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety to be this was found in the 1859 Dime Song Book)
KEYWORDS: battle patriotic
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Dec. 16, 1773 - Boston Tea Party. Americans protest the British tax on tea by dumping a shipload into Boston Harbor
June 17, 1775 - Battle of Bunker Hill (fought on Breed's Hill, and won by the British, though at heavy cost)
Oct 19, 1781 - Cornwallis surrenders at Yorktown (not really as a result of being defeated; his supply line had been cut by the French navy)
Aug 24, 1814 - A British force under Robert Ross captures Washington, D.C. after brushing aside the incompetent defenders. (Madison's administration had already fled). Two days later the British leave for Baltimore.
Sept 13, 1814 - Battle of Fort McHenry, which saves Baltimore from the British attack.
Jan 8, 1815 - Battle of New Orleans. Although a peace had already been signed, word had not yet reached Louisiana, which British General Pakenham sought to invade. Andrew Jackson's backwoodsmen easily repulse Pakenham.

FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, p. 334, "Root Hog or Die" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2025, p. 136, "Root Hog or Die" (5 references)
Roud #4734
CROSS-REFERENCES:
ct. "Root, Hog, or Die" [Laws B21] and references there
File: Beld334

Rory O'More

DESCRIPTION: "Young Rory O'More courted young Kathleen Bawn." He teases her. She says Mike loves her and dreams of hating Rory. Rory says "drames always go by contraries," After thrashing Dinny Grimes and Jim Duff he asks her to marry. They marry and retire to bed.

AUTHOR: Samuel Lover (1797-1868)
EARLIEST DATE: before 1839 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3313))
KEYWORDS: courting marriage fight dream
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Greig/Duncan4 770, "Rory o' More" (1 text, 1 tune)
O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 90, "Rory O'More" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2030, p. 136, "Rory O'More" (2 references)
Winstock-SongsAndMusicOfTheRedcoats, pp. 217-218, "Rory O'More" (1 tune)
Heart-Songs, pp. 202-204, "Rory O'More" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, pp. 49-50, "Rory O'More" (1 text)
Roud #6125
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(3313), "Rory O'More", J. Catnach (London), 1813-1838; also Firth b.27(136), Harding B 11(1513), Firth c.17(129) [only partly legible], Harding B 11(2596), Harding B 25(72), 2806 b.11(243), Harding B 16(233c), Harding B 11(3312), Firth b.34(212) View 2 of 2, 2806 c.16(297), Johnson Ballads 342, 2806 c.15(328), "Rory O'More"
SAME TUNE:
Too-Ril-Te-Too (The Robin and the Cat) (File: Lins293)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Rory O'More
NOTES [300 words]: Since O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland omits the fourth(final) stanza broadside Bodleian Harding B 11(3313) was used for the Description.
Greig/Duncan4, like O'Connor, omits the broadside's fourth verse. Since, other than that, the text matches the broadside very closely, this may be an example of intentional self-censorship although that fourth verse is mild: they marry and go to bed. - BS
At least one source sub-titles this "Good Omens."
There was an Irish nationalist, Rory O'More, who was a leader of the 1641 rebellion (and a grandfather of Sarsfield, for whom see "After Aughrim's Great Disaster"). It doesn't appear he is connected with this song, though.
According to William H. A. Williams, 'Twas Only an Irishman's Dream, University of Illinois Press, 1996, p. 66, "By the 1830s the Irishman was becoming a familiar figure in the American theater. In that decade, however, the combined talents of two men in London helped move Paddy from the periphery to center stage on both sides of the Atlantic. In 1836 Samuel Lover's Rory O'More, a song turned into a play, was among the first comedies to have an Irish peasant character as the hero. The play's success was guaranteed by the superb acting of the man who created the title role, Tyrone Power."
On p. 67, Williams adds that Lover sought to transform the figure of the Irishman: "Lover replaced the old savage element of the stereotype with a childlike naivete. According to [Sally E.] Foster, Lover cleaned up the stage Irishman and made him fit for respectable middle-class entertainment. In doing so, he gave Paddy a new lease on life."
This Tyrone Power (full name: William Grattan Tyrone Power, born in Waterford in 1797; he was lost at sea on the President in 1841) was the great-grandfather of the Hollywood star. - RBW
Rory of the Hill

DESCRIPTION: The bold Tip mountaineer" "Rory of the Hill" asks if Scully is dead." Rory tells how Scully and the agent turned him and his mother out. Since then he, like Michael Hayes, shot a landlord or agent. He fled to New York, but has returned to Ireland.

AUTHOR: Thomas Walsh (according to broadside Bodleian 2806 b.10(137)) or I. Walsh (according to broadsides Bodleian Firth b.26(102), Bodleian Firth c.26(154) and Bodleian 2806 c.8(278))

EARLIEST DATE: 1868 (Zimmerman-SongsOffIrishRebellion)

KEYWORDS: emigration return homicide America Ireland

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Zimmerman-SongsOffIrishRebellion 75, "Rory of the Hill" (1 text)
Roud #V2038

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth b.26(102), "Rory of the Hills" ("At Slievenamon the man who asked me was Scully dead?"), T. Pearson (Manchester), 1850-1899 ; also Firth c.26(154), "Rory of the Hills"; 2806 b.10(137), "Rory of the Hill"; 2806 c.8(278), "Roary of the Hill"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Whole Hog or None" (tune, per broadsides Bodleian 2806 b.10(137) and Bodleian 2806 c.8(278))

Rory of the Hills

DESCRIPTION: A son asks why a "rake up near the rafters" is not used to make hay. His father, Rory of the Hill, takes him to meet his old comrades and then reveals that the rake hides a sword. He does his soldier's drill and says "You'll be a Freeman yet, my boy"

AUTHOR: Charles J. Kickham (1828-1882) (See Notes)

EARLIEST DATE: before 1885 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 40(2) View 1 of 4)

KEYWORDS: rebellion patriotic father farming

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (4 citations):
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, pp. 74-75, "Rory of the Hills" (1 text)
Healy-MercierBookOfOldIrishStreetBalladsVol2, pp. 128-130, "Rory of the Hill" (1 text)
DT, RORYOMOR*

ADDITIONAL: Kathleen Hoagland, editor, One Thousand Years of Irish Poetry (New York, 1947), pp. 525-526, "Rory of the Hill" (1 text)
Roud #V4205

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 40(2) View 1 of 4, "Rory of the Hill" ("That rake up near the rafters"), J.F. Nugent and Co.? (Dublin?), 1877-1884

NOTES [86 words]: Broadside Harding B 40(2) View 1 of 4 has the lines strangely rearranged and some of the text is missing. Irish Minstrelsy by H. Halliday Sparling (London, 1888), pp. 28-30, 502, "Rory of the Hills" makes the attribution to Kickham. [Supported by Hoagland. - RBW] - BS For the career of Kickham, an Irish nationalist who helped organize the Irish Republican Brotherhood, see the notes to "Patrick Sheehan [Laws J11]."

Healy, pp. 130-131, has a second "Rory of the Hill" song. It appears related only by title. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.1

File: 0Con074

Rosa Lee McFall

DESCRIPTION: Singer loves Rosa Lee McFall and sings her praises. He proposes to her; she accepts, but then dies. He vows to roam the world alone "till God prepares my place in heaven
With my Rosa Lee McFall"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE:
KEYWORDS: grief courting love death mourning travel
FOUND IN: US
RECORDINGS:
Charlie Monroe & His Kentucky Pardners, "Rosa Lee McFall" (RCA Victor 21-0054, 1949)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Rosa Lee McFall" (on NLCR13)
NOTES [30 words]: This plot shows up enough times that I have the sneaking suspicion "Rosa Lee McFall" is a variant of another song. Since I don't know which, however, I've indexed it on its own. - PJS
File: RcRLMcF

Rosabella Fredolin
DESCRIPTION: Sailor sings about his "greatest delight," a rope maker's daughter who betrayed him when he sailed away. She tore up his letters to use as hair curlers. When he hears of this he writes a farewell to her and adds mention of her drinking and smoking habits.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1844
LONG DESCRIPTION: Sailor sings about his "greatest delight," a rope maker's daughter who betrayed him when he sailed away. She tore up his letters to use as hair curlers. When he hears of this he writes a farewell to her and adds mention of her drinking and smoking habits. This was often sung to the tune of "Ane Madam," a Swedish version of "Blow the Man Down."
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage sailor courting rejection farewell hair drink
FOUND IN: Sweden
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 216-219, "Rosabella Fredolin" (2 texts, English & Swedish, 1 tune)
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 104, "Rosabella Fredolin" (2 texts, Swedish and English, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ane Madam" (tune)
NOTES [27 words]: Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas took this from Sang under Segel (1935) where the compiler (Sternvall) says that it came from a seaman's song-book dated 1844. - SL
Last updated in version 5.0
File: Hugi216

Rosaleen Bawn
DESCRIPTION: The singer wishes Rosaleen Bawn to come away with him. He tells how the May moon is the perfect time to escape. He tells her she will soon forget her home, and that he will make her happy and, apparently, rich
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: love courting nightvisit elopement
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H63, p. 247, "Rosaleen Bawn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13337
NOTES [47 words]: It is by no means clear, from the song, whether the singer is rich, is handing the girl a line, or is just given to hyperbole. Sam Henry reports that the singer was courting the daughter of his employer, and had nothing to offer her. This doesn't really seem to suit the song. - RBW
File: HHH063

Rosalie the Prairie Flower
DESCRIPTION: "On the distant prairie, where the heather wild In its quiet beauty lived and smil'd," beautiful Rosalie lives in a little cottage. "But the summer faded, and a chilly blast O'er that happy cottage swept." She dies and is carried to heaven in a white robe

AUTHOR: Music: "G. F. Wurzel" (George F. Root) (See NOTES for the words)
EARLIEST DATE: 1855 (source: Mudcat notes)
KEYWORDS: death beauty home
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Root-StoryOfAMusicalLife-GeorgeFRoot, pp. 237-239, "Rosalie, The Prairie Flower" (1 text, 1
tune)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 717, "Rosalie, the Prairie Flower" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2032, p. 137, "Rosalie the Prairie Flower" (6 references)
Roud #4460

BROADSIDES:

"Rosalie, the Prairie Flower" (John C. Schreiber & Son, Macon and Savannah, N.D.)

SAME TUNE:
"Lonely Round the Portals" (Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, p. 40)

NOTES [645 words]: George F. Root sometimes used the pseudonym "Wurzel" because "Wurzel" is German for "Root." He wrote in his autobiography, "I saw at once that mine must be the 'people's song,' still, I am ashamed to say, I shared the feeling that was around me in regard to that grade of music [i.e. that it was beneath him]. When Stephen C. Foster's wonderful melodies (as I now see them) began to appear, and the famous Christy's Minstrels began to make them known, I 'took a hand in' and wrote a few, but put 'G. Friedrich Wurzel' (the Germen for Root) to them instead of my own name. 'Hazel Dell' and "Rosalie, the Prairie Flower' were the best known of those so written" (Root, p. 83).
The lack of a "name" composer didn't hurt the song's sales; Finson, p. 87, says that "Rosalie" sold more than a hundred thousand copies.
The authorship of the words is a bit of a conundrum. Several sources, including Wikipedia, say that they are by Frances Jane "Fanny" Crosby. Yet I haven't seen this on any of the early sheet music or broadsides. Crosby did supply the lyrics for another Root hit, "There's Music in the Air." But Root's own sheet music of "Rosalie," on p. 237, lists only "Wurzel (G. F. R.)." The earliest sheet music I've found says "Poetry and Music by Wurzel" -- but the next one I've found, published by Richardson (which says it is sung by the Christy Minstrels), says it was "COMPOSED by Wurzel, not "WRITTEN and composed by Wurzel." Crosby is not mentioned on either. Indeed, I've never seen a broadside or early sheet music copy that mentions her name.
Nor does Root refer to Crosby when he describes the composition of the song. According to Root, p. 110, Nathan Richardson was trying to start a line of popular sheet music. Root gives the story on
p. 111: "So the question came up between [Richardson and his brother] of getting something to publish that the people would buy. In this dilemma my friend came to me and asked if I would write him six songs. I laughed at him a little, but was very happy to do it, my three-years' engagement with [publishers] Wm. Hall & Son being just out. The songs were finished during vacation, and we tried them over at Willow Farm in manuscript. There were six of us, and I said, 'Let us choose from these six songs the one that we think will become most popular. The oldest shall choose first, then then the next shall choose from the remainder, then the next, and so on down to the youngest.' The youngest was my sister Fanny, then a young girl, and when the choice came to her the only song left unchosen was 'Rosalie, the Prairie Flower.'
"When I took the songs to my friend he said he would prefer to buy them outright. What would I take for the 'lot'? There was a bit of sarcasm in the last word. 'Well,' I replied, 'as you propose a wholesale instead of a retail transaction, you shall have the 'lot' at wholesale prices, which will be one hundred dollars apiece -- six hundred dollars for all.' He laughed at the idea.... The idea of paying such a sum for these little things could not be thought of. 'Very well,' I said, 'Give me the usual royalty; that will suit me quite as well.' This was agreed to, and when he had paid me in royalties nearly three thousand dollars for 'Rosalie' alone, he concluded that six hundred for the 'lot' would not have been an unreasonable price.
Thus it doesn't sound as if Root thought Crosby had much to do with the piece! But on the other hand, on p. 112 he refers to writing words for his tunes, and says that at first it was hard. Note that this is after he said he wrote "Rosalie."
Spaeth, p. 127, seems also to give sole credit to Root.
Curiously, "The Hazel Dell," the second song Root listed as a well-known piece by Wurzel, is also credited to Crosby on her Wikipedia page! For background on possible author Fanny Crosby van Alstyne, see the notes to "A Few More Marchings Weary." - RBW

Bibliography

- Root: George F. Root, The Story of a Musical Life, 1891; I use the 1970(?) Da Capo reprint

Last updated in version 6.0
File: Wo2E2032

Rosalind's Complaint

DESCRIPTION: "On the bank of a river so deep," "faithfullest" Rosalind mourns the loss of "most fickle ... Damon her lover." Having seduced her, "his flame from that moment expir'd" and he has "gone, to deceive some fresh nymph"

AUTHOR: Baker (source: Struthers)
EARLIEST DATE: 1782 (_The Charmer_, according to Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1); possibly 1729 (Watts, according to Chappell)
KEYWORDS: grief courting love seduction sex virginity rejection
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1 6, "Fair Rosalind" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: John Struthers, The Harp of Caledonia (Glasgow, 1821 ("Digitized by Google")), Vol. I, pp. 197-198, "Rosalind's Complaint"
Roud #3852
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Grim King of the Ghosts" (tune, per Struthers)
SAME TUNE:
Grim King of the Ghosts (Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic II, pp. 129-130)
NOTES [123 words]: Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1, p. xxxv: "6 Fair Rosalind is part of a song of seven eight-line stanzas beginning 'On the bank of a river so deep' which appears in the second volume of a song-book called _The Charmer_ (Edinburgh 1782 pp. 73-74)." Chappell [W. Chappell, Popular Music of the Olden Time (London, n.d. [1859 per Internet Archive]), Vol II, p. 493], discussing the tune "Grim King of the Ghosts" says the tune was "also printed in Watts' _Musical Miscellany_, i. 126 (1729) to a song entitled "Rosalind's Comp-laint," commencing, "On the bank of a river so deep." Both Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1 and Chappell seem to be referring to the text quoted by Struthers and used as the source for the description. - BS

Last updated in version 2.6
File: LyCr106

Rosamund Clifford

DESCRIPTION: King Henry II loves Rosamund Clifford, and constructs a bower at Woodstock to guard her from Queen Eleanor's jealousy. The King and Rosamund talk at length. He departs for the wars. Queen Eleanor poisons Rosamund

AUTHOR: Thomas Deloney? (Bodleian attribution for the broadsides)
EARLIEST DATE: 1765 (Percy) (Broadside registered 1656)
KEYWORDS: love separation death poison royalty
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1154-1189 - Reign of Henry II
1176 - Death of Rosamund Clifford
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Percy/Wheatley-ReliquesOfAncientEnglishPoetry II, pp. 154-164, "Fair Rosamund" (1 text)
Ritson-AncientSongsBalladsFromHenrySecondToTheRevolution, pp. 253-259, "Fair Rosamond" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN2820, "When as King Henry rul'd this Land/"; cf. Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN2442, "Sweet youthful charming ladies fair" cf. Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic I, pp. 163-164, "Rosamund" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3729
BROADSIDES:
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Queen Eleanor's Confession" [Child 156] (subject)
cf. "Fair Rosamond" (subject)
cf. "Flying Fame" (tune, per Bodleian broadsides)
SAME TUNE:
When Anne, a Princess of renown/The Glorius Warriour (Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex ZN2817)
NOTES [468 words]: Roud lumps "Fair Rosamond (I)" and "Rosamund Clifford." They are obviously about the same story, but I consider them distinct; the story was famous enough to attract many writers -- indeed, there seem to be other Rosamond poems that appear in popular music collections. I have lumped all these others here, except for "Fair Rosamund," on the grounds that few can be demonstrated to be traditional.
The versions listed above seem to fall into two families; the Percy text goes with the broadside "When as King Henry Ruled this Land"; Chappell's version is a "Sweet Youthful Charming Ladies Fair" type of text.
There are traditional elements to the songs, however, as the folk accounts do not match the actual facts. This possibly justifies their inclusion here.
The facts are these: Henry II truly did marry Eleanor of Aquitaine, and he truly did have an affair with Rosamund Clifford. Rosamund appears to have been the true love of Henry's life. Beyond this, all is conjecture. We do not have dates for Rosamund's romance with Henry, and the evidence conflicts. Geoffrey, Bishop of Lincoln is said to have been their (second) son, born in 1159. But this conflicts with other evidence about Henry's amours. Also, Henry was still busily having children by Eleanor at that time. The last child of Henry and Eleanor was the future King John, born 1166/67. Henry was still a relatively young man of about 34, while Eleanor was about 45 and probably incapable of bearing further children.
Rosamund was the daughter of Walter FitzPonce, who took the surname Clifford upon gaining the title of Clifford Castle (by marriage) some time before 1138. The date of Rosamund's birth is uncertain. She died around 1176 or 1177, but the death was the result of natural causes -- and she was living as a nun at the time! Indeed, by the 1170s, Henry had Eleanor under virtual house arrest; even had she wanted to, she probably could not have arranged Rosamund's death. For more on this, see the notes to "Queen Eleanor's Confession" [Child 156]; there is also some material in "Fair Rosamund."
Ritson and others attribute the text of this that begins "When as King Henry ruled this land" to Thomas Deloney, but several pieces with some traditional elements have been attributed to Deloney, so I have marked the matter as uncertain. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: Perc2154

Rose Blanche, La (The White Rose)

DESCRIPTION: French: "Par un matin je me suis leve (x2), Plus mantin que ma tante (x2)." The singer enters a garden and is picking white roses when her lover approaches. She falls and "breaks her ankle." The "doctor" tells her to bathe it in water and white roses

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1960

KEYWORDS: love, flowers, courting, injury, foreign language

FOUND IN: Canada

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Fowke/Mills/Blume-Canada's Story In Song, pp. 118-119, "La Rose Blanche" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: FMB118

---

Rose Bud Blooms But Once, The

DESCRIPTION: "I was a little girl with long curly hair" when her mother warned that "the little rose bud a-blooming there It will soon fade away." A miller's boy gets her pregnant and leaves. When her daughter grows up, she will warn her that beauty blooms just once

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 2001 (HCargillFamily)

KEYWORDS: love, courting, beauty, bastard, abandonment, children, warning

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

RECORDINGS:

Sara Brown and Margaret Tyler, "The Rose Bud Blooms But Once" (on HCargillFamily)

File: RcRBBB0

---

Rose Connooley [Laws F6]

DESCRIPTION: The singer kills Rose by drugging her (with "burglar's wine"), stabbing her, and throwing her in the river. He commits the crime on his father's assurance that "money would set [him] free," but the assurance was false; he is to be hanged

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Cox)

KEYWORDS: homicide, drugs, river, execution, wine

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE)

REFERENCES (15 citations):

Laws F6, "Rose Connooley"

Warner-Traditional American Folk Songs From Anne And Frank Warner Coll 110, "Rose Connally" (1 text, 1 tune)

Brown/Belden/Hudson-Frank C Brown Collection NC Folklore 2 249, "Rose Connally" (1 text plus excerpts from 1 more)

Brown/Schinhan-Frank C Brown Collection NC Folklore 4 67, "Rose Connally" (3 excerpts, 3 tunes)

Burton/Manning-East Tennessee State Collection Vol 2, pp. 38-39, "Down in the Willow Garden" (1 text, 1 tune)

Lomax/Lomax-FolkSong USA 83, "Down in the Willow Garden" (1 text, 1 tune)

Lomax-Folk Songs Of North America 137, "Rose Connelly" (1 text, 1 tune)

Cox-Folk Songs South 91, "Rose Connoley" (2 texts)

Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol 3, pp. 63-65, "Rose Conoley" (1 text, 1 tune)

Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol 5, pp. 48-49, "Down in the Willow Garden" (1 text, 1 tune, which he suspects derives from a recorded version)

Roberts-SangBranch Settlers, #19, "Willow Garden" (1 text, 1 tune)

Darling-New American Songster, pp. 202-203, "Willow Garden" (1 text)

Silber/Silber-Folksingers Wordbook, p. 223, "Down In The Willow Garden" (1 text)

DT (311), WLLWGRDN

ADDITIONAL: James P. Leary, Compiler and Annotator, _Wisconsin Folklore_ University of Wisconsin Press, 2009, article "Kentucky Folksong in Northern Wisconsin" by Asher E. Treat, p. 237, "My Father Has Often Told Me" (1 text, 1 tune, sung by Maud Jacobs and Pearl Jacobs Borusky)

Roud #446

RECORDINGS:

Texas Gladden with Hobart Smith, "Down in the Willow Garden" (Disc 6081, 1940s; on USTGladden01)

Charlie Higgins, Wade Ward & Dave Poe, "Willow Garden" [instrumental] (on LomaxCD1702)
NOTES [258 words]: Almost every version of this song contains a crux: Just what did the killer cause Rose to drink? Burglar's wine? Burgundy wine? Something else (Texas Gladden sung either "virgin" or "Persian"; one of Cox's informants had something like "merkley").

Burgundy, although it's a common reading, frankly makes no sense. The usual tune (as sung, e.g., by Grayson and Gladden) calls for two syllables, not three and burgundy isn't going to knock a girl out, either.

Problem is, the other main possibility is "burglar's wine," and no one knows what "burglar's wine" is.
But that, of course, invites correction, perhaps to "burgundy." It makes no sense to assume that "burgundy" is original and corrected to "burglar's"; this produces a paradox. If "burglar's wine" is meaningless, a listener is not likely to hear the song as to make nonsense (it might happen once, but not several times, and Cox and Grayson show "burglar's wine" to be widespread). So if "burglar's wine" does exist, then it could be an original reading, but it is unlikely to be a derived reading.

Thus I do not doubt that "burglar's wine" is the earliest extant reading in the tradition. It may even be original; I seem to recall reading somewhere that it was a drugged wine. But I can't find the reference.

Lyle Lofgren, who has studied the piece, proposed an emendation which makes reasonable sense:
"[Russell Bartlett's 'Dictionary of Americanisms'] gave me a candidate: 'burgaloo,' a popular pear variety at the time, identified in the dictionary as a variant of 'virgelieu.'" - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: LF06

Rose in June

DESCRIPTION: "Was down in the valleys, the valleys so deep, To pick some plain roses to keep my love sweet, So let it come early, late or soon, I will enjoy my rose in June." "O, the roses are red, the violets blue." "O love, I will carry the sweet milking pail."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Hammond collection)
KEYWORDS: love courting flowers lyric
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Copper-SongsAndSouthernBreezes, pp. 256-257, "Rose in June" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brocklebank/Kindersley-DorsetBookOfFolkSongs, p. 27, "My Rose in June" (1 text, 1 tune)
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 54, "The Rose in June, or Let it be Early, Late or Soon" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1202
File: CoSB256

Rose In June (II), The

DESCRIPTION: Captain Davidson, his wife and crew pray before sailing. After a storm all vessels but his, Rose in June, return. On board the wreck Davidson leads the crew in prayer. He and his mate are washed off the wreck but the rest of the crew is saved.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)
KEYWORDS: death drowning fishing sea ship storm wreck Scotland religious wife
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Dec 17, 1872 - The fishing lugger Rose in June sinks in a gale at Elie Harbour, Fife, Scotland. The captain Andrew Davidson and mate John Allen drown. (source: Guigné)
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 315-319, "The Rose in June" (1 text, 1
tune)
Roud #25337
RECORDINGS:
Rose in the Garden (III)

DESCRIPTION: "There's a rose in the garden for you, fair man, There's a rose in the garden for you, fair maid, There's a rose in the garden, pluck it if you can, Be sure you don't choose a false-hearted one. It's a bargain, it's a bargain for you, fair man...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren)

KEYWORDS: playparty flowers love

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #45, "Rose in the Garden" (1 text plus fragments)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Sailing in the Boat" (lyrics)

NOTES [29 words]: Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren considers this to be close to "Sailing in the Boat," but it appears to me that they are two songs fused rather than one that split. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.3

File: Newe045

Rose o' Dundee

DESCRIPTION: "Early one Monday morning as I walked Dundee street," the singer meets a beautiful girl whom he labels the Rose o' Dundee. He offers to watch over her. She says she has another man. The other man, a sailor, appears, and sailor and girl live happily

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)

KEYWORDS: love courting beauty sailor rejection

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 64, "Rose o’ Dundee" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #V4975

NOTES [57 words]: Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee puts this to the tune that old war horse "Vilikens and his Dinah (William and Dinah)" [Laws M31A/B], which clearly fits but is not listed as the original tune. But several lines in the song are more reminiscent of "Willie Archer (The Banks of the Bann)"; if there was an original tune, I suspect that was it. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5

File: Gath064

Rose of Alabama, The

DESCRIPTION: "Away from Mississippi's vale, With my old hat there for a sail, I crossed upon a cotton bale To Rose of Alabama." The singer courts Rose. His banjo falls into the stream. "And every night... To hunt my banjo for an hour... I meet... my flower."

AUTHOR: Words: Silas S. Steele

EARLIEST DATE: 1846

KEYWORDS: music courting love trick river

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (4 citations):

Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 326-327, "The Rose of Alabama" (1 text)

Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 214-215, "The Rose of Alabama" (1 text, 1 tune)

Heart-Songs, pp. 218-219, "The Rose of Alabama" (1 text, 1 tune)

Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2035, p. 137, "The Rose of Alabama" (1 reference)

Roud #21417

File: SBoA214
Rose of Allandale, The

DESCRIPTION: "The sky was clear, the morn was fair, Not a breath came over the sea When Mary left her highland home And wandered forth with me." The singer recounts his travels and hardships, noting that the love of Mary, the Rose of Allandale, helped him through.

AUTHOR: Sidney Nelson and Charles Jefferys (source: Gogan)

EARLIEST DATE: 1843 (Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong)

KEYWORDS: love travel

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, p. 17, "The Rose of Allendale" (1 text)
- Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 257-260, "The Rose of Allendale" (1 text, 1 tune); also p. 260, "(Mary's Cot)" (1 text, with the first verse belonging here though the rest is from "Adieu Sweet Lovely Nancy")
- Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2036, p. 137, "The Rose of Allendale" (3 references)
- DT, ALANDAL *

Roud #1218

BROADSIDES:

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- Sweet Rose of Allendale
- Sweet Rose of Allendale

NOTES [41 words]: Robert Gogan, 130 Great Irish Ballads (third edition, Music Ireland, 2004), p. 128, is the source for the statement that this is by Nelson and Jefferys. I don't trust that too far, since he seems to think this patently Scottish song is Irish. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.5

File: SWMS257

Rose of Ardee, The

DESCRIPTION: When the singer came to this country he fell in love with Mary and would have married her. He curses the weaver who stole her. He will take his week's wages to the alehouse.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1821 (broadside, Bodleian 2806 c.17(366))

KEYWORDS: courting infidelity travel drink nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) US(MA)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Thompson-APioneerSongster 35, "The Rose of Ardee" (1 text)
- Forget-Me-Not-Songster, p. 219, "The Rose of Ardee" (1 text)

Roud #2816

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, 2806 c.17(366), "Rose of Ardee" ("When first to this country a stranger I came," G. Thompson (Liverpool), 1789-1820; also Firth b.26(484)[some words illegible], Johnson Ballads fol. 25, Firth b.25(83), 2806 c.17(365), 2806 b.11(113), Harding B 11(3331), Harding B 11(104), Harding B 11(9483), Firth b.25(269), Harding B 11(103), Harding B 11(363), Harding B 25(1655), Harding B 25(1660), Harding B 11(2944), "[The] Rose of Ardee"
- LOCsinging, as112020, "Rose of Ardee," L. Deming (Boston), no date
- VonWalthour, CD Drive>r>r(17), "Rose of Ardee" ("When first to this country a stranger I came"), L. Deming (Boston), no date

NOTES [119 words]: Broadsides LOCsinging as112020 and VonWalthour CDDrive>r>r(17) appear to be the same edition.

Is the commonplace "When first to this country a stranger I came," and its many close variants, to be taken to indicate immigration or seasonal work? The Thompson-APioneerSongster and Bodleian 2806 c.17(366) versions have the rejected young man planning a summer soldier tour: "I'll away to the army for months two or three." More reasonably, the LOCsinging text has "I'm bound to the city for months two or three" and then he can travel. Perhaps on the side of immigration is
Rose of Britain's Isle, The [Laws N16]
DESCRIPTION: Jane falls in love with a servant, who is then sent to sea. She follows him in disguise and is wounded in battle. Her secret having been revealed, her lover marries her. They return home to find her father willing to forgive
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1883 (Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia)
KEYWORDS: exile cross-dressing sea marriage father
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar,Newf)
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Laws N16, "The Rose of Britain's Isle"
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 29, "The Rose of Britain's Isle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland 50, "The Rose of Britain's Isle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, pp. 61-63, "The Rose of Britain's Isle" (1 text)
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 48, "Rose of Britain's Isle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 37, "The Rose of Britain's Isle" (1 text)
Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi 90, "The Rose of Britain's Isle" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 447, ROSEBRIT
Roud #1796
File: LN16

Rose of England, The [Child 166]
DESCRIPTION: A rose springs up in England, but is rooted up by a boar. The rose returns via Milford Haven, gathers his forces, wins the field, becomes king, and receives great praise.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1750 (Percy folio)
KEYWORDS: royalty rebellion flowers political
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1485 - Death of Richard III. Accession of Henry VII
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Child 166, "The Rose of England" (1 text)
Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume III, pp. 187-194, "The rose of Englande" (1 text)
Flanders/Onley-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland, p. 91, "The Rose of England" (1 fragment, with lyrics somewhat resembling Child's but so short that it may not be the same song)
Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland3, pp. 149-150, "The Rose of England" (1 text, the same fragment as Flanders/Onley-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #3720
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #5919
Roud #4001
NOTES [1638 words]: According to David C. Fowler, A Literary History of the Popular Ballad, Duke University Press, 1968, p. 158 n. 25, this is one of eighteen ballads in the Child collection found only in the Percy Folio. Flanders and Olney obviously disagree, but I am far from confident that the Flanders/Onley-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland text is the same song -- and if it is, that it was not learned from one of the print editions of the Percy Folio.
E. K. Chambers, English Literature at the Close of the Middle Ages, Oxford, 1945, 1947, p. 164, says that "The Rose of England, at least by title, [is] in Fletcher's Monsieur Thomas of about 1616." It is obviously possible that that is this ballad -- but once again I doubt it. This is largely a propaganda piece to justify the Tudor usurpation, and by 1616, with the Stuarts on the throne, that was hardly an issue any more. If the title were more specific ("Henry, the Tudor Rose" or some such), the probability would be higher -- but "The Rose of England" is too generic and could apply to many people other than Henry Tudor. Indeed, almost anyone taken off the street would be more rose-like than Henry VII.

To tell the history of the Wars of the Roses in less than thirty thousand words is impossible (especially since it involves the story of Richard III, who is perhaps the most controversial figure in all of human history), but here goes anyway:

In 1399, King Richard II was deposed (with good reason; he was an inept despot). The throne, however, did not pass to his heir (his great-grand-nephew, a Mortimer) but to his cousin Henry IV. This was acceptable as long as Henry IV and his son Henry V were alive. But in 1422, just after he had been declared heir to the kingdom of France, Henry V died, leaving as his only heir a nine month old boy, Henry VI.

Without a strong king, England soon lost control of France (the last possessions outside Calais were lost by 1453). To make matters worse, Henry VI was feeble-minded, and was married to a tremendously ambitious queen, Margaret of Anjou. Their inept government descended into chaos when Henry went mad.

Eventually a civil war arose between Henry's partisans and the partisans of Richard Duke of York (the legitimate heir of Richard II). Richard of York probably didn't really want the throne, but when Margaret had him killed, Richard's son Edward had no choice but to seize power (1461). It took Edward (IV) ten years to gain a firm grip on power (it is probably not coincidence that Edward gained firm control in 1471, when his brother Richard turned 18. Richard was Edward's chief support in the last years of his reign). Edward reigned for another twelve peaceful years. Then disaster struck. Edward died young in 1483, leaving as his heir a twelve year old boy (Edward V) who was in the hands of a rapacious faction. When a rumor arose that Edward V was illegitimate, Richard seized the throne. (The fact that his seizure cost a couple of people their heads should not conceal the fact that it was arguably legal and undoubtedly the best thing for England.)

The Lancastrian faction (which had earlier supported Henry VI) managed to find a new candidate for the throne in Henry Tudor, a semi-illegitimate descendent of Henry IV's father John of Gaunt. By a minor miracle, Henry defeated Richard III at the Battle of Bosworth in 1485 and became king as Henry VII. (Despite the song, it should be noted that Richard III was far more legitimate than Henry VII, was probably a better soldier, gave every evidence of being a decent man when politics wasn't involved, and based on contemporary accounts was not deformed although what is thought to be his corpse does show a spinal condition. Henry, by contrast, was a cheap, rather ugly coward.) To firm up his claim, Henry also had to marry Edward IV's daughter Elizabeth.

It is ironic to note that Henry was often proclaimed as a gift from God designated to rescue England from Richard. But Henry's arrival corresponded to the arrival of the "Sweating Sickness," which apparently killed tens of thousands of people by the time of the last known outbreak in 1551. (According to The Wordsworth Encyclopedia of Plague & Pestilence, there were outbreaks in 1485, 1507-1508, 1516-1517, 1529, and 1551). Thus the sickness was virulent just about exactly as long as there were male Tudors on the throne. No, I don't think the facts actually related. But it's something for the "divine intervention" folks to consider.)

The title "The Rose of England" came from Henry's adopted token of the red rose -- and also from the white rose that was the token of the House of York (the family of Edward IV, Richard III, and Elizabeth). Whether Henry VII was an improvement over Richard III can be debated -- but certainly he was no rose. Perhaps the best evidence of this is the company he kept: The three men most responsible for making him king were

- Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, who was murdered by his own people for his behavior
- Sir William Stanley, a multiple turncoat who had been spared by Richard and who saved Henry's life -- but was executed by Henry half a dozen years later for treason! (Of which more below.)
- Lord Thomas Stanley, Sir William's brother and Henry's stepfather, another turncoat whom Richard had spared. He lived to become Earl of Derby, but Henry kicked him out of his government.

The two Stanleys are the ultimately the heroes of this, and more directly of "The Battle of Bosworth Field," another piece found only in the Percy Folio, which evidently had access to some sort of Stanley Family propaganda source.

Henry's Chancellor was John Morton, Bishop of Ely, whose chief accomplishment was his ability to extort money from Henry's subjects.

All in all, a man with very unpleasant associates. The best thing that can be said for Henry VII is that he was the grandfather of Elizabeth I -- but, of course, Edward IV was Elizabeth's great-grandfather, and Richard III her great-great-uncle.

The sundry references in this song include the following:

"A crowned king... ouer England, Ireland, and France": The kings of England had claimed the throne of France since the time of Edward III -- but in Henry VII's time, only Calais was still in Henry's hands, and the only use Henry made of the title was to use it to extort money for "invasions" he had no intention of carrying out.
"Milford Hauen": Milford Haven, the town in Wales where Henry VII landed when he set out to attack Richard III.
"Sir Rice ap Thomas": Rhys ap Thomas was a Welsh chieftain who brought his forces over to Henry Tudor (in return for promises of high office).
"Erle Richmond": The closest thing Henry Tudor had to a legitimate title; his father had been appointed Earl of Richmond by Henry VI in 1452. (Though Edward IV withdrew the title while Henry was still a boy; see Elizabeth Jenkins, The Princes in the Tower, Coward, McCann & Geoghan,
"Sir William Stanley": As noted above, Sir William Stanley was the brother of Lord Thomas Stanley
(c. 1435-1504; second Lord Stanley and by this time first Earl of Derby), who was the third husband of Margaret Beaufort, Henry's mother. Thomas Stanley was a member of Richard's government, but (for obvious reasons) the Stanleys would have preferred the Tudor on the throne.
The Brothers Stanley, however, refused to show their colors; both brought forces to the Battle of Bosworth -- and then refused to fight! A. H. Burne, The Battlefields of England (a compilation of two volumes from the 1950s, Battlefields of England and More Battlefields of England, with a new introduction by Robert Hardy), Pen & Sword, 2005. p. 289,, says that such a battle has never occurred in English history: Four armies forming a square, with Richard III and Henry Tudor facing each other and the two Stanleys taking the other two sides of the square between them. Only when Richard ordered his charge against Henry did William Stanley intervene; his forces killed Richard and probably saved Henry Tudor's life.
It surely says something about both William Stanley and Henry Tudor that, in 1495, Henry accused William Stanley of treasonable support for a pretender and had him executed. Henry's only sign of gratitute to the man who put him on the throne was to pay for Stanley's burial. (Though some suspect that Henry went after Sir William to get his hands on his money.)
"The Erle of Oxford": John de Vere (c. 1443-1513), the (Lancastrial) Earl of Oxford, and a sort of a
"yellow dog Lancastrian": He'd support a yellow dog for king as long as it wasn't a Yorkist.
"King Richard": Richard III. The reference in the song to a boar who rooted up the rose of England is probably an allusion to Richard's emblem of the White Boar.
The part about rooting up the Rose of England doubtless refers to the disappearance of Edward V. Shortly after being set aside as King, Edward and his brother Richard disappeared. Their fate was and is unknown (there are a couple of skeletons that might be theirs, but Elizabeth II has refused to allow genetic testing to find out for sure). It is likely that Richard killed them -- but even Henry VII couldn't offer any proof of that; there are those who think he killed Edward V himself, and if those unknown skeletons are really those of the Princes in the Tower, it's also possible that Edward V died of dental problems. It's a mystery that simply cannot be solved.
I can't help but note the irony that a version of this says "The cryonkle will not layne [lie]" (a line perhaps taken from "The Battle of Otterburn"), but the essence of chronicles of this period -- from both sides! -- is that they lie for political reasons.
For additional details on Richard III's story, see the notes to "The Vicar of Bray" and especially "The Children in the Wood (The Babes in the Woods) [Laws Q34]. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: C166

Rose of Glenfin, The DESCRIPTION: The singer loves Molly from Magherafin, "the Rose of Glenfin." She swears she would be his but marries another. He curses any young man "who'd shower on any woman too much affection"; when your money's gone she'll go "with some other man's son"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1988 (McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen)
KEYWORDS: courting infidelity marriage
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen 61, "The Rose of Glenfin" (1 text, 1
tune)
Roud #10365
CROSS-REFERENCES:
Rose of Killarney
DESCRIPTION: "Oh! promise to meet me where twilight is falling." A love lyric to the "sweetest and fairest of Erin's fair daughters, Dear rose of Killarney, Mavourneen Asthore."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland)
KEYWORDS: love lyric nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 18, "Sweet Rose of Killarney" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 142, "Rose of Killarney" (1 text)
Roud #2788
NOTES [37 words]: There is another "Rose of Killarney" song, "Through Erin's green and bonny isle, From Coleraine to Killarney's waters," found e.g. in Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster (p. 200). I have no evidence that it is traditional. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.1
File: CrSNB018

Rose of Tralee, The
DESCRIPTION: "The pale moon was rising above the green mountain." He describes his love's beauty. "Yet 'twas not her beauty alone that won me, Oh, no, 'twas the truth in her eyes Ever dawning, that made me love Mary, the Rose of Tralee."
AUTHOR: Words: C. Mordaunt Spencer/Music: Charles William Glover (1806-1863) ?
EARLIEST DATE: 1883 (Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia); originally published in London c. 1845
KEYWORDS: love lyric nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (7 citations):
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 80, "The Rose of Tralee" (1 text)
Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, pp. 100-101, "The Rose of Tralee" (1 text)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 141, "The Rose of Tralee" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2037, p. 137, "The Rose of Tralee" (1 reference)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 96, "The Rose of Tralee" (1 text)
DT, TRALEE*
ADDITIONAL: Kathleen Hoagland, editor, One Thousand Years of Irish Poetry (New York, 1947), p. 493, "The Rose of Tralee" (1 text)
Roud #1978
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B.11(1290), "The Rose of Tralee" ("The pale moon was rising above the green mountain"), H. Such (London), 1863-1885
LOCsSheet, sm1850 660580, "Rose of Tralee," Peters, Webb and Co. (Louisville), 1850; also sm1850 482010, "Rose of Tralee" (tune)
NOTES [248 words]: Source: Re author--"St Patricks Day--March 17, 2003" on the Eastern Illinois University site. - BS
The editors of Granger's Index to Poetry lists two possible authors, the first possibility being William Pembroke Mulchinock (1820?-1864; this claim is supported, and perhaps derived from, Hoagland) and our listed author Spencer the second. (The latter attribution is supported by the uncredited Amsco publication The Library of Irish Music, which however seems to me to be a rather poor source. Sing Out, Volume 38, #4 [1994] lists Glover as the author, not separating the words and music; it gives Glover's dates as 1806-1863.)

Robert Gogan, 130 Great Irish Ballads (third edition, Music Ireland, 2004), p. 18, supports the attribution to Mulchinock, and notes that he was a frequent contributor to the well-known Irish journal The Nation. But Gogan also tells a pretty folkloric story about the song: That Mulchinock, who was from Tralee, fell in love with a local girl, Mary O'Connor, and sent him away. When he returned home, he met the funeral procession for his beloved Mary, and wrote this song in her memory. Obviously it could have happened. But what are the odds in real life? Neither proposed author wrote anything else that has shown any sign of enduring. Composer Glover also gave us "Jeanette and Jeannot."

The Sing Out! article reports that the song was sung by John McCormak in the 1930 movie "Song o' My Heart," which is what made the piece truly popular. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1

---

Rose That All Are Praising, The

DESCRIPTION: "The rose that all are praising Is not the rose for me; Too many eyes are gazing Upon that costly tree"; he prefers another rose. Similarly, he prefers a bird other than the bird that sings sweetly, and a gem that kings do not covet

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1847 (Journal of the Cortes)

KEYWORDS: flowers bird love

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 279-280, "The Rose That All Are Praising" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, p. 138, "The Rose That All Are Praising" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #27316

File: HGam279

---

Rose the Red and White Lily [Child 103]

DESCRIPTION: Rose and Lily are each loved by a son of their cruel stepmother, who attempts to part them. The girls disguise themselves as boys and go into service with their erstwhile loves. After much adventure they are revealed and reunited, each couple marrying.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1783/1799 (Riewerts-BalladRepertoireOfAnnaGordon-MrsBrownOfFalkland)

KEYWORDS: love stepmother separation disguise cross-dressing reunion marriage

FOUND IN: Britain(England,Scotland)

REFERENCES (7 citations):
- Child 103, "Rose the Red and White Lily" (3 texts)
- Bronson 103, "Rose the Red and White Lily" (2 versions)
- Riewerts-BalladRepertoireOfAnnaGordon-MrsBrownOfFalkland, pp. 76-89, "Rose the Red & White Lily" (2 parallel texts plus a photo of the badly-transcribed tune; also a reconstructed tune on p. 262)
- Greig/Duncan1 162, "Rose the Red and White Lily" (1 text)
- Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 55, "Rose the Red and White Lily" (1 text)
- Buchan-ABookOfScottishBallads 21, "Rose the Red and White Lily" (1 text, 1 tune in appendix) {Bronson's #1}
- Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 127-130, "Rose the Red and White Lily"; pp. 130-133, "Rose the Red and White Lillie"; pp. 133-134, "The Wedding of Robin Hood and Little John" (3 texts)

Roud #3335

NOTES [93 words]: David C. Fowler, A Literary History of the Popular Ballad, Duke University Press, 1968, pp. 303-304, regards this as a Robin Hood ballad, a reworking of "Robin Hood and Maid Marian" [Child 150]. He doesn't have much company in that assessment, although it is true that Anna Gordon Brown's version was not taken down until after Ritson published his book on Robin Hood, making "Maid Marian" (a very minor Robin Hood ballad featuring a character not found elsewhere and not known to have been found in tradition prior to Ritson's publication) widely known. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2
File: C103

Rosebud in June

DESCRIPTION: "Here the rosebuds in June and the violets are blowing, The small birds they whistle on every green bough." Singer celebrates joys of spring, dancing on the green, and sheepshearing. The song may describe the cycle of the seasons.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1840
KEYWORDS: ritual dancing nonballad sheep
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
  - Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 93, "It's a Rosebud in June" (1 text, 1 tune)
  - Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 90, "It's a Rosebud in June" (1 text, 1 tune)
  - Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #11, "The Rosebuds in June" (1 text, 1 tune)
  - DT, ROSEBUDJ*
  - Roud #812

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- Here's the Rosebud in June
- Rosebud in June

NOTES [61 words]: This song, a simple pastoral on its face, has ritual overtones. Note the chorus: "We'll pipe and we'll sing, Love/We'll dance in a ring, Love/When each lad takes his lass/All on the green grass/And the lads and the lasses to sheep-shearing go." Ring-dancing was characteristic of rituals in pre-Christian Europe. Other verses have hints of sympathetic magic as well. -PJS

Last updated in version 5.0
File: ShH93

Rosedale Waters (The Skeptic's Daughter)

DESCRIPTION: The skeptic's daughter sets out to refute the Christians. She is instead converted. Her father orders her to reject the faith. She refuses his order, and is cast from his home. But soon her parents come to her, begging her to return and convert them

AUTHOR: Music: F. T. Alexander?
EARLIEST DATE: 1897 (manuscript known to Randolph)
KEYWORDS: religious rejection separation help father children
FOUND IN: US(SE,So)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
  - Randolph 601, "The Skeptic's Daughter" (1 text plus an excerpt, 2 tunes)
  - Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 418-422, "The Skeptic's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 601A)
  - Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 328, "The Skeptic's Daughter (1 fragment, 1 tune); 774, "A Plea for Mercy" (1 fragment, 1 tune; the second verse goes with this although the first may be something else)
  - Roud #4644

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Protestant Maid" (subject: religious conversion) and references there

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- Rosedale Shores

NOTES [28 words]: This piece may have been used by Holy Rollers to try to convert souls, but all I can say is that its utter banality would be likely to convert me the other way.... - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1
File: R601

Rosemary Lane [Laws K43]

DESCRIPTION: A sailor meets a girl at an inn, and induces her to go to bed with him. In the morning he gives her gold and says, "If it's a boy, he will (fight for the king/be a sailor); if a girl, she will wear a gold ring."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople)

KEYWORDS: seduction separation clothes floating verses

FOUND IN: Australia US (Ap, MA, MW, NE, SE, So, SW) Canada (Queb) Britain (England, Scotland (Aber))

REFERENCES (28 citations):
Laws K43, "Home, Dearie, Home (Bell-Bottom Trousers)"
Greig/FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #135, pp. 1-2, "Hame, Dearie, Hame" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan 1057, "Hame, Dearie, Hame" (10 texts, 11 tunes)
Greig/Duncan 1429, "When I Was a Servant in Old Aberdeen" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Reeves/Sharp-TheldiromOfThePeople 81, "Rosemary Lane" (3 texts)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 112, "Rosemary Lane" (1 text)
Gardham-EastRidingSongster 25, "Bell-Bottom Trousers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Tawney-GreyFunnellLines-RoyalNavy, pp. 126-127, "Bell-bottom Trousers" (1 text, which may have been deliberately coarsened)

Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #51, "Rosemary Lane" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph/Legman-RollMelnYourArms I, pp. 81-88, "Bell Bottom Trousers" (6 texts, 1 tune)
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 72-75, "Bell Bottom Trousers" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, pp. 68-69, "Never Trust a Sailor" (1 text)
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, p. 138, "Bell-Bottom Trousers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 34, "The Boy Child" (1 short text, which Laws calls a "ribald fragment.") Fragment it is, with only two of the regular verses, including "If it be a girl...." But I suspect the other two verses are a mixture from another, heavily bawdy, song, which we might title something like "eleven inches in"
Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 72, "Button Willow Tree" (1 text, 1 tune, with a cowpuncher as the visiting man!)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, 165 "Jack, the Sailor Boy" (1 text)
List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, pp. 195-198, "Bell Bottom Trousers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-FolkloreOfMaine, pp. 183-184, "Home, Dearie, Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
MacColl/Seeger-TravellersSongsFromEnglandAndScotland 43, "Rosemary Lane" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolkSingersWordbook, p. 166, "Bell-Bottomed Trousers" (1 text)
Colcord-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 498, "Home, Dearie, Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 498, "Home, Dearie, Home" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, p. 366]
Shay-AmericanSeaSongsAndChanteys, pp. 146, "Bell-Bottom Trousers" (1 text; this follows a text and tune of "Home, Dearie, Home," i.e. "Ambletown," plus a stanza of Henley's adaption and an alternate chorus)
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 83, "The Servant of Rosemary Lane" (1 text, 1 tune)
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 144-146, "The Waitress and the Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune, which seems to have been updated for the twentieth century but is still clearly this song)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, p. 139, "Bell Bottom Trousers"
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, Andra Joy Hamilton, "A Garland of Ballads from Caldwell County", Vol. 3, No. 1 (Jul 1955), p. 5, "At Home, My Lassie" (1 fragment, 1 tune, so short that it might be "Ambletown" or "Rosemary Lane" [Laws K43] or any other member of the family; there is no seduction, just the "Home... in your ain country" and the "If it be a boy" stanzas); Vol. 3, No. 2 (Dec 1955), p. 19, contains an "Additional Note" on the song but no additional text)
DT 319, BELLBTTM* HOMEBOYS* RASPLANE RASPLAN2* ROSELANE*
Roud #269

RECORDINGS:
Anne Briggs, "Rosemary Lane" (on Briggs1, Briggs3, Briggs4)
Liam Clancy, "Home Boys Home" (on IRLClancy01)
Jerry Colonna, "Bell Bottom Trousers" (Capitol 204, 1945)
Chris Willett, "Once I Was a Servant" (on Voice11)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 624, "The Servant of Rosemary Lane" ("When I was a servant in Rosemary-lane"), J. Jennings (London), 1790-1840; also Harding B 15(279a), Harding B 11(4221), "The Servant of Rosemary Lane"; Bodleian, Harding B 17(130a), "Home, Dear Home" (with the "Home, Dear Home" chorus, several verses of this, and perhaps a rewritten ending)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "When I Was Young (Don't Never Trust a Sailor)" (plot, floating lyrics)
cf. "Ambletown" (floating lyrics, theme)
cf. "Pretty Little Miss" [Laws P18] (theme)
cf. "A North Country Maid"
cf. "Hame, Hame, Hame" (structure and some lines)
cf. "Fat'll Mak a Bonny Lassie Blythe an' Glad" (tune, per Greig/Duncan5) and references there

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Oak and the Ash, The Drury Lane
Raspberry Lane
Once When I Was a Servant
Old Aberdeen

NOTES [853 words]: The history of this song is extremely complex and obscure. The extended family is listed in the Index under three titles: "Rosemary Lane," "Ambletown," and "When I Was Young (Don't Never Trust a Sailor)." However, these may represent as many as five songs, or perhaps only a single one.

The three basic plots are as follows:
* "Rosemary Lane" (a title selected because, unlike Laws's title "Home, Dearie, Home," it is unique to this version) is a British ballad of a servant who is seduced and then abandoned by a sailor. It exists under many titles, e.g. "Bell-Bottomed Trousers."
* "When I Was Young" has the same plot but in a very reduced form; what matters is not the method of the seduction but simply that it happens. This song frequently has a bawdier feel. It ends with a warning, "Don't ever trust (a sailor) an inch above the knee."
* "Ambletown" (another title chosen because it is unambiguous) involves a sailor who learns from a letter that he is a father, and desperately wants to return home to see the child.

The greatest difficulty concerns the relationship between "Rosemary Lane" and "Ambletown." In plot, they are quite distinct. A comparison of the lyrics, however, shows that as much as half the material in "Ambletown" occurs also in "Rosemary Lane" (which is longer, seemingly older, and much more common). As many as three stanzas regularly "cross": "If it be a boy, he will fight for the king"; "And it's home, dearie, home"; and "The oak and the ash and the bonnie birchen tree." (The latter two may be derived from yet another song, "A North Country Maid").

It should also be noted that "Ambletown" could function as an ending to "Rosemary Lane," particularly if the warning about not trusting a sailor is not the original ending. This has not, however, been observed in tradition.

Extensive examination of the texts of the songs could not finally resolve the question. The Ballad Index Board is tentatively of the opinion that "Rosemary Lane" and "Ambletown" now are separate songs, which have cross-fertilized heavily but remain distinct. It is quite possible, however, that one (probably "Ambletown") is an offshoot of the other, with a new (clean) plot built around the same verses.

In addition, "Rosemary Lane" has undergone extensive evolution "after" the cross-fertilization stage. Our guess is that it began with a relatively "clean" broadside of seduction (now seemingly lost). This likely contained the "If it be a boy" stanza, but probably not the others. Tradition then mixes in the other common stanzas, and set to work on the song, producing both clean and bawdy versions. - RBW, DGE, PJS

An addendum: Don Duncan brings to my attention the poem "O Falmouth Is a Fine Town," by William E. Henley (1878), which has the following first verse:

O Falmouth is a fine town with ships in the bay,
And I wish from my heart it's there I was to-day;
I wish from my heart I was far away from here,
Sitting in my parlor and talking to my dear.
For it's home, dearie home--it's home I want to be.
Our topsails are hoisted, and we'll away to sea.
O the oak and the ash and the bonnie birken tree,
They're all growing green in the old countrie.

Henley admitted that part of the song, including the chorus, was old. Duncan speculates that "Falmouth..." is the rewrite of "Rosemary Lane" we postulated above. This seems quite possible -- but if so, then Henley's poem has gone into oral tradition itself, and experienced a great deal of folk processing. Thus, the essential outline we described above seems to be accurate.

Just in case that weren't complicated enough, Allan Cunningham produced a poem, "Hame, Hame, Hame," which once again used some of the same lyrics: "Hame, hame, hame, hame, fain wad I be, O hame, hame, hame, to my ain countrie!" The rest, though, seems simply a hymn to home, "When the flower is in the bud, and the lead is on the tree, The lark shall sing me hame to my ain countrie...." For this text, see, the entry on "Hame, Hame, Hame."
The reference to "Rosemary Lane" is particularly interesting. "Rosemary" of course stood for remembrance in flower symbolism (cf. Binney, p. 86, who of course quotes Ophelia's "There's rosemary, that's for remembrance," plus some other evidence), which is very fitting in this context. But Cordingly, p. 7, notes that at one time the actual street had some significance to sailors. A brothel owner named Damaris Page was active in the 1650s and 1660s: "She had one on the Ratcliffe Highway that catered to ordinary seamen and dockworkers, and she also managed one on Rosemary Lane for naval officers and those who could afford the prices of the classier prostitutes."
Weinreb/Hibbert, p. 657, say that Rosemary Lane was once "an infamous street market for old clothes and frippery, familiarly known as RAG FAIR. It was run by Jews and supplied by itinerant collectors who gathered discarded or stolen clothes and rags. It was open every day and frequented mainly by local inhabitants." They do not mention either lodging houses or prostitution. The lane was eliminated from the map in 1850 when it became Royal Mint Street. - RBW

Bibliography

- Cordingly: David Cordingly, Women Sailors and Sailors' Women, Random House, 2001 (I use the undated, but later, paperback edition)

Last updated in version 6.1
File: LK43

Roses are Red
DESCRIPTION: "Roses are red, violets are blue, (sugar/honey/gillyflower) is sweet and so are you."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1784 (Gammer Gurton's Garland)
KEYWORDS: nonballad flowers
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 458, "The rose is red, the violet blue" (1 text)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 238, (no title) (1 short text: "Roses red, violets blue, cucumbers green and so are you"); p. 243 (no title) (1 short text)
Carey-MarylandFolkloreAndFolklife, p. 81, "(no title)" (2 short texts, "Roses are red, violets are blue, A face like yours Belongs in the zoo"; "Roses are red, violets are black, You’d look better with a knife in your back")
NOTES [94 words]: Although this is widely known (i.e. even I heard it in youth), except for Henry, I have seen no evidence that it is a song and not simply a rhyme. The Opie version is a gift song for Easter; I have not seen this elsewhere (nor seen any other version which mentions the gillyflower). It certainly has inspired parodies -- e.g. Peter and Iona Opie, I Saw Esau: Traditional Rhymes of Youth, #146, offers "Roses are red, Violets are blue, The shorter the skirt, The better the view" and "Roses are red, Cabbages are green, If my face is funny, Yours is a scream." - RBW

Last updated in version 3.8
File: MHAp238A

Rosewater Bee, The
DESCRIPTION: "The Rosewater Bee is a dandy, I can't help but watch as he flies; He is steering straight for your brain, boys." The newspaper "is loaded with lies" the that Farmers' Alliance and the Independent party will fight; they will drive the bees from the hive
AUTHOR: Words; John King
EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (Farmer's Alliance, February 14, 1891 edition, according to Welsch-NebraskaPioneerLore)
KEYWORDS: political farming
Rosey Apple Lemon and Pear

DESCRIPTION: Singing came of courting. "(Mary Wilson), fresh and fair, A bunch of roses she shall wear, Gold and silver by her side, I know who is her bride." "Rose, apple, lemon, or pear." "Take her by the lily-white hand."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1877 (Mason, _Nursery Rhymes and Country Songs_, according to Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)

KEYWORDS: playparty courting

FOUND IN: Britain(England,Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1579, "Orange Blossom" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 33, "Rosy Apple" (2 texts)
Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 71, "Singing Game (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Edwin Sidney Hartland, editor, County Folk-Lore. Gloucestershire (Gloucester, 1892 ("Digitized by Google")), #6 p. 64, ("Golden apple, lemon and a pear") (1 text)
Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #41, "Rosy Apple, Lemon or Pear" (1 text)
Roy Palmer, _Ripest Apples_, The Big Apple Association, 1996, p. 12, "Rosy Apple" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #6492

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Wind Blows High" (tune, per Greig/Duncan8)

NOTES [60 words]: Some of the versions of this, such as the Montgomeries', appear to have mixed with "Weevily Wheat" or one of its relatives. With pieces like this, it's hard to tell. Palmer links this to the legend of Saint Dorothea, a martyred virgin whose iconography included a basket of apples and flower. I can't see that that has anything to do with the song, though. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.7

File: MSNR071

Rosie

DESCRIPTION: "Be my woman, gall, I'll / be your man. Every Sunday's dollar / in your hand. Stick to the promise, gall, 'at / you made me. Weren't gonna marry till-a / I go free. Well Rosie / oh Lord gal, When she walk she reel and / rock behind..."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934

KEYWORDS: prisoner love abandonment

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, p. 107, (no title) (1 text); pp. 262-263, "Rosie" (1 tune, partial text)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 62-65, "Rosie" (1 text, 1 tune, probably composite)

Roud #15507

File: CNFM107A
Rosie Anderson

DESCRIPTION: Rosie marries Hay Marshall, but soon attracts the attention of Lord Elgin. Elgin dances with Rosie and takes her home. After more wantonness on her part, Marshall divorces Rosie. She is left to lament her fate (and court a soldier or become a prostitute)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1869 (Logan-APedlarsPack)
KEYWORDS: marriage adultery nobility betrayal
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 184-187, "Rosey Anderson" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lyle/McAlpine/McLucas-SongRepertoireOfAmeliaAndJaneHarris, p. 173, "Hie Marshall" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #127, pp. 1-2, "Rosie Anderson" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan7 1462, "Rosie Anderson" (12 texts plus a single verse on p. 529, 10 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 91-92, "Rosey Anderson" (1 text)
Logan-APedlarsPack, pp. 392-395, "Rosey Anderson" (1 text)

DT, ROSANDER
ADDITIONAL: W. Christie, editor, Traditional Ballad Airs (Edinburgh, 1876 (downloadable pdf by University of Edinburgh, 2007)), Vol I, p. 220, ("Hay Marshall was as brave a lord") (1 tune) [first and last verse only; the rest, writes Christie, "is not suited for this Work."]
ST Log392 (Full)
Roud #2169
BROADSIDES:
Murray, Mu23-y1:010, "Rosy Anderson," unknown (Glasgow), no date
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Peggy and the Soldier (The Lame Soldier)" [Laws P13] (plot)
cf. "The Brewer Laddie" (plot)
cf. "Tamiston" (theme: seduction by Lord Elgin)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Hay Marshall

NOTES [90 words]: Logan-APedlarsPack has many details about the facts behind this ballad (though providing few dates). Rosie reportedly married Thomas Hay Marshall at the age of 16, urged on more by her parents than her own desires. The divorce was rather more messy than the ballad shows, as Marshall had neglected his wife. Sadly, the affair ended with Rosie walking the streets of London.

