Colonial-Dames-AmericanWarSongs, pp. 44-45, has another Hornet song, "The 'Hornet,' or Victory," beginning "Rejoice! Rejoice! Fredonia's sons rejoice" (Roud V17245), but I see no hint of it in tradition. - RBW

Bibliography
Horrors of Libby Prison, The

DESCRIPTION: "Did the soldier dream of plenty on the Richmond prison floor? Did he dream that he was marching with his own brave army corps?" The singer describes the starvation and wretched conditions in southern prisons and hopes for release

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)
KEYWORDS: Civilwar soldier prisoner food death
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation): Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 59-63, "The Horrors of Libby Prison" (1 text)
NOTES [104 words]: I rather doubt that this is an actual song, though Thomas describes it so; it's too long and plodding to survive in oral tradition. Nonetheless conditions in Confederate prisons were always bad; they hadn't enough to feed their own soldiers, so how could they feed prisoners? Although the song refers to Libby Prison (and Pemberton Prison), I doubt it is based on anyone's actual experiences at that place; the song seems to describe the fate of enlisted men, but Libby Prison (in Richmond, on the James River, the former warehouse of Libby and Sons) was reserved for officers, and was largely shut down after May 1864. - RBW

File: ThBa059

Horse Named Bill, A

DESCRIPTION: "I had a horse, his name was Bill And when he ran, he couldn't stand still. He ran away one day And also I ran with him." Nonsense verses about the singer, his girlfriend, her cat, birds, balloons, and all else that comes to mind

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)
KEYWORDS: animal nonsense
FOUND IN: US(MW,SW)
NOTES [831 words]: Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag describes the tempo of this as "with lucid intervals if possible." The tune is the same as the first part of "Dixie." - RBW
I incline to the opinion that Sandburg wrote most of these verses. - PJS
Certainly a fair possibility, though he clearly started with some piece of craziness which he amplified (compare the "Crazy Song to the Air of 'Dixie'" - RBW
Verse 1 of Sandburg is similar to verse 4 of Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 355, "There was a monkey climbed a tree" (earliest date in Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes is 1626). Sandburg: "I had a horse, his name was Bill And when he ran, he couldn't stand still He ran away, one day And also, I ran with him"
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 355: "There was a horse going to the mill, When he went on, he stood not still."
Unlike "Horse Named Bill," all of Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 355 is of this type. For another example, "There was a crow sat on a stone, When he was gone, then there was none."
Halliwell 26, ("There was a monkey climb'd up a tree") [The Nursery Rhymes of England] is the same as Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 355. Halliwell says "it appears ... that these verses were written in 1626, against the Duke of Buckingham." - BS
Halliwell's reference appears to be to the couplet
There was a navy went to Spain,
When it returned, it came back again.
If this indeed was written in 1626, then it is presumably a reference to the failed attack on Cadiz ordered by, yes, Buckingham.
That's George Villiers, whom James VI and I made Duke of Buckingham. Villiers was a handsome young man (born 1592) when James -- who inclined to homosexuality -- noticed him in 1616. In fact, it appears several men-about-the-court gave him money to outfit him, intending to wave him under James's nose. According to Kishlansky, p. 96, "It was money well spent." Not only did Villiers eventually earn himself a Dukedom (something that should have been impossible, since he wasn't a member of the royal family), he also gained grants for his relatives (Kishlansky, p. 97)
Plus he became a major influence on the government -- so much so that, he was in a position to set policy that violated James's own goals. One of these errors -- taking Prince Charles to Spain in a failed attempt to arrange a marriage -- was so bad that some historians (e.g. Fry/Fry, p. 167) think that Buckingham had to have James killed to avoid blame. Whatever the truth of this, when Charles I succeeded his father in 1625, Buckingham retained influence -- but was impeached by the commons in 1626. He was assassinated in 1628 (Cannon, entry on "Buckingham, George Villiers, 1st Duke of").
According to Kishlansky, p. 89, Buckingham became the most hated man in England -- so hated that even his funeral procession had to be surrounded by armed guards, and it took place in the middle of the night (Kishlansky, p. 90).
The Cadiz expedition was one of those expensive fizzes that were an English specialty in this period. According to Stokesbury, p. 48,

"[In 1625] England launched a great expedition against Cadiz, but it turned out to be a dismal affair. Failing to destroy the Spanish shipping, Lord Wimbledon decided to take the city instead. He landed his troops, who unfortunately but happily found the storage center for all the wine bound for the Indies. The troops immediately drank themselves into a blind stupor, and they were with great difficulty gotten back aboard ship before the Spanish could round them up."
However, there were quite a few times when the English attacked, or at least proclaimed their intention to attack, Spain. Francis Drake had once raided Cadiz safely, in 1587 (Stokesbury, pp. 23-24) -- which resulted in a lot of English expeditions to Spain intended to emulate Drake. But if ever there as a human activity where trying to repeat just what was done before doesn't work, it's commerce-raiding.
Buckingham's failed expedition was one of many reasons why Charles I came under extreme pressure in his early years. Parliament's complaints against Charles would almost instantly result in the passage of the Petition of Right (Smith, p. 320). This did not solve Charles's problems, but "One grievance was soon removed when the Duke of Buckingham was murdered by a malcontent lieutenant, "John Felton, who blamed Buckingham for his personal disappointments" (Kishlansky, p. 89). Charles I was overcome with grief. There was national rejoicing." Obviously any minister that unpopular would have been an easy target for scurrilous broadsides.
Folklorists seem to have a thing about Buckingham. Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes, #181, mentions a suggestion that he is the Georgie Porgie of "Georgie Porgie Pudding and Pie"; there has also been a attempt to link him with "A Carrion Crow." In both cases it is possible to imagine a link between the poem and the career of Buckingham. But in neither case is the link compelling. - RBW

Bibliography
Horse Racing Song
DESCRIPTION: "It is of three north noble country dukes from the Newmarket came." They visit "Lord Framplin's halls" to see his horses. The "poorest duke" wagers 30,000 pounds. The riders taunt each other. Lord Framplin's horse wins the race
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Butterworth Collection)
KEYWORDS: horse racing gambling nobility
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Butterworth/Dawney-PloughboysGlory, pp. 20-21, "Horse Racing Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #72, "Horse Race Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1392
File: ButDo020

Horse Shit
DESCRIPTION: "A pilot of great reknown" attempts intercourse with a young woman, and fails in successive tries. The name derives from the refrain.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE:
KEYWORDS: bawdy nonballad pilot sex
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 42-43, "Horse Shit" (1 text)
Roud #10137
CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "The Monk of Great Renown"
NOTES [57 words]: This technically is not a ballad at all. - EC
As Ed notes, this is really a simplified version of "The Monk of Great Renown." He classifies them separately because this one has taken on odouriferous life of its own. Also, the versions of this piece seem to have lost the theme of abusing the girl to death found in some texts of "The Monk." - RBW
File: EM042

Horse Teamster, A
DESCRIPTION: Brady, a horse teamster driving for Cooley, comes to the skidway and asks for a tow. The teamster protests that his horses are stiff and lame, but Brady insists. The horses balk despite all his whipping; eventually he's hauled out by another team
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks)
KEYWORDS: lumbering work horse
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 32, "A Horse Teamster" (1 text)
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 33, "A Horse Teamster" (1 text)
Roud #4055
Horse Trader's Song, The

DESCRIPTION: "It's do you know those horse traders, It's do you know their plan? (x2) Their plan it is for to snide you And git whatever they can; I've been all around the world." About the tricks and travels of horse traders

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Randolph)

KEYWORDS: horse commerce travel trick

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Randolph 495, "The Horse-Traders' Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 355-357, "The Horse-Trader's Song" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 495)
- Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 168, "The Horse Trader's Song" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #5728

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Hang Me, Oh Hang Me (Been All Around This World)" (tune, floating lyrics)

NOTES [19 words]: Clearly a specialized adaption of "Hang Me, Oh Hang Me" -- but the difference in plot makes them separate songs. - RBW

File: R495

Horse Wrangler, The (The Tenderfoot) [Laws B27]

DESCRIPTION: A young fellow decides to try cowpunching. The foreman assures him that it is an easy job, but the young man soon finds reason to disagree. Hurt by a fall, he gives up the job or is fired

AUTHOR: words credited to D. J. O'Malley (but see below); tune "The Day I Played Base Ball"

EARLIEST DATE: 1894 (Miles City, Montana Stock Growers' Journal, credited to "R. J. Stovall")

KEYWORDS: cowboy injury work horse humorous

FOUND IN: US(MA,NW,So) Canada

REFERENCES (15 citations):
- Laws B27, "The Horse Wrangler (The Tenderfoot")
- Fowke/Johnston-FolkSongsOfCanada, pp. 96-97, "The Tenderfoot" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 274-275, "The Tenderfoot" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Bethke-AdirondackVoices, pp. 86-87, "The Tenderfoot" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Thorp/Fife-SongsOfTheCowboys III, pp. 44-57 (13-14), "The Tenderfoot" (7 texts, 4 tunes); Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys, pp. 146-148, "The Tenderfoot" (1 text)
- Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 72, "The Tenderfoot" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 19, "Cowboy's Life" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 17, pp. 118-122, "The Skewbald Black" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, pp. 176-178, "Breaking in a Tenderfoot" (1 text)
- Welsch-NebraskaPioneerLore, pp. 22-24, "The Horse-Wrangler" (1 text, 1 tune)
- ArkansasWoodchopper, pp. 54-55, "The Tenderfoor" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 114, "The Tenderfoot" (1 text)
- DT 599, TNDRFoot

ADDITIONAL: John I. White, _Git Along, Little Dogies: Songs and Songmakers of the American West_, 1975 (page references are to the 1989 University of Illinois Press edition), pp. 73-100, "D. J. 'Kid' O'Malley, Montana Cowboy Poet" (1 text, 1 tune on pp. 89-91)

Roud #3246

RECORDINGS:
- Bill Bender (The Happy Cowboy), "The Tenderfoot" (Varsity 5148, n.d.; rec. 1939)
- Slim Critchlow, "D-Bar-2 Horse Wrangler" (on Critchlow1, BackSaddle)
Glenn Ohrlin, "The Tender Foot" (on Ohrlin10)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Day I Played Base Ball" (tune)

NOTES [255 words]: The authorship of this piece is slightly uncertain. Lomax credits it to D. J. O'Malley (writing under the name R. J. Stovall); in 1932 O'Malley emphatically claimed authorship, claiming to have written in the piece in 1893. Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging apparently has no hesitation about crediting it to O'Malley; neither does Cannon. Sam Hinton heard a story that the real R. J. Stovall gave O'Malley a $5 hat for the right to publish the song under his name (so Sing Out!, volume 41, #2 [1996], p. 134, probably deriving the story from p. 87 of the essay by John I. White cited below).

However, the song was also claimed by an R. D. Mack, and Thorp's 1921 edition credits it to "Yank Hitson, Denver, Colorado, 1889." Perhaps more significantly, Thorp reports collecting it in Arizona in 1899. J. Frank Dobie rejected O'Malley's authorship, although for frankly rather absurd reasons. In support of O'Malley's authorship, we note that O'Malley is also credited with "Charlie Rutledge," which also appeared in the Miles City journal in the 1890s. On the other hand, O'Malley has also been credited with "Little Joe the Wrangler," and the evidence is strong that Thorp wrote that.

For background on O'Malley (and some prints from the Miles City newspaper), see John I. White, Git Along, Little Dogies: Songs and Songmakers of the American West, 1975 (page references are to the 1989 University of Illinois Press edition), pp. 73-100, "D. J. 'Kid' O'Malley, Cowboy Poet."

O'Malley's title was "The 'D2' Horse Wrangler." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: LB27

Horse's Confession, The

DESCRIPTION: "Come brother gelding, lend an ear And listen to my story... And it's for me you'll feel sorry." The horse has had three masters, each worse than the last. He's had hard times and has "good reason to complain, sir"

AUTHOR: Larry Gorman (1846-1917)

EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland)

KEYWORDS: horse hardtimes

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ives-LarryGorman, pp. 25-27, 195, "The Horse's Confession" (1 text plus several fragments)

Roud #25126

File: LaGoHoCo

Horsey, Horsey, Don't You Stop

DESCRIPTION: "Horsey, horsey, don't you stop, Just let your feet go clipetty-clop"; the (wooden?) horse is instructed to head for home

AUTHOR: Paddy Roberts and Ralph Butler (source: Dolby-OrangesAndLemons)

EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (composed, according to Dolby-OrangesAndLemons)

KEYWORDS: horse nonballad home

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 102, "Horsey, Horsey" (1 text)

Roud #21559

File: Dolb102

Horsham Boys

DESCRIPTION: Jarvis and James go to the pub and treat all the local low-lifes to drink, in the hope of buying their votes for Jarvis in the Parliamentary election. The rogues drink and smoke with the voters all night; the singer remonstrates with his fellow citizens

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 ("A Parliamentary History of Horsham, 1295-1885" by William Albury)

KEYWORDS: drink political

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Horton's In, The

DESCRIPTION: "The day retired serene and fair" as the Horton [which had slipped out of Canadian custody] returned home. The locals cheer that "The Horton's in!" The congratulate themselves on their cleverness in escaping

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (Beck-FolkloreOfMaine)

KEYWORDS: sea escape

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Oct 8, 1871 - Canada seizes the E. A. Horton (then in Halifax harbor) on a charge of fishing inside Canadian territorial waters

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Beck-FolkloreOfMaine, p. 213, "The Horton's In" (1 text)
Roud #4725 and 6563

CROSS-REFERENCES:

NOTES [74 words]: Although this event was celebrated enough to inspire at least two songs, reading the description of what happened on p. 212 of Beck-FolkloreOfMaine makes it sound as if the Americans were more in the wrong than the Canadians. Possibly the Edward A. Horton was innocent of the charge against her, but that should have been settled by diplomacy, not international piracy. Which is what this was, although the songs don't ever use the word. - RBW

File: BeMe213

Hosannah! Mi Bui' Mi House (Hosannah! I Built My House)

DESCRIPTION: Jamaican patois: The singer says he built a home on sandy ground and the rain soaked it, the sun burnt it, the river flooded it and the breeze blew it down. Must be obeah at fault. But then he builds on rocky ground and it survives.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (Murray-FolkSongsOfJamaica)

KEYWORDS: accusation fire flood ordeal magic

FOUND IN: West Indies(Jamaica)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Murray-FolkSongsOfJamaica, pp. 55-56, "Hosanna" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Noel Dexter and Godfrey Taylor, _Mango Time - Folk Songs of Jamaica_ (Kingston: Ian Randle Publishers, 2007), pp. 36-37, "Hosannah! Mi Bui' Mi House" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
Edric Connor with the Caribbeans and Earl Inkman, "Hosanna" (on WIEConnor01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Fyah Bun (Fire Burn)" (theme of destroyed house)

NOTES [176 words]: Dexter and Taylor have this as a reference to Matthew 7:24-27. [So do I. No question; I knew it halfway through the description. There is a parallel in Luke 6:48-50. That passage is probably the basis for "Home in that Rock" and other songs. - RBW]
The Bennett recording eliminates the obeah blame; the obeah blame seems a distraction from the point of the song since there is no "three pigs" outcome in which the obeah tries but fails to take the house on rocky ground down (Jekyll does have has a "three pigs" story collected in Jamaica that closely following the English text. Walter Jekyll, _Jamaican Song and Story_ (New York: Dover Publications, 1966 (Reprint of David Nutt, 1907)), #26 pp. 79-83); James Orchard Halliwell, _The Hospital Ship Song

DESCRIPTION: "Oh messmates the Maine is a wonderful sight When she steams out of Alex. with lamps on at night. We know where we're bound for and where we will go.... We chased the Eighth Army on Africa's shore," then head back to port and rest

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1983 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: ship sailor
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, pp. 96-97, "Hospital Ship Song" (1 text, tune referenced)

NOTES [112 words]: The Maine had "lamps on at night" because hospital ships were supposed to be lit so that enemy ships could identify them. It didn't always work, but generally the Axis respected the hospital ships.
After the fall of Crete, Malta was Britain's only real base in the Mediterranean between Gibraltar and Alexandria in Egypt (here called "Alex.").
The Eighth Army was the British army in Egypt that fought German general Rommel in the Desert War in the seesaw campaigns leading up to the British victory at El Alamein. This campaign went back and forth for years, which might explain why the Maine went back and forth. But there are no real dating clues in the song. - RBW

Hostler Joe

DESCRIPTION: Hostler Joe and pretty Annie wed and have a child. After four years, though, a stranger lures Annie away from her home with promises of fame and fortune. Her beauty wins her fame, but both fade in time. Joe arrives as she is dying

AUTHOR: Words: George Robert Sims
EARLIEST DATE: 1890 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: death beauty marriage abandonment children
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Randolph 830, "Hostler Joe" (1 text)
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 90-95, "Ostler Joe" (1 text)
ST R830 (Partial)
Roud #7440

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Ostler Joe
NOTES [82 words]: If I were to use one word to describe this piece of moralizing tripe, the word would be "sickening." Randolph remarks, "It is often recited by people of the same kind who recite 'The Face on the Barroom Floor.'"
Based on Hazel Felleman's The Best Loved Poems of the American People, it appears that the author's title of this is "Ostler Joe." But since Randolph's appears to be the only truly traditional collection (if it is truly traditional -- note the lack of a tune), I use his title. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
File: R830

Hot Ash-Pelt, The

DESCRIPTION: Singer McGuire leaves the farm for the asphalt crew. A peeler insults the men, and the singer knocks him into the boiler. They pull him out but the tar won't come off; now he hangs in the National Museum, "an example of the dire effects of hot ash-pelt"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (collected from John McLaverty)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer McGuire leaves the farm to be boss of the asphalt crew. A peeler (policeman) asks to light his pipe on the boiler fire; he insults the men, and the singer hits him, knocking him into the boiler. They pull him out and scrub him, but the asphalt won't come off; now he hangs by his belt in the National Museum, "an example of the dire effects of hot ash-pelt"

KEYWORDS: fight violence work humorous boss worker police technology

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland) Ireland

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 225, "The Hot Ash-Pelt" (1 text, 1 tune)
MacColl-ShuttleAndCage-IndustrialFolkBallads, pp. 26-27, "Hot asphalt" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, HOTASPLT

Roud #2134

BROADSIDES:
NLScotland, L.C.Fol.70(70a), "Hot Ashfelt," unknown, c. 1890

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Napoleon Crossing the Alps" (tune)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Hot Asphalt

NOTES [169 words]: Although we tend to think of paved roads as a modern contrivance (with, perhaps, the exception of the Roman roads), paving has been around for quite a while. The first modern paved roads were built by John Loudon McAdam (1756-1836), who as paving commissioner of Bristol from 1806 began using crushed rock to build solid surfaces ("macadam"). The idea caught on quickly; by the mid-nineteenth century, most "turnpikes" in the United States were paved. (A fact which could have important historical effects, e.g. during the Civil War. It's often stated that the Battle of Gettysburg took place where it did because it was a road center -- which is true, but there are plenty of road centers in Pennsylvania. Gettysburg was especially noteworthy because no fewer than three turnpikes -- the Baltimore, Chambersburg, and York Pikes -- met there.) The earliest macadamized roads were made simply of rock, but by the end of the century, bitumen was being used as a binder, requiring a device to keep the asphalt hot. - RBW

File: K225

Hot Codlings

DESCRIPTION: "A little old woman her living she got By selling hot codlings hot, hot, hot." But she feels cold, so she seeks "a quartern of RI tol iddy iddy iddy...." She drinks a whole bottle, and boys steal her codlings while she is drunk. She warns of drunkenness

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Scott); said to have been sung by Grimaldi in 1828 and earlier

KEYWORDS: food commerce drink humorous

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Scott-EnglishSongBook, pp. 58-59, "Hot Codlings" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #907, p. 61, "Hot Codlings" (3 references)
Hot Corn, Cold Corn (I'll Meet You in the Evening)

DESCRIPTION: Stanzas about drink, courting, drink, slavery, drink (you get the idea). Recognized by the themes of the chorus: Corn, a demijohn, evening meetings: "Hot corn, cold corn, bring along a demijohn (x3), I'll meet you in the (morning/evening), Yes, sir."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (recording, Arthur Collins)

KEYWORDS: drink nonballad courting floatingverses

FOUND IN: US(SE,SE,So)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Randolph 267, "I'll Meet You in the Evening" (2 texts, 2 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 228-230, "I'll Meet You in the Evening" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 267A)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 238-240, "Green Corn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, pp. 164-165, "Hot Corn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4954

RECORDINGS:
Fiddlin' John Carson, "Old Aunt Peggy, Won't You Set 'em Up Again?" (OKeh 40108, 1924)
Arthur Collins, "Hot Corn" (Columbia A-493, 1909; rec.1907) (CYL: Columbia 33075, 1907)
(Melotone 6-03-52 [as Fiddlin' Doc Roberts Trio], 1936; rec. 1934) [One of these discs is on KMM, but I don't know which]
Fiddlin' Doc Roberts Trio, "Hot Corn" (Perfect 6-03-52, 1936)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Hot Corn" (on NLCR03)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
ct. "Black-Eyed Susie (Green Corn)" (floating lyrics)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Green Corn

NOTES [49 words]: It is possible that this song and "Black-Eyed Susie (Green Corn)" spring from the same sources, since they share lyrics and themes. However, they have evolved far enough apart that I feel I have to split them. - RBW

I place the Fiddlin' John Carson record here for want of a better place. - PJS

Last updated in version 3.5

File: R267

Hot Cross Buns

DESCRIPTION: "Hot cross buns! Hot cross buns! One a penny, two a penny, Hot cross buns! If your daughters do not like them, give them to your sons...." Else, "eat them yourselves"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1797 (_Christmas Box_, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)

KEYWORDS: food commerce nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England,Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1686, "Hot Cross Buns" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 84, "Hot Cross Buns!" (2 texts)
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 75, "Hot Cross Buns" (1 text)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 159, "Hot Cross Buns" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Enid Porter, _The Folklore of East Anglia_, Batsford, 1974, p. 59, "(no title)" (1 text)
Marjorie Rowling, _The Folklore of the Lake District_, Rowman and Littlefield, 1976, p. 112, "(Hot Cross Buns, Hot Cross Buns)" (1 short text)

Roud #13029
NOTES [116 words]: Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes: "This was formerly a street cry, as mentioned, for instance, in Poor Robin's Almanack for 1733." - BS
As the Opies note, this began life as a street cry. But the tradition of hot cross buns at Eastertide has become so strong that it appears the piece has gone into tradition. There is a pretty good chance the buyers' daughters (as the song says) would not like them -- because (in Sussex at least) they were often kept for the entire year, as a good luck charm, and were said to never grow moldy. Which was probably true, because they were baked very dry and hard; see Jacqueline Simpson, The Folklore of Sussex, B. T. Batsford, 1973, p. 112. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: 0p0x084

Hot Engagement Between a French Privateer and an English Fireship, (An Excellent New Song Entitled A...)

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a prize for a captain to fall on, My name it is seafaring Kate." "My bottom was strongly well planked, My deck could a tempest endure, But ne'er was a poor dog... So tossed as was the Monsieur." "Then Monsieur got off and was grieved...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1691 (broadside date)
KEYWORDS: sailor trick ship sex
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 27, "An Excellent New Song Entitled A Hot Engagement Between a French Privateer and an English Fireship" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V12060
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Fire Ship" (theme)
File: PaSe027

Hot Nuts

DESCRIPTION: To a chorus beginning "Hot nuts. Hot nuts. Get 'em from the peanut man," we hear descriptions of various men's nuts, and various girls' reaction to same. All verses end with the exclamation "Nuts!"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (recording, Lil Johnson)
KEYWORDS: bawdy nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 344-346, "Hot Nuts" (1 text)
RECORDINGS:
Lil Johnson, "Get 'Em from the Peanut Man" (Champion 50002, 1935) (Vocalion 03199/Vocalion 03241, 1936); "Get 'em from the Peanut Man (Hot Nuts)" (Champion 50002, 1935) (ARC 6-5-58/Vocalion 03199, 1936)
Georgia White, "Get "em from the Peanut Man" (Decca 7152, 1936)
SAME TUNE:
Georgia White, "New Hot Nuts" (Decca 7631, 1939)
Lil Johnson, "Get 'em from the Peanut Man (The New Hot Nuts)" (Vocalion 03241, 1936)
File: EM344

Hotel Tipster, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh stop the horses or I'm ruined, Knock 'em up against the fence, Shoot Mulvolio [a racehorse] at Strathmore, Or I'll ose my eighteen pence.... Holy Diamons, Grey Gown has it, Or Jesus, she'll have lost."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Fahey-Joe-Watson-AustralianTraditionalFolkSinger)
KEYWORDS: horse racing gambling nonballad
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fahey-Joe-Watson-AustralianTraditionalFolkSinger, [p. 7, page headed "Horse racing played..."],
"(no title)" (1 short text)
File: FaWHotTi

Hound Dog Song, The

DESCRIPTION: "Ev'ry time I come to town, The boys keep kickin' my dog around, Makes no diff'rence if he is a hound, They gotta quit kickin' my dog around." The details of the tussle between dog and people is described, ending when the dog's owners counterattack AUTHOR: Edison Company lists Words: Ebb M. Oungst; music: Cy Perkins; similarly Richardson/Spaeth-AmericanMountainSongs; there are many, many other claims EARLIEST DATE: 1912 (sundry sheet music publications)
KEYWORDS: fight dog injury
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE,So)
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Randolph 512, "The Hound Dog Song" (1 text, 1 tune) Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 357-360, "The Hound Dog Song" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 512)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica, "The Hound Dawg Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Richardson/Spaeth-AmericanMountainSongs, pp. 80-81, "They Gotta Quit Kickin' My Dawg Aroun'" (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 253-254, "The Hound Dog Song" (1 text)
DT, KICKDAWG*
ADDITIONAL: Fred W. Allsopp, Folklore of Romantic Arkansas, Volume II (1931), pp. 196-198,
"The Ozark Dog Song" (1 fragment plus extensive folklore about whether the song is from Missouri or Arkansas)
Susan C. Attalla, "The Dawg Song War," article in _Missouri Folklore Society Journal_, Volume 27-28 (cover date 2005-2006, but published 2015), pp. 70-95 (various excerpts with extensive historical notes about the claimed sources of the song)
Roud #6690
RECORDINGS:
American Quartet & Byron G. Harlan, "They Gotta Quit Kicking My Dog" (Victor 17065, 1912)
Byron G. Harlan, "Gotta Quit Kickin' My Dawg Aroun'" (Columbia A-1150, 1912) (Edison Amberol 1023, 1912)
Gid Tanner and His Skillet Lickers, "Ya Gotta Quit Kickin' My Dog Aroun'" (Columbia 15084-D, 1926)
Cy Stebbins, "They Gotta Quit Kickin' My Dawg Aroun'" (Vocalion 14378, 1922)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
You Gotta Quit Kickin' My Dog Around
NOTES [748 words]: This was the campaign song of Champ Clark, [representative] from Missouri, during his campaign for President of the United States. He lost. - PJS
This perhaps needs clarification. James Beauchamp "Champ" Clark was never even nominated for the Presidency, though he came very close. As Congressman from Missouri, he had been a leader in the fight to strip the Speaker of the House of his dictatorial powers in that chamber. This made him an obvious candidate for the Presidency in 1912. There were four major candidates that year --
Clark, Woodrow Wilson, Representative Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, and Ohio Governor Judson Harmon, with three-time nominee William Jennings Bryan less a candidate than a kingmaker.
On the first ballot, Clark had 440 votes, Wilson 324, Harmon 143, Underwood 117 , 56 for others (Chace, p. 152). On the tenth ballot, Clark reached 556 votes -- a majority (DeGregorio, p. 415).
But the Democratic Party required that candidates receive two-thirds of the votes of the nominating convention delegates, and Clark -- though he was the clear favorite among the candidates -- never did gain that many votes (this was in the days when most delegates were chosen by caucus).
Eventually his support started to fail, and a series of deals made Woodrow Wilson the Democratic nominee.
William Jennings Bryan, who had already been nominated three times and lost all three times, had a lot to do with this; he had led the Nebraska delegation, and they had supported Clark -- but on the fourteenth ballot he declared that he would not support Clark as long as New York did (to vastly oversimplify, he claimed the New York delegation was corrupt; Chace, p. 155). According to one who was there, "Mr. Bryan had not the slightest idea, when he changed the vote of Nebraska, of contributing to the nomination of Wilson. He merely desired to defeat Champ Clark, with the concealed hope and expectation of prolonging the contest and receiving the nomination himself" (Chace, p. 155). Like most of Bryan's fantasies, that didn't work out, even though Wilson had been vacillating about releasing his delegates by that time (Chace, p. 154). The nomination contest went on.

The first real movement came on ballot #28, when Indiana shifted to Wilson, abandoning favorite son Thomas Marshall (who would eventually be chosen Wilson's vice president). Two ballots later, Wilson edged ahead of Clark, although he was still shy of the majority (Chace, p. 156). On ballot #43, Illinois went for Wilson, giving him a majority for the first time (Chace, p. 157). Two ballots later, other states started releasing their delegates, and on ballot #46, Wilson gained 990 votes and the nomination (Chace, p. 158).

It was the first time since 1844 that a candidate who had earned a majority of the delegates failed to eventually make it to two-thirds and the nomination (Chace, p. 153).

With the Republican Party split between the factions of Taft and Theodore Roosevelt, the Democratic nominee's election was assured. Thus Clark was only a rule change away from being elected President -- but not a single person ever voted for him in a national election.

To add injury to insult, in 1920, when Warren G. Harding was elected President, there was a Republican landslide. One of those swept out of the House was Clark, after 28 years in congress. When Clark was asked why, he snarled "Wilson." He was probably right; the nation was repudiating the ex-President (Boller, p. 214). Thus Wilson not only cost Clark the Presidency but eventually even his congressional seat.

Chace, p. 147, describes Clark as "at best an old-fashioned Democrat, ready to support moderate reforms. He has been described by Wilson biographer Arthur Link as 'a distinguished-looking figure.' As he stood at the speaker's desk 'in his long coat' or appeared 'on the street in his broad-brimmed black slouch hat, with a touch of color in his neck-scarf, he made one think -- well, of Henry Clay.'"

Randolph heard a story which based this on a pre-Civil-War incident in Forsyth, Missouri. Proof is, of course, lacking, and if the attribution to Oungst and Pekins is correct (which I don't quite believe), it seems unlikely to be true.

The closest thing to a definitive word is probably the article by Susan B. Attala cited in the references. She lists an extraordinary number of claims about the source or authorship of the song, none of which can be proved. Her ultimate conclusion is that we don't know the source. - RBW

Bibliography

- Chace: James Chace, 1912: Wilson, Roosevelt, Taft & Debs -- the Election That Changed the Country, Simon & Schuster, 2004

Last updated in version 5.3

File: R512

Hound Dog, Bay at the Moon

DESCRIPTION: "Hound dog, bay at the moon, Lay back your long ears, sing a sad tune, Lift up your long head... Hound dog, bay at the moon." The singer describes the hard times he is experiencing and wishes God would forgive and/or make it rain

AUTHOR: James William Smith M.D. (?)

EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Cray-AshGrove)

KEYWORDS: work dog hardtimes

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cray-AshGrove, p. 30, "Hound Dog" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [61 words]: There was a long Mudcat thread about this song in 2007. The general consensus was that James William Smith, M.D., a teacher of medicine at Oklahoma University Medical Center, wrote the original. Katie Lee modified it, Cisco Houston perhaps did so also, and a version was sung in the 1952(?) movie "The Meanest Man in Arizona." I have no way to verify any Hourra, Mes Boués, Hourra!