The Lord Elgin mentioned in this ballad is also the one who walked off with the Grecian marbles. All in all, not the sort of person I'd want to let into the house. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
File: Log392

Rosie Belle Teeneau, The

DESCRIPTION: In habitant dialect. The Rosie Belle Teeneau is manned by Jean Baptiste DuChene and family, and sails the Great Lakes. On one trip, they carry a cargo of gunpowder without knowing what it is. It, and DuChene, are blown up. Sailors are warned of explosives

AUTHOR: unknown (published by William Edward Baubie)
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Baubie, French Canadian Verse)
KEYWORDS: humorous sailor ship death
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 158-160, "Legend of hte Rosie Belle Teeneau" (1 text)
Roud #19882
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "De Scow Jean La Plante" (main character)

NOTES [111 words]: That this is a legend, and not fact, is obvious from the fact that gunpowder is not itself explosive; it "burns", and must be primed. No such events are described in the song. It is not clear to me that this poem/song is traditional. Walton's version is from print, and there is no mention of having heard even a portion of it from tradition. But the notes imply that the legend of DuChene and the gunpowder is traditional -- indeed, there is another poem about him, "'De Scow Jean La Plante," which involves a different boat and a different voyage but has a "Captain Batteece" and ends with the boat blowing up. This probably isn't folk song. It may be folk tale. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: WGM158

Rosie Nell
DESCRIPTION: "How oft I dream of childhood days, Of tricks we used to play.... I'd rather be with Rosie Nell, a-swinging in the lane." But then "Aunt Jemima Brown" introduces Rosie to another fellow. The singer warns men against getting too involved with women
AUTHOR: Charles Carroll Sawyer (source: Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
EARLIEST DATE: 1868 (The Champaign Charlie and Coal Oil Tommy Songster)
KEYWORDS: courting infidelity warning
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,So)
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 99, "Rosy Nell" (1 text)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 114-116, "Rosie Nell" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph 871, "Swinging in the Lane" (1 text, 1 tune)
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 57, pp. 75-76, "Rosie Nell" (2 texts)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 683, "Childhood Days" (1 short text, 1 tune, probably this); 789 "Singing in the Lane" (1 short text, 1 tune, again, probably this) Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 37, "Swinging in the Lane" (1 tet plus 2 excerpts and mention of 3 more; 2 tunes)
cf. Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, p. 482, "Rosie Nell" (source notes only)
ST San114 (Partial)
Roud #2870
RECORDINGS:
Walter "Kid" Smith & Norman Woodlief with Posey Rorer, "I'd Rather Be with Rosy Nell" (Gennett 6858/Challenge 431, 1929)
The Virginia Dandies [alternate name for Walter "Kid" Smith & The Carolina Buddies], "Rosy Nell" (Crown, unissued, 1931)
File: San114

Rosie, Darling Rosie
DESCRIPTION: "Rosie, darling Rosie, Ha ha Rosie (x2)" "Way down yonder in Baltimore, Ha ha Rosie, Need no carpet on my floor." "Grab your partner and follow me..." "Some folks say preachers won't steal..." "Stop right still and study yourself..."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (recording, children of Brown's Chapel School)
KEYWORDS: playparty courting nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 155-156, "(Rosie Darling Rosie)" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Harold Courlander, _A Treasury of Afro-American Folklore_, Crown Publishers, 1976, pp. 539-540, "Rosie Darling Rosie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11008
RECORDINGS:
Children of Brown's Chapel School, "Rosie, Darling Rosie" (on NFMAla6, RingGames1)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Coney Isle" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Some Folks Say that a Preacher Won't Steal" (lyrics)
NOTES [27 words]: Lyrics from this song made their way into the folk-revival version of "Rocky Road (Green Green)," but they don't share lyrics in their traditional versions. - PJS
Last updated in version 3.5
File: CNFM155
Rosin Box, The

DESCRIPTION: A tinker comes to solder among the ladies with "his soldering-iron tool." An old woman asks that he solder her bones. "A country chap" takes the tinker's daughter but she is rescued. If a woman had been honest, she'd have "a baby belonging to me"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1967 (recording, Johnny Reilly)
KEYWORDS: sex tinker
FOUND IN: Ireland
Roud #2501
RECORDINGS:
Johnny Reilly, "The Rosin Box" (on Voice07)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Rozzin Box
NOTES [61 words]: I won't pretend to understand how "the tinker he was nasty and was looking for a swap When up steps a country chap took his daughter in a truck" ties into the rest of this. On the other hand the sexual coding seems clear in the chorus "with his rosin box and itchy pole, his hammer, knife and spoon, And his napper-tipper handstick and his soldering iron tool." - BS
File: RcRozBox

Rosin the Beau

DESCRIPTION: "Old Rosin," who has travelled the whole country/world, is preparing to depart from this life. He hopes that future generations will emulate him, and asks to be remembered (usually with alcohol). Details vary widely

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1838 (sheet music published by Osbourn of Philadelphia)
KEYWORDS: drink death party burial
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber)) US(MA,Ro,SE,So,SW) Ireland
REFERENCES (22 citations):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 255-258, "Old Rosin the Beau" (2 texts)
Randolph 846, "Old Rosin the Bow" (2 short texts plus a fragment, 2 tunes)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 386-387, "Old Rosin the Bow" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 846A)
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 158, "Old Rosin the Beau" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolksongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 159, "Old Rosin the Beau" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 32, "Old Rosin the Beau" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 32, "Rosin the Beau" (3 tunes plus textual excerpts)
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 64, "Old Rosin the Beau" (1 text)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 77, pp. 203-205, "Rosin the Bow" (2 texts)
Jackson-PopularSongsOfNineteenthCenturyAmerica, pp. 171-175, "Old Rosin the Beau" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 5, "Old Rosin the Beau" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan3 698, "Rosen the Beau" (1 text, 2 tunes)
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 93-94, "Rosin the Beau" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 508)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 281, "Rosin the Beau" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H698, p. 51, "Old Rosin the Bow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1728, p. 116, "Old Rosin the Beau" (2 references)
Spaeth-ReadEmAndWeep, pp. 37-39, "Old Rosin, the Beau" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 100, pp.209-211, "Rosin the Bow" (1 text)
Forget-Me-Not-Songster, p224, "Rosen the Bow" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 202, "Old Rosin The Beau" (1 text)
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, Kern Lunsford, "Help Needed on 'Rosin the Bow,'" Vol. XX, No. 3 (Aug 1972), p. 119, "Rosin the Bow" (1 text)
DT, ROSINBOW*
Roud #1192
RECORDINGS:
The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem, "Rosin the Bow" (on IRClancyMakem01)
A. L. Lloyd, "Rosin the Beau" (on Lloyd12)

BROADSIDES:
LOCSinging, as110360, "Old Rosin the Beau," J. Andrews (New York), 1853-1859; also sb40517a,
"Old Rosin the Beau"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Acres of Clams (The Old Settler's Song)" (tune)
cf. "Lincoln and Liberty" (tune)
cf. "Sherman's March to the Sea" (tune)
cf. "Henry Clay Songs" (tune)
cf. "The Men of the West" (tune)
cf. "Straight-Out Democrat" (tune)
cf. "A Hayseed Like Me" (tune)
cf. "Tippecanoe" (tune)
cf. "He's the Man for Me" (tune)
cf. "Liberty Ball" (tune)
cf. "Here's to the Army and Navy" (tune)

SAME TUNE:
Acres of Clams (The Old Settler's Song) (File: LxU055)
Lincoln and Liberty (File: San167)
Sherman's March to the Sea (File: SBoA248)
Just Tread on the Tail of Me Coat (File: R474)
Straight-Out Democrat (File: SRW043)
The Men of the West (File: PGa030)
A Hayseed Like Me (File: Grnw060)
He's the Man for Me (File: RcHtMfM)
Liberty Ball (File: TPS060)
Here's to the Army and Navy (File: DalC211)
The Song of the Trap (File: AnSt079)
Tippecanoe (File: Be3397)
Old Hal o' the West (Spaeth-ReadEmAndWeep, pp. 39-40; cf. "Henry Clay Songs," File: SRW039)
Tippecanoe (File: Be3397)
Old Tippecanoe III ("Ye Vanits of wide Pennsylvania") (Harrison campaign song) (A. B. Norton, _Songs of the People in the Log Cabin Days of Old Tippecanoe_, p. 6)
Have You Heard the Good News (Harrison campaign song) (A. B. Norton, _Songs of the People in the Log Cabin Days of Old Tippecanoe_, p. 33)
Song ("Come all ye young men of Missouri") (Harrison campaign song) (A. B. Norton, _Songs of the People in the Log Cabin Days of Old Tippecanoe_, A. B. Norton & Co., 1888 (available on Google Books), p. 100)
Little Vanny ("You can't make a song to Van Buren") (Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, p. 287)
Song of the 1001 ("'Twas down by the foot of Mount Aetna") (Robert E. Gard and L. G. Sorden, _Wisconsin Lore: Antics and Anecdotes of Wisconsin People and Places_, Wisconsin House, 1962, p. 290, [no title]. The 1001 was said to be an organization which "made hoaxing the sole raison d'etre of their brotherhood.")
The Liberty Pole ("America's Bird has alighted") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 86)
My Girl with the Calico Dress ("A fig for your upper-ten girls") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 103)
The Red, White & Blue ("Come all ye good whigs of old '40") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 133)
Ye Jolly Young Lads of Ohio ("Ye jolly younh lads of Ohio, And all ye sick Jackson men too")
Democratic Ode ("November election is coming, To arms, all true Democrats, rise") (Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, p. 315)
The Agrarian Ball ("COme all you true friends of the Nation, Attend to humanity's call") (Foner, p. 48)

NOTES [106 words]: Although this song is only moderately popular, and has been heavily folk processed, songs which have borrowed its tune were very common, particularly in the nineteenth century (see, e.g. "Acres of Clams," "Lincoln and Liberty").

Cohen cites Dichter and Shapiro to the effect that sheet music of this song (author not listed) was published in 1838. Whether this is actually the origin of the song (especially the tune) is not clear. - RBW

Roslin on the Lee

DESCRIPTION: Sir Simon Fraser and Sir John Comyn led "ten thousand hielan' laddies Drest in their tartan plaidies." "For one hour and a quarter There was a bloody slaughter Till the English cried for quarter And in confusion flee"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan1)
KEYWORDS: battle England Scotland
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan1 111, "Roslin on the Lee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5785

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Battle of Roslin

NOTES [205 words]: Bodleian, 2806 c.11(109) ["Performer: Simpson, MacGregor"], "Roslin on the Lee" ("Just leave your tittle tattle"), The Poet's Box (Glasgow), 1849-1880 appears to be this ballad but could not be downloaded to be verified.

Greig/Duncan1: "This Scottish victory over an English force took place at Roslin, south of Edinburgh, on 24 February 1303."

For some background on Scotland's rebellion against Edward I see "Scots Wha Hae (Bruce Before Bannockburn)." - BS

This is one of those cases where folklore significantly exaggerates. Yes, there was scattered opposition to the occupation by Edward I after the defeat of Wallace at Falkirk -- but there wasn't much. Sir Simon Fraser and John Comyn the Red were among the leaders -- but both would eventually submit to Edward I (see Magnus Magnusson, Scotland: The Story of a Nation, Atlantic Monthly Press, 2000, pp. 151-152). It was, in fact, Robert Bruce's murder of the Red Comyn which formally started his war with Edward I (Magnusson, pp. 165-166).

Roslin was little more than a skirmish, involving far fewer men than this song would imply -- and was so minor that it was not even mentioned in the first six Scottish histories I checked. Its strategic significance was nil. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD1111

Rossa's Farewell to Erin

DESCRIPTION: O'Donovan Rossa, on a ship, bids "Farewell to friends of Dublin." He will return sometime. He recalls joining the Fenian Brotherhood in 1864, curses "those traitors Who did our cause betray ... Nagle, Massey, Corydon, and Talbot" and sent him to jail.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads); c.1865 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
KEYWORDS: exile rebellion prison pardon Ireland patriotic
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Jan 5, 1871 - Jeremiah O'Donovan Rossa is freed from jail by amnesty on condition that he exile himself. He arrives in New York Jan. 19, 1871. (see Notes)

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (3 citations):
O'Lochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 34, "Rossa's Farewell to Erin" (1 text, 1 tune)
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 70, "O'Donovan Rossa's Farewell to Dublin" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Healy-MercierBookOfOldIrishStreetBalladsVol2, pp. 136-137, "O'Donovan Rossa's Farewell (to Dublin)" (1 text)
ST OLoc034 (Partial)
Roud #3040

NOTES [701 words]: (Source Ireland's Own site "Jeremiah O'Donovan Rossa (1831-1915)" from George Treanor, Irish Heritage Group): Formed the Phoenix Society of Skibbereen for the fight for independence. That organization joined the Irish Republican Brotherhood (IRB), or Fenians, which formed in 1858. Rossa was arrested in 1858 for association with the Fenians, and again in 1865 after the Fenian Rising. His sentence was for writing seditious articles. He was treated badly in jail, and released in 1871 by amnesty on condition that he go into exile. In New York Rossa continued writing in support of the Fenian movement and was involved in planning bombing attacks in England. He died in the United States.

Rossa and four others -- the "Cuba Five" -- arrive in New York on January 19, 1871 on board the steamer Cuba (Source: History Cooperative site; Irish Culture and Customs site) - BS

Rossa was another of those Irishmen (like, e.g. Cathal Brugha) who changed his name to make it more "Irish"; according to Kee (p. 4), he was born Jeremiah Donovan Rossa (not O'Donovan) -- although Lyons, p. 126, has a different version: In this, he was born Jeremiah O'Donovan and added the name Rossa. Golway, p. 113, says that his father was one of those who starved to death during the potato famine (in Skibbereen, in fact, according to OxfordCompanion, p. 404).

In 1856, O'Donovan Rossa founded the Phoenix Society, a literary group devoted to resurrecting Irish culture and literature (Lyon, p. 126); and from 1863 he was one of the major forces behind the newspaper Irish People. The newspaper would be raided in 1865, resulting in O'Donovan Rossa's arrest.

In Charles Sullivan's Ireland in Poetry, p. 101, there is a poem, "The Returned Picture," credited to Mary O'Donovan Rossa (who was indeed a poet, having published Lyrical Poems in 1868). If this item is to be believed, Rossa's guards never let him see his wife, or the child still unborn when he was imprisoned, nor even let them see their picture. I cannot verify this, but it wouldn't surprise me. Not that his behavior was exactly above reproach; Golway, p. 113, says that his father was one of those who starved to death during the potato famine (in Skibbereen, in fact, according to OxfordCompanion, p. 404).

In 1856, O'Donovan Rossa founded the Phoenix Society, a literary group devoted to resurrecting Irish culture and literature (Lyon, p. 126); and from 1863 he was one of the major forces behind the newspaper Irish People. The newspaper would be raided in 1865, resulting in O'Donovan Rossa's arrest.

In his life, Rossa wasn't a particularly effective figure in politics (although his writings had some influence), and he died senile in New York at the age of 84 -- but his body, shipped back to Ireland, proved a powerful rallying point for nationalists. (This even though Kee, p. 238, says that Rossa toward the end of his life inclined toward the moderate methods of John Redmond. It hadn't always been so; in the 1880s, he had organized bombings in England; OxfordCompanion, p. 404) Padraig Pearse gave his funeral elegy, and used it to call for Irish independence -- even as thousands of Irish boys were volunteering to serve in the British army.

The informers mentioned in the song are a varied lot. Corydon was a Fenian courier who worked for the headstrong Captain McCafferty, who revealed a plan to attack the Chester Castle military storehouse (Kee, p. 36). Nagle was a worker at the Irish People who was more spy than informant; he carried off correspondence coming through the paper's offices (Kee, p. 23). Thomas Talbot was a professional detective who infiltrated the Fenians under the name John Kelly (Kee, p. 25). Gordon Massey was the most important but most equivocal; it's not sure if he turned informer before or after he was taken by the British (Kee, pp. 32-33). A Crimean veteran who had gone to America and changed his name several times; he was given high seniority in the Fenian movement based on his alleged command experience, but was betrayed by Corydon (Kee, p. 39). - RBW

Bibliography

- Golway: Terry Golway, For the Cause of Liberty, Simon & Schuster, 2000
Rosy Banks of Green, The

DESCRIPTION: Josephine and Charlie, a sailor, have been in love since they were in school. Her father shoots them. Josephine, dying, is glad she is going to meet her dead mother and Charlie. They "never shall be parted on the rosy banks of green"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Peacock)

KEYWORDS: homicide courting love father sailor reunion

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf,Ont)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Peacock, pp. 701-704, "The Rosy Banks of Green" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 136, "Rosy Banks of Green" (1 text, 1 tune)
Vikár/Panagapka-SongsNorthWoodsSungByOJAbbott 25, "By the Rosy Banks So Green" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #4437

RECORDINGS:
Mrs. Clara Stevens, "The Rosy Banks of Green" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Rosy Banks So Green

File: Pea701

Rother Glen

DESCRIPTION: "When I was young in youth did bloom, Where fancy led me I did roam, From town to town, and country round, And to a place named Rother Glen"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (Kidson-TraditionalTunes)

KEYWORDS: rambling

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, p. 93, "Rother Glen" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

Roud #1728

NOTES [12 words]: The current description is all of the Kidson-TraditionalTunes fragment. - BS

File: KiTu093

Rotherham Statutes

DESCRIPTION: "Sam Firth to Rotherham Statis [sic.] went wi' Grace through Birley Moor, Wi' Rachel Stones and Yester Dent who ne'er had been before." Vignettes from the Rotherham Hiring Fair, where all sorts of people meet and have adventures

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (articles by Kidson in the Leeds Mercury, according to Palmer)

KEYWORDS: moniker work music dancing

FOUND IN: Britain(England)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #111, "Rotherham Statutes" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #1511

File: PECS111
Rothesay-O

DESCRIPTION: "Last Hogmanay, at the Glesga Fair, there were me, mysel', and several mair, We a' gaed aff tae hae a tair And spend the nicht in Rothesay-O." And a tear it truly was, as they drank, sang, fought, slept, and were bitten by bugs in Rothesay.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Ford)
KEYWORDS: party drink humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
  - Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 282, "Rothesay-O" (1 text, 1 tune)
  - Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 205, "Rothesay, O" (1 text)
  - MacColl-PersonalChoice, pp. 61-62, "The day we went to Rothesay, O" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, ROTHESAY-O*

RECORDINGS:
  - Louis Killen & Pete Seeger, "Rothesay-O" (on PeteSeeger47)
  - Davie Stewart, "Rothesay-O" (on FSB10)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
  - cf. "The Tinkler's Waddin (The Tinker's Wedding)" (tune)
  - cf. "The Day I Went to Rothesay O" (lyrics)

SAME TUNE:
  - The Tinkler's Waddin (The Tinker's Wedding) (File: RcTTWttw)

File: K282

Rothiemay

DESCRIPTION: The singer praises "bonnie Rothiemay" on the banks of the Deveron. He tells about the seasons' effects, Milltown, the churchyard and other landmarks including the "Hoose" that "shelter lent" Mary, Queen of Scots. He recalls growing up in Rothiemay.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: pride nonballad home
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  - Greig/Duncan3 518, "Rothiemay" (1 text)

Roud #6002

NOTES [194 words]: Mary, Queen of Scots, visited Rothiemay Castle in 1562 (source: "Mary's Progresses" at Marie Stuart Society site).

Milltown of Rothiemay is about 40 miles northwest of Aberdeen. - BS

Mary's visit to Rothiemay took place on the night of 4 September, according to Rothiemay's web site (http://tinyurl.com/tbdx-Rothiemay). The date is interesting. According to Magnus Magnusson, Scotland: The Story of a Nation, Atlantic Monthly Press, 2000, p. 347, "In the summer of 1562 Mary went with Lord James Stewart on a campaign against the most powerful Catholic family in Scotland, the Gordons of Huntly; George Gordon, the fourth Earl of Huntley (the 'Cock of the North,' as he was called) and one-time Chancellor of Scotland, died of apoplexy after being captured in a skirmish in October."

George Gordon, it has been suggested, was the hero of "Geordie" [Child 209]. The events in "The Fire of Frendraught" [Child 196] also involved the lord of Rothiemay. At least one of the landmarks in the song, the castle of Rothiemay, was demolished in 1963. But it appears, from the town web site, that they are still proud of their history. And there were many mills there. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD3518

Rotten Egg

DESCRIPTION: (Knock on the door:) "Who's there?" "The Devil." "Go back and wash your face and read the Bible." (Knocks again:) "Who's there?" "Angel." "Come in." "[I] want to buy some eggs." "What color?" (red/any color). They pick a child (egg) and ask questions
Rotten Potatoes, The

DESCRIPTION: Tenants are starving. At all costs save your corn and meal. Sell your cattle. The politicians will have a plan. The rents will be reduced. Food will be had "from Russia and Prussia and Americay." Potatoes have failed since '45. Things will improve.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1847 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
KEYWORDS: starvation Ireland nonballad food
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 58, "A New Song on the Rotten Potatoes" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES: cf. "Over There (I - The Praties They Grow Small)" (subject: The Potato Famines) and references there
NOTES [67 words]: Although the singer hopes for help from the politicians, a change in government actually meant that Ireland was given less help as the famines stretched on. The potatoes suffering from the blight didn't exactly rot. They just shrivelled away -- not that the difference made any difference. For details on the blight and its effects, see the notes to "Over There (I - The Praties They Grow Small)." - RBW

Rough Pavement

DESCRIPTION: The paved roads on the Island: "In springtime the potholes occur everywhere Oh that black roller-coaster will kill me." Mainland the roads are smooth. "My wife's not accustomed to such a smooth trip, So we pulled the car over and we followed the ditch!"

AUTHOR: Allan Rankin
EARLIEST DATE: 1982 (Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland)
KEYWORDS: humorous nonballad technology travel
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 221-223, 253, "Rough Pavement" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13995

Rough, Rocky Road (Most Done Suffering)

DESCRIPTION: "It's a rough, rocky road, And I'm 'most done struggling/suffering (x3), I'm bound to carry my soul to the Lord. I'm bound to carry my soul to Jesus, I'm bound to carry my soul to the Lord." "My (father's/etc.) on the road, And he's 'most done...."

AUTHOR: J. C. Brown ?
EARLIEST DATE: 1874 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad travel Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, pp. 86-87, "Most Done Trabelling" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 215 in the 1874 edition))
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 632, "Rough, Rocky Road" (1 text plus mention of 2 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 632, "Rough, Rocky Road" (1 tune plus a text excerpt).
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 25, "Most Done Ling'rin Here" (1 text, 1 tune, with a verse from "Run, Nigger, Run" plus the "If you get there before I do" floating verse and a chorus that might be this).
Roud #11832
RECORDINGS:
Alabama Sacred Harp Singers, "Rocky Road" (Columbia 15274-D, 1928; on AAFM2)
Emmett Brand, "Most Done Traveling (Rocky Road)" (on MuSouth06)
Fisk University Jubilee Singers, "Most Done Travelling" (Columbia A2901, 1920)
Tuskegee Institute Singers, "Most Done Travelling (sic)" (Victor 18447, 1918)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Most Done Suffering
File: Br3632

Round About the Punchbowl
DESCRIPTION: "Round about the punchbowl," "First time never to fall," "Second time catching time," "Third time kissing time"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1898 (Gomme)
KEYWORDS: nonballad drink playparty
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) Ireland
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1594, "Round About the Maypole" (1 text)
Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong 21, "Round About the Punchbowl" (2 texts)
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 51, "Round About the Punch Bowl" (3 texts)
Roud #12974
NOTES [66 words]: Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong describes the ring game for this song. Leyden's second version, "collected by Clara M Patterson at Ballymiscaw Primary School in the 1890s," adds floating lines "Rings on her fingers and bells on her toes" [see "Banbury Cross"] and "Up the heathery mountain and down the rushy glen We dare not go a-hunting for Conor and his men" [see, for example, "Shane Crossagh"]. BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: Leyd021

Round and Round the Garden
DESCRIPTION: "Round and round the garden, Like a teddy bear, One step, two step, Tickle you under there."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes); the Opies note that the mention of a teddy bear requires a date after 1903
KEYWORDS: animal playparty nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 177, "Round and Round the Garden" (1 text)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 163, "Round and Round the Garden" (1 text)
File: 002177

Round and Round the Old Oak Tree
DESCRIPTION: Round the old oak tree, "I love the girls and the girls love me"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1985 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
KEYWORDS: playparty love
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame, p. 48, ("Round and round the old oak tree") (1 text)
Round Apples
DESCRIPTION: Poor Annie "with a knife in her hand, You dare not touch her, or else she'll go mad" (or be hanged). Her cheeks are like snow. She's dying. Wash her with milk, dress her in silk, write her name "with gold pen and ink"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Maclagan)
KEYWORDS: death play party clothes
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond),Scotland(High)) Canada( Ont)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 55, "Round Apples" (1 text, 1 tune)
JournalOfAmericanFolklore, F.W. Waugh, "Canadian Folk-Lore from Ontario," Vol. XXXI, No. 119 (Jan 1918), #649 p. 57 ("Round apples, round apples, by night and by day") (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Robert Craig Maclagan, The Games and Diversions of Argyleshire (London, 1901 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 85-86, "Round Apples" (1 text)
Roy Palmer, _Ripest Apples_, The Big Apple Association, 1996, pp. 26-27, "Round Apples" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13180
File: OpGa055

Round Cape Horn
DESCRIPTION: "I asked a maiden by my side, Who sighed and looked at me forlorn, 'Where is your heart?' She quick replied, "Round Cape Horn."" The singer warns boys to behave or he'll tell their fathers; they say he must go around the horn. One was born there
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales)
KEYWORDS: travel separation sailor father
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, p. 195, "Round Cape Horn" (1 short text)
Roud #6606
File: TNY195

Round It Up a Heap It Up
DESCRIPTION: Corn-husking song, "Round it up a heap it up a Round it up a corn, A joog-a-loa." "De big owl hoot and cry for his mate, My honey, my love! Oh, don't stay long, oh, don't stay late... It ain't so fur to de goodbye gate."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: food work
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 201, "Round It Up a Heap It Up" (1 text, plus a "Juba" fragment)
NOTES [30 words]: The full stanza ("De big owl hoot....") is reported to come from Harris's Uncle Remus and His Friends. The relationship between that text and the traditional song is not clear. - RBW
File: Br3201

Round River Drive
DESCRIPTION: Recitation; multiple stories of Paul Bunyan
AUTHOR: original probably by James McGillivray; re-versified by Douglas Malloch EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Detroit Evening News, according to Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan and Round Rye Bay for More

DESCRIPTION: "We'll go round Rye Bay for more, my tars, Round Rye Bay for more" South of the buoy at Rye Bay the singer lost his trawl where "Old Crusty he told me that I shouldn't stray." The singer will go back when our money's gone.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1976 (recording, Johnny Doughty)
KEYWORDS: nonballad shanty sailor
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
Roud #8095
RECORDINGS:
Johnny Doughty, "Round Rye Bay for More" (on Voice02)
NOTES [40 words]: On Voice02 Johnny Doughty sings the verse beginning "South of the buoy down Rye Bay way" as a parody of, and to the tune of, "South of the Border Down Mexico Way," by Jimmy Kennedy and Michael Carr, recorded by Frank Sinatra in the 1950's. - BS
File: RcRRBfM

Round the Bay of Mexico

DESCRIPTION: "Round the Bay of Mexico, Way, oh Susiana, Mexico is the place that I belong in...." The singer tells of courting girls "two at a time" and having them love him "because I don't tell everything that I know." He heads off to the fishing ground

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (field recording, Henry Lundy & David Pryor)
KEYWORDS: sailor courting
FOUND IN: West Indies(Bahamas)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 88-89, "Round the Bay of Mexico" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 83, "Round the Bay of Mexico (Bay of Mexico)" (1 text)
Roud #207
RECORDINGS:
Henry Lundy & David Pryor, "Round the Bay of Mexico" (AAFS 512 B2, 1935; on LC05, LomaxCD1822-2)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Cape Cod Girls" (lyrics)
Round the Corn Sally

DESCRIPTION: "Five can't catch me and ten can't hold me, Ho, round the corn, Sally, Round the corn, round the corn, round the corn, Sally! Ho, ho, ho, round...." "Here's your ingle-quarter and here's your count-aquila." "I can bank, ginny bank, ginny bank the weaver."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)

KEYWORDS: nonballad money

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 68, "Round the Corn, Sally" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12025

NOTES [35 words]: Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates can make little of the text of this, and I can't say I blame them -- but might that last verse have somehow floated in from the chorus of "Jenny Dang the Weaver"? - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4

File: AWG068A

Round the Corner, Sally

DESCRIPTION: Short-haul or halyard shanty. "Round the corner we will go, round the corner Sally." Verses refer to women or places where women may be found.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys)

KEYWORDS: shanty sailor whore

FOUND IN: Britain US

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 45, "Round the Corner" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 389-390, "Round the Corner, Sally" (2 texts, 1 tune)
[AbEd, pp. 297-298]
Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, XLII, p. 47, "Round the Corner, Sally" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, RNDCORNR*

Roud #4697

NOTES [101 words]: According to Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas "round-the-corner-sallies" are at least loose women and often full-fledged prostitutes. - SL

Dana's Two Years Before the Mast lists a song "Round the Corner" as a favorite shanty in his sailing days. If it is this piece, it would provide an Earliest Date for the song -- but Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen notes that there is no reason to identity them. Indeed, she seems to think them distinct -- but her reason is that this song is "almost too slight" to have merited mention. This would be a stronger argument if her text didn't look rather bowdlerized. - RBW

File: Hugi1389

Round the Rugged Rocks

DESCRIPTION: Tongue-twister. "Around the rugged rocks the ragged rascal ran." Or, "Robert Rutter dreamed a dream, He dreamt he saw a raging bear, Rush from the rugged rocks, And around the rugged rocks, The ragged rascal ran."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 2012 (Dolby-OrangesAndLemons)

KEYWORDS: wordplay animal dream
Rounding the Horn

DESCRIPTION: Sailor describes hard trip around Cape Horn (in the frigate "Amphitrite"), and the pleasures (mostly female) of shore-leave in Chile. The singer says that Spanish girls are superior to (English) women, who have no enthusiasm and steal your clothes

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1879 (Journal of the Andrew Hicks)
KEYWORDS: travel sea ship shore drink sailor whore clothes theft
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (7 citations):
VaughanWilliams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs, p. 90, "Rounding the Horn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H539, pp. 97-98, "The Girls of Valparaiso" (1 text, 1 tune)
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 163-164, "The Chile Girls" (1 text, 1 tune)
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, pp. 177-178, "The Girls Around Cape Horn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 127, "Rounding the Horn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 131-132, "The Gals Around Cape Horn" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, RNDHORN* RNDHORN2
Roud #4706
RECORDINGS:
Ewan MacColl and Peggy Seeger, "Round Cape Horn" (on ENMacCollSeeger02)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf "The Painful Plough" (tune)
cf. "Come All You Worthy Christian Men" (tune)
cf. "Van Dieman's Land (I)" [Laws L18] (tune)
NOTES [68 words]: The brig Amphitrite was built in 1820 and engaged in South American trade. A frigate of the same name was lost in 1833 while carrying female convicts to Australia (see "The Loss of the Amphitrite"). - PJS
Roud seems to occasionally file versions of this "The Loss of the Amphitrite" [Laws K4] and vice versa. They only common element I can see is the ship name. But this seems to be primarily Roud 4076. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: VWL090

Roundup in the Spring

DESCRIPTION: A group of cowboys meet in a hotel and swap tales. An old man listens eagerly. He was a cowboy, too, and recalls the work. He concludes, "I'd like to be in Texas for the roundup in the spring."

AUTHOR: claimed by Jack C. Williams and Carl Copeland
EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Recording, Vernon Dalhart; also Publications of the Texas Folk-Lore Society, Vol. VI); the Copeland text copyrighted 1916
KEYWORDS: cowboy age work
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 20, "Roundup in the Spring" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11309
RECORDINGS:
Leon Chappelear "I'd Like to Be In Texas (For the Roundup in the Spring)" (Champion 16497, 1932; Champion 45068, c. 1935; Montgomery Ward 4950, 1936)
Vernon Dalhart "I'd Like to Be In Texas" (Vocalion 5044, 1926)
Bradley Kincaid "I'd Like to Be In Texas" (Decca 12053, n.d.)
[Asa] Martin & [James] Roberts, "The Roundup in the Spring" (Perfect 12906/Melotone 12642 [as by Asa Martin], 1933; on WhenIWas1)
File: Ohr020

Rouse, Hibernians

DESCRIPTION: "Rouse, Hibernians, from your slumbers! ... Our French brethren are at hand."
Erin's sons defeat the tyrants now. "Apostate Orange ... Sure you might know how Irish freemen Soon would put your Orange down" "Vive la, United heroes"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1798 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
KEYWORDS: rebellion Ireland nonballad patriotic
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Aug 22, 1798 - 1100 French troops under General Humbert land at Killala Bay in County Mayo. He would surrender on Sept. 8, and by May 23 the Mayo rising had been suppressed with some brutality
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 18, "Rouse, Hibernians" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 113, "Rouse Hibernians" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Viva La!" (tune)
cf. "Men of the West" (subject)
NOTES [157 words]: Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion quotes Musgrave: "This was found on the mother of Dougherty, a United Irishman who was killed by Woollaghan at Delgany, in the county of Wicklow in autumn 1798. She was seen to throw it out of her pocket, yet she swore she never saw it." - BS
This is rather a curious piece, since the 1798 rebellion in Wicklow and the east was already over by the time General Humbert made the first French landing in the west of Ireland. For details on that event, see the notes to "Men of the West."
To this piece Hamish Henderson compares the song "Vive la Republican," collected from Bell Robertson by Greig. The similarity is more thematic than lyric; the version printed by Henderson has none of the ethnic/religious tension of the Irish. For discussion, see pp. 9-10 of Henderson's the 1993 Polygon paperback edition). - RBW

Last updated in version 2.5
File: Zimm018

Rouseabouts

DESCRIPTION: "With swear and curse and oaths and worse, We sauntered to the she: We 'Ere, Sir," bawled, as names were called" as they set to work, "And wished the sheep were dead." The singer describes all the work the rouseabouts are made to do

AUTHOR: Words: George Meek
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Meek, Station Days in Maoriland); supposedly written c. 1910; collected 1967/1968
KEYWORDS: work sheep travel hardtimes nonballad
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 96, "Rouseabouts" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: Col2096

Rousie's Song

DESCRIPTION: "They shore them wet on Monday, And they shore them wet again; How in the hell can a rousie live On twenty points of rain?"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987
Roustabout Holler

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, Po' roustabout don't have no home, Makes his livin' on his shoulder bone." The singer, loading sacks of cottonseed on the steamer Natchez, has no home and a sore shoulder, but does have a "little gal in big New Orleans."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (collected from Henry Truvillion)

KEYWORDS: work river

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES:
- Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 350-351, "Roustabout Holler" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Botkin-TreasuryMississippiRiverFolklore, p. 571, "Roustabout Holler" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #15599

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Levee Camp Holler"
- cf. "Steel Laying Holler"

File: BMRF571

---

Rout of the Blues

DESCRIPTION: The Blues have their orders and parade to the ship, rigged and ready to sail. "Lasses ... crying and tearing their hair" run home to mother and say they'll pack up and "march with the blues." All drink and cheer "success to King George and his Blues"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1839 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 16(285d))

KEYWORDS: army farewell ship drink nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(West))

REFERENCES:
- Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople 82, "Rout of the Blues" (2 texts)

Roud #21098

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Harding B 16(285d), "Success to the Blues" ("As I was going down Rosemary-lane"), J. Catnach (London), 1813-1838; also Harding B 15(321a), "Success to the Blues"

NOTES: "The Blues" are the "Royal Horse Guards." "In 1750 the regiment became the Royal Horse Guards Blue and eventually, in 1877, The Royal Horse Guards (The Blues)" (source: Wikipedia, "Royal Horse Guards"). - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: ReSh082

---

Rover (I), The

DESCRIPTION: The singer is leaving [for the army] but will return. Polly sits him down and reveals her love for him. He writes a song about her. Leaving, he crosses the moor and cries when he loses sight of her door. At least one of them thinks they will marry

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1845 (broadside, Bodleian Johnson Ballads 977); before 1867 (broadside , Bodleian Firth c.18(241)) [see notes]
Rover of the Sea (II), The

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a rover of the seas, And chief of a daring band, Who obey all my decrees, And laugh at the law of the land." The singer is "King of the waves" and "terror of the main" and envies no other monarch; he lives a merry life, for "I can but die at last."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 2011 (Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs), from a broadside perhaps of the 1850s

KEYWORDS: pirate royalty

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 47, "The Rover of the Seat" (1 text, plus a broadside print)

Roud #V1192

File: FrPi047

Rover's Bride, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh if you love me, furl your sails, draw up your boat on shore, Come tell me tales of midnight gales but tempt their fate no more." The pirate says not to fear; he'll bring a prize. But his boat is gone; his body washes ashore. She kisses him and dies.

AUTHOR: Words: Thomas Haynes Bayly (1797-1839) / Music: Alexander Lee (1802-1852) (according to Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)

EARLIEST DATE: before 1836 (source: Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)

KEYWORDS: pirate separation death battle

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 38, "The Rover's Bride" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scott-ACollectorsNotebook-31TraditionalSongs, "The Rover's Bride" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #22610

File: Fran038
Rover's Flag
DESCRIPTION: "O ever a Rover's life for me, A gallant bark and a rolling sea; On my own proud deck, like a King I'll stand Where brave hearts bow to their Chief's command." "With the black flag roving gallantly." "We'll shun no foe and strike to none."
AUTHOR: words: possibly Edwin Ransford (source: Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
EARLIEST DATE: before 1843 (source: Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
KEYWORDS: pirate travel ship
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 50, "The Rover's Flag" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V257
File: FrPi050

Rover's Glee, The
DESCRIPTION: "True rovers bold are we, Our home the rock-hid shore, We share our plunder merrily And dance to the oceal's roar." "We yield us to no power, Save the angry sea and sky." "We rovers know no fear... defiance is our cry."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1845 (The Pirate's Songster, according to Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
KEYWORDS: pirate nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 76, "The Rover's Glee" (1 text; #55 in the first edition)
Roud #V39486
File: FrPi076

Rover's Home, The
DESCRIPTION: "Oh talk no more of the tranquil shore, of the charms of hill and dale. We love to float in the rover's boat, borne on by the northern gale." "This is the life we love" -- to see the flag of "the enemy" and feel the storms; they expect to die at sea
AUTHOR: Words: Thomas Haynes Bayly (1797-1839) / Music: John Feltham Danneley (1786-1836) (according to Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
EARLIEST DATE: before 1840 (source: Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
KEYWORDS: pirate separation death battle
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 39, "The Rover's Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V26508
NOTES [22 words]: Hard to believe anyone would take this seriously. But then, it's hard to believe anyone would take any pop-pirate song seriously. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.3
File: Fran039

Rover's Serenade
DESCRIPTION: "Far, far to his billow The red sun has gone." "Then awake, dearest maiden, Bid slumber retire, The night is arrayed in her brightest attire." "My light bark shall dance o'er the silvery brine." "I'll bear thee o'er waters That care never sees."
AUTHOR: Words: Henry W. Challis / Music (lost?): Thomas Kilner (source: Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1845 (The Pirate's Songster, according to Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
KEYWORDS: pirate courting home
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 77, "The Rover's Serenade" (1 text; #56 in the first edition)
Roud #V30548
Rover's Song, The
DESCRIPTION: "Up, rovers, with sword and sail. True pirates, we ne'er will lag... Spread out our blood red flag." "See now, within gun shot she draws, Blaze in upon her lee. She feels our lightning." "Her treasures now our prize shall e, Her maids each rover's bride."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1845 (The Buccaneer Songster, according to Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
KEYWORDS: pirate ship battle
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 78, "The Rover's Song" (1 text, 1 tune; #57 in the first edition)
Roud #V32998
File: FrPi078

Rovin' Tam
DESCRIPTION: "Rovin Tam came doun the glen" and proposes to Nancy. She says, "Me be your dearie?" "Long he pled his cause in vain" and "plunged into Ugie's stream" At that she agrees to be his dearie. He drags himself onto the bank. Within a month they marry.
AUTHOR: Peter Still (1814-1848)
EARLIEST DATE: 1845 (Still)
KEYWORDS: courting marriage humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #108, p. 1, "Rovin' Tam" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan4 912, "Rovin' Tam" (3 texts)
ADDITIONAL: Peter Still, The Cottar's Sunday, and Other Poems, Chiefly in the Scottish Dialect (Philadelphia, 1845), pp. 196-197, "Rovin' Tam"
Roud #6259
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Duncan Gray" (tune, per Greig/Duncan4 and Still)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Rovin Tam Came Doun the Glen
NOTES [33 words]: Greig/Duncan4 quoting a Greig correspondent: "My uncle [Kenneth Shirer] tells me he has heard that the song was composed by a lady ... And if his memory serves him right, it was a Miss Gordon." - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD4912

Roving Bachelor (I), The
DESCRIPTION: Bachelors, be careful before you take a wife. Women are unpredictable. Even Samson and Aristotle erred in marrying. Consider the man who preferred hanging to marriage
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1845 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 15(263b), Bodleian Harding B 15(267a))
KEYWORDS: shrewishness marriage death humorous nonballad bachelor execution
FOUND IN: US(MA,Ro)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Thompson-ApioneerSongster 86, "Roving Bachelor" (1 text)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #89, "The Roving Bachelor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2849
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 15(263b), "The Roving Bachelor" ("Come all you roving batchelors"), J. Pitts (London), 1819-1844; also Harding B 15(267b), Harding B 11(3350), Harding B 25(1668) [many lines illegible], "Roving Bachelor" (see NOTES)
Bodleian, Harding B 15(267a), "The Roving Batchelor" ("Come all you roving bachelors"), J. Pitts
Roving Bachelor (II), The

DESCRIPTION: The bachelor comes to town determined to find a wife. Seeing a woman, he engages her in conversation and learns of her tastes and her fortune (as well as how she treats her family). (Since her wealth is enough and he suits her fancy, they get married)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Grieg)

KEYWORDS: rambling courting marriage dialog bachelor

FOUND IN: Ireland Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenry'sSongsOfThePeople H650a+b, pp. 263-264, "The Roving Bachelor" (2 texts, 1 tune)

Roud #1649

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Roving Journeyman, The

NOTES [126 words]: This is recognized less by the details of the plot than by the constant repetition of the phrase, "The next question that I asked/axed her...."

Creighton has a fragment also titled "The Roving Journeyman," but it looks more like a version of "With My Swag All On My Shoulder."

Henry's second version asks "did her father deal in flax?" This appears to be a reference to the several periods in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries when the Irish linen industry tried to build itself up. Typically the British would open the markets, the Irish would try to build an industry, and the British would reimpose the tariff walls, crushing the Irish flax farmers. It's not clear from the song whether it takes place during the up or down points of the cycle. - RBW

File: HHH650

Roving Gambler, The (The Gambling Man) [Laws H4]

DESCRIPTION: The singer freely admits his addiction to gambling, cards, and a roving life. But he also has an eye for the ladies. In one town he meets with a "pretty little girl" who takes him home and then decides to follow him wherever he goes

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: gambling courting rambling floating verses
FOUND IN: US (Ap, MW, Ro, SE, So, SW) Canada (Newf)
REFERENCES (28 citations):
Laws H4, "The Roving Gambler (The Gambling Man)"
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 374-377, "The Guerrilla Boy" (4 texts, 1 tune, but only the first 2 texts are this piece)
Randolph 835, "The Guerrilla Man" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 323-325, "The Guerrilla Man" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 835A. Cohen notes that the printed melody fits only the first verse; there is probably an error in the transcription, causing a line to be omitted)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 183-185, "The Roving Gambler" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 85-86, "The Roving Gambler" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abernethy-SinginTexas, pp. 39-40, "The Roving Gambler"; "The Gambling Man" (2 texts, 1 tune; the third text on the page, "The Roving Journeyman," appears to be a worn-down form of "True-Born Irish Man (With My Swag All on My Shoulder; The True-Born Native Man))"
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 49, "The Journeyman" (3 texts)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 49, "The Journeyman" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart2 43, "The Gambler" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 87, "The Blue-Coat Man" (1 text, a curious version in which the gambler, upon seeing enemies, "willingly shot them down"; 1 tune)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 75, "The Roaming Gambler" (1 text)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 261-262, "The Gambling Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 131, "The Roving Gambler" (1 text, incorporating the "Pretty Little Foot")
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol4, pp. 84-85, "The Rovin' Gambler" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #16, "Rovin' Gambler" (1 text, 1 tune); #54, "My Daddy Was a Gambler" (1 short text, 1 tune, which Roberts thinks is a "Hang Me, Oh Hang Me (Been All Around This World)" fragment although it looks more like "The Roving Gambler (The Gambling Man)" [Laws H4] to me)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 98-99, "The Roving Gambler" (1 text; a number of his other texts also have verses probably from this song; see the references under "On Top of Old Smokey")
Rosenberg, p. 142, "The Rovin' Gambler" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 312-313, "The Roving Gambler" (3 texts, 1 tune. The "A" and "C" texts, clearly go here; the "B" text is possibly distinct though mostly floating verses; cf. "Yonder Comes a Yellow Gal")
Lomax-Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 150-151, "The Roving Gambler" (1 text, 1 tune)
Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 21, pp. 136-139, "The Buckskin Shirt" (1 text, 1 tune, a strange composite starting with "The Roving Gambler (The Gambling Man) [Laws H4]), breaks into a cowboy version of "Soldier Boy for Me (A Railroader for Me)," and concludes with a stanza describing the happy marriage between the two)
Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, p. 889, "The Roving Gambler" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryMississippiRiverFolklore, p. 592, "The Wandering Steamboatman" (1 partial text)
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 120-121, "The Roving Gambler" (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 226-227, "The Roving Gambler" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 54, "Rambling, Gambling Man" (1 text, with more than a little influence from the "I'm a Rambler, I'm a Gambler" texts of "The Wagoneer's Lad"); p. 60, "Roving Gambler Blues" (1 text)
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, p. 122, "The Rustlin' Gambler" (1 text, probably a mix of this with other gambler songs)
DT 645, ROVINGMB
Roud #498
RECORDINGS:
Frank Bode, "Roving Gambler" (on FBode1)
Crockett's Kentucky Mountaineers, "Roving Gambler" (Crown 3159, 1931; Paramount 3302, 1932; Varsity 5082 [as Crockett Mountaineers], Montgomery Ward M-3025 [as Harlan Miners Fiddlers]/Homestead 23041/Continental 3012 [as Pete Daley's Arkansas Fiddlers], all c. 1931)
Vernon Dalhart, "Rovin' Gambler" (Edison 51584, 1925) (CYL: Edison [BA] 5027 [as Vernon Dalhart & Co., n.d.) (OKeh 40479 [as Tobe Little], 1925) (Columbia 15034 [as Al Craver], 1925) (Grey Gull/Radiex 4135 [as Jeff Calhoun], 1927) Hobart Delp & band, "Roving Gambler" (on Persis1) Kelly Harrell, "Rovin' Gambler" (Victor 19596, 1925; on KHarrell01) (Victor 20171, 1926; Montgomery Ward M-4367, 1933; on KHarrell01) Jack Mooney, "The Gambling Man" (on ITMA/CapeShoreNL) Claude Moyle, "Roving Gambler" (Champion 16118 [as Asparagus Joe], Supertone 9712 [as Pie Plant Pete], 1930; Superior 2643 [as Jerry Wallace], 1931; Champion 45063, Melotone [Can.] 45063 [both as Pie Plant Pete; as 'Rovin' Gambler'], 1935) RECORDINGS: J. J. Neece, "Old Gambling Man" (on CloseHomeMS) New Lost City Ramblers, "Roving Gambler" (on NLCR01) George Reneau, "Rovin' Gambler" (Vocalion 15148, 1925; Vocalion 5077, 1926) Gid Tanner & his Skillet Lickers, "The Roving Gambler" (Columbia 15447-D, 1929) Welby Toomey, "Roving Gambler" (Gennett 6005, Champion 15209 [as Herb Jennings], Silvertone 5006, Challenge 229 [as Clarence Adams], 1927; Silvertone 8151, Supertone 9252, 1928; Herwin 75532, n.d.; rec. 1926) Doug Wallin, "The Roving Gambler" (on Wallins1) CROSS-REFERENCES: cf. "True-Born Irish Man (With My Swag All on My Shoulder; The True-Born Native Man)" (plot) cf. "Hang Me, Oh Hang Me (Been All Around This World)" (floating lyrics) cf. "Almost Done" (floating lyrics) cf. "The Gambler" (theme, floating lyrics) cf. "Sailing Out on the Ocean" (floating lyrics) cf. "I Met a Handsome Lady" (lyrics) cf. "The Soldier Boy (III) (The Texas Volunteer)" (lyrics) cf. "I Am a Roving Peddler" (tune, some lyrics) File: LH04

Roving Heckler Lad, The

DESCRIPTION: "I am a roving heckler lad" and "travel the world all over." Health to hecklers "in the room that my love's in."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (Kidson-TraditionalTunes)

KEYWORDS: weaving rambling love

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 146-147, "The Roving Heckler Lad" (1 fragment, 1 tune) Roud #1111

NOTES [28 words]: Kidson-TraditionalTunes: "In the days of handloom weaving, a 'Heckler,' or 'Hackler,' was a man who heckled flax to make it ready for the distaff or spinning wheel." - BS Last updated in version 3.0 File: KiTu146

Roving Jack the Baker

DESCRIPTION: Roving Jack the baker returns from war with a good pension. He meets a girl with 15 pounds of her own. He courts her with lies to get her money. He promises to marry her but hopes not to. He makes her drunk, takes her to bed, steals her money, and leaves.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1989 (Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong)

KEYWORDS: greed courting sex lie theft drink rake

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong 32, "Roving Jack the Baker" (1 text, 1 tune) CROSS-REFERENCES:

"cf. "Merrily Kiss the Quaker" (tune, per Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong) cf. "Gold Watch [Laws K41]" (plot, with sex roles reversed) and references there

File: Leyd032
Roving Journeyman (III), The
DESCRIPTION: Jamie, a tradesman, left Nancy in Caledonia, promising to write. Now he works iron and steel from six in the morning til seven at night. He recommends others marry rather than leave their sweetheart behind. He toasts journeymen, his family, and Nancy.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: love emigration parting worker Scotland
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #107, p. 2, "The Roving Journeyman" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan8 1539, "The Roving Journeyman" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #12958
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Caledonia
NOTES [31 words]: Apparently broadside Bodleian, 2806 c.11(49), "Caledonia" ("Come all you roving journeymen, whereever you be"), unknown, no date is this song but I could not download and verify it. - BS
Last updated in version 4.5
File: GrD81539

Roving Newfoundlanders (I), The
DESCRIPTION: The singer, musing at home, thinks about all the Newfoundlanders who have sailed and fished in all parts of the world. They have also taken part in historic world events (mostly confined to the 19th century) The singer tells us he is from Harbour Grace.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)
KEYWORDS: Canada patriotic bragging
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 183, "The Roving Newfoundlanders" (1 text, 1 tune)
Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, p. 15, "Roving Newfoundlander" (1 text, 1 tune)
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 320-322, "The Roving Newfoundlanders" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6362
RECORDINGS:
Omar Blondahl, "The Roving Newfoundlander" (on NFOBlondahl02,NFOBlondahl05)
Martin Reddigan, "The Boys of Newfoundland" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Captain Bob Bartlett" (character) and references there.
NOTES [104 words]: Judging by the historic events mentioned (the Boer War, the Spanish-American War of 1898 and going to the "Pole"), we can determine that the song is from the early twentieth century. Robert Abram Bartlett was born in Brigus, Conception Bay and began exploring the Arctic in 1897. He was with Admiral Robert Peary in 1909 when [the latter reportedly reached] the North Pole, being the commander of Peary's ship. - SH
For a good deal more on Captain Bob Bartlett, see the notes to "Captain Bob Bartlett"; also "Ballad of Captain Bob Bartlett, Arctic Explorer." For the quest for the Pole, see "Hurrah for Baffin's Bay." - RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File: Doy55

Roving Newfoundlanders (II), The
DESCRIPTION: "Ye roving boys of Newfoundland, come listen unto me." In 1863, Shea hires 55 men to work on the railway. They run away to Canada, work on a riverboat and are robbed, ship on the Morning Bloom which sinks on George's Bank; only seven reach St John's
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)
KEYWORDS: death drowning commerce fishing river sea ship work ordeal storm wreck Canada sailor
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 150, "The Roving Newfoundlanders"
(1 text)
Peacock, pp. 916-921, "George's Banks" (2 texts, 3 tunes)
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 78, "George's Banks" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6468
RECORDINGS:
Henry Campbell and Gerald Campbell, "Georges Banks" (on ITMA/CapeShoreNL)
John James, "George's Banks" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Martin Reddigan, "Fifteen Men Lost on George's Banks" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Patrick Rossiter, "George's Banks" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
Gordon Walters, "George's Banks" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Shea Gang
You Roving Boys of Newfoundland
NOTES [2109 words]: This is a tough one to pin down.
This is surely not about the Newfoundland Railroad which was not begun until 1881. The Windsor Branch Railway in Nova Scotia opened in 1856 and is at least possible as the railroad in question.
Peacock's versions of the song have the date as 1868 and he has "Shea's gang" building the Canadian Pacific Railway; but the Canadian Pacific Railway construction began in 1875 after scandals and false starts in the early Seventies.
As for the wreck of the Morning Bloom on George's Bank: I find no record of that[;] the Northern Shipwrecks Database 2002 lists well over 200 ships by name lost on George's Bank between 1822 and 1995.
A July 2002 note by Wilfred Allan at Nova-ScotiaSeafarers-L Archives site states "Georges Bank is at the edge of the Atlantic continental shelf between Cape Cod and Nova Scotia. Thus it straddles both the U.S and Canadian borders ... about 250 km by 150 km in area." - BS
We have four texts -- Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 150, Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 78, Peacock p916A and Peacock p919C -- and we're not likely to find more (cf. Mercer). This seems a good time to sum up.
In response to my query about railway history as it might relate to Peacock's version and comments, Dave Knowles, Librarian of the C. Robert Craig Memorial Library in Ontario -- established to collect, preserve and make available to the public materials that document the history of rail transportation in Canada -- was kind enough to join me in speculating about the railway and to suggest further paths to follow in researching this problem.
Mr Knowles's thoughts -- quoted by permission with the understanding that "so much of it is guesswork or gut instinct that it really doesn't qualify as research" -- follow and are interspersed among the comments on the railway section of this discussion. He writes, "On balance I suspect that the situation in the song is generic rather than specific. Given the song's length it probably developed over the years with consequent changes in names and facts in order to match the times, the tune, and perhaps even the audiences. In all probability many songs were melded together to create the epic."
While I don't go that far, I did become convinced that the ballad is a constructed "Odyssey" with episodes to work back to "Ithaca" rather than a retelling of an historic journey; why, for example, would even a storm-driven Gloucester fisherman work so hard to reach St John's rather than heading home?
As for the rest of the statement: certainly, the components were in the air for years and, as Greenleaf/Mansfield 183 illustrates, the idea of combining the different adventures of "The Roving Newfoundlanders" in a single song was not new (though Greenleaf/Mansfield 183 does not stitch them together into a single adventure).
Songs about work fill the collections. There are a few songs about fishing on your own in the season: "Rowing in a Dory" where you are "the captain and the crew," "The Fisher Who Died in his Bed," "John Yetman," "Western Boat," ..... There are a few more about trying to get through the hard times at home off season like "Brown Flour" and "Fish and Brevis." There are far more about Times in our Ship," not to count the many "The Wreck of ..." and "The Loss of ..." that end in
There are many about leaving home for seal hunting, logging, hauling cargo etc.: "Maurice Crotty," "The Sealer's Song," "Twin Lakes," "Jerry Ryan," "The Badger Drive," and some about spiking on railways: "The Boys at Ninety-Five," "The Bonavist Line," "Drill Ye Heroes, Drill." There are ballads about leaving the island for seasonal work: "Labrador," "The Girls of Newfoundland," "The Track to Knob Lake," ... There are ballads about leaving the island for years to earn a stake, like "The Green Shores of Fogo" and "My Dear, I'm Bound for Canady." Finally there are ballads about emigrating when hard times are too much to bear, like "The Emigrant from Newfoundland" and "The Low-Backed Car."

This ballad has five episodes and they cover some of this variety of situation.

(1) In 1863/1868/1872 they (maybe 55 or 62) leave Newfoundland to get work. My first problem was in taking this range of dates seriously. What was going on in those years? Is this just meant to refer to "a ways back"?

(2) In three of the four versions, the first stop is to railway construction for Shea (maybe in "Canada"). The conditions being very bad, they run away. Peacock puts this job at Crow's Nest Pass, and, in 1961, his seventy-seven year old informant reminisced about hearing the old-timers talk about that hard time. If Peacock was right then this episode referred to a Canadian Pacific Railway project in the winter of 1897-1898; Crow's Nest Pass -- or Crowsnest Pass -- is just east of the border between southern Alberta and British Columbia.

Dave Knowles continues on the subject of what workers were likely to be found on railway construction gangs between 1860 and 1900. My original question to him involved the likelihood that Newfoundlanders were contracted as a group in 1863-1872. "The dates cited in the song were in the sixties. There were many different railways built in what is today's 'Canada' beginning in the 1830s. The first railway into Ottawa was 1854, and the Grand Trunk between Montreal and Toronto was 'abuilding' in the 1856-8 period. Most of these early railways were short and soon ended up in the three major systems of Grand Trunk, Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern.... "As far as labour is concerned most of it was local, contracted and sub-contracted out. Stone bridges, stations etc would require skilled stone masons and carpenters who were a higher level of worker than needed for the roadbeds. The Grand Trunk (between Montreal and Toronto), in contrast, however, was built by British railway contractors Peto, Brassey, Bates and Jackson who imported a crew (estimated at 3000) of the famous 'navvies' from Britain. They returned to Britain at the end of construction. The western end of the CPR in the early 1880s used labourers imported from China! ..."

"In the days before steam or diesel powered construction equipment the work was hard and I gather the attrition rates were pretty high. Consequently labourers were sought from wherever they could be found. Many contractors were involved. I suspect that there were many 'Sheas' among the contractors and sub-contractors as well as in the labour force. In the Ottawa area the Royal Engineers had used many Scots and Irish stone masons on the necessary works of the Rideau Canal, and there was a substantial colony of Irish immigrants located to the west and south of Ottawa." He goes on to recommend Fleming and Coleman as sources for further information, both of which were very useful.

I followed Dave Knowles's lead to look at sources of railway labor throughout the period. The ballad holds together best if the railway work is actually in the East, on the Intercolonial in the Maritimes. The original Intercolonial plan had considered Imperial Government orchestration of Irish emigration to alleviate both the famine and shortage of labour (Fleming, pp. 49-50). I could find no reference to the actual source after 1862 (Fleming, pp 55-64).

The work on the Grand Trunk before the 1860s required temporary contracting of 3000 navies from England because "there was no local labour worth speaking of" (Coleman, pp. 183-184). English navies continued to be used. While "the navvy age" continued until about 1900 (Coleman, p. 20) the last "great work" in Britain was completed in 1875 (Coleman, p.192) and by 1888 "navvies from London were starving at Toronto" (Coleman, p. 191).

By 1880 use of Chinese labor had become a major issue in the west (Berton, p. 373). While locals were against the competition, the railway builders preferred Chinese labor. Not only were wages low for Chinese labor but there was "little to fear" in regard to working condition monitoring from a government and public hostile to the Chinese (McKee and Klassen, p.21). And, besides, in 1885, "Chapleau wrote that 'as a railway navvy, the Chinaman has no superior'" (Berton, p. 374).

Restriction of Chinese immigration by imposition of a $50 head tax, in 1885, reopened the labor market to Canadians (18thC) as the navvy source dried up. By 1887 there were sites employing no Chinese (Turner, pp. 17-18).

By the time of the Crow's Nest Pass project working conditions for white workers were an issue... and the description of the situation is very much like that described by the ballad. Thirty-five hundred were employed in construction (Cousins, p 32). "Complaints reached Ottawa, and in January 1898... a commission [was appointed] to inquire into the treatment of laborers in the Crowsnest construction crews. Its report, submitted in April, told a tale of poor accommodation, bad sanitary conditions, and low wages.... Cases of desertion and of nonpayment of wages by contractors were fairly frequent; there was some violence in the camps and occasionally a murder" (Lamb, p. 212).

Anyone in Ottawa, or near a Canadian library, wishing to investigate the Crow's Nest Pass project further might consider the following sources: Report of Commissioner N.W.M.P. 1898 (Ottawa: King's Printer, 1898), and Report of the Commission Inquiring into the Death of McDonald and Fraser of the Crow's Nest Railway, R.C. Clute Commissione. 1899 Ottawa. Sessional Papers No. 70 Vol. 33 No. 14, may be included in Government of Canada Files at [link expired, but the data has probably been moved to the Library and Archives Canada site, http://tinyurl.com/tbdx-CanadaArchives, which has many references to the Pass project - RBW], Reference RG43, Railways and Canals, Series A-I-2, Volume 348, File 9080, Access code 90, File Title: Crow's Nest Pass Railway Co. - Labour Conditions. Keywords: Crow's Nest Pass Railway Co. Outside Dates: 1897-1907, File aiding number: 43-50.

(3) In the two versions for which 55 run away, their next job is on a riverboat in Canada (maybe around Montreal); until their money is stolen. I have seen no other Newfoundland references to river boating. That is hardly surprising since there were no Newfoundland river boats. However, the story is different for the rest of what is now Canada. The first commercial steamboat voyage on the St Lawrence -- between Montreal and Quebec -- took place in 1809, two years after Fulton's Clermont went into service on the Hudson (Croil, pp. 50, 312).

By the time of the years actually mentioned in the ballad commercial steam powered river boats were common in Quebec and Ontario (Croil, pp. 307-332). At the time of the Crow's Nest Pass project "some of the finest river steamers in the Dominion" were on the Columbia River and Kootenay Lakes, about 160 miles away (Croil, pp. 338-339). And while river boats may not have been in Newfoundland, steamers were. Steam service began in the 1840's and steamers were used in seal hunting in 1862 (Croil, pp. 354-355). So Newfoundlanders were knowledgeable steamship hands throughout the period we are considering and steamships were used commercially where the events may be supposed to take place. Whether they actually took place in the context of the ballad is the question.

(4) They eventually go through Halifax to Boston (or Gloucester) and ship aboard the Morning Bloom (or Morning Glow) for George's Banks. On November 22, in a bad storm, either their ship, or Jubilee, lose 22 men (but no ship is mentioned as sinking). There is no question about the dangers on George's Banks (cf. "Fifteen Ships on George's Banks" and "George's Bank (II)"). However, there is no record of a severe storm on some November 22, or thereabouts, that I can find in the Northern Shipwrecks Database for the period in question. Part of the problem may be that no sunk ships are named in the ballad and that the database only records lost ships. However, if the date referred to a real storm I'd expect some ship to have been lost and reported.

(5) Having escaped that storm they continue fighting strong seas. Eventually they see the lighthouse at Cape Ray (built 1871) or Cape Race (starts operation 1856) or Sarne's Point and, of the remaining crew of 18, only 7 survive to reach Cape Spear (built 1835) and St John's. There's nothing here that we can say is evidence of some one historic event. The John James version for MUNFLA/Leach has the starting date "in the year of ninety-two," which could have the railroad work be at Crow's Nest Pass. - BS

Bibliography

- Croil: James Croil, Steam Navigation and Its Relation to the Commerce of Canada and the United States, William Briggs, 1898
- Fleming: Sanford Fleming, The Intercolonial. A Historical Sketch of the Inception, Location, Construction and Completion of the Line of Railway Uniting the Inland and Atlantic Provinces of the Dominion, Dawson Brothers, Montreal, 1876
Roving Ploughboy, The
DESCRIPTION: The singer asks that her horse be saddled so she can follow the ploughboy. After sleeping last night "on a fine feather bed," she will sleep tonight in a barn in his arms. She says none can compare with him, and bids her home farewell

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1953 (Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland)
KEYWORDS: love elopement worker farming farewell
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 260, "The Roving Ploughboy-O" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2138
RECORDING:
John MacDonald, "The Roving Ploughboy-O" (on FSB3)
CROSS-REFERENCES:

NOTES [112 words]: Paul Stamler suggests that this is a version (or, perhaps more correctly, a fragment) of "The Gypsy Laddie," and it’s true that about half the lyrics appear in that song, and the general theme is the same, and there are similarities in the tune as well. But the song seems to have circulated independently, and the key element of "The Gypsy Laddie" is missing: there is no sign of the wife abandoning her husband, or of him pursuing. Allowing the strong possibility that this is a fragment of the longer ballad, I still incline to split them. Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland associates this with Ord's "The Collier Laddie." That strikes me as much more of a stretch. - RBW

Roving Shantyboy, The
DESCRIPTION: "Come all you tru-born shantyboys wherever you may be." The singer describes how he met a pretty girl and took her on my knee. The song shifts to the girl's viewpoint as she laments that "he was away by the first of may." She laments with her child

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (Fowke)
KEYWORDS: courting rambling pregnancy logger baby
FOUND IN: Canada(Ont)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fowke-LumberingSongsFromTheNorthernWoods #57, "The Roving Shantyboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4359
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Oh No Not I" (plot)
cf. "Rambleaway" (plot)

NOTES [58 words]: Fowke considers this to be "adapted from an older British song, but here the original has proved harder to identify." It appears to me "very" similar to "Rambleaway," including that song's shift in viewpoint: The man describes the seduction, the woman the consequences. Though the lyrics have points of contact with "The Foggy Dew" and others. - RBW
Row After Row

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a-thinkin' of you, honey, Thinkin' 'case I love you so... As I hoe down row after row." "Row after row, my baby (x3)... When I think of her the rows get shorter...." "So I keep on a-hoein' an a-hoein', Thinkin' of Miss Lindy Lou."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: worksong farming love
FOUND IN: US (So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 211-212, "Row After Row" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: ScaNF211

Row Boat (Ride About)

DESCRIPTION: "Row boat (or: "Ride About"), row, where shall I row?" The young man comes to Miss Mary's door and asks if she is in. She is, and the wedding is set for (the next day)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Newell)
KEYWORDS: love courting marriage playparty
FOUND IN: US (SE, So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Randolph 678, "Ride About, Ride About" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune; the "B" text is mixed with "Uncle John Is Sick Abed")
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 73, "Row the Boat, Row the Boat" (2 texts plus a fragment)
Roud #13080
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Wallflowers" (form, floating lyrics)
NOTES [60 words]: The editors of Brown claim that their texts are remnants of "Wallflowers." This is one of those unprovable things; what similarities they have are all floating elements. The "B" text in Brown, "Tommy Jones," has clearly been conflated with something else to make it a true, if somewhat incoherent, ballad -- but what that something else is I cannot tell. - RBW
File: R678

Row Us Over the Tide

DESCRIPTION: Two children come up to a boatman, asking him to "row us over the tide." The report that their mother is dead and their father has abandoned them; they have no home.

AUTHOR: E. C. Avis?
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recordings, Kelly Harrell, Bela Lam); Avis is said to have published the song in 1888
KEYWORDS: mother father orphan death separation
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Jones-MinstrelOfTheAppalachians-Bascom-Lamar-Lunsford, pp. 227-228, "Row Us Over the Tide" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, ROWTIDE*
Roud #9132
Roud #9132
RECORDINGS:
The Blue Sky Boys, "Row Us Over the Tide" (Bluebird B-6567, 1936)
Clarence & Claude Ganus, "Row Us Over the Tide" (Vocalion 5312, 1929)
Kelly Harrell & Henry Norton, "Row Us Over the Tide" (Victor 20935, 1927; on KHarrell02)
Bela Lam & His Green County Singers, "Row Us Over The Tide" (Okeh 45126, 1927)
Lulu Belle & Scottie (Okeh/unissued, 1940)
Mr. & Mrs. E. C. Mills, "Row Us Over the Tide" (Brunswick/unissued, 1929)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Orphan's Lament (Two Little Children, Left Jim and I Alone)" (subject)
cf. "I Saw the Pale Moon Shining on Mother's White Tombstone" (subject) NOTES [109 words]: As far as I know, no version of this song reveals "why" the children want to cross the water. (Of course, the versions of the song aren't particularly coherent.) One suspects that, in the original, they interpreted crossing the tide as going to heaven. Joan Sprung knew a report connecting this with the 1878 yellow fever epidemic (in which at least 20,000 people died, mostly along the Mississippi river between New Orleans and Memphis). The Blue Sky Boys recording put a very different twist on this song, ending with a chorus about Jesus taking the children away to heaven. This is clearly a rewrite to give a potential tragedy a pseudo-happy ending. - RBW

Row-Dow-Dow

Description: Singer, Clarkie, and two others go out poaching pheasants; keepers arrive, and the singer and Clarkie are captured. They are taken to Wandsworth Gaol. Released on Christmas eve, he has a drink and rejoices, but Clarkie doesn't get out until mid-January

Author: Words: Possibly Fred Holman

Earliest date: 1956 (recorded from George Maynard); tune is older

Long description: Singer, his friend Clarkie and two others go out poaching pheasants; keepers arrive, the two other men leave, and the singer and Clarkie are captured and charged before the magistrate. Convicted, he asks to be fined but is sentenced to six weeks; his friend gets two months. They are taken to Wandsworth Gaol; he sneaks his tobacco in past the guards. He is put to work pumping water and grinding flour. Released on Christmas eve, he has a drink and rejoices, but Clarkie doesn't get out until mid-January

Keywords: captivity fight poaching prison punishment trial freedom hunting drink friend prisoner

Found in: Britain(England(South))

References (3 citations):

Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 354, "Row-Dow-Dow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, "Row Dow Dow" (1 text, 1 tune)

Row, Molly, Row (Molly Was a Good Gal)

Description: "Molly was a good gal and a bad gal, too, Oh, Molly, row, gal." The captain and pilot make brief appearances: "I'll row dis boar and I'll row no more...." "Captain on the biler deck a-heaving of the lead... Calling to the pilot to give "turn ahead...."

Author: unknown

Earliest date: 1924

Keywords: river nonballad ship work

Found in: US(MW)

References (2 citations):

Botkin-TreasuryMississippiRiverFolklore, p. 590, [no title] (1 text)
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, p. 120, "Molly Was a Good Gal" (1 text)
Row, Row, Row Your Boat

DESCRIPTION: "Row, row, row your boat, Gently down the stream, Merrily, merrily, merrily, Life is but a dream."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1852 (broadside, LOCSheets sm1852 511180)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
   Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 412, "Row, Row, Row Your Boat" (1 text)
   Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, pp. 475-476, "Row, Row, Row Your Boat"

BROADSIDES:
   LOCsheet, sm1852 511180, "The Old Log Hut" or "Row, Row Your Boat," Firth, Pond and Co. (New York), 1852; also sm1853 710040, sm1853 531440, "Row, Row Your Boat" or "The Old Log Hut" (tune)

SAME TUNE:
   Row, Row, Row Your Boat (Throw Your Teacher Overboard) (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 93)
   Propel, Propel, Propel Your Craft (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 208)
   Glub, Glub, Glub Your Boat (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 213)

NOTES [65 words]: Fuld reports that this text, with a different tune, was published in sheet music form in 1852; this version had music by R. Sinclair, but the words were unattributed (said to be sung by "Master Adams of Kunkels Nightingale Opera Troupe"). Another melody was published in 1854; the common melody was first published in 1881, with a credit (not necessarily of authorship) to E. O. Lyte. - RBW

File: FSWB412C

Rowan County Crew (Trouble, or Tragedy), The [Laws E20]

DESCRIPTION: An account of the Tolliver-Martin feud, which the legal system is powerless to end. Casualties of the fighting include John Martin, Floyd Tolliver, Sol Bradley (an innocent bystander), and Deputy Sheriff Baumgartner; even this does not end the feud

AUTHOR: James W. Day ("Jilson Setters")
EARLIEST DATE: 1918 (Cox)
KEYWORDS: feud death fight injury
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
   1884 - Date of the Tolliver-Martin shootings
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,SE,So,SW)
REFERENCES (13 citations):
   Laws E20, "The Rowan County Crew (Trouble, or Tragedy)"
   Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 5-9, "Rowan County Troubles" (1 text, 1 tune)
   Thomas-DevilsDitties, pp. 148-150, "The Rowan County Troubles" (1 text, 1 tune)
   Randolph 169, "The Rowan County Crew" (1 text, 1 tune)
   Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 324-326, "The Rowan County Crew" (1 text, 1 tune)
   Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates 61, pp. 161-162, "The Tolliver Song" (1 text)
   Cox-FolkSongsSouth 39, "A Tolliver-Martin Feud Song" (1 text)
   Cox/Hercog/Halpert/Boswell-WV*Virginia-B, #1A-C, pp. 111-118, "The Rowan County Crew" (2 texts plus a fragment, 2 tunes)
   Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 196-197, "Rowan County Trouble" (1 text, 1 tune)
   Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 257-258 "The Rowan County Crew" (1 text)
   Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, pp. 891-892, "Rowan County Troubles" (1 text, 1 tune)
   Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 194-195, "The Rowan County Crew" (1 text)
   DT 703, ROWANCREW
   Roud #465

RECORDINGS:
   Dock Boggs, "Rowan County Crew" (on Boggs1, BoggsCD1)
   Ted Chestnut [as Chesnut], "The Rowan County Feud" (Gennett 6513/Champion 15524 [as Cal Turner], 1928)
Robert L. Day, "The Rowan County Crew" (AFS, 1938; on KMM)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "A West Virginia Feud Song" (theme, lyrics, metre)
cf. "Death of Samuel Adams" (lyrics) NOTES [64 words]: Jean Thomas, who knew both James W. Day (who had been in the area when the feud started) and Lucy (Mrs. John) Martin, has extensive notes about the arguments which led to this feud.
Interestingly, Thomas attributes this song to James W. Day, not "Jilson Setters," even though she always calls him "Setters" elsewhere. I can't even find a hint in Thomas that the two were the same. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.5
File: LE20

Rowdy Mob, The
DESCRIPTION: "This Ballarat's a curious spot, At least I'm sure I've found it so." He describes the hard times he's had mining. He courted a girl named Sal, but her boyfriend beat him up. Even the police chase him in Ballarat, which is governed by "a rowdy mob."
AUTHOR: Charles R. Thatcher (1831-1878)
EARLIEST DATE: 1869 (Thatcher)
KEYWORDS: humorous mining courting hardtimes
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Thatcher-ColonialMinstrel-Songsters, pp. 16-17, "The Rowdy Mob" (1 text, from the "Colonial Minstrel")
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 54-56, "The Rowdy Mob" (1 text, 1 tune)
Anderson-GoldrushSongster, pp. 54-55, "The Rowdy Mob" (1 text, 1 tune)
Anderson-ColonialMinstrel, pp. 22-24, "The Rowdy Mob" (1 text, tune referenced)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "Green Grow the Rushes" (tune; although Thatcher is not entirely clear about this, it appears he means the Burns song)
NOTES [29 words]: For brief background on Charles Thatcher's career, see the notes to "Where's
Your License?" For an extensive collection of his songs, see Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong.
- RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: AnSt054

Rowdy Soul
DESCRIPTION: "I'm a rowdy soul (x2), Don't care whether I work or not." The singer raised no crop last year; he blames the poor soil. He hopes to build a better house, safe from yellowjackets. He describes his partying lifestyle
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (recording, Janie Scott Kincey)
KEYWORDS: work home hardtimes party floatingverses
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Wheeler-SteamboatinDays, pp. 93-94, "Rowdy Soul" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10034
RECORDINGS:
Janie Scott Kincey, "Sometimes I Ride an Old Grey Mare (I'm a Rowdy Old Soul)" (AFS CYL-23-3, 1933)
Will Starks, "I'm a Rowdy Soul" (AFS 6653 B3, 1942)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "Whoa Back, Buck" (floating lyrics)
File: MWhee093
Rownd Yr Horn (Round the Horn)

DESCRIPTION: Welsh shanty. Describes a voyage round the horn. Ch. translates: "Come Welshmen all and listen to my tale, How we sailed our packet round the Horn! Twas the third day of the seek boys, When dawn was just abreakin', we passed the rocky shores of Anglesey!"

AUTHOR: Music: R.J. Tomas
EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage shanty ship travel
FOUND IN: Wales
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 563-564, "Rownd Yr Horn" (2 texts-Welsh & English, 1 tune)
NOTES [48 words]: This is the only sea shanty I've ever heard recorded with harp accompaniment (!) -- by Ar Log on "Ar Log II." According to their liner notes, R. J. Tomas (a Welshman living in America) wrote the tune unde the title "Annie Deg o'r Glen." The words were provided by "Dick Common Sense." - RBW
File: Hugi563

Roxie Ann

DESCRIPTION: "Roxie Ann's a foolin' gal, She fools me all the while, She's been a long time foolin', foolin', She's been a long time foolin' me." "She fools me in the mornin', She fools me in the night..." "I'm goin' to tell my maw on you, I'm goin' to tell my paw..."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (JAFL 27)
KEYWORDS: playparty courting trick
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 539, "Roxie Ann" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7647
File: R539

Roxy Ann

DESCRIPTION: "Roxy, she's a daisy, She wears a hat so fine, There ain't but one thing spoils her looks, She wears a number nine." "If she don't quit that fooling me... She'll be no gal of mine." "She fooled me in the 'lasses patch, The sweetest place of all."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (collected from Mrs. Eugene Martin by Boswell)
KEYWORDS: courting clothes
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 85, pp. 136-137, "Roxy Ann" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #11016
File: BoWo085

Roy Bean

DESCRIPTION: "Cowboys, come and hear the story of Roy Bean in all his glory. 'The law west of the Pecos' read his sign." Bean runs most of the businesses in his part of the world, and uses them to enhance his power and increase his fortune

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Finger-FrontierBallads)
KEYWORDS: cowboy lawyer robbery
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Finger-FrontierBallads, pp. 133-136, "Roy Bean" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 413-415, "Roy Bean" (1 text)
DT, ROYBEAN
Roy's Wife of Aldivalloch

DESCRIPTION: "Roy's wife of Aldivalloch (x2), Wat ye how she cheated me As I came owre the Braes o' Balloch?" Singer complains that Roy's wife has cheated him; she has sworn she loves him and will be his, but instead she has robbed him and left him

AUTHOR: Mrs Grant of Carron [not of Laggan] (c.1745-c.1814) (source: Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong)

EARLIEST DATE: 1791 (Herd)

KEYWORDS: adultery infidelity marriage betrayal bawdy wife

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) US(SE)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Greig/Duncan4 748, "Roy's Wife of Aldivalloch" (2 texts plus a single verse on p. 534)
Porter/Gower-Jeannie-Robertson-EmergentSingerTransformativeVoice #54, pp. 213-214, "Roy's Wife of Aldivalloch" (1 text, 1 tune)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, p. 8, "Roy's Wife" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 125, "Roy's Wife of Aldivalloch" (1 text, with dialect retained; one suspects print influence)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2044, p. 137, "Roy's Wife of Aldivalloch" (1 reference)
Heart-Songs, p. 134, "Roy's Wife of Aldivalloch" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
Ewan MacColl, "Roy's Wife of Aldivalloch" (on Lomax43, LomaxCD1743)

SAME TUNE:
Know Ye Not That Lovely River (by Gerald Griffin) (Kathleen Hoagland, editor, One Thousand Years of Irish Poetry (New York, 1947), p. 422)

NOTES [213 words]: According to Lomax, this was originally a bawdy song in folk tradition; the words were sanitized by, "Mrs. Grant of Carron" [in the eighteenth century], and the song then drifted back into tradition. - PJS

According to the notes in MacColl, Folk Songs and Ballads of Scotland, "John Roy of Aldivalloch was married to Isabel Stewart [on February 21, 1727]. Roy was considerably older than his wife [who ran away with] David Gordon of Kirktown. She was pursued by Roy and brought back after a chase over the Braes of Balloch.... "Margaret Roy... said that the song had been made by a shoemaker living in the neighbourhood of Aldivalloch. The tune was first published in Walsh's 'Twenty-Four Country Dances' (1724) as Lady Frances Wemy's Reel, but is almost certainly considerably older."

There was an 1860 American printing of this by De Marsan, documented on p. 137 of Edwin Wolf 2nd, American Song Sheets, Slip Ballads, and Political Broadsides 1850-1870, Library Company of Philadelphia, 1963. I can't help but wonder what audience they were trying to reach. - RBW

Of the 138 entries in Roud, the vast majority are printed in chapbooks, songsters, and broadsides, suggesting a broad popularity. Such intense support from print surely played a role in stabilizing the text. - DGE

Last updated in version 6.0

File: RcRWOA

Royal Eagle, The

DESCRIPTION: "A royal lady bewail'd her sad fate" near Vienna. "My Eagle, she cried, now lies in St Helena." She recalls how he left her, and his exploits and says she will look for help to rescue him. "If I cannot find him, I'll fly to old Erin."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c.1830 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)

KEYWORDS: Napoleon love political

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1815 - Defeat at the Battle of Waterloo forces Napoleon into exile
1821 - Death of Napoleon
Royal Family, The
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, how glorious 'twill be (x2) Dressed in white and crowned with glory With the royal family. We'll see Joseph Smith and Hyrum Dressed in white upon Mount Zion." They will also see Brigham Young, Heber, Paul, and Peter
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah)
KEYWORDS: religious death clothes nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ro)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #207, "The Royal Family" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10896
NOTES [57 words]: Joseph Smith was of course the founder of the Mormon church. Hyrum Smith was his brother, who didn't really have a big role in the church but suffered and died with his brother. Brigham Young was the leader of (the largest faction of) the church after Smith's death. I assume "Heber" is Heber C. Kimball, another important Mormon leader. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.8
File: Hubb207

Royal George (I), The
DESCRIPTION: "As we set sail from the Rock of Gibraltar" for Dublin Bay or other destination, the sailors know nothing of disaster that awaits. The ship is wrecked; many die. We are told of the sorrows of those left behind
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Vaughan Williams/Palmer)
KEYWORDS: ship wreck death mourning travel
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #80, "The Royal George" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #2529
File: VWP080

Royal Light Dragoon, The
DESCRIPTION: When the Royal Light Dragoon comes to town women's "hay ricks," landlord's inns, and pretty girls are at risk. "'Tis death to ... oppose the Royal Light Dragoon" and relief when they are called away.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Land ladies beware: "the Light Horse comes in to-day ... they'll pull your hay ricks down." The landlord feeds them well to keep them quiet "and from drawing the sword ... 'tis death to oppose the Royal Light Dragoon." "Girls do like to spend time with the soldiers"; if the girls complain to our officers "they will send us away Into some foreign country, where riots will be soon"; but, if we marry "we must rock the cradle" "Now the riot's come ... we must away"

KEYWORDS: courting sex army parting food nonballad rake soldier

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 297, "Come, All You Saucy Landlords" (1 text fragment) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 330)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 113, "The Royal Light Dragoon" (1 text)

Roud #1323

NOTES [69 words]: Compare "Now the riot's come ... we must away" to "The rout has now begun, And we must march away" of "High Germany" at Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 447, "In High Germany" and "the rout is come this afternoon" of "Isle of Wight" at Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Gl 133, "Route ... also rout ... 5 archaic: marching orders" (source: Webster's Third New International Dictionary of the English Language Unabridged, 1976) - BS

Last updated in version 2.7

File: WT297

Royal Oak, The

DESCRIPTION: While sailing on the "Royal Oak", the singer and his fellows spy ten Turkish men-of-war. They sink three, burn three, drive three off, and capture the last, which they drag into Portsmouth harbor. The singer praises their skipper, Capt. (Wellfounder)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Greig/Duncan1 fragment)

KEYWORDS: fight navy sailor foreigner

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber)) Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #64, p. 2, ("Two we sunk, and two we brunt") (1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan1 40, "The Marigold" (1 fragment)
VaughanWilliams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs, p. 91, "The Royal Oak" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 42, "Turkish Men-o'-War" (1 text)
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 56, "The Marigold" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 41, "Captain Mansfield's Fight with the Turks at Sea" (1 text)

DT, ROYALOAK*

Roud #951

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Turkish Men of War

NOTES [180 words]: [Lloyd repeats s's Firth's suggestion that] the song is based on "Kemphthorne's repulse of the seven Algerine ships, December 29, 1669." - PJS
Palmer also repeats it. Just for the record: I know of no instance of Turkish warships getting close enough to England to be hauled to Portsmouth. - RBW
While Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast calls this "The Marigold," its ship's name is the Martha Jane, with "Captain White from fair Bristow" - BS
The name "White" in the Leach version probably isn't significant, but I will mention that there was a very famous Newfoundland captain, Edward White Sr. (1811-1886). He became famous as one of the first Newfoundland captains to command a steamship in the seal hunt; he was also a minister without portfolio in the Newfoundland government 1882-1885 (DictNewfLabrador, p. 357). He had been a sealing captain since 1836 (Ryan, p. 151). He wasn't a navy captain, and he didn't fight the Turks, so he can't have been the original captain in this song, but his fame might have suggested his insertion into a Newfoundland/Labrador text. - RBW

Bibliography

• DictNewfLabrador: (Robert H. Cuff, managing editor),Dictionary of Newfoundland and Royal Rose, The
DESCRIPTION: The singer says "There is a flower in yon garden ... And I wish that flower were mine." The garden "with weeds is all o'ergrown." "He is a Rose, a royal Rose ... And is my choice above all those." If Providence ordains it, the Rose will be hers.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1881 (Christie)
KEYWORDS: love nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan4 762, "The Royal Rose" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #6182
NOTES [34 words]: The Greig/Duncan4 version is two verses which are included in Christie's four. The description follows Christie. - BS
This sounds like a Bonnie Prince Charlie song, although it is of course not specific. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD4762

Ruahine Run
DESCRIPTION: "Take shelter, take shelter, Pawelka has come, With barefoot unwelcome he'll shoulder his gun, At night you can hear all the shots, Across the Ruahine tops he will run!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1944 (Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry)
KEYWORDS: homicide playparty clothes
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1909 - Joe Pawelka marries Hannah Wilson (probably the "Harriet" of "Skip to Me") After less than half a year, they separate; Pawelka attempts suicide and refuses to leave her alone. Discovered in possession of stolen property, he escapes from prison twice (the second time on Mar 23, 1910). Pawelka then tries again to reconcile with his wife. Other crimes follow. Captured again Apr 17, 1919, he is convicted of various crimes but soon escapes for a final time and is never seen again (source: Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry)
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 65, "Ruahine Run" (1 short text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Skip to Me" (subject of Joe Pawelka)
cf. "Joe's Train Journey" (subject of Joe Pawelka)
File: C012065B

Rub-a-dub-dub
DESCRIPTION: "Rub-a-dub-dub, Three men in a tub." They are the butcher, the baker, and the candlestick maker. They may have gone to the fair, or "jumped out of a rotten potato."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1797 (cf. Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose)
KEYWORDS: worker food playparty courting mother
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) New Zealand
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1619, "Rub a Dub, Dub" (1 text, 1 tune)
Porter/Gower-Jeannie-Robertson-EmergentSingerTransformativeVoice, #6, "Rub a Dub Dub" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, pp. 109-110, "(The butcher and the baker)" (1 text, lacking the "rub-a-dub" mention and converted into a skipping/counting rhyme about being kissed in the corner)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 460, "Rub-a-dub-dub" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #133, p. 106, "(Rub-a-dub-dub)"
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 186, "Rub-a-Dub-Dub" (1 text)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 33, "Rub-a-Dub-Dub, Three Men in a Tub" (2 texts)
Roud #12983
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Rub a Dub Dub
NOTES [85 words]: According to the Opies, in the earliest version, it was not the butcher and all who were in the tub, but three girrls whom butcher, baker, brewer, candlestick-maker, etc. watched -- presumably at one of the less reputable corners of a fair. Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel goes farther and suggests a gay peep show.
Daniel Smith, The Language of London: Cockney Rhyming Slang, Michael O'Mara Books, 2011, p. 55, says that this rhyme was so well-known that it gave rise to the slang expression "rub-a-dub" for "pub." - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: BGMG133

Rue and the Thyme, The (The Rose and the Thyme)
DESCRIPTION: Told mostly in floating lyrics: "I'm sorry, I'm sorry that my fortune's been so bad, Since I've fa'en in love wi' a young sailor lad." They exchange letters and flowers; she says he may keep his rose and she will keep her thyme.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan1)
KEYWORDS: courting rejection virginity floating verses
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 187, "The Rose and the Thyme" (1 text)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #87, p. 1, "The Rue and the Thyme"; #84, p. 2, "The Rue and the Thyme"; #72, p. 2, ("Keep ye your red rue, and I'll keep my thyme") (2 texts plus 1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan1 52, Greig/Duncan8 Addenda, "The Young Sailor Lad" (6 texts, 5 tunes)
Greig/Duncan6 1139, "The Rue and the Thyme" (10 texts, 4 tunes)
Roud #858
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Wagoner's Lad" (lyrics)
cf. "Green Grows the Laurel (Green Grow the Lilacs)" (lyrics)
cf. "Garners Gay (Rue; The Sprig of Thyme)" (theme, symbols, lyrics)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
I'm Sorry, I'm Sorry
NOTES [37 words]: Greig/Duncan1: "Often heard sung fifty and sixty years ago. Noted 1905."
Greig #87 quoting Mr Jas Mackie: "It is over 70 years since I first picked up snatches of this song, which was very common about that time." [1909] - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: Ord187

Rufford Park Poachers
DESCRIPTION: Forty poachers go out together because "they'd often been attacked when the number it was less." They believe that all game "was sent on earth for ev'ry one quite equal for to share." Keepers attack but are routed by the poachers
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Taylor, according to OShaughnessy-MoreFolkSongsFromLincolnshire; the EFDSS item noted below)
KEYWORDS: fight poaching hunting
Rufus Rastus Johnson Brown (What You Goin' to Do When the Rent Comes 'Round?)

DESCRIPTION: "Rufus Rastus Johnson Brown, What you goin' to do when the rent comes round? What you goin' to say, How you goin' to pay?" As Rufus knocks on the door, the singer complains about Rufus's lack of sense and inability to maintain a decent home

AUTHOR: Words: B. Sterling Andrew / Music: Harry von Tilzer

EARLIEST DATE: 1905(sheet music)

KEYWORDS: hardtimes

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 149, "A Medley" (1 text, 1 tune, starting with the chorus of "Sweet Adeline," then "The Old Oaken Bucket," "In the Evening by the Moonlight," "Rufus Rastus Johnson Brown," and "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground")

ALTERNATE TITLES:
What You Goin' to Do When the Rent Comes 'Round?

NOTES [65 words]: A thoroughly racist piece, this nonetheless had some popularity because of the excellent Harry von Tilzer melody. According to Spaeth, A History of Popular Music in America, p. 309, von Tilzer also supplied the key concept of the song; he claimed to have heard the actual line on the platform of a train station in Miami. One has to suspect he improved the character's name, though. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: RcRuRaJB

Rufus's Mare

DESCRIPTION: Rufus sadly walks to town after his mare is stolen by Tozer. He tells his story: Tozer had given him a lame mare, which he cured, whereupon Tozer requisitioned the animal back. Rufus expects Tozer to end in Hell.

AUTHOR: George Calhoun

EARLIEST DATE: 1971

KEYWORDS: horse poverty injury hardtimes gift theft

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 264-265, "Rufus's Mare" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #4167

NOTES [85 words]: According to Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, this is a true story. Rufus Woodcock had lost his horse and was too poor to buy another. A nearby preacher, Reverend Tozier, had a lame horse that he could not cure. Rather than keep feeding the animal, Tozier gave it to Woodcock. Woodcock cured the horse, whereupon Tozier "borrowed" it back and never returned it. Rufus managed to reclaim the horse, but then Tozier came and again reclaimed it by force.

This song is item dH50 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW

File: Doe264
Rugby Song, The

DESCRIPTION: A formula song in which the singer -- were she of a mind to marry -- asserts that the kind of man she would wed would play a succession of positions on a rugby team.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE:
KEYWORDS: bawdy humorous marriage sports
FOUND IN: Australia Canada US(MW,SW) New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 365-368, "The Rugby Song" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #10142
ALTERNATE TITLES:
If I Were the Marrying Kind
File: EM365

Rukumbine (Rude Combine, Recombine [?])

DESCRIPTION: Jamaican patois: The singer asks how much Mother Cuba paid for her new shoes and hat. Train crosses a bridge "like a breeze," girl below "wash her chemise." Girl up a tree, boy below washing "khaki pants."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (Murray-FolkSongsOfJamaica)
KEYWORDS: bawdy nonballad clothes
FOUND IN: West Indies(Jamaica)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Murray-FolkSongsOfJamaica, p. 33, "Rookoombine" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Noel Dexter and Godfrey Taylor, _Mango Time - Folk Songs of Jamaica_ (Kingston: Ian Randle Publishers, 2007), pp. 100-101, "Rukumbine" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jim Morse, _Folk Songs of the Caribbean_ (New York: Bantam Books, 1958), p. 91, "Rookoombine" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Edric Connor with the Caribbeans and Earl Inkman, "Rookoombine" (on WIEConnor01)
The description, based on Murray-FolkSongsOfJamaica and Duffus, reflects couplets probably "cleaned up" by the singers. Morse adds two verses "in the spirit of the song," but they are about spending money in Kingston and drinking rum.
Dexter and Taylor add more innocent-seeming verses, with the most suggestive being "di coffee pon di fire an' di gyal a call mi liar, / So mi dip han' in she collar, hear di coward gyal a holler say: [chorus:] Rukumbine inna mi sampanteena ...." They translate "rukumbine" as "meaning unknown, but thought to refer to painful trouble of some magnitude" and "sampanteena" as "meaning unknown but thought to refer to some undefined part of the anatomy."- BS
Last updated in version 3.7
File: JaMu033

Rule Death In His Arms

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Didn't Jesus rule Death in his Arms, Rule Death in His arms, On the other side of Jordan, Rule Death in His arms." Verses describe the division of sheep from goats at God's command, and relentless Death taking the sinner
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Barton-OldPlantationHymns)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious death Bible
Rule, Britannia

DESCRIPTION: "When Britain first at Heav’n’s command Arose from out the azure main... This was the carter of the land: ‘Rule, Britannia, Britannia, rule the waves: Britons never, never, never will be slaves.”

EARLIEST DATE: 1740 (“Alfred: A Masque”)

KEYWORDS: political England navy ship nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England)

REFERENCES (9 citations):
- Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic II, pp. 191-193, "Rule, Britannia" (1 tune, partial text)
- Erskine-TwentyYearsBeforeTheMast, p. 94, "(When Britain first at Heaven’s command)" (1 text)
- Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, p. 50, "The core of tThe celebrated ODE, in Honour of Great BRITAIN called Rule BRITANNIA" (1 orchestral arrangement, a copy of a 1740 printing)
- Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 160-161, "Rule Britannia" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2045, p. 137, "Rule Britannia" (1 reference)
- Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #19, "Rule, Britannia!" (1 text)
- Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, p. 477, "Rule, Britannia"

ADDITIONAL: Aline Waites & Robin Hunter, _The Illustrated Victorian Songbook_, Michael Joseph Ltd., 1984, pp. 214-215, "Rule Britannia" (1 text, 1 tune)

Reginald Nettel, _Seven Centuries of Popular Song_, Phoenix House, 1956, pp. 128-129, "(Rule, Britannia)" (1 text)

Not really a traditional song, but obviously a well-known one.

The irony is that, for most of its history, Britain had a weak navy, or no navy at all. (The result of this was a long series of invasions, often successful. In just the eleventh century, there was Swein Forkbeard's invasion of 1014, Canute's invasion of 1016, Harald Hardrada's invasion of 1066, and of course William the Bastard of Normandy's invasion of 1066 -- the one that earned him the name "William the Conqueror." All of these except Hardrada's were successful)
It wasn't until the sixteenth century that Britain firmly established its navy -- but, of course, there has not been a successful outside invasion of Britain since.

Various claims have been made for the authorship of this piece. All that can be said with certainty is that the first publication was in "Dr. Arne's" 1740 stage works.

The original text, correctly quoted in the description above, read "Britannia, rule the waves"; later, this was altered in some versions to "Britannia RULES the waves" -- a statement which was absolutely true only in the nineteenth century. Might be time to go back to the old form....

Kunitz/Haycraft, pp. 335-336, describe purported author David Mallett (or Malloch) as the son of a Scottish farmer who earned his way through the University of Edinburgh by working as a janitor and tutoring; he did not earn a degree at the time, although he was granted both a B.A. and an M.A. in later years. His first significant work was a play, "Euridice," produced in 1731 when he was about 26. Little of his work was noteworthy, and he is described as a "shameless opportunist," but he and his classmate James Thomson produced a masque called "Alfred," which contained this piece. After Thomson died, Mallett claimed "Rule Britannia" as his own. He managed to snag a rich woman as his second wife, and supported his vanity off her money until he died, around the age of 60, in 1765.

NewCentury, p. 725, says that the music for "Alfred" was written by Thomas Arne, and that scholars still dispute whether Mallet or Thomson (1700-1748) wrote the words to "Rule, Britannia." It spells his name Mallet, and lists as his major plays "Eurydice," "Mustapha," and "Elvira," and mentions the poems "William and Margaret," "The Excursion," and "The Hermit."

The figure of Britannia may have derived indirectly from the Greek goddess Athena, according to Cordingly, p. 162. As the British built more warships, more and more were given a figurehead of Athena. She was armed, and then her shield was painted with British emblems -- and so she became Britannia.

According to Nettel, p. 128, "The composer was Thomas Augustine Arne, and the occasion an entertainment given before Frederick, Prince of Wales, at Clivedon House, Maidenhead, on 1 August 1740. The famous song appeared at the end of a masque entitled Alfred, which was an attempt at a musical and dramatic entertainment following the style of Dryden and Purcell's King Arthur. The song we know Is simplified from the original Ode in honour of Great Britain, call'd Rule Britannia, which in its first form was an inspiring piece with splendid orchestral interludes." On p. 130, Nettel adds that Arne's wife Cecilia Young was a famous singer. P. 131 reports that he was "appointed composer to Vauxhall Gardens in 1745" and leader of the Drury Lane Theatre band.

This despite limited musical training; Nettel, p. 133, says that Arne's father was an upholsterer who wanted no part of his son's music until he learned there was money in it. Susannah Maria Arne, his sister, later wife of Theophilus Cibber, was also a noteworthy singer, although her life was scandalous (Nettel, pp. 133-134).

Treasure, p. 72, says that Arne "was the greatest English composer after Handel. [Fans of, say, Henry Purcell or John Dowland might disagree....] For a century or more he was known chiefly by his Shakespearean songs and by Rule, Britannia, but modern critics see in some of his operas and masques technical virtuosity and a distinctively English simplicity of expression." He says that Arne managed to learn keyboards by dropping a handkerchief in his spinet to quiet it while he practiced. He also played violin (Treasure, p. 73). He spent time in Dublin, and abandoned his second wife there; Treasure calls him "an unfaithful, perhaps also a cruel husband." Perhaps it's fitting that he composed such a militant piece.

"Rule Britannia," for some reason, is item CLVIII in Palgrave's Golden Treasury. - RBW

In 1839 Erskine was part of an American crew that dropped into the Jolly Sailor's Inn in Sydney, Australia. "It was a large square room. On either side were a number of tables, over which hung various national flags." Crews at the tables sang their own Russian, English, French or U.S. songs. The Englishmen sang "Rule Britannia." - BS

Bibliography

• Cordingly: David Cordingly,Women Sailors and Sailors' Women, Random House, 2001 (I use the undated, but later, paperback edition)

• Kunitz/Haycraft: Stanley J. Kunitz and Howard Haycraft, Editors,British Authors Before 1800: A Biographical Dictionary, H. W. Wilson, 1952 (I use the fourth printing of 1965)

• Nettel: Reginald Nettel,Seven Centuries of Popular Song, Phoenix House, 1956

Rules of Marriage

DESCRIPTION: The singer describes his ideal mate. She must be good-natured, clever and handsome, and get up at dawn to make his breakfast. If he comes home drunk she must kiss him and put him to bed. If he runs out of money she must pawn her clothes.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan7)

KEYWORDS: marriage drink food humorous nonballad clothes beauty

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1354, "Rules of Marriage" (4 texts, 2 tunes)

Roud #7232

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Come All Ye Gay Young Lasses

File: GrD71354

Rules of Masonry, The

DESCRIPTION: "None but an atheist can ever deny But that [masonry] came first from on high." God is "the first Great Master of Masonry." Adam first wore "a fig-leaf [mason's] apron." Solomon's temple conformed "to the just-formed rules of Masonry"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: Bible nonballad religious

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #155, pp. 1-2, "Freemason's Song" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 468, "The Rules of Masonry" (1 text)

Roud #5967

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Plumb and Level" (theme: Building the First Temple)

NOTES [173 words]: It is technically true that the Masons had secrets -- rituals, handshakes, and even a so-called secret code of a very simple sort, based on a tic-tac-toe grid and an x, so that, e.g., the letter "o" was "I-I"; the letter "i" was "I-.-.; and the letter "w" was "\bar{w}" (for details, and clearer drawings -- the above are not quite right -- see Fred B. Wrixon, Codes, Ciphers, & Other Cryptic & Clandestine Communications, Barnes & Noble, 1998). But few of these secrets were really very secret.

I do find the idea of masonry coming "from on high" a little funny. The first real building project described in the Bible is the Tower of Babel (in Genesis 11), and look how "that" turned out. As for Masons building Solomon's temple (a tale also found in "The Building of Solomon's Temple" [Laws Q39]), we find a description in chapters 5-8 of 1 Kings (and 2 Chronicles chapters 2-6 with a foreshadowing in 1 Chron. 28-29). But it clearly was not built by masons; it was probably designed by Phoenicians, and certainly constructed by slaves. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4

File: GrD3468

Rules of the Road at Sea (Sailor's Rhymes)

DESCRIPTION: Not a song; a series of rhymes by which sailors would learn how to behave at sea. e.g. "When both side lights you see ahead, port your helm and show your Red. Green to Green or Red to Red, perfect safety, go ahead." Most concern weather prediction.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips)

KEYWORDS: sailor nonballad ship

FOUND IN: US Britain

Last updated in version 2.4

File: GrD3468
Rum and Coca-Cola

DESCRIPTION: "Since the Yankees came to Trinidad" they give mothers and daughters "a better price." The song gives examples of the disruption caused by the G.I.s

AUTHOR: Rupert Grant ("Lord Invader")

EARLIEST DATE: 1943 ("Victory Calypsos 1943 Souvenir Collection": see NOTES)

LONG DESCRIPTION: The Yankees have Trinidad girls "going mad": they treat the girls nice "and they give them a better price." "They buy rum and coca cola Go down Point Cumana." Mothers and daughters are "working for the Yankee dollar." The singer's girl friend is taken by her mother into a car with some soldiers. A bride runs off with a soldier on her wedding day and her husband goes mad. A brothel is raided and the girls are drinking rum and coca cola.

KEYWORDS: sex drink humorous nonballad soldier

FOUND IN: West Indies(Trinidad)

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Lion and Atilla, Victory Calypsos 1943 Souvenir Collection, in Kevin Burke, "Calypso on Trial" at http://www.rumandcocaolareader.com/RumAndCocaCola/Calypso_on_Trial.html accessed February 22, 2015 (1943 version)

RECORDINGS:
Andrews Sisters with Vic Shoen and His Orchestra, "Rum and Coca-Cola" (1944, on Decca 18636A)

Lord Invader and Gerald Clark and the Band, "Rum and Coca-Cola" (1999, on "Calypso at Midnight," Rounder CD 11661-1840-2 [recorded 1946])

Lord Invader, "Rum and Coca Cola" on "Calypso Calaloo", (1993, on Rounder CD 1105 [reissue of 1950])

NOTES [580 words]: I have included this song because of the part it plays in the history of commercial calypso music. For the context see the discussion of "Hold 'im Joe." The song was a popular road march in Trinidad in 1943, presented at a calypso "tent" by M. H. Khan. At the time there were thousands of U. S. troops stationed in Trinidad and, not being confined to base, they frequented the calypso "tents." The story of Morey Amsterdam's visit to Trinidad as part of a USO show, his picking up the song, and its commercial recording the next year by the Andrews Sisters, with the song attributed to Amsterdam, is told by Hill, pp. 234-240, and Kevin Burke in "Calypso on Trial." A plagiarism suit was eventually settled in favor of Grant ("Lord Invader").

The Andrews Sisters sang the lines as "rum and Cocahhhhh-Cola, working for the Yankee dollahhhhh." In his 1950 rendition, Invader sang "We haven't got no bad speaking Trinidadian / We never said, 'cacahh cola' / Neither did we say, 'Yankee dollahh' / We sang...." In 1950, Edmundo Ros recorded the derivative, partly attributed to Morey Amsterdam, "Rum and Limonada."

By the time of the 1946 Town Hall Concert, "Rum and Coca-Cola" was universally known, and the Andrews Sisters' version made a point of it being a "calypso" song. So, when in 1947, there was a "Calypso Carnival" in New York's Carnegie Hall one of the headliners was "Lord Invader, author of 'Rum and Coca Cola'" ("Calypso Carnival in N.Y. on May 8," The Pittsburgh Courier, May 3, 1947, p. 17).

In 1967 Prince Buster recorded a rocksteady version relocated to Jamaica. Only the chorus and tune of the chorus remain of Invader's song. Mother and daughter are "fighting for the Yankee dollar" and "body line" shows up in the verse: "If you come down to Jamaica/ The girls there make you feel up/ The wind and wine and body line/ You'll give them all that you have in kind" (Prince Buster, "Rum and Coca Cola" Blue Beat 45 rpm BB-330 A, 1965).

There is another aspect of the "Rum and Coca-Cola" story that has to do with tune sharing. Before Invader's case was settled there was another involving the Amsterdam version. Lionel Belasco had already published the sheet music of "L'Annee Passee," which he may have heard in the street and copied, or written himself. In any case, as you can hear (Patrick Jones, "L'Annee Passee" on "Calypso Calaloo," (1993, on Rounder CD 1105 [reissue of 1950]), the tune of the verse of that song, but not the chorus, is very close to the tune of the verse of "Rum and Coca Cola." The copyright holder of Belasco's sheet music won his case also (Hill, pp. 234-240). Hill writes, "... Invader conformed to the standard procedure of recycling old tunes with new lyrics.... In my opinion, no one had a claim to the tune of 'Rum and Coca Cola' -- it was in fact the Martinique folk tune [introduced in Trinidad in the 1890's] (Hill, pp. 234-235). The point is made again in the discussion of "Hold 'im Joe" that tunes in the West Indies, as in the Appalachians and elsewhere, are often recycled. Here's another example: between 1925 and 1928, West Indian Sam Manning recorded three tracks using virtually the same tune and one other very close to those ("Lignum Vitae" [1925], "Emily" [1926], "Lita" [1928]; close to "Sly [Slide] Mongoose" [1925]; n.d., on "Sam Manning Volume 1 (Recorded in New York 1924-1927)," Jazz Oracle CD BDW 8028; n.d., on "Sam Manning Volume 2 (Recorded in New York 1927-1930)," Jazz Oracle CD BDW 8029). - BS

Last updated in version 5.2

File: RcRumCoc

Rum By Gum (Temperance Union Song)

DESCRIPTION: "We're coming, we're coming, our brave little band, On the right side of temperance we do take our stand.... Away, away with rum, by gum, The song of the (Salvation Army/Temperance Union)." Various verses on the value of sobriety

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLiest DATE: 1921 (Welch & Moore, Michigan's Favorite College Songs)

KEYWORDS: drink political nonballad

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Randolph 317, "Temperance Song" (1 text, 1 tune -- a fragment without the chorus)
Cray-AshGrove, pp. 36-37, "Away, Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, pp. 6-7, "Away With Rum" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 233, "Away With Rum" (1 text)
DT, (AWAYRUM*) (AWAYRUM2*) (AWAYRUM3*) (AWAYRUM4*) (AWAYRUM5*)
Roud #12765

NOTES [57 words]: Warning: All the Digital Tradition versions are parodies of one sort or another (AWAYRUM5 is 35 verses, almost all silly, almost all modern). Many singers today sing this as a joke. But the roots of this piece are almost certainly serious (compare Randolph's version).