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Sailor is gathering strawberries and feeding them to a girl. Her mother arrives; he says he's using the berries to fix her teeth. The mother wants her share too, but the sailor says they're only for girls of 15. The old ones are for the captain.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage shanty bawdy food
FOUND IN: Canada France
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 137-138, "Hourra, Mes Boués, Hourra!" (2 texts, 1 tune)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Derriere chez nous y a z'un petit bois (Behind Our House There is a Little Wood)
NOTES [24 words]: If sung in French, the text is full of bawdy double entendres. This was possibly derived from a French-Canadian folk song with a similar story. - SL

House an' Lan' (House and Land)

DESCRIPTION: Jamaican patois: A poor girl says she has no man because "house an' lan' a buy fambly."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (Murray-FolkSongsOfJamaica)
KEYWORDS: grief poverty marriage nonballad
FOUND IN: West Indies(Jamaica)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Murray-FolkSongsOfJamaica, p. 36, "House an' Lan'" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Edric Connor with the Caribbeans and Earl Inkman, "House an' Lan'" (on WIEConnor01)

House of Mr Flinn, The

DESCRIPTION: Flinn is tall and thin, his wife short and fat. She eats the beef leaving him the bone. She lashes him with tongue and fists. He tries to control her but she beats him down and takes to drinking gin. Don't let a woman have her way.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan7)
KEYWORDS: shrewishness violence drink drink dialog humorous husband wife food
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1288, "The House of Mr Flinn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7142
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Scolding Wife (I)" (theme)
cf. "The Scolding Wife (IV)" (theme)
NOTES [37 words]: The title comes from the chorus ("By all the houses I have seen for grumbling and for din It beats them all to flindersticks the house of Mr Flinn") and the last line of each verse which is a variation on the chorus line. - BS

Last updated in version 5.0
File: Hugi137

Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD71288
House of the Rising Sun, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer laments, "There is a house in New Orleans / They call the Rising Sun / It's been the ruin of many a poor girl / And me, O God, I'm one." She tells of her troubled childhood, laments that she cannot escape her life, and warns others against it.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (recording, Ashley & Foster)
KEYWORDS: whore lament gambling drink husband father mother
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (9 citations):
  Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 250-253, "The House of the Rising Sun" (5 texts, 1 tune)
  Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 368-369, "The Rising Sun Blues" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 151, "The Rising Sun Blues" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 348-349, "Rounder's Luck" (1 text)
  Seeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 18, "House Of The Rising Sun" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Cray-AshGrove, pp. 31-32, "House of the Rising Sun" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 184, "House Of The Rising Sun" (1 text)
  DT, HOUSESUN*
ADDITIONAL: Moses Asch and Alan Lomax, Editors, _The Leadbelly Songbook_, Oak, 1962, p. 57, "House of the Rising Sun" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6393
RECORDINGS:
  Roy Acuff & his Smoky Mountain Boys, "The Rising Sun" (Vocalion 04909, 1939)
  Almanac Singers, "House of the Rising Sun" (General 5020B, 1941; on Almanac01, Almanac03, AlmanacCD1)
  Clarence Ashley & Doc Watson, "Rising Sun Blues" (on Ashley03, WatsonAshley01)
  [Clarence] Ashley & [Gwen] Foster, "The Rising Sun Blues" (Vocalion 02576, 1933)
  Homer Callahan, "Rounder's Luck" (Melotone 6-02-59, 1936; rec. 1935)
  Dillard Chandler, "Sport in New Orleans" (on Chandler01)
  Tom Darby & Jimmie Tarlton, "Rising Sun Blues" (Columbia 15701-D, c. 1931)
  Woody Guthrie, "House of the Rising Sun" (on AschRec2) (on WoodyFolk)
  Esco Hankins, "The Rising Sun" (King 650, 1947)
  Daw Henson, "The Rising Sun Blues" (AAFS 1508 B2)
  Roscoe Holcomb, "The Rising Sun" [LP] or "House in New Orleans" [CD] (on Holcomb-Ward1, HolcombCD1)
  Bert Martin, "The Rising Sun Blues" (AAFS 1496 B2)
  Pete Seeger, "House of the Rising Sun" (on PeteSeeger18)
  Georgia Turner, "The Rising Sun Blues" (AAFS 1404 A1)
NOTES [91 words]: Legman offers extensive, if rambling, notes in Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I. - EC
While this song is generally associated in the public mind with African-American tradition, it clearly circulated in the Anglo-American community extensively; Clarence Ashley said he learned it from his grandmother. - PJS
Tex Alexander in 1928 recorded a song with the "Rising Sun" title, which we took for a time to be the earliest reference. But Mark R. Fletcher sends me information making it clear that this is a different piece with the same name. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.3
File: RL250

House That Jack Built, The

DESCRIPTION: Jack built his house." "This is the malt that lay in the house that Jack built" "This is the sack that held the malt that lay in the house that Jack built" ....

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1780 (J. Marshall, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)
LONG DESCRIPTION: "Jack built his house" The master of hounds chases the fox that killed the cock that woke the priest that married the man that married the maiden that milked the cow that tossed the dog that tossed the dog that worried the cat that killed the rat that gnawed the string that tied the sack that held the malt that lay in the house that Jack built.
KEYWORDS: cumulative nonballad marriage farming animal clergy home
House to Let, Apply Within

DESCRIPTION: "House to let, apply within, People turned out for drinking gin, Smoking pipes is a terrible sin, So (Annie/Jennie) go out and Mary (run/jump) in."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)

KEYWORDS: playparty home drink drugs

FOUND IN: New Zealand US(South) Britain

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 100, ("House to let, apply within") (2 texts)

Roud #19223

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Floor to Let House to Rent
Rooms to Rent

File: SuSm100

House-Burning in Carter County, The

DESCRIPTION: A mother sets out from home to get some mullen oil, but -- despite her child's encouragement to hurry -- stays to talk. Before she returns, her house catches fire and her children die in each other's arms. The mother is told they are at rest

AUTHOR: James W. Day ("Jilson Setters")?

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)

KEYWORDS: fire death children mother

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 108-109, (no title) (1 text)

ST ThBa108 (Partial)

Roud #13945

File: ThBa108

Housewife's Lament, The

DESCRIPTION: The housewife complains of her never-ending war against dirt: "Oh life is a toil and love is a trouble, Beauties will fade and riches will flee, Pleasures they dwindle and prices they double...." At last she dies "and was buried in dirt."

AUTHOR: probably Eliza Sproat Turner (see NOTES)
EARLIEST DATE: 1871 (Arthur's Lady's Home Magazine, Volume 37)
KEYWORDS: work wife lament death burial dream
FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,SE)
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 312, "A Housekeeper's Tragedy" (1 text plus an excerpt)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 312, "A Housekeeper's Tragedy" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #110, "Poor Old Woman" (1 text)
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 97, "Life Is a Toil" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 67, "The Housewife's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 184, "The Housewife's Lament" (1 text)
DT, HSEWFLAM
Roud #5472
RECORDINGS:
Loman D. Cansler, "The Housekeeper's Complaint" (on Cansler1)
NOTES [165 words]: Earlier editions of the Index listed this as by H. A. Fletcher, which a question mark; I am no longer sure where I found this information. Jim Dixon gives what seems much more likely to be accurate information:
"THE HOUSEWIFE'S LAMENT [your title] was written as a poem titled A HOUSEKEEPER'S TRAGEDY by Eliza Sproat Turner. It appeared in her book Out-of-Door Rhymes (Boston, J. R. Osgood & Comp., 1872; reprinted Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott Company, 1903). The latter edition can be seen at Google Books...
"The earliest printing I can find was in Arthur's Lady's Home Magazine, Volume 37 (Philadelphia: T. S. Arthur & Sons, April, 1871 [also on Google Books]), page 241, where it appears without attribution:
"A year later, it appeared in Locomotive Engineers' Journal, Volume 6, No. 7 (Cleveland, Ohio: Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, July, 1872 [once again on Google Books]), page 310, with the correct attribution:
"I don't know who set it to music, or when." - JD, (RBW)
Last updated in version 4.1
File: FSC097

How Are You, Conscript?
DESCRIPTION: "How are you, conscript? Oh, how are you today? The provost marshal's got you In a very tight spot, they say, Unless you've got three hundred greenbacks To pony up and pay."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1977 (Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin); collected c. 1941 and printed in a broadside of c. 1863
KEYWORDS: soldier money Civilwar
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 233-234, "How Are You, Conscript?" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #377, p. 25, "Conscript, How Are You?" (2 references); compare #910, p. 61, "How Are You? Conscript!! Hop De Doodle Doo" (1 reference)
Roud #15674
NOTES [777 words]: Although the text in Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin does not say so, there is no doubt but that this song refers to the American Civil War draft; Wolf, p. 25, cites two versions of "Conscript How Are You?" "As sung by D. McConahy, the Razor Powder Man." Another listing, on p. 61, credits "How are you? Conscript!! Hop de Doodle Doo" to Don Felix, with an 1863 date, but I cannot be sure whether these are the same song.
Both sides in the Civil War eventually turned to conscription -- the South very early, in 1862 (Boatner, p. 172), the North rather later, in 1863. But both sides offered exceptions -- in the South, e.g., an overseer of a large number of slaves was exempted.
In the North, to which this song clearly refers, the goal was to provide a carrot and stick: If possible, to spur voluntary enlistment rather than bringing in actual draftees (Anders, p. 424) -- as well as to induce the states to produce soldiers in numbers roughly proportionate to their populations (Randall/Donald, p. 314). But this meant that not everyone whose number was called would be forced to join the army. Theoretically, all men from ages 20 to 45 were subject to the draft and to service of up to three years (Randall/Donald, p. 314). But there were three legal escape routes. One was to be exempted for some cause, usually due to having a dependent with no other means of support or perhaps physical incapacity. The table on p. 604 of McPherson shows that, in several typical districts, between a third and half of those called up were "exempted for cause." (Throw in the one-sixth to one-quarter of the draftees who failed to report, fleeing instead to Canada or the west, and fewer than half those who were called actually made it to the stage of having to decide what to do next.) That still didn't mean that a man had to join the military. As Catton puts it on p. 206, "built into [the draft law] was a rule that a man with money could not be compelled to go into the army." There were two ways to buy one's way out. One was to hire a substitute -- that is, to induce another man to enlist in your place and pay the cost. This led to a large-scale business in "substitute brokering." It was a very bad business (many substitutes were recent immigrants -- some of them just off the boats -- who were not subject to the draft because they were not citizens; most of the rest were drunks or otherwise worthless). It was expensive, too -- hiring a substitute often took on the order of $1000 in the South (McPherson, p. 603) but at least it finally settled a man's draft status. A Northern man who did not hire a substitute could still get a deferment by paying a commutation fee of $300 (Anders, p. 424) -- the purpose of this, in fact, was to hold down the price of substitutes (McPherson, p. 603). This did not spare him from future drafts, just kept him out of the army until the next draft call. But with substitutes hard to find, it was better than nothing. It was also exceptionally unfair; $300 was a substantial fraction of a year's earnings for a laborer (Catton, p. 206) -- and more than twice the annual pay of a private who was paid $13 per month (Boatner, p. 624), and that in greenbacks which were usually depreciated. The result was actual rebellion against the draft laws in some areas of the North (Catton, p. 163), as well as severe draft riots in New York City (Randall/Donald, pp. 315-316). Damage estimates for the riots run from $400,000 up to six times that, and some sources say a thousand people were killed (Catton, p. 207). To prevent such violence, some governments actually started paying people's commutation fees (McPherson, p. 604). In most areas, those who managed to escape the army vastly exceeded those who were inducted (McPherson, p. 604), and the ones who did join were those with the least clout. Naturally those on the front lines resented those who stayed behind, and those who volunteered for the armies had a low opinion both of those who avoided the draft and of the draftees and substitutes. This war, even more than most others, was a "rich man's war and a poor man's fight" (McPherson, p. 602). The provost marshal, mentioned in the song, was the officer responsible for enforcing the law. All significant Union armies had one, as did the local districts, and the provost marshal was responsible for enrolling those of eligible age (McPherson, p. 600) and for drawing the names for the draft (Boatner, p. 245). - RBW Bibliography

- Boatner: Mark M. Boatner III, The Civil War Dictionary, 1959 (there are many editions of this very popular work; mine is a Knopf hardcover)
- Catton: Bruce Catton, Never Call Retreat (being the third volume of The Centennial History of the Civil War), Doubleday, 1965 (I use the 1976 Pocket Books edition)

Last updated in version 3.5
File: Pet233
How Are You, John Morgan?

DESCRIPTION: "A famous rebel once was caught With saber bright i hand Upon a mule he never bought But pressed in Abra'm's land." John Hunt Morgan is put in prison, "but prison fare he did not like," so he escapes with much property to further plague the Union

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1864 (sheet music published by D. D. Benson, Nashville, according to Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar)

KEYWORDS: Civilwar soldier derivative prison escape horse humorous

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, p. 224, "How Are You, John Morgan?" (1 text with reference back to the source, "Here's Your Mule")
Salt-BuckeyeHeritage-Ohio'sHistory, pp. 89-90, "How Are You, John Morgan?" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "John Morgan, Where You Been?" (subject)

NOTES [563 words]: John Hunt Morgan (1825-1864) was a type of which the Confederacy had a sufficiency: The gallant cavalry raider, always impeccably dressed, with an appeal to the ladies. Some of these types, like J. E. B. Stuart, were considered successful; some, like Earl Van Dorn, were considered failures; but all three were dead by the end of 1864. Maybe the simplest way to talk about him is to quote his capsule biographies.

Warner, pp. 220-221:
"John Hunt Morgan, whose two sisters married Generals A. P. Hill and Basil W. Duke, was born at Huntsville, Alabama, Jun 1, 1825. Educated at Transylvania College in Lexington, Kentucky... he enlisted in the Mexican War and saw service at Buena Vista. He was mustered out in 1847, and commenced the manufacture of hemp in Lexington, and engaged in the general merchandising business left him by his grandfather Hunt. He organized the Lexington Rifles in 1857, but when the Civil War came, Morgan led his command to Bowling Green and joined the force of [Confederate] General Bucker.... He was promoted colonel of the 2nd Kentucky Cavalry on April 4, 1862, and brigadier general on December 11. His series of raids into Tennessee, Kentucky, and Ohio earned him a vote of thanks from the Confederate Congress and the undying enmity of a large segment of the frightened North. On his famous raid north of the Ohio in 1863 he was captured near New Lisbon and imprisoned in the Ohio State Penitentiary, together with a number of his officers. [He contrived] to escape and make his way south.... [This is of course the subject of this song.] He bivouacked in Greenville, Tennessee, on the night of September 3, 1864, while en route to attack near Federal forces near Knoxville. Early the next morning he was surprised by a detachment of Union cavalry and was killed in the garden of the house where he had been sleeping."

Boatner, p. 566:
"MORGAN, John Hunt.... After fighting in the Mexican War, he was a businessman in Lexington, KY, and raised in 1857 the Lexington Rifles, a militia group. He was commissioned Capt. in Sept. '61 and given a squadron of cavalry for scouting. The next year saw the start of the famous Morgan's Raids [Boatner, lists four, July 1862, October 1862, December 1862-January 1863, and the Ohio raid, July 2-26, 1863]. At Shiloh he commanded the Ky. Squadron of cavalry.... He was captured 26 July '63 near New Lisbon (Ohio) and escaped with others from the Ohio State Penitentiary (Columbus) 26 Nov. In Apr. '64 he commanded the Dept. of Southwest V[irginia] and on 4 Sept. '64 was surprised and killed by Federal troops at Greenville, Tenn. His courtship and marriage to Mattie Ready were in the romantic tradition of his military operations."

Boatner, p. 682, says that Ready was a girl of Murfreesboro, Tennessee who, after that town was occupied, defended his reputation despite never having met him. When a Federal asked her name, she replied, "It's Mattie Ready now, but by the grace of God one day I hope to call myself the wife of John Morgan." Morgan heard about it, visited her, and married her in December 1862; Confederate General Leonidas K. Polk, an Episcopal bishop, performed the marriage. No one seems to have paid much attention to the story of the young widow after the war. And, of course, no one added any verses to this song to explain how Morgan was killed, for practical purpose, in his bed. - RBW

Bibliography

- Boatner: Mark M. Boatner III, The Civil War Dictionary, 1959 (there are many editions of this very popular work; mine is a Knopf hardcover)
How Ashamed I Was

DESCRIPTION: Upon joining the service or meeting a member of the opposite sex, the soldier recalls "How ashamed I was." The singer describes military life, or seduction, or both, concluding, Oh, gor blimey, how ashamed I am/was.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead)

KEYWORDS: soldier clothes courting seduction hardtimes

FOUND IN: Canada

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, pp. 82-83, "How Ashamed I Was -- WD Version" (1 text, tune referenced); p.133, "How Ashamed I Was" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #20494

NOTES [27 words]: The male version of this looks like someone was trying to create a modernized "A-Rovin'" but couldn't remember the tune. The other versions took off from there. - RBW

How Can A Poor Man Stand Such Times and Live?

DESCRIPTION: Times are hard; goods used to be cheap, but they're now exorbitant. Schools are bad, but all children are sent nonetheless. Prohibition, although good, is inappropriately enforced. Preachers and doctors are corrupt.

AUTHOR: Blind Alfred Reed

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (recording, Blind Alfred Reed)

KEYWORDS: hardtimes nonballad money

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 383-384, "How Can a Poor Man Stand Such Times and Live?" (1 text)

RECORDINGS:

New Lost City Ramblers, "How Can a Poor Man Stand Such Times and Live?" (on NLCR09, NLCRCD1)

Blind Alfred Reed, "How Can a Poor Man Stand Such Times and Live?" (Victor V-40236, 1929; on HardTimes1)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Rigs of the Times" (subject)

NOTES [7 words]: Pity we don't have a keyword "bitching." - PJS

How Can I Be Merry Now?

DESCRIPTION: "As I went up thro' Union Street, I spied an apple as green as a look, The outside was fair, but the inside was rotten, And fin love's oot o' sight it'll soon be forgotten ... how can I be merry now? My poor heart's heavy since my love's gone"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan6)

KEYWORDS: courting nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Greig/Duncan6 1200, "How Can I Be Merry Now?" (1 short text)

Roud #6801

NOTES [11 words]: The current description is based on the one Greig/Duncan6 verse. - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD61200
How Can I Keep from Singing

DESCRIPTION: "My life flows on in endless song Above earth's lamentation... It sounds an echo in my soul, How can I keep from singing." The singer notes all the troubles swirling around, but refuses to be influenced by such things

AUTHOR: Robert Lowry
EARLIEST DATE: 1868 (New York Observer and Chronicle, according to John Garst)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 353, "How Can I Keep From Singing" (1 text)
DT, KEEPSING*
NOTES [419 words]: My original notes on this mentioned it as a Quaker song, based on liner notes on an album that shall remain nameless (and certainly it fits Quaker doctrine regarding the individual conscience, plus there is that line about "When friend (Friends?) by shame are undefiled..."). But John Garst has found out more about it:
"The text was first published with a tune by Robert Lowry in Bright Jewels for the Sunday School, 1869. The text alone, entitled Always Rejoicing, was published in the New York Observer and Chronicle, August 27, 1868 (information from Barbara Swetman). The text was submitted to the Observer, apparently as an original work, by 'Pauline T.' The song has nothing to do with Quakers, who did not sing hymns in their early days, except that Doris Plenn's Quaker grandmother knew it. One of the stanzas sung by Pete Seeger, beginning "When tyrants tremble, sick with fear," is by Doris Plenn. It is a protest of McCarthyism." - JG (RBW)

John Julian, editor, A Dictionary of Hymnology, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes), p. 699, gives this publication history: "In Bright Jewels, 1869; the Royal Diadem, 1873, and others in America and G[reat] Britain, with music by the author."

Julian gives this biography of Lowry: "D.D., s[on] of Crozier Lowry, was b[orn] at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, March 12, 1826, and educated at Lewisburg University. Having received ordination as a Baptist Minister, his first charge was a West Chester, Pennsylvania. From thence he passed to New York City, and then to Brooklyn, N. Y. In 1876 he was appointed Professor of Rhetoric in his University. On resigning his Professorship he undertook the charge of the 2nd Baptist Church, New Jersey. Dr. Lowry has been associates with some of the most popular Sunday School hymn-books published in the States, including Happy Voices, 1865; Chapel Melodies, 1868; Bright Jewels, 1869; Pure Gold, 1871; Royal Diadem, 1873; Tidal Wave, 1874; Fountain of Song, 1877; Welcome Tiding, 1877, &c."

Unlike most hymn composers, Lowry managed to produce several songs that went into oral tradition. In addition to this song, he wrote "Shall We Gather at the River" and "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?." According to William Reynolds, Companion to Baptist Hymnal, Broadman Press, 1976, p. 192, one of the congregations where Lowry served was at "Hanson Place" in Brooklyn; "Shall We Gather at the River" was given its official tune name after that congregation. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1
File: FSWB353A

How Can I Leave You

DESCRIPTION: "The maiden was wealthy, the lover was poor." She rejects him because "wealth came between them." He says the difference means nothing to him. She leaves. Two years later "she'd lost all her riches," and asks his forgiveness. He takes her back.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: poverty love rejection parting reunion money
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1837, "How Can I Leave You" (1 text)
Roud #13605
File: GrD81837
How Could I Live
DESCRIPTION: "How could I (live / walk / talk) If it wasn't for the Lord?" "Once I was alone In this world of sin Jesus lifted me up."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (LomaxCD1708)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
Roud #17301
RECORDINGS:
Peerless Four, "How Could I Live" (on LomaxCD1708)
File: RCHCILiv

How Dry I Am
DESCRIPTION: "How dry I am/How dry I am/Nobody knows/How dry I am"
AUTHOR: Music: Edward Rimbault, adapted by Tom A. Johnstone; Words: Will B. Johnstone
EARLIEST DATE: 1921 (sheet music)
KEYWORDS: drink nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, pp. 279-280, "How Dry I Am"
RECORDINGS:
Bar Harbor Society Orchestra, "Old Timers" (Vocalion A-14315, 1922)
Wise String Orchestra, "How Dry I Am" (Vocalion 05360, 1939)
NOTES [89 words]: This fits Dave Para's definition of folklore perfectly: What everybody knows, and no one gives a second thought. I'm astonished it's not listed in any books we've indexed thus far.
Fuld describes the melody as an adaptation of the hymn "(O) Happy Day," published in the 1855 "Wesleyan Sacred Harp," A short version of the song appeared in the musical "Up in the Clouds", and we've listed that as "Earliest Date." The complete song was published in Gaskill & Ernest's "Good Fellow Songs," published in 1933 -- just in time for Repeal. - PJS
File: RchDIA

How Five-and-Twenty Shillings Are Expended in a Week
DESCRIPTION: A tradesman asks his wife how his wages are spent. She lists to the halfpenny: rent, meat, bread ... his fish, drinking, tobacco and shaving... and her drop of gin
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1846 (broadside, Bodleian Johnson Ballads 520)
KEYWORDS: money work drink food dialog humorous husband wife
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, p. 162, "How Five-and-Twenty Shillings Are Expended in a Week" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: John Ashton, Modern Street Ballads (Detroit: Singing Tree Press, 1968 reprint of London: Chatto & Windus 1888 edition), pp. 48-51, "How Five and Twenty Shillings Were Expended in a Week" ("It's of a tradesman and his wife, I heard the other day") (1 text; see note)
Jon Raven, _The Urban and Industrial Songs of the Black Country and Birmingham_, Broadside, 1977, pp. 233-234, "How Five & Twenty Shillings Were Expended in a Week" (1 text)
Roud #V1598
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 520 [many illegible words], "How Five and Twenty Shillings Was Expended in a Week" ("It is of a tradesman and his wife"), E.M.A. Hodges (London), 1844-1845; also Harding B 11(1585), Firth c.20(129), Firth b.27(336), Harding B 11(1583), Harding B 11(1582), "How Five and Twenty Shillings Was Expended in a Week"; Harding B 11(1584), "How Five and Twenty Shillings Are Expended in a Week"; Firth b.25(251), "How Five and Twenty Shillings Were Expended in a Week"
LOCsinging, as112660, "How 25s. Were Expended in a Week" ("It is a tradesman and his wife, I heard the other day"), unknown, no date
SAME TUNE:
Pretty Little Miss (broadside, Bodleian Firth b.27(336))
File: KiTu162

How Happy is the Man!
DESCRIPTION: "How happy is the man that is free from all care." He can drink, smoke, and sing with friends. "How happy this isle" which has plenty of meat and drink, "free from control," bold soldiers, valiant sailors. Let's drink and sing "till we hail the new day"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames)
KEYWORDS: drink music commerce nonballad patriotic
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 43, "How Happy is the Man!" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Gi 37)
Roud #1230
File: WT043

How Happy's the Mortal
DESCRIPTION: The miller is happy because his life depends only on his own mill wheel and "not on fortune's wheel." If his wife is a scold his mill "drowns all the discord" with its "clack, clack, clack" He prevails over wife and daughter by physical abuse and rape
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1707 (Pills to Purge Melancholy, according to Farmer)
LONG DESCRIPTION: The miller is happy because his life depends only on his own mill wheel and "not on fortune's wheel." If his wife is a scold his mill "drowns all the discord" with its "clack, clack, clack." He prevails over wife and daughter by "sticking a Cog, of [or?] a foot in their tails" and if his wife annoys "he lays upon her back; And all the while he sticks it in."
KEYWORDS: shrewishness rape sex violence abuse work ordeal bawdy children husband wife miller
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
ADDITIONAL: John Stephen Farmer, editor, Merry Songs and Ballads, Prior to the Year 1800 (1897 ("Digitized by Google")), Vol III, pp. 157-158, "How Happy's the Mortal" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Jolly Miller" (first verse, more or less)
NOTES [70 words]: Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame points out the similarity between the first verse of "How Happy's the Mortal" ("How Happy's the Mortal, That lives by his Mill; That depends on his own, Not on Fortune's Wheel; By the slight of his hand, And the strength of his Back; How merrily, how merrily, His Mill goes Clack, clack, clack, How merrily, how merrily, How merrily, how merrily, His Mill goes Clack") and the usual first verse of "The Jolly Miller." - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: AdHHtMo

How I Could Ride!
DESCRIPTION: The singer complains of having no horse to ride, nor saddle, nor spurs. His mother tells him not to be idle but to ride the old bull and use rags and nails. "So I took the old bull and he cocked up his tail, And away went I in a storm of hail."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames)
KEYWORDS: animal mother
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 47, "How I Could Ride!" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 356)
Roud #1231
How I Love the Old Black Cat

DESCRIPTION: "Who so full of fun and glee? Happy as a cat can be, Polished sides so nice and fat, How I love the old black cat! Yes I do." The boys try to sick dogs on the cat, but the girl (?) rescues it. She prefers it to other pets

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: animal nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 147, "How I Love the Old Black Cat" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 147, "How I Love the Old Black Cat" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #15767
File: Br3147

How I Love Them Pretty Yellow Gals

DESCRIPTION: "How I love them pretty yaller gals, One named Becky and the other named Sal. Soon there'll be a wedding in the cottage over yonder, And I'll be happy evermore. Soon there'll be great times dancing In the kitchen on the floor."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)
KEYWORDS: love marriage dancing
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 744, "How I Love Them Pretty Yellow Gals" (1 short text, 1 tune)
NOTES [33 words]: The description is based on the Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5. Schinhan suggests that this is a minstrel song, which seems likely enough, but I can't find a published source. - RBW

How Lang Have I a Bachelor Been

DESCRIPTION: The singer tells his mother he has been a bachelor for (48 years), and Meg will not have him no matter how often he asks. Mother tells him to go back and ask again. He declares that Meg must marry him. She refuses; he wails; mother says to stop crying

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1776 (Herd)
KEYWORDS: courting rejection mother humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lyle/McAlpine/McLucas-SongRepertoireOfAmeliaAndJaneHarris, pp. 148-150, "Oh! Mither I hae a batchelor been" (1 text)
Roud #8548
File: HLMM148

How Lon the Train Been Gone?

DESCRIPTION: "Come and go with me (x3)." "How long the train been gone? (x3) Come and go with me." "Got my mother and gone (x3), Come and..." "It been very long gone." "Got my father and gone." "Dark cloud risin' in the east." "I'm gonna rise in that Judgment Day."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1980 (Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices)
How Long Blues

DESCRIPTION: "How long, how long Has that evening train been gone, How long, Baby, how long, how long?... How long will it be Before you learn to quit mistreating me?" The singer complains about his lost woman and the travelling he has done.

AUTHOR: Leroy Carr?

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recordings, Tampa Red's Hokum Jazz Band, Gladys Bentley); perhaps 1921 (recorded by Daisy Martin)

KEYWORDS: loneliness separation travel

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 437-440, "How Long, How Long Blues" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 314, "How Long Blues" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, HOWLONG*

ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 25, #1 (1976), p, 39, "How Long" (1 text, 1 tune, from Mable Hillery, which is a somewhat dubious relative; it has this general tone and many similar lyrics but also has much floating material and a different final line); Volume 38, #4 (1994), pp. 40-41, "How Long Blues" (1 text, 1 tune, the original Carr/Blackwell version)

RECORDINGS:
Gladys Bentley, "How Long - How Long Blues" (O'Ke 8612, 1928)
Leroy Carr [and Scrapper Blackwell], "How Long -- How Long Blues" (Vocalion 1191, 1928; Vocalion 1241, 1929; Banner 32557/Oriole 8166/Perfect 0215/Romeo 5166, 1932)
Jed Davenport, "How Long How Long Blues" (Vocalion 1440, 1930)
Folkmasters, "Rising Sun" (on Fmst01) [This is not "House of the Rising Sun," but a Brownie McGhee partial rewrite of "How Long Blues"]
Bertha "Chippie" Hill w. Baby Dodds' Stompers "How Long Blues" (Circle J-1003, n.d.)
Skip James, "How Long 'Buck'" (Paramount 13085, rec. 1931)
Wingy Manone & his orchestra, "How Long Blues" (Bluebird B-10749, 1940)
Daisy Martin, "How Long? How Long?" (O'Ke 8009, 1921, possibly this song)
Tampa Red's Hokum Jug Band, "How Long How Long Blues" (Vocalion 1228, 1928)

SAME TUNE:
Leroy Carr, "How Long, How Long Blues Part 2" (Vocalion 1279, 1929; Banner 32557/Oriole 8166/Perfect 0215/Romeo 5166, 1932; rec. 1928); Carr later released additional "How Long" sequels

NOTES [216 words]: I have not heard the Daisy Martin recording; it may be a different song. If it's the same, however, that shoots Carr's authorship in the foot. - PJS
According to Cohen, Martin's recording is "not closely related"; neither is a song recorded in 1928 by Alberta Brown, "How Long." Cohen of course does note some earlier materials which may have inspired Carr.
Cohen adds that their June 1928 recordings "inauguratu[ed] a major change in the nature of recorded blues music. Smoother, more urbane than most of the country blues that preceded them, more polished, and considerably more danceable, their style was immediately emulated." The result was to make piano-and-guitar blues much more common. - RBW
Except that they didn't get much more common, unless Carr and Blackwell were doing them. It's a difficult combination. - PJS

Carr and Blackwell alone were responsible for quite a few; the 1994 article in Sing Out! quotes William Barlow's _The Emergence of Blues Culture_ as saying the two had to re-record the song three times because the master kept wearing out! It was one of the best-selling "race" records of the period.
Carr unfortunately died in 1935 of alcohol abuse; he was only 30 years old. This probably means that a number of questions about this song will never be answered. - RBW
How Lovely It Was

DESCRIPTION: "Thanks for the memory
Of biplanes in the sky,
Of pilots who could fly,
Of four hour trips, attacking ships, returning with a sigh,
How lovely it was."
The singer recalls shore leave, equipment repair, WRENs, wartime heartbreak, and service life

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)

KEYWORDS: navy work love separation derivative technology

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 77, "How Lovely It Was" (1 text, tune referenced)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Thanks for the Memories" (tune)

How Many Biscuits Can You Eat?