Thanks to Jim Dixon for pointing out the Wallace & Moore version. - (JD), RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: R317

Rum Saloon Shall Go, The

DESCRIPTION: "A wave is rolling o'er the land With heavy undertow, And voices sounding on the strand, The rum saloon shall go. Shall go, shall go, We know, we know, A cry is sounding o'er the land, The rum saloon shall go." The song promises to lift the curse of drink

AUTHOR: Words: Jno. O. Foster/Music: Jno. R. Sweeney

EARLIEST DATE: 1888 (copyright claim)

KEYWORDS: drink political

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 333, "The Rum Saloon Shall Go" (1 text)
Roud #7805
Run Come See

DESCRIPTION: "It was in nineteen hundred and twenty nine, I remember that day pretty well...."
The singer describes the great storm that threatened the Ethel, Myrtle, and Praetoria, sinking the last. The Captain, George Brown, calls on the passengers to pray

AUTHOR: claimed by "Blind Blake" Higgs
EARLIEST DATE: 1940s (recording, Blake Higgs)
KEYWORDS: religious ship storm wreck
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1929 - The Bahamas are devastated by a hurricane with little or no advance warning. Three boats, the Ethel, Myrtle, and Praetoria, bound for Andros, are caught in the storm; the Praetoria sinks, and thirty-three are lost.
FOUND IN: West Indies(Bahamas)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 58, "Run Come See" (1 text)
DT, RUNCOME
ADDITIONAL: Harold Courlander, _A Treasury of Afro-American Folklore_, Crown Publishers, 1976, pp. 131-137, "The Singing of the Pytoria" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Blind Blake Higgs, "Run Come See Jerusalem" (on WIHIGGS01)
John Roberts & group, "Pytoria (Run Come See Jerusalem)" (on MuBahamas2)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "A Great Storm Pass Over" (subject)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Run Come See Jerusalem
NOTES [28 words]: John Roberts claims to have composed this song within four days of the ship's sinking, rather than Blake Higgs. On reading his account, I'm inclined to believe him. - PJS

Run for Your Life

DESCRIPTION: "Didn't know Flynn? Flynn of Offaly, 'S long as he's been here?" "Here in this tunnel he was my partner, That same Tom Flynn." He holds back the "timbers ready to fall" in the mine, crying "Run for your life, Jake... Don't wait for me, And that was all"

AUTHOR: Bret Harte (as "In the Tunnel")
EARLIEST DATE: 1871 (Poems by Bret Harte)
KEYWORDS: death mining escape
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 77, "Run for Your Life" (1 text, 1 modern tune) (p. 56 in the 1972 edition)
RECORDINGS:
Bruce Hall, "Run for Your Life" (on NZSongYngCntry)
NOTES [218 words]: Mitch Park writes to me with the following information about the source of this song: "This was originally collected in a field trip through the poetry columns of old newspapers, and I presume the documentation was a bit skimpy. Since those papers have been digitised as part of the Papers Past archive, it was easy to find the original poem, with its original title and author. "Papers Past shows NZ publication under the title 'In the tunnel,' in the Mount Ida Chronicle 29 Sep 1871 ('by the author of "The heathen Chinee"'), then later in the Cromwell Argus 7 Nov 1871, where it was attributed to Bret Harte. It was published in 'Poems by Bret Harte,' - Boston: Fields, Osgood, 1871, which is the obvious source for the newspaper reprint.
"Colquhoun's version substitutes Offaly for Virginia, and the album notes [to the reissue of NZSongYngCntry] comment that the poem probably refers to the goldfield at Surface Hill near Naseby. There were indeed a number of deaths on the Surface Hill claims. But all were attributable to earthfall during hydraulic mining in which powerful jets of water were directed at rather loose alluvial deposits; no tunnelling involved."
Harte's original poem had six irregular stanzas. The Colquhoun version chops off the last two and a
Run Here, Doctor, Run Here Quick

DESCRIPTION: Hammer song or similar: "Run here, doctor (huh), Run here quick (huh), Little Mary (huh) Swallowed a stick."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: doctor work injury

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 246, "Run Here, Doctor, Run Here Quick" (1 short text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 246, "Run Here, Doctor, Run Here Quick" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)

NOTES [24 words]: The notes in Brown include various references which make it appear that they regard this as a version of "Shortenin' Bread." I don't see it. - RBW

Run Mollie Run

DESCRIPTION: Verses from different songs. "Miss Liza was a gambler, learned me how to steal"; "I went down to Huntsville, I did not go to stay..."; "Oh, Liza, poor girl... she died on that train"; "Cherry like a rose"; "Run, Mollie, run/ Let us have some fun"

AUTHOR: Henry Thomas assembled it, at any rate

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Henry Thomas)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Confused verses, mostly narrative, but apparently from different songs. "Miss Liza was a gambler, learned me how to steal"; "I went down to Huntsville, I did not go to stay/ Just got there to do a little time, wear that ball and chain"; "Oh, Liza, poor girl... she died on that train"; "Cherry like a rose"; "Run, Mollie, run/ Let us have some fun"

KEYWORDS: captivity love beauty prison death gambling cards floating verses prisoner dance tune

FOUND IN: US(So)

RECORDINGS:
Henry "Ragtime Texas" Thomas, "Run Mollie Run" (Vocalion 1141, c. 1928 [rec. 1927]; on BefBlues1)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Molly and Tenbrooks" [Laws H27] (lyrics)

NOTES [47 words]: This song's a mess -- a composite of several songs, about half of which are ballads, half not. But it seems important to include, if for no other reason than that it "is" a composite. I strongly suspect -- no, I'm certain -- this was a dance tune; the rhythm is certainly right. - PJS

Run Mountain

DESCRIPTION: Dance tune with floating verses: "I went up on the mountain to get me a load of pine..."; "Me six miles from my home... Me upstairs with another man's wife..."; Chorus: "Run mountain, chuck a little hill (x3)/ There you'll get your fill."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (recording, J.E. Mainer's Mountaineers)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Dance tune with floating verses: "I went up on the mountain to get me a load of pine/ I put it on the wagon, I broke down behind"; "Me six miles from my home and the chickens crowing for day/ Me upstairs with another man's wife, better be a-getting away"; "I went up on the mountain to give my horn a blow/ I thought I heard my true love say, yonder comes my beau"; "If I had a needle and thread as fine as I could sew/ I'd sew my true love to my side and down the road I'd go." Chorus: "Run mountain, chuck a little hill (x3)/ There you'll get your fill."
Run Old Jeremiah
DESCRIPTION: "Good Lord, by myself (x3), You know I've got to go, You got to run, I got to run, You got to run By myself (x3)." Song describes traveling, freedom, (God as) the rock, and other themes of the poor and oppressed
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Field Recording, J.A./Alan Lomax)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 197-200, "(Run Old Jeremiah)" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Harold Courlander, _A Treasury of Afro-American Folklore_, Crown Publishers, 1976, pp. 368-369, "Run Old Jeremiah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #15505
NOTES [32 words]: The Lomax field recording of this song is incomplete at both beginning and end, but it would appear that the complete song would simply have continued the themes found in the extant portion. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.5
File: CNFM197

Run to Jesus
DESCRIPTION: "Run to Jesus, shun the danger, I don't expect to stay much longer." The singer describes the difficulties of the path he must follow, but also the rewards to be found at the end. The refrain "I don't expect to stay much longer" ends each verse
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1888 (J. B. T. March, "The Story of the Jubilee Singers")
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad travel
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 15, "Run to Jesus" (1 text) (1 tune)
Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, pp. 89-90, "Run to Jesus" (1 text, 1 tune)
Foner-AmericanLaborSongsOfTheNineteenthCentury, p. 89, "Run to Jesus" (1 text)
Roud #15263
NOTES [27 words]: Reportedly sung by the Fisk Jubilee Singers, who had it from Frederick Douglass. Douglass remarked that this song prompted him to consider running from slavery. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: Grnw089
Run to Jesus for Refuge

DESCRIPTION: "I'm gonna run to my Jesus for refuge, Run right along...." Verses include floaters "Mary wore a golden chain, Every link was Jesus name" and "When I read my title clear To mansions in the skies, I bid farewell to every fear And wipe my weeping eyes"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (LomaxCD1708)
KEYWORDS: floating verses nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
Roud #17292
RECORDINGS:
Charles BAmett-IHearAmericaSinging, "Run to Jesus for Refuge" (on LomaxCD1708)
NOTES [37 words]: You can find the "title clear" floating verse in Isaac Watts, Hymns and Spiritual Songs (New York: Samuel Parker, 1760 (18th edition, "Digitized by Internet Archive")) #65, p. 162, ("When I can read my Title clear"). - BS.
Last updated in version 4.2
File: RcRtJfR

Run, Let the Bullgine Run

DESCRIPTION: Shanty or railroading song. Refrain: "Run with/let the bulgine run. Way-yah oh-i-oh, Run with/let the bulgine run." Many verses repeat the "running" theme, i.e. "we'll run all day to Frisco Bay." Used as both a capstan and halyard shanty.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1888 (L. A. Smith, _Music of the Waters_)
KEYWORDS: shanty worksong sailor nonballad railroading
FOUND IN: Britain US
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 64, "Run With the Bullgine" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 342-344, "Run, Let the Bulgine Run" (1 text, 1 tune)
[AbEd, p. 257]
Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, XIII, p. 16, "Let the Bullgine Run" (1 text, 1 tune)
Terry-TheShantyBook-Part1, #21, "Oh run, let the Bullgine run" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST Hugi342 (Full)
Roud #4711
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Roll the Cotton Down" (tune)
NOTES [31 words]: "Bullgine" was American Negro slang for a railway engine. - SL
(We might add that, in the early days of steamships, it was not unusual for railroad engines to be used in steamships.) - RBW
Last updated in version 3.8
File: Hugi342

Run, Mary, Run

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Run Mary, run (3x), I know the other world is not like this." Verse: "Swing low, chariot, in the east, Let God's children have some peace, ... west, Let God's children have some rest, ... north ...., ... south, Let God's children sing and shout"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1874 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, pp. 18-19, "Run, Mary, Run" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 188 in the 1874 edition)
Roud #15264
NOTES [26 words]: Each of Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute's verse lines is followed by "I know the other world is not like this." - BS
Last updated in version 4.0
Run, Mountain, Run

DESCRIPTION: Cho: "Well-a run, mountain, run (x2), No matter where in the world I go, I'm bound to have my fun." Verses often float: "I'm going to build me a scaffold on some mountain so high."
"Love is like an onion, you smile.... you wonder, whatever made you bite."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (collected from Uncle Dave Macon by Boswell)
KEYWORDS: courting floating verses nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 86, pp. 137-138, "Run, Mountain, Run" (1 text, 1
tune)
Roud #7052

NOTES [62 words]: Not to be confused with "Run Mountain, which -- like this piece -- is a banjo tune with a collection of incoherent and often floating verses, but which has a rather different form.
Round appears to lump this with "Coming Round the Mountain (II -- Charming Betsey)," presumably based on the floating verses and mountain references, but that strikes me as quite a stretch. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.6

Run, Nigger, Run

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Run, nigger, run, The (calaboose/patter-roller) will get you. Run, nigger run...." Various verses on the life of the slave, usually pertaining to punishment and perhaps the run to freedom

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1851 (Serenader's Song Book)
KEYWORDS: slave freedom escape nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE,So)
REFERENCES (14 citations):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 89, "Run, Nigger, Run" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 457, "Run, Nigger, Run" (4 texts plus an excerpt and mention of 2 more, all short and with hints of mixture but with this chorus) Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 457, "Run, Nigger, Run" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Randolph 264, "Run, Nigger, Run" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 225-226, "Run, Nigger, Run" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 264)
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 121, "Run, Nigger, Run" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 248, "Run, Nigger, Run" (1 text, 1 tune) Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 12, "Run, Nigger, Run" (1 text, 1 tune; it appears that this has mixed with something else, but the version isn't long enough to be sure what); also p.
24, "Run, Nigger, Run" (2 texts, 1 tune, both short); also p. 25, "Most Done Ling'tin Here" (1 text, 1 tune, with a verse from this plus the "If you get there before I do" floating verse and a chorus that might be "Rough, Rocky Road") Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #6, "Run, Nigger, Run" (2 texts, 2 tunes; the first appears very mixed but has this chorus; the second might well be a different song but, with only two verses, or a verse and a chorus, it is not possible to definitively split it) Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #91, "Do Johnny Booger" (1 text, 1 tune, an incredible mess with the chorus and some words from "Johnny Booker (Mister Booger)," an ending which is from "Run, Nigger, Run," and a number of verses perhaps from "Old Dan Tucker")
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 228-231, "Run, Nigger, Run" (1+ texts, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, p. 906, "Run, Nigger, Run" (1 text, 1 tune)
Coleman/Bregman-SongsOfAmericanFolks, pp. 106-108, "Run, Nigger, Run" (1 text, 1 tune) Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2047, p. 137, "Run, Nigger, Run! Or the M.P.'ll Catch You" (1 reference, probably rewritten)
Roud #3660
RECORDINGS:
Dr. Humphrey Bate & His Possum Hunters, "Run Nigger, Run" (Brunswick 275, 1928)
Fiddlin' John Carson, "Run Nigger, Run" (OKeh 40230, 1924)
Sid Harkreader & Grady Moore, "Run Nigger Run" (Paramount 3054, 1927)
Uncle Dave Macon, "Run, Nigger, Run" (Vocalion 15032, 1925)
Mose "Clear Rock" Platt, "Run, Nigger, Run" (AFS 196 A1, 1933; on LC04)
Gid Tanner & his Skillet Lickers, "Run Nigger Run" (Columbia 15158-D, 1927)
Clint Howard, Gaither Carlton, Fred Price & Doc Watson, "Run, Jimmie, Run" (on WatsonAshley01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Shortenin' Bread" (tune)
cf. "Some Folks Say that a Preacher Won't Steal" (lyrics)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Paddy-Roller
Pateroller Song
Run, Boy, Run
Run, Johnny, Run
Run, Slave, Run

NOTES [74 words]: In Lomax we find the following explanation (quoted at several hands' remove):
"Just after the Nat Turner Insurrection in 1832 the Negroes were put under special restrictions to home quarters, and patrolmen appointed to keep them in, and if caught without a written pass from owner they were dealt with severely then and there; hence the injunction to 'Run, Nigger, Run, the Patter-roller Git You' to the tune of 'Fire in the Mountain....'" - RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: R264

Runaway Bride, The

DESCRIPTION: "If you go to the North Countrie... You'll hear how the bride from the blacksmith ran To be a liggar lady." Townfolk gather to the wedding; the bride is missing. The audience laughs at the groom's expense. Men are warned of Hieland lads luring their girls

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Ord-BothySongsAndBallads)
KEYWORDS: marriage abandonment
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 462-463, "The Runaway Bride" (1 text)
Roud #2876

NOTES [38 words]: Ord-BothySongsAndBallads reports this to be based on an event which occurred "near the end of the eighteenth century." Given the song's history (analogos appear in Herd and the Scots Musical Museum), that date seems a bit late. - RBW
File: Ord462

Runer von Hamborg, De

DESCRIPTION: German (Platdeutsch). Halyard shanty. "De see geht hoch, de wind de blast.
Kohm un Beer for mi!" The sea is foul. The captain calls all hands. They see the runners in Hamburg. The sailor needs clothes and soap; he hopes for kummel and a cigar

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1977 (Hugill-SongsOfTheSea)
KEYWORDS: shanty sailor home drugs
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 63, "De Runer von Hamborg" (2 texts, low German [not standard German!] and English, 1 tune)
File: HSoSe063
Rural Sport

DESCRIPTION: How can you sleep when the hounds are out and the sun is shining? The singer leaves his wife behind in bed to hunt the hare. "No pleasure like hunting to pass a long day... At night to our supper we will dance... over a jug of brown ale"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart2)
KEYWORDS: hunting dancing drink food animal
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart2 55, "Wharncliffe Highwood" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1869
File: 0SY255

Rush to Coromandel, The

DESCRIPTION: "The stagnant state of Auckland now Gives sone dissatsistfaction, But there's nothing like a good goldfield To give some satisfaction." The gold at Coromandel is all the rage and an economic boon. Mothers tell their babies that Daddy's gone to Coromandel
AUTHOR: Words: Charles R. Thatcher (1831-1878)
EARLIEST DATE: 1862 (Thatcher's "Auckland Vocalist," according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)
KEYWORDS: gold mining New Zealand humorous mother baby
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1861-1862 - the Coromandel gold rush, ended by the Maori conflict
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, pp. 56-57, "The Rush to Coromandel" (1 text, tune referenced)
Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, p. 95, "(The Rush to Coromandel)" (1 excerpt)
Hoskins-GoldfieldBalladeer-LifeAndTimes-Charles-R-Thatcher, p. 41, "(Rush to Coromandel)"
(1 excerpt)
NOTES [29 words]: For brief background on Charles Thatcher's career, see the notes to "Where's Your License?" For an extensive collection of his songs, see Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong.
- RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: BaRo056

Rushes and Reeds Are Bending

DESCRIPTION: "Rushes and reeds are bending, Rushes and reeds are bowing, My mother sits a-mending, My father goes a-plowing, In and out and all about, And curtsey as we go."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)
KEYWORDS: playparty mother father clothes farming
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 35, "(Rushes and reeds are bending)" (1 text)
File: SuSm035

Russel's Triumph

DESCRIPTION: "Thursday in the morn, on the Nenteenth of May, Recorded be for ever the famous Ninety-two." Brave Russel sees the French fleet under Tourville. The fight is hard, but the English win. The singer blesses the King and "each brave English Tar"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (Ashton-RealSailorSongs)
KEYWORDS: navy battle political
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1692 - Battles of Barfleur and La Hogue. The dates, in modern numbers, were 29 May-4 June, but since Britain still used the Julian calendar, the song dates the start of the fight to 19 May. Admiral Edward Russel, with abot 80 ships, beat the French under Tourville at Barfleur, and won a pursuing action at La Hogue; the victories ended any French hopes of an invasion that would restore James II to the British throne
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Ashton-RealSailorSongs, #7, "On Admiral Russel's Total Defeat of the French Fleet" (1 text)
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 29, "The Sea Fight in '92" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lyle/McAlpine/McLucas-SongRepertoireOfAmeliaAndJaneHarris, pp. 165-167, "The Battle of La Hogue" (1 text, 1 tune, plus reproductions of 2 broadsides tunes, 1 with a full text)
ST AshS007 (Partial)
Roud #18039
File: AshS007

Russia, Let That Moon Alone
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, Russia, let that moon alone, Moon ain't worryin' you! God told you to till the earth, God didn't tell you to till the moon! You can make your sputnickles And your satellites, You can't get God's moon." The moon is for light, not exploration
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1963 (Courlander)
KEYWORDS: technology nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 78-79, (no title) (1 text); p. 260, "Russia, Let That Moon Alone" (1 tune, partial text)
NOTES [84 words]: It's hard to believe that this silly bit of Luddite-ism can be traditional; on its face, it must have been written between 1959 (when the Soviet Union sent up the first Luna satellites) and Kennedy's announcement that the United States would try to beat the Soviets there. Courlander's notes imply that it is from a field recording, but I'm not sure how far to trust that. I hope it goes without saying that the Bible says nothing, positive or negative, about lunar exploration, manned or unmanned. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.5
File: CNFM078

Russian Bear, The
DESCRIPTION: "The French he cries ye British rise Along with us prepare And go and help the gallant Turk To hunt the Russian bear." "The bear he is a sulky brute, And naething will he eat Unless he gets some Turkish wings, He likes a dainty treat"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan1)
KEYWORDS: war Russia nonballad animal
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan1 156, "The Russian Bear" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5826
NOTES [15 words]: The description is all of the Greig/Duncan1 text. The song refers to the Crimean War. - BS
Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD1156
Russian Convoy Escort's Song

DESCRIPTION: Cumulative song. "The first day from Iceland old AC-IC said to me, There's a Whitley up a gum tree." And so through ten days, adding various weapons, e.g. "Two Blohm and Voss, "Three Fokke-Wulfs," ending with "Ten Captains driving."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1946 (Gundry, according to Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)

KEYWORDS: navy war cumulative derivative Russia

FOUND IN: Britain

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, pp. 90-91, "Russian Convoy Escort's Song" (1 text, tune referenced)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "The Twelve Days of Christmas" (tune)
 cf. "The Kola Run" (subject of convoys to Russia in World War II)
 cf. "The 23rd Flotilla" (subject: of convoys to Russia in World War II and the hard life of convoy escorts) and references there

NOTES [1159 words]: There was nowhere in the Atlantic where British ships were entirely safe from attacks by U-boats, but perhaps no ships were in greater danger than those on the run from Britain to Murmansk and Archangel in Russia. "During the winter the Arctic ice barrier moves so far south as to leave a navigable stretch of water barely 200 miles wide between it and Cape North. Convoys were in fact sailing past the Germans' doorstep while at the same time struggling to overcome extraordinary navigational hazards" (Pearce, p. 29). The Russian convoy route would come to be known as the "Gateway to Hell" (Pearce, p. 159).

Surprisingly, the first seven convoys to Russia all avoided attack. It was only with convoy PQ8, which sailed in January 1942, that one of the convoys faced the enemy.

Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy offers two explanations for "AC-IC": "Admiral Commanding Iceland Convoys" or an aircraft identification officer. Given that not everything the ships in the song encounter is an airplane, I would incline to the former identification.

The aircraft listed weren't even all German. The Whitely, mentioned on day one, was (as you might guess from the name) a British plane made by Armstrong Whitworth. It was a two-engined bomber that was produced from August 1939 to June 1943 (Gunston, p. 328). It's an odd aircraft to mention; total production was relatively small (just 1737, according to Gunston, p. 329), and while they did some combat bombing and anti-submarine patrol, a lot of their work was in transport. They were also used for reconnaissance (Munson, p. 25); I'd speculate that that is why the plane is mentioned in the song, and why there is just one.

The mention of "two Blohm and Voss" is a little peculiar. Blohm und Voss was a major German industrial concern (e.g. their shipyard at Hamburg built the battleship Bismarck), but Munson, p. 31, reports that the Blohm und Voss Bv 138, a strange two-engine design nicknamed "The Flying Shoe," was "the only Blohm und Voss [aircraft] design to achieve quantity production status during the Second World War" -- and even so, only 276 were built, so it wasn't something you saw every day. On the other hand, "Its variety of duties included long range reconnaissance, convoy patrol and U-boat co-operation," so it wasn't good news for a convoy if one was spotted.

The "Three Fokke-Wulfs" were probably not the famous fighter the Fokke-Wulf 190 but rather the Fokke-Wulf 200 "Condor," a four-engined long-range aircraft: "Although originally a commercial aircraft, converted to military use, it was as a maritime patrol bomber that the FW 200 Condor made its mark.... In this capacity, acting in co-operation with U-boat packs, it formed one of the most effective Luftwaffe combinations of the way, and many a convoy was to rue the moment it first spied a Condor above the horizon" (Munson, p. 81). It was not fast -- top speed 240 miles per hour -- but it had a range of nearly 4000 miles, so it could do a lot of searching! Supposedly only 276 were manufactured (Gunston, p. 385), but six different Norwegian bases hosted the aircraft (Pearce, pp. 23-24).

"The "Four Eighty-eights" clearly refer to the Junkers Ju 88, a twin engined light bomber, (night) fighter, and reconnaissance plane (Munson, p. 102). This was one of the best German planes; they manufactured more than 15,000 of them during the war (Munson, p. 103). "Parallel with the development of the Junkers Ju 88 as a medium bomber, the type was also being adapted to a variety of other roles, particularly those of night fighter, close support, and reconnaissance" (Munson, p. 103). They were deployed in the north of Norway; there was a squadron of Stukas and Ju 88s at Banak (Pearce, p. 23).

The "six Heinkels" are presumably one or another variant of the Heinkel 111 (a plane that is the subject of "I Was Chasing One-Elevens"). An two-engined plane with a very large glass nose, which in some models was asymmetric, "the first HE 111 was a graceful machine with elliptical wings and tail, secretly flown as a bomber but revealed to the world a year later as a civil airliner.... In February 1937 operations began with the Legion Kondor in Spain, with considerable success.... To a considerable degree the success of the early elliptical winged HE 111 bombers in Spain misled the Luftwaffe into considering that nothing could withstand the onslaught of their huge fleets of medium bombers" (Gunston, p. 400). But by the time of the Battle of Britain, "the He 111 was hacked down with ease, its only defence being its toughness and ability to come back after being shot to pieces. The inevitable result was that more and more defensive guns were added, needing a fifth or even a sixth crew-member. Coupled with incessant growth in equipment and armour the result was deteriorating, so that the record-breaker of 1936-1938 was the sitting duck of 1942-1945" (Gunston, p. 401).

Despite this, the Germans were unable to replace the Heinkel; they never developed a better alternative or a successful four-engined bomber. "By the middle of the war the He 111 was obsolescent, but the lack of success of its potential replacements... necessitated keeping it in production well into 1944" (Munson, p. 95). It was more popular for fighting against ships than ground targets, and the Norway defense forces had an "Air Torpedo Group of Heinkel 111 and 115 torpedo bombers" at Barduloss (Pearce, p. 23. The Heinkel 115, according to Munson, p. 96, was another two-engine plane, used mostly at sea; originally developed for the Scandinavian countries, the German air force acquired only about 300, so most Heinkel torpedo bombers were 111s). The "seven merchantmen sinking" is, sadly, not an unreasonable number; "During the 1942-1943 period alone, over sixty-three Allied ships" were sunk on the Russian run (Pearce, p. 24). 1942 -- the year many of the "O" class destroyers were working in the arctic -- was particularly bad; Pope's Appendix 3 (p. 314) shows that convoy PQ 18, in late 1942, lost 13 of 40 ships. The convoy before that, PQ 17, was the worst of all, losing 22 of 33 ships (Pope, pp. 27-28), although this was due in part to British mismanagement. Eight U-boats strafing is sort of half-right. There were many U-boats based in northern Norway -- Pearce, p. 24, says there were more than fifty. And they could operate in conditions that were hopeless for aircraft, and they could stay on-station day and night. They would not normally strafe convoys, however -- while most U-boats had guns (and often machine guns good for strafing), a U-boat on the surface invited destroyer attacks; indeed, even a merchant vessel could ram and sink a submarine. So the subs didn't strafe; they used their torpedoes.

Gundry, who collected the text used by Tawney, says this came from one of the "O" class destroyers, which seems likely, as they served extensively on the Russian convoy route; see the notes to "The Kola Run." - RBW

Bibliography

- Pearce: Frank Pearce (with a foreword by Admiral of the Fleet Lord Lewin), Running the Gauntlet: The Battles for the Barents Sea, Fontana, 1989
- Pope: Dudley Pope, 73 North: The Battle of the Barents Sea, 1957 (I use the 1988 Naval Institute Press edition; note that the many editions of this book have very different pagination, and the edition cited here still contains page references to an earlier edition!)
Russian Scare, The

DESCRIPTION: "The nations they are falling out, The Volunteers fall in... But ask me what 'tis all about -- I don't precisely now." Two nations are quarreling about land, or pride, or something; the militia are called up, but why "I don't precisely know"

AUTHOR: "Puzzlehead"

EARLIEST DATE: 1885 (Lyttelton Times, according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)

KEYWORDS: soldier New Zealand humorous

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1885 - Russian War Scare (source: Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, pp. 73-74, "The Russian Scare" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Kumara Volunteers' Song" (subject of the Russian War Scare)

File: BaRo073

Russian Sing for Heaving the Anchor

DESCRIPTION: Tune only, no text. According to Hugill, Russian seaman had few real shanties and apart from the songs quotes by Smith there is nothing in the literature.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1888 (L.A. Smith, _Music of the Waters_)

KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage nonballad shanty worksong

FOUND IN: Russia

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 572, "Russian Sing for Heaving the Anchor" (1 tune only, no text-quoted from Smith)

File: Hugi572

Rye Straw

DESCRIPTION: Dance tune: "Dog shit a ryestraw, dog shit a jackstraw/Dog tore his asshole tryin' to shit a hacksaw." "Dog shit a ryestraw, dog shit a minner/Dog shit a catfish big enough for dinner"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (recording, Uncle "Am" Stuart)

KEYWORDS: injury dancetune nonballad animal dog

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jones-MinstrelOfTheAppalachians-Bascom-Lamar-Lunsford, p. 246, "Rye Straw" (1 tune)

Roud #16847

RECORDINGS:
Bascom Lamar Lunsford, "Rye Straw" (on BLLunsford01)
Clayton McMichen & Riley Puckett, "Rye Straw" (Columbia 15521-D, 1930, rec. 1929)
Doc Roberts, "Rye Straw" (Champion 16026, 1930)
Uncle "Am" Stuart, "Rye Straw" (Vocalion 14843, 1924; Brunswick [Canada] 1003, n.d.)
Unidentified singer, "Grubbing Hoe" (on Unexp1)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Joke on the Puppy
The Unfortunate Pup

NOTES [138 words]: With the exception of the anonymous version on "The Unexpurgated Folk Songs of Men" (Unexp1), none of the recorded versions includes the lyrics, although every American fiddler knows them. On the Skillet Lickers' recording, when the fiddler announces that the tune will be "Ryestraw," someone replies, "All right, but let your conscience be your guide." - PJS
Bascom Lamar Lunsford, in his recording of this song, noted "There are a lot of unprintable and unsingable stanzas to the old song. However, that is not confused with what we boys used to do in the old days, gather around... and possibly some of the boys would repeat maybe some questionable stanzas and follow it with 'Rye straw, rye straw, rye straw.'"

Incidentally, I've seen at least one "clean" mnemonic for this song, though presumably it is not the original. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.0
File: RcRyStra

Rye Whiskey

DESCRIPTION: A song of intense alcoholism: "Rye whiskey, rye whiskey, rye whiskey I cry; If I don't get rye whiskey I surely will die." "If the ocean was whisky and I was a duck, I'd dive to the bottom...." Many verses about how drink has affected the singer's life

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Lomax)

KEYWORDS: drink, rambling, floating verses

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,SE,So)

REFERENCES (29 citations):

- Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 374-377, "The Guerrilla Boy" (4 texts, 1 tune; the first of two texts filed as "C" is this song)
- Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #66, "O Lillie, O Lillie" (1 text, 1 tune, rather short, so it's hard to identify, but with words typical of this song; Roud classifies this and the Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi "O Lillie" version as #4512)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 50, "Jack of Diamonds" (4 texts, all short; some may be "Jack of Diamonds (II)"
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 50, "Jack of Diamonds" (2 tunes plus text excerpts)
- Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, pp. 236-237, "Farewell Sweet Mollie" (1 short text, which could be this or any of several other things)
- Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 79, pp. 207-208, "Jack of Diamonds" (1 short text); 117, pp. 258-259, "O Lillie, O Lillie," mostly a "Jack of Diamonds" text but with verses which mix it with "The Rebel Soldier"; Roud classifies this and the Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida text as #4512; also 116, p. 258, "I'll Eat When I'm Hungry" (1 fragment, a single stanza based on this song but probably belonging with "The Rebel Soldier": "I'll eat when I'm hungry, I'll drink when I'm dry, If the Yankees don't kill me, I'll live till I die")
- Randolph 405, "Rye Whiskey, Rye Whiskey" (6 texts, 1 tune); also 494, "Tie-Hackin's Too Tiresome" (1 fragment, 1 tune, an extract from a longer version)
- Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 344-345, "Rye Whiskey, Rye Whiskey" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 405A); pp. 375-376, "Tie Hackin's Too Tiresome" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 494)
- Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 157-159, "His Wants," "My Welcome," "I'll Live Till I Die" (second, ninth, and tenth of 12 single-stanza "jigs") (3 fragments, all sometimes found with this song though all are floating verses)
- Thomas-DevilsDitties, pp. 128-129, "Way Up on Clinch Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #56, "Moonshiner" (1 text, 1 tune, with verses from many places, including probably "Moonshiner," "Rye Whiskey," and maybe even "Green Grows the Laurel")
- Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 307, "Way Up On Clinch Mountain" (2 text, 1 tune, but only the "A" text belongs here; "B" is perhaps "Sweet Lulur")
- Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 112, p. 140, "I'll Eat When I'm Hungry" (2 fragments, the second certainly being this although the first might be one of the related songs)
- Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 64, "Rye Whiskey" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 170-173, "Rye Whiskey" (1 text+minor fragments, 1 tune)
- Tinsley-HeWasSinginThisSong, pp. 152-157, "Rye Whiskey" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, pp. 855-857, "Rye Whisky" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Chase-AmericanFolkTalesAndSongs, pp. 142-143, "Clinch Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Seeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 69, "Rye Whiskey" (1 text, 1 tune)
Rorrer-RamblingBlues-LifeAndSongsOfCharliePoole, p. 92, "If the River Was Whiskey" (1 text, built around W. C. Handey's "Hesitating Blues" but with most of the verses from this song)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 286-287, "Jack o' Diamonds" (1 text, heavily mixed with "Logan County Jail"); pp. 287-288, "Rye Whiskey" (1 text)
Wheeler-SteamboatinDays, pp. 112-113, "Beefsteak When I'm Hungry" (1 text, 1 tune, a mixed fragment I file here on the basis of the first verse; the others are from elsewhere)
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, p. 121, (no title) (1 text, all floating verses, some of which are, or can be, part of "Rye Whiskey" and all of which are drink-related)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 233, "Rye Whiskey" (1 text)
Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 5, "Rye Whiskey" (1 text, 1 tune)
Saffel-CowboyPoetry, pp. 211-213, "Jack o' Diamonds" (1 text; this particular Lomax offering contains elements of "Jack o Diamonds/Rye Whisky," "The Wagoner's Lad," The Rebel Soldier," and others)
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, Charles W. Joyner, "The Repertory of Nancy Jones as a Mirror of Culture in Scotland County," Vol. XXI, No. 3 (Sep 1973), p. 92-93, "Farewell, my dear true love, I'll bid you adieu" (1 text, two verses that might be "Fare You Well, My Own True Love (The Storms Are on the Ocean, The False True Lover, The True Lover's Farewell, Red Rosy Bush, Turtle Dove)" or "Rye Whiskey" or "The Wagoner's Lad" or, frankly, almost anything; there is a mention of emigration)
DT, RYEWHISK* MOONSHI4* (RYEWHISx)
Roud #941
RECORDINGS:
Jules Allen, "Jack O' Diamonds" (Victor 21470, 1928; Montgomery Ward M-4464, 1934; Montgomery Ward M-4779, c. 1935)
Fiddlin' John Carson, "The Drunkard's Hiccups" (OKeh 45032, 1926; rec. 1925)
Will Carter, "Rye Whiskey" (Bluebird [Canada] 58-0058, 1948)
Yodeling Slim Clark, "Rye Whiskey" (Continental 8012, n.d.)
Homer & Jethro, "Rye Whiskey" (King 571, 1947)
Harry Jackson, "Jack o' Diamonds" (on HJackson1)
J. E. Mainer's Mountaineers "Drunkard's Hiccoughs" (Bluebird B-8400, 1940)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Drunkard's Hiccups" (on NLCR08)
Elmo Newcomer, "Rye Whiskey" CroMart 100, n.d. but prob. late 1940s - early 1950s)
Bill Nicholson w. Zane Shrader, "Jack of Diamonds" (AFS; on LC14)
Charlie Poole and the North Carolina Ramblers, "If the River Was Whiskey" (with verses from this song though also related to "Hesitation Blues" or Handy's "Hesitating Blues"); Columbia 15545-D, 1930; on CPoole02)
Tex Ritter, "Rye Whiskey, Rye Whiskey" (Vocalion 5493, c. 1931; Vocalion 04911, 1939) (Edison Bell Winner [U.K.] W-21, 1933); "Rye Whiskey" (Capitol 40084, 1948)
Reaves White County Ramblers, "Drunkard's Hiccups" (Vocalion 5247, 1928)
Hobart Smith, "Drunken Hiccups" (on LomaxCD1706)
Pete Seeger, "Whiskey, Rye Whiskey" (on PeteSeeger07, PeteSeeger07b)
Jilson Setters [pseud. for James W. "Blind Bill" Day], "Way Up On Clinch Mountain" (Victor 21635, 1928; on RoughWays1, KMM)
Woltz's Southern Broadcasters, "Jack O' Diamonds" (Herwin 75561, c. 1927)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Wagoner's Lad" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Greenback Dollar"
cf. "Sailing Out on the Ocean" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Jack of Diamonds (I)" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Long Ways from Home" (floating lyrics)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Jack O'Diamonds
Drunken Hiccups
NOTES [65 words]: This song merges almost continuously with "The Wagoner's Lad" (which itself has offshoots such as "I'm a Rambler, I'm a Gambler"); see that song also for the full list of variants.
The "Jack of Diamonds" subfamily of this song is well known, and perhaps would be considered by some a separate song, but contains so much mixture with this song that I don't see any way to separate them. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.1
File: R405
Ryebuck Shearer, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer describes how anyone can gain respect if he is a ryebuck shearer. He is told that he will never be that good, but stoutly maintains that he'll get there someday

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1953 (collected by John Meredith from Jac Luscombe)

KEYWORDS: sheep work

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, p. 23, "The Ryebuck Shearer" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 144-145, "The Ryebuck Shearer" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, pp. 118-119, "The Ryebuck Shearer" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Paterson/Fahey/Seal-OldBushSongs-CentenaryEdition, pp. 196-197, "The Ryebuck Shearer" (1 text)

Roud #24820

NOTES [76 words]: A "ryebuck shearer" is an expert shearer (also called a "gun"), usually expected to shear a "century" -- a hundred sheep in a day. The name often referred specifically to the "ringer," or best shearer in the shed.

Gwenda Beed Davey and Graham Seal, A Guide to Australian Folklore, Kangaroo Press, 2003, p. 226, claims this as a nineteenth century song. There is no reason why it could not be so, but I know of no evidence of its existence at that time. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: MA023

'S Lobg'sang (The Hymn of Praise)

DESCRIPTION: Amish hymn in German. "O Gott, Vater, wir loben dich Und deine Gute preisen; Das du uns O Herr gnadichlich An uns neun hast beweisen." "O God, Father, we praise you, And love your many blessings, That you have proved so merciful to us...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1742 (Amish Ausbund, according to Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad foreignlanguage

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, pp. 143-144, "'S Lobg'sang (The Hymn of Praise)" (1 short German text plus not-very-literal translation, 1 tune)

NOTES [10 words]: This is said to be the most popular of all Amish hymns. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.2

File: KPL143

'S mise chunnaic an t-longnadh (Mermaid Song) (It Is I Who Saw The Wonder)

DESCRIPTION: In Scots Gaelic: "It is I who saw the wonder/One early morning as I was looking for sheep/A girl with flowing brown hair/Sat on a flat rock of the gulls." The mermaid and her brothers are involved in a mysterious, bloody fight in a rocky cave

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (recording, Penny Morrison)

KEYWORDS: fight mermaid/man supernatural

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Hebr))

RECORDINGS:
- Penny Morrison, "'S mise chunnaic an t-longnadh [Mermaid Song] (It Is I Who Saw The Wonder)" [fragment] (on Lomax43, LomaxCD1743)

NOTES [16 words]: Alas, Lomax provides only the introductory verses and a maddeningly brief summary of the song. - PJS

File: RcSMCATL

S-A-V-E-D

DESCRIPTION: The singer complains about the sins of others, spelling each out (e.g. they "d-a-n-
"c-e" while wearing a new "h-a-t"). The singer, though, need not worry about such things; "It's g-l-o-ry to know I'm s-a-v-e-d."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (recording, Gid Tanner & his Skillet Lickers)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad sin
FOUND IN: US Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 124, "S-A-V-E-D" (1 text, 1 tune) Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 185-186, "I Once Knew a Man (S-a-v-ed ; I'm Saved)" (1 text, 1 tune) Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 144-145, "Salvation Army SOng" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 349, "It's G-L-O-R-Y To Know I'm S-A-V-E-D" (1 text)
Roud #9539
RECORDINGS:
Jim Bennett, "I Once Knew a Man" (on NFAGuigné01)
The Blue Sky Boys, "I'm S-A-V-E-D" (Bluebird 8401, 1940)
The Georgia Yellow Hammers, "I'm S-A-V-E-D" (Victor 21195, 1928)
Karl & Harty, "I'm S-A-V-E-D" (Perfect 6-10-54, 1936)
Gid Tanner and His Skillet Lickers, "S-A-V-E-D" (Columbia 15097-D, 1926)
NOTES [48 words]: Obviously a composed song, but I've no knowledge of the source. I've heard it enough times that I suspect it belongs in the Index. There is a list of relatively recent recording by
- RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: FSWB349

S. D. Knowles
DESCRIPTION: "This song is not a song of love, 'tis not a song of flowers... but 'tis of a hump-backed blowhard, his name is S. D. Knowles." The song tells how Knowles left Maine for Wisconsin, and insulting describes why no one wants to be near him
AUTHOR: W. N. "Billy" Allen (writing as "Shan T. Boy")
EARLIEST DATE: before 1926 (Rickaby)
KEYWORDS: farming travel warning
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 282-284, "S. D. Knowles" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #15683
File: Pet282

Sa Up and Rise
DESCRIPTION: "Sa up and rise, my merry lads, For a' maun rise, for a' maun rise"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: farming work nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #163, p. 3, ("Sa up and rise, my merry lads")
(1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan3 442, "Sa Up and Rise" (1 fragment)
NOTES [86 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan3 fragment.
Greig's correspondent, John Milne, has this fragment be the chorus of a song his grandfather sang "telling the joys to be derived from first-class farm-work, workmen, and working-gear" at "Mill of Boyndie [sic]."
Greig/Duncan3 has a map on p. xxxv, of "places mentioned in songs in volume 3" showing the song number as well as place name; Mill of Boyndie (441) is at coordinate (h6-7,v6) on that map [near Banff, roughly 41 miles NW of Aberdeen]. - BS
Last updated in version 2.4
Sabbath Has No End
DESCRIPTION: Gwine to walk about Zion, I really do believe, Walk about Zion, I really do believe, Walk about....Sabbath has no end. I did view one angel In one angel stand, Let's mark him down with the forehead." "Going to follow King Jesus." "I love God certain."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 69. "Sabbath Has No End" (1 text, 1 tune)
Barton-OldPlantationHymns, pp. 37-38, "Sabbath Has No End" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 201, "Oh, Religion Is a Fortune" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 189 in the 1874 edition)
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslands 39, pp. 172-173, "Sabbath Has No End" (1 text, 1 tune)
Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro, p. 48, "Oh, Religion Is a Fortune" (1 text)
Roud #11969 and 12027
NOTES [216 words]: There are several references in the Bible to people with special marks on their foreheads. In Ezekiel 9, a man clothed in linen is instructed to mark the foreheads of those who dislike idolatry, so that they may be spared persecution. But most of the mentions are in the Apocalypse.
In 7:3, the servants of God are to receive a mark on the forehead. In 9:4, those who do not have it are to be punished. In 14:1, the name of the Father and the Lamb are written on the heads of saints. Servants of God also have a mark on their foreheads in 22:4.
On the other hand, in 13:16, the servants of the Beast are marked so that they can engage in commerce. In 14:9, it is declared that these will be punished. This mark is also mentioned in 20:4.
The Great Whore also has a name on her forehead in 17:5.
I guess this is what happens when you don't have tamper-proof ID cards....
It has become Christian tradition, on Ash Wednesday, to mark the penitents' heads with the burnt palm ashes, but this is not Biblical. Our knowledge of the history of early traditions such as Lent is very sketchy, but it is not based directly on the Bible. - RBW
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute's verses end "O religion is a fortune, I really do believe, where Sabbaths have no end."

Sabbath Morning Nov. 13th 1852
DESCRIPTION: "My thoughts now return to the home I love well, I hear the sweet sound of the church going bell." The singer sees the people head for church. Sailors cannot go to the church, "But the same God who looks upon them Is here and will ever with us be."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1852 (Journal of the Catawba)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad sailor
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 356-357, "Sabbath Morning Nov. 13th 1852" (1 text)
Roud #27317
File: HGam356

Sable Island Shore
DESCRIPTION: A tribute to the lifeguards at the Sable Island lighthouse who "glide from the beach to the roaring seas The lives of the crews to save ... They risk their lives in their daily work ... On the Sable Island shore"
AUTHOR: Ted Germain
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (NFOBlondahl04)
KEYWORDS: rescue ship shore wreck nonballad
FOUND IN:
RECORDINGS:
Omar Blondahl, "Sable Island Shore" (on NFOBlondahl04)
NOTES [150 words]: Ted Germain is a Nova Scotia musician. "One of his early compositions, Sable Island Shores, became a local hit and would lead Germain to a recording contract and a series of albums for London Records." (Source: From the East Coast Music Awards Canada site, re 2004 Stompin' Tom Award Recipients)
Sable Island, Nova Scotia, about 23 miles long, is about 110 miles, at its nearest point, from the Nova Scotia coast. According to the Sable Island Preservation Trust site: more than 350 wrecks have been recorded there since 1583; a lifesaving station operated there from 1801 until 1958. Blondahl04 has no liner notes confirming that this song was collected in Newfoundland. Barring another report for Newfoundland I do not assume it has been found there. There is no entry for "Sable Island Shore" in Newfoundland Songs and Ballads in Print 1842-1974 A Title and First-Line Index by Paul Mercer. - BS
File: RcSaIsSh

Sable Island Song (I)
DESCRIPTION: "On the stormy western ocean ... Lies a barren little island." The singer signs to be government caretaker, wear government clothes, chase "crazy horses" and "wild cattle," swallow inedible food: "Get off Sable Island Or you'll be crazy in a year"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Creighton - Nova Scotia)
KEYWORDS: work food ordeal animal
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 142, "Sable Island Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST RcSabIsl (Partial)
Roud #1838
RECORDINGS:
Omar Blondahl, "Sable Island" (on NFOBlondahl03)
NOTES [125 words]: Creighton-NovaScotia: "The author of this song is said to be one of the sons of the well-to-do in Halifax who was sent to Sable Island ... to be cured of his fondness for the cup." Sable Island, Nova Scotia, about 23 miles long, is about 110 miles, at its nearest point, from the Nova Scotia coast.
Blondahl03 has no liner notes confirming that this song was collected in Newfoundland. Barring another report for Newfoundland I do not assume it has been found there. There is no entry for "Sable Island" in Newfoundland Songs and Ballads in Print 1842-1974 A Title and First-Line Index by Paul Mercer. - BS
The song in its current form, based on the information in Creighton, must be dated to 1904 or after, when Gordeau Park was founded. - (RBW, BS)
File: RcSabIsl

Sable Island Song (II)
DESCRIPTION: Hard times for "banned steeves" at Main Station. They steal from other boys "and only call that fun" but the busy-bodies "in the castle... their tongues were never still." The "steeves" nail a postal to their door and refuse to take it down.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Creighton-NovaScotia)
KEYWORDS: accusation hardtimes food theft
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 143, "Sable Island Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST CrNS143 (Partial)
Roud #1839
NOTES [136 words]: Creighton-NovaScotia. "In 1926 the wireless men lost some potatoes and accused Main Station men ["banned steeves"] of taking them.... The [people in the castle] are the wireless operator and his wife." I guess "postal" should be read as "post" [I take it to mean 'letter" or "accusation" - RBW]. See other Sable Island songs for confirmation of the hard times there. - BS

The Communal Composition advocates would love this. According to Creighton's notes, the Main Station staff each wrote a verse as a competition to see who could do best. Little surprise, then, that the result is ragged and tells an imperfect story. But as for Creighton's comment that "the song-making instinct is not dormant" -- no, it's not, as anyone who listens to rock music can tell. The instinct to make GOOD songs is another matter.... - RBW

File: CrNS143

Sacker Shean's Little Girl

DESCRIPTION: "Now I am only Sacker Shean's poor little girl, you know, Who was cast upon this cruel world, No home, no place to go." Her mother is dead, her father a drunk. Wandering in the streets, she is finally taken in by a kind lady who gives her a home

AUTHOR: Joe Scott
EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (Family Herald, according to Ives-Joe-Scott-TheWoodsmanSongmaker)
KEYWORDS: orphan mother death rescue drink rejection
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ives-Joe-Scott-TheWoodsmanSongmaker, pp. 325-329, "Sacker Shean's Little Girl" (2 texts)
Roud #25146
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Orphan Girl (The Orphan Child)" (theme)
File: ISco325

Sacramento Gals

DESCRIPTION: Singer praises the beauty and elegance of Sacramento gals, with their bustles, hoops, and powdered, painted faces. Refrains: "Nipping around, around, around"; "As they go nipping around"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1858 (Put's Golden Songster)
KEYWORDS: beauty clothes nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SW)
RECORDINGS:
Logan English, "Sacramento Gals" (on LEnglish02)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Bobbing Around" (tune)
NOTES [56 words]: Among the verses cited, "They're here and there, like Santa Anna/They're fresh and mellow like ripe banana" stands out as an exemplar of how tastes in compliments have changed. I believe Walt Kelly parodied that at one point -- "Your eyes are warm as sweet manana/Soft and gooey like fried banana." Not a verse I'm likely to forget - PJS
File: RcsacrGa

Sad and Lonely Comrade

DESCRIPTION: Bobby dies and his father and mother mourn. "Prepare to meet your darling with Christ up in the skies. We all have loved ones sleeping, all in a churchyard bed, And why not try to meet them in a moment we are dead"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast)
KEYWORDS: death religious father mother
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 52, "Sad and Lonely Comrade" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST LLab052 (Partial)
Roud #9987
NOTES [33 words]: Leach's informant thought this a local song about a Labrador event, though he didn't know details. I suspect he was right, though; the song is unsophisticated and the poetry neither good nor clear. - RBW

File: LLab052

Sad Condition

DESCRIPTION: "A young lady sat down in a sad condition/A-mourning the loss of her own true love/Some folks say that he was taken/In the wars with Germany/Hi-lee, 'tis not so/I'll turn back and be your beau/Turn my elbow to my wrist/I'll turn back in a double twist"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Cecil Sharp collection); +1907 (JAF20)
KEYWORDS: grief love war death mourning dancing playparty lover
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 263, "Sad Condition" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #940
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Killy Kranky" (lyrics)

NOTES [61 words]: This is a weird hybrid of what sounds like a remnant of a tragic lover-lost-in-the-army ballad and a few lines from a playparty, "Killy Kranky." But that has no narrative to speak of, and this one does, sort of, so it gets its own entry. Oh, the version collected by Sharp came from Hindman, KY, where various generations of Ritchies attended the settlement school. - PJS

File: ShAp2263

Saddest Face in the Mining Town, The

DESCRIPTION: A miner takes leave of his girl, noting that tomorrow they will be married, He goes down in the mine, which caves in. The bells, instead of tolling for a wedding, toll for his funeral. Years later, his body is found, and the white-haired bride knows it

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1976 (collected by Logsdon from Riley Neal)
KEYWORDS: beauty mining death disaster corpse wedding
FOUND IN: US(SW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 58, pp. 265-267, "The Saddest Face in the Mining Town" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10108

NOTES [94 words]: The deft work of this song is impressive: The contrast between the "fairest face in the mining town" and the "saddest face in the mining town," and an overall air of understatement, make it especially poignant. Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging is reminded of an old ballad, but it strikes me as more parlor poetry (though exceptionally good of its kind). We might note that the idea of the wedding bell that instead rings a funeral note is hardly unique to this song -- A. E. Housman used it, with equal brilliance and images even more spare, in "Bredon Hill." - RBW

File: Logs058

Saddle Tramp (Saddle Bum), The

DESCRIPTION: Singer tells of life as a "saddle bum" or "saddle tramp," riding the grub-line, moving from ranch to ranch, singing for his keep. When things get cool, he "forks his bronc" and moves on. Over winter, he stays with his Neta, and promises to be true to her

AUTHOR: Curley Fletcher
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Curley Fletcher, "Songs of the Sage")
KEYWORDS: rambling travel music nonballad animal horse lover hobo
FOUND IN: US(Ro)
RECORDINGS:
Harry Jackson, "The Saddle Bum" (on HJackson1)

NOTES [290 words]: The "grub line" or "chuck line" refers to the practice of offering itinerant cowboys or workers a few days' food and lodging as they passed through. - PJS
And it was controversial. In the last third of the nineteenth century, much of the American West was used as rangeland, but while many cowboys were needed in summer, the herds were allowed to roam in winter, and many of the cowboys were out of work and needed a way to survive. Helena Huntington Smith, The War On Powder River, University of Nebraska Press, 1966, p. 110, points out that there were three ways a cowboy could get through the winter. He could hang around an empty camp and do the best he could, or he could file a homestead claim and live on it. Or... "The third way of getting through the winter was to 'ride the grubline.' Mounted on his best horse and packing his bed and his 'forty years gathering' on another, he would visit from ranch to ranch, living by the old law of hospitality in the West. There were a few chronic 'saddle bums' and there were worse, but the average grubline rider was a decent sort who avoided staying too long in one place, carried wood and water for the cook, and was always welcomed by the bored and isolated men on the premises because he was a new face and brought news of the range. So he got through the jobless months somehow until the uncertain sun of April shown again and it was time to rehire the crew."

As ownership of cattle became concentrated in a few hands, they often tried to shut down the grubline as uneconomic (Smith, pp. 110-111), but this generally didn't work well because the cowboys needed to survive somehow. So Harry Jackson could still be singing this song long after the cattle boom and bust of the 1880s. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: Rcsadtra

Sadie Ray

DESCRIPTION: "Near a cool and shady woodland Where the rippling streamlets flow Dwelt a maiden kind and lovely But 'twas in long years ago." He describes their love and plans to marry, "But she's dead, my Sadie Ray." He prepares to meet her in Heaven

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)

KEYWORDS: love, death, separation

FOUND IN: US(MW,So)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Randolph 770, "Sadie Ray" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 718, 719, "Sadie Ray" (2 short texts, 2 tunes)
- High-OldOldFolkSongs, p. 30, "Sadie... Ray" (1 text)
- Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 116, "Sadie Rae" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #4314

RECORDINGS:
- [Clarence] Ashley & [Gwen] Foster, "Sadie Ray" (Vocalion 02900, 1935; rec. Sep. 5, 1933; on Ashley04)

NOTES [13 words]: Printed in one of the Hamlin's Wizard Oil songbooks, probably in the 1880s. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: R770

Saguenay Song, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, the Saguenay sailed through the blue Caribbean, The Saguenay sailed o'er the old Spanish main." "We'll zig and we'll zag al over the ocean, We'll zig and we'll zag all over the sea." But eventually a torpedo hits her. The ship manages to make it home

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead)

KEYWORDS: ship, war

FOUND IN: Canada

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, p. 38, "The Saguenay Song" (tune)

Roud #24983

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "We'll Rant and We'll Roar" (tune) and references there
- cf. "The Maple Leaf Squadron" (tune and some lyrics)

NOTES [653 words]: Canada, during the years prior to World War II, did not have the ability to build a ship larger than a corvette, so the handful of major units in her fleet were built in Britain. Among these were the Saguenay and the Skeena, which were members of the "A" class of British destroyers, which as built in 1930-1931 were 1350 tons, with four 4.7" guns, eight torpedo tubes, and a speed of 35 knots. Because they used relatively low-pressure boilers, they did not use their tonnage particularly effectively and had low habitability (Worth, p. 109). Their peacetime complement was 138. The two sisters differed slightly from the standard "A" class in that they were strengthened to deal with sailing in ice (Whitley, p. 25); Bercuson, p. 10, reports that they also differed from the standard in not being fitted with ASDIC ("Sonar").

The two sisters were the first new destroyers ever ordered by Canada (Milner, p. 66), although they had taken over a few old ships and would eventually acquire more. Macpherson, p. 11, calls Saguenay "The first made-to-order RCN [Royal Canadian Navy] warship," which helps explain why she and Skeena were chosen to attend King George VI's coronation review in 1936 (Macpherson, p. 13). The two sisters were among the largest vessels in Canada's navy when the war came, and were immediately put to work escorting convoys (Saguenary in fact escorted the very first convoy from Halixax, HX1; Milner, p. 81), then in 1940 became part of Escort Group C3 (for which see also "Beneath the Barber Pole"). It was while escorting convoy HG47 from Gibraltar that the Saguenay was torpedoed in 1940. She lost 21 men in the attack (Bercuson, p. 30). She survived and was repaired, but continued to be a hard luck ship; a storm in January 1942 almost destroyed her (Macpherson, p. 16). "Three months later she was back at sea. She became a regular sight on the 'Derry-Newfie' convoy run, easily identifiable by her scarred hull and brightly marked funnel that distinguished her as one of the early members of the famous 'Barber Pole Brigade.' She was affectionately known as 'Old Sag.'"

Still her luck was bad. She collided with the SS Azara off Newfoundland on November 15, 1942 and was badly damaged when her depth charges exploded. (Whitley, p. 25). Again she survived (according to Macpherson, p. 16, Azara, which he calls Azra, did not), but she was never fully repaired, being converted to the training ship Cornwallis (McKee/Darlington, p. 250). She was sold off for scrapping in 1945 (Whitley, p. 25).

This song obviously refers to the first time she was damaged, by the submarine Argo. Milner, p. 88, describes the incident as follows: "On 1 December [1940], lookouts on Saguenay spotted the [Italian] submarine Argo lining up for a shot at convoy HG 37, 300 miles west of Ireland. Quick action from Saguenay drove the submarine down, just as a single torpedo struck the forward portion of the ship. As Saguenay's crew fought the fires, tended the wounded, and secured forward bulkheads, the bow of the ship -- shattered by the blast and seawater -- fell off. It took a commendable act of seamanship by Commander Gus Miles and his crew to get Saguenay home.... She was the first RCN [Royal Canadian Navy] ship damaged by enemy action."

Milner's photo insert has three photos of the Saguenay, one of them taken during her construction. Macpherson, p. 11 shows her in 1931, when new, and in the mid-1930s; p. 12 has a 1934 detail photo; p. 13 shows her in 1939 and 1940; p. 14 shows her in 1941 and 1942 as various changes were made in her; p. 15 has two photos after the 1942 loss of her stern; p. 16 has two photos of her after she was used for training. P. 17 has a weekly summary of her war service. PP. 98-99 has a diagram of a different member of her class as originally built. Foster, pp. 39-40, has a large photo of her and a smaller one of Skeena. - RBW

Bibliography

- Foster: J. A. Foster, Heart of Oak: A Pictorial History of the Royal Canadian Navy, with a Foreword by Rear Admiral W. M. Landymore, Methuen, 1985
- Milner: Marc Milner, Canada's Navy: The First Century, University of Toronto Press, 1999
- Worth: Richard Worth, Fleets of World War II, Da Capo, 2001

Last updated in version 5.1
File: Hopk038
Said Frohock to Fanning

DESCRIPTION: "Said Frohock to Fanning, 'To tell the plain truth, When I came to this country I was but a youth... And then my first study was to cheat for a hoss.'" Fanning and Frohock happily exchange tales of cheating those around them
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: political robbery
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 279, "Said Frohock to Fanning" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 279, "Said Frohock to Fanning" (notes only)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "From Hillsborough Town the First of May" (subject)
cf. "When Fanning First to Orange Came" (subject)
cf. "Who Would Have Tho't Harmon" (subject)
NOTES [82 words]: One of four "regulator" songs in Brown. The regulators were a group of protesters against high taxes and fees, found mostly in North Carolina though some also were active in South Carolina. For more on the Regulators, see the notes to "When Fanning First to Orange Came." That song also gives background on Edmund Fanning.
The notes in Brown observe three men named Frohock held station in North Carolina in the Regulators. They suspect Thomas Frohock is meant, but this is beyond proof. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.7
File: BrII279

Said I, David Crocket

DESCRIPTION: "Said I, David Crocket, you're a Tennessee Screamah, He hauled off an' he hit me in the weemah, I drew back an' I hit him in de wizzen, He bit off mah head an' I swallowed his'n and we both locked arms." The singer claims to have won the fight
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Harlow, "The Making of a Sailor")
KEYWORDS: fight
FOUND IN:
ADDITIONAL: Frederick Pease Harlow, _The Making of a Sailor, or Sea Life Aboard a Yankee Square-Rigger_, 1928; republished by Dover, 1988, p.79, "(no title)" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: FPHS079

Saighdiuir Treigthe, An (The Forsaken Soldier)

DESCRIPTION: Gaelic. Singer wakes and throws away his uniform. He hears gossip about his sweetheart and cuts off his finger. He will die before Easter but would return from the dead if she calls him. He curses his father for driving him to drink and the army.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Tunney-StoneFiddle)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage love nonballad injury soldier death ghost separation
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Tunney-StoneFiddle, pp. 168-169, "An Saighdiuir Treigthe" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Bell/O Conchubhair, Traditional Songs of the North of Ireland, pp. 115-116, "An Saighdiuir Treigthe" ("The Deserted Soldier") [Gaelic and English]
NOTES [42 words]: Tunney-StoneFiddle includes both the Gaelic and Paddy Tunney's English translation. However, I used Bell/O Conchubhair for most of the description because it seemed a better match for what little Gaelic I could follow. Tunney has one additional verse. - BS
File: TSF168
Sail Away Ladies

DESCRIPTION: Dance tune with floating verses: "Ever I get my new house done/Sail away, ladies, sail away/Give the old one to my son/Sail away...." "Don't you worry, don't you cry... You'll be angels by and by" Etc. "Chorus: "Don't'ye rock 'em, di-de-o (x3 or x4)".

AUTHOR: Words assembled by Uncle Dave Macon

EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (recording, Uncle Bunt Stephens)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Dance tune with floating verses, and some that should be: "Ever I get my new house done/Sail away, ladies, sail away/Give the old one to my son/Sail away, ladies, sail away"; "Children, Don't You Grieve and Cry/You're gonna be angels by and by"; "Come along, girls and go with me/We'll go back to Tennessee". Chorus: "Don't'ye rock 'em, di-de-o (3-4x)". "Sail away, ladies, sail away" is the verse refrain.

KEYWORDS: dancing drink humorous nonballad floatingverses

FOUND IN: US(SE,So)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 203, "Sail Away Ladies" (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, p. 251, "Sail Away Ladies" (1 text)
Wheeler-SteamboatinDays, p. 15-16, "Oh, When I Git My New House Done" (1 text, 1 tune -- a fragment with no chorus but verses similar to this)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 42, "Sail Away Ladies" (1 text)
DT, SAILLADI*

RECORDINGS:
Henry L. Bandy, "Sail Away Ladies" (Gennett test pressing GEx14361, 1928; unissued; on KMM)
Logan English, "Old Doc Jones" (on LEnglish01)
Uncle Dave Macon & his Fruit Jar Drinkers, "Sail Away Ladies" (Vocalion 5155, Brunswick 80094, Brunswick BL-59000, Coral MH-174.1927; on TimesAint02, StuffDreams2)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Sail Away, Ladies" (on NLCR05)
Parker & Dodd "Sail Away Lady" (Banner 32817/Melotone 12745/Romeo 5250, 1933)
Uncle Bunt Stephens, "Sail Away Ladies" [instrumental version] (Columbia 15071-D, 1926; on AAFM2)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Down the River I Go" (words)
cf. "Carve That Possum" (portion of tune)

NOTES [56 words]: This started out as a fiddle tune, to which Uncle Dave [Macon] added his own unique brand of nonsense--some original, some floating verses. -PJS
Not to be confused with the song sung by W.C. Handy: "Sail away, ladies, sail away; Sail away, ladies, sail away. Never mind what de sisters say, Just shake your Dolly Varden and sail away." -RBW

Last updated in version 5.2
File: CSW203

Sail, O Believer

DESCRIPTION: "Sail, O believer, sail, Sail over yonder, Sail, O my brother, Sail over yonder." The listener is invited to join in the work and view the promised land. "For Jesus comes... And Jesus locks the doors... And carries the keys away."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Jesus

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 24, "Sail, O Believer" (1 fragment plus a short text which they believe to be the same song, 1 tune)
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 197-198, "Sail, O Believer" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #11976

File: SBoA197

Sailing in the Boat

DESCRIPTION: "Sailing in the boat when the tide runs high, (x3) Waiting for the pretty girl(s) to come by and by." The rest is floating verses on courting, e.g. "Here she comes so fine and fair, Sky blue eyes and curly hair, Roses in her cheek, dimple in her chin...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1865 (collected from Mrs. Charles Perrin, according to Coffin & Cohen)
KEYWORDS: courting ship nonballad playparty floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(Ap,NE) Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #168, "Sailing at High Tide" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 13, "Sailing in the Boat" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, pp. 812-813, "Sailing at High Tide" (1 text, 1 tune)
Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains, p. 25, "In This Ring Stands a Lady Fair" (1 text, 1 tune, with no mention of the boat but otherwise appearing to be this song)
Bush-FSoCentralWestVirginiaVol4, p. 16, "Four in a Boat" (1 text, 1 tune)
"(Sailing in the Boat)" (1 fragment)
Tristram P. Coffin and Hennig Cohen, _Folklore in America: Tales, Songs, Superstitions, Proverbs, Riddles, Games, Folk Drama and Folk Festivals_, Doubleday, 1966, pp. 185-186, "Rose in the Garden" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST LoF013 (Full)
Roud #6665
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rose in the Garden (III)" (lyrics)
NOTES [30 words]: Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren considers this to be close to "Rose in the Garden (III)," but it appears to me that they are two songs fused rather than one that split. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File: LoF013

Sailing Out on the Ocean

DESCRIPTION: Singer is sailing the ocean; says if he gets shot or drowned there will be no one to weep for him. Despite his mother's usual warning, he gambled and lost his life savings while drunk. The only girl he has loved has turned her back on him

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (recording, Haskell Wolfenbarger)
KEYWORDS: loneliness warning gambling courting floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
RECORDINGS:
Haskell Wolfenbarger, "Sailing Out on the Ocean" (Vocalion 5390, 1930; on RoughWays2)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "On Top of Old Smoky" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Rye Whiskey" (floating lyrics)
File: RcSOOtO

Sailing, Sailing

DESCRIPTION: Known mostly for the lines in the middle of the chorus: "Sailing, sailing, over the bounding main, For many a stormy wind shall blow ere Jack comes home again." About the "bold and free" life of the sailor, and his true heart, and his return home

AUTHOR: Godfrey Marks
EARLIEST DATE: 1880 (sheet music)
KEYWORDS: sailor sea ship nonballad home
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Heart-Songs, pp. 390-391, "Sailing" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #154, "Sailing" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 89, "Sailing Sailing" (1 text)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, p. 483, "Sailing"
SAME TUNE: Sailing the Union Way (Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, p. 235)
File: FSB089

Sailor and His Bride, The [Laws K10]

DESCRIPTION: The sailor's widow reports that her husband went to sea three years ago, after only three months of marriage. His ship was lost in a storm; she wishes that she could join him in his watery grave.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1856 (Thompson-APioneerSongster)
KEYWORDS: sailor storm wreck death
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,NE,SE,So) Canada(Newf,Ont) Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (15 citations):
- Laws K10, "The Sailor and His Bride"
- Greig/Duncan1 19, "The Sailor and His Love" (1 text)
- Greig/Duncan19, "The Sailor and His Love" (1 text)
- "The Sailor's Wife's Lament" (1 text)
- "The Sailor's Bride" (1 text, 1 tune)
- "The Sailor and His Bride" (2 texts, 1 tune)
- "Early in the Spring When I Was Young" (1 short text, 1 tune)
- "The Sailor and His Bride" (2 texts, 1 tune)
- "The Sailor and His Bride" (2 texts)
- "The Sailor's Bride" (2 texts)
- "The Sailor's Bride" (2 excerpts, 2 tunes)
- "Charlie and Mary" (1 text)
- "The Sailor's Bride" (1 text, 1 tune)
- "Early Spring" (1 text, 1 tune)
- "The Sailor's Bride" (1 text, 1 tune)
- DT 558, SAILBRDE

RECORDINGS:
Charlotte Decker, "Early Spring" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Sailor's Sweetheart
My Soldier Boy

File: LK10

Sailor and His Love, The

DESCRIPTION: A sailor asks his love, bound by iron, to dress as a sailor and follow him. She refuses: her father has heard from the sailor's crew that he is married. He swears he is free. She is convinced and says she'd follow him if he frees her.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan5)
KEYWORDS: elopement lie rescue cross-dressing ship father sailor
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Greig/Duncan5 1011, "The Sailor and His Love" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Locks and Bolts" [Laws M13] (theme: girl locked away by father) and references there
NOTES [25 words]: The plot reads like an excerpt of "The Iron Door" but the text shares no lines with "Locks and Bolts," "The Iron Door," or "The Gallant Shoemaker." - BS
Last updated in version 2.6

File: GrD1011
Sailor and the Ghost, The [Laws P34A/B]

DESCRIPTION: A pregnant girl hangs herself after being abandoned by her lover. The guilty youth goes to sea to escape her ghost, but the spirit follows and finds him. She threatens the captain until he is produced, and then burns the ship with him aboard

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1805 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 10(68))

KEYWORDS: pregnancy abandonment ghost disaster suicide

FOUND IN: US(MA,SE) Canada(Mar,Newf) Britain(England,Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (12 citations):
Laws P34A, "The Sailor’s Tragedy (The Sailor and the Ghost A)"/P34B, "Handsome Harry (The Sailor and the Ghost B)"
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #130, pp. 2-3, "The Ghost So Grim" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan2 341, Greig/Duncan8 Addenda, "The Ghost So Grim" (7 texts, 2 tunes)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 68, "Handsome Harry" (1 text, identified by Laws as P34B)
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 151-154, "The Dreadful Ghost" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, pp. 116-117, "The Dreadful Ghost" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 398-403, "The Sea Ghost" (3 texts, 3 tunes)
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 18, "The Sailor's Tragedy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 92, "The Sailor's Tragedy" (1 text)
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 209-210, "(Handsome Harry)" (1 excerpt) Forget-Me-Not-Songster, pp. 133-136, "Handsome Harry" (1 text)
DT 512, DREDGHOS

Roud #568

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 10(68), "The Sailor and the Ghost," Laurie and Whittle (London), 1805; also 2806 c.8(242), "The Sailor and the Ghost"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Captain Glen/The New York Trader (The Guilty Sea Captain A/B)" [Laws K22] (Jonah theme) and references there

cf. "On One Thursday Evening" (tune, according to Greig/Duncan2)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Murdered Girl
The Spirit Grim

File: LP34

---

Sailor and the Shepherdess, The [Laws O8]

DESCRIPTION: A wandering young sailor, seeing a shepherdess asleep by the sea, goes up to her and kisses her. Surprised into wakefulness, she begins to cry, but the sailor offers marriage, and she accepts

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1813 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 25(1698))

KEYWORDS: sailor courting marriage

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber)) Canada(Mar) Ireland

REFERENCES (8 citations):
Laws O8, "The Sailor and the Shepherdess"
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #117, p. 1, "The Handsome Shepherdess" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan5 968, "The Handsome Shepherdess" (2 texts plus a verse from Greig #117 on p. 599; 2 tunes)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 608, "Twas of a Brisk Young Shepherdess" (1 text)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 53, "The Sailor and the Shepherdess" (1 text)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 37, "The Shepherdess" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H104, p. 457, "The Gentle Shepherdess" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 473, SAILSHEP

Roud #959
Sailor and the Tailor, The [Laws P4]

DESCRIPTION: A girl and a sailor agree to marry after he finishes his voyage. When he returns, he finds that she will soon marry a tailor. He meets them and persuades the girl to change her mind.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)

KEYWORDS: sailor, wedding, infidelity, rejection, love

FOUND IN: Britain (England, Scotland) US (MA) Canada (Mar, Newf)

REFERENCES (9 citations):
- Laws P4, "The Sailor and the Tailor"
- Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #101, p. 2, "The Tailor and the Sailor" (1 text)
- Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 73, "The Watchet Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 71, "The Watchet Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 167-168, "Jack the Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, pp. 134-135, "Jack the Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 403-404, "The Sailor and the Tailor" (1 text)
- cf. Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, p. 482, "The Sailor and the Tailor" (source notes only)
- DT 492, SAILTAIL
- Roud #917

RECORDINGS:
- Cyril O'Brien, "Johnny the Troller" (on MUNFLA-Leach)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "He Wears a Bonnet for a Hat" ("Maybe I'll Be Mairriet Yet" lines finish the song)

File: LP04

Sailor Bill

DESCRIPTION: "I've sailed to the east and I've sailed to the west. They call me Sailor Bill, I have come to seek my own blood kin That settled in the hills." The sailor tells how, after sailing far, he looks for his family and settles down "with my Preston kin."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)

KEYWORDS: sailor, home, return, reunion

FOUND IN: US (Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, p. 32, (no title) (1 text)

NOTES [22 words]: Thomas's informants thought this the work of William Calvert Preston. This seems possible, since that family gave her the song. - RBW

File: ThBa032

Sailor Bold (II), The

DESCRIPTION: The sailor "came to his true love to let her know That he once more to sea must go." She saysd "pray stay at home" with her because cannons may injure him. He says "pray stay at home" and she will always be in his mind. She watched him sail.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1850 (according to Christie, 1881)

KEYWORDS: request, war, farewell, separation, wife, sailor Sailor Bold (III), The

DESCRIPTION: A sailor tells his sweetheart he must sail. He promises to be true. Perhaps says, "we shall return victorious men, The joy and pride of Christendom" She recounts the dangers of sailing and war. He leaves. She receives a comforting letter from him.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan1)
KEYWORDS: love war farewell sailor
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan1 62, "The Sailor Bold" (1 text)
Roud #5813
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Sailor Bold (II)" (shares the first verse)
NOTES [39 words]: The description is based on broadside Bodleian Harding B 28(104).

Sailor Boy (I), The [Laws K12]

DESCRIPTION: A girl asks her father to build her a boat so that she may search for her lover. She describes the boy to a passing captain, who tells her he is drowned. She gives directions for her burial, then dies of grief or dashing her boat against the rocks.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1839 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(2298))
KEYWORDS: ship death lover drowning loneliness separation sailor
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,South,West),Scotland(Aber)) US(Ap,MA,MW,NE,Ro,SE,So) Ireland Canada(Mar,Newf,Queb)
REFERENCES (60 citations):
Laws K12, "The Sailor Boy I"
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 186-191, "The Sailor Boy" (6 texts, 1 tune)
Randolph 68, "The Sailor's Sweetheart" (3 text plus 2 fragments, 4 tunes)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 68-70, "The Sailor's Sweetheart" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 68C)
Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. 318-320, "Oh, Captain, Captain, Tell Me True" (1 text; tune on pp. 441-442)
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 54, "Sweet William (The Sailor Boy)" (1 text)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 33, "Sweet William" (6 texts, 3 tunes)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 25, "The Sailor Boy" (1 short text; the first 6 lines are "The Sailor Boy"; the last twelve are perhaps "The Butcher Boy")
Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy 18, "The Pinery Boy" (1 text, 1 tune; also a fragment in the notes)
Rickaby/Dykstra/Leary-PineryBoys-SongsSongcatchingInLumberjackEra 18, "The Pinery Boy" (1 text, 1 tune; also a fragment in the notes)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 94, "The Pinery Boy" (1 text)
Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin 30, "The Sailor Boy" (1 text)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 736-737, "The Sailor Boy" (1 text)
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 9, "The Sailor Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland 43, "Sweet William" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 27, "Broken Ring Song fragment" (1 single-stanza fragment, 1 tune); 44, "My Sailor Lad, "Sailor Bold" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 53, "I'll Sit Down and Write a Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 106, "Sweet William" (12 texts, 12 tunes)
Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 72, "Sweet William" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolksongs 35, "Sweet William" (1 text, 1 tune -- a composite version)
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 36, "Sweet William" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 127, "Sweet William" (2 texts)
Trotter/Williams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs, p. 94, "A Sailor's Life" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #91, "The Sailor Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, pp. 74-75, "Sweet William" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #43, "Early, Early All in the Spring" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 110, "Sweet William (The Sailor Boy)" (3 texts plus mention of 6 more)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol2, pp. 86-87, "A Sailor's Life" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, pp. 135-136, "O Father, Build Me a Boat" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 104, "The Sailor Boy" (5 texts, mostly short, plus excerpts from 4 more and mention of 2 more and 1 very short fragment; several texts, notably "C," are mixed with "The Butcher Boy"; "E" is a mix with something unidentifiable as only part of the song is printed; "H" is apparently a mix of floating material, only partly printed; "J" is mostly from some unidentified ballad; "L" appears to mix this with "The Apprentice Boy" [Laws M12])
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 104, "The Sailor Boy" (5 excerpts, 5 tunes)
Brown-AlabamaFolKLyric 39, "The Sailor Boy" (2 short texts, 2 tune)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 76, "My True Sailor Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 134-135, "The Sailor Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, p. 88, "The Sailor Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 177-178, "The Soldier Boy" (1 text)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, pp. 61-62, "Soldier Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #41, "The Sailor's Trade is a Weary Life" (1 text, 1 tune)
Carey-MarylandFolkLegendsAndFolkSongs, p. 99, "Sweet Willie" (1 text)
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 39-40, "Sweet William" (1 text, 1 tune, a composite version)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 55, "The Pinery Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 272-273, "A Sailor's Trade Is a Roving Life" (1 text, with the manuscript damaged by water)
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, p. 172, "Oh Captain, Captain Tell Me True (The Sailor Boy)" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Morton-FolkSongsSungInUlster 7, "My Boy Willie" (1 text, 1 tune)
OLochlann-IrishStreetBallads 56, "My Boy Willie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hammond-SongsOfBelfast, p. 34, "My Fine Sailor Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
OCronin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 75, "It Was Early, Early In the Month of Spring" (1 text)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #64, p. 1, "The Sailor's Life"; #148, p. 2, "The Sailing Trade" (1 text plus 1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan6 1245, "The Sailing Trade" (11 texts, 8 tunes)
MacColl/Seeger-TravellersSongsFromEnglandAndScotland 25, "Sweet William" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart1 13, "Early Early in the Spring" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ashton-RealSailorSongs, #63 insert, "The Sailor Boy" (1 text)
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 71, "A Sailor's Life" (1 text, 1 tune)
Heart-Songs, p. 67, "A Song of the Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 97-98, "Sweet Soldier Boy" (1 text)
DT 403, PINERYBY* SAILIFE*
(Excerpts of a sing that is clearly "The Pinery Boy," presumably from Wisconsin although no source is listed)
David C. Peterson, "Wisconsin Folksongs," chapter in _Badger History: Wisconsin Folklore_, State Historical Society of Wisconsin (Volume XXV, Number 2, November 1973), p. 53, "The Pinery Boy" (1 text, 1 tune, which I strongly suspect has been shortened)
Frank Moore, _Anecdotes, Poetry and Incidents of the War: North and South, 1860-1865_, Bible House, 1867, p. 180, "Heart-Rending Boat Ballad" (1 text)
Roud #273
RECORDINGS:
Anita Best and Pamela Morgan, "A Sailor's Trade is a Weary Life" (on NFABestPmorgan01)
Dock Boggs, "Papa, Build Me a Boat" (on Boggs2, BoggsCD1) (a complex version, with this plot but many floating verses, e.g. from "The Storms Are On the Ocean")
Rufus Crisp, "Fall, Fall, Build Me a Boat" (on Crisp01)
John Joe English, "My Boy Willie" (on ITMA/CapeShoreNL)
Dan Hornsby Trio, "A Sailor's Sweetheart" (Columbia 15771-D, 1932; rec. 1931)
Liz Jefferies, "Willie, the Bold Sailor Boy" (on Voice03)
Mikeen McCarthy, "Early in the Month of Spring" (on iIR travellers01)
Maggie Murphy, "Willie-O" (on IRHardySons)
Mrs. Otto Rindlisbacher, "The Pinery Boy" [instrumental] (AFS, 1941; on LC55)
Phoebe Smith, "Sweet William" (on Voice11)
Art Thieme, "The Pinery Boy" (on Thieme04)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(2298), "The Maid's Lament for her Sailor Boy," J. Catnach (London), 1813-1838; also Firth c.12(226), Harding B 11(3375), Harding B 25(1684), "Sailor Boy" ("Down by a chrystal river side"); Firth c.12(227), "The Sailor Boy and his Faithful Mary"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "A Soldier's Life" (lyrics, theme)
cf. "The Deep Blue Sea (I)" (plot)
cf. "Tavern in the Town" (lyrics)
cf. "Darling Johnny O (I)" (lyrics, plot)
cf. "The Croppy Boy (I)" [Laws J14] (tune, per Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster 7)
cf. "Darling Johnny O (I)" (plot, lyrics)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Pinery Boy
Papa, Papa, Build Me a Boat
A Shantymen's Life
I Have No One to Love Me
Captain Tell Me True
The Sailor Boy and his Faithful Mary
Sailin', Sailin's a Weary Life
The Broken Hearted Lover
NOTES [579 words]: Paul Stamler suggests that "The Deep Blue Sea" is a worn-down version of this song. He may well be right (see the notes to that song), but I believe that the characteristic of Laws K12 is the girl's request of a boat. Since "Deep Blue Sea" lacks that feature, I tentatively separate the songs.
The "Pinery Boy" versions are heavily localized to Wisconsin and the lumber business, and could almost be considered a separate song -- except that very many of the lyrics from "The Sailor Boy" still endure.
The "Pinery Boy" versions tend to mention Lone Rock and/or the Wisconsin Dells as the site of this tragedy, but the Wisconsin, River, according to Gard/Sorden, p. 95, was a very dangerous stream for raftsmen for much of its length: "[M]any of these danger spots, still bearing the names given them by the raftsmen, are points of interest along the Wisconsin River. Among these names are Sliding Rock, whose sloping sides make it impossible to gain any foothold; Notched Rock; the Devil's Elbow, a right-angle turn making passage very difficult; and the Narrows, where the River is said to be turned on its side, since its width is only fifty-two feet, and its depth is one hundred and fifty feet."
The whole Dells region must have been difficult, since the river goes through a series of rather sharp bends, and the riverbanks and the bed are rough.
The small town of Lone Rock is not properly part of the Dells; it is several dozen miles downstream, in a marshy, heavily wooded area. But it is on the Wisconsin River (and it has a Lone Rock Cemetery, according to Google Maps, so perhaps our hero was buried there). Ironically, the cemetery (off U. S. Highway 14) seems to be one of the few spots in the area which largely lacks trees.

Lone Rock the town, not surprisingly, is named for a rock named Lone Rock, a sandstone formation on the north bank of the Wisconsin that raftsmen used for navigation -- this far below the Dells, the Wisconsin is fairly straight. but there is a spot near the rock called Devil's Bend, and the current is swift. So Lone Rock was important to let the raftsmen know there were near a tricky place.

The Rock is no longer really visible, according to an online history of the area
(http://tinyurl.com/tbdx-LoneRock). Much of the rock was taken and used for construction.
Lone Rock the town came into being in 1856. The name "Lone Rock" for the sandstone pillar is older, but it seems unlikely that they would have buried the Pinery Boy there had the town not existed.

Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia shows a collector misled by a source. The version is only a single verse, identical to broadside Bodleian, Firth c.12(227), "The Sailor Boy and his Faithful Mary" ("A sailor's life is a merry life"), J.Harkness (Preston), 1840-1866. The singer, in this case, thought this was a returned lover ballad -- from Creighton's title -- of the broken ring type.
Also collected and sung by David Hammond, "Early, Early All in the Spring" (on David Hammond,
"I Am the Wee Falorie Man: Folk Songs of Ireland," Tradition TCD1052 CD (1997) reissue of Tradition LP TLP 1028 (1959)). Like Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster 7, Hammond's version shares its tune with "The Croppy Boy (I)." - BS
The Dan Hornsby Trio recording is included by deduction; I have not heard it. - PJS
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin text is from Kidson,
A Garland of English Folk-songs, pp. 92-93. Only the title is listed in one of Elizabeth Cronin's song lists. - BS
Last updated in version 6.1
File:  LK12

Sailor Boy's Dream, The

DESCRIPTION: "In slumbers of midnight the sailor boy lay," dreaming of home; he and his father see each other with delight. Then he is awakened by lightning and thunder. The masts are gone, the ship is foundering; "around thy white bones the coral shall grow"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1847 (Forget-Me-Not-Songster)
KEYWORDS: sailor ship home father wreck death
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Forget-Me-Not-Songster, pp. 48-50, "The Sailor Boy's Dream" (1 text)
Roud #3691
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Oh Sailor Boy, Peace To Thy Soul
NOTES [59 words]: There is very little sign that this is traditional, but it was printed a lot! Whoever wrote it was pretty clearly thinking of Ariel's "Full fathom five" from Shakespeare's The Tempest (Act I, scene 2; lines 397-405 in the Riverside edition); both have references to bones and coral, and this has a line "full many a score fathom thy frame shall decay. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File:  FMNS048

Sailor Cut Down in His Prime, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer sees one of his shipmates "wrapped up in flannel yet colder than clay."
He dies, and details of the burial are given. His headstone warns sailors, "Never go courting with the girls of the city; Flash girls in the city were the ruin of me."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople)
KEYWORDS: death disease whore burial funeral
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Sailor Dear (The Lovely Sailor; You Maidens Pretty)

DESCRIPTION: "Ye maidens pretty in towns and cities, Come hear with pity my mournful strain." The girl loved a "lively sailor." He is "crossed the ocean," having been pressed. Her father confined her to keep them apart. Now she is free and wealthy and hopes to marry

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1794 (Journal of the Polly)
KEYWORDS: love courting sailor separation pressgang money father prison
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 216-217, "New Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6905
File: HGam216

Sailor in Nagasaki, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, the sailor looked and looked and looked, For Geishas and for sake, And almost gave up looking, when He came to Nagasaki." He finds a girl. The go to dinner. She gets him drunk. He is unable to perform.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe)
KEYWORDS: sailor whore drink sex
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 107-108, "(no title)" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Christopher Columbo" (tune, according to Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe)
File: NiMo107
Sailor in the North Country, A

DESCRIPTION: A sailor and his beautiful wife meet a captain who is smitten with the lady. He summons the sailor and sends him to the West Indies. Within a few days of his leaving the captain makes a pass at the wife, who refuses him and pledges her constancy.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1904

KEYWORDS: virtue adultery love marriage rejection parting separation wife sailor

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
VaughanWilliams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs, p. 93, "A Sailor in the North Country" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1504

RECORDINGS:
George Maynard, "A Sailor in the North Country" (on Maynard1, Voice12)

File: VWL093

Sailor Laddie (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "I've been east and I've been wast" to Dundee and Montrose, "And the bonniest lad that ever I saw" "ploughs the raging sea" and "wears the tarry clothes." "So away with my sailor laddie Away with him I'll go"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan1)

KEYWORDS: love nonballad sailor

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan1 55, "The Sailor Laddie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 16, "The Sailor Laddie (I)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5808

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Jaybird's Altar (I've Been to the East)" (lyrics)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Dundee

NOTES [51 words]: There is a version of "The Gypsy Laddie" very similar to this in feeling and to some extent even in lyrics; I suspect this may be a rewrite of a version of that song. The American playparty we file as "The Jaybird's Altar (I've Been to the East)" appears to be yet a further alteration of this form. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5

File: GrD1055

Sailor Laddie (II)

DESCRIPTION: "My sailor laddie's far away." He sends the singer a letter saying he's coming back, having left his current girl "on the railway track" "I love coffee, I love tea ... " and mother should "hold her tongue For she loved boys when she was young"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c.1925 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)

KEYWORDS: courting return separation playparty mother sailor floatingverses

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 89, "Sailor Laddie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2601

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "She Loves Coffee and I Love Tea" (four lines) and notes there

NOTES [17 words]: Coffee, tea, and mother's tongue are discussed with examples at "She Loves Coffee and I Love Tea." - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: 0pGa989
Sailor Laddie (III), The

DESCRIPTION: "He skips upon the plainsteens, He sails upon the sea, He's a bonny sailor laddie, The lad that I gang wi'." "His jersey's o' the bonnie blue." "I saw ma laddie gang awa... Awa to catch a whale." "He bade me aye keep up ma heart."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)

KEYWORDS: sailor whale separation

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 17, "The Sailor Laddie II" (1 text)

File: Gath017

Sailor Likes His Bottle-O, The

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. "So early in the morning the sailor likes his bottle-o! A bottle of rum, a bottle of gin, a bottle of old Jamaica Ho!" Verses carry on about all the things a sailor might love: women, tobacco, fighting, etc...

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1831 (Alexander)

KEYWORDS: shanty drink sailor

FOUND IN: Britain West Indies US(MA) Guyana

REFERENCES (9 citations):
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 75, "Bottle O!" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 55-57, "So Early in the Morning" (3 texts, 3 tunes) [AbEd, pp. 52-53]
Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, XLVI, p. 51, "The Sailor Loves His Bottle-O" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 100-101, "The Sailor Likes His Bottle-O" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abrahams-DeepTheWaterShallowTheShore, p. 17, "De Neger Like de Bottley Oh" (1 fragment)
DT, SAILBOTL

E.I. Barra, _A Tale of Two Oceans_ (San Francisco: Eastman & Co., 1893 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), p. 84, ("The ladies like Madeira wine") (1 text)
J.E. Alexander, _TransAtlantic Sketches, Vol. 1_ (London: Richard Bentley, 1833 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), p. 131, ("De bottley oh! de bottley oh!") (1 text)

Roud #314

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Sailor Loves

NOTES [219 words]: Barra heard his "hoisting song" text -- "So early in the morning -- The sailor likes his bottle oh!" -- in Rio de Janeiro from a crew fitted out in Philadelphia in 1849. Apparently, the crew was white -- "as villainous a looking twenty men as I ever was shipmates with" -- excluding two Black cooks (pp. 54, 75).

Abrahams's version is quoted from Alexander, who heard his version -- "Right early in de morning, de neger like de bottley oh!" -- in 1831 from Black slaves of a British Guiana estate assigned to row his canoe.

There is a point to these comparisons. This is one of the early deep-water chanteys and there are still open questions about the origins of deep-water chanteys. For example, barring capstan chanteys and forecastle songs, are the call-response and lined-out forms based on African song forms never lost during slavery? To what extent are deep-water chanteys affected by the minstrel theatre, the Black hymns outside the church, the Irish famine, rowing songs, and the hardly ever recorded English work-song tradition. Do we start the clock in Africa, on United States docks where Black stevedores worked and sang in the 18th century, or only when the American packet ships were sailing after the War of 1812. Perhaps "The Sailor Likes His Bottle-O" details can help guide the discussion. - BS

Last updated in version 5.1

File: Hugi055
Sailor Taking Leave of his Mistress

DESCRIPTION: Jamie is leaving Molly to go privateering on the Spanish Shore. He tells her not to worry about the dangers, or that he will find another girl on the Spanish Shore, and that they will marry when he returns. He returns, rich, and they marry

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1869 (Logan-APedlarsPack); in tradition, 1951 (MUNFLA-Leach)

KEYWORDS: love marriage promise farewell home parting return reunion separation travel sea ship lover mistress sailor

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Logan-APedlarsPack, pp. 64-66, "Sailor Taking Leave of his Mistress" (1 text)
Roud #26988

RECORDINGS:
Jack Myrick, "Polly Moore" (on MUNFLA-Leach)

NOTES [103 words]: Logan-APedlarsPack, ignoring the words of the song, thinks this is about war rather than privateering. He writes, "The probability is... that it is referable either to the hostilities commenced by France and Spain against England in 1798, on an alleged violation of the Treaty of Peace of 1763, with regard to the Spanish colonies in South America and to the French subjects in the island of Grenada; or to the war which was declared between Spain and England in 1800, which culminated in the glorious victory of the British fleet at Trafalgar, on 21st October 1805, over the combined fleets of France and Spain." - BS

Last updated in version 4.4

File: ML3STLoM

Sailor Went to Sea, A

DESCRIPTION: "A sailor went to sea ... To see what he could see ... all that he could see ... Was the bottom of the deep blue sea." He goes to "chop, chop, chop," ... to "knee, knee, knee," ... to "toe, toe, toe," ....

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)

KEYWORDS: nonsense playparty sailor

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) Australia

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 144, "A Sailor Went to Sea" (2 texts, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Jean Feldman, Transition Time: Let's Do Something Different (1995 (copyrighted material limited preview "Digitized by Google")) p. 192, "A Sailor Went to Sea" (1 text)
Gwenda Beed Davey and Graham Seal, _A Guide to Australian Folklore_, Kangaroo Press, 2003, p. 151, "(A sailor went to see, see, see)" (1 short text, described as a handclapping game)
Roud #18338

NOTES [86 words]: The second and subsequent verses are completed by replacing "sea" by "chop," then "knee," then "toe," etc. Only the first verse makes sense. In the last verse "A sailor went to sea, chop, knee, toe, ...." See Feldman for an example.

Another rhyme, sharing the first verse, but otherwise different in form and function, is in Frank Rutherford, All the Way to Pennywell (1971,Durham), pp. 38-39, ("I know a lad across the ocean"). Rutherford also reports the first verse as a stand-alone hand-clapping song (p. 77). - BS

Last updated in version 6.1

File: OpGa144

Sailor Who Loved the Spanikin' Gals, The

DESCRIPTION: "A sailor who loved the spankin' gals Sailed off across the seas, He never set his rudder But was guided by the breeze." He searches out girls in every port. In Polynesia he finds a very special girl and asks why she shakes so. She says her bottom itches

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe)
Sailor, The (The Sailor on the Ocean Wide)

DESCRIPTION: "The sailor on the ocean wide Thinks little of his life, He laughs to see the wind and tide Engaged in endless strife." The brave sailor is unconcerned by storm. The ship is well-maintained. The crew sings songs to defy future weather

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1855 (Journal of the Lydia)

KEYWORDS: ship sailor storm nonballad

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, p. 110, "The Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27318
File: HGam110

Sailor's Advice, The (The Land of Delight)

DESCRIPTION: "As you mean to set sail for the land of delight, And in wedlock's soft hammock to swing ev'ry night... Fill your sails with affection, and your cabin with love." Hearers must avoid the "shoals of indifference," or else they will "double Cape Horn"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1807 (The American Songster, according to Thompson)

KEYWORDS: wordplay sailor love marriage warning

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 196-197, "Cape Horn" (1 text)
Roud #V4157

NOTES [54 words]: Although it uses sailing metaphors, this is not a song about sailing, and there is no reason to think the reference to Cape Horn is to the actual place; Thompson believes (correctly, I'm sure) that it is a reference to cuckoldry. Despite Thompson, I really doubt that this was ever traditional. It's just too elaborate. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.0

File: TNY196

Sailor's Alphabet, The

DESCRIPTION: Capstan/pumping shanty; sailors remember the alphabet and tell of their, "merry" lives: "A is the anchor that hangs o'er the bow/And B is the bowsprit that bends like a bow.... So merry, so merry, so merry are we/No mortals on earth like a sailor at sea"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Creighton-NovaScotia)

KEYWORDS: sea ship work nonballad wordplay worksong sailor worker

REFERENCES (13 citations):
Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 52, "The Sailor's Alphabet" (1 text, 1 tune)
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, "The Sailor's Alphabet" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 194-195, "The Sailor's Alphabet" (1 text, incompletely remembered)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 229, "Alphabet of the Ship" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 229, "Alphabet of the Ship" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #25, "The Seaman's Alphabet" (1 text)
Peacock, pp. 885-886, "The Sailor's Alphabet" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 98, "Alphabet Song" (2 texts, 1 tune; the "C" text is "The Logger's Alphabet")
Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, p. 88-89, "Sailor's Alphabet" (1 text, 1 tune)
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 52-54, "The Sailor's Alphabet" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 456-458, "The Bosun's Alphabet," "Old English Chantey" (2 texts, 2 tunes) [AbEd, pp. 341-342]
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 107, "The Sailor's Alphabet" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 125-126, "The Bosun's Alphabet" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #21100

RECORDINGS:
Clifford Jenkins et al, "The Sailor's Alphabet" (on LastDays)
Sam Larner, "Alphabet Song" (on SLarner01); "The Sailor's Alphabet" (on Voice12)
Martin Reddigan, "Sailor's Alphabet" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Capt. Leighton Robinson, "The Sailor's Alphabet" (on AFS, 1951; on LC26)
Leighton Robinson w. Alex Barr, Arthur Brodeur & Leighton McKenzie, "Sailor's Alphabet" (on AFS 4230 B, 1939; in AMMEM/Cowell)
Mrs. Gladys Snow, "The Sailor's Alphabet" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Logger's Alphabet" (subject, form) and references there
cf. "The Bargeman's Alphabet" (subject, form)

NOTES [22 words]: We've cross-referenced this enough that it deserves its own entry, although it's identical in form to "The Logger's Alphabet." - PJS

File: RcTSAlp

Sailor's Christmas Day, The

DESCRIPTION: "Come rouse ye, my lads, though no land we are near, We've old Christmas aboard us to give us good cheer." They have good food and a good captain. They drink to family at home. "Christmastide cheers the heart of a brave British tar."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs)

KEYWORDS: sailor Christmas music food

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 129, "The Sailor's Christmas Day" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V36903

File: PaSe129

Sailor's Complaint, The (The True Character of a Purser of a Ship)

DESCRIPTION: "Of all the cursed plagues that e'er fate did decree... There's none to compare with the purser, that evil Who'se worse than a jailer, a bum or a devil." He supplies rotten food. The sailor curses the purser in complex (and rather learned) ways

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1710 (broadside Douce Ballads 3(85b))

KEYWORDS: sailor hardtimes food curse

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 31, "The Sailor's Complaint, or, the True Character of a Purser of a Ship" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V23540

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Douce Ballads 3(85b), "The saylor's complaint: or, The true character of a purser of a ship, " W. Onley, London, 1689-1709

File: PaSe031
Sailor's Consolation

DESCRIPTION: Two sailors, Barney Buntline & Billy Bowline list the reasons they are lucky to be sailors, comparing the dangers of living on shore with the relatively free life they have. Sometimes has chorus of "With a tow row row-right to me addy, wi' a tow row row."

AUTHOR: Charles Dibdin (1745-1814) (also attributed to Pitt and Hood)

EARLIEST DATE: before 1814

KEYWORDS: sailor ship shore

FOUND IN: US Britain

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 460, "Barney Buntline" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 139, "Barney Buntline" (1 text, 1 tune)
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 105-107, "Nauticle Filosophy (Barney Buntline)"; "Nautical Philosophy" (2 texts, 1 tune)

Roud #12825

NOTES [78 words]: Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas gives some references, in particular that the tune for this was taken by a Prof. J. Glyn-Davies and turned into a Welsh sailors’ song (also known as a children's song) "Can Huw Puw." Glyn-Davies seemed to believe that the original song was quite old and that the tune was also used in a song, "Miss Tickle Toby" which dates to the 16th century. - SL

For more on probable author Charles Dibdin, see the notes to "Blow High Blow Low." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: Hugi460A

Sailor's Farewell (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "Fare thee well my dearest friend, Thy husband now must go To greet his native element Where winds and tempests blow." The sailor blesses his wife and girls; his wish is that they find joy. They look forward to the port "where storms will cease to blow"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1833 (Journal of the Lotos)

KEYWORDS: sailor wife children separation

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, p. 125, "The Sailor's Farewell" (1 text, 2 tunes)

Roud #27319

File: HGam125

Sailor's Frolic, The (Tit for Tat)

DESCRIPTION: A sea captain lusts after the wife of one of his sailors. He offers her 50 guineas to sleep with him while he supposes her husband is away. The sailor, as they are in bed, steals the captain's clothes and makes love to the captain's wife.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1841 (broadside Bodleian Harding B 25(1920))

KEYWORDS: sailor trick adultery sex disguise

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 55, "A New Song, called the Frolicsome Sea Captain, or Tit for Tat" (1 text)

Roud #12545

BROADSIDES:

File: PaSe055
Sailor's Grave, The

DESCRIPTION: "Our bark was far, oh, far from land, When the fairest of our gallant band Grew deadly pale and pined away." Lacking "costly winding sheets," they wrap the dead man in his hammock and a flag and sadly bury him at sea

AUTHOR: Words: Eliza Cook / Music: John C. Baker

EARLIEST DATE: 1845 (broadside, LOC Sheet sm1845 402000)

KEYWORDS: sea sailor death funeral burial

FOUND IN: US(MW,SE) Canada(Mar) Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber)) Australia

REFERENCES (11 citations):
- Greig/Duncan 1 68, "The Sailor's Grave" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Williams-Witshire-WSRO Mi 700, "Sailor's Grave" (1 text)
- Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 160-162, "The Sailor's Grave" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, pp. 162-163, "The Sailor's Grave" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 121-122, "The Sailor's Grave" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 55, "The Sailor's Grave" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 155, "A Sailor's Grave" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, p. 47, "Sailor's Burial at Sea" (1 text)
- Scott-ACollectorsNotebook-31TraditionalSongs, p. 31, "The Sailor's Grave" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2053, p. 138, "The Sailor's Grave" (1 reference)

Sailor's New Leg, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer was a sailor at Trafalgar. With Nelson on the foredeck, he lost a leg to a cannonball. Dr Keg replaced it with one from "fighting Jim." Immediately he returned to the fight "and flew aboard the Frenchman like a rocket O!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan1)

KEYWORDS: battle navy humorous sailor

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
- Oct 21, 1805 - Battle of Trafalgar

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Greig/Duncan 1 147, "The Sailor's New Leg" (1 text)

Roud #5822

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- Oh My Comrades You Must Know

NOTES [61 words]: It probably goes without saying that the physician on the Victory was not named "Dr. Keg." John Keegan, The Price of Admiralty: The Evolution of Naval Warfare, Penguin, 1988, 1990, p. 102, states that the surgeon who was with Nelson in his last hours was Doctor William Beatty. In addition, Nelson at least was not killed by a cannonball but by a musket round. - RBW
Sailor's Plea, The (Dear Sweetheart)

DESCRIPTION: "Dear sweetheart, as I write to you, My heart is filled with pain, For if these things... are true, I'll never see you again." The singer says, if she weds another, "My boat will never land." He recalls his work for her. He learns she still loves him

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (Henry, collected from Mabel Hall)
KEYWORDS: love separation sailor abandonment
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 151, "The Sailor's Plea" (1 text)
Roud #17050
File: MHAp151

Sailor's Way, The

DESCRIPTION: The sailor tells of all the places he's been and seen: "I've sailed among the Yankees, the Spaniards and Chinese.... But I'll go to the dance hall and hear the music play, For around Cape Horn and home again, oh, that is the sailor's way!"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1913 (Cantterbury [New Zealand] Times, according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)
KEYWORDS: sailor dancing rambling
FOUND IN: US(MA) Canada(Mar) New Zealand
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, p. 109, "The Sailor's Way" (1 short text, reference for tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 386-388, "The Sailor's Way" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, pp. 295-296]
Kinsey-ShantiesOfTheSea, pp. 140-141, "The Sailor's Way" (1 text, 1 tune)
Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, p. 41, "Around the World and Home Again" (1 text)
Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, p. 124, "I've Traded with the Maoris" (1 text, 1 tune, localized to New Zealand)
ST Doe109 (Partial)
Roud #8239
CROSS-REFERENCES:
File: Doe109

Sailors Are All at the Bar, The

DESCRIPTION: "The sailors are all at the bar, They cannot get up to Newcastle, The sailors are all at the bar, They cannot get up to Newcastle, Up wi' smoky Shields, And hey for bonny Newcastle, Up wi..."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1834 (Sharp, The Bishopprick Garland)
KEYWORDS: nonballad sailor
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: [Cuthbert Sharp], _The Bishopprick Garland, A Collection of Legends, Songs, Ballads, &c Belonging to the County of Durham_, 1834 (references are to the 1969 reprint), p. 71, "A South Shields Song" (1 text)
Roud #10954
File: CDBG071
Sailors of the Present Day, The DESCRIPTION: "Now the sailors of the present day, they are all right, They smoke cigarettes and part their hair in front." The sailors on leave use all sorts of modern tricks; "Such going-on are shameful to behold," says the singer who declares "I am a warrior bold"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: sailor clothes travel drugs hair
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 50, "The Sailors of the Present Day" (1 text)
File: Tawn035

Sailors Sailing on the Sea
DESCRIPTION: "There were two sailors sailing on the sea" or "three wee Glasgae molls we can let you see." The singer challenges you to choose a partner: "me" or "the fairest one" or "the one wee moll"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1963 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
KEYWORDS: playparty sailor
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North),Scotland(Bord))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 106, "Sailors Sailing on the Sea" (3 texts, 1 tune)
File: OpGa106

Sailors They Are Going Away, The
DESCRIPTION: "The (sailors/Gloucester Boys/etc.) are going away, They won't be back for many a day, They've put all the girls in the family way, To fight for England's glory."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1985 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: soldier sailor pregnancy
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 145, "The Sailors They Are Going Away" (1 fragment)
Roud #29968
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Gloucester Boys Are Going Away
File: Tawn112

Sailors They Are Such a Sort
DESCRIPTION: Mother: Don't marry a sailor; they drink and whore, spend all their money, and don't care for wife or child. Daughter: I will be "some gallant sailor's wife." Mother: Good idea; "I have been told the very most of them Are clever genteel smart young men"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Mother: Don't marry a sailor; when they are ashore they run around like madmen, drink and whore, spend all their money, and don't care for wife or child; a landsman, on the other hand, has "money to lend." Daughter: We would all marry a sailor if one would have us; I will be "some gallant sailor's wife." Mother: Since you have your mind made up marry one "as soon as you can All the money I have shall be at your command For I have been told the very most of them Are clever genteel smart young men"
KEYWORDS: marriage dialog humorous mother sailor
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople 87, "Sailors They Are Such a Sort" (1 text)
Roud #4739
Sailors' Wives, The

DESCRIPTION: "The first one was the gunner's wife and she was dressed in green, And in one corner of her had she stowed the magazine." Other (sailors') wives also come forward in their colors and show what the have accommodated in their "clothing"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1971 (Folk Songs of Today, according to Palmer)
KEYWORDS: bawdy wordplay sailor clothes colors
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 147, "The Sailor's Wives" (1 text, 1 tune)
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, pp. 56-60, "Four Girls of Plymouth Town"; "Sailor's Wives"; "The Captain's Ball" (3 texts, with a tune for "Sailors' Wives" on p. 151)
Roud #5666
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Four Old Whores" (theme of comparison of body parts)

NOTES [54 words]: Roud lumps this with the "Four Old Whores" family and apparently with "The North Atlantic Squadron." The theme is obviously the same, but the format is so different that I cannot consider them the same song. One may have inspired the other, but whichever one is secondary was clearly created from the ground up. As it were. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: PaSe147

Saint Clair's Defeat

DESCRIPTION: Saint Clair leads an army against the Indians "on the banks of the St. Marie." Hundreds of men are killed. Several noteworthy officers are among the casualties. Victims may be scalped or tomahawked. The rest make their way home as best they can.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1836 (songster, according to Cohen)
KEYWORDS: Indians(Am.) war
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Nov. 4, 1791 - The army of Gen. Arthur St. Clair, the first (territorial) governor of Ohio, is attacked by Indians on the banks of the Wabash.
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, pp. 150-151, "St. Clair's Defeat" (1 text, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 116, "On the Eighth Day of November" (1 text, 1 tune -- though only Eddy's first verse goes with this ballad. Verses 2 and 3 come from "James Ervin" [Laws J15])
Grimes-StoriesFromTheAnneGrimesCollection, p. 102, "Sinclaire's Defeat" (1 text, 1 tune, a copy of a 1938 broadside), p. 105, "St. Clair's Defeat" (1 text)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 393-394, "Sinclair's Defeat" (1 text)
Salt-BuckeyeHeritage-OhiosHistory, pp. 31-32, "St. Clair's Defeat" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4028
NOTES [669 words]: St. Clair's expedition was mounted by President Washington to deal with the refusal of the British to evacuate certain frontier forts. St. Clair was to build a fort on the site of what is now Fort Wayne, Indiana.
Jameson, p. 570, gives this biography of St. Clair, which somehow manages to omit this battle: "St. Clair, Arthur (1734-1818), came to America as a British soldier in 1758. He served under General Amherst at Louisbourg, and distinguished himself at Quebec. Joining the American cause, he accompanied General Sullivan in the expedition to Canada in 1776. He commanded a brigade at Trenton and Princeton. He was appointed major-general and succeeded General Gates at Ticonderoga, which he surrendered [actually, evacuated] in 1777. He fought at Yorktown. He represented Pennsylvania in the Continental Congress from 1785 to 1787, and was Governor of the Northwest Territory from 1789 to 1802."
Congress appointed Arthur St. Clair, a major general of the Revolution, as the [Northwest] territory's first governor" (Peckham, p. 30). In the years that followed, there were many minor, and not-so-minor, fights with the local Indians in what is now western Ohio and Indiana. In one of these, one of the leading officers on the frontier, Josiah Harmar, was badly defeated (Burns/Dunn, p. 100). St. Clair decided to lead a force to avenge the defeat. The Miami indians were the particular target. He was supposed to build a series of small forts, anchored by a large one at the mouth of the Maumee (Peckham, p. 32), i.e. near what is now Toledo, Ohio.

St. Clair's force contained both regulars and militia, and as is typical of the militias of this period, they did not work together well. The militia were expected by the end of June 1791, but didn't show up until September, and were under strength. And the terms of some of their enlistments had expired, so they eft, and St. Clair sent some of his regulars after them while taking the rest of his force on his expedition. They ran into perhaps a thousand men under Little Turtle.

The exact magnitude of the defeat is uncertain; although St. Clair set out with a force variously estimated as from 2000 to 3000 men (including the entire U.S. regular army), he may have lost a thousand of those to disease and desertion along the way. Peckham, p. 33, estimates he had 1400 men when he was attacked, and says, "The militia fled, the guns were abandoned, the regulars were no match for the attackers, and soon the whole army was in retreat."

St. Clair's casualties have been variously estimated as 600 to 900 men. One account, Collins, p. 15, "Forces under the command of the territorial governor, Arthur St. Clair, had been wallop[ed] by the Indian chief Little Turtle in a fight that would come to be known as St. Clair's Defeat. It would go down in history as the worst loss ever to be suffered by white forces in the Indian wars -- and in fact, in terms of casualty rates, one of the worst defeats in all of American military history. Little Turtle's men, numbering fewer than five hundred, had killed 630 American soldiers -- nearly two-thirds of the total force."

Peckham, p. 33, says, "The killed and wounded amounted to 928, the worst defeat suffered by American arms up to modern times. Migration to the West was checked. President Washington was angry and chagrined. He appointed his old comrade Anthony Wayne to command the U. S. Army and reorganize it."

Burns/Dunn, p. 100, says there were 600 casualties, which they calculate as almost half the force. Somehow, St. Clair, despite this, was still on the job for another decade! But it was Anthony Wayne's forces which won the Battle of Fallen Timbers in 1794 and forced a peace, in which the Indians "ceded over twenty-five thousand square miles of eastern and southern Ohio for $25,000 and a $9,500 annuity" (Burns/Dunn, p. 100). A history of mistreatment of the Indians by the United States government had begun.

As "On the Eighth Day of November," this song is item dA30 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW

Bibliography

Last updated in version 5.3
File: E116

Saint George and the Drag-On

DESCRIPTION: "Oh what a dreary place this was when first the Mormons found it; They said no white men here could live...." But Mormon industry has transformed it, and "St. George ere long will be a place that everyone admires."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1966

KEYWORDS: home work

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 26, "St. George and the Drag-On" (1 text, 1 tune)
Saint Helena (Boney on the Isle of St. Helena)

DESCRIPTION: A lament for Napoleon, "gone from his wars and his fightings." His past splendor is contrasted with his current fate. The sorrow of his wife Louisa is alluded to. His death is attributed to the malice of his enemies.

AUTHOR: James Watt? (source: broadside Bodleian Firth c.16(84))
EARLIEST DATE: 1830 (broadside cited by Samuel Lover; see NOTES)
KEYWORDS: exile lament Napoleon death grief
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1815 - Defeat at the Battle of Waterloo forces Napoleon into exile
1821 - Death of Napoleon

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) Ireland US(Ap,MA,MW,NE,SE,So) Canada(Mar,Newf)
REFERENCES (16 citations):
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 209, "The Isle of Saint Helena" (1 text, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 96, "Lonely Louisa" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 146-147, "The Isle of St. Helena" (1 text plus reference to 1 more)
Thompson-APIioneerSongster 30, "Napoleon Bonaparte" (1 text)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 143, "Bony on the Isle of St. Helena" (1 text, 1 tune)
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 205-207, "Bonaparte on St. Helena" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 146, "The Isle of St. Helena" (4 texts, mostly defective)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 146, "The Isle of St. Helena" (3 excerpts, 3 tunes, with 2 of the tunes from C. K. Tillett but the "E" tune, and text, entirely unlike the others)
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 109, "Napoleon" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 173, "Boney's Defeat" (1 text, 1 tune)
Boswell/Wolfe 90, p. 143, "Bonaparte" (1 short text, 1 tune, clearly this but with most of the names badly damaged)
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 111-112, "Napoleon Song," "Bonaparte on St. Helena" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune)
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 83, "Napoleon the Exile" (1 text, 1 tune)
Forget-Me-Not-Songster, pp. 205-206, "Buonaparte on St. Helena" (1 text)
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 102-104, "Napoleon Bonaparte" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, BNYSTHEL * BNYSTHEL2
ST E096 (Full)
Roud #349
RECORDINGS:
Charles K. "Tink" Tillett, "Bony on the Isle of St. Helena" (on USWarnerColl01) [called simply "Bony" on the CD sleeve; the longer title is in the interior notes]

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 205, "The Island of St. Helena," J. Catnach (London), 1813-1838; also Harding B 11(1517), Firth c.16(99), Firth b.34(201), Harding B 11(847) [some words illegible], Harding B 11(1810), Harding B 11(1811), "Isle of St. Helena"; Harding B 25(1716), Harding B 11(3955), "The Island of St. Helena"; Harding B 25(245), "Bonapate's Lamentation at the Island of St. Helena"; Firth c.16(84), "Bonaparte's Departure for St. Helena"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Farewell to Mackenzie" (meter)
cf. "Napoleon's Farewell to Paris" (subject)
cf. "The Royal Eagle" (subject: Marie Louisa's grief for Napoleon)
cf. "The New Bunch of Loughero" (theme: Marie Louise's grief for Napoleon)
"The Removal of Napoleon's Ashes" (theme: Marie Louise's grief for Napoleon)
"The Braes of Balquhither" (tune, per broadside Bodleian Firth c.16(84))

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Napoleon Bone Part

NOTES [539 words]: The grief of Marie Louisa of Austria (Napoleon's second wife) has become the only surviving theme in certain American versions of this ballad. Historically, there is little basis for this; she refused to go into exile with him to Elba, let alone St. Helena.
In fact, even before Napoleon went to Elba, she is reported to have taken General Adam Adelbert Neipperg as a lover. When he came back during the Hundred Days, she not only refused to join him, she wouldn't even allow him to see his son. By the time Napoleon died, Louisa had borne two children to other fathers.
"Mount Diana," referred to in some texts, is properly Diana's Peak, the highest point on Saint Helena (about 825 ft/250 meters above sea level). The link of Diana with the moon clearly reveals that this piece began life as a broadside; someone was using classical analogies.
The "Holy Alliance" is the coalition formed immediately after Napoleon's downfall. Its purpose was to prevent the rise of any Bonapartist pretenders. Ironically for an alliance that called itself "holy," the primary nations involved (Austria, Prussia, Russia; England was not a member) were more regressive than France. In addition, it eventually failed of its purpose, as Napoleon III later took over France.
This song seems to be known mostly from broadsides in Britain; its popularity and firm hold in tradition in the U. S. probably derives from its inclusion in the Forget-Me-Not Songster.

Ben Schwartz brought to my attention the attribution of this song to James Watt found in broadside Bodleian Firth c.16(84). There are two poems on the broadside (which is rare but not unknown), and this one has an extended prose introduction (which is even more rare). What is more, the two songs do not appear to come from the same printing house: "Bonaparte's Departure for St. Helena" appears to be self-published, while the accompanying item, "Napoleon is the Boy For Kicking up a Row," is from one of the Poet's Box outlets (though the exact one has been scratched out).
Is this the original? It lacks one of the six standard stanzas, and there are many verbal differences from the usual texts. Even more curious is the occasional hints of conformity with Scots dialect. I can only say that there appears to have been recensitional activity -- but whether that activity was applied by Watt to create this text, or by the Forget-Me-Not Songster, or by someone else, I cannot tell. I'm not ready to concede authorship on the rather thin basis of one broadside.

That said, it appears that James Moulden accepts the attribution -- at least, he cites it while mentioning Samuel Lover's quotation of parts of the song; see John Moulden, "Ballads and Ballad Singers: Samuel Lover's Tour of Dublin in 1830," -- essay found in David Atkinson and Steve Roud, Editors, Street Ballads in Nineteenth-Century Britain, Ireland, and North America: The Interface between Print and Oral Tradition, Ashgate, 2014, p. 139. - RBW

The ballad is recorded on one of the CD's issued around the time of the bicentennial of the 1798 Irish Rebellion. See:
Franke Harte and Donal Lunny, "The Isle of St Helena" (on Franke Harte and Donal Lunny, "My Name is Napoleon Bonaparte," Hummingbird Records HBCD0027 (2001)) - BS

Last updated in version 6.0
File: E096

Saint James Infirmary

DESCRIPTION: Big Joe McKennedy is in the bar, reporting that he "went down to St. James Infirmary, And I saw my baby there, Stretched out on a long white table...." He gambled, and now must pay. He prepares to die, makes requests for his funeral, (blames the woman)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: disease death funeral drink
FOUND IN: US(MW,SE,So,SW)
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 94, "How Sad Was the Death of my Sweetheart" (1 short text, with few of the familiar words but the correct plot and the "Let her go, let her go" chorus)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 228-231, "Those Gambler's Blues" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 257, "Gambler's Blues" (1 text, 1 tune) Thorp/Fife-SongsOfTheCowboys XIII, pp. 148-190 (29-30), "Cow Boy's Lament" (22 texts, 7 tunes,
Saint John's Girl

DESCRIPTION: The singer happens to be in St John's and meets a pretty girl who drinks his champagne. He buys her a pair of kid gloves. Given a kiss and thinking to score, the singer looks to pawn his gold watch but finds she had already lifted it and his scarf pin.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast)

KEYWORDS: seduction theft beauty trick drink clergy

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

- Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 87, "St John's Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST LLab087 (Partial)

Roud #9975

NOTES [55 words]: Newfoundland had a long history of hostilities between "townies" (residents of St. John's) and "baymen" (people from the outports). I would guess that this started as an outport sailor's warning against the wiles of the people of St. John's. For a song about the problems between baymen and townies, see "Mussels in the Corner." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5

File: LLab087

---

Saint Jonah

DESCRIPTION: "I sent Saint Jonah, I sent him down to the field ah, To see about his horses ah, I had to go after him ah, And you reckon where he as at ah?" He is on a log, playing a corn stalk fiddle and with the singer's wife's big toe

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: music worker
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 171, "Saint Jonah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11363
File: Brne171

Saint Keven and King O'Toole

DESCRIPTION: "Saint Keven once was traveling through a place called Glendalough, He chanced to meet with King O'Toole." The king mourns his sick gander. Kevin cures it for the land over which it flies. The king complains that it's too much land but yields

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster)
LONG DESCRIPTION: "Saint Keven once was traveling through a place called Glendalough, He chanced to meet with King O'Toole." The king calls him a stranger but offers to share his pipe. The king mourns his sick gander. Kevin offers to cure it in return for the land over which it flies. The gander is cured, flies over "twenty miles of land"; the king complains but yields

KEYWORDS: royalty bird disease promise
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 159, "St. Keven and King O'Tool" (1 text)
Roud #31617 and V37545
NOTES [274 words]: Hard to believe this is traditional, but apparently there is an Irish manuscript copy that might be folk (that's Roud #31617), so I index it. This is almost a prototype for legends of Saint Kevin: It happened at Glendalough, it involves an animal, and it has very vague historical roots. David Farmer, The Oxford Dictionary of Saints, fifth edition, 2003 (I use the 2004 paperback edition), p. 302. says of Keven/Kevin: "KEVIN (Coemgen) (d. c.618), founder and abbot of Glengalough (Co. Wicklow). The Latin and Irish lives all date from at least 400 years after his death, tell little about the saint, and were written to further the claims of Glendalough, by then an important monastery and diocese." According to the legends, his family was said to have included Leinster royalty but to have been displaced, and he is said to have been educated by monks. He became a hermit near Glendalough (there are some alleged Kevin sites there, none of which have any demonstrable accuracy). His special skill with birds and animals is reflected in a tale of a blackbird that actually laid an egg in his hand while he prayed, and he stayed still until it hatched successfully. An otter is also said to have brought salmon which fed his community. He is said to have lived to the age of 120. The "King O'Toole" of the song was presumably inspires by Laurence O'Toole. Laurence O'Toole, according to Farmer, p. 314, is historical but not a king and not contemporary with Kevin; born probably 1128, and having spent time at Glendalough, he was Archbishop of Dublin 1162-1180 (i.e. at the time of the English invasion); he himself was canonized in 1225. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.1
File: HMHS159A

Saint Nicholas

DESCRIPTION: "Saint Nicholas was of great post (?)." Three young women are told that they must leave their father, who can no longer care for them. All three pray to Saint Nicholas to be saved from prostitution. He sends arranges for them to find husbands

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1430 (British Museum -- Sloane MS. 2593)
KEYWORDS: money religious marriage gold father children whore MiddleEnglish
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols, #315, p. 218, "Seynt Nicholas was of gret poste" (1 text)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #3034
NOTES [410 words]: This occurs in only one manuscript, but it is a very important one, Sloane 2593, which includes many items which seem to be of folk origin.
Moreover, the poem as it stands appears to contain several errors of memory. The form in most of the stanzas is for all lines of a verse to rhyme, but the first stanza runs
Seynt Nicholas was of gret post [Saint Nicholas was of great post (?), i.e. "high position" ?]
For he worshippid maydenis thre [For he worshipped maidens three]
That wer sent in fer cuntre [That we sent in/to (a) far country]
Common wommen for to be [Common women, i.e. prostitutes, for to be].
Similarly, the fourth verse reads
The eldest dowter swor be bred of qwete [The eldest daughter swore by bread of wheat]
"I haue leuere beggyn myn mete [I would sooner beg my bread]
And getyn me good qwer I may get [And get good where I may get (it)]
Thann ledyn myn lyf in lecheri." [Than live my life in lechery.]
The final line of this verse occurs also in verse five, where it rhymes properly. Thus it appears the original final line of verse four has been forgotten.
These are enough hints of oral tradition that I have indexed the song.
The song is a brief retelling, with the ending almost entirely lost (another hint of oral tradition), of perhaps the most famous story of Saint Nicholas. Philip D. Noble, editor, The Watkins Dictionary of Saints, Watkins Publishing, 2007, p. 173, sums it up as foows:
"When Nicholas heard that a merchant of Patara had lost all his money, thus depriving his three daughters of any prospect of marriage, he went at night with a bag of gold coins and lobbed it through their window. This provided enough for the eldest girl's dowry and she was duly married. Nicholas repeated this action with the second daughter and, when he attempted to secretly provide for the third in the same way, his generosity was discovered by her father who overwhelmed him with grateful thanks."
Sloane 2539 has another carol on Saint Nicolas ("Make ye merie as ye may"/"In Patras, there born was he"; Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols #316; IMEV #1522; DIMEV #2564) which also refers to this incident, as well as to Nicolas raising three clerks who had been executed and "wern in salt"), but that does not have such a folk-type stanza form or show the same signs of folk transmission, so I haven't indexed it (except, indirectly, in this note).
For more on manuscript Sloane 2593, see the notes to "Robyn and Gandeleyn" [Child 115]. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: MsSeyNic

Saint Patrick of Ireland, My Dear!

DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls St Patrick's miracles while the liquor holds out: he arrived mounted on "a paving stone," drank a gallon of liquor from a quart pot, turned mutton to salmon on Friday, and drove out the snakes.