DESCRIPTION: "How many biscuits can you eat, this mornin', this mornin'? (x2) Forty-nine, and a ham of meat, this mornin'.'" Discussion of food, work, etc., with many floating verses ("Ain't no use me workin' so hard," "If you get there before I do").

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recording, Humphrey Bate)

KEYWORDS: food nonballad work

FOUND IN: US(SE)

Roud #7876

RECORDINGS:
Dr. Humphrey Bate & his Possum Hunters, "How Many Biscuits Can You Eat?" (Brunswick 232, 1928)
Gwen Foster, "How Many Biscuits Can I Eat" (Bluebird B-8082/Montgomery Ward M-7859 [as "How Many Biscuits Can You Eat"], 1939)
Grandpa Jones, "How Many Biscuits Can You Eat?" (King 740, 1948)
Pickard Family, "How Many Biscuits Can You Eat" (Coast 253, n.d.)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Crawdad" (tune)

SAME TUNE:
Crawdad (File: R443)

NOTES [34 words]: This is pretty definitely built about "Crawdad," or one of its relatives, and manages to be even sillier than that silly song. But it's been recorded enough that I finally decided it went in the Index. - RBW

How Many Horses (Blind Man's Buff rhyme)

DESCRIPTION: "How many horses has your father got in his stables? Three. What color are they? Red, white, and gray. Then turn about and tist about and catch them when you may." A rhyme for Blind Man's Buff or "Blinc buck-a-Davy."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Deane /Shaw)

KEYWORDS: horse play party colors nonballad father

FOUND IN: Britain(England(West))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Tony Deane and Tony Shaw _The Folklore of Cornwall_, B. T. Batsford, 1975, p. 51, "(How many horses has your father got in his stables?)" (1 short text)

File: DeSh051B
How Many Miles to Babylon?

DESCRIPTION: Singing game: "How Many Miles to (Babylon)? (Three) score and ten. Can I get there by candlelight? Yes, and back again." The rest of the song may refer to the pleasures of "Babyland" (Henry text), or to courting, or traveling -- or something else.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1805 (Songs for the Nursery, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)

KEYWORDS: play party travel nonballad

FOUND IN: Ireland Britain(England(All), Scotland) US(Ap,MW,NE,SE) Canada(Ont) New Zealand

REFERENCES (15 citations):
- Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H40a, p. 12, "How Many Miles to Babylon?" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 18-19, "How Many Miles to London Town" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 26, "How many miles to Babylon?" (2 texts)
- Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 4, "How Many Miles to Babylon?"; Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame p. 173, ("Here's my black and here's my blue") (5 texts)
- Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #146, p. 115, "(How many miles to Babylon?)"
- Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 81, "(How many miles to Glasgow Lea?)" (1 text)
- Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #101, "How Many Miles to Babylon?" (2 texts)
- Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains, p. 27, "How Many Miles to Burnham Bright?" (1 text)
- McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks, p. 85, "How Many Miles to Bethlehem?" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 42, "(How many miles to Babylon?)" (1 fragment); p. 109, "(How many miles to London town)" (a counting rhyme that might be independent)
- JournalOfAmericanFolklore, Katherine H. Wintemberg and W.J. Wintemberg, "Folk-Lore from Grey County, Ontario," Vol. XXXI, No. 119 (Jan 1918), #348 p. 111, "(How many miles to Barleytown?)" (1 text)
- JournalOfAmericanFolklore, Leah Rachel Clara Yoffie, "Three Generations of Children's Singing Games in St. Louis," Vol. LX, No. 235 (Jan 1947), #33 p. 32 "(How many miles to Mile-a-Bright?)" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Robert Chambers, The Popular Rhymes of Scotland (Edinburgh, 1826 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 298, ("King and Queen of Cantelon, How many miles to Babylon?") (1 text)
- G.F. Northall, English Folk-Rhymes (London, 1892 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 397-398, ("How many miles to Hebron"); ("How many miles to Babylon?") (4 texts)
- Tony Deane and Tony Shaw _The Folklore of Cornwall_, B. T. Batsford, 1975, p. 51, "(How many miles from this to Babylon?)" (1 short text)

Roud #8148

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Thread the Needle" (game) and references there

NOTES [897 words]: Sam Henry was of the opinion that the original text of this song referred to "Babylond," with "Babylon" as a corruption. Gomme, however, has nineteen texts (though a handful may not be this piece), and seven refer to Babylon, three to Banbury (Cross or Bridge), a couple of others to variants on Bethlehem, a few to London, and none to Babyland.

As secondary evidence, I note that Lewis Carroll quoted the piece, referring to "Babylon," in Chapter XVIII ("Queer Street, Number Forty") of _Sylvie and Bruno_. Carroll quotes quite a few popular lyrics -- and generally seems to have tried to use the best-known forms.

In defense of Sam Henry, there is a piece called "Baby-land" with several sheet music settings, by Jeannette Amidon (LOCSheet, sm1877 04182, "Baby-land," Wm. A. Pond (New York), 1877 (tune)) and Gerrit Smith (LOCSheet, sm1884 24704, "Baby-land," Wm. A. Pond (New York), 1884 (tune)). But these really look like by-blows to me. I have to think "Babylon" is original even though it's hard to explain.

One Northall text is "How many miles to Hebron? Three score and ten, Shall I be there by midnight? Yes, and back again. Then, thread the needle."

The "thread the needle" reference has to do with the game associated with "How many miles to...?"

However, Northall adds the following with no further comment: "Letter and Memoir of Bishop Shirley, p. 415, Lord Nugent, when at Hebron, was directed to 'go out by the needle's eye,' that is by the small side gate of the city." The same text and reference to Lord Nugent had previously been cited in Notes and Queries, August 23, 1851 ("Digitized by Google"), Vol. IV, No. 95, p. 141 with the comment "Now this explains one of the strongest and most startling passages of Scripture, on the subject of riches; for the camel can go through the needle's eye, but with difficulty, and hardly with a full load, nor without stooping" [Matthew 19.24, Mark 10.25, Luke 18.25]; the note goes on to comment that this "does not tell much" about the game. On another, probably coincidental note, the game is often associated with Shrove Tuesday and sometimes with Easter Monday or May Day. - BS

The mention of "Hebron" is perhaps more counter-evidence to the claim, mentioned above, that the original reference was to "Babyland," since "Babylon" and "Hebron" are both Biblical names; it's hard to imagine a change from "Babyland" to "Hebron," but not too much of a stretch to change from "Babylon" to "Hebron" -- especially since Babylon no longer exists.

The distance from Jerusalem to Hebron, to be sure, is far less than seventy miles; it's closer to twenty miles. The distance from Jerusalem to Babylon, on the other hand, was many hundreds of miles away as the crow flies, and even more as the caravan travels. So to say that the distance to Hebron is three score and ten miles is less inaccurate than to say that that is the distance to Babylon.

Incidentally, the attempt to explain away Jesus's comment on the basis of a "Needle Gate" or the like is completely unfounded. InterpretersDict, volume III, p. 531, says, "Jesus used the figure of the impossibility of a camel's going through the eye of a needle to teach the difficulty of a rich man's entering the Kingdom of God. Some late Greek MSS. [avoid the problem by changing the text]. A much later interpretation made the saying refer to a postulated small gate called the 'Needle's Eye,' through which a camel would go with difficulty. Neither interpretation is justified."

Another article in InterpretersDict (II.854) bolsters this by showing multiple maps of post-exilic Jerusalem as reconstructed by various scholars. These list the various gates identified: Corner Gate, Gate of Ephraim, Old Gate, Valley Gate, Dung Gate, Fountain Gate, Water Gate, Horse Gate, "E Gate," Muster Gate, Sheep Gate, Fish Gate. No "Needle's Eye," note. And Jerusalem was not a large city. A dozen gates was "plenty".

On p. 860, there is a New Testament map. Its gates are New Gate, Damascus Gate, Herod's Gate, "St. Stephen's Gate" (obviously a more modern name), Single Gate, unnamed gate, Jaffa Gate. Pfeiffer, p. 113, has a map which shows Gennath Gate, Water Gate, Golden Gate, and internal Holdah Gates, plus at least three unnamed gates. At least one other atlas uses this exact map, and I seem to recall seeing it in a third as well.

HarperAtlas, which is the most complete and (it seems to me) the most accurate of all my six Biblical atlases, gives its map of New Testament era Jerusalem on pp. 166-167, shows the Damascus Gate, Gennath Gate, Essenes Gate, and three, possibly four, unnamed gates. Thus the consensus appears to be that there were six to eight gates to Jerusalem in Jesus's time. Most of these are unnamed -- although many would keep their names from the time of Nehemiah. It is theoretically possible that there was a "Needle Gate" or "Needle's Eye Gate" -- but Jerusalem was a fortress, and a very strong one; it took the Romans years to conquer it both during Pompey's campaigns in the first century B.C.E. and during the Jewish Revolt of 66. It is extremely unlikely that there was a Needle's Eye Gate -- a gate would need guards, and if you have to have guards anyway, better to build a substantial gate which allows real commerce. The odds are high that Jesus meant what he said: That he did not consider wealth to be conducive to salvation. - RBW

Bibliography

- InterpretersDict: [George Arthur Buttrick et al, editor], The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible, four volumes, 1962 (a fifth supplementary volume was published later)

Last updated in version 5.3
File: HHH040a

How Paddy Stole the Rope

DESCRIPTION: Paddy and Mick rob a church. They need rope to bind the loot. Paddy climbs the bell rope to the top, cuts the rope above himself and falls. Mick climbs up, cuts the rope beneath himself and can't get down. The boys are caught and thrown in jail

AUTHOR: unknown
How Pat Is Represented

DESCRIPTION: The singer protests that Irishmen are presented unfairly: Punch "depicts us... with crooked limbs and villainous face." On the stage we have "not a word of common sense." "Do me justice... I won't be laughed at anywhere but fairly represented"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1991 (IRRWhite01)
KEYWORDS: discrimination nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
Roud #2969
RECORDINGS:
Roisin White, "Do Me Justice" (on IRRWhite01)
File: RcDoMeJu

How Sad

DESCRIPTION: "Behold in me a married man whose life is full of gloom, How sad, oh, how sad. My eyes have lost their brightness...." He has to take care of the baby in the middle of the night while his wife sleeps and snores; he does the housework as she talks suffrage

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: husband wife hardtimes political baby
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 77, "How Sad" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #11406
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rocking the Cradle (and the Child Not His Own)" (theme of the husband having to do his wife's work and care for the baby)
NOTES [25 words]: For some reason, Roud lumps this with a song about a man/woman who "won't marry a (farmer/bachelor/black girl/etc.)." I don't see the relationship. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.3
File: Brne077

How Stands the Glass Around (General Wolfe's Song)

DESCRIPTION: "How stands the glass around? For shame, ye take no care, my boys.... Let mirth and wine abound, The trumpets sound." As the soldiers set out, the singer asks, "Why, soldiers, why Should we be melancholy?" Live or die, they should drink and be happy

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1729 (ballad opera "The Patron, according to Chappell)
How Sweet the Rose Blaws

DESCRIPTION: "How sweet the rose blaws, it fades and it fa's; Red is the rose and bonnie, O! It brings to my mind what my dear laddie was; So bloomed -- so cut off was my Johnnie, O!" Peace is come, but the singer's love is dead. She will meet him soon (in death)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Ford)

KEYWORDS: love soldier death flowers

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, p. 176, "How Sweet the Rose Blaws" (1 text)
Roud #13166

NOTES [17 words]: This is almost the only song in Ford which is offered entirely without comment. Whatever that means. - RBW

File: FVS176A

How Tattersall's Cup Was Won

DESCRIPTION: "Fair, every heights are gleaming Beneath the sun God gave, Great waves of life are swaying Along the wheel-worn wave." A very detailed description of the race, listing many of the horses as well as the rider who was thrown and killed

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1968

KEYWORDS: racing death horse

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 249-253, "How Tattersall's Cup Was Won" (1 text)

NOTES [29 words]: Meredith and Anderson believe this piece pertains to the race in which Alec Robertson was killed. This is quite reasonable, but the accident plays a relatively minor role. - RBW

File: MA249

How to Dodge the Hard Times

DESCRIPTION: "How to dodge the hard times is the hardest of tasks, For whatever becomes of us? Ev'ryone will ask." Raising food is not enough to survive or support the colony. Make cloth and clothes as well, work at trades, build a future

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1869 (Wellington Evening Post, according to Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry)

KEYWORDS: New Zealand hardtimes food nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 35, "How to Dodge the Hard Times" (1 text,
How We Got Up to the Woods Last Year

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you lads that would like to hear How we got up to the woods last year." The singer and colleagues gather (to go logging). They hire a coach and feel grand. They perhaps get drunk. They arrive.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (Fowke)
KEYWORDS: travel drink logger
FOUND IN: Canada(Ont,Que)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Fowke-LumberingSongsFromTheNorthernWoods #45, "How We Got Up to the Woods Last Year" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Fowke/MacMillan-PenguinBookOfCanadianFolkSongs 22, "How We Got Up to the Woods Last Year" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3676
RECORDINGS:
O. J. Abbott, "How We Got Back to the Woods Last Year" (on Lumber01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Conroy's Camp" (tune, lyrics, theme)
cf. "Rantin', Roarin', Drunk on the Way" (lyrics)
SAME TUNE:
Conroy's Camp (File: FowL46)
NOTES [54 words]: This is about as interesting as the description implies; even Fowke admits that the song lacks "any dramatic incident."
The chorus is shared, in general form, with "Rantin', Roarin', Drunk on the Way" -- but the plot is different; it appears to be simply a case of the cross-fertilization so common among lumbering songs. - RBW
File: FowL45

How Will You Stand in That Day?

DESCRIPTION: "For the sky it will be darkened, And the thunder will be rolling, And the lightning will be flashing In that day. O fathers, It's how will you stand, It's how will you stand in that day?"
"For the earth will be shaken." "For the stars will be falling."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, pp. 59-60, "How Will You Stand in That Day?" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7752
File: KPL059B

Howard Carey [Laws E23]

DESCRIPTION: The singer, Howard Carey, recalls his happy youth. But he left home and parents and, despite his mother's warnings, turns to a dissolute life. Blaming his fate on whiskey and bad women, he kills himself

AUTHOR: probably Joe Scott
EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi)
KEYWORDS: suicide drink family
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
May 5, 1897 - "Howard Carrick, a woodsman, aged 33, hanged himself in his room at Annie Siddal's boarding house in Rumford, Maine..." (source: Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland)
Howden Fair

DESCRIPTION: The singer describes the horses he saw at Howden Fair: all colors, ages, and conditions. "They bring their worst, they bring their best... Let's have room to show them all."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1853 (Peacock, in _Notes and Queries_)

KEYWORDS: commerce farming horse

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))

REFERENCES (2 citations):

OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart1 23, "Howden Fair" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: Edward Peacock in _Notes and Queries_ (London, 1888 ("Digitized by Google")), Seventh Series Vol. V, No. 123, May 5 1888, p. 345, "Howden Fair" ("It's I have been to Howden Fair") (1 text)

Roud #1086

NOTES [72 words]: OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart1: "The horse-fair at Howden (near Goole) was an important one in the South Yorkshire and North Lincolnshire area." He quotes Peacock who says the song was "sung by Lincolnshire farmers and horse-dealers, who were in the habit of visiting the great Yorkshire horse-fair in the early years of the reign of George III."
The OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart1 text is slightly modified from Peacock's text. - BS

Last updated in version 3.0

File: OSY023

Howdy Howdy

DESCRIPTION: "Howdy howdy brother (sister, father, preacher, mourner), Howdy howdy do M-m-m-m, And I do mighty well And I thank God too M-m-m-m-m"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Barton-OldPlantationHymns)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious clergy

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Barton-OldPlantationHymns, p. 4, "Howdy Howdy" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [26 words]: Barton-OldPlantationHymns: "This is the entire hymn... It is a song for the opening of service... The 'M-m-m-m-m' is a humming sound with closed lips." - BS

Last updated in version 4.0

File: Bar004
Howdy, Bill (How I Got My Wife)

DESCRIPTION: "Howdy, Bill, git down a minute, Come right in from the sea." The singer will describe how he found his wife. They grew up together and fell in love, but he was afraid to say anything. Finally, sitting at far ends of a bench, they move closer (then marry)

AUTHOR: probably Bill Chitwood (Robertson)
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Richardson/Spaeth-AmericanMountainSongs)
KEYWORDS: love courting work
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Richardson/Spaeth-AmericanMountainSongs, pp. 59-60, "Howdy, Bill" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3121
RECORDINGS:
Bill Chitwood & Bud Landress, "Howdy Bill" (Brunswick 2809)
File: Rich059

Howe o' Fife, The

DESCRIPTION: "Comin' thro' the Howe o' Fife, I met a lass, she was sae blythe, She smiled on me sae coutheely, My he'rt gaed pit-a-patter"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: courting
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan4 871, "The Howe o' Fife" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #6228
NOTES [10 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan4 text. - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD4871

Howes o' Glenorchy, The

DESCRIPTION: "In the howes o' Glenarchy there is a bit ground, The more that you toil it, more pleasure is found"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan7)
KEYWORDS: sex nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1442, "The Howes o' Glenorchy" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #7273
NOTES [20 words]: The current description is based on the Greig/Duncan7 fragment. Greig/Duncan7: "The words are stated to be indelicate." - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD71442

Howes o' King-Edward, The

DESCRIPTION: "Though lovely the land where in childhood I wandered," the singer looks back on a different, more gloomy world. He recalls happy days of the past; now, "O, changed are the Howes o' King-Edward to me!"

AUTHOR: William Cruikshanks (died 1868)
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Ord-BothySongsAndBallads)
KEYWORDS: home nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 339-340, "The Howes o' King-Edward" (1 text)
Roud #3942
Hu, Hu, Hu!

DESCRIPTION: German shanty. Translation: "Oh the bosun's great big fid boys, Hu, hu, hu, hu, hu! Is as long as a tops'l yard boys. Hu... Ch: Yaw, yaw, yaw we'll sing boys, an' we'll heave away (x2)."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Baltzer, _Knurrhahn_)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage shanty
FOUND IN: Germany
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 536-537, "Hu, Hu, Hu!" (1 text, 1 tune -- a translation only; Hugill says the original was too rough)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Reise, Reise!

Huckleberry Hunting

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Characteristic line: "To me, Hilo, me Ranzo boy!" Boys and girls went huckleberry hunting, with the boys naturally chasing the girls. In the end a boy proposes to a girl (perhaps after seeing her garter)
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1917
KEYWORDS: shanty courting
FOUND IN: US(MA) Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (10 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, p. 32, "Huckleberry Hunting" (1 text, 1 tune)
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 69, "Huckleberry Hunting" (1 text, 1 tune)
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 88-89, "Hilo, My Ranzo Way" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 249-250, "We'll Ranzo Way" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, pp. 181-182]
Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, XIV, p. 17, "Huckleberry Hunting" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 102, "The Wild Goose" (1 text, 1 tune)
Terry-TheShantyBook-Part1, #12, "The Wild Goose Shanty" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 77-78, "The Wild Goose Shanty" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, (RANZORAY" -- the text here is very similar to Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman's, but the tunes are so different that one wonders if they could be the same shanty)
Roud #328
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ranzo Ray" (floating lyrics, form of chorus)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Sing Hilo, Me Ranzo Ray

Hucklejee Bread

DESCRIPTION: "My father and mother Are sick in bed, And I must learn how To make hucklejee bread. Then up with your feet... And that is the way to make hucklejee bread."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore)
KEYWORDS: mother mother disease food cook
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hudson River Steamboat

DESCRIPTION: "Hudson River steamboat, sailing up and down, New York to Albany or any river town, Choo choo to go ahead, Choo choo to slack her...." Sketches of places one would pass and things one might see from the steamboat AUTHOR: perhaps adapted by John Allison?

EARLIEST DATE: 1955

KEYWORDS: river ship nonballad technology

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 40, "Hudson River Steamboat" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, HUDSNRVR

Roud #6671

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Hudson River Steamer

File: LoF040

Huey Long

DESCRIPTION: "Huey began to holla, Huey began to squall. "It was too bad Huey had to go, For he'd taken from the rich And he'd given to the poor." The people gather around the hospital where Huey is dying. His wife bids farewell and wishes she could do his work

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1966 (Coffin & Cohen)

KEYWORDS: political death homicide

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Sep 10, 1935 - Assassination of Huey Long

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Tristram P. Coffin and Hennig Cohen, _Folklore in America: Tales, Songs, Superstitions, Proverbs, Riddles, Games, Folk Drama and Folk Festivals_, Doubleday, 1966, pp. 93-94, "The Haunted Wood" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Mister McKinley (White House Blues)" (lyrics, form)
cf. "Death of Huey P. Long" (subject)

File: CoCo091

Hugh Hill, the Ramoan Smuggler

DESCRIPTION: The singer, a member of Hill's smuggling crew, recalls how Dixon betrayed them. A cutter captures Hill's ship, but when the crew is brought to trial, no proof is available; Hill and crew go free and will smuggle more

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: trial punishment ship escape

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H494, pp. 127-128, "Hugh Hill, the Ramoan Smuggler" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13372
NOTES [48 words]: One of the less-intelligent British colonial policies was to cut off all sorts of external (and even internal) trade. This made smugglers like Hugh Hill heroes. There really weren't many of them, though -- Ireland didn't have enough excess income to support a large smuggling industry. - RBW
File: HHH494

Hugh Spencer's Feats in France [Child 158]

DESCRIPTION: Hugh Spencer is sent to the king of France to know whether there be peace or war; answer: War. The French queen challenges him to joust with her knight. French horses and spears are inferior but he wins, then fights others until the king sues for peace.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1750 (Percy Folio)
KEYWORDS: royalty war France knight fight
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1337-1453 - Hundred Years' War between Britain and France
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Child 158, "Hugh Spencer's Feats in France" (3 texts)
Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume II, pp. 290-295, "Hugh Spencer" (1 text)
Roud #3997

NOTES [5399 words]: In trying to figure out what this song is about, we have the following clues from the texts of the ballad (which is known only from the Buchan/Moreira-TheGlenbuchatBallads text plus three texts printed by Child, respectively from the Percy Folio, from another text in the Percy papers, and from a Scottish version collected in Aberdeenshire by Joseph Robertson; the song has never been found in modern tradition):
In Child A, B the hero is Hugh Spencer and he is English. In Child C and Glenbuchat, he is "Sir Hugh," or "young Sir Hugh," and is Scottish.
In all versions, Hugh is sent to France.
In Child B, Hugh is accompanied by Hugh Willoughby and John of Atherly. He apparently sails alone in Glenbuchat.
In Child A, C, and Glenbuchat, the unnamed Queen of France argues with Spencer. In Child B, the Queen is Maude.
In Child A, the French King is Charles.
In Glenbuchat, it appears that the King of France is aged.
Child A mentions a battle fought at Walsingham.
The English King is not named in A or B, nor the Scottish King in C and Glenbuchat.
Glenbuchat mentions a "Duke of Darbois." This is certainly a corruption, but it's hard to say what it is a corruption of. My guess is that it might be a sort of conflation of the French Dukedom of Berry with the English Earldom of Derby (Darby), but the name certainly can't be used as a dating hint. The other possibility might be Robert of Artois, who was a count rather than a duke but who was instrumental in getting Edward III to start the Hundred Years War; exiled from France, he goaded Edward into war by implying that the king wasn't tough enough in standing up for his rights (Neillands, p. 75).
Child apparently felt that the Hugh Spencer of this song was a real person (Brown, p. 122). Fowler, p. 165, also considers it historical (indeed, he considers it the only historical ballad in the Percy Folio to survive into the nineteenth century). I must confess to doubting it.
Child begins by stating that there were "many Hugh Spencers" in English history, but this is somewhat exaggerated. No doubt there were many of that name -- but none of great fame.
OxfordCompanion, p. 883, lists only one Spenser (the poet Edmund Spenser) and two Spencers, neither named Hugh and both too late for the song. Even Child implicitly admits the lack of noteworthy Spencers, for the only Hugh Spencer he mentions explicitly is "the younger of the favorites of Edward II."
However, "Spencer" is not the usual name for this man. Child calls him Hugh Spencer, and Doherty consistently gives the family name as "de Spencer" (e.g. p. 65), but most authorities call him "Despenser": CokayneIV, p. 259, Harvey (p. 131), Hicks (p. 63), Hutchison (p. 98), Myers (p. 18),
Oxford Companion (p. 289), Prestwich (p. 80), Phillips (p. 9), Saul II (p. 431), Tuck (p. 9), Warner (p. 23), and Wilkinson (p. 125). Other than Child, I cannot recall anyone in modern times calling him "Spencer."

On the other hand, there is another piece in the Percy Folio, "Proude where the Spenc[ers], Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume III, pp. 478-484: MSPercyFolio, p. 508, which is clearly about Edward II and the Despensers and calls them "Spencers." A quirk of one of the sources of the Percy Folio, since it contains both these pieces? I don't know. It doesn't appear to be traditional, though; some anonymous poet dug up a famous story and versified it.

The first Hugh Despenser of any significance lived in the reign of King Henry III. That king appointed him to the noteworthy post of Justiciar in 1260 (Powicke, p. 162), and he spent a second brief term as Justiciar a little while later (although not by Henry's choice; that was one of the times when the barons were telling what to do; Hallam, p. 60). That Hugh Despenser's father-in-law Philip Basset had also been justiciar (Hicks, p. 62). However, the Justiciar -- in effect, the regent when the King left the country -- should not have been able to leave the realm, so he wouldn't be in position to have feats in France. In any case, this Despenser was killed at Evesham a few years later (Powicke, p. 202) -- while opposing the King! (Hutchison, p. 95).

This Despenser is unlikely on other grounds because there was no King Charles of France at this time; Louis IX was the French King from 1226-1270, and he was succeeded by Philip III (1270-1285) and then Philip IV (1285-1314). Other than kings who were impossibly early, there was not to be a King Charles until Charles IV (1322-1328); later on, Charles V reigned 1364-1380 (and was regent for some time before that) and Charles VI reigned 1380-1422. Better candidates than Henry III's Hugh are the Hugh Despensers, father and son, who were important in the reign of Edward II (reigned 1307-1327). The elder was, according to Hutchison, p. 95, the son of the Despenser of Evesham; he was born around 1261 (Phillips, p. 418; Hicks, p. 62, says 1262). His son Hugh the Younger was about Edward's age; they had, in fact, been knighted on the same day (Hutchison, p. 103). This would mean Despenser the Younger was born around 1284.

The elder Despenser was of some note as a soldier, having fought at Bannockburn and elsewhere (Hutchison, p. 95; Hicks, p. 62, says he fought in Flanders and Gascony as well as Scotland). He had also been one of the commissioners who arranged for Edward II's marriage to Isabella of France (Philips, p. 117). But by the time Charles IV took the throne of France, he was too old to be a champion -- although hardly as old as Froissart claims; that less-than-reliable writer says he was ninety at the end of Edward's reign; (Froissart I. 10; Froissart/Jolliffe, p. 16). This being the case, if the Spencer of the song is based on a Despenser, it almost certainly is the younger.

It is ironic to note that, according to Phillips, p. 363, Edward and the younger Despenser apparently disliked each other at first. That would change over time.... Edward II was a king who was always dependent on favorites. His first had been Piers Gaveston, who however had been murdered in 1312. (Interestingly, there seem to have been oral pieces written about Gaveston, although none have been found in modern tradition -- probably because many of them were in Latin. Riggs, pp. 87-88, quotes from two of them, parodies of Latin hymns, which were both still current in the fifteenth century; one begins "Vexilla regni prodeunt; fulgit cometa comitum," the other "Pange, lingua, necem Petri qui turbauit Angliam." Over the next decade, Edward relied on a small circle, but gradually the Despensers came to the fore. Mortimer, p. 99, declares that "by the end of 1320 [Despenser] had become the pivot upon which the balance of Edward's reign turned." And the younger Despenser was even appointed to a mission to France (Phillips, p. 384). But, although our records are incomplete, it proved a very short visit, if indeed he made it to Paris at all.

The single strongest argument against the possibility that the younger Hugh Despenser is the Hugh Spencer of the ballad is the fact that everyone except Edward II hated the Despensers. Despenser the younger was suspected of a sexual liaison with the King -- indeed, Queen Isabella eventually openly accused him of it (Doherty, p. 96), and so did Adam Orleton, Bishop of Hereford (Warner, p. 217). Hicks, p. 64, is certain that the charge is true. Lyon, p. 83, declares that "the manner by which both Edward and the younger Despenser were put to death strongly implies that the king was considered in his lifetime to be homosexual, and on p. 81 affirms that "it is likely that his relationships with his male favorites were homosexual" -- even believing (on no evidence that I can see) that he "adopt[ed] the passive role in homosexual acts."

It seems to me that the majority of recent commentators disagree. Phillips, p. 98, offers evidence against the hypothesis, and even offers some reason to think Edward had a relationship with Despenser's wife, not Despenser himself. Warner agrees that, toward the end of his reign, Edward and Despenser's wife, who had always been friendly, "became extremely familiar" -- particularly noteworthy because she was Edward's niece. Somebody certainly had sex with her; Eleanor de Clare had at least ten children during her twenty years of marriage to Despenser (Warner, p. 125). Phillips, pp. 102-103, sums up the evidence about Edward's sexuality: He had several children by his wife, and seemingly a shadowy illegitimate child as well. Phillips also notes that the King of France, who was unusually anti-homosexuality in a time when homophobia was normal, let Edward marry his daughter. It seems highly unlikely that he was exclusively homosexual.

If Edward had a homosexual love affair, it was much more likely that it was with his earlier favorite, Piers Gaveston. Phillips, who generally downplays the idea, on p. 102, admits "It is impossible to be certain of the true nature of the relationship between Edward II and Gaveston, whether sexual, a formal bond of brotherhood, or simply a very close friendship." What is certain is that Gaveston was exalted above everyone else in the land, and Edward really liked being around him. Surely many at the time suspected a sexual element.

My personal suspicion is that Edward II had a hint of autism. He was not stupid, as he showed at times when he outwitted his barons. But he was ridiculously insensitive to the opinions of his greater subjects, which is common for those with autism.

What makes this significant is that those with autism often find a few very close friends to whom they are extremely loyal -- as Edward was to Gaveston; at one point, he offered to give up sovereignty over Scotland just to get Gaveston shelter there! (Tuck, p. 65). His relationships with Hugh Audley and Roger Damory (Mortimer, p. 90) also sound a bit like autistic friendships. But to people who had no knowledge of autism, it could have looked like homosexuality.

But if Edward had one homosexual affair, it was easy to assume he had two -- and that meant Despenser the younger. Given the attitudes of the time, would an accused homosexual have been exalted as a champion of England?

Nor was this the only reason the younger Despenser was so disliked; he and his father were both extremely grasping, and used their favor with the king to gain extensive lands and wealth (Prestwich, p. 89; Hicks, p. 64, declares that his goal in government service was to gain wealth; Tuck, p. 75, declares, "Despenser [the Younger] was ambitious and greedy; the phrase he himself coined, "That Despenser may be rich and may attain his ends," succinctly sums up his intentions") As Myers says on p. 18, "The Despensers were able and less greedy than is sometimes supposed..... But Edward's government was, on the whole, inept, and the Despensers were widely hated as covetous and oppressive." As early as August 1321, Edward II had been forced to exile the pair and take away their holdings (Prestwich, p. 90; Mortimer, p. 109).