AUTHOR: Dr Maginn (source: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
EARLIEST DATE: 1821 (_Blackwoods Magazine_, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)

KEYWORDS: drink food Ireland humorous supernatural

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 28-33, "St Patrick of Ireland, My Dear!" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Night Before Larry Was Stretched" (tune, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
NOTES [215 words]: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland discusses the miracles in some detail.
Apparently, it was not Patrick himself but a leprous disciple -- refused passage on Patrick's ship by the crew -- who accompanied the ship on Patrick's stone altar thrown into the sea as a float for the purpose. Patrick, at one point, craves meat on Friday but an apparition has Patrick put the meat into water; when the meat turned into fishes Patrick was saved by the miraculous sign from sinning and never ate meat again. Dr Maginn's source for the "facetious" [Croker's term] song is Father Jocelyn who, Croker points out, did not mention the "miracle of the Saint's 'never-emptying can, commonly called St Patrick's pot'." In the last verse the singer wishes that he had such a pot so that he could continue the song. - BS

According to Benet's Reader's Encyclopedia, Dr. William Maginn (1793-1842) was the "Prototype of Captain Shandon in Pendennis by Thackeray." The New Century Handbook of English Literature lists him as the co-founder of Fraser's Magazine, and mentions among his works The City of Demons and Bob Burke's Duel with Ensign Bray. His most popular poem was probably "I Give My Soldier Boy a Blade," though I find myself more intrigued by the title "the Rime of the Auncient Waggonere." - RBW

Saint Patrick Was a Gentleman

DESCRIPTION: "St. Patrick was a gentleman, and came of decent people"; they are named O'Houlihan, O'Shaughnessy... He preached from a high hill and "banished all the varmin!" Vermin's misfortunes are described. He planted turf, brought pigs and brewed good whiskey.

AUTHOR: Henry Bennett and Mr. Toleken (source: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)

EARLIEST DATE: 1814-1815 (according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)

KEYWORDS: drink humorous patriotic religious animal

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 22-27, "St Patrick Was a Gentleman" (1 text)
- O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 105, "St Patrick Was a Gentleman" (1 text)
- Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 154, "Saint Patrick Was a Gentleman" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL:

Roud #13377

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Harding B 16(241c), "St. Patrick Was a Gentleman", T. Birt (London), 1828-1829; also 2806 c.18(277), Harding B 11(3395), Harding B 20(151), Harding B 11(2874), "St. Patrick Was a Gentleman"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Patrick's Day Parade" (opening line)

NOTES [220 words]: The Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland and O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland texts are very close, with a few place and person names changed and verse order changed. Croker would have considered the names of the Saint's parents on his father's side a significant change. Croker has that "His father was a Gallagher, His mother was a Brady"; both texts agree on his mother's side. Croker explains the pedigree: "St Patrick was an Irish [not French, Scotch, Welsh, ....] gentleman. The Gallaghers were a family of consideration in Donegal; the Bradys were the same in Cavan; the O'Shaughnessy, ditto in Galway; and the O'Gradys 'possessed that part of Clare which is now called the Barony of Bunratty.' This 'respectable' pedigree settles the matter."

Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland says that two verses "were subsequent additions by other hands [than Bennett and Toleken]" Those are the verses missing from the broadsides. - BS

The line "Saint Patrick was a gentleman" seems to have been a commonplace; Edward Harrigan used it as the opening of his song "Patrick's Day Parade." For Harrigan, see the notes to "Babies on our Block." "Zozimus" is also credited for a song by this name; for Zozimus, see the notes to "The Finding of Moses."

In this index, Toleken is also responsible for "Judy MacCarthy of Fishamble Lane." - RBW

Saint Patrick's Arrival

DESCRIPTION: Saint Patrick exhortes the Irish to give up poteen and gives them other stuff to drink. They dump his stuff into a puncheon where it mixes with whisky. He tries to ask about the puncheon but they think he said "punch" and so name the drink.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1839 (Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Saint Patrick arrives in Bantry Bay "on the back of a whale" and is greeted by bothoons, spalpeens, and other rustics. He promises to bring them together and rid them of their sins while he entertains them by driving the devil "beyond the Black Sea." Then he exhorts them to give up poteen. He sleeps and, when he wakes, is upset to find them with their cruiskeens and bags filled with whisky. He tries replacing their whisky with "something sweet ... [and]" something sour" while they sleep. When they woke they dumped his stuff into a tub [puncheon] where it mixes with whisky. "By the side of this mixture each man grew a fixture." Patrick is upset at his plan being foiled by this "spawn of Druids." He tries to ask about the puncheon but, in the uproar, only "punch" could be heard. The drinkers assumed that "punch ... is the name of this thing that is drink for a king."

KEYWORDS: drink Ireland humorous religious Devil talltale wordplay

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 16-22, "Saint Patrick's Arrival" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Patrick's Day in the Morning" (tune, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)

NOTES [111 words]: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland: "Explanatory of the Origin of the word 'Punch.'" Puncheon here is taken to be "a large cask of varying capacity" (source: Webster's Third New International Dictionary of the English Language Unabridged, 1976; the same source has "punch, as "a hot or cold beverage ...," with a derivation perhaps from the Hindi or Sanskrit word for five, from "the number of ingredients.") - BS

Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland: "The editor has been told that the author is a gentleman named Wood, an officer of the army; and that, some years since, the song was printed in the Cork Southern Reporter newspaper with the signature 'Lanner de Waltram.'" - BS

File: CrPS016

Saint Patrick's Day

DESCRIPTION: Ask Patrick's protection. He secured Ireland's faith for the Catholic church. We pray for his support for Irish independence. In 1800 Pitt managed parliament's dissolution. Our champions now are Dan O'Connell, Shiel, and tithe opponent Fergus O'Connor.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE:

KEYWORDS: Ireland nonballad political religious

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1759-1806 - Life of William Pitt the Younger, Prime Minister 1783-1801 and from 1804 until his death
1775-1847 - Life of Daniel O'Connell
1794-1855 - life of Fergus (Feargus) O'Connor
1798 - United Irish rebellion causes England to decide on Union with Ireland
1800 - Act of Union passed by British and Irish parliaments, causing a parliamentary Union to take effect in 1801

FOUND IN:
Roud #V39991

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 25(75), "St. Patrick's Day" ("Ye sons of this lovely but ill fated nation"), unknown, n.d.

NOTES [472 words]: The form and last line of each verse suggest that the tune is "St Patrick's Day in the Morning."

Broadside Bodleian Harding B 25(75) is the basis for the description.

The reference "... our noble parliament then was dismembered ... pitt managed ...."[The broadside misses capitalization throughout] is to the 1801 "Act of Union" -- supported by Pitt and Robert Stewart (Lord Castlereagh) -- that formed the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland" and abolished the Dublin Parliament. (sources: Britain and Ireland by Marjie Bloy on the Victorian Web site; Robert Stewart, Lord Castlereagh on the Dukes of Buckingham and Chandos site) The reference to tithe opposition suggests a date for this broadside before the end of "The Tithe War." Daniel O'Connell's Catholic Association was formed in 1823 to resist the requirement that Irish Catholics pay tithes to the Anglican Church of Ireland. The "war" was passive for most of the period 1823-1836, though there were violent incidents in 1831 (source: The Irish Tithe War 1831 at the OnWar.com site) Shiel in this broadside is probably Richard Lalor Sheil, one of O'Connells lieutenants (see Zimmermann, p. 256). - BS

Fergus O'Connor was elected M.P. for Cork in 1832 and 1835 and, in 1832, was involved in passing the Reform Act. (sources: Zimmermann p. 212, "Feargus O'Connor (1794-1855)" at the BBC site) - BS
Saint Patrick's Day in Paris
DESCRIPTION: Let Irishmen and honest men, in Ireland or France, "religiously think 'Tis his duty to drink On St Patrick's day in the morning" War is past. "Can Wellington's glory be ever forgot On the banks of the Seine, or the banks of the Shannon?"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1839 (Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
KEYWORDS: war drink France Ireland humorous nonballad
FOUND IN: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 33-34, "St Patrick's Day in Paris" (1 text)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 33-34, "St Patrick's Day in Paris" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Patrick's Day in the Morning" (tune, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
NOTES [47 words]: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland: "From a manuscript copy in the autograph of Sir Jonah Barrington, endorsed, 'Sung with great applause at a meeting which assembled in the City of Paris, to celebrate the anniversary of the Saint of Hibernia.' This was, probably, the 17th March, 1816." - BS
File: CPS033

Saint Patrick's Day in the Morning (I)
DESCRIPTION: Saint Patrick drove out the witches and necromancers. "This champion of Christ did their magic expel." "He showed ... the right way to live and the true way to die ... On Saint Patrick's Day in the morning"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)
KEYWORDS: Ireland patriotic religious magic
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tunney-StoneFiddle, p. 129, "Saint Patrick's Day in the Morning" (1 fragment)
RECORDINGS:
Jack Myric, "Patrick's Day" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Saint Patrick's Day in the Morning (II)

DESCRIPTION: "On St Patrick's day in the morning" there'll be music, dancing, fine food, and whiskey. St Patrick may not have made the blind to see but "many great things he did for his island." Celebrate the day. "All this to begin, sir, We think it no sin, sir"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1825 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 28(213))
KEYWORDS: dancing drink music Ireland humorous nonballad religious
FOUND IN:
Roud #V21514
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 28(213), "St. Patrick's Day in the Morning" ("Ye lads and ye lasses so buxom and clever"), W. Armstrong (Liverpool), 1820-1824
NOTES [12 words]: Broadside Bodleian Harding B 28(213) is the basis for the description. - BS
Last updated in version 5.1
File: BdSPDIM2

Saint Stephen and Herod [Child 22]

DESCRIPTION: Stephen sees the star of Bethlehem, and tells his master King Herod that he can no longer serve him because he must serve the better child in Bedlam. Herod says that the roasted cock will sooner crow. It does crow, and Herod has Stephen stoned.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1430 (British Library -- Sloane MS. 2593); printed by Ritson 1790
KEYWORDS: religious bird execution MiddleEnglish
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
4 B.C.E. - Death of Herod the Great
(not before) 30 C.E. - Death of Stephen
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (19 citations):
Child 22, "St Stephen and Herod" (1 text)
Bronson 22, "St Stephen and Herod" (1 version)
Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland, pp. 217-218, "St. Stephen and Herod" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's (#1)}
Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland1, pp. 239-241, "St. Stephen and Herod" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's (#1)}
Rickert-AncientEnglishChristmasCarols, pp. 123-124, "Saint Stephen was a Clerk" (1 text)
Hirsh-MedievalLyric-MiddleEnglishLyricsBalladsCarols, p. 126, "Saint Steuene was a clerk in yng erowdis halle" (1 text)
Ritson-AncientSongsBalladsFromHenrySecondToTheRevolution, pp. 121-123, "A Carol for Saint Stephens Day" (1 text)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 107-108, "St. Stephen and Herod" (1 text)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 98, "St. Stephen and King Herod" (1 text)
Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 1, "Saint Stephen and Herod" (1 text)
Gummere-OldEnglishBallads, pp. 295-296+362, "St. Stephen and Herod" (1 text)
Morgan-MedievalBallads-ChivalryRomanceAndEverydayLife, p. 127, "Saint Stephen and Herod" (1 text)
DT 22, STHEROD*
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #3058
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #4761
Karin Boklund-Lagopolou, _I have a yong suster: Popular song and Middle English lyric_, Four Courts Press, 2002, p. 79, "(Saint Stephen and Herod)" (1 text)
Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #255, "A Carol for Saint Stephen's Day" (1 text)
Saint Stephen, God's Knight (I shall you tell this ylke night)

DESCRIPTION: "Of Saint Stephen, God's knight, That preached the faith day and night, He told the Jews, as it was right, That Christ was born of a may." The Jews reject his claim; he argues. They stone him to death; dying, he forgives them and commend his soul to heaven

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1550 (Richard Kele's Christmas Carollers Newly Inprynted)

KEYWORDS: death religious

FOUND IN:
- Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols, #101, pp. 64-65, "(no title)" (2 texts)
- Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #1363.5
- DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #2276

ADDITIONAL: Edward Bliss Reed, editor, _Christmas Carols Printed in the Sixteenth Century Including Kele's Christmas carolles newly Inprynted reproduced in facsimile from the copy in the Huntington Library_, Harvard University Press, 1932, pp. 51-53 ([33-35]), "Of saynt Steyen"; p. 60 [42], "(no title)" (2 texts)

MANUSCRIPT: London, British Library, MS. Egerton 3307, folio 54

NOTES:
This is a curiosity: Richard Kele printed a volume of "Christmas Carols" c. 1545. This is not the earliest printed carol book in English -- Wynkyn de Worde had printed the first some decades earlier -- but it is the earliest to survive relatively intact. Kele's publication has two texts on Saint Stephen. They are clearly the same item, except that the second page of the second copy has been lost, so we don't know how it ended. But although clearly the same item, they are extremely different in detail:
- The one that appears earlier in the book has the burden, "To Saynt Steuen wyl we pray, To pray for vs bothe nyght and day"; the later one has the chorus "Blessyd Stephan, we the pray, Pro nobis preces funde."
- The first one opens "Of Saynt Steuen, Goddes knyght, That preched the fayth day and nyght"; the second, "I shall you tell ylke nyght Of Saynt Stephan, Goddes knyght."
- The second verse of the earlier text has Stephen proclaim the Virgin Birth; this is omitted in the second.
- There are other differences in verse order, which might be more marked if we had all of both texts. It is evident that Kele had two quite distinct source for his two texts. How could such dramatic differences have arisen? Given the possibility that it was by oral tradition, I have indexed the song, despite the lack of field collections.
It should be noted that the longer version has the story of Stephen largely wrong. Yes, he was tried by the Jews for his Christianity, and stoned as a result; this story occupies Acts, Chapter 7. But Stephen never said a word about the Virgin Birth, at least in the account in Acts; the Virgin Birth is found only in the Gospel of Matthew. He did argue with his judges, but not in the way described here. And while Stephen forgave his murderers, he did not say "Forgyve the Jewes theyr trespace And gyue theym grace to se thy face" (though one hopes he would have agreed with the sentiment); what he actually said was, "Father, forgive them, for they do not know what they are doing." This is another indirect hint that this song went through oral tradition; this is a big enough divergence from the Biblical facts that one must suspect the song was written before the Bible was available in English to let the carol writer get it right. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
File: MSSSGK

Saint Thomas of Canterbury

DESCRIPTION: "Listen, lordings, both great and small" as the singer tells "a wonder tale" of the "clerk... of Canterbury." "Knights came from Henry King" to slay Thomas. He died in the "mother church." "Worship ye Thomas in all your life."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1430 (British Library -- Sloane MS. 2593)

KEYWORDS: religious death royalty MiddleEnglish

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1170 - Murder of Thomas Becket in Canterbury Cathedral

FOUND IN: Britain(England)

REFERENCES (9 citations):
Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols, #114, pp. 72-73, "(A, a, a, a, Nunc gaudet ecclesia)" (1 text with variant readings)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #1892
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #3113

ADDITIONAL: Roman Dyboski, _Songs, Carols, and Other Miscellaneous Poems from the Balliol Ms. 354, Richard Hill's Commonplace Book_. Kegan Paul, 1907 (there are now multiple print-on-demand reprints), #40, p. 31, "[The murder of Thomas a Beket]" (1 text)
Carleton Brown, editor, _Religious Lyrics of the XVth Century_, Oxford University Press, 1939, #123, pp. 189-190, "The Martyrdom of St. Thomas" (1 text)
MANUSCRIPT: {MSRichardHill}, The Richard Hill Manuscript, Oxford, Balliol College MS. 354, folio 227
MANUSCRIPT: {MSCaiusCollege383}, Cambridge, Gonville & Caius College MS. 383, page 68
MANUSCRIPT: {MSSloane2593}, London, British Library, MS. Sloane 2593, folio 23
MANUSCRIPT: London (Kew), Public Record Office C 47/34/1/12

NOTES [1679 words]: Greene's _The Early English Carols_ lists four carols about Thomas Becket (the name "Thomas a Becket" is a late distortion; Tyerman, p. 202), #113-#116. This, #114, is by far the most popular, appearing in four different manuscripts; it appears that none of the others appears in more than one, and with the exception of #115, they don't appear in very "folk-ish" manuscripts.

Although this is a carol about an historical character, the text (at least as printed by Greene) has only the most limited actual historical references:
"The gretest clerk of al this lond, Of Cauntyrbery": Becket was Archbishop of Canterbury when he died.
"Knytes kemyn fro Hendry King": Becket was slain by four knights who responded to an outburst by King Henry II.
"Thomeys"/"Thomas": the only real name used by Thomas; he did not like his surname Becket (Tyerman, p. 202).
"Worchepe ye Thomeys": Becket was made a saint soon after his death.
Greene, p. 374, mentions a few other words that match with the chronicles ("altar," "traitor"), but while these are genuine parallels, they frankly struck me as commonplaces. Still, his notes are worth reading.

Thomas Becket was born around 1120, and killed 1170. Thomas, son of Gilbert Becket, was anything but a natural choice for a saint or a bishop: "Chaucer's 'holy, blissful martyr' redeemed a life of fame, conflict, vanitу, pride and failure by being hacked to bits by four probably rather drunk knights one dark December evening in Canterbury Cathedral [and became a legend as a result]....
The reality, however, if not the stuff of legend, is almost that of fiction" [Tyerman, p. 202]. The reference above is to line 17 of the General Prologue of The Canterbury Tales; Chaucer/Benson, p. 23, gives the text of the line as "The hooly blisful martir for to seek" -- i.e. the Canterbury Pilgrims were bound for the shrine of Becket at Canterbury (although the earliest manuscript of the passage, in the Hengwrt manuscript, write the line as "The holy blisful martir..."). Becket -- who was Norman, not English -- had had some education in Paris (Warren, p. 56) and began his career as a mercer and worked for a banker (Tyerman, pp. 202-203; OxfordCompanion, p. 88). In 1145/1146, while in his mid-twenties, he joined the household of Theobald, Archbishop of Canterbury, and proved an adept enough clerk that they sent him off for further education (OxfordSaints, p. 505). He was made Archdeacon of Canterbury in 1154 (Tyerman, p. 203). Henry II (reigned 1154-1189) was the son of Matilda/Maud, the only legitimate child of King Henry I to live to have children; in 1128 she had been mad to marry as her second husband Geoffrey of Anjou. It was not a happy match, but they managed to have three children (Brooke, p. 184; for more on the May-December marriage of Matilda and Geoffrey, see the notes to "A-Growing (He's Young But He's Daily A-Growing)" [Laws O35]). Matilda should have succeeded Henry I when he died in 1135, and her son Henry should have been her heir, but the barons of England, not wanting a queen to rule them, instead chose Stephen, the second son of William the Conqueror's daughter Adela (Brooke, pp. 39-49; genealogy on p. 9 of Warren). Stephen was a disaster; although he won a civil war with Matilda, he simply didn't know how to govern. In the 1150s, the young Henry (born probably 1133) pursue his claim to the throne on his own. In 1152, he married Eleanor of Aquitaine (for more on this, see "Queen Eleanor's Confession [Child 156]" and, again, "A-Growing (He's Young But He's Daily A-Growing)" [Laws O35]). In 1153, he invaded England. Stephen -- who had just lost his oldest son and heir, decided to accept Henry as his heir if allowed to serve out his reign in peace (Wilson, p. 14). In 1154, Stephen died and Henry II became king (OxfordCompanion, p. 888).

When Henry II became King, Theobald for some reason suggested that the worldly Thomas become his Chancellor. He did that job in a rather desultory way, but became Henry's close friend and personal advisor (Tyerman, p. 204). "His zeal in the king's interests, even when they appeared to conflict with the church's, gave Theobald much cause for concern and, not surprisingly, led Henry to believe that Thomas was his loyal friend" (OxfordCompanion, p. 88). Henry found him so good a supporter that he showered him with gifts, and Becket acted more and more like a great magnate, even competing successfully in a tournament (Tyerman, p. 205). A less likely archbishop can hardly be imagined, but when Theobald died in 1161, Henry decided to give the job to his close friend (Tyerman suggests that Theobald would have approved, but OxfordCompanion, p. 88, notes that the tradition was to choose a monk, which Becket was not. Becket himself supposedly warned Henry that choosing him could lead them into conflict; Warren, p. 449).

Becket served in the post from 1162, but Tyerman, p. 206, suggests that the fact that he was now, for the first time, his own boss caused him to lose his discretion. Warren, p. 450, quotes other explanations for why Becket changed -- e.g. he was like an actor slipping into a role. Whatever the reason, Becket went from being Henry's supporter to being Henry's mulish opponent. He fought with Henry even over trivia. By 1163, he and Henry were in open conflict (Becket was trying to assure that priests, no matter what their crime, were protected from secular justice; Wilson, pp. 18-19); in that year, Henry deprived him of the Chancellorship and his secular properties. Even most English bishops disliked his arrogance and obstinacy (Tyerman, p. 207). In 1164, in trouble with a council in England, he fled to the continent and conducted a propaganda effort to get his job back (Warren, pp. 491-494; OxfordSaints, p. 505). He and Henry reached a partial reconciliation in 1170, which let him return home (Warren, pp. 506-507), but Becket hadn't really backed down. Among other things, he started excommunicating people who opposed him, including even the Archbishop of York who had crowned Henry II's son "Henry the Young King," which Beckett thought was his place (OxfordCompanion, p. 88; Warren, p. 502).

Henry II quickly realized that the New Becket was just like the Old Becket (Warren, p. 508). It's not entirely clear what Henry said -- the traditional "Will no one rid me of this turbulent/pestilent priest?" is poorly attested (Tyerman, p. 209; Warren, p. 508), but four knights, Hugh de Moreville, William de Tracy, Reginald FitzUrse, and Richard le Breton, set out to eliminate the problem. (Warren, p. 509, in essence calls them fools; the result probably proves him right.) They may have wanted to arrest Becket, but he would have none of it. The whole situation turned into a farce, with both sides blustering (Warren, p. 510), and when a drunken group of stupid knights bluster, the outcome can't surprise anyone. On December 29, 1170, they cut him down -- incompetently -- and butchered his corpse in Canterbury Cathedral.
"So Thomas Becket came to be regarded as a martyr, and as a saint, and as a folk her. The reality became irrelevant" (Warren, p. 518). (Frankly, this is pretty typical; when famous people were murdered, they became saints, even when they were uncompromising zealots like Becket, or incompetents like Henry VI, or people who just didn't get it, apparently like Edmund of East Anglia.) Tyerman, p. 209, calls it "The single most chronicled death in English history." Supposedly five people who were present wrote about it, John of Salisbury being the most important. The Pope threatened to excommunicate all England, though in the end he moved primarily against the murderers (Warren, pp. 519-520).

Supposedly 703 miracles were recorded by Becket's tomb in the first decade after his death (OxfordSaints, p. 506); little wonder he was canonized in 1173! Henry II did penance at his tomb in 1174, walking there barefoot and in sackcloth and submitting to a scourging (Tyerman, p. 210; Wilson, p. 30; I read somewhere that it is suspected that the flagellation involved was probably something of an act). But in practice, his martyrdom did nothing to advance the liberty of the church (Tyerman, p. 211).

It did, however, all but displace all other Canterbury saints (OxfordSaints, p. 506), making him the object of regular pilgrimages, as in the Canterbury Tales.

"During his lifetime few churchmen thought that Becket's truculence did much to help the cause of Canterbury, of the English church, or of the church in general. Probably no one thought his conduct was that of a saint, even if he had taken to wearing coarse and lice-ridden undergarments. But his murder changed everything. It put Henry in the wrong. It forced him to do penance and make concessions, though none of lasting significance" (OxfordCompanion, p. 89).

It probably won't surprise you that that paragon of royal self-centeredness, Henry VIII, declared Becket a traitor and destroyed his shrine (OxfordCompanion, p. 89). That didn't by itself destroy his cult, but Anglicanism inherently placed less stress on saints than did Catholicism.

Although no longer found in tradition, there is good reason to think that it once was, given its presence in four different manuscripts, two of them quite important, and all the texts substantially different:

- Balliol MS. 354 (folio 222 recto; this is the famous Richard Hill manuscript, with the components written by 1537)
- British Library MS. Sloane 2593, another famous manuscript with many traditional pieces
- Cambridge University, Gonville & Caius College MS. 383 (fifteenth century. Very miscellaneous, with many Latin and French records, although it also has some English carols)
- Public Records Office, Chancery Misc. (fifteenth century; Greene would date c. 1400. Small format, badly stained and damaged. Written by a single hand, with Latin and English sections. Two folios only; the only other piece of possible interest is a short poem about Gabriel and the nativity). For more on manuscript Sloane 2593, see the notes to "Robyn and Gandeleyn" [Child 115].

Bibliography

- Chaucer/Benson: Larry D. Benson, general editor, The Riverside Chaucer, third edition, Houghton Mifflin, 1987 (based on F. N. Robinson, The Works of Geoffrey Chaucer, which is considered to be the first and second editions of this work)

Last updated in version 5.3
File: MSSToCan

Sair Fyel'd, Hinny
DESCRIPTION: "(I/Aw) was young and lusty, I was fair and clear... Mony a lang year." "Sair fyel'd, hinny, sair fyel'd now, Sair fyel'd, hinny, sin' I ken'd thou." The singer looks back on his young days, and admits, at 65, to being both "stiff and cauld."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1834 (Sharp, The Bishopric Garland)
KEYWORDS: youth age
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North),Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOffNorthernEngland, p. 48, "Sair Fyel'd, Hinny" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan3 481, "The Shoemaker at His Last" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: [Cuthbert Sharp], _The Bishopric Garland, A Collection of Legends, Songs, Ballads, &c Belonging to the County of Durham_, 1834 (references are to the 1969 reprint), p. 70, "Sair Fail'd, Hinney" (1 text)
ST StoR048 (Full)
Roud #3062
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Says the Old Man to the Oak Tree" (lyrics)
NOTES [69 words]: At least some versions of this share the lyric "Says t'auld man to th' old tree" ("Says the Old Man to the Oak Tree), also found in Gammer Gurton's Garland, but I don't know if they were initially two which joined or one which split. I very tentatively split them because, well, we're splitters. - RBW
The Greig/Duncan3 version is printed with strokes above the notes indicating a hammer stroke during singing. - BS
Last updated in version 3.1
File: StoR048

Sal and the Baby

DESCRIPTION: "I went down town to see my lady. Nobody's home but Sal an' the baby. Sal was drunk, and the baby crazy; All that comes of being so lazy."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: drink baby
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 44, "Sal and the Baby" (1 text)
Roud #7863
File: Br3044

Sal's Got a Meatskin

DESCRIPTION: "Sal's got a meatskin hid away/gonna get a meatskin someday"; "Sal a-sailing on the sea/Sal got a meatskin a-waiting for me"; more verses along that line.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1930s (recording, Carlisle Bros.)
KEYWORDS: sex virginity bawdy nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol1, pp. 8-9, "Sally Had a Meatskin" (1 text, 1 tune)
Richardson/Spaeth-AmericanMountainSongs, p. 94, "Sal's Got a Meat-Skin" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abernethy-SinginTexas, p. 71, "Sal's Got a Wooden Leg" (1 short text, associated with "Great Big Taters in Sandy Land")
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 63, "Sal's Got a Meatskin" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 156, "Sal Got A Meatskin" (1 text)
Roud #4201
RECORDINGS:
Arthur "Brother-in-Law" Armstrong, "Johnny Got a Meat Skin Laid Away" (AFS 3979 A2, 1940)
Cliff & Bill Carlisle, "Sal Got a Meatskin" (Panachord 25639/Vocalion 02740 [as Clifford Bros.], 1934; rec. 1933; on TimesAint03)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Sal Got a Meatskin" (on NLCR03, NLCR11, NLCRCD1)
Saladin's Crew

DESCRIPTION: Hazelton is waiting to be hanged. He hopes his parents do not hear of his death. He prays that God "can pardon us all ... Even Fielding ... that proved my downfall" He thinks of his youth and the girl "who taught me to love in a far distant land"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Creighton-NovaScotia)

KEYWORDS: ship mutiny execution farewell

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1844 - the former pirate Fielding convinces part of the crew of the "Saladin" to mutiny against the harsh Captain Mackenzie. The conspirators then turn against Fielding; they are taken and executed after the ship is wrecked off Halifax

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 111, "Saladin's Crew" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST CrNS111 (Partial)
Roud #1818

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "George Jones" [Laws D20] (subject)

NOTES [96 words]: This song is item dD45 in Laws's Appendix II. Another of the Saladin conspirators speaks out (cf. "Charles Augustus (or Gustavus) Anderson [Laws D19]" and "George Jones [Laws D20]"). Here is John Hazelton. Hazelton -- like Anderson and Jones -- was convicted and hanged. Has William Trevaskiss, the fourth of the hanged mutineers, a ballad as well? (Source: Pirates of Canada by Cindy Vallar on the Pirates and Privateers site for the History of Maritime Piracy) - BS
For details on the Saladin Mutiny, see the notes to "Charles Augustus (or Gustavus) Anderson" [Laws D19] - RBW

File: CrNS111

Salangadou

DESCRIPTION: Creole French. "Salangadou-ou-ou (x3), Salangadou, Cote piti fille la ye, Salangadou, Salangadou?" "Salangadou, where is my little girl gone, Salangadou?"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Peterson, "Creole Songs from New Orleans")

KEYWORDS: children separation foreignlanguage nonballad

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, p. 223, "Salangadou" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 339, "Salangadou" (1 text)
DT, SALANGDU*

File: LxA223

Sale of a Wife

DESCRIPTION: A (ship carpenter), hard up for money for drink and tired of quarreling with his wife, puts her up for sale. After a lively auction, a sailor wins her. He takes her home and they live happily

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: abandonment humorous husband wife sailor
FOUND IN: Ireland Britain
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H226, pp. 511-512, "The Ship Carpenter's Wife" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 253-254, "Cabbage and Goose" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, CARPWIFE
Roud #2898
RECORDINGS:
Eddie Butcher, "The Ship Carpenter's Wife" (on IREButcher01)
BROADSIDES:
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "In Praise of John Magee" (plot)
cf. "Nebuchadnezzar's Wife" (theme)
cf. "The Scolding Wife (V)" (theme: sale of a wife)
cf. "Danny Sim's Sow" (theme: sale of a wife)
cf. "John Hobbs" (theme: sale of a wife)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Auction of a Wife
John Hobbs
Wife for Sale
NOTES [485 words]: The National Library of Scotland site notes that this sort of thing actually did happen, and even includes a broadside (NLScotland, L.C.1268, "Sale of a Wife," W. Boag (?), Newcastle, describing an event of July 16, 1828) allegedly documenting such a sale.
Porter, p. 28, reports, "When divorce was prohibited by both Church and State, husband and wife could separate by the simple expedient of the former selling his partner to another man. The transaction was considered legal provided that more than a shilling was paid for her and that she was put up for sale with a halter around her neck, to indicate that she was being disposed on in the same way as horses or cattle might be." Porter reports several instances over the years, the most recent being in 1972 (!). The latter case, in Northumberland, frankly sounds like a version of the Swapping Song; the man sold his wife for a horse and cart, sold that to get an automobile, and sold that to get a motorcycle.
Palmer, p. 97, tells of an announcement in an Annual Register of 1773 of the sale of one Mary Whitehouse in Birmingham for one guinea. Palmer also has tales of a seller leading his wife by a halter and having to pay toll on the turnpikes. He goes on to cite other instances of the phenomenon. One wishes we had more insight into the feelings of the particular parties.
Briggs, pp.246-247, has a tale in which we do have some insight into how people felt. Titled "The Sale of a Wife," it reminds me a little of the famous "What Do Women Want?" question found in chivalrous tales (see, e.g., "The Marriage of Sir Gawain" [Child 31]). The wife's first husband treated her very poorly, and finally sold her (taking her to market in a halter, which apparently was a required part of the ritual). The second husband brought her home, and when she said, "You've got me and everything about me," he said something to the effect that he wanted only her. And she responded by pulling out a large pouch of money.
Deane/Shaw, p. 55, has a story from an old man (which they did not verify) that, although likely not true, shows how entrenched the custom was: A man would regularly take his wife to an auction and sell her -- and she would go home with the buyer, kill him, and steal his money. Then she would go home and the process would repeat until the wife was killed by the daughter of one of her new husbands.
Simpson/Roud, p. 390, have an article on wife-selling, stating that the practice was known for at least 300 years. It notes, however, that the transaction was usually agreed to quietly by wife and first and second husbands before the public auction. They note the first recorded instance seems to have been in 1553, and also observe that the custom is used in Hardy's The Mayor of Casterbridge. See their bibliography for additional sources on the ritual. Also see Simpson, pp. 95-96, for the examples that she herself assembled. - RBW

Bibliography

• Briggs: Katherine Briggs,British Folktales (originally published in 1970 asA Dictionary of British Folk-Tales), revised 1977 (I use the 1977 Pantheon paperback edition)
• Deane/Shaw: Tony Deane and Tony ShawThe Folklore of Cornwall, B. T. Batsford, 1975
Salisbury Plain
DESCRIPTION: The singer and a handsome young man adjourn to an inn, eat, drink, and proceed to bed. He promises to support her by highway robbery. The next morning he robs the mail coaches. She laments that he now lies in Newgate Gaol, expecting to be hanged.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1904
LONG DESCRIPTION: While walking on Salisbury Plain, the singer meets a handsome young man. They adjourn to an inn, eat, drink, and proceed to bed. He asks her to undress; she consents, provided he will "keep all those flash-girls away". He consents in turn promising to support her by highway robbery. The next morning, he robs the mail coaches. In the last verse, she laments the fact that he now lies in Newgate Gaol, expecting to be hanged.
KEYWORDS: courting love sex bargaining execution prison robbery lover
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North,South))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
VaughanWilliams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs, p. 95, "Salisbury Plain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople 88, "Salisbury Plain" (1 text)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #47, "Salisbury Plain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1487
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Le petit roysin" (tune; 15th cen.)
cf. "It's Down in Old Ireland" (theme)
cf. "Gilderoy" (theme)
NOTES [27 words]: [The Vaughan Williams] version was collected in 1904; however, the singer clearly knew the song in 1893, when an unsuccessful attempt was made to collect it. -PJS
Last updated in version 3.7
File: VEL095

Salish Song of Longing, A
DESCRIPTION: "Yah-nay ha-nay hay Yah-nay ha-nay Yah-hay ay hee-nay Ah-ah nay-hay. Ah-nay hay-hee-nay-yeh!..." Translation: "Far far away, Far far away, Oh far far away Oh there my heart doth lay,..."
AUTHOR: unknown (English translation by Alan Mills)
EARLIEST DATE: 1912
KEYWORDS: Indians(Am.) separation nonballad foreignlanguage
FOUND IN: Canada(West)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong, pp. 4-5, "A Salish Song of Longing" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [55 words]: Collected by Marius Barbeau from an Indian delegation visiting Ottawa in 1912. Its source was the Salish Indians of the Thompson River in British Columbia. (Salish is actually a language group of about twenty languages, used mostly by the natives of the Pacific Coast area.) The tune was used in the film "The Loon's Necklace." - RBW
File: FMB004

Sally Anne
DESCRIPTION: "Oh where are you going, Sally Anne? (x3) I'm going to the wedding, Sally Anne. Oh shake that little foot, Sally Anne, (x3), You're a pretty good dancer, Sally Anne." Did you ever see a muskrat, Sally Ann...." Other verses are equally unrelated
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1918 (Cecil Sharp collection)
KEYWORDS: dancing nonballad marriage courting animal
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE,So)
REFERENCES (10 citations):
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 240, "Sally Anne" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 63, "Sally Anne" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore 673, "Sally Ann" (1 text, 1 tune)
Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, p. 82, "Sally Ann" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, p. 42, "Sally Ann" (1 text, 1 tune)
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 38, "Sally Ann" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 117, "Sally Anne" (1 text, 1 tune)
Seeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 53, "Sally Ann" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 175, "Sally Ann" (1 text)
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, James Ruchala, "'Sally Ann' and the Blue-Ridge String-band Tradition," Vol. LIV, No. 2 (Fall-Winter 2007), pp. 29-75, "Sally Ann" (fragments of text on pp. 32, 34, 35, 37, 53, 54, 61; tunes on pp. 66-70; most are just a few lines, often fiddlers' mnemonics; some are "hog-eye man" fragments; many might file with "Sally Anne" or "Sally in the Garden")
Roud #3652
RECORDINGS:
Frank Blevins & his Tar Heel Rattlers, "Sally Aim [sic]" (Columbia 15765-D, 1932; rec. 1927; on LostProv1 as "Sally Ann")
Fiddlin' John Carson, "Sally Ann" (OKeh 40419, 1925)
Rufus Crisp, "Blue Goose" (on Crisp01)
The Hillbillies, "Sally Ann" (OKeh 40336, 1925) (Vocalion 5019/Brunswick 105 [as Al Hopkins & his Buckle Busters], 1927)
Clint Howard et al, "Sally Ann" (on Ashley02, WatsonAshley01)
Snuffy Jenkins, "Sally Ann" (on ClassBanj)
Doc Roberts, "Sally Ann" (Perfect 15467, 1931)
Pete Seeger, "Sally Ann" (on PeteSeeger06, PeteSeegerCD01); Sally Ann" (on PeteSeeger18)
J. C. "Jake" Staggers, "Sally Ann" (on FolkVisions2)
George Stoneman, "Sally Anne" [instrumental] (on LomaxCD1702)
Art Thieme, "Sally Ann" (on Thiem01)
Wade Ward, "Sally Ann" [instrumental] (on Holcomb-Ward1)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Great Big Taters in Sand Land" (tune)
cf. "Sal's Got a Meatskin" (lyrics)
NOTES [106 words]: Lomax says that this is the same melody as the fiddle piece "Sandy Land," in turn related to "Sally Goodin." [But Lomax wasn't a fiddler. The tune is related to "Sandy Land" (actually "Great Big Taters in Sandy Land"), but I draw the line at "Sally Goodin." I'm no fiddler, either, but I've backed up a lot of them. - PJS]
Certainly the banal and unrelated verses are what one would expect of a fiddle tune with words added. - RBW
The Rufus Crisp recording, "Blue Goose," is a conglomerate. But as we define it, "Sally Anne" is a song with this pattern, a lot of floating verses, and the name, "Sally Anne." What more do we want? - RBW, PJS.
Last updated in version 6.1
File: SKE63

Sally Around the Corner O

DESCRIPTION: "Sally O, Sally O, Sally around the corner O, All day we'll heave away And it's Sally around the corner O"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (NovaScotia1)
KEYWORDS: shanty work nonballad
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
RECORDINGS:
Joseph Hyson, "Sally Around the Corner O" (on NovaScotia1)
NOTES [133 words]: The current description is all of the NovaScotia1 fragment.

NovaScotia1 Joseph Hyson in the notes: "That was used for heaving up the ship's anchor. There'd be a whole crowd and there'd be a verse, and then we'd join on that chorus. I can't remember the verses."

NovaScotia1 notes: "By both words and tune, Sally Around the Corner O appears to be a different sea chanty from the one known as Round the Corner Sally." I guess this is not "Round the Corner, Sally." Cf. "Round the Corner, Sally" in Stan Hugill, Shanties from the Seven Seas, pp. 297-298. The chorus there is "'Round the corner an' away we'll go, 'Round the corner Sally! 'Round th' corner where them gals do go, 'Round the corner Sally!" In that shanty Hugill says "The 'corner' indicated in this shanty seems to be Cape Horn." - BS

File: RcSATC0

Sally Brown

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Characteristic lines: "Way, hey, roll and go... Spend my money on Sally Brown." The singer describes Sally ("A Creole lady... She had a farm in Jamaica... She had a fine young daughter") and his (unsuccessful) courtship

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Robinson)

KEYWORDS: shanty sailor courting parting

FOUND IN: US(MA, MW) Australia Canada(Mar, Newf) West Indies (Nevis, St Vincent) Britain (England (West))

REFERENCES (27 citations):

- Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 40, "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 74-76, "Sally Brown" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 102-103, "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 33-34, "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune, though most of the lyrics seem to be from "Shenandoah")
- Bone-CapstanBars, pp. 97-98, "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 82, "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 87, 122, "Way Sing Sally," "Sally Brown (Roll and Go)" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 162-166, "Sally Brown," "Tommy's on the Tops'l Yard" (4 texts plus several fragments, 3 tunes) [AbEd, pp. 129-134]; p. 254, "Hilo, Johnny Brown" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, p. 184]

- Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSea, p. 103, "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, XXVIII, p. 33, "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Shay-AmericanSeaSongsAndChanteys, pp. 24-25, "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, p. 207, "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, p. 70, "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)

- Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 24, "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 193-194, "(Sally Brown)" (1 short text)

- Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, p. 94, "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 166, "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)

- Cox-FolkMusicInAnNewfoundlandOutport, p. 55, "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)

- Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, p. 31, "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 108, "Sally Brown" (2 texts)

- Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 160-162 "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Terry-TheShantyBook-Part1, #7, "Sally Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Abrahams-DeepTheWaterShallowTheShore, pp. 60-61, "Feeny Brown"; p. 117, "Roll and Go" (2 texts, 1 tune)

- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 92, "Sally Brown" (1 text)

DT, SALBROWN* SALBRWN2* (SALBRWN3)

Roud #2628
RECORDINGS:
J. M. (Sailor Dad) Hunt, "Sally Brown" (AFS, 1941; on LC02)
Leighton Robinson w. Alex Barr, Arthur Brodeur & Leighton McKenzie, "Sally Brown" (AFS 4231 A2, 1939; in AMMEM/Cowell)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "Roll and Go" (verses)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Roll and Go
Walkalong, You Sally Brown
Stand to Yer Ground

File: Doe074

Sally Buck, The
DESCRIPTION: The singer goes hunting "one cold and winter day." (He tracks "the Sally buck all day." ) Sundry adventures follow; the singer reports "of (15 or 20), ten thousand I did kill." The singer ends "If you can tell a bigger lie, I swear you ought to be hung."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Cecil Sharp collection)
KEYWORDS: animal nonsense supernatural hunting talltale paradox
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE)
REFERENCES (10 citations):
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 159, "Sally Buck" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 70, "The Sally Buck" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 681, "Venison" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Jones-MinstrelofTheAppalachians-Bascom-Lamar-Lunsford, p. 217, "On a Bright and Summer's Morning" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 102-103, "The Crooked Gun" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ritchie-SingingFamilyOfTheCumberlands, pp. 107-109, "[I Went Out A-Hunting, Sir]" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 4, "A Hunting Tale" (1 text, 1 tune)
Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys, pp. 58-60, "A Deer Hunt" (1 text)
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, p. 154, "(As I Rode Out)" (1 text)
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, John Forbes (transcriber), "Songs Collected by Mr. Bascom," Vol. XXV, No. 1 (May 1977 -- special issue for Bascom Lamar Lunsford), pp. 15-16, "On a Bright and Summer's Morning" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3607 and 8053

RECORDINGS:
Bascom Lamar Lunsford, "On a Bright and Summer's Morning" (LOC AAFS 104/AAFS L21) (Rounder LP 0065, 1957) (on BLLunsford01)

NOTES [145 words]: The variation in this song is immense; of the first four versions I saw, the only common element is the fact that the singer is a hunter and that at some point, "of fifteen or twenty" (or four-and-twenty, or some such), "a thousand (or ten thousand) I did kill." The variation is such that Roud files it under two numbers, 3607 and 8053, but I can't see much difference between the two except that #3607, often called "The Sally Buck," seems to be Appalachian and #8053, "A Deer Hunt," is more western.
Along the way the hunter meets various misadventures; these may be borrowed from other songs, and in any case take on local color.
The final stanza, along the line of, "The man who wrote this song, his name was (Benny Young/Bango Bang); If you can tell a bigger lie, I swear you ought (to be hung/to hang)," is characteristic but does not occur in all versions. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1
File: SKE70

Sally Come Up
DESCRIPTION: A song in praise of Sally that manages to stress all her bad features: "Sally has got a lubly nose, Flat across her face it grows, It sounds like thunder when it blows.... Sally come up, oh, Sally come down, Oh, Sally, come twist your heels around...."

AUTHOR: unknown (see NOTES)
EARLIEST DATE: 1859 (sheet music)
KEYWORDS: humorous
FOUND IN: US(MA,MW)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 148, "Sally Come Up" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2056, p. 138, "Sally, Come Up" (3 references)
New-Comic-Songster, pp. 12-13, "Sally Come Up" (1 text, 1 tune)
Heart-Songs, pp. 206-207, "Sally Come Up" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V2841

BROADSIDES:

NOTES [344 words]: The earliest printed text of this piece credits the words to T. Ramsey and the music to E. W. Mackney, and this has been accepted by many authorities, but as early as 1862 other names began to appear. Paskman and Spaeth believe the song to be a spoof of "Sally in Our Alley." - RBW

Having finally read the lyrics to "Sally in Our Alley," I think Paskman & Spaeth are all wet. The only common element is the name "Sally." - PJS

Note that they don't call it a parody; it's just supposed to be based on the same character. Still a stretch, I allow.

There is a parody, though, by a well-known author -- none other than Lewis Carroll! Carroll's diary for July 3, 1862 mentions hearing the Liddell sisters singing this song (obviously implying some amount of oral currency by then):

"[F. H.] Atkinson and I went to lunch at the Deanery [the home of Henry George Liddell, Dean of Christ Church], after which we were to have gone down the river with the children, but as it rained, we remained to hear some music and singing instead -- the three [Lorina, Alice, and Edith Liddell] sang 'Sally Come Up' with great spirit." [Citing DodgsonWakeling4, p. 93.]

In the original draft of Alice in Wonderland, known as "Alice's Adventures under Ground," Carroll had this Mock Turtle's Song (page 84 of the manuscript):

Beneath the waters of the sea
Are lobsters thick as thick can be --
They love to dance with you and me,
My own, my gentle Salmon!
Salmon come up! Salmon go down!
Salmon come twist your tail around!
Of all the fishes of the sea
There's none so good as Salmon!

This was omitted from the final version of Alice's Adventures in Wonderland (replaced by "Will You Walk a Little Faster"), perhaps because it was too much of an in joke between Dodgson and the Liddell sisters.

Cazden et al list a number of other early parodies (including the above, though I originally my information from Martin Gardner's The Annotated Alice, which is more detailed. Gardner's More Annotated Alice, p. 102 n. 3 gives both the text of the parody and parts of "Sally Come Up"). - RBW

Bibliography

Last updated in version 6.0
File: FSC148
Sally Go Round the Moon

DESCRIPTION: "Sally go round the (sun), Sally go round the (moon), Sally go round the (stars),
On a Saturday afternoon."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1898 (Gomme); c.1880 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)

KEYWORDS: travel play party

FOUND IN: Britain (England) Canada (Ont) US (MW, SE)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Carawan/Carawan-AintYouGotARight, p. 112, "Sally Round the Sunshine" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, p. 75, "Sally Go Round the Sunshine" (1 text, 1 tune)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #636, pp. 251-252, "(Sally go round the sun)"
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 111, "Sally Go Round the Sun" (4 fragments, 1 tune)
JournalOfAmericanFolklore, Jean Olive Heck, "Folk Poetry and Folk Criticism, as Illustrated by Cincinnati Children in Their Singing Games and Their Thoughts about These Games," Vol. XL, No. 155 (Jan 1927), #47 p. 27 ("Mary, go round the sun"), (2 texts)
JournalOfAmericanFolklore, F.W. Waugh, "Canadian Folk-Lore from Ontario," Vol. XXXI, No. 119 (Jan 1918), #641 p. 55 "Sally, Go Round the Sun" (1 text)

Roud #11591
File: BGMG636

Sally Goodin

DESCRIPTION: "Had a piece of pie an' I had a piece of puddin', An' I gave it all away just to see my Sally Goodin." About how much the singer loves Sally, how he courts her -- with perhaps a few sundry comments about food and liquor along the way

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (recording, Eck Robertson)

KEYWORDS: love courting nonballad floating verses dance tune

FOUND IN: US (Ap, SE, So)

REFERENCES (14 citations):
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 121, "Sally Goodin" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph 544, "Sally Goodin" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 403-404, "Sally Goodin" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 544A)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 89, "Sally Goodin" (5 fragments, though "D" and "E" might be other songs)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 89, "Sally Goodin" (3 tunes plus text excerpts)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 158, "Sallie Goodin" (seventh of 12 single-stanza jigs) (1 short text)
Cambiaire-EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads, p. 56, "Sally Gooden" (1 text)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol1, p. 18, "Sally Goodin" (1 text, 1 tune)
Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, p. 210, "Sally Goodin" (1 short text, 1 tune)
JonesLunsfor, p. 245, "Sally Goodin" (1 tune)
Abernethy-SinginTexas, pp. 71-72, "Sally Goodin" (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, p. 255, "Sally Goodin" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 33, "Sally Goodin" (1 text)
DT, SALGOODN

Roud #739

RECORDINGS:
Clifford Gross & Muryel Campbell, "Sally Gooden" (Vocalion 03650, 1937)
Fiddlin' John Carson, "Sallie Goodman" (OKeh 40095-A, 1924)
James Crase, "Sally Goodin" (on MMOKCD)
Vester Jones, "Sally Goodin" (on GraysonCarroll1)
Kessinger Brothers, "Sally Goodin" (Brunswick 308, c. 1929)
Neil Morris & Charlie Everidge, "Sally Goodin" [instrumental w. dance calls] (on LomaxCD1707)
John D. Mounce et al, "Sally Gooden" (on MusOzarks01)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Sally Goodin" (on NLCR02) (NLCR16)
Pickard Family, "Sally Goodin" (Regal 8810, 1929; probably the same as Dad Pickard's recording, Banner 6434, 1929)
Fiddlin' Powers and Family, "Sally Goodin" (Victor, unissued, 1924)
Riley Puckett, "Sally Goodwin" (Columbia 15102-D, 1926)
Eck Robertson, "Sally Goodin" (Victor 18956, 1922)
Ernest V. Stoneman "Sally Goodwin" (Edison, unissued, 1927) (Edison 52350, 1928) (CYL: Edison [BA] 5529, 1928) (Edison 0000 [development disk], 1928)
Uncle "Am" Stuart, "Sally Gooden" (Vocalion 14841, 1924)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Cripple Creek (I)" (floating lyrics)
NOTES [16 words]: Another piece that endures mostly as a fiddle tune. Given the lyrics, it's not hard to see why. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File: LoF121

Sally Gray

DESCRIPTION: The singer tells of his secret love for Sally Gray. They are both 17. It vexes him when she sits with others. He remains tongue-tied. If he were rich he'd give her presents. His fortune teller writes her initials. No girls can compare with her.
AUTHOR: R Anderson (1802) (source: Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs) EARLIEST DATE: 1805 (Anderson)
KEYWORDS: love beauty prophecy nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, pp. 8-9, "Sally Gray" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: R Anderson, Ballads in the Cumberland Dialect (Carlisle, 1805 ("Digitized by Google")), #5 pp. 14-16, 126-128, "Sally Gray" (1 text)
Roud #1365
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Mucking of Geordie's Byre" (tune, per Anderson)
File: BrMa008

Sally Greer

DESCRIPTION: The singer's parents "forced me to Americay, my fortune to pursue." As the ship crosses the ocean, he thinks of his beloved Sally Greer. The ship sinks, with only (13) of 350 surviving. The poor survivor hopes to return to Sally
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1957
KEYWORDS: separation love emigration disaster wreck
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong, pp. 92-93, "Sally Greer" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 358-359, "Charming Sally Greer" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST FMB092 (Partial)
Roud #4084
RECORDINGS:
Mrs Mary Ann Galpin, "Charming Sally Greer" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
Martin McManus, "Sally Greer" (on Ontario1)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Glasgow" (theme, plus the girl Sally Greer)
NOTES [49 words]: This song is item dD39 in Laws's Appendix II. It reminds me of Laws K11, "Sally Munroe," but though there are several points of contact, the plot differs somewhat and there do not appear to be common lyrics.
Peacock notes that the various versions give different internal dates: 1833 and 1843. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.6
File: FMB092
Sally Had a Bike and the Wheels Went Round

DESCRIPTION: "Sally had a bike and the wheels went round ... On the last day of September"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1985 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)

KEYWORDS: playparty technology

FOUND IN: Britain(England(West))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame, p. 51, ("Sally had a bike and the wheels went round") (1 text)

File: OpGap51A

Sally In Our Alley

DESCRIPTION: Johnny loves Sally. His master beats him when he stops working to be with her. On Sunday he leaves church early to be with her. When his apprenticeship is over they will marry and leave the alley with its unfriendly neighbors

AUTHOR: Henry Carey (1687-1743 per Wikipedia) (source: see Notes)

EARLIEST DATE: 1783 (Ritson); reportedly written 1718

KEYWORDS: poverty courting love marriage work nonballad apprentice boss

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Heart-Songs, pp. 402-402, "Sally in Our Alley" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #77, "Sally In Our Alley" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2056A, p. 138, "Sally In Our Alley" (2 references)
DT, SALLALLY*

John Burke, _Burke's Christmas Songster 1920_ , self-published, 1918 (PDF available on the Memorial University of Newfoundland site), p. 20, "Sally In Our Alley" (1 text)
The Ulverston New Poetical Miscellany: Containing a Selection of the Most Fashionable Songs, with Many Originals, Not Inserted in Ashburner's Vocal and Poetic Repository, G. Ashburner, Ulverston, 1812 (available on Google Books), p. 111, "Sally in Our Alley" (1 text)
Roud #19807

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads fol. 101, "Sally in our Alley" ( Of all the girls that are so smart ), Laurie and Whittle (London), 1805; also Johnson Ballads fol. 371 View 1 of 2, Firth b.25(177), Harding B 11(3405), 2806 c.16(102), 2806 b.10(4), "Sally in our Alley"
LOCsinging, as112160, "Sally in our Alley", J. Andrews (New York), 1853-1859; also as112180, "Sally in our Alley"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Pretty Sally's Answer" (characters)
SAME TUNE:
What Tho I Am a Country Lass (Scott-EnglishSongBook, pp. 10-11)
Sally in our Alley [parody, "But of all ye songsters in ye land, There's none like Faranelli"] (Scott-EnglishSongBook, pp. 36-37)

Last updated in version 6.0

File: RSCE212

Sally in the Circle

DESCRIPTION: "Miss Sally in the circle and she can't get out (x3), I love Miss Sally Ann." "She got the wiggles when she walks (x3), I love Miss Sally Ann." "Around and around and around she goes (x3), I love Miss Sally Ann."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (Byington/Goldstein-TwoPennyBallads)
Sally in the Garden

DESCRIPTION: Dance tune with chorus "Sally in the garden sifting sand/Sally upstairs with a hog-eyed man"; floating verses: "Chicken in the bread pan kicking up dough"; "Sally will your dog bite, no sir, no/Daddy cut his biter off a long time ago"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Cecil Sharp collection)

KEYWORDS: sex dancing nonballad animal floating verses

FOUND IN: US (Ap, MW, SE, So)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
- Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 67, "Hog-eye" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 232, "Sal's in the Garden Sifting Sand" (1 fragment)
- Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 250, "The Hog-eyed Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 254-255, "Hogeye" (1 text)
- NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, James Ruchala, "'Sally Ann' and the Blue-Ridge String-band Tradition," Vol. LIV, No. 2 (Fall-Winter 2007), pp. 29-75, "Sally Ann" (fragments of text on pp. 32, 34, 35, 37, 53, 54, 61; tunes on pp. 66-70; most are just a few lines, often fiddlers' mnemonics; some are "hog-eye man" fragments; many might file with "Sally Anne" or "Sally in the Garden")
- NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, James Ruchala, "'Sally Ann' and the Blue-Ridge String-band Tradition," Vol. LIV, No. 2 (Fall-Winter 2007), pp. 29-75, "Sally Ann" (fragments of text on pp. 32, 34, 35, 37, 53, 54, 61; tunes on pp. 66-70; most are just a few lines, often fiddlers' mnemonics; some are "hog-eye man" fragments; many might file with "Sally Anne" or "Sally in the Garden")
- NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, James Ruchala, "'Sally Ann' and the Blue-Ridge String-band Tradition," Vol. LIV, No. 2 (Fall-Winter 2007), pp. 29-75, "Sally Ann" (fragments of text on pp. 32, 34, 35, 37, 53, 54, 61; tunes on pp. 66-70; most are just a few lines, often fiddlers' mnemonics; some are "hog-eye man" fragments; many might file with "Sally Anne" or "Sally in the Garden")

ADDITIONAL: James P. Leary, Compiler and Annotator, _Wisconsin Folklore_ University of Wisconsin Press, 2009, article "Kentucky Folksong in Northern Wisconsin" by Asher E. Treat, pp. 247, "Sally in the Garden (1 short text, 1 tune, sung by Mrs. M. G. Jabobs)

Roud #331

RECORDINGS:
- Theophilus Hoskins, "Hog Eyed Man" (AFS, 1937; on KMM)
- New Lost City Ramblers, "Hogeye" (on NLCR03)
- Pope's Arkansas Mountaineers, "Hog Eye" (Victor 21295, 1928)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Roll the Boat Ashore (Hog-eye I)" (many floating verses)
- cf. "The Hog-Eye Man" (words)
- cf. "Granny Will Your Dog Bite?" (words, part of tune)

NOTES [162 words]: This is part of a cluster that includes the bawdy song "The Hog-Eye Man," another Arkansas dance tune "Hogeye" ("Row the boat ashore with a hogeye, hogeye/Row the boat ashore with a hogeye man"), "Granny Will Your Dog Bite" and others. I've used the "Sally in the Garden" title to differentiate the dance tune from the bawdy song, even though they're clearly siblings. - PJS

Paul in fact has strongly suggested merging "Sally in the Garden" and "Roll the Boat Ashore (Hog-eye I)." Roud appears to lump the two. There are verses floating freely between both, which means that fragments often cannot be identified with one or the other. Nonetheless, they appear to me to be different though related songs; the choruses are different, and if all the lyrics float, that is decisive.

Still, one should check the cross-references to be sure to find all the versions.