Despenser the Younger proceeded to turn pirate during the exile (Mortimer, p. 111). It is true that he preyed mostly on non-English ships (Hutchison, p. 107), and piracy at this time was considered far more honorable than it later became -- but it was hardly a nobleman's work, and the French were not his sole target; his biggest prize was Genoese (and caused a diplomatic incident).

Edward's treatment of the Despensers resembled the King's behavior with Gaveston a decade before: Edward had exiled his favorite, then stupidly called him back. The Despenser saga followed the same script: Edward II turned on his opposition soon after, and recalled the Despensers in 1322 (Hutchison, p. 111). It had been a very short exile.

In some ways, they were actually more problematic than the previous favorites: "Compared with Gaveston, whose influence seems to have been over the person of the king rather than the day-to-day business of government, there was much more reason to accuse [the younger] Despenser of acting as if he were king" (Phillips, p. 442).

As administrators, they seem to have been competent enough (Hutchison, p. 118, notes useful reforms passed by the parliament of 1322) -- but their goal was self-aggrandizement, not good government. "Their success in 1322 revived the Despensers' appetite for land and wealth; they had not learned their lesson from the previous rising against them" (Prestwich, p. 93). Despenser the younger "was blatantly corrupt and untouchable and his regime was a reign of terror" (Hicks, p. 65).

The father was promoted to an earldom (Prestwich, p. 94); the son was given more than three dozen land grants which made him lord of almost all of South Wales (Hutchison, p. 117) and produced an income of about 7500 pounds per year (Hicks, p. 65); a royal ship was named La Despenser (Prestwich, p. 94).

According to Prestwich, p. 104, after the defeat and execution of the Earl of Lancaster and his supporters, "Edward II had at his disposal the greatest territorial windfall that any medieval English monarch enjoyed. The estates could have been used to create a new loyal following; instead, the benefits of royal favour were shared out by a small clique of the Despensers and their cronies in a period of tyrannical rule." The elder became Earl of Winchester; the younger, although he was not actually granted the title of Earl, collected almost all the lands of the Earldom of Gloucester and a big chunk of Lancaster lands (Phillips, p. 418) -- and almost all in Wales and the Marches, making it worth more than equivalent lands scattered around the nation, which is what most Earls had.

There was, to be sure, a quarrel between England and France at the time. Edward I of England (reigned 1272-1307) and Philip IV of France (reigned 1285-1314) had had many quarrels over the borders of the English province of Guyenne in southwestern France, an English possession that was nonetheless considered subject to the French crown. But when Edward II succeeded his father, he went through with a marriage with Philip's daughter Isabella, and for a time the two nations were friendly (Prestwich, p. 85). Two sons, Louis X (reigned 1314-1316) and Philip V (1316-1322) succeeded Philip, but the third of Philip's sons, Charles IV (1322-1328) eventually ended up quarreling with his brother-in-law and his chief minister Despenser the Younger.
Phillips, p. 43, notes that "The accident of the survival of part of Despenser's personal archives shows that he was centrally involved with the administration of Gascony during the time of the Anglo-French war there in 1324-1325."
Under Despenser, tensions between France and England heated up over affairs in Gascony (Phillips, pp. 455-457); the two nations ended up in a small-scale war, the "War of St. Sardos" -- really a border squabble that got out of hand. A party in Gascony attacked St. Sardos, a town that was being fortified by the French, and hanged a French officer (Phillips, pp. 461-462). The French called for satisfaction, didn't get it, and Edward's half-brother the Earl of Kent made a hash of the embassy which followed (Hutchison, p. 125).
Without planning it, Edward and the Despensers found themselves at war with France, but the conflict was no English victory; the French occupied La Reole (Seward, p. 24). The English ended up buying a peace; Edward II supposedly paid some 90,000 pounds to keep his remaining lands in Guyenne (Ormrod, p. 14).
Nob did either Despenser command in the war; Edward II had originally planned to lead the English army, but then decided to turn the command over to the Earl of Surrey (Phillips, p. 468). Indeed, Phillips, p. 428, suggests that Despenser could not safely have gone to France at this time.
Meanwhile, hostility was growing between Queen Isabella, King Edward, and the Despensers (Hutchison, p. 128). Edward, during the French wars, had taken away some of her land (Phillips, p.
466). The Despensers cut back on her allowance and planted an open spy in her household
(Hutchison, p. 129). Phillips, p. 482, thinks that hostility between the Queen and the younger Despenser began by at least 1322, although she may not yet have turned against her husband himself.
Late in the reign of Edward II, at the height of the Despenser power, Queen Isabella went on a diplomatic mission to her brother Charles IV to end the War of St. Sardos. At one time Edward and Despenser were supposed to come to formalize the agreement made (Phillips, p. 475). But again
Despenser did not come to France -- at first, Edward apparently wanted to go, but Despenser, according to Mortimer, p. 142, was unwilling because he feared assassination if Edward left. And he couldn't go to France himself, because the French had declared that he would be tortured if ever found there (Mortimer, p. 143). Instead it was decided to send Edward II's son Edward.
This was disastrous. Once Isabella was joined by her son (the future Edward III), she refused to come home, claiming that he had not only deprived her of her privileges but of her conjugal rights.
In effect, she accused him of homosexuality before the French court (Mortimer, p. 143). She had become, in Hutchison's words (p. 127), "the dominating personality in a miscellaneous group whose sole binding agent was its hatred of the power and pride of the Despensers."
Edward tried to get her to come back, but he did it in uncompromising terms, simply ignoring her claims. He had his bishops write to her to call her home -- but it appears that he wrote what they sent (Mortimer, p. 144). Finally, on February 8, 1326, Edward formally admitted that his wife had turned against him (Mortimer, p. 146) Naturally Charles IV took his sister's side. The younger Despenser finally took a hand, though. He did not travel to France to fight -- but he did offer flattery and money to Charles IV (Froissart I.7; Froissart/Jolliffe, p. 10). It worked well enough that Isabella had to head off to Hainault to raise her invasion.
She does seem to have been quite militant, though; Mortimer, p. 218, reports an incident where she actually put on armor and prepared for battle.
This raises an interesting possibility. There is no hint of this in the ballad, but perhaps if we change the Queen OF France to the Queen FROM France, we might have an explanation for the quarrel in the ballad between Queen and Spencer. Possible -- but without proof. Doherty, p. 100, thinks the Despensers may have encouraged Edward II to distrust his queen, but this too is beyond proof. We do know that she made many accusations against them (Doherty, p. 101).
And the Despensers were responsible for guarding against an invasion (Doherty, pp. 88-89).
Unfortunately their efforts failed; as Doherty notes on p. 89, Edward had made so many enemies that many lords were willing to secretly turn their backs on him. As Barber says on p. 14, neither party was popular: "As Isabella's power grew, so she seemed to imitate her husband's failings: The Despensers were balanced by Mortimer, Edward's dislike of government by Isabella's rapacity for money. [After she took charge, she latched onto more than 30,000 pounds in immediate cash, a huge income, and the Despenser treasures; Mortimer, pp. 171-173.] But Isabella was the more determined character...."

And she had managed to raise a small army. In Hainault, she married her son Edward III to Philippa of Hainault, one of the count's daughters, and spend the entire dowry to raise troops (Packe, p. 27). They then sailed for England.

Support for Edward collapsed almost instantly (Doherty, pp. 90-91). The London mob attacked and murdered suspected supporters of the Despensers (Hutchinson, p. 135). Adam Orleton, the Bishop of Hereford (who just might be the Bishop of Hereford of the Robin Hood saga; see the extensive notes to "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117] and those to "Robin Hood and the Bishop of Hereford" [Child 144], as Edward II might well be the king of the "Gest") preached against Despenser the Younger. (Although his text, "I will put enmity between you and the women" -- Mortimer, p. 155 -- is a little forced; yes, Edward and Isabella were enemies by this time, but hardly for the same reasons.)

The elder Despenser -- who may have halted his flight to try to buy time for his son and Edward II (Packe, p. 29) -- was cornered and apparently tried to negotiate, but his castle was stormed (Mortimer, p. 156) and he was captured.

He was given a mock trial (Prestwich, p. 97, calls it a "deliberate parody" of the Earl of Lancaster who had been executed in 1322, and Phillips, p. 513, says it was modelled on that procedure). He was not granted the right to answer the charges against him (Packe, p. 30) -- on the almost-reasonable grounds that he had made a law denying the accused the right to address their charges (Phillips, p. 512). Supposedly Isabella pleaded for his life (Mortimer, p. 159), but I suspect this was staged. He was executed as a traitor and his head ordered to be displayed at Winchester even before Edward II was captured (Doherty, pp. 92-93), which shows how much the Despensers were hated.

The younger Despenser was taken not long after -- and knew he could expect no mercy (the summary of the charges against him occupies almost all of page 517 in Phillips; it appears to me that there were at least 13 capital charges and as many more which would probably result in severe fines or punishment).

Faced with charges that would clearly end with him being executed with torture, Doherty (p. 105) and Warner (p. 226) think he tried to kill or starve himself. The conspirators who had overthrown Edward II concluded that he might not live to face a show trial in London, so he was tried in Hereford. Froissart I.13 (Froissart/Jolliffe, p. 20) says he made no answer to the charges (which Doherty, p. 106, interprets to mean that he was not allowed to reply. This seems likely, since he was tried before most of the same judges who had tried his father; Phillips, p. 516).

Naturally he was condemned to death by the most extreme means possible. Froissart/Jolliffe's version has it that, in the initial stages, his genitals were cut off and thrown into the fire because of his alleged sexual relations with Edward II (Phillips, p. 518 n. 382 thinks the real purpose was to indicate the destruction of his family line, also symbolized by the removal and destruction of his coat of arms). Doherty's description is more like a standard drawing and quartering -- but there is no doubt; Despenser was tortured to death. His head was then displayed on London Bridge. Mortimer, p. 160, thinks that his quartering was inevitable, because -- literally -- everybody wanted a part of him. Or at least of his corpse.

On p. 162, Mortimer says that the judge concluded Despenser's trial by declaring, "Go to meet your fate, traitor, tyrant, renegade; go receive your own justice, traitor, evil man, criminal!" (Of course, the sentence would not have been read in Modern English....)

Despenser's punishment seems to have been made extra symbolic (Mortimer, p. 162): He was drawn by four horses rather than the usual two, and when they half-hanged him, they put him on a gallows fifty feet high (it doesn't say so, but this was presumably to "hang him higher than Haman"). His castration and evisceration was also done high in the air so all could see.

(It is ironic to note that Roger Mortimer, who was largely responsible for overthrowing the Despensers, would come to a similar end: Tried without being allowed to defend himself, he was drawn to his place of execution, then hung; Mortimer, pp. 239-241. At least he wasn't eviscerated.) Despite the cruel end, Dohery, p. 107, declares that "Nobody would mourn de Spencer." The rebels then set about deposing the king, finally inducing him to abdicate so that his son, rather than someone else, would be raised to the throne (Dockray, pp. 112-113, etc.; Prestwich, p. 98).

Prestwich, pp. 98-99, thinks that his abdication was not part of the original plan; Isabella and Mortimer hoped to rule in his name. But that didn't work, so he became an embarrassment. In 1327, after at least one attempt at rescue (Doherty, p. 117), the decision was made to murder Edward II. The grisly tale that he was killed with a red-hot poker up the anus does not appear until later (Prestwich, p. 99, although Philippps, p. 32, notes that the tale that Edward was homosexual and killed in this way is now universally know in England), but it is effectively certain he was killed in 1327.

Not all of the problems in Edward II's reign were the fault of the Despensers, who merely took advantage of the opportunities Edward II offered, but it appears absolutely no one approved of their actions. It is hard to imagine making a song about them.

We should note that this was not the end of the Despenser family. A third Hugh, or Huchon, the son of the younger Despenser, had been born around 1309 (CokayneIV, p. 271), and had been besieged in Caerphilly Castle during the rebellion against Edward II; the castle did not surrender until Hugh/Huchon's life was guaranteed (Warner, p. 223), although he was imprisoned until 1331 (CokayneIV, p. 272; Warner, p. 227). His daughters also survived, and some married and had children although others were forced into nunneries (Warner, p. 227). Hugh the Younger's wife was given back her dower lands very early in the reign of Edward II's son Edward III (Mortimer, pp. 173, 200). Hugh/Huchon Despenser was restored to his estates in 1337 (Tuck, p. 104), and served in the army that fought at Crecy in 1346 under Edward III (CokayneIV, p. 273); indeed, this Hugh Despenser helped clear a vital crossing of the Somme before the battle, leading the force that drove the French defenders away from the north bank (Barber, pp. 62-63; Neillands, p. 97). He was summoned to parliament as "Hugo le Despenser" in 1338, allowing him to return to the peerage as "Lord le Despenser" (CokayneIV, p. 273). But he died in 1348 (CokayneIV, p. 274) and the direct line of the Despensers was extinct.

The title Lord le Despenser was apparently revived in 1357 for Edward Despenser, nephew of one of the last Hughes (CokayneIV, p. 276). He died in 1375. His son Thomas Despenser was apparently very young at the time (CokayneIV, p. 278).

Richard II made Thomas Despenser, the great-grandson of Edward II's favorite, Earl of Gloucester (SaulII, p. 382; CokayneIV, p. 279), presumably because his the family had married into the Gloucester earldom (and because Richard had disposed of Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, who had held the title). Tuck, p. 206, says that he was also one of Richard's court circle, adding on p. 211 that Despenser managed to have the judgment against his ancestors cleared by Richard in 1397. When Henry IV succeeded, however, Despenser lost the Gloucester title (Given-Wilson, p. 161) -- and was later involved in a conspiracy to restore Richard II to the throne and killed by a mob (Tuck, p. 225; Given-Wilson, p. 162). The Despensers were never fully restored after that;

Sir Hugh Despenser served as Henry IV's envoy to Guyenne in May 1400 (Given-Wilson, p. 255) -- but if he did anything except travel to Guyenne, I can't find it. And Guyenne was under English rule at the time, although considered part of the Kingdom of France.

It's just barely possibly that Bishop Henry Despenser (c. 1341-1406) might be considered to have had "feats in France," since his campaign was in Flanders (Hicks, p. 172), which was a French vassal state. It is sometimes suggested that the Squire in the Canterbury Tales served under Henry Despenser (Chaucer/Benson, p. 802), since he is said (line 86 of the General Prologue) to have served 'In Flaunders, in Artoys, and Pycardie." However, Despenser's expedition was a total flop -- Hicks, p. 173, declares, "The expedition was too late as the Flemings had been decisively defeated in 1382 at Rosebeke, but Despenser was also at fault for several breaches of his contract with the government. He took less men than agreed, changed his destination, took command himself rather than employing a nobleman as king's lieutenant, and disbanded his forces, which could have been used in another theatre of war." He also offended the nobility by refusing to allow the Earl of Arundel to take part in the expedition (Tuck, p. 182). Thus he is unlikely to have been remembered for its "feats," and the other Despensers were minor characters. It was a decade after the deposition of Edward II that the real war with France began, when the new French king, Philip VI of Valois, confiscated all of Guyenne (Ormrod, p. 19). But there is no hint of a champion challenging him prior to the war -- let alone scaring him off. It is interesting, although perhaps not very relevant, that King Edward III himself challenged Philip of Valois (Philip VI) to a single combat (Prestwich, p. 173). Nothing came of that, of course; Philip in 1339 was about 45 years old, and wearing out, whereas Edward III was 32, and very tall and strong, and was also a very stout fighter -- he won several large tournaments in the 1340s, and supposedly was still a better-than-average combatant as late as 1359 (Prestwich, p. 205. Seward, p. 39, has a different version of this, in which Edward offered single combat or a combat between a hundred knights of each side -- but does not cite a source). But the challenge to combat between Edward and Philip of course was given only after the war had started. This whole business of tournaments to settle conflicts between nations is, of course, very old; we see an instance of it during the quarrel between David and Ishbaal in 2 Samuel 2:12-17 (where, however, all the participants died and nothing was settled).

On the whole, the simplest explanation for this song is probably that it is fiction, and the name Hugh Spencer is coincidence. But we cannot rule out the possibility that it is a conflate song. The first part, we might conjecture, is about Hugh Despenser the Younger, but the story of the Feats in France dates either from the reign of Henry V (in which case Henry himself might be the hero) or from the reign of Edward III -- in which case John Hawkwood or Robert Knowles (both semi-outlaws who led robber bands but were regularly employed by the state) strike me as strong candidates.

In this connection, it is interesting to note that Charles V reigned in France during the latter part of the reign of Edward III, and Charles VI reigned for most of the reign of Richard III (the successor of Edward III) and all of the reigns of Henry IV and Henry V. Both, however, have drawbacks -- Charles V's reign saw France recapture most of the English conquests in France, and Charles VI was mad for almost his entire reign, so he could hardly have directly contested with Hugh Spencer. For more on Henry V, and the Hundred Years' War in general, see the notes to "King Henry Fifth's Conquest of France" [Child 164]. - RBW

Bibliography

- Chaucer/Benson: Larry D. Benson, general editor, The Riverside Chaucer, third edition, Houghton Mifflin, 1987 (based on F. N. Robinson, The Works of Geoffrey Chaucer, which is considered to be the first and second editions of this work)
- CokayneIV: George Edward Cokayne, The Complete Peerage, volume IV (Dacre to Dysart), 1916 (I use the BiblioLife 2011 print-on-demand edition)
- Harvey: John Harvey, The Plantagenets, 1948, 1959 (I use the 1979 Fontana paperback edition)
- Hicks: Michael Hicks, Who's Who in Late Medieval England (1272-1485), (being the third volume in the Who's Who in British History series), Shepheard-Walwyn, 1991
- Lyon: Ann Lyon, Constitutional History of the United Kingdom, Cavendish, 2003
- Neillands: Robin Neillands, The Hundred Years War, Routledge, 1990
Hughie Grame [Child 191]

DESCRIPTION: Hugh the Graeme is taken for horse thieving. Many pray for his life, but the Bishop (of Carlisle) is bitterly opposed and has his way. (Hugh is executed.) The reason is that the Bishop has seduced Hugh's wife, and the horse stealing was in retaliation

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1697 (broadside, Bodleian Douce Ballads 2(204b))

KEYWORDS: execution revenge adultery robbery

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North),Scotland(Aber,High))

REFERENCES (14 citations):

Child 191, "Hughie Grame" (9 texts)
Bronson 191, "Hughie Grame" (7 versions)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 191, "Hughie Grame" (5 versions: #1, #2, #3, #4, $5)
Chambers-ScottishBallads, pp. 292-293, "Highie Graham" (1 text)
Dixon-ScottishTraditionalVersionsOfAncientBallads XV, pp. 73-76, "Sir Hugh, the Graeme" (1 text)
Lyle/McAlpine/McLucas-SongRepertoireOfAmeliaAndJaneHarris, pp. 124-125, "Hughie Graham/Hughie Graeme" (2 texts)
Greig/Duncan2 271, "Sir Hugh the Graeme" (2 texts, 1 tune) {Bronson's #4}
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 98-99, "Hughie the Graeme" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #5}
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 410-411, "Hughie the Graeme"; pp. 411-412, "Hughie Graham" (2 texts)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 143, "Hughie the Graeme" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN287, "As it befel upon one time"; ZN1008, "Good Lord John is a hunting gone"

DT 191, HUGRAME* HUGRAME2*

ADDITIONAL: J Woodfall Ebsworth, The Roxburghe Ballads (Hertford: The Ballad Society, 1888 ("Digitized by Microsoft"), Vol. VI, Part 3 (Part 18), pp. 595-597, "The Life and Death of Sir Hugh of the Grime" ("As it befell upon one time about Mid-summer of the year") [1672-92]; pp. 598-599, "Sir Hugh in the Grimes Downfall" or "A New Song Made on Sir Hugh in the Grime, Who Was Hang'd for Stealing the Bishop's Mare" ("Good Lord John is a hunting gone Over the hills and dales so far") [c1770?] (2 texts)
Hughie Wricht
DESCRIPTION: Hughie Wricht was Groosie Norie's son. His uncle, also Hughie Wricht, told the singer the story [apparently about Hughie's drinking, adventures, and, finally, taking the "teetotal pledge"].
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: drink humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1652, "Hughie Wricht" (1 fragment)
Roud #13048
NOTES [34 words]: Greig/Duncan8 quoting Middleton's Selection: "Hughie 'lang had lik'd the yill [ale]/ Water seldom cross'd his throttle' but he took the 'teetotal pladge' after the adventures he had one Hallowe'en." - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD81652

Hullabaloo Belay
DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Characteristic line: "Hullabaloo belay, Hullabaloo bela belay." The singer's mother keeps a boarding house. With the boarders at sea, Shallo Brown courts the mother. She runs off with Shallo (but returns the next day). The father pines away
Hully Gull

DESCRIPTION: Guessing game. "Hully gull." "Handful." "How many?" (Second player makes a guess.) A player takes nuts from a collection, places them in his hand, shakes them; a second player must guess the number. Winner takes nuts from the other.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains)
KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains, p. 17, "Hully Gull" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Hickety (Buck Buck, Horny Cup, How Many Fingers; Mingledy, Mingledy)"
NOTES [23 words]: The game portion of this -- the guessing of a number of objects -- is obvious. I haven't seen the "Hully Gull" line elsewhere, though. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: Skea017

Humback Mule

DESCRIPTION: "Riding on a hump-back mule (x2) Walkin', pawin' every(), The only song that I can sing is 'Ride that hump-back mule.'" "Rode him down town, four o'clock, Tied him up to (), Riding on a hump-backed mule"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)
KEYWORDS: animal nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE,So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 745, "Hump-Back Mule" (1 short text, 1 tune, perhaps mixed with "Paddle Your Own Canoe")
Roud #16365
RECORDINGS:
Cumberland Ridge Runners, "Ridin' on a Humped Back Mule" (Conqueror 8162)
NOTES [107 words]: The description is based on the Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 fragment and a version collected by Max Hunter in 1975. The latter sounds to me very much like a fiddle tune with a few words added; my guess is that this is one of those instances of someone in an early string band told that he needed WORDS to get a recording contract, and added these words to an existing tune. And then someone added some mule effects. My guess would be that this was the Cumberland Ridge Runners (aka "Karl and Harty" and "The Renfro Valley Boys"), since they were known for having a crazy fiddler (one of their songs was called "Goofus"). - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: BrS5745
Humble Beggar, The

DESCRIPTION: "In Scotland lived a humble beggar ... weel liket by ilka bodie." At his wake were "lads and lasses o' high degree." When they go to bury him he knocks on the coffin and jumps out. They all run, but he runs fastest "and he helpit to drink his ain dirgie"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1776 (Herd)

KEYWORDS: funeral drink begging humorous

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #31, p. 2, "The Humble Beggar" (1 text)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, pp. 443-444, "The Humble Beggar" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Robert Chambers, The Scottish Songs (Edinburgh, 1829 ("Digitized by Google")), Vol I, pp. 124-125, "The Humble Beggar" (1 text)
Allan Cunningham, The Songs of Scotland, Ancient and Modern, (London, 1825 ("Digitized by Google")), Vol III, pp. 31-32, "The Humble Beggar" (1 text)
Robert Ford, editor, Vagabond Songs and Ballads of Scotland [first series] (Paisley, 1899), pp. 227-228, "The Humble Beggar" (1 text)
David Herd, editor, Ancient and Modern Scottish Songs, Heroic Ballads, etc. (Edinburgh, 1870 (reprint of 1776) ("Digitized by Google")), Vol II, pp. 28-30, "The Humble Beggar" (1 text)
Roud #5511

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Irish Wake" [Laws Q18] (theme of a dead man leaving his coffin)

NOTES [106 words]: Chambers: "First published in Herd's Collection, but certainly much more ancient. I have heard it sung by old people who were not likely to have seen Herd's Collection." Chambers here agrees with Cunningham's evaluation.

Cunningham: "The hero seems to have been a kind of martial mendicant, who obtained alms by other means than intercession; his horn and his kale goolie made the impatience of his friends for his interment very justifiable. The joy and sorrow at his lyke-wake is a very just picture of other times, when, according to the proverb, more mirth was found at the end of a funeral than at the beginning of a wedding." - BS

Last updated in version 3.2
File: Grg031

Humble Farmer, The

DESCRIPTION: "I saw a humble farmer, His back was bending low, A-pickin' out the cotton, Along the cotton row." The ragged farmer meets the merchant, who demand, "Pay me all you owe." The farmer cannot pay it all; he hopes for an extension until next fall

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: work poverty hardtimes farming

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 213, "The Humble Farmer" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 213, "The Humble Farmer" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #6709

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Farmer Is the Man" (theme)
cf. "Po' Farmer" (theme)
cf. "Down on the Farm (III)" (theme)

File: Br3213

Humble Village Maid Going a-Milking, The

DESCRIPTION: Maid going milking rejects advances of rich suitor "for Edmund he's the lad I love He won my heart,she said, And he has promised for to wed his humble village maid"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)
Humble Yourself, The Bell Done Rung

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Live humble Humble your soul (little children, little soul, I say), The bell done ring." Verses tell how Jonah is tossed off the ship to Tarshish as he tries to escape the Lord's command to save Ninevah.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Marsh)

Humbolesque

DESCRIPTION: An omnibus of disparate stanzas, bawdy and scatological, set to Dvorak's familiar piano composition.

AUTHOR: unknown (music by Antonin Dvorak)
EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (music published 1894)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 235-239, "Humbolesque" (4 texts, 1 tune)
DT, HUMORESQ*
Roud #10262
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Footprints on the Dashboard" (tune)
NOTES [40 words]: The late Supreme Court Associate Justice William O. Douglas claims that he and fellow Yale Law School professor Thurman Arnold wrote at least one of the verses to this in the early 1930s. See Douglas's Go East, Young Man (pp. 171-172). - EC

Humours of Donnybrook Fair (I), The
DESCRIPTION: "To Donnybrook steer, all you sons of Parnassus, Poor painters, poor ... To see what the fun is": pig hunts, fights, horse races, tradesmen of all kinds, tinkers, singers, dancing dogs, pickpockets, barbers, whisky. "There's naught more uproarious"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1839 (Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
KEYWORDS: commerce sports drink food music begging humorous nonballad animal dog horse
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 184-189, "The Humours of Donnybrook Fair" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Kathleen Hoagland, editor, One Thousand Years of Irish Poetry (New York, 1947), pp. 265-267, "The Humours of Donnybrook Fair"
Roud #V4007
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding Harding B 25(28), "The Humours of Donnybrook ("To donnybrook steeer [sic] all ye sons of parnassus"), unknown, n.d.
CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "Ballynafad" (tune, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
NOTES [78 words]: Donnybrook is less than three miles from Dublin. - BS
Parnassus is a mountain near Delphi in Greece, considered sacred to Apollo and the muses. Hence the sons of Parnassus are artists, poets, and the like.
According to Partridge's Dictionary of Slang and Unconventional English, the term "donnybrook" for a fight is originally Australian and comes from c. 1920, but it derives from the reputation of Donnybrook Fair for wild events such as those described here. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: CrPS184

Humours of Donnybrook Fair (II), The DESCRIPTION: Dermot O'Nolan M'Figg, "that could properly handle a twig" goes to Donnybrook Fair intent on dancing. At each tent he "took a small drop." He sees his Kate dancing and clubs her partner, who, she explained, is her cousin. They are reconciled.
AUTHOR: Charles O'Flaherty (1794-1828) (source: Hoagland)
EARLIEST DATE: before 1886 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(937))
KEYWORDS: fight dancing drink humorous
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Kathleen Hoagland, editor, One Thousand Years of Irish Poetry (New York, 1947), pp. 390-392, "The Humours of Donnybrook Fair"
Roud #V4008
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(937), "The Donnybrook Jig" ("Oh, 'twas Dermot O'Nolan M'Figg"), W.S. Forsey (London), 1858-1885
NOTES [63 words]: Broadside Bodleian B 11(937) is the basis for the description.
Donnybrook is less than three miles from Dublin. - BS
According to Partridge's Dictionary of Slang and Unconventional English, the term "donnybrook" for a fight is originally Australian and comes from c. 1920, but it derives from the reputation of Donnybrook Fair for wild events such as those described here. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: Hg10390
Humours of Glasgow Fair, The

DESCRIPTION: At dawn Willock wakes Tam to go to the fair with Jenny and Maggy. There was "funning and sporting," drinking, music and shows. They spend the night at Luckie Gunn's. "Ne'er saw ye sic din and guffawing -- Sic hooching and dancing was there"

AUTHOR: John Breckinridge (source: Whitelaw and Greig/Duncan4)

EARLIEST DATE: 1823 (Hutchison citing Glasgow chapbook MU25-f.12:12, according to Greig/Duncan4)

KEYWORDS: commerce sports drink food music humorous

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, pp. 212-213, "The Glasgow Fair " (1 text)

Roud #6260

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Harding B 11(1336), "Glasgow Fair" ("O, the sun frae the eastward was peeping"), J. Wright (Edinburgh), no date

NOTES [109 words]: "This ditty, descriptive of 'The Humours of Glasgow Fair' was popular as a street song some twenty-five years ago.... The fair of Glasgow is held annually, and has been so from time immemorial, on the second week of July that includes a Monday" (Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, 1843).

Greig/Duncan4: "Cf. Peter Ross, The Songs of Scotland, pp. 376-9, "Glasgow Fair," where the song is attributed to John Breckenridge, a compositor in Glasgow about 1820."

Apparently broadside Bodleian, 2806 c.11(218), "Humours of Glasgow Fair" ("O, the sun frae the eastward was peeping"), The Poet's Box (Glasgow), 1866 is this song but I could not download and verify it. - BS

Last updated in version 3.2

File: GrD4887

Humphrey Marshall

DESCRIPTION: "Oh General Humphrey Marshall Who weighs all of three hundred pound, To fetch here safe your message, On that purpose I am bound." "Humphrey Marshall he's our boss, Brave as hell and big as a hoss."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)

KEYWORDS: Civilwar nonballad soldier

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 55-56 (no title) (2 very short fragments)

NOTES [184 words]: Humphrey Marshall (1812-1872) was a Confederate politician (a Kentuckian, he served in congress as a Whig 1849-1852 and as a Know-Nothing in 1855-1859 as well as in the Confederate congress 1864-1865). Marshall, who had graduated West Point (barely) but resigned after only a year of military life, was appointed a Confederate general in 1861, and -- in an interesting sidelight to Thomas's narrative about General Garfield -- fought against that Union general in early 1862. Marshall had originally tried to keep Kentucky neutral in the Civil War, and only "went south" after his hopes failed. He probably received appointment because the Confederates needed Kentucky officers for recruiting purposes; this caused Marshall to be given a command during Bragg's 1862 invasion of Kentucky.

His record, however, was apparently not very distinguished; his weight is mentioned in both my biographic sources, and he is said to have been a poor disciplinarian. He finally resigned from the Confederate army in 1863 (he had already quit once in 1862), perhaps because he couldn't acquire a meaningful command. - RBW

File: ThBa055
Humping Old Bluey (The Poor Bushman)

DESCRIPTION: "Humping old bluey it is a stale game... You're battling with poverty, hunger, sharp thorn -- Things are just going middling with me." The shearer complains about the life after the shearing is over

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964
KEYWORDS: rambling sheep Australia
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, p. 125, "Humping Old Bluey" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, p. 142, "Humping Old Bluey" (1 text, 1 tune)

Humpty Dumpty

DESCRIPTION: "Humpty Dumpty sat on a wall, Humpty Dumpty had a great fall. Threescore men and threescore more Cannot place Humpty Dumpty as he was before." (Or, ... All the kings horses And all the king's men Couldn't put Humpty together again.)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1810 (Gammer Gurton's Garland)
KEYWORDS: death riddle
FOUND IN: Britain(England,Scotland(Aber)) US(Ap)
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1681, "Humpty Dumpty" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 233, "Humpty Dumpty sat on a wall" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-annotatedMotherGoose #670, pp. 268-269, "(Humpty Dumpty sat on a wall)"
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 80, "Humpty Dumpty" (1 text)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 51, "Humpty Dumpty" (1 text)
Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #70, "Humpty Dumpty" (description of the game only; it is not clear it uses this rhyme)
Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #136n, "Humpy Bumpy" (1 text)
Roud #13026
NOTES [168 words]: These days, we all know this from Lewis Carroll -- though, interestingly, we don't use his last line ("Couldn't put Humpty Dumpty in his place again," which Alice correctly notes doesn't scan). It's found in the chapter "Humpty Dumpty" in Through the Looking Glass. But the first form quoted here is that found in Gammer Gurton's Garland, which according to the Baring-Goulds is the first appearance of the rhyme in print. They claim, however, that the rhyme is much older as a riddle (presumably it ended with a question asking who Humpty was, the answer being "an egg"). The Opies, p. 10, cite a version from Saxony in which Humpty becomes Humpelkin-Pumpelken (with umlauts on the u's) and a Danish version about Lille Trille.

Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel claims that this dates back to the English Civil War and the Royalist defense of Colchester, in which a cannon named Humpty Dumpty played a role. The defense failed when the cannon fell from the walls. Possible, of course, but Jack cites no source. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2

Hundred and Fifty-One Days

DESCRIPTION: "For a hundred and fifty-one days a lock-out! The kids and mum get a knock-out! The union funds' pay then run out!" "A thousand pay but the company locks out... they'll get the cops out." "They lock us out, then call it a strike."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry)
KEYWORDS: labor-movement hardtimes New Zealand
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 80, "151' Days" (1 text, 1 tune, called "Hundred and Fifty-One Days" in the source notes) (p. 60 in the 1972 edition)
RECORDINGS:
Bill Taylor, "Hundred and Fifty-One Days" (on NZSongYngCntry)

NOTES [225 words]: According to Gordon Ell, Kiwiosities: An A-Z of New Zealand traditions & Folklore, New Holland Publishers, 2008, p. 257, the phrase "The 151 Days" refers to the "Duration of the waterside workers' strikes (or the Waterfront Lockout) of 1951. Prime Minister Sid Holland broke the impasse by deregistering the waterfront unions and bringing in troops to work the wharves."

On p. 274, Ell reports, "This test of left- and right-wing politics was finally won by the National government abolishing the waterfront unions and setting up new ones. In a state of national emergency, servicemen were used as strike breakers to keep essential goods moving over the wharves and around the coasts. The strike spread from the waterfront to encompass other unions which affected the means of production and distribution.... The waterfront workers' leaders, President H. Barnes and Secretary T. Hill, were represented as evil 'commies' by one side but revered by the other. There were street demonstrations with some violence; a railway bridge near Huntly was damaged by dynamite. It became illegal to help a waterfront worker or to speak about conditions brought on by the strike...." Eventually Labour Party leader Walter Nash convinced Prime Minister Holland to call an election over the issue; Holland won, which effectively meant that the strikers lost. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: Colq060

Hundred Years Ago (I), A

DESCRIPTION: Shanty or windlass song, "A hundred years is a very long time, Oh, aye, oh, A hundred years on the Eastern Shore, A hundred years ago." "Ol' Bully John from Baltimore, Oh, aye, oh, I knew him well, that son-of-a-whore, A hundred years ago."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)

KEYWORDS: sailor work shanty

FOUND IN: US(MA,NE) Britain

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, pp. 67-68, "A Hundred Years on the Eastern Shore" (1 text) Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 62-63, 150, "A Long Time Ago (version 3)," "A Hundred Years Ago" (2 texts, 1 tune) Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 101, "A Long Time Ago" (1 text, version "g" of "A Long Time Ago") [AbEd, p. 92]; pp. 509-511 "A Hundred Years Ago" (2 texts, 2 tunes) [AbEd, pp. 375-376] Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, LII, p. 57, "A Hundred Years on the Eastern Shore" (1 text, 1 tune) Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 485, "A Hundred Years Ago" (1 text, 1 tune, curiously listed as a religious song!)

DT, HUNDAGO*

Roud #926

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Yankee John, Stormalong (Liza Lee)" (lyrics)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Tis Time For Us to Go

File: San485

Hung My Bucket on de White Folks' Fence

DESCRIPTION: "Hung my bucket on de white folks' fence, Hain't seen my bucket sense. Oh Lawd! Oh Lawd! Old Aunt Dinah, well she bounce around, Leave her wooden leg on de ground, Save her meat skin, lay dem away, To grease her wooden leg every day."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: theft dancing

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 475, "Hung My Bucket on de White Folks' Fence" (1 short text)
Hungry Army (I), The

DESCRIPTION: Having fought with his sweetheart, the Irishman enlists in the army. He quarrels with his NCOs, then is sent off to (China?) in a boat too small and ill-equipped for the soldiers. Sent into battle, he is injured and discharged.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Sam Henry collection); c. 1856 (broadside NLScotland, L.C.Fol.178.A.2(054))

KEYWORDS: soldier battle injury disability

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H92, p. 86, "The Hungry Army" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 158-161, "The Hungry Army" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #19105

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 b.11(27), "The Hungry Army" ("The wind in thundering gales did roar"), unknown, n.d.
Murray, Mu23-y1:097, "The Hungry Army," James Lindsay (Glasgow), 19C
NLScotland, L.C.Fol.178.A.2(054), "The Hungry Army," James Lindsay (Glasgow), c.1856

NOTES [59 words]: The notes to broadside Bodleian 2806 b.11(27) make the subject "War, Opium War, 1840-1842, Ireland"

Broadside Murray Mu23-y1:097 has the site of the war in China and the battle simply "on the field of battle."

Broadside NLScotland L.C.Fol.178.A.2(054) has the site of the war in Russia, rather than China; the singer is wounded November 5 at Inkerman. - BS

Last updated in version 4.2

File: HHH092

Hungry Army (II), The

DESCRIPTION: The singer enlists and is sent to Ballarat. The men are so thin a strong wind "blew the lot away"; the singer gets a medal for surviving. He eats cabbage broth. Utensils are only used to cut hair. Sent to drill still strong recruits, he is beaten.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1886 (broadside, Bodleian Firth b.25(254))

KEYWORDS: army ordeal starvation Australia humorous

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))

Roud #1746

RECORDINGS:
Walter Pardon, "The Hungry Army" (on Voice14)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth b.25(254), "The Hungry Army" ("When I was young and in my prime"), W.S. Fortey (London), 1858-1885; also Firth c.19(219), 2806 c.8(288), "The Hungry Army"

NOTES [233 words]: Hall, notes to Voice14: "Servicemen also have the gift of moaning, and 'The Hungry Army', set in mid-nineteenth century Australia, is a typical squaddie beef at conditions and authority."

Ballarat is in Victoria, Australia, about 65 miles east of Melbourne. - BS

According to Andrew and Nancy Learmouth, Encyclopedia of Australia (article on Ballarat in the second edition), the Ballarat region was not opened for settlement until 1837, during a drought. The population remained small until the 1851 gold rush; in 1851 "a septuagenarian digger named John Dunlop discovered the richest field of all, at Ballarat" (see Robert Hughes, The Fatal Shore, p. 562). I suspect that this is what brought Ballarat to the broadside-writers' attention -- especially since the British government charged the large fee of 30 shillings a month for a gold license (Hughes, p. 562), meaning that they needed some sort of law and order in the area. But gold rashes are almost always attended by squalor, since there are few supplies in the area. Hence, presumably, this song. But we note that it has mentions absolutely nothing about Australia except the name "Ballarat." I assume it is in fact an older piece adapted to the Australian gold rush. Roud lumps this with "The Hungry Army (I)." But while the theme is the same, the plot is different enough that Ben Schwartz and I both believe it should be split. - RBW

File: RcHunAr2

Hungry Confederate Song, A

DESCRIPTION: "The streets are all lonely and drear, love, And all because you are not here, love, if you were here, you would shed a sad tear And open your cupboard to me." The singer describes his woeful condition and wishes that he had stew or cornbread or something

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi)

KEYWORDS: food love

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 114, p. 257, "A Hungry Confederate Song" (1 text)

Roud #4498

NOTES [51 words]: Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi lists this as a Civil War song, and certainly it fits that conflict, in which Southern troops in particular often went hungry -- but there is no actual evidence in Hudson's text that it is a Civil War song, and neither he nor I knows another version to settle the claim. - RBW

File: Hud114

Hungry Hash House

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a boarder and I dwell in that second-rate hotel. If I stay here long, I think I'll go insane...." "Well, she promised she would meet me when the clock struck seventeen...." "She's my darling, she's my daisy. She's hump-backed and she's crazy...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (recording, Uncle Dave Macon)

KEYWORDS: poverty hardtimes home disease nonballad nonsense madness food

FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,Ro,SE,So,SW)

REFERENCES (10 citations):
Randolph 478, "The Boarding-House" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 371-373, "The Boardinghouse" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 478)
Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, pp. 100-101, "The Lonesome Hungry Hash House" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #233, "The Apex Boarding House" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 207, "She Promised She'd Meet Me" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblerSongbook, pp. 220-221, "Hungry Hash House" (1 text, 1 tune)
Rorrer-RamblingBlues-LifeAndSongsOfCharliePoole, p. 74, "Hungry Hash House" (1 text)
Gilbert-LostChords, pp. 191-192, "The All Go Hungry Hash House" (1 text)
Huntington-FolksongsFromMarthasVineyard, pp. 53-55, "My Kentucky Jane" (1 text, 1 tune, probably influenced by other songs)

DT, HASHOUSE*

Roud #11719 and 10173 and 7635

RECORDINGS:
Arkansas Charlie [pseud. for Charlie Craver], "That Old Go Hungry Hash House" (Vocalion 5401, 1930)
Binkley Brothers' Dixie Clodhoppers, "All Go Hungry Hash House" (Victor 21758, 1928)
Cofer Brothers, "All Go Hungry Hash House" (OKeh 45099, 1927)
Bill Cox, "Hungry Hash House Blues" (Gennett 6974/Champion 15792 [as Luke Baldwin]/Supertone 9534 [as Charley Blake], 1929)
Uncle Dave Macon, "All Go Hungry Hash House" (Vocalion 15076, 1925)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Hungry Hash House" (on NLCR13)
Charlie Poole & the North Carolina Ramblers, "Hungry Hash House" (Columbia 15160-D, 1927; Velvet Tone 2492-V/Clarion 5432-C [both as Pete Harrison & his Bayou Boys], 1932; rec. 1926; on CPoole03)
Ernest V. Stoneman, "The Old Go Hungry Hash House" (Okeh 45062, 1926); "All Go Hungry Hash House" (Victor 20237, 1926); [Ernest Stoneman & The Dixie Mountaineers, "All Go Hungry Hash House" (Edison, unissued, 1927) (Edison 52350, 1928) (CYL: Edison [BA] 5528, 1928)
Gordon Tanner, Smokey Joe Miller & Uncle John Patterson, "Lonesome Hungry Hash House" (on DownYonder)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Little Old Log Cabin in the Lane" (tune) and references there
cf. "Sara Jane" (tune, floating lyrics)
NOTES [141 words]: The verse "She's my darling, she's my daisy, She's humpbacked and she's crazy... She's my freckled-faced consumptive Mary Ann" floats (e.g. Charlie Poole uses it in his version of "I Was Born About Ten Thousand Years Ago (Bragging Song)", and it also appears in "Sara Jane." Paul Stamler thinks that the most likely source, so we are now, somewhat tentatively, listing loose citations of that verse there unless we can determine their source. See, however, "Dennis McGonagle's Daughter Mary Ann."
Roud, it will be noted, regards this as multiple different songs, and he may well be right; this entry grew by accretion. I've also split off some of the songs he lists under 10173 into other songs. There is a clear need for a real study of "crummy boarding house" songs, many of which, I suspect, were considered unprintable for a long time.
Last updated in version 5.2
File: San207

Hunky Punky
DESCRIPTION: "My song is of a nice young girl, She is my hunky punky... Her ears are long...`` and her feet are like an elbow." She is a circus member and cares for the animals, cleaning the hippopotamus and shaving the elephant's trunk and engaging in other nonsense
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1966 (Huntington-FolksongsFromMarthasVineyard)
KEYWORDS: animal hair nonsense humorous father
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-FolksongsFromMarthasVineyard, pp. 51-53, "Hunky Punky" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: HuVi051

Hunt the Squirrel
DESCRIPTION: "Hunt the squirrel through the wood, I lost him, I found him; I have a little dog at home, He won't bite you, He won't bite you, And he will bite you."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland)
KEYWORDS: playparty animal hunting dog
FOUND IN: US(NE) New Zealand
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 37-38, "Lucy Locket" (1 text, 1 tune, which has the "I Wrote a Letter" verse, the "Little dog" verse, and the "Lucy Locket" verse but which is said by Linscott to use the "Hunt the Squirrel" game)
Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, p. 806, "Hunt the Squirrel (Itisket, Itasket)" (1 text) Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #117, "Hunt the Squirrel" (1 text, 1 tune, with the tune being "Itisket" but the game being "Hunt the Squirrel") Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 104, p. 133, "Nursery Rhyme" (1 text of two verses, the first being "Yankee Doodle" and the second "Lucy Locket/Hunt the Squirrel") Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 30, ""I sent a letter to my love"; "I had a little dog"; "Lucy Locket" (3 texts, the first being of the "Atisket, Atasket (I Sent a Letter to My Love)" type, the second of the "Hunt the Squirrel" type, the third being "Lucy Locket, but all apparently used for the same game"
ST BAF806 (Full)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Atisket, Atasket (I Sent a Letter to My Love)" (floating lyrics, playparty form)
Hunt the Wren

DESCRIPTION: "Let's go to the wood, said Robin-the-Bobbin, Let's go to the wood, said Richard to Robin. Let's go to... said John Tullane, Let's go to... said everyone." They hunt, kill, and eat the wren, and argue over disposing of the body.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1744 (Tommy Thumb's Pretty Song Book, Volume II)
KEYWORDS: wren hunting foreignlanguage
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,North,South),Scotland(Bord),Wales) US(Ap,NE,SE)
REFERENCES (13 citations):
- Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 184-185, "Richat and Robet" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Gl 167)
- Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 78, "Helg yn Dreean [Hunt the Wren]" (1 Manx Gaelic text+translation, 1 tune, plus fragments and a text of "The Cutty Wren" in the notes)
- Gardham-EastRidingSongster 2, pp. 6, 42, "I've Fun' a Bod's Nest" (2 texts, 1 tune)
- Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 117, pp. 235-236, "Let's Go to the Woods" (1 text)
- Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 230-233, "Let's Go to the Woods or The Hunting of the Wren" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, pp. 108-109, "Roberty Boberty" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Smith-SouthCarolinaBallads, #XVI, pp. 164-166, "Hunting the Wren or 'Let Us Go to the Woods'" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 447, "We will go to the wood, says Robin to Bobbin" (1 text)
- Baring-Gould-AnnnotatedMotherGoose #29, p. 41-44, "(We will go to the Wood)"
- Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 16, "The Hunting of the Wren" (1 text)

RECORDINGS:
- Jack Elliott, "Billy the Bob" (on Elliott01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Wren (The King)" (subject)
cf. "Billy Barlow" (form)
cf. "Cricketty Wee" (form)
cf. "The Cutty Wren" (form, subject)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Robin-the-Bobbie

NOTES [167 words]: Many have identified this song with "Billy Barlow," "Cricketty Wee," or (especially) "The Cutty Wren," but while the form is similar, and in the latter case even the subject is the same, the plot is distinct enough that the Index splits them.
In some cases, e.g. the Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland text, I'll admit this is doubtful, but some of the Digital Tradition texts are more distinct, and even pick up pieces of "The Wren (The King)." In another Digital Tradition text (HNTWRN2), the plot doesn't even involve a wren; it's just a bunch of kids(?) finding a bird's nest; that one seems to have some "Billy Barlow" in its ancestry (or, more likely, the reverse).

In the case of the Opie "We Will Go to the Wood" text, it seems not unlikely that someone took a "Cutty Wren" text and made it a nursery song. This might explain the complex relationship between the texts.

For a little information, and a lot of speculation, on the history of wrenning, see the notes to "The Wren (The King)." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5
File: K078

Hunters of Kentucky, The [Laws A25]

DESCRIPTION: The hunters of Kentucky are praised and offered as a specimen based on their performance at the Battle of New Orleans

AUTHOR: Samuel Woodworth

EARLIEST DATE: 1822 (first published 1824 by T. Birch, according to Dichter/Shapiro, p. 32)

KEYWORDS: war patriotic bragging

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

Jan 8, 1815 - Battle of New Orleans. Although a peace had already been signed, word had not yet reached Louisiana, which Pakenham sought to invade. Andrew Jackson's backwoodsmen easily repulsed Pakenham's force; the British commander is killed in the battle.

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,NE,So)

REFERENCES (18 citations):

Laws A25, "The Hunters of Kentucky"

Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 298-299, "The Hunters of Kentucky" (1 text plus 2 fragments, 1 tune, but the "A" fragment and part of "C" is "Pakenham")

Randolph 666, "A Hunter from Kentucky" (1 short text, 1 tune)

Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 93-94, "The Hunters of Kentucky" (1 text)

Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy 40, "The Hunters of Kentucky" (1 text (Woodworth's original) plus a fragment, 1 tune)

Rickaby/Dykstra/Leary-PineryBoys-SongsSongcatchingInLumberjackEra 40, "The Hunters of Kaintucky" (1 text (Woodworth's original) plus a fragment, 1 tune)

Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 231-232, "The Hunters of Kaintucky" (1 text, 1 tune)

Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 427-429, "The Hunters of Kentucky or Half Horse and Half Alligator" (1 text, 1 tune)

Thompson-APioneerSongster 54, "The Hunters of Kentucky" (1 text)

Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 244-246, "Hunters of Kentucky (1 text plus a broadside with "The Hunters of Kentucky," "Barney's Lament," and "The Bay of Biscay, O!"")

Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, p. 212, "The Hunters of Kentucky; or the Battle of New Orleans" (1 text, a copy of an early broadside); p. 227 (a reprint of part of the sheet music)

Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #933, p. 63, "The Hunters of Kentucky" (2 references)

Emerson-StephenFosterAndCo, pp. 111-113, "New-Orleans (The Hunters of Kentucky" (1 text)

Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 113-117, "The Hunters of Kentucky" (1 text, 1 tune)

Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 163-164, "The Hunters of Kentucky" (1 text)

Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, pp. 34-35, "The Hunters of Kentucky" (1 text, 1 tune)

Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 288, "Hunters of Kentucky" (1 text)

DT 369, HUNTKENT*

Roud #2211

RECORDINGS:

Bob Atcher, "Hunters of Kentucky" (Columbia 50484, 1948; rec. 1947)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Pakenham" (floating lyrics)

cf. "Unfortunate Miss Bailey" (tune)

SAME TUNE:

Log Cabins and Log Cabin Boys ("Log Cabins now are all the go") (Harrison campaign song) (A. B.

The Hero of Ohio ("Come listen, lads and ladies, now) (Harrison campaign song) (A. B. Norton, _Songs of the People in the Log Cabin Days of Old Tippecanoe_, A. B. Norton & Co., 1888 (available on Google Books), p. 64)

NOTES [149 words]: Samuel Woodworth's only other noteworthy composition was "The Old Oaken Bucket." His novels and plays are mercifully forgotten.
For a Creole account of this battle, see Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 167-168 (an untitled piece which appears to be about the Battle of New Orleans).
For the general background of the final campaigns of the War of 1812, see the notes on "The Siege of Plattsburg." For the Battle of New Orleans itself, see The Battle of New Orleans" [Laws A7].
It should probably be noted that the Kentucky and Tennessee militia weren't all that great in themselves; in a series of Indian engagements in 1814, they showed a disastrous tendency to fall apart. Some of them, in fact, were routed at New Orleans -- only to be saved when general Pakenham refused to take advantage of the opening. But Andrew Jackson executed some of the deserters, and managed to tighten discipline. - RBW

_Last updated in version 4.4_

File: LA25

Hunters' Chorus

DESCRIPTION: "The hunter winds his bugle horn. To horse, to horse, hello, hello, The fiery coursers snuff the morn, And thronging serfs the mark pursue." The dogs search the field. A white deer flees and is pursued

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin)

KEYWORDS: hunting dog

FOUND IN: US(MW) Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
* Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 255, "Hunters' Chorus" (1 short text, 1 tune)
* Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, pp. 64-65, "The Hunter Winds His Bugle Horn" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #15681

NOTES [39 words]: This is quite obviously of English origin, and the source song may well be in the Index somewhere. But what is left of it in Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin is so short and so patently damaged that I cannot identify the original. - RBW

_Last updated in version 5.0_

File: Pet255

Huntin' for Fun

DESCRIPTION: "Ain't no use in foolin' around, Too many cops in this old town." The singer advises going to the country for corn liquor and women, more common there than in town. "Just fill up your belly and roll in the leaves, Sing and whistle and do as you please."

AUTHOR: probably adapted by John Daniel Vass

EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (collected by Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains from John Daniel Vass)

KEYWORDS: drink courting police nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
* Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains, p. 52, "Huntin' for Fun" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #7332

NOTES [92 words]: Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains notes the similarity of this tune to a military cadence, though he does not state whether informant John Daniel Vass was ever in the military. Nonetheless, given the nature of the material collected from Vass, and the degree of repetition in this piece (in essence, it consists of a threefold repetition: No drink in this town, go to the country; No women in this town, go to the country; No fun in this town, go to the country) I have to suspect that Vass put it together himself based on the cadence chant. - RBW

File: Shel052
Hunting Carol, A (At A Place Where I Me Set)

DESCRIPTION: "As I walked by a forest side," a forester tells the singer to bide. They wait for a hart. The singer looses his hounds and sounds his horn, declaring, "We shall have sport and game enough: With hey! go bet! Hey! go bet! how!"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1521 (printed by Wynkyn de Worde)
KEYWORDS: hunting animal MiddleEnglish
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (9 citations):
Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols, #424, pp. 287-288, "(no title)" (2 texts)
Sidgwick/Chambers-EarlyEnglishLyrics CXLIV, p. 245, "(no title)" (1 text)
Rickert-AncientEnglishChristmasCarols, p. 139, "A Carol of Hunting" (1 text)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #418
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #695
ADDITIONAL: Roman Dyboski, _Songs, Carols, and Other Miscellaneous Poems from the Balliol Ms. 354, Richard Hill's Commonplace Book_, Kegan Paul, 1907 (there are now multiple print-on-demand reprints), #87, pp. 103-104, "[How! we shall have game & sport ynow!" (1 text, with a second text on p. 186)
MANUSCRIPT: {MSRichardHill}, The Richard Hill Manuscript, Oxford, Balliol College MS. 354, folio 176
MANUSCRIPT: Oxford, Bodleian Library, Rawlinson 4to 598, recto (this is actually a print by Wynkyn de Worde, from 1521, but it's from the manuscript era and cataloged with them)
NOTES [178 words]: This exists in only two copies, but both are fairly significant. One is the famous Richard Hill manuscript; the other is a scrap of a carol book by Wynkyn de Worde, dated to 1521, which also contains the Boar's Head Carol. These two are clearly the same song but also substantially different (e.g. the Hill text has a "Tro-ro-ro" call in the verse which de Worde lacks); although they are very nearly contemporary, the evidence of folk processing is strong. I've indexed the piece on that basis.
The chorus "Go bet!" seems to inspire some disagreement in commentators. The Sisams gloss "bet" as "quick," Rickert-AncientEnglishChristmasCarols calls it a hunting cry and says "bet" might mean "better" or "beat"; Greene explains it explicitly as "better." Greene compares it to line 1213 of Chaucer's "Legend of Good Women"; that line (in the Legend of Dido) reads "WIth 'Hay! Go bet! Pryke thow, Lat gon! Lat gon!'" The Riverside Chaucer glosse "Go bet" as "hurry up," which is certainly the point of the rest of the line. "Go bet" also occurs in the carol "Sir Peny." - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: MSAHuCar

Hunting Deer

DESCRIPTION: "Come on, ye hunters, if ye want to hear, That famous story of hunting deer, A deer in the woods and not a deer in the bag." The hunter wasted his ammo and bagged nothing.
He warns against not to "skin your deer before you kill it" and lists other hunters
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1926 (Rickaby collection, according to Rickaby/Dykstra/Leary-PineryBoys-SongsSongcatchingInLumberjackEra)
KEYWORDS: hunting hardtimes humorous derivative moniker
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Rickaby/Dykstra/Leary-PineryBoys-SongsSongcatchingInLumberjackEra 65, "Hunting Deer" (1 text, tune referenced)
Roud #28963
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Casey Jones (I)" [Laws G1] (tune, characters) and references there
File: RDL065
Hunting for a City
DESCRIPTION: "I am hunting for a city, to stay a while (x3), O, believer got a home at last."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 18, "Hunting for a City" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #11840
RECORDINGS:
Isabel Simmons and the Moving Star Hall Singers, "We Are Hunting for a City" (on USSealsIsland02)
File: AWG018A

Hunting for the Lord
DESCRIPTION: "Hunt till you find him, Hallelujah, And a-hunting for the Lord. till you find him, And a-hunting for the Lord."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 13, "Hunting for the Lord" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11848
File: AWG013B

Hunting of the Cheviot, The [Child 162]
DESCRIPTION: Percy, Earl of Northumberland, goes deer hunting into Earl Douglas' land of (Cheviot/Chevy Chase), in defiance of a warning from Douglas. In battle they earn each other's respect, but both die, along with many of their men.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1765 (Percy; mentioned in "Wit's End" in 1617 and in the Stationer's Register in 1624); the manuscript Ashmole 48 is thought to have been written during the reign of Mary 1 (1553-1558)
KEYWORDS: battle hunting death nobility
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1388 - Battle of Otterburn. Scots under Douglas attack England. Although Douglas is killed in the battle, the Scots defeat the English and capture their commander Harry "Hotspur" Percy
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North),Scotland) US(NE,SE,So)
REFERENCES (36 citations):
Child 162, "The Hunting of the Cheviot" (2 texts)
Bronson 162, "The Hunting of the Cheviot" (10 versions)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 162, "The Hunting of the Cheviot" (6 versions: #1, #3, #5, #6, #7, #10)
Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume II, pp. 1-16, "Chevy Chase" (1 text)
Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp.81-92, "Chevy Chase" (1 text)
Ritson-AncientSongsBalladsFromHenrySecondToTheRevolution, pp. 335-343, "The Hunting in Chevy-Chase" (1 text)
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 18-19, "Chevy Chase" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-BritishBalladsFromMaine pp. 243-248, "Chevy Chase" (1 text)
Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland3, pp. 135-144, "The Hunting of the Cheviot, or Chevy Chase" (1 text, from "The Charms of Melody" rather than tradition)
Davis-TraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 34, "The Hunting of the Cheviot" (1 text) Davis-MoreTraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 31, pp. 239-244, "The Hunting of the Cheviot" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #5}
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 34, "Chevy Chase" (1 text)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 446-463, "The Hunting of the Cheviot" (3 texts)
Leach-HeritageBookOfBallads, pp. 73-81, "Chevy Chase" (1 text)
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 276, "Chevy Chase" (1 text, 2 tunes)
{approximating Bronson's #1, #4}
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 1-3, "Chevy Chase" (1 text, 1 tune) {cf.
Bronson's #6, also from Stokoe's collection but differing in one note) Ritson-AncientSongsBalladsFromHenrySecondToTheRevolution, pp. 92-101, "The Hontying of the Cheviat" (1 text)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 128, "Chevy Chase" (1 text)
Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 71, "Chevy Chase (The Hunting of the Cheviot)" (1 text)
Gummere-OldEnglishBallads, pp. 105-115+325-327, "The Hunting of the Cheviot" (1 text)
Hodgart-FaberBookOfBallads, p. 96, "Chevy Chase (The Hunting of the Cheviot)" (1 text)
Whiting-TraditionalBritishBallads 21, "The Hunting of the Cheviot" (1 text)
HarvardClassics-EnglishPoetryChaucerToGray, pp. 93-101, "Chevy Chase" (1 text)
Abrahams/Foss-AngloAmericanFolksongStyle, pp. 43-45, "Chevy Chase" (1 text) Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic I, pp. 90-92, "Chevy Chase" (1 tune, perhaps linked to this piece)
Morgan-MedievalBallads-ChivalryRomanceAndEverydayLife, pp. 201-207, "Chevy Chase" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN980, "God prosper long our Noble King"; ZN982, "God prosper long our noble king" (?)
DT 162, CHEVCHAS*
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #1577, #5432
ADDITIONAL: Thomas Wright, editor, _Songs and Ballads, with other short poems, Chiefly of the Reign of Philip and Mary_, 1860 (I use the 1970 Burt Franklin reprint); the book is an edition of Oxford University Library MS. Ashmole 48, #VIII, pp. 24-28, (no title) (1 text; note that the manuscript copy is in long lines with no stanza breaks; the presentation of the text in ballad format is Child's) Michael Brander, _Scottish and Border Battles and Ballads_, 1975 (page references to the 1993 Barnes & Noble edition), pp. 233-240, "The Hunting of the Cheviot or Chevy Chase" (1 text)
Leslie Shepard. _John Pitts, Ballad Printer of Seven Dials, London 1765-1844_, Private Library Association, 1969, p. 111, "The UNHAPPY MEMORABLE SONG of the HUNTING OF Chevy Chase" (reprint of a Howard and Evans broadside)
Karin Boklund-Lagopolou, _I have a Yong Suster: Popular song and Middle English lyric_, Four Courts Press, 2002, pp. 1175-180, "(The Hunting of the Cheviot)" (1 text)
MANUSCRIPT: Oxford, Bodleian Library, MS Ashmole 48 (Bodleian 6933), folio 15 [DIMEV #5432]
MANUSCRIPT: {MSPercyFolio}, The Percy Folio, London, British Library, MS. Additional 27879, page 188 [DIMEV #1577]
Roud #223
CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "The Battle of Otterburn" (subject)
 cf. "Lord Thomas and Fair Annet" [Child 73] (tune)
SAME TUNE:
Of Turkey lately I did read/The Patient Wife betrayed; Or, The Lady Elizabeths Tragedy (Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex ZN2124)
Give o'er you rhiming Cavaliers/ Bloody News from Chelmsford (Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex ZN971)
In bloody town of Newberry/Shuff of Newberry (Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex ZN1413)
In Popish time when Bishops proud/The King and the Bishop (Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex ZN1452)
In searching ancient chronicles/A pleasant history of a Gentleman in Thracia (Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex ZN1461)
Strange news, strange news, I here have write/..Relation from the Faulcon.. Mr Powel [a ghost]
(Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex ZN2405)
Amongst the Forresters of old/The Unfortunate Forrester ...Lord Thomas.. fair Elener (Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex ZN173)
God prosper long our noble King, and send him quickly o'er/Hunting-Match (Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex
ZN986)
When as my mind was fully bent/ Bloudy News from Germany (Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex ZN2821)
All you which sober minded are/Terrible News from Branford (Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex ZN155)
All tender hearts that ake to hear/The Spanish Virgin (Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex ZN97)
God prosper long our noble king, His Turks and Germans all/An excellent new Ballad (Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex ZN98)
God hath preserved our Royal King/The Royal Patient Traveller [Charles II] (Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex ZN978)
The Belgick Boar (Ritson-AncientSongsBalladsFromHenrySecondToTheRevolution, p. 392; broadside Bodleian Firth b.21(143); Roud #V40822)
The Producers' Hymn ("In hallow'd graces our fathers sleep, Who fann'd up freedom's fire") (Foner, p. 32)

NOTES [1110 words]: According to Rollins, the Stationer's Register entries for this are "'Chevie chse" (December 14, 1624; no printer listed; p. 33, #285) and "A memorable song of the unhappy hunting in Chivey Chase" (registered March 1, 1675; no printer listed; p. 148, #1600). - RBW
Child opines that this is based on the same events as "The Battle of Otterburn" (Child #161) rather than some other border battle between Percies and Douglases. The historical Henry Percy (Hotspur) fought [and] was captured [by the Scots], but did not in fact die at Otterburn in 1388 or at any other battle with Scots but was instead slain in battle with Henry IV's forces. - KK
In addition, Harry Hotspur was never Earl of Northumberland. His father (the first of five generations of Henry Percys of Northumberland) was the first Earl, and lived until 1408. Hotspur was killed in 1403, and thus never succeeded to the title, although Hotspur's son became the second Earl.