The mention of a tune from Arkansas is interesting, because Treat notes a town in Arkansas called "Hogeye." - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1

File: CSW067

---

Sally Monroe [Laws K11]

DESCRIPTION: Blacksmith Jim Dixon sends a letter to Sally by a friend. The friend deceitfully hides the letter, but Dixon and Sally later meet and are married. They sail for Quebec, but the ship strikes a rock. Sally is drowned. Dixon lives; he grieves for her parents

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1854 (Broadside, Bodleian Harding B 17(272b))
KEYWORDS: courting trick marriage emigration ship wreck death
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber)) US(MW,NE) Canada(Mar,Newf) Ireland
REFERENCES (15 citations):
Laws K11, "Sally Monroe"
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 303-304, "Sally Monroe" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H571, p. 441, "Sally Munro" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #74, p. 2, "Sally Munro" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan1 23, Greig/Duncan8 Addenda, "Sally Munro" (9 texts, 5 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 115-116, "Sally Munro" (1 text)
Williams-Witshire-WSRO Wt 326, "Sally M'roe" (1 text)
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 57, "Sally Monroe" (1 text)
Peacock, pp. 488-489, "Young Sally Munro" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 36, "Sally Monroe" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 88-89, "Sally Munro" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 142-143,253, "Sally Monroe" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 35-36, "Young Sally Munro" (1 text)
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 90, "Sally Munro" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 402, Salmunro˜
Roud #526
RECORDINGS:
Harry Brazil, "Sally Morrow" (on Voice11)
James Maher, "Sally Monroe" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Patrick Rossiter, "Young Sally Monro" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 17(272b), "Sally Monro/Munro," unknown (Glasgow), 1854
NLScotland, L.C.178.A.2(211), "Sally Munro," unknown, c. 1830-1850; also RB.m.169(128), "Sally Munro"
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Young Sally Monroe
File: LK11

Sally to her Bed Chamber

DESCRIPTION: "Now Sally to her bed chamber this night she made great moan, Saying, 'Jimmie, lovely Jimmie, your pillow is quite alone. How can I rest contented and you so far awa'? Sure I thought I'd lived and died with you in sweet Erin go bragh""

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick)
KEYWORDS: love separation
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 63, "Sally to her Bed Chamber" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #2758
NOTES [34 words]: The current description is all of the Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick fragment.
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick: "This is obviously an Irish song of lament for a husband far away." - BS
File: CrSNB063

Sally Went to Preachin'

DESCRIPTION: 'Sally went to preachin', she shouted and she squalled, She got so full religion she tore her stocking heel." "An a git a long home, nega, nega (x3), I'm bound for Shakletown."
"Somebody stole my ol' coon dog...." "I'm gonna get some bricks...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1919 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: clothes robbery floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
Sally, Let Your Bangs Hang Down

DESCRIPTION: Singer describes former girlfriend Sally; he saw her changing; she caught him peeping. She's run off with Tony. Refr: "Sally, let your bangs hang down"; ch.: "Sally she can land 'em...I'll find out what Sally's got, makes the men think she's so hot"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (recording, Bill Cox & Cliff Hobbs)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer describes Sally, who was his girlfriend, as a hot girl; he saw her changing clothes, but she caught him peeping. She has always left him guessing, and has just run off with Tony. Refrain: "Sally, let your bangs hang down"; ch.: "Sally she can land 'em, she loves 'em and she leaves 'em...I'll find out what Sally's got, makes the men think she's so hot..."

KEYWORDS: jealousy courting sex abandonment bawdy lover clothes

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
DT, SALBANGS

RECORDINGS:
Carlisle Bros. "Sally Let Your Bangs Hang" (Decca 5742, 1939)
Bill Cox & Cliff Hobbs, "Sally Let Your Bangs Hang Down" (Melotone 7-08-70/Conqueror 8883, 1937, rec. 1936)
Maddox Bros. & Rose, "Sally Let Your Bangs Hang Down" (4-Star, n.d.)
Sweet Violet Boys, "Sally Let Your Bangs Hang Down" (Vocalion 05229, 1939; Columbia 20351/Columbia 37774, 1947)

NOTES [11 words]: Barely scrapes by as a ballad, but there is a narrative there. - PJS

File: RcSLYBHD

Sally, Molly, Polly

DESCRIPTION: Hog-calling chant: "Sally, Molly, Polly, O -- Come on -- git cawn! Little in the basket, more in the crib, Come on -- git cawn!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: food animal nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 209, "Sally, Molly, Polly" (1 short text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 209, "Sally, Molly, Polly" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)

File: Br3209

Sally's Cove Tragedy, The

DESCRIPTION: A few days after leaving home, "The rain and fog lay thick all around, the winds did howl and mourn." "Without fire, food, or water in that bitter piercing cold," two boys, Russ and Dennis, die leaving Eli Roberts to mourn.

AUTHOR: George Decker

EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Peacock)

KEYWORDS: death fishing sea ship ordeal

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Salley's Love for a Young Husband

DESCRIPTION: The singer complains that her parents married her to a rich old man. She would prefer a "young man without a penny." When her old man dies she marries a young man who rolls her from the wall but kills her dog and breaks her china.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1813 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 25(955))

LONG DESCRIPTION: Although the singer would rather have a young man, she or her parents apparently find a marriage to the old suitor convenient when he offers Sally such things as a "jaunting car," muslin gowns, china or a lap dog. When her old man dies she marries a young man who rolls her from the wall but kills her lap dog and breaks her china.

KEYWORDS: age marriage sex money dog wife youth bargaining bequest husband youth

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North),Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):

- Greig/Duncan7 1362, "To Row Me frae the Wa" (2 texts)
- Porter/Gower-Jeannie-Robertson-EmergentSingerTransformativeVoice #43, pp. 190-192, "O Haud Your Tongue, Dear Sally" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #99, "Oh, It Was My Cruel Parents" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #2897

BROADSIDES:

- Bodleian, Harding B 25(955), "The Jaunting Cur" ("I have often heard of an old man"), J. Evans (London), 1780-1812; also Firth c.20(74)[some words illegible], Harding B 25(954), "The Jaunting Car"; Harding B 25(953), "The Jaunting Carr" or "Sally's Love for a Young Husband"

NOTES [284 words]: Among the identifying lines you may find in a version are: "It was my cruel parents, that first did me trepan" -- an apparent mangling of ".as you may understand"; the title line that "I'll buy for you a lap-dog To follow your jaunting car"; and the complaint about an old man that "his pipes are out of order And his chanter ne'er in tune."

[The "trepan/trapan" line may be original -- one of the meanings of "trepan" is a trick. So the parents might have tricked the girl. However, this is a rare usage. - RBW]

The title of the earliest Bodleian broadside, "The Jaunting Cur," appears not to be a misprint. When the old man offers to buy her "a little lap-dog To follow you to the fair," she says "I do not value your lap-dog Nor you, you jaunting cur." The answer in later broadside becomes "To the Devil with your Lapdog, Your jaunting car also." In Greig/Duncan7 he buys her the dog and car but her young husband "killed my little wee lap dog and broke my jaunting car."

Greig/Duncan7 1362A tells the essential story. The broadsides may end with the singer's complaint about an old man (Bodleian Harding B 25(955) and Firth c.20(74)), or when she takes a young lover (Bodleian Harding B 25(953)), or with her old man's death and her marriage to a young man, or with her dissatisfaction, after all, with the young man she married (Bodleian Harding B 25(954)).

The advice in the Greig/Duncan7 text is "Far better to be an auld man's pet with servants at my call For you can easily hire a young man to roll you from the wall." This solution to the problem is also in "The Whirley Wha." - BS

As Porter and Gower note, the song may have journeyed from Scotland to Ireland and then back (p. 192). - DGE

Last updated in version 5.3

File:  GrD71362

---

Salmon Fishers

DESCRIPTION: "Cam ye by the salmon fishers? Cam ye by the roperee? Saw ye a sailor laddie Sailing on the raging sea?" The girl may describe the sailor she loves, or how they courted, or how they expect to marry.
Salome

DESCRIPTION: "Down our street we had a little party, Everybody there was all so gay and hearty."
It was uproarious, and they see "Salome, Salome, that's my girl Salome, Standing there with her arse all bare," who has an amazing sexual repertoire

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead)
KEYWORDS: bawdy sex drink party
FOUND IN: Canada

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, p. 178, "Salome" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10490
NOTES [122 words]: I do not know if it is significant that Salome was the name (known from Josephus, not the Bible) of the "daughter of Herodias" who danced before Herod Antipas and so induced him to execute John the Baptist (Matthew 14:6ffff; the best manuscripts of Mark 6:22 make Herodias Herod's own daughter; so B D L 565 -- a short list, but it includes the only two surviving fourth century manuscripts of Mark; the first manuscript to call her "the daughter of Herodias" is from the fifth century). The name "Salome" thus became associated with sexy dancing -- but the Bible never actually says her dance was erotic. Of course, it doesn't mention her name, either -- and what other sort of dancing would so attract Herod's attention? - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: Hopk178

Salonika

DESCRIPTION: "My husband's in Salonika ... I wonder if he knows he has a kid with a foxy head" (;the slackers "puts us in a family way"). When the war's over slackers will have two legs but soldiers a leg and a half. With all the taxes they still can't beat the Hun.

AUTHOR: unknown
The reference is to the First World War. On September 12, 1915 British and French troops attacked Salonika [Thessaloniki] in Greek Macedonia. (source: The Irish in Uniform 1915 The Fame of Tipperary Group at Eircom site); Wikipedia just says "a Franco-British force landed at Salonica in Greece to offer assistance and [unsuccessfully] to pressure the Greek government into war against the Central Powers."

A post-war verse: "Now never marry a soldier a sailor or a marine, But keep your eye on the Sinn Fein boy with his yellow white and green" - BS

The Wikipedia citation strikes me as somewhat more accurate than the Eircom description. The Salonika landing was not really a attack on the Central Powers; it was the preparation for an attack -- an attack that never came off. It was one of the most inefficient operations of the whole inefficient war.

According to Keegan, p. 236, the idea of a landing at Salonika was first suggested in late 1914. But there was no particular need for it at the time -- the idea was to reinforce the Serbs, but the Serbs were doing just fine against the Austrians on their own.

That changed in 1915, when the Germans decided to take care of Serbia. Unlike the Austrians, the Germans were highly efficient. In October 1915, the Salonika invasion gained interest as a way to defend the country where the war had started (Liddell Hart, p. 153). No matter that it mean landing in neutral Greece! (Keegan, p. 255). In all, three French and five British divisions were sent there in 1915 -- too late; Serbia had fallen to a combined attack by the Germans and the Bulgarians (Marshall, p. 186). But the Allies had lost far too many battles by then to want to suffer another propaganda blow; rather than risk admitting defeat; the troops stayed in Greece, where they were allowed to rot and suffer malaria. Indeed, over the years, they were actually reinforced. This even though it would have been almost impossible for them to do anything had they wanted to; Marshall, p. 194, notes that "Salonika was an inadequate Greek port with only a single-track rail line running north into Bulgaria. To the logisticians it was perfectly clear that the locality could not support an advancing field army." He adds that "A few troops on the heights can hold back legions. Withal, the Salonika countryside is terribly unhealthy, malaria-ridden, subject to heavy flooding in winter and intense heat in summer. Why the Allies imagined it a pearly gate to opportunity is one of the war's enduring mysteries."

Worthless as the spot was, the "Army of the Orient" sat there until late 1918. There were no enemies to fight, and the invasion force did not cause the Germans to divert troops; a few Bulgarians sufficed to watch over the whole. Allied casualties to disease were ten times those due to combat, and the Germans are said to have called Salonika "the greatest internment camp in the world."

According to Stokesbury, p. 294, "through most of 1916 and 1917, the Allied commanders [in Salonika] had been more occupied with badgering the Greeks than with fighting the Bulgarians"; in 1917, they even forced the abdication of the Greek king. But they still didn't do anything. It wasn't until September 1918, when the Bulgarian and Austrian armies were collapsing, that the troops in Salonika -- Stokesbury says there were 700,000 of them by this time, including Italians and miscellaneous Slavs -- finally moved. Naturally the Bulgarian army collapsed almost without a fight. Bulgaria signed an armistice on September 29. Theoretically, it was a victory for the Allies; in practice, they had wasted a strong army for two years and subjected it to horrid losses. And, because Salonika was so far from England, communications with home were even worse than in the trenches.

I can't help but think that the Salonika farce was the ultimate proof of the bankruptcy of military command in World War I. There was every reason to think a crisis might arise in Serbia -- it was a country with a violent reputation, hated by Austria and supported by the Russians. Anyone with sense could see that it could entangle the Habsburg and Russian empires -- which, given the nature of the alliance system of the time, could bring in Germany and France also. Yet no one thought about how to reinforce Serbia -- even though it was a land-locked country with no direct connections even to Russia, let alone the sea; the only way to reach it from Britain or France (apart from the routes through Austria) was from the Adriatic through Albania, Greece, or Montenegro -- all very difficult routes due to the mountains. Someone should have made up staff plans, and negotiated with the local states, "before" the war began!

The charge of high taxes during the war is certainly true; the conflict broke the economies of every power involved. The real problem for Britain (and France), though, was the absence of competent generals. Germany had an army that was, man for man, better than that of the Allies (and, initially, much larger), and her generals could at least pull off an attack (as they showed by conquering Serbia and Romania). They didn't entirely understand trench warfare, but the Allies never did cease their tendency to assault trenches. The reference to mutilated soldiers is certainly dead-on; millions of women were left widows, and millions more found their husbands and boyfriends blind or maimed or with lungs damaged by gas. - RBW

Bibliography

- Keegan: John Keegan, The First World War, Knopf, 1999
- Stokesbury: James L. Stokesbury, A Short History of World War I, Morrow/Quill, 1981

Salt Beef
DESCRIPTION: "Salt beef, salt beef is our relief, Salt beef and biscuit bread, oh!" That's the sailor's diet. The sailor asks that those who eat better remember "your old shipmate." Similarly, their hammocks are wet and cold, while those at home sleep warm
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1989 (Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea)
KEYWORDS: sailor food hardtimes
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 141-142, "Salt Beef" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #8355
File: Kins141

Salt Horse Song, The
DESCRIPTION: The singer conducts a dialog with an old horse, which has been salted and sent aboard ship. He is not too thrilled about such a diet, but there is little he can do. He proves that it is horsemeat by showing a horseshoe in the meat barrel
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1851 (Journal of John Gorman of the transport ship Minden)
KEYWORDS: dialog horse ship
FOUND IN: US(MA,NE) Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (10 citations):
Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland, p. 226, "The Salt Horse Song"; pp. 226-227, "Old Hoss, Old Hoss" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 227, "Old Horse, Old Horse" (1 short text)
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 142-144, "Old Horse" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Brown-Maine, p. 194, "Old Horse" (1 text)
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 21-22, "Blow the Man Down (V)" (this last text combines the words of "The Salt Horse Song" with the tune & metre of "Blow the Man Down"); p. 160, "The Sailor's Grace" (2 texts, tune referenced)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 556-557, "The Sailor's Grace" (3 texts, 2 tunes) [AbEd, pp. 393-394]
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 279-281, "Old Horse" (1 text, 1 tune)
Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, p. 44, "Old Hoss" (1 text)
Finger-FrontierBallads, pp. 62-63, "The Poor Old Horse" (1 text, probably this, although it lacks most of the characteristic words and might be "Poor Old Man (Poor Old Horse; The Dead Horse)"; Roud files it with that song)
ADDITIONAL: Frederick Pease Harlow, The Making of a Sailor, or Sea Life Aboard a Yankee Saltpetre Shanty (Slav Ho)

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. "To ol' Callyo we're bound away, (Slav ho!/Oh Roll!) (repeat) We're bound away from Liverpool bay, them puntas o' Chili will grab our pay. Ch: Oh rooooll, Rock yer bars! Heave 'er high-o, rock 'er, oh, rooooll!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1917

KEYWORDS: shanty ship travel

FOUND IN: Britain

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 97, "Slav Ho!" (1 short text, 1 tune-quoting Robinson)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 518, "Saltpetre Shanty" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, p. 377]

Roud #4692

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Drei Reiter Am Thor" (tune)

SAME TUNE:
Drei Reiter Am Thor (File: Colc096)

NOTES [220 words]: See also notes to "Drei ritten am Thor." Robinson gives an alternate refrain with imitative Spanish words "Slav Ho! Slavita, vraimentigo slee-ga, Slav Ho!" which Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen quoted and used to launch her explanation of how one song ends up being a new one. Her supposition being as follows:
Two ships, say, German and British, are moored near each other. The English shantyman hears the German sailors singing an old folk song. He doesn't understand the words, but likes the tune and starts humming or playing it to himself. Then (quoting from Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen) "he let it lie fallow till some words occurred to him would fit it. Naturally, they concerned the part of the world in which he found himself, and it mattered not at all to him that literary landsfolk reserve the term 'Spanish Main' for an different part of the world altogether. When it came to the chorus, he wanted some good rousing nonsense-syllables, and again he borrowed-this time from the Spanish tongue that he heard daily. The sailor was always immensely tickled by the sound of a foreign, particularly a Latin, language, and was given to clumsy paraphrases of it." - SL

For more on saltpeter, and how it made ports like Callao and Ilo very important, see the notes to "Chamber Lye" and "Tommy's Gone to Hilo." - RBW

File: Colc097

Salty Dog

DESCRIPTION: Floating verses linked by the words "Honey, let me be your salty dog," e.g. "Pulled..."
the trigger and the gun said go/Shot rung over in Mexico";"Two old maids lyin' in the bed/One turned over to the other and said/You ain't nothin' but my salty dog."

AUTHOR: Probably Charlie Jackson

EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (recording, Papa Charlie Jackson)

KEYWORDS: sex bawdy nonballad floating verses

FOUND IN: US(SE,Ap)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, pp. 184-185, "Salty Dog Blues" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 79, "Salty Dog" (1 text)
- DT, SALTDOG

ADDITIONAL: Moses Asch and Alan Lomax, Editors, _The Leadbelly Songbook_, Oak, 1962, p. 41, "Salty Dog" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #11661

RECORDINGS:
- Allen Bros., "Salty Dog Blues" (Columbia 15175-D, 1927); "A New Salty Dog" (Victor 23514, 1931; Bluebird B-5403, 1934; Montgomery Ward M-4750, c. 1945; RCA Victor 20-2132, 1947; on GoingDown; "Salty Dog, Hey Hey Hey" (OKeh 02818/Vocalion 02818, 1934)
- Bo Carter [pseud. for Bo Chatmon] "Be My Salty Dog" (Bluebird B-7968, 1936)
- Jimmie Davis, "Davis' Salty Dog" (Victor 23674, 1932)
- Mississippi John Hurt, "Salty Dog" (on MJHurt05)
- Papa Charlie Jackson, "Salty Dog Blues" (Paramount 12236, 1924; Broadway 5001 [as Casey Harris], c. 1930)
- McGee Brothers, "Salty Dog Blues" (Vocalion 5150, 1927)
- Morris Brothers, "Let Me Be Your Salty Dog" (Bluebird B-7967, c. 1938) "Salty Dog Blues" (RCA Victor 20-1783, 1945)
- Paramount Pickers, "Salty Dog" (Paramount 12779/Broadway 5069 [as Broadway Pickers], 1929)
- Jimmy Revard Oklahoma Cowboys, "Dirty Dog" (Bluebird B-6992, 1937; rec. 1936)
- Clara Smith, "Salty Dog" (Columbia 14143-D, 1926)
- Stripling Brothers, "Salty Dog" (Decca 5049, 1934)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Rigby Johnson Chandler" (floating lyrics)
- cf. "Bottle Up and Go" (floating lyrics)
- cf. "Step It Up and Go"
- cf. "Take Your Fingers Off It"
- cf. "Johnny and Jane" (tune)
- cf. "Candy Man" (assorted references)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- A New Salty Dog

NOTES [39 words]: A "salty dog" was a sexual partner. - PJS

In bluegrass circles, this is credited to the Morris Brothers, but the Jackson recording seems to eliminate this possibility. - RBW

Several labels independently credit Jackson as the author. - PJS

_Last updated in version 4.0_
File: CSW184

Salutation Carol, The

DESCRIPTION: "Nowell, Nowell, Nowell, Nowell! This is the salutation of the angel Gabriel."

"Tidings true there be come new, Sent from the Trinity" by Gabriel to Nazareth. He does homage to Mary. She says she will obey whatever her Lord commands

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1537 (Hill MS., Balliol Coll. Oxf. 354)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad MiddleEnglish

FOUND IN: Britain(England)

REFERENCES (13 citations):
- Dearmer/VaughnWilliams/Shaw-OxfordBookOfCarols 36, "The Salutation Carol" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols, #239, pp. 171-172, "(Tydynges trew ther be cum new, sent from the Trinite") (1 text with variants)
- Rickert-AncientEnglishChristmasCarols, pp. 35-36 "Nowell, nowell, nowell, nowell, This is the salutation of Gabriel" (1 text)
Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic I, pp. 30-31, "Nowell, Nowell" (1 partial text, 1 tune)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #3736
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #5952
ADDITIONAL: Roman Dyboski, Songs, Carols, and Other Miscellaneous Poems from the Balliol Ms. 354, Richard Hill's Commonplace Book, Kegan Paul, 1907 (there are now multiple print-on-demand reprints), #49, pp. 39-40, "[Newell, newell, newell, newell, This ys the salutation of Gabryell]")(1 text)
Richard Greene, editor, A Selection of English Carols, Clarendon Medieval and Tudor Series, Oxford/Clarendon Press, 1962, #53, pp. 113-114, "(Nowell, Nowell! This is the salutation off the aungell Gabriell)" (1 text)
Lady Caroline Kerrison, edited with notes by Lucy Toulmin Smith, _A Common-place Book of the Fifteenth Century: A Religious Play and Poetry, Legal Forms, and Local Accounts_, privately printed, 1886, pp. 122-123, "A Carol of the Annunciation" (1 text)
MANUSCRIPT: {MSEngPoetE1}, Oxford, Bodleian Library, MS. Eng. Poet. e.1 (Bodley 29734), folio 41 (first copy); folio 52 (second copy)
MANUSCRIPT: {MSRichardHill}, The Richard Hill Manuscript, Oxford, Balliol College MS. 354, folio 482
MANUSCRIPT: New Haven, Yale University, Beinecke Library MS. 365 [olim Ipswich County Hall deposit, Hillwood; prior Brome Hall, Suffolk], folio 79
NOTES [616 words]: Loosely based on the story of the Annunciation in Luke 1, although there has been a lot of rephrasing along the way.
Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic would date the piece to the reign of Henry VI, which seems not unlikely.
Although no longer found in tradition, this seems to have been popular in the fifteenth and early sixteenth centuries, surviving in three manuscripts. It is in the Hill MS. (Balliol College, Oxford, 354), in Bodleian MS. Eng. poet. e.1 -- twice, in fact, one of them with music (although Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic seems to think this music imperfect, because it cannot be case in perfect triple time -- and in one other copy. The Oxford Book of Carols says that this third manuscript is the famous Sloane 2593, but this appears to be an error; Brown/Robbins lists the third as simply "Hamilton [olim Brome]," which is now New Haven, Yale University, Beinecke Library MS. 365. It is sometimes known as "The Book of Brome." The Yale web page for this manuscript (https://brbl-dl.library.yale.edu/vufind/Search/Results?lookfor=%22Beinecke+MS+365%22&type=CallNumber) dates the manuscript to the last quarter of the fifteenth century; it is old enough that it still uses yogh ( ) in some pieces. Digitized images are available on the Yale web site; a printed edition of the book is Lady Caroline Kerrison, edited with notes by Lucy Toulmin Smith, _A Common-place Book of the Fifteenth Century: A Religious Play and Poetry, Legal Forms, and Local Accounts_, privately printed, 1886; it is available on Google Books.
The book is paper, 81 leave of 8x5/5". There were two scribes who worked on the original manuscripts; about a century later, in the reign of Henry VII, one Robert Melton added notes and accounts records; these have some historical but no literary significance. One of the original scribes added a few ornaments. Now heavily stained. Lucy Toulmin Smith, in the book mentioned above (pp. 1-2) says that the book never mentions Brome, having references to Stuson, Suffolk and a few to Scole, Norfolk. At the time Melton wrote in it, it probably belonged to the Cornwallis family; they certainly held it for several centuries afterward, and were lords of the manors of Stuson, Brome, Okely, and Thranson (Smith, p. 6).
The Yale manuscript doesn't have as many poems as the other two manuscripts of this carol (a long section in the middle consists of account books, legal notes, and the like, occupying folios 45-78); among other things, it contains the 466 line Brome play of Isaac and Abraham, beginning "Father of heaven omnipotent," a 341 line version of "Owain Miles" (a story of the knight Owen, said to be based on "St. Patrick's Purgatory"), a Life of Saint Margaret, a poem of the Fifteen Signs of the End Times, and a several-page Legend of Ipotis (Ypotis). (The DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse lists it as also having the sixteen copies of Chaucer's popular poem "Lak of Steadfastness," but it's not listed by Toulmin Smith in the contents of the manuscript, the Variorium Chaucer and Riverside Chaucer do not mention the manuscript as a witness to Chaucer.) It also contains what appears to be an ancestor or relative of "The Herring Loves the Moonlight (The Dreg Song)," beginning "The hart loveth the wood the hare loveth the hill," That is the first piece in the book; "The Salutation Carol" is near the end (folio 79 out of 81).
Such wide currency, to me, implies that this belongs in the Index, especially given the presence of a tune (one of very few in the Bodleian manuscript).
For more about the famous anthology Bodleian MS. Eng. Poet. e.1 (Bodleian 29734), see the notes to "The Golden Carol (The Three Kings)." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
File: MsSalCar

Salutation, The

DESCRIPTION: "Aroun' Pat Murphy's hearth there was music, song, and mirch" when the traveler comes to the door. She announces the news: "The fairy queen intends for to occupy the Glens" and restore prosperity to Ireland. The Irish will always remember home

AUTHOR: Jaes O'Kane

EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: home Ireland nonballad gods

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H756, p. 60, "The Salutation" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #13366

File: HHH756

Sam Bass [Laws E4]

DESCRIPTION: Sam Bass, a cowpuncher and at first a kind-hearted fellow, turns to train robbery. Betrayed by an acquaintance named Jim Murphy, he is killed by a Texas Ranger

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1888 (Thorp)

KEYWORDS: cowboy death betrayal

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

1878 - Death of Sam Bass near Round Rock, Texas

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,Ro,So,SW)

REFERENCES (26 citations):

*Laws E4, "Sam Bass"

Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 399-400, "Sam Bass" (1 text plus mention of 2 more)

Randolph 142, "Young Sam Bass" (1 text plus a long excerpt, 1 tune)

Hlg, pp. 17-18, "Sam Bass" (1 text)

Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 165, "Sam Bass" (1 text, 1 tune)

Owens-TexasFolkSongs-ted, pp. 123-124, "Sam Bass" (1 text, 1 tune)

Abernethy-SinginTexas, pp. 168-169, "Sam Bass" (1 text, 1 tune)

Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 375, "Sam Bass" (1 text)

Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 422-424, "Sam Bass" (1 text, 1 tune)

Thorp/Fife-SongsOfTheCowboys X, pp. 112-120 (24-26), "Sam Bass" (3 texts, 1 tune); Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys, pp. 135-138, "Sam Bass" (1 text)

Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 95, "Sam Bass" (1 text, 1 tune)

Larkin-SingingCowboy, pp. 158-161, "Sam Bass" (1 text, 1 tune)

Tinsley-HeWasSinginThisSong, pp. 174-179, "Sam Bass" (1 text, 1 tune)

Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 81, "Sam Bass" (1 text, 1 tune)

Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 126-128, "Sam Bass" (1 text, 1 tune)

Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 66, pp. 149-152, "Sam Bass" (1 text)

Welsch-NebraskaPioneerLore, pp. 35-37, "Sam Bass" (1 text)

Finger-FrontierBallads, pp. 66-71, "Sam Bass" (1 text with inserts of recitation)

Burt-AmericanMURDERBALLADS, pp. 199-200, "Sam Bass" (1 short text)

Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 421-422, "Sam Bass" (1 text)

Johnson-BarddyBalladsAndLustyLyrics, pp. 96-98, "Sam Bass" (1 text)

Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 9-10, "Sam Bass" (1 text)

Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 190-191, "Sam Bass" (1 text)

Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 196, "Sam Bass" (1 text)

*Saffel-CowboyPoetry, p. 204-205, "Sam Bass" (1 text)
Sam Cooper

DESCRIPTION: Sam Cooper is "up for a crime," "handcuffed and caught on the house on the hill," tried in Timmum, then Wexford, then Enniscorthy and "they couldn't find me guilty on every degree." He sings, "I'll make this Lar' now repent now for all he has done"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1985 (IRTravellers01)
KEYWORDS: crime manhunt trial
FOUND IN:
Roud #16726
RECORDINGS:
Bill Cassidy, "Sam Cooper" (on IRTravellers01)

NOTES [62 words]: Jim Carroll's notes to IRTravellers01: "It appears to have been exclusive to travellers. We recorded it from three different singers and in each case they told us that Sam Cooper was arrested for stealing oats, though this is not mentioned in any of the versions. They also said he was guilty as charged."
Timmum [Taghmon], Wexford and Enniscorthy are all in Co. Wexford. - BS
File: RcSamCoo

Sam Davis

DESCRIPTION: Sam Davis sits on his coffin and writes a letter to his mother telling her not to grieve and that his father can collect his bones in Pulaski, Tennessee. Union Captain Armstrong cries after the execution because Davis died so bravely.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart1)
KEYWORDS: army Civilwar execution death America soldier mother
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Nov 27, 1863 - Confederate soldier Sam Davis is executed as a spy in Pulaski, Tennessee (Moore; see notes below)
FOUND IN: US(SW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart1 30, "Sam Davis" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #24155
NOTES [40 words]: The details of Davis's capture and execution are in Frank Moore, "Anecdotes, Poetry and Incidents of the War: North and South. 1860-1865" (New York: Bible House, 1867 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")) pp. 403-404, "The Execution of a Spy". - BS
Last updated in version 3.5
File: BrE1030

Sam Griffith

DESCRIPTION: The singer dreams of seeing "Sam Griffith with a darky for a mate." Sam begs for a drink, claiming the squatters don't like a union man. The singer abuses him for his hypocrisy.
Sam leaps to the attack; the singer wakes up

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1953
KEYWORDS: work fight dream discrimination
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 25-27, "Sam Griffith" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: MA025

Sam Hall (Jack Hall) [Laws L5]

DESCRIPTION: (Sam Hall), about to be hanged, bitterly tells his tale, spitting curses all the while -- directing them at the parson, the sheriff, his girlfriend, and the spectators. He is guilty of killing a man, and goes to the gallows still blazing away

AUTHOR: C. W. Ross
EARLIEST DATE: 1719
KEYWORDS: curse execution gallows-confession prisoner punishment

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1701 - Execution of Jack Hall, a young London chimney sweep, on a charge of burglary. His "last goodnight" hawked about as a broadside eventually became the blasphemous "Sam Hall."

FOUND IN: Australia US(Ap,MW,NE,SE,SW) Britain(England(All)) New Zealand
REFERENCES (21 citations):
Laws L5, "Sam Hall"
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 223, "Sam Hall" (1 text+1 fragment, 1 tune)
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 43-48, "Sam Hall" (1 text, 1 tune)
Grison-PenguinBookOfBallads 117, "Sam Hall" (1 text)
Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 81, "Jack Hall" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople 49, "Jack Hall" (1 text, a composite of two versions)
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 78, "Jack Hall" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Bk 18, "Jack Hall" (1 text)
Purslow-TheConstantLovers, pp. 42-43, "Jack Hall" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scott-EnglishSongBook, pp. 84-85, "The Ballad of Sam Hall" (1 text, 1 tune)
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 96-97, "Jack Hall" (1 text)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 133-134, "Sam Hall" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 322, "Jack Hall" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 184-185, "Samuel Small" (1 text, 1 tune)
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, p. 54, "Samuel Hall" (1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 102-103, "Jack Hall"; "Sam Hall" (1 text plus a fragment)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 69, "Sam Hall"; p. 200, "Ballad Of Sam Hall" (2 texts)
DT 420, SAMHALL (TALLOCAN)

ADDITIONAL: Bertrand Bronson, "Samuel Hall's Family Tree," article published in the _California Folklore Quarterly_ (1942); republished on pp. 30-47 of Norm Cohen, editor, _All This for a Song_, Southern Folklife Collection, 2009, discusses "Sam Hall," "Captain Kidd," "Admiral Benbow," and related songs, with all or part of 16 texts and 9 tunes

Reginald Nettel, _Seven Centuries of Popular Song_, Phoenix House, 1956, pp. 203-204, "(no title, but it is a music hall song about "Captain Hall")" (1 text)
Aline Waites & Robin Hunter, _The Illustrated Victorian Songbook_, Michael Joseph Ltd., 1984, pp. 64-65, "Sam Hall" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #369

RECORDINGS:
Emry Arthur, "Ethan Lang" (c. 1930; rec. 1928; on RoughWays2)
Bill Bender (The Happy Cowboy), "Sam Hall" (Asch 410-2/Stinson 410-2/Varsity 5130 [as "Samuel Hall"])
Walter Pardon, "Jack Hall" (on Voice17)
Tex Ritter, "Sam Hall" (Decca 5076, 1935)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(1849), "Jack the Chimney Sweep" ("My name it is Jack All chimney sweep chimney sweep"); J. Pitts (London), 1819-1844; also Harding B 11(2840), Harding B 11(2841), "Jack the Chimney Sweep"; Harding B 15(145a), "Jack Hall"; Harding B 20(27), "Sam Hall Chimney Sweep"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sam MacColl's Song" (tune)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Samuel Hall

NOTES [200 words]: Pills to Purge Melancholy includes new words set to the tune of "Chimney-Sweep," recognizably "Jack Hall." Therefore the song must have already been in circulation by that time, 1719. -PJS

There is also a book, Memoirs of the Right Villanous Jack Hall, a tale of a highwayman, published 1708. I know nothing of the book except its title and that it devotes some time to describing Newgate Prison.

Bronson's article "Samuel Hall's Family Tree" (p. 35 in the Cohen reprint) mentions Kidson's belief that it was the music halls which converted Jack Hall to Sam Hall. (Nettel said one W. G. Ross had a hit with "Sam Hall." ) Jack Hall was a real chimney sweep who was hung in 1701 -- interestingly, the same year that Captain Kidd was hung. The other well-known song of this type, "Admiral Benbow," relates events of 1702. The obvious suspicion is that "Jack Hall," "Admiral Benbow, and "Captain Kidd" borrowed a popular tune and metrical form of around 1700.

Bronson ultimately traces the form back to an item beginning "All my lufe, leif me not," attested in 1567, and also mentions a single line in the famous Complaynt of Scotland of 1549, "My lufe islyand seik, send hym joy, send hym joy." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: LL05

Sam Holt

DESCRIPTION: The singer reminds Sam Holt of the various events of his life: "Oh, don't you remember Black Alice, Sam Holt... [with] teeth like a Moreton Bay shark...." Stories about Sam's courtship amid ants, his cheating and cards, his mining fortune, and his travels

AUTHOR: see notes

EARLIEST DATE: 1857 (Melbourne Vocalist, fifth edition, according to AndersonStory)

KEYWORDS: rambling cards courting Australia

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 46-47, "Sam Holt" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 98-99, "Sam Holt" (1 text, 1 tune)
Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads, pp. 120-121, "A Ballad of Queensland" (1 text)

Roud #9097

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ben Bolt" (tune & meter)

NOTES [111 words]: Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong credits this to one T. D. English, and says it was rewritten by Charles Thatcher.

Patterson/Fahey/Seal credits this to "Ironbar" Gibson, but does not document the source of this claim. Manifold, p. 110, also attributes it to "G. H. Gibson, who wrote as 'Ironbark,'" and says it was originally called "A Ballad of Queensland, the title used in Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads. Davey/Seal, p. 38, says it was "Composed by G. H. Gibson and published in 1881" -- which, however, is a generation after Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong's date. Perhaps Gibson recast it? Whoever wrote it clearly based it on "Ben Bolt." - RBW

Bibliography

• Davey/Seal: Gwenda Beed Davey and Graham Seal,A Guide to Australian Folklore, Kangaroo Press, 2003
• Manifold: John S. Manifold,Who Wrote the Ballads? Notes on Australian Folksong, Australasian Book Society, 1964

Last updated in version 5.2

File: FaE098
Sam MacColl's Song
DESCRIPTION: MacColl, whose penis is so large there is no room for a scrotum, boasts he services the girls until they weary, then tires horses, cows and sheep.
AUTHOR: Attributed to Jim Tully
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 ("Immortalia")
KEYWORDS: bawdy bragging humorous lie
FOUND IN: US(SW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 48-49, "Sam MacColl's Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10177
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sam Hall (Jack Hall)" [Laws L5] (tune)
File: EM048

Sam Simon
DESCRIPTION: "There was old Sam Simon And a young Sam Simon And young Sam Simon will be Sam Simon When old Sam Simon is gone."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1953 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: father children death nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 160, "Sam Simon" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #11356
File: Brne160

Sambo's Right to Be Kilt
DESCRIPTION: "Some tell me 'tis a burnin' shame To make the naygers fight, And that the trade of bein' kilt Belongs but to the white." The soldier declares that he is liberal enough to let Sambo be killed in his place. After all, who do the critics want to be killed?
AUTHOR: Words: "Private Miles O'Reilly" (Charles Graham Halpine) (source: Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar)
EARLIEST DATE: 1864 (sheet music published by William Hall & Son, according to Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar)
KEYWORDS: soldier Black(s) Civilwar nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 328-330, "Sambo's Right to Be Kilt" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: SCWF328

Same House As Me, The
DESCRIPTION: The singer claims that "Many a man... would hang [himself] up... If [he] had half as much trouble as me." He and his wife have a young girl as a lodger; one night, coming home drunk from a concert, the singer goes to sleep in her bed. Mayhem follows.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987
KEYWORDS: husband wife drink adultery humorous
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 269-270, "The Same House As Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: MCB269
Sammy Ain't You Glad You Joined the Navy
DESCRIPTION: "When I was but a little lad, Way down in Joe Batt's Arm, For jigging squids I didn't care... I got a job to join a ship.... Sammy, ain't you glad you joined the Navy." The doctor inspects him. He travels to Halifax and gets in fights
AUTHOR: Johnny Burke (source: Murphy)
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Duke of York Songster, according to Murphy)
KEYWORDS: navy travel humorous
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
NOTES [91 words]: For background on Johnny Burke, see the notes to "The Kelligrews Soiree." The Glencoe, mentioned in the song, is presumably the ship of that name that was a member of the "Alphabet Fleet" that carried traffic around Newfoundland. According to Maura Hanrahan, _The Alphabet Fleet_, Flankers Press Ltd., 2007, p. 4, she was built in 1900, was a ship of 769 tons, and served for more than half a century -- though obviously Burke could not have known that in 1901! For the Alphabet Fleet, see the notes to "The Wreck of the Steamship Ethie." - RBW
Last updated in version 4.4
File: Murp156

Sammy Dead
DESCRIPTION: Jamaican patois: Sammy was killed because he planted corn that flourished and his black neighbors could not stand to see another black man's success. Sammy's end in hell is not his fault.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (Murray-FolkSongsOfJamaica)
KEYWORDS: jealousy theft curse farming magic food hell
FOUND IN: West Indies(Jamaica)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Murray-FolkSongsOfJamaica, pp. 22-23, "Sammy Dead Oh!" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Edric Connor with the Caribbeans and Earl Inkman, "Sammy Dead Oh" (on WEConnor01)
This Is Ska, Film, IVA/Maverick 1989 release, recorded 1964, at https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=MY0L1lcN_2I accessed May 22, 2015.
NOTES [40 words]: By repeating only the first two verses, the Monty Morris ska version avoids verses about black jealousy and about Sammy ending in hell. After his corn planting succeeds, Sammy is killed because of unspecified neighbor envy [via obeah?]. - BS
Last updated in version 3.7
File: JaMu022

Sammy Ring the Bell
DESCRIPTION: "Sammy ring the bell (x2), Four hours on watch is a bloody long spell. Cold, hard and hungry, Bloody nigh dead as well, Ring, you rubber-necked, bootneck bastard, Ring that bloody bell!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: navy sailor hardtimes
Samoa Song
DESCRIPTION: Farewell song in Samoan pidgin. "Goodbye, my felleni, o le a outea, Ae folue le vaa, o le Alii pule mellete. Sometimes with German words also. The sailor will not forget Samoa.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1977 (Hugill-SongsOfTheSea)
KEYWORDS: sailor farewell
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 186, "Samoa Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: HSoSe186

Sampanmadchen, Das (The Sampan Maiden)
DESCRIPTION: German or Swedish shanty. Pidgin English (or in this case, pidgin German), nonsense verses -- "I no likie you-hou, you no-ho likie me-hie." Versions of this were to be found in several languages. Chorus of even more nonsensical syllables.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Baltzer, _Knurrhahn_)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage shanty nonsense China
FOUND IN: Germany Sweden
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 569-570, "Das Sampanmadchen," "En Sjomansvisa Fran Kinakusten" (4 texts-German, Swedish, and English, 1 tune)
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 189, "Sampan Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "Chinee Bumboatman" (some similar verses)
  cf. "Kinakusten" (general feeling)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
En Sjomansvisa Fran Kinakusten" (A Sailor's Song from the China Coast)
File: Hugi569

Samson and Delilah
DESCRIPTION: "Delilah was a woman, fine and fair, Very pleasant looks and coal black hair... If I had my way I'd tear the building down." Delilah tricks Samson out of the secret of his strength; he is captured, but manages to tear the building down.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Rev. T. E. Weems)
KEYWORDS: Bible religious death hair trick lie
FOUND IN: US(SE,So)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 6-8, "Samson" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 251, "Samson" (1 text, 1 tune)
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 49-50, "(If I Had My Way)" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Harold Courlander, _A Treasury of Afro-American Folklore_, Crown Publishers, 1976, pp. 312-313, "(no title)" (1 text)
Roud #6700
RECORDINGS:
Blind Willie Johnson, "If I Had My Way I'd Tear the Building Down" (Columbia 14343-D, 1928; Vocalion 03021, 1935; rec. 1927)
Celina Lewis, "Session with Celina Lewis" (on NFMAla6)
Rev. T. E. Weems, "If I Had My Way I'd Tear the Building Down" (Columbia 14254-D, 1927)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "God's A-Gwine Ter Move All de Troubles Away" (lyrics and theme of the Samson story)
NOTES [165 words]: Most of this story is Biblically accurate. The story of Samson occupies chapters 13-16 of Judges. We may categorize:
* Delilah's beauty (not mentioned; we are only told that Samson loved her; see 16:4)
* Samson's birth: A miraculous event described in chapter 13
* "Strongest man that ever lived on earth": not explicit, but tales of his strength fill most of chapters 14-16
* "He killed three thousand Philistines": No such number is given. We read in 14:19 that he killed 30, in 15:15 of another thousand, etc., and in 16:30 that he killed more by knocking down the building than he had in life.
* The dead lion and the bees: 14:6, 8f.
* "They bound him with a rope" (first occurrence): 15:13
* The old jawbone, etc.: 15:15f.
* Samson told her, "Shave off my hair": 16:17
* "His strength became like a natural man": 16:19
* The final incident, where the blinded Samson is displayed before the Philistines, but has his revenge by pulling the building down on them, is told in 16:23-30. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: LoF251

Samuel Allen [Laws C10]
DESCRIPTION: Samuel Allen is examining a rolling dam on the Rocky Brook. The dam falls apart, and Allen is drowned
AUTHOR: John Calhoun of Bouestown (1848-1939) (per Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi)
EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi)
KEYWORDS: logger death drowning
FOUND IN: US(NE) Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Laws C10, "Samuel Allen"
Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick, pp. 49-53, "Rocky Brook" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi 40, "Rocky Brook" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 716, SAMALLEN
Roud #1944
File: LC10

Samuel Young
DESCRIPTION: Samuel Young, of Kentucky, is courting a girl against the wishes of her father; he arranges to have him sent to the Mexican War. He gets as far as Monterey when he takes sick and dies
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1918 (Cecil Sharp collection)
KEYWORDS: disease grief courting army war parting separation father lover
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 192, "Samuel Young" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, SAMYOUNG*
NOTES [163 words]: The theme of the father having his daughter's unwelcome suitor sent away, pressed into the army, etc., is of course common, but this is one of the few songs in which she doesn't follow him, and he does not return to claim the daughter/fight the father. It doesn't seem to overlap other songs, and I'd guess it was composed by a friend or relative of the fallen soldier. The part of North Carolina where the song was collected is not far from Kentucky. - PJS
The song is definitely curious, since the Mexican War did not involve a military draft. Perhaps the father demanded that the young man join the army as a condition for marrying his daughter? Given the appalling sanitary conditions in armies of this period, it's no surprise that he died of disease.
I strongly suspect the song is modeled on something else. The words make me think of "The Suffolk Miracle," though the tune is close to "Bury Me Not on the Lone Prairie."
The song is item dA34 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW
File: ShAp2192

Samuel's Sister
DESCRIPTION: "Samuel's (sister/brother/mother/...) screaming and hollering (3x), My brother's dead, my brother's dead."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang)
KEYWORDS: death nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang, pp. 262-263, "Samuel' Sistuh" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [18 words]: The description follows Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang but I do not repeat the dialect. - BS
Last updated in version 5.1
File: HPR262A

San Francisco Earthquake, The
DESCRIPTION: "'Twas on a balmy April day, the springtime flowers in bloom." San Francisco is prosperous and happy. "But suddenly a rumbling sound, an earthquake...." Mothers cry out to God to save their children; families are parted; God's ways are mysterious
AUTHOR: Words: Fred Bessel
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Delaney's Songbook #45, according to Cohen)
KEYWORDS: death disaster
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Apr 18, 1906 - The San Francisco Earthquake
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, p. 665, "The San Francisco Earthquake" (1 text)
File: CAFS2665

Sandgate Lass on the Ropery Banks, The DESCRIPTION: "On the Ropery Banks Jenny was sittin'... And hearty I heard this lass singin' -- My bonny keel lad shall be mine." She is knitting the stockings she promised him. She recalls meeting him, and looks forward to bearing his children
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland)
KEYWORDS: love courting children clothes
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 184-185, "The Sandgate Lass on the Ropery Banks" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST StoR184 (Partial)
Roud #3178
NOTES [20 words]: For some reason, this reminds me very strongly of "Bring Back My Johnny to Me." But I can't point to common elements. - RBW
File: StoR184

Sandgate Lass's Lament, The
DESCRIPTION: "I was a young maiden truly, And liv'd in Sandgate Street; I thought to marry a good man... But last I married a keelman, And my good days are done." The girl lists all the men she thought of marrying, and then contrasts her ill-formed, evil keelman

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland)

KEYWORDS: marriage abuse lament work

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 162-163, "The Sandgate Lass's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST StoR162 (Full)
Roud #3170

NOTES [125 words]: A keelman is not one who is involved in shipbuilding but, I believe, one who keels cloth -- marks it for cutting. It is interesting to note that "to keel" also has been used to mean "to mark down as worthy of contempt." So this may be a pun, or it might be simply that the singer has a truly low opinion of her husband.

William Watson published a piece "Sandgate Lassie's Lament" in ADDITIONAL: T. Thompson, J Shield, W. Midford, H. Robson, and others, A Collection of Songs, Comic, Satirical, and Descriptive, Chiefly in the Newcastle Dialect: And Illustrative of the Language and Manners of the Common People on the Banks of the Tyne and Neighbourhood, (John Marshall, Newcastle, 1827), p. 70, but it doesn't appear to be the same poem to me. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: StoR162

Sandy and Nap

DESCRIPTION: Napoleon and the Tsar quarrel. When Bony had raised his army Sandy warns Bony against attacking. Bony rejects the warning. At Moscow Bony told his starving men biscuits and brandy were near but saw them burnt. Bony escapes the Cossacks and frost.

AUTHOR: William Lillie (source: Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)

EARLIEST DATE: 1887 (William Walker, _Bards of Bon-Accord 1375-1860_, according to Greig/Duncan1)

KEYWORDS: war fire Russia humorous Napoleon soldier food

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #53, pp. 1-2, "'The Twa Emperors' or 'Sandy and Nap'" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan1 149, "Sandy and Nap" (6 texts, 3 tunes)
Roud #2874

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Rock and the Wee Pickle Tow" (tune)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Twa Emperors
The Siege of Moscow

NOTES [71 words]: Greig: "This piece refers of course to Napoleon's Russian campaign of 1812 -- his invasion of that country, the burning of Moscow by the Russians themselves, and the disastrous retreat of the French army."

Greig, writing in 1908: "The first appearance of the song in print was in the columns of a contemporary between forty and fifty years ago, when it was given as the composition of 'the late William Lillie, Inverugie.'" - BS

Last updated in version 2.4

File: GrD1149

Sandy and Paddy

DESCRIPTION: "An uncle of mine, he's an old-fashioned chap. He sits all the day by the fire," telling of Britain's victories -- victories won by the Highland Brigade and Irish soldiers. "If it was nae for Sandy and Paddy, Where would old England be?" But many died

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 2010 (Graham-Joe-Holmes-SongsMusicTraditionsOfAnUlsterman); a broadside version apparently dates from the 1920s or earlier

KEYWORDS: soldier England battle death patriotic
Sandy Boy, De

DESCRIPTION: Shanty, negro origin. Singer is going down a river when a shark eats his boat. He travels from place to place looking for more boats, but the shark keeps showing up. Other verses have rhymes about girls.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (Sternvall, _Sang under Segel_)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Shanty, negro origin. Singer is going down a river when a shark eats his boat. He travels from place to place looking for more boats, but the shark keeps showing up. Other verses have rhymes about girls. Typical verses would be: "When I went down to New Orleans to see de boatman row, I set myself down on a rock an' played the old banjo." "Then I went to Alo, to buy a little goat, The ole shark came behind us a swallowed down the boat." Chorus: "Do come along, my Sandy boy, Do come along, oh, do! What will Uncle Gabriel say? Oh, Sally, can't you too?"

KEYWORDS: shanty sailor river ship

FOUND IN: US(SE) West Indies

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 458-460, "De Sandy Boy" (2 texts, 2 tunes)

File: Hugi458

Sandy Grant

DESCRIPTION: "Sandy Grant and (his/her) cousin's son" and some others "had some fun" but it turned out badly. They stay up late drinking and singing, rouse the ire of the townfolk; in the end they are referred to the police

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1872 (broadside Bodleian, 2806 c.11(219)

KEYWORDS: drink music police

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1770, "Sandy Grant" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

Roud #13003

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.11(219), "Sandy Grant" ("Her naisnel' cam' frae the Hielan' hill"), Poet's Box (Glasgow), 1872

File: GrD81770

Sandy Maranoa, The

DESCRIPTION: "The night is dark and stormy and the sky is clouded o'er"; the drivers pack up go from Queensland to New South Wales, "Happy drovers from the sandy Maranoa." The singer describes the life as they travel with the cattle

AUTHOR: A. W. Davis (source: Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads)

EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Ward-PenguinBookOfAustralianBallads)

KEYWORDS: travel work river cattle

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Ward-PenguinBookOfAustralianBallads, p. 128-129, "The Maranoa Drovers" (1 text)
Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads, pp. 63-64, "The Sandy Maranoa" (1 text)

Roud #24814

NOTES [36 words]: Although no tune is listed for this, I'm pretty sure Ward-PenguinBookOfAustralianBallads's version, at least is meant to be sung to "Darling Nelly Gray." The Roud Index mentions "Little Sally Waters" as the tune. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2
Sandy McFarlane
DESCRIPTION: Sandy McFarlane courts Jeannie Niel. His parents "ca'd her a wilfu' young jaud."
"In spite o' the auld couple's gizzin' and snarlin', Jeannie's persisted and stuck tae her darlin'"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan5)
KEYWORDS: courting love money father mother
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Greig/Duncan5 1001, "Sandy McFarlane" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6728
File: GrD1001

Sandy Stream Song
DESCRIPTION: "Come all you river drivers... listen unto me... Of the hardships that we underwent... to drive on Sandy Stream." Setting out, the loggers have a fight with an innkeeper. Fire destroys the camp; the loggers, guided by the owner, struggle home through snow
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Lewiston Journal, according to Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks)
KEYWORDS: logger disaster fire hardtimes
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks, pp. 31-36, "Sandy Stream Song" (1 text)
NOTES [53 words]: Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks's notes give a detailed description, supported by a newspaper account and map, of the events of this song. Strangely, however, he was unable to determine the exact date (he thinks the disaster of the Reed family's Sandy Stream operation began in 1874 and lasted three years). - RBW
Last updated in version 2.5
File: Gray031

Sandy's a Sailor
DESCRIPTION: Sandy is a sailor. He is paid Saturday and spends it on drink. Sunday at church "he takes the button off his shirt and he puts it on the plate." You'll not find him at his ship but in the bar drinking gin.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (recording, Lizzie Higgins)
KEYWORDS: drink nonballad sailor
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
Roud #12924
RECORDINGS:
  Lizzie Higgins, "Sandy's a Sailor" (on Voice02)
File: RcSanASa

Sandy's Mill
DESCRIPTION: "Sandy had a nice little mill." "Sandy, quo he, Lend me your mill!" "Sandy lent the man his mill, And the man got a loan of Sandy's mill, And the mill that was lent was Sandy's mill, An the mill belonged to Sandy."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Montgomerie)
KEYWORDS: miller bargaining
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
  Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 72, "Sandy's Mill" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sandy's the Laddie That I'm Gaun Wi'

DESCRIPTION: "He's coming doun the Donside ... Wi' a feather in his bonnet and a ribbon round's knee, And Sandy's the laddie that I'm ga'en wi." The singer has no use for "Willie at the cauld wallie" or Johnnie "at the back door" or any other boy waiting.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2)

KEYWORDS: courting rejection nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber,Bord))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
  - Greig #157, pp. 2-3, "Sandy's the Laddie"; #115, p. 3, ("Oot spak' the auld guidwife") (1 text plus 1 fragment)
  - Greig/Duncan4 749, "Sandy's the Laddie That I'm Gaun Wi'" (6 texts, 3 tunes)
  - Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 97, "Sandy's at the Cauld Well" (1 fragment)

Roud #6173

CROSS-REFERENCES:
  - cf. "The Win' Blew the Bonnie Lassie's Plaidie Awa'" (tune, per Greig)
  - cf. "Fat'll Mak a Bonny Lassie Blythe an' Glad?" (tune, per Greig/Duncan5) and references there

ALTERNATE TITLES:
  - He's a Bonny Bonny Laddie That I'm Gaun Wi'
  - Sandy's at the Cauld Well

NOTES [76 words]: In another version Sandy is "sailin on the Jean" and "comin' doon the dykeside ... Wi' a ribbon at his bonnet and a buckle at his knee." The line "a feather in his bonnet and a ribbon at his knee" is also in "There Grows a Bonnie Brier Bush" (see Robert Burns, The Complete Poems and Songs of Robert Burns (New Lanark,2005), pp. 377-378)

In other versions, Sandy's left waiting with Jamie and Johnnie in favor of Willie, or with Willie in favor of Jamie. - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: GrD4749

Sandy's Wooing

DESCRIPTION: Sandy asks Jenny to marry him. She hesitates, pointing out examples of girls who have been betrayed and abandoned by men, perhaps for money. He says that he doesn't need riches; she agrees to marry him

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: love courting marriage money

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
  - Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHennysSongsOfThePeople H239, p. 469, "Sandy's Wooing" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #9455

File: HHH239

Sangaree

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Oh Babe, Sangaree (x4)."Verses: "If I live, Don't get killed, I'm going back, Jacksonville." "My husband's got the shovel, And I got the hoe, If that ain't farming, I don't know."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSealIslands)
Sanny Coutts' Little Doggies

DESCRIPTION: Sanny Coutts' little doggies licked his mouth. Sandy ran away with "the doggies at's back" barking.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Greig/Duncan8)

KEYWORDS: dog

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #154, p. 2, ("Sanny Coutts' little doggies") (1 text)
- Greig/Duncan8 1662, "Sanny Coutts' Little Doggies" (1 text)
- ADDITIONAL: Robert Chambers (Edited by Norah and William Montgomerie), Traditional Scottish Nursery Rhymes (1990 selected from Popular Rhymes) #32, p.28, "Wee Doggies" ("Sanny Coutts' wee doggies")

Roud #13040

File: GrD81662

Santa Barbara Earthquake, The

DESCRIPTION: "Way out in California, among the hills so tall, Stands the town of Santa Barbara." Around daybreak, "the hills began to sway." Women and children scream; the people pray. The conclusion: "It's just another warning, From God up in the sky."