To repeat, none of the various Earls Percy died in battle with the Scots. The first Earl was a traitor against Henry IV; the second (d. 1455) and third (d. 1461) were casualties of the Wars of the Roses, and the fourth was killed by the people of his own Earldom because he had not supported Richard III at Bosworth. (Richard, despite his later reputation, was loved in the north of England for being fair and honest and keeping the Scots away from the borders.)
Child has two basic texts, "A" from manuscript (Bodleian) Ashmole 48 and "B" being made up of all the later versions compared -- the last of them, according to Fowler, p. 158 n. 25, being from the Percy Folio. The Ashmole manuscript, according to Fowler, p. 96, contains 76 miscellaneous pieces, most if not all of them in verse; these are transcribed, verbatim and without any notes or glosses, in Wright. The slight majority have attributions, mostly to authors who would be considered poets, not song-writers. (It is noteworthy that this piece is the only one from the manuscript that Child included among the ballads; Wright, p. x, says that the only two poets cited who are otherwise known are Lord Vaux and William Elderton, each responsible for one poem. For more on Elderton, see the notes to "Mary Ambree.")

One of these authors is Richard Sheale, who signed five poems (including this: "Expliceth, quoth Rychard Sheale"; Wright, pp. vii-viii, 28), sometimes considered the compiler of the manuscript (and hence sometimes regarded as the author of the song). The other authors are very diverse, including even a summary of Chaucer's Troilus and Criseyde (Fowler, p. 101). Fowler declares the pieces "primarily didactic," with a plurality being moral teachings. This perhaps argues against Sheale as the author/compiler, since Fowler believes he was a minstrel in the court of the Earl of Derby who "play[ed] the myrry knave"; Wright, p. vii, also thinks he was indebted to Derby.
The Ashmole text of this poem has been reprinted many times; the standard edition is Wright's, but it is #3445.5 in Robbins & Cutler's Supplement to the Index of Middle English Verse, and they list fifteen printings, including Skeat's (used by Child) and several of the editions indexed here.

As Chambers, p. 162, comments "The Hunting is even more remote from historical verity than Otterburn. The scene is laid in the Cheviot hills, where not Hotspur but Earl Percy goes to hunt, in defiance of Douglas, and the event is put in the reign of Henry IV [1399-1413] rather than Richard II [1377-1399]. Douglas is killed by an arrow, Percy by Sir Hugh Montgomery, Montgomery himself by another arrow. But the battle is called Otterburn. King Henry avenges it in that of Homildon Hill (1402)."

Wells, p. 142, professes to see a similarity between this song and the opening portion of the Middle English romance "Sir Degrevant," found in two manuscripts, the Lincoln Thornton Manuscript and the Findern Manuscript, both of the fifteenth century; they, and the romance itself, seem to be from the north of England. Neither Child nor the two editions of "Sir Degrevant" known to me mention any such connection. It is certainly not a similarity of form; "Degrevant" uses the stanza type known as "tail rhyme" (best known from Chaucer's "Sir Thopas," although that is a different variant on tail rhyme), and it would be very hard to set that form to music. The similarity seems to be minimal, and thematic; "Degrevant" opens with the knight and a neighboring earl visiting -- and harrying! -- each other's lands, and features a lot of conversations over castle walls.
Izaak Walton's Compeat Angler refers to this tune (Chapter II), although in a strange list mixing folk songs ("Johnny Armstrong," "Chevy Chase") and art songs ("As at Noon Dulcina Rested," "Phyllida Flouts Me").

Sir Philip Sidney, in his Apologie for Poetrie of 1595, wrote, "I neuer heard the olde song of Percy and Duglas (sic.), that I found mot my heart moued more then with a Trumpet." It is not possible, however, to tell whether this is a reference to "The Battle of Otterburn" [Child 161] or "The Hunting of the Cheviot" [Child 162]. A caution, pointed out by Friedman, pp. 33-34, is that Sidney was descended from a Duke of Northumberland. Not from the Percys, but still, the story had personal interest to him. The Complaynt of Scotland of 1549 refers to separate songs "The hunttis of the cheviot" (Complaynt, p. lxxxv) and "The persee & the mongomrye met" (Complaynt, p. lxxxvi); again, we can't know which song is meant -- although, if both are references to the extant ballads, then "The Percy and Montgomery Met" is "Otterbrn" and "The hunttis of the Cheviot" is that ballad. The Complaynt also mentions "That day, that day, that gentil day" (Complaynt, p. lxxxvii), which Child thinks another citation of a Harlaw ballad, but that is disputed.

Most scholars, going back to Child, think "The Battle of Otterburn" [Child 161] is the older of the two Otterburn ballads (since Sheale's book is dated by other pieces in it to the reign of Mary Tudor, 1553-1558), and Child 161 is certainly the more accurate. But the language of the collected versions is newer than the earliest text of "The Hunting of the Cheviot," and Fowler, pp. 108-109, therefore argues that "The Hunting of the Cheviot" is the older song. I'm not sure I buy that, particularly since the two have cross-fertilized. The argument on p. 110 of Fowler that "Otterburn" is English and pro-Percy, while "Cheviot" is Scottish and pro-Douglas, seems better founded.

Friedman, pp. 84-113, argues that this song was the very first subject of ballad criticism, being the subject of an item by Addison in The Spectator. - RBW

Bibliography

- Chambers: E. K. Chambers, English Literature at the Close of the Middle Ages, Oxford, 1945, 1947
- Complaynt: James A. H. Murray, editor, The Complaynt of Scotland, volume I (Introduction plus Chapters I-XIII), Early English Text Society, 1872 (I use the 1906 reprint; the Complaynt was published in 1549)
- Wells: John Edwin Wells, A Manual of the Writings in Middle English 1050-1400, 1916 (references are to the 1930 fifth printing with three supplements)
- Wright: Thomas Wright, editor, Songs and Ballads, with other short poems, Chiefly of the Reign of Philip and Mary, 1860 (I use the 1970 Burt Franklin reprint); the book is an edition of Oxford University Library MS. Ashmole 48

Last updated in version 5.3
File: C162

Hunting Priest, The (Parson Hogg; Sing Tally Ho!)

DESCRIPTION: The singer will tell of the priest "with constitution strong," who regularly goes out "to 'Tally ho, the hounds, sir.'" He will interrupt anything -- a sermon, a wedding -- when he hears the sound of the hunt.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1812 (The Ulverston New Poetical Miscellany)
KEYWORDS: clergy hunting
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H222, pp. 29-30, "The Hunting Priest" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: The Ulverston New Poetical Miscellany: Containing a Selection of the Most Fashionable Songs, with Many Originals, Not Inserted in Ashburner's Vocal and Poetic Repository, G. Ashburner, Ulverston, 1812 (available on Google Books), p. 158, "The Hunting Parson" (1 text) Roud #1861
Hunting Seals

DESCRIPTION: "With knife and fork, with kettle and pan, With spoon and mug, and glasses.... For we are swoilers fearless, bold, As we copy from pan to pan, sir." The singer describes hunting seals, facing polar bears, and enticing girls with furs

AUTHOR: probably James Murphy (1868-1931)

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Murphy, Songs Sung by Old-Time Sealers....)

KEYWORDS: hunting courting animal

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, p. 133, "Hunting Seals" (1 text, tune referenced)
ADDITIONAL: James Murphy, editor, _Songs Sung by Old-Time Sealers of Many Years Ago_, James Murphy Publishing, 1925 (PDF available from Memorial University of Newfoundland web site), p. 14, "Seal Hunting Song" (1 text)

Roud #12526

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Rigs O Barley" (tune, according to Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff)

NOTES [413 words]: There is a good bit of sealing usage in this song, some of it slightly obscure. "Lasses," in the first verse, is not young women but molasses (StoryKirwinWiddowson, p. 331, citing this piece); sealers often used molasses to sweeten their tea.

"Swoil/swile" and "Swoiler/swiler" are dialect for "seal" and "sealer," respectively. A pan is a sheet of flat ice; sealers who were away from their ships often gathered seal pelts into pans for later recovery (StoryKirwinWiddowson,p. 367). The pelts themselves are the skins with the fat still attached (StoryKirwinWiddowson, p. 373; for most of the time Newfoundlanders hunted seals, the fat, which could be made into a fine oil, was the part of the seal most sought after). A panning staff, or pan flag, was a marker to say which ship the seals in a pan belonged to -- although not every sealing captain could be trusted to respect another ship's flags.

Bats and gaffs are tools for killing seals and managing the ice.

Frosters were cleats on a boot (or a horse's hoof) to prevent sliding on ice (StoryKirwinWiddowson, p. 204).

In the nineteenth and early twentieth century, the sealers usually left St. John's on March 10 (according to Greene, p. 94 n. 1, out of 71 seasons from 1863 to 1933, the fleet set sail on precisely March 10 in 44 of them); they were supposed to start sealing on or around St. Patrick's Day.

"Harps" are harp seals, the main target of the hunt, which were easy to fight; "hoods" were hooded seals, the other Newfoundland species, and they were indeed "the devil for fighting"; much heavier than a man, they would defend themselves and their young, as the harps would not. A "dog harp" is a male harp; "dog" was a term for a male animal (StoryKirwinWiddowson, p. 144).

A "white coat" or "whitecoat" is a baby harp seal, the primary object of the hunt, because they had lots of fat and made no attempt whatsoever to fight or flee (the fact that they were cute, helpless, intelligent, and endangered rarely entered a sealer's mind).

Bedlamers are second year seals, not yet fully mature but able to care for themselves -- sort of the seal equivalent of teenagers. The title is a description of age; a bedlamer may be either a "harp" or a "hood." The origin of the name is uncertain; some connect it with "bedlam," because they create bedlam, others with French "bête de la mer," "beast of the sea" (Young, p. 33; StoryKirwinWiddowson, p. 37, prefer the "bedlam" sense, and first cite the term from 1766). - RBW

Bibliography

- Greene: William Howe Greene, The Wooden Walls among the Ice Floes: Telling the Romance of the Newfoundland Seal Fishery, Hutchinson & Co, London (PDF available on the Memorial University of Newfoundland web site)
- StoryKirwinWiddowson: G. M. Story, W. J. Kirwin, and J. D. A. Widdowson, Hunting Song (I)
DESCRIPTION: The singer tells about hare-hunting dogs. When Timer hunts the hare, "she knows that her life's nearly run." When the formal hunt is over too soon, Gay-Lad "will go by himself on the mountain and will hunt by the light of the moon"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Morton/Maguire-ComeDayGoDayGodSendSunday)
KEYWORDS: hunting nonballad dog animal
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Morton/Maguire-ComeDayGoDayGodSendSunday 10, pp. 23-24, 104, 158-159, "Hunting Song" (1 text fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #2932
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Hunting Song (II)" (subject of hare-hunting)
File: MoMa023

Hunting Song (II)
DESCRIPTION: "It was early one bright winter's morning, Mister Streeter a-hunting would go." Hounds Dido, Ruler, Bonny Lass, and Julius run merrily to hunt the "puss" (hare). The course of the hunt is described; finally they catch the puss
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams)
KEYWORDS: hunting dog animal
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #95, "Hunting Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2531
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Hunting Song (I)" (subject of hare-hunting)
File: VWP085

Hunting the Hare (I)
DESCRIPTION: The hunter and his hounds chase the hare into the hay, barley, wheat, rye, and oats where, finally, "the hounds tore out the poor puss's guts"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1890 (Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle)
KEYWORDS: death hunting animal dog food
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 66, "Hunting the Hare" (1 text)
Roud #1041
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Somersetshire Hunting Song" (subject)
File: ReCi066
Huntingdon Shore

DESCRIPTION: The singer narrates preparations for a fishing journey to Huntingdon Shore. Conditions aboard and the itinerary are described. They meet girls on Round Island, Labrador but the singer insists that the place can't compare with the Huntingdon Shore.

AUTHOR: John(?) Doyle (A fisherman of St. John's and not the editor of the collection)

EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Murphy, Songs Their Fathers Sung)

KEYWORDS: fishing work travel

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (3 citations):

- Lehr/Best-ComeAndWillSingYou 53, "The Huntingdown Shore" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: James Murphy, _Songs Their Fathers Sung: For Fishermen: Old Time Ditties_, James Murphy Publishing, 1923 (PDF available from the Memorial University of Newfoundland web site), p. 3, "Huntingdon Shore" (1 text)

Roud #4415

RECORDINGS:

- Omar Blondahl, "Huntingdon Shore" (on NFOBlondahl05)

NOTES [41 words]: Said to have been composed in the 1860s. - SH, RBW

"Young Goodridge," according to Doyle, was a renowned merchant of the time. - SH

Lehr/Best-ComeAndWillSingYou: "The Huntingdown or Huntingdon shore was a fishing area on the Labrador coast." - BS

Last updated in version 6.0

File: Doy23

Huntsman's Horn, The

DESCRIPTION: "The sturdy boys from Newton and the boys from College Land" hunt hare in Kilnacran. The hounds are named as well as the landmarks passed. At least two hare are killed. A health to Ned Crudden and Comely who "did bring the cup to old Loughgar"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (IRHardySons)

KEYWORDS: death hunting animal dog horse moniker Ireland

FOUND IN: Ireland

Roud #12920

RECORDINGS:

- James and Paddy Halpin, "The Huntsman's Horn" (on IRHardySons)
- Big John Maguire, "The Huntseman's Horn" (on Voice18, IRHardySons)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

- cf. "The Fair of Rosslea" (subject: competitive hare hunt from the huntsman's point of view)
- cf. "Killafole Boasters" (subject: competitive hare hunt from the huntsman's point of view) and references there

NOTES [15 words]: The hunt takes place in the area around Lough Erne, County Fermanagh, Northern Ireland. - BS

File: RcHuntHo

Huron Carol, The (Jesous Ahatonhia)

DESCRIPTION: The Christmas story in Indian terms: "'Twas in the moon of wintertime when all the birds had fled That mighty Gitchi Manitou sent angel choirs instead. Before their light the stars grew dim, and wand'ring hunters heard the hymn...."

AUTHOR: Father Jean de Brebèuf (1593-1649); English text by J. E. Middleton, 1926

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1642

KEYWORDS: Christmas Jesus religious Indians(Am.)

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

- 1634 - the Jesuit Jean de Brebeuf leads the first missionary party to evangelize by living among the Hurons
- 1639 - Father Jemore Lalemant founds the mission of Ste-Marie.
NOTES [552 words]: Having been unable to teach the Indians old Catholic hymns, Father Brébéuf created this song for the Hurons in 1641 or 1642 (long after the first permanent missions to the Hurons were created in 1625). They sang it every Christmas until 1648, when the Hurons were attacked by Iroquois (the Hurons had by then been badly weakened by the white man's diseases). In a twist of irony, few Hurons showed to that time had shown any interest in Catholicism; Catholic ways were very different, the French themselves brought disease, and often they looked down on native ways.

To an extent, the Iroquois attack changed that. The Iroquois set out starting in 1645 to destroy all their neighbors (which they would succeed in doing by 1655); the Huron were the 1648 victims. This caused some Hurons to turn Catholic. The Iroquois were winning with the white man's weapons; perhaps the Hurons thought the white man's religion might answer. But it was too late; Huronia was destroyed in 1649. (A severe blow to the French settlement, which was closely allied to the Hurons.)

Father Jean de Brébéuf (1593-1649) and Father Gabriel Lalemant (the nephew of Jerôme Lalemant of Ste.-Marie), the leading spirits of the Jesuit missions, refusing to flee to safety, were captured, tortured, and killed. (We should note that they were not tortured for their faith; the Iroquois simply tortured captives as part of a policy of terror.)

Even then, the song continued to be sung in Huron circles; it was collected by another Jesuit, Father de Villeneuve, and was translated into French as "Jesus est né" as well as English. According to LindaJo H. McKim, Presbyterian Hymnal Companion, Westminster/John Knox Press, 1993, p. 61, the English translation by Jesse Edgar Middleton (1872-1960) was made in 1926. "Gitchi Manitou" -- in other Algonquian-language-family traditions, Keeche Keeche Manitou -- is "The Great, great Spirit... the master of life... [who] leaves the human race to their own conduct, but has placed all other living things under the care of [lesser] Manitos" (from the notes of the early explorer David Thompson, though he was writing of the Cree, not the Huron; the Huron language is part of the Iroquoian family, which is not Algonquian, so there appears to be some cultural contamination here).

McKim, p. 61, says that the Presbyterian church lists the song under the name "'Twas in the Moon of Wintertime," and calls the tune "Une Jeune Pucelle," which some consider related to the German "Von Gott Will Ich Nicht Lassen."

There is an ironic side to this story, although I truly don't know which way the irony points. William F. Fowler, Jr., Empires at War: The French and Indian War and the Struggle for North America, 1754-1763, 2005 (I use the 2006 Walker paperback), p. 7, summarizes the story of the founding of the Iroquois as follows:

"According to Iroquois history, sometime long before Europeans arrived, a virgin Huron living near the Bay of Queinte, was visited by a heavenly messenger who announced that she would be the mother of a son to be named Dekanahwideh, whose mission would be to bring peace to the warring Mohaw, Onondaga, Cayuga, Seneca, and Oneida nations who lived in the Mohawk Valley between Lake Ontario and the Hudson River." The similarities to the Christian story are obvious. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: FJ130

Hurrah for Baffin's Bay

DESCRIPTION: Nonsense song. Ch: "Avast belay, Hurrah for Baffin's Bay! We couldn't find the pole, because the barber moved away. The boat was cold we thought we'd get the grip so the painter put three coats, upon the ship! Hip, hip! Hip, hip! Hurrah for Baffin's Bay!"

AUTHOR: Words: Vincent Bryan / Music: Theodore F. Morse (1873-1924)

EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Broadway "Wizard of Oz")

KEYWORDS: sailor nonsense nonballad humorous exploration
NOTES [6644 words]: From the 1903 Broadway production of "The Wizard of Oz." It was performed by the comedy team of Fred A. Stone and David C. Montgomery (and may have been written with them in mind). - SL
And a surprisingly topical item it is, because there was a "polar push" going on at the time, but the participants had a pretty astounding record of failures. So this was written with that record in mind -- and the play was so popular that L. Frank Baum dedicated the second Oz book, The Land of Oz, to Montgomery and Stone, "whose clever personations of the Tin Woodman and the Scarecrow have delighted thousands of children throughout the land." Ray Bolger, the Scarecrow in the MGM musical, "admitted that his vaudeville hero was Fred Stone" (Loncraine, p. 284) -- indeed, he went into acting after seeing Stone perform; until then, he had just been following in his father's footsteps. When he was offered the role of the Tin Woodman, Bolger campaigned to get the Scarecrow role instead, because of Stone (Harmetz, p. 114).
The irony is that Baum had hoped to produce a Wizard of Oz musical, but the show that went on the stage was hardly his. Baum originally met an unknown composer named Paul Tietjens in 1901; Tietjens proposed that Baum write the libretto of a musical, that Tietjens prepare the music, and that Baum's illustrator W. W. Denslow manage art, costumes, etc. (Rogers, pp. 105-106). Their first idea was for a non-Oz-related show, but eventually (after a lot of fights about royalties and such) they came up with a "Wizard of Oz" musical.
Apparently Baum planned a traditional sort of comic show -- the Scarecrow as comedian, the Tin Woodman as straight man, the Cowardly Lion a clown (Rogers, p. 107). Baum offered the script to an experienced producer, Fred R. Hamlin. (That's "Hamlin" as in "Hamlin's Wizard Oil Songsters," according to Baum/Hearn, p. lvii, so there is a musical link.)
Hamlin liked the idea of adding a comic duo to the plot -- but thought the show needed work. He called in an experienced director, Julian Mitchell, to work on it. And work on it Mitchell did. Baum's plot was submerged in the comedy of the Scarecrow and Tin Woodman; Dorothy was made a woman rather than a girl (and attracted the attentions of one "Sir Dashemoff Daily"), and Toto the dog was transformed to a cow. Only eight of the Baum/Tietjens songs were retained (although one of them, "When You Love, Love, Love," was apparently the most popular in the show). Twenty other songs were added (Rogers, pp. 107-109), including this one -- note that it is not by Baum and Tietjens.
Baum may not have recognized the result of all this work, but it certainly paid off for him; the show ran for eight years, and Baum and Tietjens, despite their limited roles, are said to have earned close to a hundred thousand dollars each in royalties (Rogers, p. 109).
According to Riley, p. 78, the musical was so successful that it inspired Victor Herbert to write "Babes in Toyland," which of course is still well-known. Riley believes that "Babes" survives and the Oz musical does not because "Babes" had better tunes. This strikes me as likely, although I suspect the movie version of "The Wizard of Oz" also helped to displace the earlier musical.
Interestingly, Victor Herbert would later hire Stone and Montgomery to perform in "The Red Mill" (and some of the other performers from the "Oz" musical were cast in the original production of "Babes in Toyland," according to Baum/Hearn, p. lix).
Appelbaum, p. xiii, has two photos of Montgomery and Stone in the musical. One shows them as they sang this song, in nautical garb. The other is even more interesting. The Scarecrow costume looks pretty poor, but the Tin Woodman shows the Woodman with a funnel on his head, looking almost exactly like the costume used in the Wizard of Oz movie (the funnel, to be sure, goes back to the original book illustrations).
Whether this song was written with Stone and Montgomery in mind is perhaps a matter of definition. They did not audition for the musical; Mitchell -- who evidently already knew them -- actually called them back from a tour in England to play the parts. Supposedly Mitchell, upon meeting Stone, declared, "Fred, you are a perfect scarecrow." Stone, not knowing why he had been called back, responded that his clothes had been made by one of the best tailors in England. It is interesting to note that Stone and Montgomery would quit the show before its run ended, given that Stone met his wife on the set, and his brother Edwin got the part of Imogene the cow, the
The Northwest Passage expeditions, which had strong scientific components (John Franklin's The Pole really did seem to lure people who were in it for the glory. This was utterly unlike the thinks it would be rude not to."

871, quotes an observer who said, "Peary strikes me as a man who never smiles except when he noting that in his youth he liked to trip his grandfather just to see the old man fall down. Bryce, p. 284, calls him "probably the most unpleasant man in the annals of polar exploration,"

He ended up losing eight toes -- and being forced to stop anyway; see Berton, p. 525. Fleming-paranoia, and so obsessed that he refused to have his toes treated for frostbite on one expedition. (Henderson-Fatal, p. 44). At one point, he tried to forbid his sailors from cursing (Henderson-Fatal, pp. 944-945). In the expedition Kane commanded, he faced multiple near-mutinies, ended up never prosecuted because no one could figure out which jurisdiction the case fell under.

Robert Peary, who came later, wasn't given to visions, but he was secretive to the point of Charles Francis Hall had no relevant training (he was an engraver who had run a no-account newspaper in Cincinnati) and was given to prophetic dreams, quarrels with everyone, and perhaps a mild case of bipolar disorder; on an earlier expedition, he had murdered one of his crew, but was never prosecuted because no one could figure out which jurisdiction the case fell under (Henderson-Fatal, p. 44). At one point, he tried to forbid his sailors from cursing (Henderson-Fatal, p. 69), which has to be one of the most quixotic orders ever given.

Robert Peary, who came later, wasn't given to visions, but he was secretive to the point of paranoia, and so obsessed that he refused to have his toes treated for frostbite on one expedition. He ended up losing eight toes -- and being forced to stop anyway; see Berton, p. 525. Fleming-North, p. 284, calls him "probably the most unpleasant man in the annals of polar exploration," noting that in his youth he liked to trip his grandfather just to see the old man fall down. Bryce, p. 871, quotes an observer who said, "Peary strikes me as a man who never smiles except when he thinks it would be rude not to."

The Pole really did seem to lure people who were in it for the glory. This was utterly unlike the Northwest Passage expeditions, which had strong scientific components (John Franklin's Journey to the Polar Sea, for instance, which describes his disastrous 1819 expedition, notes that he was instructed to "register the temperature of the air at least three times in every twenty-four hours; together with the state of the wind and weather and any other meteorological phenomena. That I should not neglect any opportunity of observing and noting down the dip and variation of the magnetic needle, and the intensity of the magnetic force; and should take particular notice whether any, and what kind or degree of, influence the Aurora Borealis might exert on the magnetic needle..." and so forth. See the introduction to Franklin's work, p. 28 in the 2000 Brassey edition with introduction by James P. Delgado). Peary's sole goal and desire, by contrast, was to reach the Pole. So strong was Peary's obsession that, when he heard of other attempts, he gave orders to his subordinates to automatically discount them -- see Henderson-True, p. 210.

Hall's third expedition, 1871-1873, in the ship Polaris, shows how badly a polar expedition could fail: They made an incredible push northward, heading up Baffin Bay to the Kane Basin between Ellesmere Island and Greenland, then continuing up the Kennedy Channel to reach the north shore of Greenland at the place now called Hall Basin. But the expedition crew by then was in near-total disarray, with a drunken ship's captain and a rebellious scientific staff (Henderson-Fatal, pp. 42-45, tells us that this conflict started before they even really reached the ice). Although George Tyson, clearly the best of the officers under Hall (though, unfortunately, he had no real role; Hall had hired him as a sort of spare captain), thought that Hall was energetic, persevering, courageous, and unselfish (Henderson-Fatal, p. 48), he also wondered how any expedition could survive such divisions. It is clear that Hall, who of course had no experience of military command, was unable to exert control. Yet, as events proved, the other senior officers (captain Buddington and senior scientist Bessels) were even worse. It was a disaster for the expedition when, in November 1871, Hall died. Almost a century later (1968), Chauncey Loomis led an expedition that excavated Hall's grave -- and found he had been poisoned with arsenic.

Unlike the Franklin Poisoned By Lead theory, this doesn't seem to have been questioned, but it's not clear if it was murder or accident -- though Henderson-Fatal, p. 71, reports an ominous incident in which Captain Buddington, before Hall set out on his last sledge voyage, says that Hall won't live long. For the story, see Loomis, especially the epilogue starting on p. 303, which describes the trip to conduct the Hall autopsy. A shorter summary can be found in Berton, pp. 390-394. A third vivid account is found in Fleming-North, pp. 138-141. In Berton and Fleming, the pages before and after describe the horrid plight of the crew on the expedition, giving rather more detail than Loomis, who devotes most of his work to Hall himself.

Potter, writing long after Loomis, has another interesting footnote: that Hall (who, we should note, was married) and Dr. Bessels, the man who treated him and would have been the logical one to poison him if he had been poisoned, were both interested in the same woman! (Potter, p. 114). So we have motive, means, and opportunity, but no proof.

Other than Hall, most of the members of the expedition eventually made it home, but the Polaris was lost and the crew suffered extreme privations.

The 1879-1882 expedition of the Jeannette was worse. Paine, in the entry on the Jeanette, tells of how the former H.M.S. Pandora was sold to U. S. Navy Lt. George W. de Long. The ship was renamed for the sister of James Gordon Bennett, editor of the New York Herald, which had earlier sent reporter Henry M. Stanley into Africa to find Dr. Livingstone (Guttridge-Ice, p. 21) and who had also sent a reporter on de Long's one previous arctic expedition, to search for Hall's Polaris (Guttridge-Ice, p. 14). Bennett loved to publish exploration stories, so he decided to fund a new polar venture. At least, he promised to fund it. In practice, he demanded that de Long keep the cost under control, causing a lot of dangerous corner-cutting (Guttridge-Ice, pp. 41-44, etc.) The ship's boilers were inefficient, she had divided objectives, she didn't acquire a tender until the last minute, and she really wasn't designed to withstand the ice. Some changes were made before she sailed, including strengthening of the sides -- but certainly not enough (Guttridge-Ice, pp. 55-56).

The ship's voyage began on July 8, 1879 (Guttridge-Ice, p. 2). On August 28, 1879, Jeannette set out through the Bering Straight, to try to reach the Pole from western Canada. They were seeking the alleged open Polar Sea (the crazy idea that there was a large body of open water around the North Pole), even though the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey determined in that year that such a sea almost certainly did not exist (Guttridge-Ice, p. 80).

After numerous delays for this and that, the Jeannette finally passed through the Bering Strait. It was late in the year, and coal was relatively low (de Long was always profligate with fuel; he had gone through too much on the Polaris rescue mission and had used it up at a prodigious rate pushing toward the Arctic; Guttridge-Ice, pp. 15, 63), but de Long didn't hesitate; he tried to make it as far north as possible even after the ice started to close in (Guttridge-Ice, pp. 80-81). He made little northward progress, and within days, the ship was trapped in the ice (Guttridge-Ice, p. 83).
It wasn't long before the ship sprung the first of several leaks (Guttridge-Ice, p. 114); it took all the ingenuity of chief engineer George Melville to rig enough pumps to keep the ship afloat (Guttridge-Ice, pp. 115-128, etc.) -- and even with all his exertions, much of the ship was flooded and many supplies destroyed, plus, until Melville managed a wind-powered pump, they were burning irreplaceable coal. And they were trapped in a trap they would never escape. They could perhaps have tried to leave the ship to reach Wrangel Island (which, until then, had been known as "Wrangel Land," because it wasn't until de Long passed north of it that it was demonstrated to be an island). They had sighted it just before they became trapped (Guttridge-Ice, pp. 79-81), and it would still have been within reach. But de Long wasn't ready to abandon ship for an unexplored island; not yet. (And, though he couldn't know it, Wrangel Island would prove very inhospitable for the crew of the Karluk thirty years later; see the notes to "Captain Bob Bartlett." Of course, de Long would have had his expedition in better shape than Bartlett had he abandoned immediately.) The next summer, when they hoped to get free of the pack, they were able to make some repairs (Guttridge-Ice, p. 133 and following), but the ice had carried them north; it never quite thawed enough to let them loose. By the summer of 1881, they were passing north of the New Siberian Islands, several of which they had discovered and named (Guttridge-Ice, pp. 157-158). In June 1881, the ice finally destroyed the Jeannette (Guttridge-Ice, p. 163). The islands nearby were far too cold and small to support them; the crew sledged painfully over the ice, then upon reaching open water set out for home in three smaller boats they had hauled with them (Guttridge-Ice, pp. 185-190). Fleming-North, pp. 221-229, tells how they were separated in bad weather. One boat simply vanished. Two landed near the outlet of the Lena river in Siberia, but not together. The crew led by engineer Melville managed to survive. De Long and his party starved to death; in all, over half the Jeanette's crew was killed.

The story of Andrew Greely's party, which set out shortly after the Jeanette went missing, was similar, at least in terms of casualty rate. Greely and his party of 25 was sent to explore northern Ellesmere Island, gathering scientific data and perhaps making a run for the Pole. They were supposed to stay several years, with supplies arriving in summer. They were ill-equipped for the task; it was mostly an army signal corps expedition, and few men had arctic experience (Guttridge-Sabine, p. 7).

Even though the expedition had to sail north to their base at Lady Franklin Bay, was little interservice cooperation (Greely had boats, but no navy men; apart from one former seaman and a sergeant brought up on Cape Breton, no one even knew how to manage a boat! -- Berton, p. 459). Greely had a congressional appropriation to outfit his party, but it was too small and long-delayed; it was nearly impossible for Greely to acquire the supplies he required with the money he had available (Guttridge-Sabine, pp. 39-47). He had a hard time finding the officers and specialists he needed. Finally, on deadline, the party set out despite not really being ready.

It didn't take long for trouble to arise. Greely had a strange notion of discipline (reading Guttridge-Sabine, pp. 117-118, and other passages, he seems to have been the sort who felt that forcing people to obey silly and arbitrary commands promoted military order; Berton, p. 437, calls him a martinet and humorless -- very bad for an expedition in the arctic, where initiative is key). He sacked his second in command (Guttridge-Sabine, pp. 64-66) almost the moment the expedition arrived at its destination, then (p. 118) started taking duties away from the doctor/naturalist. When trouble came, he was in a position where he had no intelligent subordinates whose advice he could trust.

The first supply ship, which was supposed to arrive in 1882, never showed up; the army bureaucracy in effect placed all the arrangements in the hands of a private, who was given conflicting orders and had no useful experience (Guttridge-Sabine, pp. 92-97); the ship he chartered was blocked by ice, and he gave up after caching a bare handful of the supplies he had brought (Guttridge-Sabine, pp. 100-101). Not long after, the private would die of a drug overdose (Guttridge-Sabine, p. 203).

The ship involved, the Neptune (Guttridge-Sabine, p. 92), is mentioned in several songs; see the notes to "Neptune, Ruler of the Sea."

The next year's supply expedition was bigger -- it included the Proteus, which had brought the expedition north in the first place, and the naval vessel Yantic -- but the Yantic was neither fitted nor supplied for the ice (Guttridge-Sabine, p. 130), and the Proteus ended up "nipped"; she sank with most of her supplies (Guttridge-Sabine, p. 138). Plagued by indiscipline in the transport's crew (her excellent complement of two years earlier having been replaced by a different and more mutinous bunch; see e.g. Guttridge-Sabine p. 139), it took some effort just to get the relief expedition home; they left no supplies (Guttridge-Sabin, pp. 144-146). As with the Neptune, several of the ships involved on this occasion (the Arctic and the Aurora; Guttridge-Sabine, p. 270; Lubbock, p. 415); are mentioned in other songs; for the Aurora, see especially "First Arrival --
'Aurora' and 'Walrus' Full" and "The Old Polina"; for the Arctic, see "The Old Polina." But the Arctic and Aurora bear no blame in the failure of the expedition; they merely led the way for the relief ships as they went on their normal whaling trips.

After two years without contact, Greely decided to abandon Fort Conger, the base on northern Ellesmere. This was written into his instructions: if he hadn't been resupplied by September 1, 1883, he would depart. After 721 days at their base, Greely decided to leave just a little early, on August 9 (Guttridge-Sabine, p. 152; Berton, p. 448). Greely can hardly be blamed; while there was still sufficient food for at least another year, the men were unhappy (especially with him, as it would prove), and travel in the arctic winter was never easy.

What followed showed the disastrous effects of inadequate planning; Greely did not really know what course to take, and made assorted errors along the way. He took too many records and equipment (which could always have been recovered from Fort Conger at a later date) and too few rations. Plus, as an example of the nut case he was, he insisted on hauling along his heavy dress uniform (Berton, p. 458). Had everything gone exactly as planned, he had just enough food to get to where he was going (Guttridge-Sabine, p. 157)

But nothing ever goes according to plan in the arctic. The engineer in charge of keeping the motorboat's engine running was an alcoholic, and Greely couldn't keep him sober (Berton, p. 459; Guttridge-Sabine, p. 158, 162, etc.). Greely eventually decided to take passage on an ice floe, leading the rest of the expedition to discuss mutiny (Berton, p. 460; Guttridge-Sabine, p. 163-164). Greely himself fell in the water, and though he was rescued, many of the party thought he should have been left to drown (Guttridge-Sabine, p. 164). His failed planning caused one of the boats to be destroyed (Guttridge-Sabine, p. 173). Even his most reliable sergeant described this part of the trip as "madness" (Guttridge-Sabine, pp. 198-199). The map in Guttridge-Sabine, p. 213 shows how the ice drove them around the Kane Basin as they tried to get to the island known as Cape Sabine; twice they came within sight of it only to have the ice turn them around.

As all this went on, the Yantic headed south on September 15 (Guttridge-Sabine, p. 171), and the war department decided not to send further help (Guttridge-Sabine, p. 184). Greeley's crew came ashore south of their destination at Cape Sabine, with some of the men starting to become ill from their ordeal (Berton, p. 462). They had perhaps three months' worth of food to last the entire arctic winter (Berton, pp. 463-464). They built a shelter that was more cave than hut (25 feet long, 18 wide, but only 5 feet high; Guttridge-Sabine, p. 222), and basically prepared for rescue or death. (They hoped at first to be able to slide to the Greenland side, but the ice, for once, never closed over the passage, and they were too debilitated to try the remaining boats; Guttridge-Sabine, p. 239).

By New Year's, the doctor was amputating a soldier's foot and fingers due to frostbite (Guttridge-Sabine, p. 226). They had lived at Fort Conger for two years without scurvy, but now, with little fresh food, the traces began to appear; when the first man died on January 18, 1884, it was of a mix of scurvy and starvation (Guttridge-Sabine, p. 234; Berton, p. 469). Ironically, Greely, a failure until this point, managed to be a good fairly leader at this time (Berton, p. 472), rationing the food and keeping the the men relatively sane (Berton, pp. 467). But they slowly died off due to malnutrition. There were several instances where men stole food (Berton, pp. 467, 470, 473, etc.); in the end, they had to execute the worst thief, who had enlisted under an assumed name to hide his history (Berton, p. 475; Guttridge-Sabine, p. 272, says that he was not really given a trial, simply shot -- though he admits that, in the circumstances, the formality of a court-martial "was out of the question"). On the last day before rescue, when the tent by the burial plot (to which they had moved their base, Guttridge-Sabine, p. 266) fell in, no one was strong enough to put it up again. And it was later shown that someone had engaged in cannibalism (Berton, pp. 484-485). It was probably the doctor, since it was skillfully done and ceased at about the time he died (none of the men who died after him had any flesh removed), but Guttridge-Sabine, pp. 271, 275, offers a few cryptic hints that others might have been involved.

By early June, the deaths were happening almost daily, and the survivors had no strength left to bury the corpses; the last one was simply pushed out into the snow. When they were finally rescued in the fourth week of the month, only seven men were still alive, and one of them was the man who had had his feet amputated; he would soon after die of his injuries, leaving only six. Out of 25 who had set out. Apparently only two were still relatively mobile when found. Greely was the only officer to live.

A constant theme of Polar expeditions, repeated in exploratory party after exploratory party, is men who went out of control. Some of this, no doubt, is commanders who didn't know how to command (even Peary was a civil engineer, not a line officer). But I wonder a little about seasonal affective disorder. In any case, in 1903, the quest for the pole had a worse record than the quest for the Passage had been when Franklin set out.
No wonder, then, that the repeated Polar expeditions became the subject of mirth: What sane person would risk what the explorers had been through? Besides, there were all the mad inventor types the quest encouraged: Peary was mailed ideas for building a wooden tunnel to the pole, for building a pipe to transport hot soup, and to fire himself to the pole by cannon (Henderson-True, p. 185; compare Fleming-North, p. 353).

In 1904, about the time this song came out, Peary founded the Peary Arctic Club with the declared mission of "altering... public opinion so that existing prejudice against Arctic work would be lessened" (Henderson-True, p. 159). You almost wonder if it was cause and effect.

Note that the Pole was not reached until 1908 at the earliest (by Cook and/or Peary, for whom see below), five years after this song was performed -- and it was probably much later. The first person we are certain saw the North Pole was Roald Amundsen and the crew of the dirigible Norge, which flew over the pole in 1926.

This was days after Robert Byrd's attempt to fly over the Pole. Although he claimed success, the evidence is against him (for Byrd's failure, see Roberts, pp. 155-168).

Roberts, pp. 159-160, summarizes the case against Byrd: In trials, his plane never exceeded 75 miles per hour, and was slower with landing skis, but his flight time of only fifteen and a half hours meant he had to average 87 miles per hour to reach the pole. He returned with an engine leaking oil, which would have forced him to turn around as soon as it was noticed, whether he had reached the Pole or not. And his only sextant had been broken, so that, even if the readings were accepted, the instrument's error could not be checked.

It was very Peary-like: No one could prove Byrd didn't make it, but there was no good evidence and the claim required travel speeds while unobserved which Byrd had never managed while observed. Byrd's claim isn't as outrageous as Peary's -- he claimed a tailwind helped him out, which at least means he acknowledged the problem -- but the probability is low. And he went to great lengths to hide his records; Roberts, p. 164. Bryce, p. 921, makes the interesting point that the man who "verified" Byrd's record was the same one who ''proved,' and improved, Peary's observations at the 'Pole.'"

The following list shows key dates in the quest for the North Pole (adapted from Berton, p. 637 and following).

1818 - David Buchan's expedition from Spitzbergen (two ships, the other commanded by Lt. John Franklin)
1827 - William Edward Parry's expedition from Spitzbergen passes the latitude of 82 degrees N
1860-1861 - An American expedition under Isaac Hayes seeks (and naturally fails to find) the "Open Polar Sea"; it also produces some hideously inaccurate maps (Berton, pp. 353-364; Fleming-North, pp. 61-78)
1871-1873 - North Pole expedition of the Polaris (Hall's third northward expedition, but the first devoted to the Pole rather than Franklin), which features the death of Hall and the stranding of half his crew; see description above
1875-1876 - British naval expedition under George Nares. This is the last try by the British navy, and it does briefly set a new Farthest North record -- but scurvy, which the Admiralty thought it had solved, forces the expedition home a year early (Berton, pp. 413-429; Fleming-North, pp. 161-186)
1879-1882 - Jeannette expedition, described above. All told, 20 out of 33 involved die.
1881-1884 - Adolphus Greely explores Ellesmere Island and his team sets a new "farthest north" record, but only six of 25 survive (due mostly to American government errors), and at least one man was guilty of cannibalism
1886 - Robert Peary fails to cross Greenland (crossing Greenland may not sound like a big deal, but the island is all glacier; there is no life at all for hunters to harvest, and the Inuit wouldn't go near the interior. Had Peary succeeded, it would have been a testimony to his techniques; also, there was at the time a hope that Greenland might provide a route to the Pole). Peary also claims to chart shoreline later shown not to exist
1888 - Fridtjof Nansen crosses Greenland
1891-1892 - Another Peary expedition to Greenland. He doesn't chart any more territory -- and makes off with sacred and irrereplaceable Inuit artifacts which he sells entirely for his own profit. Later he will lure six Inuit back to "civilization" where they will become the victims of "scientific" experimentation; all will die young, and it will be decades before their bones are returned north for burial
1893-1895 - Nansen, using a new type of boat (the Fram) and later sledges, sets a new Farthest North but does not reach the pole
1897 - Salomon Andrée tries and fails to reach the pole by balloon. He and his crew make it back to the uninhabited islands of Franz Joseph Land but die there; their bodies are not discovered for more than thirty years
1898-1902 - Another Peary expedition fails -- this time leaving Peary with damaged feet
1899-1900 - Abruzzi expedition sets another Farthest North record but doesn't approach the Pole
1901-1902 - Ziegler/Baldwin expedition from Norway fails to reach the pole
1903-1905 - Ziegler/Fiala expedition, again from Norway, fails with the loss of the ship America
1905-1906 - Peary fails again. He claimed to reach a new "Farthest North," but at least some observers doubt his data (Larson, p. 110) -- and we have very good reason to think he fudged his data in his next expedition. In both expeditions, he claimed his fastest sledge runs at times when there was no one who could verify his numbers (Rawlins, p. 68).

1908-1909 - Peary claims to reach the Pole (April 6, 1909). So does Dr. Frederick Albert Cook (April 21, 1908).

Examination of the incomplete records of Cook and Peary makes it unlikely that either even made the Pole -- but Peary saw to it that Cook's instruments and many of his records were lost, making it impossible for Cook to offer proper evidence for his claims. (In fact, Bryce, p. 848, notes that Peary began a six-part plan to discredit Cook the moment he learned the doctor had set out for the pole. To make things even harder for Cook, an accident also destroyed many of his photos -- Bryce, pp. 335 -- but these probably would not have affected the case, since they were taken before his run for the pole.)

In addition, Edward Barrill, who had accompanied Cook on an expedition to Mt. McKinley (Bryce, p. 280, etc.), released a report claiming Cook never made the summit (Henderson-True, pp. 267-269, offers evidence that Barrill's account was made up after the fact and that he was paid by Peary supporters to concoct it, and Bryce, p. 797, says that Barrill definitely was paid a great deal for producing it, but Fleming-North, p. 386, offers evidence that Cook's description doesn't match reality, and Roberts, pp. 120-124, covers attempts to retrace Cook's actual footsteps, which allowed them to take photos which matches Cook's but from points other than where he said he took them). With Cook's claim definitely unprovable, and with his reputation damaged, Peary's equally unprovable claim was accepted almost by default (for details on this, see the notes to "Captain Bob Bartlett").

So did Cook or Peary reach the pole? The controversy continued for years, with Cook's supporters and his descendants fighting to clear his name until the last of them died out. Cook's case is much weakened by his lack of observations; indeed, there are charges that he could not so much as use a sextant to find his latitude (Bryce, p. 860ff.). Peary's partisans also stuck to their guns, and the National Geographic Society apparently still refuses to re-examine the matter; they initially accepted Peary's claim -- after all, they had supported his expedition; in fact they never really tested his data. Forty years later, just discussing the matter was enough to get Walt Gonnason thrown out of their offices (Bryce, p. 747). They still maintain that attitude; the eighth edition of their World Atlas (no copyright date but released after 2000) still lists him as the first to reach the pole (Roberts, pp. 153-154, considers this to be the result of loyalty to its own reputation).

Of other authorities I checked, Henderson-True thinks Cook made it and Peary may have. Asimov does not state an explicit opinion but strongly implies that Peary made it and Cook didn't. Berton thinks neither did (though Berton, whose general policy is to consider everyone a disreputable idiot, does make the observation that, though Peary didn't reach the Pole, he came closer than anyone else to go there solely by muscle power, without support from aircraft, and returning under his own power; see p. 624). Roberts of course is sure that neither Cook nor Peary made it. Fleming thinks Peary didn't but doesn't see why it matters (a view more meaningful in hindsight: We now know there is no land under the pole, so there is no real distinction between 88 or 89 or 90 degrees north. But Peary "didn't" know that -- in fact, he reported seeing land that wasn't there -- and he wasn't doing science anyway). The 1972 edition of Webster's Geographical Dictionary did not mention Peary and says the Pole was first crossed by foot and dogsled 1968-1969, though the 1998 edition credits Peary with reaching the Pole while admitting the claim is disputed.

Bryce, p. 876, makes an interesting observation. On p. 864, he hypothesizes that the navigationally-challenged Cook might have tried to reach the Pole by "following the magnetic meridian." This in fact would not work, but Cook might have thought it would. This allows two possibilities: That he was trying to cheat all along -- or that he tried his meridian trick, came back thinking he had made it, learned when he returned that his method was not adequate -- but tried to revive his claim once he realized that Peary's 1909 effort had not reached the Pole. But, as Bryce points out, Cook's behavior would have been much the same either way, so we can't tell which is true. I will admit that I find much of Cook's behavior incomprehensible, making me wonder if he was entirely sane; it's interesting that several other witnesses cited by Bryce (pp. 844, 901), including Roald Amundsen, thought the same thing -- and, indeed, the Arctic was good at driving people mad; see again "Lady Franklin's Lament (The Sailor's Dream)" [Laws K9]. Bryce, however, does not accept this explanation.
Bryce's first conclusion on Peary (p. 880) is that "All of Peary's actions after April 6, 1909... give every indication of a guilty man trying to shield his greatest deceit from the spotlight of any impartial investigation. Moreover, evidence preserved by Peary himself shows that all his expeditions before 1909 had produced exaggerated or false claims." Interestingly, though Bryce absolutely rejects Cook's claim to have reached the Pole, he considers his story of attaining it far more plausible than Peary's (p. 916).

At this time, the matter probably cannot be settled by direct evidence; we must rely on the (very strong) indirect evidence. Hence my firm belief that either Cook or Peary made it to the pole. Even if you disagree, I would make a secondary observation: We don't let athletes who use steroids earn credit for winning races. Nor are candidates who commit vote fraud generally allowed to win elections. Why shouldn't Peary be held to the same standard? Did he reach the Pole? Maybe. Did he lie (to the Inuit), cheat (Bartlett, whom he had promised to take to the Pole), and steal (from Cook and from the Inuit -- taking at various times their meteorites, their people to be museum exhibits, and, for his last expedition, their much-needed dogs; Bryce, p. 332)? Yes. Indeed, at one point, his behavior could be called murder, since he refused to allow a doctor to treat Inuit who needed help (Bryce, pp. 319-320). By today's definitions, he was guilty of abduction and perhaps even rape of underage girls (Bryce, p. 341) and child pornography (Roberts, between pages 100 and 101, reprints one of his nude photos of a 14-year-old Inuit girl). Bryce, p. 854, reports that some Inuit labelled him "the great tormentor" for decades. His behavior should disallow his claim.

Incidentally, the first people to stand at the Pole may not have arrived (by plane) until 1953 (Roberts, p. 166). And, although trips to the North Pole are now almost routine (since a traveler in trouble can always radio for help and be rescued by air), the arctic has not entirely relented since Peary's time. Alfred Wegener, who did noteworthy work on meteorology and lunar craters and who invented the modern theory of Continental Drift in the period before the first world war (though it did not come to be accepted until decades after his death) sought evidence for his theories in Greenland, and died there in 1930 when the expedition ran into trouble (Asimov, p. 595; Gribbin, p. 448). And, of course, no less a man than Roald Amundsen died on the polar cap while searching for the survivors of another wreck (Asimov, p. 561; Mirsky, pp. 314, 317). - RBW

Bibliography

- Stanley Appelbaum, editor, Show Songs: from The Black Crook to The Red Mill, Dover Publications, 1974
• Guttridge-Ice: Leonard F. Guttridge, Icebound, Naval Institute Press, 1986 (I used the 2001 Berkeley edition). Specific to the Jeannette expedition. The ending is a bit confusing -- Guttridge spends a lot of time considering who should bear the blame, then never assigns any! -- but it's a readable reference on this sad, largely avoidable disaster.

• Henderson-True: Bruce Henderson, True North, Norton, 2005. Devoted almost entirely to the explorations of Cook and Peary, approaching the status of biography of the two. Its only real purpose appears to be to vindicate Cook (which it would do better if it didn't whitewash over so much of the evidence against him), but it has much useful detail about the final phases of Peary's quest also.

• Larson: Edward J. Larson, To the Edges of the Earth: 1909, the Race for the Three Poles, and the Climax of the Age of Exploration, William Morrow, 2018. Only partly about the polar race, but a good read and, it seems to me, more accurate than many of these books.

• Lubbock: Basil Lubbock, The Arctic Whalers, Brown, Son, & Ferguson, 1937 (I use the 1955 reprint)

• Mirsky: Jeannette Mirsky, To the Arctic: The Story of Northern Exploration from the Earliest Times to the Present, revised edition, Knopf, 1948. Unduly generous; it never questions anything (except the claims of Cook -- and this, according to Bryce, pp. 721-722, 726, was mostly under legal pressure from the Peary and Cooks factions). But if it praises everyone who ever so much as looked toward the north, it also lists a lot of expeditions that get no other coverage.

• Rawlins: Dennis Rawlins, Peary at the Pole: Fact or Fiction? Robert B. Luce, Inc., 1973

• Riley: Michael O. Riley, Oz and Beyond: The Fantasy World of L. Frank Baum, University of Kansas Press, 1997

• Roberts: David Roberts, Great Exploration Hoaxes, Sierra Club, 1982 (use the 2001 Modern Library edition with an Introduction by Jan Morris). This covers much more than arctic exploration, and is perhaps a little one-sided in situations where balance might be better, but it has much useful information on Peary and Cook.

• Rogers: Katharine M. Rogers, L. Frank Baum: Creator of Oz, 2002 (I use the 2003 Da Capo press edition)

---

Hurrah, Hurrah, Hurrah!

DESCRIPTION: German shanty. Sailors arrive in David street in Hamburg where they can buy girls for five pennies. Song enumerates various girls and their attributes. The sailors spend all the money and go back to sea.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas)

KEYWORDS: foreign language shanty sailor whore sex money

FOUND IN: Germany

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 138-140, "Hurrah, Hurrah, Hurrah!" (2 texts-German & English, 1 tune)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Hurrah, Sing Fare Ye Well
DESCRIPTION: Shanty. "We're bound away to Callyo, Hurrah sing fare ye well. Oh fare ye well, me Liverpool gal, Hurrah sing fare ye well." Verses have vague courting, whoring, and sailing themes.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas)
KEYWORDS: shanty separation farewell
FOUND IN: US Britain
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 119-120 "Hurrah, Sing Fare Ye Well" (1 text, 1 tune)
[AbEd, pp. 102-103]
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Goodbye, Sing Fare You Well
Fare Ye Well
My Bonnie Young Girl

Husband Lamenting the Death of the Wife, The DESCRIPTION: "Come, my dear friends, and mourn with me In my afflicted state. I am bereaved, as you may see, Of my dear loving mate." He tells his grief, notes how the children miss their mother, and says it is God's will
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety), from a diary of the Civil War era
KEYWORDS: husband wife death loneliness orphan
FOUND IN: US (So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, p. 467, "The Husband Lamenting the Death of the Wife" (1 text)
Roud #7957

Husband's Departure, The
DESCRIPTION: The husband prepares to go to war against the south. His wife tries to dissuade him. He says she would not respect him if he were a coward. He finally convinced her and departs
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)
KEYWORDS: husband wife battle Civilwar dialog
FOUND IN: US (So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 378-39, "The Husband's Departure" (1 text)
Roud #7761
CROSS-REFERENCES:
NOTES [30 words]: Sort of a cross between "The Rolling Stone" (which Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety lists as a probable source) and Lovelace's "To Lucasta, Going to the Wars." - RBW

File: Beld378
Husbandman and the Servingman, The

DESCRIPTION: A husbandman and a servingman meet and discuss their occupations. The servant describes all the rich people he associates with; the husbandman details the pleasure of a good season in the fields. The servingman wishes he had chosen the other occupation.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1846 (Dixon-AncientPoemsBalladsSongsOfThePeasantryOfEngland); 17C (Halliwell)

KEYWORDS: work dialog farming servant

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (10 citations):

- Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, pp. 144-145, "The Servingman and the Husbandman" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 112-115, "The Husbandman and the Servingman" (1 text)
- Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 264-269, "God Speed the Plow, and Bless the Corn-Mow," "A Dialogue Between the Husbandman and the Servingman" (2 texts)
- Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 226, "The Husband-man and the Servant-man" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, pp. 8-9, "The Husbandman and the Serving Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
- cf. Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic I, pp. 282-283, "Paul's Steeple, or I Am the Duke of Norfolk" (1 tune, partial text, said by Kennedy to be this piece -- a statement going back at least to Bell)
- DT, HUSB

cf. Enid Porter, _The Folklore of East Anglia_, Batsford, 1974, p. 68, "(I am the Duke of Norfolk)" (1 text)

Roud #873

RECORDINGS:

- Mummers from Symondsbury, "The Symondsbury & Eype Mummer's Play & The Singing of the Travels" (on Lomax41, LomaxCD1741, FSB9)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

- cf. "Soldier Boy for Me (A Railroader for Me)" (theme: professional comparison) and references there
- cf. "Buttercup Joe" (subject, a few phrases)

ALTERNATE TITLES:

- The Singing of the Travels

NOTES [145 words]: Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, discussing the Halliwell text as "the oldest printed version of this dialog", comparing it to Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs's own text which comes from Davies Gilbert's Ancient English Carols: "the words are only slightly different from those given above, except that in the last verse, the second line runs, "Pray for the peace of old England," in allusion to the Civil Wars, from which the collection dates." - BS

Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland claims that Chappell's piece "I Am the Duke of Norfolk" is this tune. This overstates the case -- Chappell's tune is similar but not identical in the tenor line. And neither tune is the one I know. "I Am the Duke of Norfolk" is, however, a popular tune; it is cited many times in the Broadside Ballad Index (ZN338, ZN1208, ZN1839, ZN2168, ZN2570, ZN2671, ZN2955). - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5

File: K226

---

Hush Alee

DESCRIPTION: "I sit up all night with the fire burning bright, While rocking my baby to sleep, Singing, 'Hush a-le la lee, hush a-lo lee, Your daddy will come by and by, So close your eyes and go to sleep, Your dear mother she is tired, Singing hush alee..."
Hush and Baloo, Babie

DESCRIPTION: "Hush and baloo, babie, Hush and baloo; A' the lave's in their beds -- I'm hushin' you"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1870 (Chambers)

KEYWORDS: lullaby baby

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
*Greig/Duncan8 1548, "Hush-a-Baloo"; Greig/Duncan8 1549, "Oh Hush-a-Baloo"; Greig/Duncan8 1550, "Hush and Baloo, Babie" (3 short texts, 2 tunes)

ADDITIONAL: Robert Chambers, The Popular Rhymes of Scotland (Edinburgh, 1870 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 13, ("Hush and baloo, babie")

Roud #13514

NOTES [78 words]: "The favourite old Scottish term for a lullaby is the baloo." (source: Ewan McVicar, Doh Ray Me, When Ah Wis Wee (Edinburgh, 2007), p. 9)

The current description is all of the Chambers text, which is very close to Greig/Duncan 1550. Roud lumps Greig/Duncan8 1548, 1549 and 1550 together. What text there is is very close and the most "complete" text is the one quoted in the description. There seems little point, just considering the texts, in separating them. - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD1548

Hush You (The Black Douglas)

DESCRIPTION: "Hush you, hush you, Little pet you, Hush you, hush you, Dinna fret you, The Black Douglas Shall not get you."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Montgomerie)

KEYWORDS: lullaby

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
*Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 137, "(Hush you, hush you)" (1 text)

NOTES [284 words]: Whether this is a traditional song I do not know -- but it's old enough to have folklore about it. Unfortunately, I don't remember the source, but the tale went as follows:

A singer, high in a castle, was singing "The Black Douglas shall not get you" to her bairn, when Douglas, who was raiding the castle and had come up behind her, announced, "I'm not so sure of that."

Probably too good to be true, to be sure.

The Douglas family arose to prominence in the reign of Robert I Bruce (King of Scotland 1306-1329); Sir James Douglas (died 1330) was Bruce's right-hand man, and I seem to recall one version of the above story in which he was the Douglas involved.
But James Douglas was not a "Black Douglas"; at the time, there was but the one Douglas family.
His descendants became Earls of Douglas. It was the second Earl, another James, who died young at Otterburn (for which see "The Hunting of the Cheviot [Child 162]"). He had no direct heir, so the Douglas family split into Red and Black branches.
The Black Douglases were the stronger -- indeed, they were the strongest family in Scotland, probably stronger than the King. For half a century, they were a constant menace, until James II killed William Douglas (the eighth earl) in 1452. His brother James succeeded as ninth earl, but was driven into exile a few years later, and the Douglases were finally broken.
Thus this piece, if real, would have to date from between 1388 and 1455. Probably it comes from the earlier end of that period, in the period of the most intense border wars -- which were not really battles between England and Scotland; like Otterburn, they were between the Percies of Northumbria and the Douglases of Lothian. - RBW

Hush-a-Ba Baby, Dinna Mak' a Din
DESCRIPTION: "Hush-a-ba baby, dinna mak' a din": "ye'll get a fishie when the boats come in" or "ye'll get a piece when the baker comes in"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Maclagan)
KEYWORDS: food lullaby nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber,High))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1561, "Hush-a-Ba Baby, Dinna Mak' a Din" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13510
NOTES [66 words]: The Greig/Duncan8 verse is the "fishie" one. Compare this to the "Dance To Your Daddy" line "You shall have a fish and you shall have a fin, You shall have a coddlin' when the boat comes in." McVicar considers this fragment a version of that song; however, his other versions do not have a "hush-a-ba baby" line (see Ewan McVicar, _Doh Ray Me, When Ah Wis Wee_ (Edinburgh, 2007), pp. 15-17). - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD81561

Hush-a-Ba Baby, Lie Doon
DESCRIPTION: "Hush-a-ba baby, lie doon, Your mammy's awa to the toon And when she comes back ye'll get a wee drap -- Hush-a-ba baby lie doon"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: lullaby baby mother
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1554, "Hush-a-Ba Baby, Lie Doon" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #13515
NOTES [10 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan8 text. - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD1554

Hush-a-ba Birdie, Croon
DESCRIPTION: "Sheep/kye's are gane to the silver wood," "the coos are gane to the broom." It's good to milk cows while the birds sing, bells ring, and deer gallop by. Goats/sheep are in the mountains and won't be back till noon
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2)
KEYWORDS: lullaby nonballad animal bird sheep
Hush-a-Bye, Baby

DESCRIPTION: The singer is forty-five with a young wife who "loves to go out on a spree" leaving him to watch the baby. One night he goes out for a stroll while the baby is sleeping and "my dear wife I spied hugging a soldier sixteen"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast)
KEYWORDS: infidelity marriage baby wife
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 115, "Hush-a-Bye, Baby" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST LLab115 (Full)
Roud #9971
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rocking the Cradle (and the Child Not His Own)" (theme)
cf. "Unhappy Jeremiah (The Brats of Jeremiah)" (plot)
File: LLab115

Hush-oh-bye Baby

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets a woman with her three children on a sleet ing night. She say her husband, a farmer, was killed in town by a gang. She spent all she had to bury him and was put on the road when she could not pay rent. She and the babies die of the cold.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)
KEYWORDS: poverty burial death children mother husband storm
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 54, "Hush-oh-bye Baby" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #28971
RECORDINGS:
Anita Best, "Hush-o-bye Baby" (on NFABest01)
John James, "Hush a Bye" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
John Molloy, "Hush a Bye Baby" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "It Was Early One Cold Winter's Morning" (theme)
NOTES [67 words]: In the song the couple are said to live "in a place they called Newton Perry." Newton Perry is a sector of Limerick City, County Limerick, Ireland (source: inforing Ireland Gateway site). Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou (viz., Anita Best): "This is no doubt a song which originated in Ireland where, in the nineteenth century, evictions of poor tenant farmers unable to pay rent was extremely common." - BS
Last updated in version 5.0
File: LeBe054
Hush, Be Still as Any Mouse

DESCRIPTION: "Hush, be still as any mouse, There's a baby in the house. Not a dolly, not a toy, Nothing but a baby boy."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle)

KEYWORDS: lullaby nonballad baby

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, p. 103, "Lullaby" (1 short text, 1 tune)

Roud #7511

File: Boet103

---

Hush, Little Baby

DESCRIPTION: "Hush little baby, don't say a word, Papa's gonna buy you a mockingbird. And if that mockingbird won't sing, Papa's gonna buy you..." And so forth, through many objects, ending "And if that () won't (), you'll still be the prettiest little baby in town."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1918 (Cecil Sharp collection)