AUTHOR: "Carlos B. McAfee" (Carson J. Robison)

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (recording, Vernon Dalhart)

KEYWORDS: disaster warning

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
- June 28, 1925 - the Santa Barbara Earthquake

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 86-87, "The Santa Barbara Earthquake" (1 text)
- Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 666-667, "The Santa Barbara Earthquake" (1 text)

Roud #4752

RECORDINGS:
- Vernon Dalhart, "The Santa Barbara Earthquake" (Columbia 15037-D, 1925)

NOTES [236 words]: There are several earthquakes on record affecting Santa Barbara, California, the earliest being in 1806, when it was little more than a mission in what was then Mexico. It seems clear, however, that this song refers to the earthquake of June 1925, which was quite recent at the time this song was first collected. (I would bet a lot that there was a 78 recording of this song, though I haven't located it. According to the Old-Time Herald, Volume 11, #10, April-May 2009, p. 28, Bascom Lamar Lunsford on August 27, 1925 recorded "The Fate of Santa Barbara," but I don't know if that is this song.) The earthquake has been estimated at 6.3 on the Richter scale. As the song says, it happened around dawn, before the workday started -- which was very fortunate, since damage in the large buildings of the commercial district was severe, but most of the houses suffered relatively slight damage. Casualties, as a result, were slight -- only thirteen people killed. They probably would have been worse had workers been crowded into the (large, hard-to-escape) commercial buildings.
The garbage at the end makes me wonder if the song isn't by Andrew Jenkins; it has something of his style, and the earthquake happened in the period when he was writing a lot of topical songs, sometimes by invitation of record executives. The author declares that the earthquake was a warning. A warning of what? Lousy songwriters? - RBW

Last updated in version 2.7
File: MHAp087

Santa Fe Trail, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer asks, "Say, pard, have you sighted a schooner Way out on the Santa Fe Trail?" In the company is "A little tow-headed gal on a pinto" whom he very much wishes to see. He describes her, though he will not give her name

AUTHOR: Words: James Grafton Rogers/Music: J. H. Gower
EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (sheet music)
KEYWORDS: cowboy travel separation
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 85, "Longside of the Santa Fe Trail" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, p. 548, "The Santa Fe Trail" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Powder River Jack and Kitty Lee's _Songs of the Range: Cowboy Wails of Cattle Trails_, Chart Music, 1937, pp. 28-29, "The Santa Fe Trail" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5096

RECORDINGS:
Jules [Verne] Allen, "Longside The Santa Fe Trail" Victor V-40118, 1929; Montgomery Ward M-4344, 1933; Montgomery Ward M-4780, 1935; on WhenIWas1
Bill Bender (The Happy Cowboy), "Santa Fe Trail" (Elite X16, n.d.; rec. 1939)
Glenn Ohrlin, "Santa Fe Trail" (on Ohrlin01)
Art Thieme, "The Santa Fe Trail" (on Thieme03)
The Westerners [Massey Family], "Santa Fe Trail" (Perfect 6-03-58/Melotone 6-03-58, 1936)

NOTES [30 words]: Although the sheet music of this piece was published in 1911, it seems that almost every version in tradition (even pop tradition) derives from Jules Verne Allen's 1929 recording. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.6
File: 0hr085

Santry Anno

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Characteristic lines: "Heave Away/Hooray, Santry Anno/Anna... All on the plains of Mexico." The body of the song devotes itself to the Mexican War and/or the California Gold Rush and the sailor's desire to get married and participate

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906
KEYWORDS: shanty battle Mexico gold

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Apr 24, 1846 - skirmish between U.S. and Mexican forces in an area of Texas generally regarded as belonging to Mexico. On April 26, General Zachary Taylor reports to President James K. Polk that "hostilities may now be considered as commenced."
May 3 - Mexicans attack Taylor's position at Fort Texas. Taylor moves to the rescue
May 8 - Taylor wins a minor battle at Palo Alto against a superior Mexican force
May 9 - Taylor defeats the retreating Mexicans at Resaca de la Palma
May 13 - War declared with Mexico
May 18 - Taylor crosses the Rio Grande and occupies Matamoros
June 14 - American settlers in California declare independence from Mexico. American forces under John C. Frémont and John Sloat arrive to support them. Stephen Kearney moves to take over the lands between California and Texas
Aug 17 - David Stockton formally annexes California for the United States and assumes the role of governor
Sept 14 - Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna, who as president of Mexico had lost Texas, takes command of the Mexican army
Sept 20-24 - Taylor captures Monterrey, Mexico after a bloody battle
Nov 16 - Taylor captures Saltillo
Nov 25 - Kearney, now governor of California, begins a campaign to drive the Mexicans under Flores out of southern California. He secures the entire state by Jan 10, 1847
Jan 3, 1847 - General Winfield Scott assumes command in Mexico, superseding Taylor
Feb 5 - Taylor, at odds with the administration and Scott, moves west
Feb 22-23 - Santa Anna confronts Taylor’s 5000 men with 15000 and demands surrender. Taylor refuses, then beats Santa Anna at the battle of Buena Vista
Mar 9 - Scott lands at Vera Cruz to begin a campaign against Mexico City
Apr 18 - Scott defeats Santa Anna at Cerro Gordo
Sept 14 - After many minor battles, Scott captures Mexico City
Feb 2, 1848 - Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo ends the war between the U.S. and Mexico, with the U.S. gaining most of what is now Texas, California, Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico, and Utah (the remainder is acquired via the Gadsden Purchase of 1853), plus portions of other states
Nov 7 - Zachary Taylor elected President as a Whig
July 9, 1850 - After a disappointing fifteen months in office, Taylor dies and is succeeded by Millard Fillmore

REFERENCES (26 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 78-80, "Santy Anna" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 40-41, "Santa Anna" (1 text, 1 tune)
Bone-CapstanBars, pp. 129-130, "Santy Ana" (1 text, 1 tune)
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, pp. 84-85, "Santy Anna" (1 text, 1 tune)
Harlow-CharntyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 40-41, "Santa Ana (On the Plains of Mexico)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 82-87, "Santiana," "The Plains of Mexico," "Round the Bay of Mexico" (5 texts, some short and very mixed, 4 tunes) [AbEd, pp.76-80]
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 34, "Santiana" (1 text, 1 tune)
Robinson/Bellman, Pt.3, 7/28/1917, "Santa Anna" (1 text-fragment only, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, I, p.2, "Santy Anna" (1 text, 1 tune)
Shay-AmericanSeaSongsAndChanteys, p. 79, "Santa Anna or The Plains of Mexico" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Terry-TheShantyBook-Part1, #8, "Santy Anno" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 70-72, "Santiana" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 186-187, "Santy Anno" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 40, "Santy Anno" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 206-208, "Santy Anno" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 26, "Santy Anno" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, p. 835, "Santy Anna" (1 text, 1 tune)
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSealands 49, pp. 206-207, "Sandy Anna" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H496, pp. 96-97, "Santy Anna" (1 text, 1 tune)
Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, p. 27, "On the Plains of Mexico" (1 text)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 99, "Santy Anna" (1 text)
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 82-84, "Santy Anna" (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, p. 314, "Santa Anna" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 95, "Santy Anno" (1 text)
DT, SNTYANNA* SNTYANN2
Roud #207
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Carry Him To the Burying Ground (General Taylor, Walk Him Along Johnny)" (lyrics)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Santiana
The Plains of Mexico
Old Santy Ana
NOTES [3827 words]: According to Wheelan, p. 41, "The amazing career of Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna is so entwined with the early years of Texas and Mexico that it is impossible to tell their history without telling his. Born in 1794 in upland Jalapa into a venerable Spanish Castillian family, Antonio was a quarrelsome boy who matured into a fractious, luxury-loving man. Unquestionably courageous, he was also elegant and charming. His favorite amusements were... gambling, cockfighting, and dancing. He was ambitious, opportunistic, crafty, and egotistical.”

Or how about this description from DeVoto, pp. 68-69, "Santa Anna is the set piece of Mexican history, complete with rockets, pinwheels, Greek fire, and aerial bombs. He had been president of Mexico, dictator, commander in chief, much too often and too variously for specification here. He had contrived to persuade a good many different factions that he was their soul, and never betrayed any of them till he had got their funds.... He had the national genius for oratory and manifesto, and a genius of his own for courage, cowardice, inspiration, and magnificent graft. [Since the Texas War for Independence] he had procured further revolutions at home, had lost a leg defending his country against a French invasion, had established a new dictatorship, and had been overthrown by the uprising that put Herrera in power. His impeachment for treason and his banishment had followed.”

Rippy, p. 205, has this account of Santa Anna and of Mexico at the time: "The national government became a sort of flying trapeze -- which, however, some of the generals and occasionally a civilian ventured to ride repeatedly. Three white aristocrats... tried it twice each. The ardent anticlerical reformer Valentin Gomez Farias mounted it five times, and Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna, the shrewd militarist and deft pronunciamiento artist, displayed his skill on eleven different occasions and managed to hang on for as many years. A creole... Santa Ana was the worst of the group. Having neither principles nor a sense of direction, he fought on both sides of every issue that arose. He was a royalist before he was a patriot. He supported Iturbide and then helped depose him. He championed both federalism and centralism. He slyly permitted Valentin Gomez Farias to make the first serious attack on the Roman Catholic Church in Mexico in 1833 and then allied himself with the clergy and posed as the savior of Catholicism."

Looking at his portrait in Wheelan, I can't help but think how much he looks like Adolf Hitler minus the mustache. And, indeed, he had a lot of the same traits, including clawing his way to power and then biting off more than he could chew.

Plus being utterly brutal. It showed in his treatment of Texas. Mexico had allowed American colonists into the area on conditions: They needed to be Catholic and not hold slaves (Wheelan, p. 43). Unfortunately, the Mexicans winked their eyes at slavery while trying to genuinely exclude Protestants. Eventually, when the Mexican government became strict about imposing its rule, the Americans decided they wanted out.

The result was the successful Texas rebellion. In which Santa Anna was the chief Mexican general. He had an army of five thousand "conscripts and prison inmates" (Wheelan, p. 46), with which he took the Alamo, and slaughtered the defenders, then captured and slaughtered the garrison of Goliad (Wheelan, p. 47). Then, on April 21, 1836, Sam Houston's Texans routed the Mexican army at San Jacinto, capturing the general the next day (Wheelan, p. 48). Santa Anna saved his skin by giving the Texans independence, but of course his government could not withstand the blow.

The Mexican government never did really accept that Texas was independent. DeVoto, pp. 12-13, writes, "[I]t is a fundamental mistake to think of Mexico, in this period, or for many years before, as a republic or even a government. It must be understood as a late stage in the breakdown of the Spanish Empire. Throughout that time it was never able to establish a stability, whether social or political.... No governing class arose, or even a political party, but only some gangs. Sometimes the gangs were captured by intelligent and capable men, sometimes for a while they stood for the merchants, the clergy, the landowners, or various programs of reform, but they all came down in the end to simple plunder."

Given that situation, border raiding was constant. In one of those border raids, Santa Anna captured a large force of Texas raiders -- and ordered every eleventh man shot, choosing the victims at random by having them pull white and black beans from a jar (Wheelan, p. 51).

Eventually the Mexicans got rid of Santa Anna, but the squabbles over Texas never ended. (This was to prove most unfortunate. Had Mexico recognized Texas independence, Britain and France would probably have guaranteed it, the United States would not have annexed Texas, and Mexico presumably would have kept California. Morison, p. 554, writes, "More sense of reality and less of prestige at Mexico City in 1844 might have changed the entire course of American expansion." But Mexico City had neither.)

DeVoto, p. 11, makes an interesting comparison to the Sudetenland. The parallels are there: Just as the Sudetenland had never been part of Germany proper (before the independence of Czechoslovakia, it was part of the Habsburg Empire), so Texas had never been part of the United States. But just as the Sudetenland was full of Germans who wanted to join Germany, so Texas was full of Americans at least open to joining the United States.

For, while Texas was independent after 1836, it was also sparsely populated and bankrupt. Various solutions were proposed -- there was actually a British idea of guaranteeing Texas independence if it would free its slaves (Morison, p. 554; Wheelan, p. 58). But the obvious answer was for Texas to join the United States.

This was more complicated than it sounded; President John Tyler tried get a treaty (actually, two different treaties) annexing Texas through the Senate, but could not command a two-thirds majority. He managed to pull it off at the very end of his term (after the 1844 election) by joint resolution of Congress (which required only a simple majority: Morison, p. 556).

The always-shaky Mexican government couldn't face this. It did not dare to admit that it had lost Texas, so naturally it could not admit that Texas had joined the United States. Their bluster might have worked against one of the weak American presidents of the 1850s. Unfortunately for Mexico, the new President was James K. Polk.

Polk was one of the most complex Presidents in American history -- literally; historians can't even agree on his legacy. I can't cite a source, because it was so long ago, but some time around the Reagan administration, a poll was taken among historians to determine the ten best and worst American presidents. Polk was the only president to make both lists.

He was a driven man. A sickly youngster, he was diagnosed at age 17 with urinary stones, and was subjected to an emergency operation without anesthetic to remove them; the operation in all likelihood left him sterile (Seigenthaler, p. 19). He had only the sketchiest of education in his early years, and grew up in a situation of religious controversy (Seigenthaler, pp. 12-13). The family came to be obsessed with obtaining as much property as possible (Seigenthaler, p. 17). It was a trait Polk would carry to an extreme; no other President except Thomas Jefferson acquired so much land for the United States, and there were no others who acquired so much by such vigorous means.

His methods were hardly the most honest; his enemies labelled him "Polk the Mendacious" (Wheelan, p. 54). And Seigenthaler, despite seeming to admire Polk overall, points up evidence of his deceptions, admitting that, to Polk, the end justified the means (pp. 100-101).

DeVoto, pp. 7-8, sums him up this way: "Polk's mind was rigid, narrow, obstinate, far from first-rate. He sincerely believed that only Democrats were truly American.... He was pompous, suspicious, and secretive; he had no humor; he could be vindictive; and he saw spooks and villains.... But if his mind was narrow it was also powerful and he had guts. If he was orthodox, his integrity was absolute and he could not be scared, manipulated, or brought to heel. No one blurred him, no one moved him with direct or oblique pressure. Furthermore, he know how to get things one. He came into office with clear ideas and a fixed determination and he was to stand by them...."

On p. 201, in explaining why the American troops in the Mexican war were treated so badly, DeVoto adds, "He had no understanding of war, its needs, its patterns, or its results. The truth is that he did not understand any results except immediate ones." But he was very good at getting immediate results.

Polk made a career mostly as an ally of Andrew Jackson, who created his own controversies and was, if anything, even more prejudiced than Polk. (It is a bit ironic, in the face of current American politics where conservative political tribalism and evangelical religion are joined at the hip, that Polk -- probably the most conservative America-is-always-right man of his generation -- was a near-agnostic who was not baptized until he was dying. The man who brought the conservative state of Texas into the Union could not possibly be supported by a Texas delegation today. Nor was he much of a glad-handler in the modern sense; he disliked social engagements and, once in office, rarely left the White House; Seigenthaler, p. 103; Wheelan, p. 54. He would very nearly work himself to death as President. Seigenthaler, p. 119, in summing up the notes he kept as President, calls him "brooding and humorless.... Sometimes he presents himself as demanding to the point of unreasonableness, determined to the point of stubbornness, self-righteous to the point of paranoia.... More than anything else, he comes across as intensely partisan, at times blindly so.

As Speaker of the House, Polk had run that organization like clockwork. He had then gone on to serve as Tennessee governor 1839-1841, but was defeated in his attempts to run for re-election (DeGregorio, pp. 166-167).

Polk's path to becoming leader of his country was more legal than Santa Anna's, but only slightly less peculiar. Martin Van Buren had been voted out of office in 1840, just as Polk had been ousted from the Tennessee governorship, but Little Van was expected to run again in 1844. Polk had presidential ambitions, but for the moment, he just wanted to be Van Buren's vice president. But several funny things happened on the way to the convention. For starters, Van Buren and the likely Whig nominee, Henry Clay, had published on the very same day similar announcements saying they did not stand for annexation of Texas (Seigenthaler, p. 76). To this day, it is not certain if they had agreed on this, or if they did it independently -- but it was widely thought that they had made an agreement. And the American people, firm believers in Manifest Destiny, wanted Texas. Despite the concern about a possible deal, Clay still managed to become the Whig nominee. But it cost Van Buren. There were two main candidates going into the 1844 convention: Van Buren and Lewis Cass. Van Buren had a majority of delegates on the first ballot, but the convention had adopted a two-thirds rule, and Van Buren never came close to that (Seigenthaler, p. 83). Polk didn't start getting votes until the eighth ballot, but once he had started, Polk's operators carefully manipulated the convention, and it became a bandwagon; he was nominated on the very next ballot. Polk, as a result, became the first "dark horse" presidential candidate -- though we should note that he was far better known nationally than such recent nominees as Bill Clinton and George W. Bush.

The campaign which followed was pretty ugly -- e.g., though both candidates were slaveowners, Polk was accused (falsely) of branding his slaves (Seigenthaler, p. 96). And Clay made rather a hash of things, being very inconsistent in his utterances on topics such as Texas. Unknown or not, slaveowner or not, Polk won -- if just barely; his margin in the popular vote was some 38,000 out of two and a half million ballots cast. As usual, the margin in the electoral college was much more decisive (Seigenthaler, pp. 98-99). And "probably no other President entered office with so clearly defined a program and accomplished so much of it as Polk (Current/Williams/Freidel, p. 364)

This was the man against whom the fragile Mexican government tried to negotiate. Or, rather, tried not to negotiate. It rejected Polk's attempts to buy California. Polk can't have been too unhappy; he was actually sending different teams with different instructions to various places to muddy the waters (Wheelan, p. 55).

Then, at the end of 1845, the Mexican government of President Herrera was overthrown by General Paredes (Morison, p. 560). The new government was no more willing to recognize the annexation of Texas than the old was willing to recognize its independence.

To make the whole situation worse, Polk wanted to annex not just the portion of Texas east of the Nueces (the part that was unquestionably independent) but greater Texas (all the way to the Rio Grande) and California (which not even the most arrogant Texan had claimed). Polk in fact made the absurd claim that Texas has always been a proper part of the United States! (Here again we see the analogy to the Sudetenland -- Texas was, in effect, the entering wedge.)

So Polk, in order to "ensure that Mexico [would] not" go to war, sent 3000 men under Zachary Taylor to Texas (Wheelan, p. 60). And Polk ordered General Taylor to cross the Nueces (the recognized border between Texas and Mexico, insofar as there was one). Initially Taylor based himself at Corpus Christi, at the mouth of the Nueces, putting him just south of the border (DeVoto, p. 28). Then Polk pushed harder, ordering Taylor to head for the Rio Grande (Wheelan, p. 63). So disorganized was Taylor's force that it took him a month to get moving (DeVoto, p. 105), and there was much squabbling among the Americans along the way; amazingly, in all their time in camp, they had not practiced maneuvering together (DeVoto, p. 107). But they finally arrived.

Faced with that provocation, the Mexicans decided to fight.

There was no single incident which could be called "the first shot"; there had been some small skirmishing starting almost from the moment Taylor reached the Rio Grande. But on April 25, Taylor sent out a small force of horsemen on a reconnaissance. This force managed to blunder its way into a fight and was overwhelmed (DeVoto, pp. 130-131), and from then on it was a full-blown shooting war. This was fortunate for Polk; he had been preparing to declare war on Mexico without an incident, and it looked as if Congress might not consent. But he quickly gained a declaration of war after the shooting started (DeVoto, p. 184ff.) -- even though he had to undercut Secretary of State Buchanan, who wanted to avoid making any territorial claims (DeVoto, p. 187, who thinks this was one of Buchanan's periodic attempts to ensure his presidential nomination. Which failed, of course).

Most versions of this song credit Santa Anna with defeating Zachary Taylor, but -- as the historical record shows -- Taylor consistently beat the Mexicans, though some of the victories were expensive.

Although Taylor fought many battles in the Mexican campaign, few were against Santa Anna. Mexico at this time was anything but a stable nation. Santa Anna had been President of Mexico in 1836, when Texas rebelled, but had then been thrown out after the Texans won their battle for independence.

Most modern historians seem less than impressed with Taylor as a general, but, at age 61, he had been in the army for 37 years, having been commissioned in 1808 (Wheelan, p. 61). Despite a limited education (Wheelan, p. 62), he had fought bravely and risen steadily in the ranks while displaying a real concern for his men. Against a strong general, he might have been in trouble -- after all, his logistics were so bad that some of his soldiers actually suffered from scurvy! (DeVoto, p. 15) -- but against the rabble that formed the Mexican army, his steadiness was a great advantage.

(As DeVoto says on p. 189, Taylor "had no patience with textbook soldiers.... Well, what did he have? A sound principle: attack. A less valuable one which would serve him just as well in this war: never retreat. Total ignorance of the art of war. And an instinct, if not for command, at least for leadership.")

The first battle of the war was at Resaca de la Palma. The Mexican general Arista had planned a maneuver to put him on Taylor's line of communication, but when it came to battle, he found that his ill-equipped conscripts just couldn't fight. Taylor's men fought in place, and eventually the Mexicans retreated (DeVoto, pp. 188-191). The next day, the armies met again, and after a hard slog in which neither general exercised much control, the ill-fed Mexicans broke (DeVoto, p. 192, who notes that in some ways the most important thing about this battle was the number of future Civil War generals who saw combat for the first time. One of them was U. S. Grant).

It wasn't quite what Polk wanted; he still hoped to take California by purchase or local revolution; DeVoto, p. 197, comments that "Mr. Polk had lighted a firecracker and had a bomb explode in his face." But at least he was able to adapt. He started to build up the United States army (though he did nothing to produce a genuinely professional force; DeVoto, pp. 198-199, notes how every officer in one regiment was a political appointee and confesses that at this time "out military system was the worst possible" and could not have succeeded against a stronger enemy than Mexico).

Given limited reinforcements, Taylor would win several more minor victories on the scale of Resaca de la Palma. He became very popular as a result, leaving Polk worried about his political influence (quite correctly, since Taylor, a Whig, would follow the Democrat Polk as President). Polk put Winfield Scott in charge of a second Mexican expedition (Morison, p. 563), and it was Scott who eventually took Mexico City (as DeVoto writes, p. 200, Scott's "egotism was colossal, his vanity was monstrous.... But he was a great soldier. The campaign he was permitted to make was brilliant and victorious. He won the war").

In any case, Polk had had another string for his bow. He also overthrew the Mexican government, helping Santa Anna return to Mexico in September 1846 (an agent for Santa Anna had promised to bring stability to Mexico for a price; Polk accepted the deal even though he distrusted the messenger; see DeVoto, p. 69). The former Mexican president promptly resumed power (as Morison tartly comments on p. 560, revolutions in Mexico at this time were just about certain to succeed).

To make Scott's expedition strong enough to make its amphibious assault, Polk had cut back Taylor's force, ordering it onto the defensive (see Current/Williams/Freidel, p. 375). Santa Anna, seeing an opportunity (and needing a victory to strengthen his government), tried to improve his reputation by attacking Taylor at Buena Vista. It was a close thing, but Santa Anna failed to destroy Taylor. He had little choice but to turn back to try to stop Scott; he failed again, and Santa Anna again gave up power. Eventually a government was formed which reluctantly gave up Texas, New Mexico, and California (Morison, p. 565).

It will tell you something about the organization of the United States Army that total deaths in the war were about 13,000 -- 1700 killed in combat and 11,000 killed by disease and other non-combat causes (Siegenthaler, p. 145).

The war had a rather ridiculous end: Polk sent a negotiator named Nicholas Trist, who sat down with Santa Anna to work out a deal. Polk then fired Trist, but he kept negotiating anyway and worked out a deal (Siegenthaler, p. 151). Polk wasn't entirely happy with the treaty, but he sent it to the Senate -- and, lo and behold, they approved it.

The choice of Taylor to be the Whig presidential nominee to succeed Polk was ironic; according to Nevins1847, p. 195, a Whig operative talked to Taylor's brother, and was told that Taylor had no political convictions and rarely voted. But a man with no record was precisely what was wanted, and so Taylor was nominated -- and easily elected. According to Hammond-Atlas, p. U-49, Taylor earned 47% of the popular vote, Democrat Lewis Cass 42%, and Free Soiler Martin Van Buren 10%; in the electoral college, Taylor had 163 votes, Cass 127. Call it another victory for Taylor over Santa Anna, since Taylor was now the American president and Santa Anna was nothing.

Santa Anna did get the last laugh in a few things: Taylor died in 1850, and Santa Anna survived until 1876. And Santa Anna would come back in Mexico yet again; in 1853, he sold the United States the area known as the Gasden Purchase (Nevins1852, pp. 61-62). "Corrupt, ruthless, and cruel, Santa Anna was also eloquent, dramatic, and clever. A soldier of fortune, he did nothing for his country but exploit it and disturb its peace. When he first became president in 1833, Mexico, in spite of the secession of Central America a decade before, and an area of well over 1,500,000 square miles. When he was finally deposed twenty-two years later, the national domain had shrunk to around 760,000. More than any other Mexican, Santa Anna had been responsible for this tragic loss of territory, which might have been avoided entirely (or possibly with the exception of Texas) if it had not been for the machinations, tyranny, and demagoguery of this unprincipled charlatan" (Rippy, p. 206).
Ironically, that land proved a poisoned pill for the Americans. The last word probably should belong to former president John Quincy Adams: "I have opposed [annexing Texas] for ten long years, firmly believing it tainted with two great crimes: one, the leprous contamination of slavery; and two, robbery of Mexico.... "They have sown the wind..." (Wheelan, p. 60). And the Democrats did indeed reap the whirlwind. Polk was dead by 1850, when the Compromise of 1850 temporarily patched up the wounds caused by the Mexican War. But eleven years later, with the wounds of the battle over slavery still fresh, a slave state which no longer considered itself part of the Union fired on Fort Sumter....
Bone-CapstanBars calls this "the most peculiar of all Chanties," and speculates, "I wonder if it was not at one time a seaman's prayer to Saint Anne, a bountiful Patron to Breton sailors? It is not easy to connect that supposition with the words as sung in later days for, in them, a negro influence is plain."- RBW
Bibliography

- Current/Williams/Friedel: Richard N. Current, T. Harry Williams, Frank Freidel, American History: A Survey, second edition, Knopf, 1966
  Barricade Books, 1993
  1977
- Nevins1847: Allan Nevins, The Ordeal of the Union: Fruits of Manifest Destiny 1847-1852
  [volume I of The Ordeal of the Union], Scribners, 1947
- Nevins1852: Allan Nevins, The Ordeal of the Union: A House Dividing 1852-1857 [volume II of The Ordeal of the Union], Scribners, 1947
- Siegenthaler: John Seigenthaler, James K. Polk [a volume in the American Presidents series
- Wheelan: Joseph Wheelan, Invading Mexico: America's Continental Dream and the Mexican War, 1846-1848, Carroll & Graf, 2007

Last updated in version 5.1
File: Doe078

Saoirse (Liberty)

DESCRIPTION: Gaelic and English. "My name is Freedom." Our first advance was in France.
"When the orange tree drops its head Then liberty's sure to flourish." We'll drive out those who oppose us.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (O Muirgheasa's _Dha Chhead de Cheoltaibh Uladh_, according to Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage France Ireland nonballad political freedom
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 27, "Saoirse" (1 text)
NOTES [37 words]: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815: This is a macaronic song "collected in Donegal in the early part of the twentieth century... It was probably made prior to 1798." The verses alternate Irish and English "translation." - BS
File: Moyl027
Sara Jane

DESCRIPTION: Singer describes his girlfriend/wife in unflattering ways; she hits him, she's the "terror of New York"; in short, "My poor, silly Jane...She's my darling, she's my daisy, She's humpbacked and she's crazy... She's my freckled-faced consumptive Sara Jane"

AUTHOR: Lyrics: unknown; tune: Will S. Hays

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Cramer Bros.)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer describes his girlfriend/wife in increasingly uncomplimentary ways; she hits him, she's the "terror of New York"; she eats cake, eats a fly, and vomits; she's crosseyed and lame, her breath smells like onions, etc. In short, "My poor, silly Jane...She's my darling, she's my daisy, She's humpbacked and she's crazy... She's my freckled-faced consumptive Sara Jane"

KEYWORDS: madness shrewishness abuse humorous parody

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, pp. 178-179 , "My Freckle-Faced Consumptive Mary Ann" (1 text, 1 tune -- the final verse and chorus of this song, which could circulate independently)

RECORDINGS:
Cramer Brothers, "Sara Jane" (Broadway 7578 c. 1927; Broadway 8059, c. 1932; rec. 1927)
J. D. Foster, "My Sarah Jane" (Gennett 6791/Supertone 9372 [as Sam Bunch], 1929)
Lester McFarland & Robert Gardner, "Sara Jane" (Vocalion 5122, 1927; rec. 1926)
Blind Blake Higgs, "Consumptive Sara Jane" (on WIHIGGS01)
Smoky Mountain Twins, "Sarah Jane" (Conqueror 7065, 1928) [note: this record number was also used for "I Was Born 4000 Years Ago), but that may have been the same recording, as the songs can share a floating verse]

CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "Hungry Hash House" (floating verse, tune)
 cf. "I Was Born About Ten Thousand Years Ago (Bragging Song)" (Charlie Poole version - floating verse)
 cf. "Little Old Log Cabin in the Lane" (tune)

NOTES [139 words]: Not to be confused with Uncle Dave Macon's "Rock About My Saro Jane." Since it shares the "freckle-faced consumptive etc." verse with Charlie Poole's 1925 recording "I'm the Man Who Rode the Mule Around the World" and several recordings of "Hungry Hash House," one suspects it was composed as an extension of those appearances. Or does the whole song appear elsewhere, earlier? - PJS

I've no good answer to that question; we are, for the moment, filing loose verses about the freckle-faced girl here, but it's by no means clear where they actually originated. See, however, "Dennis McGonagle's Daughter Mary Ann" and "Sweet Mary Ann (Such an Education Has My Mary Ann)." Not to be confused with "Sarah Jane," also a humorous song between lovers, but based on "Pop Goes the Weasel" and ending with him dead and her courting another. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: RcSarJan

Sarah Barnwell

DESCRIPTION: Sarah's brother disapproves of her love for Samuel. Samuel decides to face her brother "upon the mountains high" and disarms him; for Sarah's sake Samuel spares her brother's life. The brother approves the marriage and gives the couple half his lands.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1794 (broadside, Bodleian Johnson Ballads 351)

KEYWORDS: courting fight brother

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #159, p. 3, ("Gin ye'll gie me your hand, Sarah") (1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan2 218, "Sarah Barnwell" (1 text)
Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople 115, "Young Barnswell" (1 text)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 140, "Young Barnable" (1 text)
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 158-159, "Captain Barniwell" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Bk 16)
Roud #955
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 25(2130)[final lines illegible], "Young Barnwell" ("Abroad as I was walking, I heard two lovers talking"), A. Swindells (Manchester), 1796-1853; also Johnson Ballads 351, "Captain Barnwell" ("Alone as I was walking on a summer's morn"), J. Evans (London), 1794; also Harding B 25(2130)[final lines illegible], "Young Barnwell"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Two Constant Lovers" (plot)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Upon the Mountains High

"The Two Constant Lovers" is an earlier ballad sharing the plot, cast of characters, and a few phrases. Since little of the text is shared with "Young Barnwell" I consider these separate songs. - BS
Last updated in version 2.7
File: GrD2218

Sarah H. Furber

DESCRIPTION: "A maid of twenty summers Went forth with joy and mirth... Amidst the din of earth." "A manly face and favor Attracted her free hears." She goes astray (pregnant?), but gains no aid from "men of art and science." She dies alone

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Burt-AmericanMurderBallads)

KEYWORDS: death

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 38-39, "Lines Composed on the Abduction and Cruel Murder of MISS SARAH H. FURBER" (1 text)

NOTES [59 words]: Despite the title, the text of this piece never describes a murder; frankly, it sounds as if the girl died of venereal disease, or perhaps pure poverty.

The item is a broadside, "price two cents." Burt-AmericanMurderBallads's comment is, "And not worth more, I should say." That was in 1958 dollars. It's still true in today's dollars, I should say. - RBW
File: Burt038

Sarah Jane

DESCRIPTION: (After an unrelated opening stanza), we find Sarah Jane and Samuel courting on the D & H canal. He, however "succumbed to hard times" and is buried. As for Sarah, within a week "She started keeping comp'ny with a junk dealer... in Rondout."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1958

KEYWORDS: courting hardtimes death burial infidelity humorous

FOUND IN: US(MA) West Indies(Bahamas)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 173, "Sarah Jane" (1 text plus appendix; tune referenced)
DT, SARAJANE*

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Pop Goes the Weasel" (tune) and references there
cf. "The D & H Canal" (tune, floating lyrics)

NOTES [19 words]: Not to be confused with the song we index as "Sara Jane," which is a humorous song of conflict between lovers. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: FSC173
Sarah Mariah Cornell

DESCRIPTION: Reverend Avery seduces and then murders Sarah. He flees from justice, but is recaptured. Sarah's ghost (?) pleads for justice, warns girls not to be deceived by men, and asks for the listeners' prayers.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1845 (Journal from the Sharon)

KEYWORDS: homicide clergy seduction betrayal trial escape

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 156-158, "Sarah Mariah Cornell" (1 text)
Thompson-APioneerSongster 66, "Sarah Maria Cornell" (1 text)
Forget-Me-Not-Songster, pp. 195-196, "Sara Maria Cornell" (1 text)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 63-66, "Sarah Maria Cornell" (1 text plus a photo of a broadside with two pieces about her)

Roud #2044

NOTES [41 words]: Huntington can find no other versions of this song, which I usually take to indicate that it is not traditional. But I feel sure I've seen it somewhere else. And it wasn't from the version in Cohen, which had not been published at the time. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: SWMS156

Sarah Scott

DESCRIPTION: Sarah dreams William, her shepherd lover, is untrue. She wakes and meets him. He says it is his wedding day: "for wealth I changed my love." She reminds him of the ring he gave her when he proposed. She goes home and dies of a broken heart.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan6)

KEYWORDS: grief courting wedding infidelity death money

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan6 1164, "Sarah Scott" (1 text)

Roud #6818

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Deluded Lover" (theme: girl deserted by man who marries for money or land)

NOTES [26 words]: Greig/Duncan6 quoting Greig: "From Miss Ritchie, and her grandmother tells me she learned it when she was at the Barons in Auchnagatt some fifty years ago." - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD61164

Sarah's Young Man

DESCRIPTION: The singer falls in love with Sarah, a domestic who "lives in a mansion near Manchester Square." One night he discovers her cozying with a soldier. The master comes home, the soldier and Sarah lose their position, and Sarah loses her suitor.

AUTHOR: G. W. Hunt, according to Oliver Ditson & Co, The New Comic Songster, 1870

EARLIEST DATE: before 1865 (broadside, Bodleian LOCSinging sb40501a)

KEYWORDS: courting infidelity servant soldier humorous unemployment

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar,Newf)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick, pp. 130-133, "Sarah's Young Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2066, p. 138, "Sarah's Young Man" (1 reference)
New-Comic-Songster, p, 36, "Sarah's Young Man" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #1957

RECORDINGS:
Cyril O'Brien, "My First Love Was Sarah" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 18(432), "Sarah's Young Man," H. De Marsan (New York), 1861-1864; also Firth b.34(198), "Sarah's Young Man"
Saracponda

DESCRIPTION: "Saracponda, saracponda, Saracponda, retsetset," Additional lyrics vary but often involve some sort of drum-like sounds, "boom, boom, boom!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal); Wikipedia says it was first printed in the 1940s

KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

File: NCF211Sa

Sarie

DESCRIPTION: Singer loves Sarie, a fat co-worker on the farm. She has humorous and suggestive escapades. When they marry, the two will be one -- but there's enough of her to make two or three. Cho: "For she's proud and she's beautiful, she's fat and she's fair...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (recording, Tony Wales)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer loves Sarie, a fat co-worker on the farm; she has accepted his proposal. While milking a cow, she falls over and says she has hurt her arm, but that's not where she fell. She falls in the river; he pulls her out; she berates him for the places he grabbed her. When they marry, the two will be one -- but there's enough of her to make two or three. Ch.: "For she's proud and she's beautiful, she's fat and she's fair...."

KEYWORDS: love marriage humorous lover

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

RECORDINGS:
Tony Wales, "Sarie" (on TWales1)

NOTES [24 words]: Wales notes that several Sussex people knew fragments of the song, but most couldn't remember it in full. I'd guess at a music-hall origin. - PJS

File: RcSarie

Sash My Father Wore (I), The

DESCRIPTION: An Ulster Orangeman, tells his "British brethren" that his forefathers fought that he might wear the sash. "It is old but it is beautiful," was worn in 1690, his father wore it and he wears it July 12. If needed, we will fight again

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (The Orange Lark)

KEYWORDS: clothes battle Ireland nonballad patriotic father

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
July 1 or 12, 1690 (Old Style or New Style dates) - Battle of the Boyne. William III defeats the forces of James II to firmly establish his control of Ireland

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark 4, "The Sash My Father Wore" (1 text, 1 tune) DT, SASHFTHR*
Roud #32245
RECORDINGS:
Liam Clancy, "The Sash My Father Wore" (on IRLClancy01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Hat My Father Wore" (form)
cf. "The Sash My Father Wore (II)" (subject, chorus and tune)
NOTES [332 words]: IRLClancy01 includes only the chorus, used as an introduction to "The Scottish Breakaway." The source for the description is Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark 4, "The Sash My Father Wore" [The Orange Lark (1987)]. Apparently the orange sash was worn by King William at the Battle of the Boyne. July 12 is the Gregorian Calendar (adopted in England in 1752) date for celebrating the victory of William III of Orange in the Battle of the Boyne, July 1, 1690. [I would assign less significance to this than to the various ribbons and sashes worn by the Ribbonmen, the Orange Order, etc. - RBW] Zimmermann: "It has been noted that 'much of the pugnacity has gone from the music played on the 12th day of July' [S.H. Bell Erin's Orange Lily, p. 14]; there is a tendency to replace the most violent ballads by innocuous songs such as 'The Ould Orange Flute' or 'The Sash my Father Wore'. 'The Ould Orange Flute' appeared on nineteenth century broadsides. The other song ['The Sash my Father Wore'] is more recent; it was probably the paraphrase of a non-political song, 'The Hat my Father Wore'. A nationalist version, quite different in character but singable to the same tune, appeared in The Shan Van Vocht, August 1896." It is clear that "The Sash" is an adaptation of "The Hat," or vice versa. Re Zimmermann's note: "Innocuous" depends on point of view. The tune only of "The Sash" is played as a march on Voice16; in that connection Yates, Musical Traditions site Voice of the People suite "Notes - Volume 16" - 13.9.02: "Once upon a time, folklorists drew out their blue pencils to excise any reference to sex in folksongs, while, at the same time, printing any number of songs concerning rape, murder and wartime pillage. Nowadays things have changed .... Personally, I'm amazed that Reg Hall could include ... 'The Sash My Father Wore,' which has come to symbolize Protestant bigotry in many parts of Ireland." Searching the web for an "accepted" text I found both versions I and II. - BS Last updated in version 5.2

File: RecSMFW

Sash My Father Wore (II), The

DESCRIPTION: The singer is "a loyal Orangeman, just come across the sea." He loves to sing and dance and -- on the Twelfth -- wear his father's sash. He is returning to Dromore but he hopes to come back again to be welcomed by his brethren.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c.1895 (Graham-TheOrangeSongster)

KEYWORDS: clothes Ireland derivative nonballad patriotic father

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Graham-TheOrangeSongster, p. 21, "The Sash My Father Wore" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Sash My Father Wore (I)" (subject, chorus and tune) and references there
cf. "The Hat My Father Wore" (many lines)

NOTES [39 words]: Searching the web for an "accepted" text I found both versions I and II. The text of this version is very close to that of "The Hat My Father Wore," sharing many lines in each verse and substituting Orange references for Green. - BS

File: Grah021

Saskatchewan

DESCRIPTION: "Saskatchewan, the land of snow, Where winds are always on the blow... And why we stay here no one knows. Saskatchewan, Saskatchewan, There's no place like Saskatchewan...." The singer tells of the hard life during Depression and drought

AUTHOR: Words: William W. Smith

EARLIEST DATE: 1960

KEYWORDS: farming poverty hardtimes Canada

FOUND IN: Canada

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Saskatchewan

Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 10, "Saskatchewan" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, SASKATCH*

Roud #4525

RECORDINGS:
Jim Young, "Saskatchewan" (on SASKatch01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Beulah Land" (tune)
cf. "Dakota Land" (tune, theme)
cf. "Webfoot Land" (tune, theme)

NOTES [80 words]: Saskatchewan, always dry and never rich, became Canada's dust bowl during the 1930s. Drought there was hardly unexpected, but drought, damaged topsoil, and a bad economy made times especially bad. William W. Smith's humorous lament fit right in with the feelings of the locals -- and even with their hopes, as the last verse shows:

But still we love Saskatchewan,
We're proud to say we're native ones,
So count your blessings drop by drop;
Next year we'll have a bumper crop." - RBW

Last updated in version 2.7

Satan, Your Kingdom Must Come Down

DESCRIPTION: "Well, well, well, well, well, Now, God's got a kingdom (x3), But Satan's got a kingdom too." "I'm gonna pray till I tear that kingdom down, For I heard the voice of Jesus say, 'Satan, your kingdom must come down.'" "I'm gonna shout/sing till I tear...

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (recording, Blind Joe Taggart)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

Roud #5737

RECORDINGS:
Frank Proffitt, "Satan, Your Kingdom Must Come Down" (on FProffitt01)
Blind Joe Taggart, "Satan Your Kingdom Must Come Down" (Paramount 13081, 1931)

File: RcSYKMCD

Satan's a Liar (Ain't Gonna Worry My Lord No More)

DESCRIPTION: "Satan's a liah, and a conjuh too, if you don't watch out he'll conjuh you (x2), Ain't gonna worry my Lawd no mo' (x2)." "Goin' to heaven on an angel's wing; When I get there you'll hear me sing." "When I get to heaven I'm gonna sit yah down...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)

KEYWORDS: religious Devil

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 250-251, "Satan's a Liah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Coleman/Bregman-SongsOfAmericanFolks, pp. 82-83, "Satan's a Liar" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Let That Liar Alone" (theme)

File: San250

Satan's Camp A-Fire

DESCRIPTION: "Fire, my Savior, fire, Satan's camp afire, Fire, believer, fire, Satan's camp afire."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen, Ware, Garrison)

KEYWORDS: religious Devil nonballad

FOUND IN: US
Satan's Kingdom

DESCRIPTION: "This night my soul has caught new fire, Halle-hallelujah. I feel that heav'n is drawing nigh'r... Shout, shout, we are gaining ground, Satan's kingdom is tumbling down."

Evidence is offered that heaven will triumph

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1842
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Bible
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 36, "Satan's Kingdom" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6668
NOTES [49 words]: Among the scriptural references in this piece are the following:
* Samson putting the Philistines to flight: see Judges 13-16
* "When Israel came to Jericho": see Joshua 6
* "Saint Paul and Silas bound in jail": Acts 16:19ff.; see also 2 Cor. 11:13, where Paul mentions multiple imprisonments - RBW

File: LoF036

Satisfied

DESCRIPTION: Call-and-answer, with the refrain, "Satisfied." The text is at the leader's discretion, e.g., "I'm going up north, SATISFIED, I'm going down south, SATISFIED, Mama cooked a cow, SATISFIED, Gonna give all the girls, SATISFIED, Their bellies full..."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks)
KEYWORDS: playparty work nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MW,SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 150-152, (no title) (1 text, 1 tune); cf. pp. 152-153 (apparently a combination of this song with "Easy Rider") (1 text, 1 tune)
McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks, pp. 83-84, "Hey Little Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Children of East York School, "I'm Goin' Up North" (1950; on NFMAla1)
Children of Lilly's Chapel School, "See See Rider" (1950; on NFMAla1) -- not the popular blues song, but another version of the "Satisfied" chant
File: CNFM150

Saturday Night

DESCRIPTION: "Saturday night and Sunday too, Pretty gals on my mind. Monday mornin' break of day, Old Massa's got me goin'." The slave works through the week while looking forward to spending the weekend with the girls. Also has sundry floating verses

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1919 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: courting work slave animal floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 459, "Saturday Night and Sunday Too" (1 fragment)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 459, "Saturday Night and Sunday Too" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Saturday Night at Sea

DESCRIPTION: "A sailor loves a gallant ship And messmates bold and free And ever welcomes with delight Saturday night at sea." The sailor recalls the time when, if the weather is good, the crew is able to relax and enjoy themselves.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1843 (Journal from the Florida)
KEYWORDS: sailor ship nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 65-66, "Saturday Night at Sea" (1 text plus a supplementary stanza, 1 tune)
DT, SATSEA
Roud #2020
NOTES [108 words]: According to John Malcolm Brinnin, The Sway of the Grand Saloon: A Social History of the North Atlantic, pp. 73-75, a poem called "Saturday Night at Sea" was written in 1838 by Judge Joseph Howe aboard the brig Tyrian as she made a transatlantic voyage. Brinnin quotes four verses. Apart from the words "Saturday Night at Sea," they have nothing in common with the poem in Huntington. Yet the theme is so similar that I have to think they are related. Given that the Florida version dates from 1843, my guess is that Howe heard the piece aboard ship, thought it unacceptable for some reason (perhaps it had bawdy lyrics?), and rewrote it. - RBW
File: SWMS065

Sauchen Tree, The

DESCRIPTION: He asks her to remember their good times and go again with him "to yon saughen tree." She won't: her mother flytes [argues] against it and her father frowns. He proposes. She accepts. They marry and "jog on through life and think o' lang syne"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan5)
KEYWORDS: love marriage father mother
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #29, pp. 1-2, "The Saughen Tree" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan5 984, "The Sauchen Tree" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
Roud #5636
NOTES [121 words]: The "sauch" or "saugh" seems likely to be "sallow" or willow, as I understand Webster's Third New International Dictionary. - BS
This is also the meaning supplied by Alexander Warrack, The Scots Dialext Dictionary, Waverly Books, 2000, p. 469 -- although "sauchen-toup" means a fool or one who is easy to trick (analogous to "blockhead," perhaps?), and there are secondary senses of "flexible" (like a willow wand) and a murmuring sound.
Douglas Kynoch, Scottish [Doric]-English/English-Scottish [Doric] Concise Dictionary, 1996 (I use the 1998 Hippocrene paperback), p. 77, gives "unsociable" as the only meaning for "sauchen," but allows that "saugh" (which presumably would be pronounced "sauch") means a willow. - RBW
File: GrD5984

Saucy Essex, The

DESCRIPTION: "The saucy Essex, she sailed out, To see what she could do. Her captain is from Yankee blood And so are all her crew." She sails to the Galapagos "and nabbed the slippery whalers." John Bull traps her in Valparaiso Bay. The song glosses over her failure
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1894 (Alfred M. Williams, _Studies in Folk-Song and Popular Poetry_, pp. 7-8); mentioned in 1867
KEYWORDS: ship battle
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1799 - Building of the U. S. S. Essex
1814 - Essex forced to surrender to the Phoebe and Cherub
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Alfred M. Williams, _Studies in Folk-Song and Popular Poetry_, Houghton Mifflin, 1894, pp. 24-26, "(no title)" (1 text, probably excerpted)
NOTES [177 words]: According to Lincoln P. Paine, _Ships of the World: An Historical Encylopedia_, Houghton Mifflin, 1997, pp. 174-175, the U.S.S. Essex was build in 1799, and served successfully in the Quasi-War with France. Taken out of commission from 1806-1809, she began the War of 1812 under Captain David Porter, she initially served well, taking ten prizes including the 18-gun
H.M.S. Alert.
The song says that the Essex took the whalers in the Galapagos, and Paine confirms that she "nearly destroyed Britain's South Pacific whale fishery" and took more prizes.
However, on February 3, 1814, she was blockaded in Valparaiso by H.M.S. Phoebe and Cherub, sent to track her down. On March 28, Porter tried to escape but lost her mainmast in bad weather.
The British then attacked (Paine accuses them of violating Chilean neutrality), and Porter was forced to surrender. Among the signals he raised during the battle was "Free trade and sailors' rights" -- one of the American war slogans. This incident is alluded to in the next to last verse of the Williams text. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.6
File: SFSPP024

Saucy Plough Boy, The
DESCRIPTION: "Come all you pretty maidens gay And listen unto me, Will you wed with a saucy ploughboy Whose heart is light and free?" The boy describes his life and says it is merry, with dancing and frolic. The girl says she will "live and die" with him
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1860 (Bodleian broadside Firth b.26(244)
KEYWORDS: farming courting
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-ThePainfulPlow, (no number; p. 30), "The Saucy Plough Boy" (1 text, a reproduction of a broadside, which appears to be the same print as Bodleian Firth b.26(244)
Roud #1462
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth b.26(244) "The Saucy Plough Boy," T. Ryle & Co (London), 1845-1859; also Harding B 11(3427), "The Saucy Plough Boy," W. S. Fortey (London), 1858-1885
File: PaPap30

Saucy Sailor, The (Jack and Jolly Tar II) [Laws K38]
DESCRIPTION: Jack the sailor admits his poverty to a girl, who scorns him and refuses his offer of marriage. He pulls out a handful of money and offers it to her; she instantly changes her mind. But Jack turns the tables; he has no need for a poor country girl
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1781 (broadside)
KEYWORDS: poverty courting money
FOUND IN: US(Ap,NE,SE) Canada(Mar,Newf) Britain(England(Lond,South,West),Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (16 citations):
Laws K38, "Saucy Sailor, The (Jack and Jolly Tar II)"
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 294-295, "Jack Tar" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 461-462, "The Saucy Sailor Boy" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, pp. 343-344]
Sauer Kraut

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, sauer kraut is hunky, boys, And sauer kraut is fine; I tinks I ought to know it 'Cause I eats it all der time." Aboard the Bella Young the crew fishes in summer, carries kelp in winter, and sells saurkraut by the barrel for Johnson or Zwicker.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia)

KEYWORDS: ship work food humorous nonballad sailor

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, p. 12, "Sauer Kraut" (1 text)

Roud #8890

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Sauerkraut" (subject)

NOTES [40 words]: This has enough in common with "Sauerkraut" that Roud lumps them. But "Sauer Kraut" is mostly about a sailing boat and "Sauerkraut" is about making the food; they may have a common origin, but at this point I'd consider them separate. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: SmHa12

Sauerkraut

DESCRIPTION: "Now if you'll only listen to what ye spake about, I'm going for to tell ye how to make the sauerkraut. The kraut's not made of leather as everyone supposes." It's made from cabbage, with salt; the singer eats it all the time

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Thomas-DevilsDitties)
KEYWORDS: work food humorous
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar) US(Ap)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Thomas-DevilsDitties, pp. 158-159, "Sourkraut" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, pp. 146-147, "Sauerkraut Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, SRKRAUT*
Roud #8890
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sauer Kraut" (subject)
NOTES [40 words]: This has enough in common with "Sauer Kraut" that Roud lumps them. But "Sauer Kraut" is mostly about a sailing boat and "Sauerkraut" is about making the food; they may have a common origin, but at this point I'd consider them separate. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: PoEll1146

Sault Ste. Marie Jail, The (The Albany Jail)

DESCRIPTION: The singer laments his time in prison. After getting drunk, he had to be forcibly taken into custody, and the bail was more than he could raise. Now he suffers prison food and confinement (as well as a preacher who keeps on "until my ears got sore")

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960
KEYWORDS: prison hardtimes drink
FOUND IN: US(MA) Canada(Ont)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 168, "The Albany Jail" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario 48, "The Soo St. Mary's Jail" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, SOOSTMRY*
Roud #2324
NOTES [28 words]: Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario: "He [Dave McMahon] learned it in the lumberwoods back in 1921...." - BS
This song is item dE51 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.6
File: FSC168

Sauvagesse, La

DESCRIPTION: "Je suis du bord de l'Ohio, J'ai le courage pour noblesse...." A voyageur Come-All-Ye. La Sauvagesse tells of herself, her love of the canoe, her parentage (a Frenchman and a witch) and so on.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1919
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage river fishing family witch
FOUND IN: Canada(Queb)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Botkin-TreasuryMississippiRiverFolklore, p. 581, "La Sauvagesse (The Girl of the Wilds)" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: BMRF581

Save de Union

DESCRIPTION: "A mighty angry quarrel rose Among the Tariff's friends and foes, And South Ca'llina, in a fit, De Union vows to curse and quit. But save de Union... Old Vlrginny never tire." In the quarrel between Calhoun and Clay, Virginia will support the Union

AUTHOR: LeRoy Anderson (source: Richmond Enquirer, Oct. 25, 1833)
Save Me, Lord, Save Me

DESCRIPTION: "I called to my father, my father hearkened to me, And the last word I heard him say Was, save me, Lord, save me." Repeat with mother, sister, brother, preacher, children, and anything else that springs to mind

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Smith-SouthCarolinaBallads)

KEYWORDS: religious father mother nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Smith-SouthCarolinaBallads, p. 85, "Save Me, Lord, Save Me" (1 text)

Roud #15307

File: ReSm085

Save My Father's Picture from the Sale

DESCRIPTION: "It was many years ago, in the time of frost and snow, My poor old father fell sick and died." The orphan is forced to watch as all (his/her) memories are sold. Finally he begs, "Save my father's picture from the sale!" and a pretty girl buys it for him

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Randolph)

KEYWORDS: death orphan commerce help

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Randolph 854, "Save My Father's Picture from the Sale" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 478-481, "Save My Father's Picture from the Sale" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 854)

Roud #4459

NOTES [62 words]: Cohen notes that several songs from the 1880s -- "Save My Father's Picture from the Sale," "Don't Sell My Mother's Picture," and the parody "Save My Brother's Whiskers from the Pail" -- seem built around the elements of this song. Whether these ancestral to or derived from the song given to Randolph is unclear; his informant thought the song older than the copyrights. - RBW

File: R854

Save Our Swilers

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you Newfoundlanders and listen to my song About St. Anthony's visitors from 'away' and 'upalong.'" "They are out to ban the seal hunt." "We're the endangered species." Listeners are urged to vote for those who support the seal hunt

AUTHOR: Arthur R. Scammell (1913-1995)

EARLIEST DATE: 1977 (Decks Awash 6:4)

KEYWORDS: hunting political nonballad

FOUND IN:
The song is correct that there was a quota on seals -- of sorts (Candow, p. 121); it was called the Total Allowable Catch. It was debatable whether it was sufficient to maintain the population; there certainly had been studies that said the limits were sufficient, but I am not impressed with the methods used. What is certain is that seals were a lot more rare in the 1970s than the 1820s. Of course, a population can be sustainable and still be below its peak. The real problem in the discussion is that some people thought killing seals was the murder of a beautiful and fairly intelligent animal while others thought it was a means of making a living. The views were so divergent that neither side was really willing to listen to the other. Thus we see anti-Greenpeace protesters forming a group "Codpeace," which claimed that if the seals were left unchecked, they would kill off the cod that were even more important to Newfoundland (Busch, p. 253). The problem with this, of course, is that the cod did just fine, seals or no seals, before humans came along, and the cod stocks fell, seals or no seals, when humans fished them almost to extinction! Whichever population you cared about, the problem was humans, not the other critters.

One can see this in the discussion on pp. 22-25 of Wright's book, for instance; although he is trying to understand both sides, he simply can't accept the arguments of those who opposed sealing. One of those who thought the sealing quota sufficient to maintain the population was the "Tommy Hughes" of the song. Tom Hughes was, in 1966, general manager of the Ontario Humane Society. He was a member of a team of observers who, in that year, went to observe the seal hunt to see if the regulations were working. The majority of the observers, including Hughes, said that they were, although they cast doubts on the humaneness of the killing (Candow, pp. 117-118) -- and Hughes would presumably have known, since he was a campaigner for more humane slaughter of domestic animals (Candow, p. 120).

The Cashins were an important family of Newfoundland politicians and developers; Michael Cashin was Prime Minister for a few months after World War I (Noel, pp. 290-291), and his son Peter was finance minister at the time of the Great Depression; his (justified) dissatisfaction with his Prime Minister Richard Squires helped bring down the government and force Newfoundland to realize how bad its problems were (Noel, p. 202). I haven't found anything about a Rick Cashin and sealing, though. I assume the reference is to Richard Joseph Cashin (born 1937), a lawyer and MP who was helped found the Newfoundland Fishermen Food and Allied Workers Union (DictNewfLabrador, p. 56).

Arthur Scammell's crankiness in this song didn't do any good; in 1978, the year after he wrote it, new protests arose against sealing. Davies had been muzzled by a court decision, but Greenpeace was still around, and they brought in actresses Monique van der Ven and Pamela Sue Martin, plus several American politicians (Candow, p. 130). By this time, no one seems to have wanted the seal products. Sealing, except as a local means of getting food (comparable to, say, deer hunting in the U.S.) was dying, no matter what Newfoundlanders thought.

For background on Arthur R. Scammell, see the notes on "The Squid-Jiggin' Ground." - RBW
Save Your Money When You're Young

DESCRIPTION: Singer describes his wasteful youth as a lumberjack and impoverished old age, advising listeners to "Save your money when you're young, you'll need it when you're old." He advises married men to stay home, away from grogshops, and single men to marry.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy)

KEYWORDS: age poverty drink warning money logger

FOUND IN: US(MW) Canada(Newf,Ont)

REFERENCES (9 citations):
Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy 7, "Save Your Money When You're Young" (1 text, 1 tune)
Rickaby/Dykstra/Leary-PineryBoys-SongsSongcatchingInLumberjackEra 7, "Save Your Money When You're Young" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 40, "Save Your Money When You're Young" (1 text)
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 35, "Save Your Money When You're Young" (1 text)
Finger-FrontierBallads, pp. 138-139, "Save Your Money When You're Young" (1 text)
Fowke-LumberingSongsFromTheNorthernWoods #61, "Save Your Money While You're Young" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario 53, "Save Your Money While You're Young" (1 text, 1 tune)
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 323-324, "Save Your Money When You're Young" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, SAVEMONY

Roud #2325

RECORDINGS:
Jim Doherty, "Save Your Money While You're Young" (on Lumber01)
Amos Payne, "Save Your Money When You're Young" (on NFAGuigné01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Turfman from Ardree" (tune, per Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario)

File: Be040

Saville the Brave Man

DESCRIPTION: "Saville the brave man, while other men trembled, Defied the fierce wind and the wild raging sea." In spite of storm warnings he and MacKenzie take Alma to fish the banks. Watchers from Cape Spry thought Alma could not be saved but Saville brings her in

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1968 (Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland)

KEYWORDS: fishing sea ship storm

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland, p. 51, "Saville the Brave Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 174-177,254, "Saville the Brave Man" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #12468
Savior, Like a Shepherd Lead Us

DESCRIPTION: "Savior, like a Shepherd lead us, Much we need thy tender care," "Blessed Jesus, blessed Jesus, Thou hast bought us." "Keep thy flock; from sin defend us." "Thou has loved us, love us still."

AUTHOR: Words: unknown (see NOTES) / Music: William B. Bradbury

EARLIEST DATE: 1836 (Thrupp, Hymns for the Young)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad shepherd

FOUND IN: REFERENCES (2 citations):

ADDITIONAL: Charles Johnson, One Hundred and One Famous Hymns (Hallberg, 1982), pp, 136-137, "Savior, Like a Shepherd Lead Us" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [441 words]: I know of no field collections of this song, but I've heard enough old-time recordings that I decided to include it.

There seems to be no question that William B. Bradbury (1816-1868) composed the music; according to Reynolds, p. 188, Bradbury published the text with his new tune in Oriola in 1859. The tune sometimes goes by the name "Bradbury" as a result. But the author of the words is open to question. Julian, p. 996, notes that the earliest surviving publication is in the fourth edition of Dorothea Ann Thrupp (1779-1847), Hymns for the Young, published in 1836. But Thrupp, who wrote a certain amount of religious poetry, did not sign this particular piece (Reynolds, p. 444, says that none of the pieces in that particular book were signed). Some experts -- e.g. McKim, p 270 -- have attributed it to her even so, and Rudin, p. 37, seems to think it likely although not certain. In 1838, W. Carus Wilson's June edition of Children's Friend has it with the author listed as "Lyte," and the next publication lists "H. Lyte" (Henry Francis Lyte). The next two publications did not list an author. Julian's conclusion: "The most that we can say is that the evidence is decidedly against Miss Thrupp, and somewhat uncertain with regard to Lyte as the writer of the hymn." For more on Thrupp, see "A Little Ship Was on the Sea." There are several Biblical allusions to Jesus (or, at least, the Messiah) as shepherd, but the main one is John, chapter 10, including 10:11, "I am the good shepherd. The good shepherd lays down his life for the sheep."

Reynolds, pp. 271-272, reports that Bradbury was born in York, Maryland in 1816; his family moved to Boston in 1830; starting in 1840, he worked as organist for various churches. He studied in Europe for two years starting in 1847. He and his brother formed the Bradbury Piano Company in 1859. Between 1841 and his death in Montclair, New Jersey on Jan. 7, 1868, he had a part in publishing fully 59 musical collections. Reynolds counts nine Bradbury pieces in the Baptist hymnal, making him one of the most popular nineteenth century hymn-writers. Rudin, p. 38, says that he studied with the famous hymnwriter Lowell Mason, and on p. 37 declares, he "did ore perhaps than any other man in organizing singing classes for children." Bradbury, Mason, and the famous popular songwriter George F. Root would go on to found the New York Normal Musical Institute in 1853 (Root, p. 11)

Bradbury is also responsible for "Angel Band," "Marching Along," and perhaps "Gently Lead Me" in the Index, and also for the tune to the infamous but un-indexed "Jesus Loves Me" by Anna Bartlett Warner. - RBW

Bibliography

- Julian: John Julian, editor, A Dictionary of Hymnology, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes)
- Rudin: Cecilia Margaret Rudin, Stories of Hymns We Love, John Rudin & Company, 1934 (I use the fourteenth printing of 1951)
Savourneen Deelish