KEYWORDS: lullaby bird commerce gift

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,SE,So) Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (13 citations):
Randolph 359, "Mamma, Mamma, Have You Heard?" (1 short text plus a fragment, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 196, "Swapping Songs" (4 text plus 2 excerpts, with most texts being "The Swapping Boy," but "E" and "F" are this song)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 196, "Swapping Songs" (2 excerpts, 2 tunes; the "A" version is "The Swapping Boy"; the "E" version is "Hush Little Baby")
Mclntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesOfIllinoisOzarks, p. 100, "(Mama, Mama, don't say a word)" (1 text)
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, p. 96, "Hush, Li'l' Baby" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 234, "The Mocking Bird" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Peacock, p. 15, "Lullaby" (1 text, 1 tune)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #558, p. 228, "(Hush, little baby, don't say a word)"
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, p. 164, "Hush, Little Baby" (1 text, 1 tune)
Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, p. 61, "Hush, Little Baby" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, pp. 224-225, "Mockingbird" (1 text, with some unusual verses; the ending may be a parody)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 409, "Hush Little Baby" (1 text)

DT, HUSHLIL*

Roud #470

RECORDINGS:
Texas Gladden, "Hush, Baby, Don't You Cry" (AFS 5233 A4; on USTGladden01)
Mrs. Frank Tompkins, "Lullaby" (on PeacockCDROM)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Say, Darling, Say" (lyrics, tune)
cf. "Mamma's Goin' to Buy Him a Little Lap Dog (Come Up Horsie)" (theme, lyrics)
cf. "I Would That I Were Where I Wish" (format)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Mockingbird Song
Papa's Going to Buy Me a Mockingbird

NOTES [104 words]: An Ozark version of this song ends "If that lookin-glass doesn't shine, Papa's going to shoot that beau of mine!" -- referring to a belief that mirrors only shone for chaste women. Although this particular song seems to have become popular only recently, the form with progressive items is old; Gammer Gurton's Garland (1784), for instance, has a version of the item we index as "There Was a Man of Double Deed" beginning

A man of words and not of deeds
Is like a garden full of weeds;
And when the weeds begin to grow,
It's like a garden full of snow;
And when the snow begins to fall,
Hush, My Dear, Lie Still and Slumber
DESCRIPTION: "Hush, my (dear/babe), lie still and slumber; Holy angels guard thy bed." "Soft and easy is thy cradle, Coarse and hard thy Savior lay, When his birthplace was a stable And his softest bed was hay." The singer grows angry about the treatment of Jesus
AUTHOR: Words: Isaac Watts (1674-1748)
EARLIEST DATE: reportedly written 1715
KEYWORDS: lullaby Jesus animal
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW) Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #75, "Lullaby" (1 text, 1 tune)
Grimes-StoriesFromTheAnneGrimesCollection, p. 100, "Hush, My Babe" (1 text)
Thomas-DevilsDitties,p. 79, "Hush, My Babe" (1 text, 1 tune); p. 119, "Watts' Cradle Hymn" (1 text)
Heart-Songs, p. 133, "Hush, My Babe" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #8885
NOTES [39 words]: I found an online version of this that is fourteen stanzas long, and frankly not much good. This is much better as a short lullaby than as a long diatribe....
For more on Isaac Watts, see the notes to "O God, Our Help in Ages Past." - RBW

Hush! Here Comes a Whizz-Bang
DESCRIPTION: "Hush! here comes a whizz-bang (x2)! Now, you soldiers, get down those stairs, Down in your dugouts and say your prayers. Hush! here comes a whizz-bang, And it's making straight for you" and the listener will end up in No Man's Land if it hits
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang)
KEYWORDS: soldier war injury
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, p. 54, "Hush! Here comes a Whizz-Bang"
Roud #10527
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Hush! Here Comes the Dream Man" (tune)
NOTES [63 words]: Whizz-bangs were small shells fired by field artillery. Unlike large shells, they were fired at short range and on a low trajectory, so there was none of the sound of a large shell coming in at terminal velocity (which was much slower than the speed of sound). Whizz-bang shells arrived quickly -- at most, a short whistle (the "whizz") and then the explosion (the "bang"). - RBW

Hushaby My Little Crumb
DESCRIPTION: "Hushaby, my little crumb, The sheep are far from home. The cows are to the far, far field, And won't be home till noon."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall)
KEYWORDS: lullaby nonballad animal
FOUND IN: Britain(England(West))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 44, "(A Cradle Song)" (1 fragment, 1 tune, filed with a group of songs under the general heading "Crowdy Crawn")
Hushie Baa, Ee-a-Baa

DESCRIPTION: Lullaby. The singer complains "tho' I'm nae your daddy, my wife she's your mammy. Oh wae's me she's gotten too much of her will"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan8)

KEYWORDS: infidelity lullaby nonballad bastard children husband wife

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1559, "Hushie Baa, Ee-a-Baa" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13508

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rock the Cradle, John" (theme)
cf. "Rocking the Cradle (and the Child Not His Own)" (theme)

File: GrD81559

Hut that's Upside Down, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer has travelled many places, but now is "anchored hard and fast in the hut that's upside down." He describes the wild behaviors there -- gambling, frantic shearing, and watching the cook beat a brownie or dance a highland fling

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1955

KEYWORDS: rambling sheep Australia cook

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 58-59, "The Hut that's Upside Down" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fahey-PintPotAndBilly, pp. 62-63, "The Hut that's Upside Down" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [95 words]: Thought to refer to a shed in Big Burrawang in New South Wales. Meredith and Anderson report that this shed was "so big that a wooden tramway ran around it to move the wool."

Edward E. Morris, _A Dictionary of Austral English_, 1898 (I use the 1972 Sydney University Press with a new foreword but no new content), p. 207, defines "Hut" as follows: "a cottage of a shepherd or a miner. The word is English but is especially common in Australia, and does not there connote squalor or meanness. The "Men's Hut' on a station is the building occupied by the male employees." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: MA058

Hymn of Jesus, The

DESCRIPTION: "Glory to thee, (Father, Logos, Charis, Spirit, etc)." "I would be saved and would save." "I would be loosed and would loose." "I am a way to thee, a wayfarer. Amen." The singer hymns to spirits in mostly heretical language

AUTHOR: unknown (English text based on G. R. S. Meads)

EARLIEST DATE: original probably composed in the second century, but not circulated traditionally

KEYWORDS: religious

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

NOTES [830 words]: I should not be having to write an entry or notes on this song, because it should not have been included in any collection of English folk songs. It is not a song, it is not in English, it is not traditional -- it isn't even, properly speaking, Christian. But Bob Stewart included it in _Where Is Saint George?_ as if it were of some significance to English tradition (and Gustav Holst turned it into a musical composition), so I guess we have to explain it -- and then savage it. Stewart says of this merely that it is from the Leucian Acts.

Even the name cited by Stewart is wrong. The name "Leucian Acts" is commonly used to describe the "Acts of John," "Acts of Peter," "Acts of Paul" (including the story of Paul and Thecla, the oldest and most famous part of the whole mess), "Acts of Andrew," and the "Acts of Thomas." The title
"Leucian Acts" is used because the books were traditionally attributed to one Leucius Charinus (Barnstone, p. 412). The original was clearly in Greek, although it was translated into Latin (James, introduction to the text).

This particular hymn comes from the Acts of John, chapters 94-95 in the James numbering. Goodspeed/Grant, p. 70, suggest that "Not long after the appearance of the romantic Acts of Paul (A.D. 160-170), some Docetist, probably in Asia, undertook to embody his views in an imaginative account of the wonders, discourses, and travels of John." Barnstone, p. 411, considers the "Acts of John" to predate even the "Acts of Paul." There is consensus that both are second century, and that all of the Leucian Acts, although they are by different authors, date from the second and third centuries. Clement of Alexandria appears to refer to one of the traditions in the work as being in existence in 189 C.E. (Goodspeed/Grant, p. 70).

Barnstone, p. 411, calls the "Acts of John" the "most clearly Gnostic" of the Leucian Acts. He suggests on p. 412 that the author of this work did use "Leucius" as his pen name.

The "Acts of John" never met with orthodox approval; Leo the Great condemned them in the fifth century and the Nicene Council of 787 ordered them burned (Barnstone, p. 411). The destruction was largely successful. An early catalog describes it as being 2500 standard lines long (Goodspeed/Grant, p. 70), but the extant material is only about 70% of that. Most of the losses seem to be from the beginning, but the surviving portions have had to be pieced together. That the Acts of John is inclined to both the heresies of Gnosticism and Docetism is quite clear. Gnosticism (described on pp. 49-54 of Clifton) is not really a single heresy, but many; the common theme is that there is secret knowledge which is required for salvation. A typical version has a bunch of gods or archons or spirits or other tokens of a diseased mind, one of which, Sophia or Wisdom, decides to straighten out humans to save them. The Gnostics also tended to separate body and spirit/soul, with the body being purely evil. The tendency to condemn the body, and especially sex, is obvious in the Acts of John (this particular heresy often is called Encratitism). Docetism (Clifton, p. 36) is from the Greek word meaning "appearance," or perhaps "perceived form." Docetists believed that the Jesus who suffered on the cross was not human, or part of the Godhead, but was merely an illusion. This heresy arose because some people were offended by the idea of God suffering -- but, of course, the idea vitiates the whole notion of Christianity. Gnosticism keeps coming back (Carl Jung was interested in it), but Docetism seems to be permanently dead. Both heresies were pernicious, Gnosticism because of its separatism, secrecy, and anti-inclusiveness, Docetism because its denial of the incarnation led to ignoring many of the moral teachings of Christianity.

Chadwick, p. 275, suggests that this piece began as "a Gnostic hymn intended to be chanted during a ritual dance." Goodspeed/Grant, p. 71, agrees that "This hymn, with its crude paradoxes... certainly reflects mystery forms of worship and Gnostic ideas."

The evidence is easy to see in Stewart's text, with its references to the Logos ( , Word), one of the key themes of Gnosticism, and also references to Spirit and Light. There are also references to the mystic numbers eight and twelve.

It's easy to see how Stewart, who is obsessed with the Kabbalah and the Tree of Life, loved this part! But it must be stressed: The "Acts of John" was an Eastern writing, Gnosticism an Eastern religion. The Latin West had a far simpler theology; even though the "Acts of John" was translated into Latin, this sort of thing never took hold there. Even if there were some closet Gnostics in Rome or somewhere, the whole silly business died out in the first millennium C.E. Even if Stewart is right about Kabbalistic influences on English folk song (which I strongly doubt), there is almost certainly no influence from the Leucian Acts, and this song had no influence on English hymnody. - RBW

Bibliography

- Barnstone: Willis Barnstone, editor,The Other Bible, Harper & Row, 1984
- Chadwick: Henry Chadwick,The Early Church (being volume I ofThe Pelican History of the Church), Pelican, 1967

Last updated in version 5.0
File: BS124
Hypocrite and the Concubine, The

DESCRIPTION: "Hypocrite and the concubine, Living among the swine, They run to God with the lips and tongue, And leave all the heart behind. Aunty, did you hear when Jesus rose? (x3), He rose and 'scend on high."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 70, "The Hypocrite and the Concubine" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12029
NOTES [24 words]: A curious combination of images; there is no book in the King James Bible which contains both the word "hypocrite" and the word "concubine." - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4
File: AWG070B

I Ain't A-Gonna Work a No Mo'

DESCRIPTION: "I ain't a-gonna work a no mo'! (x2), Done an' work-ed till my hands got sore. I ain't a-gonna work a no mo'!

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1919 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: work nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 242, "I Ain't A-Gonna Work a No Mo'!" (1 short text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 242, "I Ain't A-Gonna Work a N Mo'" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)

File: Br3242

I Ain't Going To Die No More

DESCRIPTION: The singer says that nobody visited him on his death bed but they are all with him going to the graveyard. He wants someone to lower his pillow, "for I ain't going to die no more."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaislands)
KEYWORDS: burial death nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaislands, p. 190, "For I Ain't Goin' T' Die No Mo'" (1 text)

File: Parp190

I Ain't Got Weary Yet

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, I'se been wounded in this fight, Shot at sunrise, gassed at night, Outside o' that I feel all right, And I ain't got weary yet." Trench life is like "Using your head for a battering ram," With half the squad dead, "Being alive seems mighty damn odd."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe)
KEYWORDS: soldier hardtimes death injury
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 215-216, "I AIn't Got Weary Yet" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11850 parody

File: NiMo215
I Am a Bonnie Wee Lassie

DESCRIPTION: The singer says she's a nice plump girl who wants a man to cover her back who would kiss and caress her and call her his darling and let her sleep in his bosom.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2)

KEYWORDS: courting nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 159, "I Am a Bonnie Wee Lassie" (1 text)
Roud #15114

NOTES [8 words]: Maybe this lost something sexual in translation. - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: LyCr2159

I Am a Brisk and Sprightly Lad

DESCRIPTION: "I am a brisk and sprightly lad, But just come home from sea, sir... A sailor's life for me, sir." "Yeo, yeo, yeo, Whilst the bosun pipes all hands With a yeo, yeo, yeo!" The sailor loves foreign ports, and promises to fight for the nation when attacked.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1792 (The Manchester Songster: Being a Collection of the Most Favorite Songs)

KEYWORDS: sailor battle money

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Shay-AmericanSeaSongsAndChanteys, p. 138, "I Am a Brisk and Sprightly Lad" (1 text)

NOTES [105 words]: This is another of those sea-poems Shay seems to have dug up somewhere; I have not found it in tradition.

Jim Dixon pointed out the Manchester Songster printing; he also noted a sheet music fragment on Google Books that says that this was "Sung by Mrs. Jordan in the Spoil'd Child."

The boast about each man "hasten[ing] to his guns" would surely have sounded very strange to the sailors who fought in the Napoleonic era -- it is estimated that half of the men in Nelson's fleet were impressed, and more were quota men. And the pay in the Royal Navy was terrible, which was why they needed the press gang even in peacetime. - RBW.

Last updated in version 5.1

File: ShaSS138

I Am a Brisk Young Sailor

DESCRIPTION: A sailor for fourteen years falls in love with Nancy, a young chambermaid. If he were ten years younger he "would make myself more bolder and speak my mind more free."

Abandoning hope he says he'll sail away forever. But maybe "my mind may alter"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle)

KEYWORDS: age love travel sailor separation

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 67, "I Am a Brisk Young Sailor" (1 text)
Roud #1042

File: ReCi067

I Am a Coachman

DESCRIPTION: A coachman kisses, courts and lies with the women; "when I am tired I get up and ride." A blacksmith's delight "is in stopping of holes." A fisherman fished "for a boy but I did get a wench"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle)

KEYWORDS: sex work bawdy nonballad
I Am a Done-Up Man

DESCRIPTION: "I am a done-up (hic) man, You'll agree with me ev'ry one (hic), Tis true I've seen the bright side of (hic) life (hic), But now I'm a poor old bum (hic)." The drunkard believes that, when he dies, Heaven turn him out, and Satan will reject him too

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Randolph)

KEYWORDS: drink death devil

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 406, "I Am a Done-Up Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7683
File: R406

I Am a Girl Guide

DESCRIPTION: "I am a Girl Guide dressed in blue, These are the actions I can do. Stand at ease, bend my knees, Salute to the King, bow to the Queen, Never turn my back on the Union Jack, Under the archway, One, two, three..."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)

KEYWORDS: clothes colors playparty royalty

FOUND IN: Britain New Zealand

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 111, "(I am a girl guide dressed in blue)," "(Turn your back on the sailor Jack)" (2 texts)
Roud #19225
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I'm a Little Dutch Girl" (lyrics of some versions)
File: SuSm111A

I Am a Great Complainer

DESCRIPTION: "I am a great complainer, that bears the name of Christ... I feel my faith declining...." The singer calls on Christ to repair (his) wavering faith and help (him) in (his) stumbling in a fast-moving world: "I am so full of folly, and have no time to pray"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1835 (Southern Harmony, according to Marilyn Kay Stulken, _Hymnal Companion to the Lutheran Book of Worship_,, Fortress Press, 1981)

KEYWORDS: religious Jesus nonballad

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 647, "I Am a Great Complainer" (1 text)
Roud #7568
File: R647
I Am a Newfoundlander

DESCRIPTION: "I am a Newfoundlander, I go out to the ice. I'm always in the best of ships.... The man I wish to sail with is Captain Harry Dawe." The Adventure sets out in 1906 and takes 20,000 seal. The singer tells of the voyage, the crew, and an injured Irishman.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff)

KEYWORDS: ship hunting moniker injury doctor

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, pp. 89-90, "I Am a Newfoundlander" (1 text, tune referenced)

Roud #26538

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Pride of Logy Bay" (tune)

NOTES [633 words]: The Adventure of this song is also mentioned in "The Sealer's Song (II)," and I suspect it is the Ad of "Captains and Ships." She was the first iron-clad sealer (Chafe, pp. 26, 31), and inaugurated a new, if brief, era in Newfoundland sealing, because the steel ships could pound through ice that their wooden sisters could not (Ryan-Ice, p. 187; Winsor, p. 29). She was built in Dundee in 1905, went to the ice for the first time in 1906 (as the song says), and was sold to Russia in 1916 (Ryan/Drake, p. 36). (Most of the steel sealers were disposed of or lost during World War I, and there was little attempt to replace them. They brought in more seals than the wooden ships, but they also cost more, and the sealing companies seem to have unofficially concluded that they just weren't worth it.)

Ryan-Last, pp. 20-21, quotes the Evening Telegram of February 2, 1906 concerning the ship: "Yesterday a steamer was launched by the Dundee Shipbuilders Co., Ltd., which marks a distinct advance on any of these [earlier sealers], and built as it is for the sealing trade of St. John's, Newfoundland, seems not unlikely to be the forerunner of many vessels of a similar type. The S.S. Adventure, which name has been given to the boat, is especially constructed for ice navigation, but, unlike previous vessels for that trade, she is built completely of steel to Lloyd's highest class, and far in excess of their requirements, her stem, stern post, rudder and steam steering gear being fully twice the weight and power required for vessels of her size.... She is... 265 feet by 88 feet by 21 feet moulded depth, fitted with all the latest appliances for the rapid handling of cargo, and is lighted by electricity.... She will... [have] sufficient power to obtain a speed of twelve knots."

The singer claim that he's "always in the best of ship(s)" thus fits the actual situation; for the first few years of her service, the Adventure was the best ship in the sealing fleet; probably there wasn't a substantially better one until the Florizel was finished four years later. (Ryan-Last, p. 21, adds after her big success in her first year, the old wooden ships tried harder to fight their way through the ice as well, resulting in the loss of two wooden ships in 1907 and three in 1908. Ironically, the Adventure was one of those sent out to rescue the damaged ships in 1908; Winsor, p. 29)

The Adventure had two slightly smaller sisters, the Bellaventure and the Bonaventure. The latter is mentioned in "Ballad of Captain Bob Bartlett, Arctic Explorer"; the former is almost certainly the "Bill" (i.e. "Belle") of "The Newfoundland Disaster (I)," and I believe they are the Belle and Bon of Captains and Ships.

There were two Captains Henry Dawe; the one in this song, from Bay Roberts, is also mentioned in at least four other songs; see "The Sealer's Song (II)." Chafe, p. 31, agrees that he was a popular captain. He commanded the Adventure from 1906-1910, when he retired (Chafe, p. 90); Jacob Kean commanded the Adventure for the rest of her time as a sealer (Chafe, p. 98).

The second verse, which claims a haul of 20,000 seals, actually under-counts the Adventure's results in her first years; in 1906, she took 30,193 seals, then 24,522 in 1907 and 27,255 in 1908. She took 17,046 and 10,578 in her last two years under Dawe. The tenth verse, which claims 30,000 seals, is more accurate and implies that the song is from 1906.

The last verse appears to me to have floated in from something else, since it hints that the captain could be blamed for some problem, but I'm not sure from what.

There is a picture of the Adventure on p. 36 of Ryan/Drake and p. 187 of Ryan-Ice (the same picture, I believe), and one on p. 56 of Candow. Winsor has one on p. 29. - RBW

Bibliography

University of Newfoundland)

• Candow: James E. Candow, Of Men and Seals: A History of the Newfoundland Seal Hunt, Canadian Parks Service, Environment Canada, 1989
• Ryan/Drake: Shannon Ryan, assisted by Martha Drake, Seals and Sealers: A Pictorial History of the Newfoundland Seal Fishery, Breakwater Books, 1987
• Winsor: Naboth Winsor, Stalwart Men and Sturdy Ships: A History of the Prosecution of the Seal Fishery by the Sealers of Bonavista Bay North, Newfoundland, Economy Printing Limited, 1985

Last updated in version 5.2
File: RySm089

I Am a Pilgrim

DESCRIPTION: "I am a pilgrim and a stranger Traveling through this wearisome land, I have a home in yonder city, And it's not made, not made by hand." The singer's family has gone before; the singer hopes to be made whole

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Heart-Songs)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 353, "I Am A Pilgrim" (1 text)
Heart-Songs, pp. 170-171, "I'm a Pilgrim" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, IAMPLGRM*
RECORDINGS:
Imperial Quartet, "I'm a Pilgrim, I'm a Stranger" (Victor 18199, 1917)
Silver Leaf Quartet, "I Am A Pilgrim" (OKeih 8594/ARC 6-12-63/Vocalion 04395, 1928)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Tossed and Driven (The Poor Pilgrim)"
NOTES [79 words]: The Digital Tradition lists this as by Merle Travis. The Folksinger's Wordbook doesn't list an author. I haven't a clue -- but there are a lot of traditional lines in here. - RBW
I think the 1917 recording effectively washes out the claim of Merle Travis as sole author, although he certainly put the song into the form in which it's most commonly sung today. Sam Hinton learned a version in his childhood which is probably closer to the 1917 version than to Travis's. - PJS
Last updated in version 6.0
File: FSWB353B

I Am a Pretty Little Dutch Girl

DESCRIPTION: "I am a pretty little Dutch girl, As pretty as can be, All the boys [on the team/block] Go crazy/are stuck over me." "My boy friend's name is _, He comes from _(rhymes") He is described comically, and a story may be told.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Hansen)
KEYWORDS: playparty
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond)) US(SW)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 136, "I Am a Pretty Little Dutch Girl" (2 texts, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Marian Hansen, "Children's Rhymes Accompanied by Gestures" in Western Folklore, Vol. VII, No. 1 (Jan 1948 (available online by JSTOR)), #13 pp. 52-53 ("I am a funny little Dutch girl") (1 text)
Lois Rather, "Circle Clap Chants" in Western Folklore, Vol. XVIII, No. 4 (Oct 1959 (available online by JSTOR)), #3 p. 294 ("Say, Say, Say, I'm a little Dutch girl") (1 text)
Roud #12986
RECORDINGS:
Catharine Potts and Judy Crawford, "I Am a Little Dutch Girl" (on ONEFowke01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Bells are Ringing" (some lines: "First he gave me peaches")
cf. "My Boyfriend Gave Me An Apple" (some lines: "First he gave me peaches")
cf. "I Had the Scarlet Fever" (tune, per Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
NOTES [68 words]: There is another "Little Dutch Girl" rhyme with lines like "These are the things I do ... Salute to the captain, courtsey to the queen" (see, for example, Catherine Harris Ainsworth, "Jump Rope Verses around the United States" in Western Folklore, Vol. XX, No. 3 (Jul 1961 (available online by JSTOR)), #32 p. 183 ("I'm a little Dutch girl"); #83 p. 190 ("I went downtown to see Miss Brown") (2 texts). - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: OpGa136

I Am a Pretty Wench (I)
DESCRIPTION: "I am a pretty wench, And I come a great way hence, And sweethearts I can get none: But every dirty sow Can get sweethearts enow, And I, pretty wench, can get never a one."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1784 (Gammer Gurton's Garland)
KEYWORDS: oldmaid
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 525, "I am a pretty wench" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #82, p. 84, "(I am a pretty wench)"
cf. VaughanWilliams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs, p. 84, "The Ploughman" (1 text, 1 tune, not this song as printed, but the notes reveal that the informant's version began with a verse of this)
Roud #2538
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Condescending Lass
Pretty Wench
File: B6MG082

I Am a Roving Peddler
DESCRIPTION: The roving pedlar drives from town to town selling vegetables to women. He is "afraid they'll beat me down" haggling over the price. He "never had a failure, I always sold my crop." He loses his license and must be driven: "now I ride in style."
AUTHOR: Hughie O'Quinn (according to Bennett/Downey-JeromeJustOneMoreSong)
EARLIEST DATE: 1980 (Bennett/Downey-JeromeJustOneMoreSong)
KEYWORDS: travel commerce humorous
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bennett/Downey-JeromeJustOneMoreSong 13, pp. 103-107, "I Am a Roving Peddler" (1 text)
Roud #24297
RECORDINGS:
Jerome Downey, "I Am a Roving Peddler" (on NFJDowney01)
Hector MacIsaac and Jerome Downey, "The Peddler's Song" (on NFHMaclIsaac01)
Hector MacIsaac and Emma MacIsaac, "Roving Peddler" (on NFHMaclIsaac02)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
NOTES [16 words]: This is not a parody of "The Roving Gambler" but all listeners would recognize the parallels. - BS
Last updated in version 3.6
File: BeDo103
I Am a Union Woman

DESCRIPTION: The singer proclaims, "I am a union woman, Just as brave as I can be... And the bosses don't like me." She tells all to "join the C.I.O./N.M.U." She is called a Red and shot at for her activities; her husband denied work; but she still supports the union

AUTHOR: Words: Aunt Molly Jackson/Music: Traditional EARLIEST DATE: 1930s (recorded by author)
KEYWORDS: work unemployment labor-movement FIND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, pp. 174-175, "I Am a Union Woman" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, pp. 269-270, "I Am a Union Woman" (1 text)

RECORDINGS:
New Lost City Ramblers, "Join the C.I.O." (on NLCR09)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Which Side Are You On?" (tune)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Join the N. M. U.
Join the C. I. O.

NOTES [96 words]: The radical National Miners' Union (N.M.U.) attempted to organize miners in the 1930s, but were defeated by the mine owners after bitter and bloody conflicts. The United Mine Workers of America (U.M.W.), part of the Congress of Industrial Organizations (C.I.O.) succeeded a few years later, again after terrible struggle. The song was rewritten [it is based on "Which Side Are You On" - DGE] to suit the new organizing drive.
The note from DGE states that this was based on, "Which Side Are You On?," but this song may predate it. Both were based on a traditional hymn tune. - PJS

File: Arn174

I Am a Warrior

DESCRIPTION: I am a warrior I'm in da field I can sing and I can shout I can tell it all abroad That Jesus died for me When ah get over yonder in da happy Paradise When ah get over yonder in da field"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (Elder-FolkSongAndFolkLifeInCharlotteville)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FIND IN: West Indies(Tobago)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Elder-FolkSongAndFolkLifeInCharlotteville, p. 55, "I Am a Warrior" (1 short text, 1 tune)

NOTES [11 words]: The current description is all of the Elder-Charlottville text. - BS

Last updated in version 3.7

File: ElCh055

I Am a Wee Lassie

DESCRIPTION: The singer complains "how false was that young man that I loved so dear." He swore to be true. Now that Spring has returned "I'll go down to the green woods where the small birds do sing ... Where no one shall see me till I cry my fill"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Hayward-UlsterSongsAndBalladsOfTheTownAndCountry)
KEYWORDS: courting love rejection lyric
FIND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hayward-UlsterSongsAndBalladsOfTheTownAndCountry, p. 109, "I Am a Wee Lassie" (1 text)

File: HayU109
I Am a Wild Young Irish Boy [Laws L19]

DESCRIPTION: The Irish convict, trained as a sailor, flees the farm where he has been sent. He turns outlaw, but never robs the poor or kills without cause. Trapped by the police, he kills five and escapes. Only when he is dying does he let the police be tipped off.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1959

KEYWORDS: sailor outlaw fight escape death

FOUND IN: US(MA) Australia

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Laws L19, "I Am a Wild Young Irish Boy"
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 270-272, "I Am a Wild Young Irish Boy' (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 573, YNGIRSHB

File: LL19

I Am a Young Lassie Just Out o' My Teens

DESCRIPTION: The singer says "in the choice o' a sweetheart I displeased a' my friens." All her sweethearts have left her "but the young blackamore"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan7)

KEYWORDS: courting nonballad Black(s)

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1347, "I Am a Young Lassie Just Out o' My Teens" (1 short text)

File: GrD71347

I Am a Young Maiden (If I Were a Blackbird)

DESCRIPTION: The girl has been courted by a sailor, but now is deserted. She wishes she were a blackbird so she could follow her love. She tells of how her parents' dislike caused her to love him the more. He promised to buy her ribbons, but now has left her

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle)

KEYWORDS: separation courting love floatingverses

FOUND IN: US(MA) Ireland Canada(Mar,Newf) Britain(England(Lond,South),Scotland)

REFERENCES (11 citations):
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 38, "I Am a Young Maiden" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H79, pp. 428-429, "If I Were A Blackbird" (1 text, 1 tune)
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 46, "If I Was a Blackbird" (1 text, 1 tune)
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 170-171, "If I Was a Blackbird" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 74, "If I Was a Blackbird" (1 text)
MacColl/Seeger-TravellersSongsFromEnglandAndScotland 31, "If I Was a Blackbird" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Hamer-GarnersGay, p. 52, "The Blackbird" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #47, "If I Were A Blackbird" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, pp. 58-59, "The Blackbird" (1 text, 1 tune)
Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, p. 119, "If I Were a Blackbird" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, (IFBLKBRD -- apparently a reworking of the song from a man's perspective) IFBLKBR2*

Roud #387

RECORDINGS:
I Am an Ancient Mariner

DESCRIPTION: "I am an ancient mariner, I've sailed o'er many a sea, I'm skipper of a little smack, She's called the Nancy Lee." They set sail. The captain's wife is open to the fact that he might never return. There is a storm. A dog rebels. A mermaid grabs him.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1969 or earlier (collected from Jack Dass)
KEYWORDS: sailor ship dog storm mermaid/man humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-ea 139, "I Am an Ancient Mariner" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1835
NOTES [42 words]: This is clearly a joke, and parodies a great many folk song themes. I have no doubt that it is composed, but I don't know who composed it. Palmer ropes in a number of alternate titles, including "The Walloping Window Blind." I think he's reaching. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.4
File: PaSe139

I Am an Old Bachelor (The Sorrow of Marriage)

DESCRIPTION: "I am an old bachelor both ragged and lame, I just from County Cumberland came." He marries an old maid and at once faces trouble. She dresses well; he dresses poorly. He has to do the housework. He wishes he were dead

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Stout-FolkloreFromIowa)
KEYWORDS: courting marriage oldmaid hardtimes
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 70, pp. 93-94, "The Sorrow of Marriage" (1 text)
Roud #4866
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Devilish Mary" [Laws Q4] (theme: wife dominating husband) and references there
File: Stou070

I Am Gaun to the Garret

DESCRIPTION: "My mither has three butter platies. Platies? Ay, platies... And she's nae ither dochters but me. But I maun gang tae the garret... Since there's nae bonnie laddie for me." After lamenting her fate, she at last reports that she is to marry a miller

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan7)
KEYWORDS: oldmaid courting dowry beauty marriage miller
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan7 1381, "The Horsie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 58, "I Am Gaun to the Garret" (1 text, 1 tune)
MacColl-PersonalChoice, p. 66, "I am gaun to the garret" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #818
I Am Going to Heaven

DESCRIPTION: "I am going to Heaven (x3), (To see) the bleeding lamb."
"Come, my loving father, And don't you want to go? Come go with me to glory To see the bleeding lamb."
Similarly with mother, brother(s), sister(s)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute); 1893 (see notes)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 120, "I Am Goin' to Join in This Army" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 128 in the 1901 edition)
Roud #15253

File: Dett120

I Am Going Where the Blood Flows Stronger

DESCRIPTION: "I am going where the blood flows stronger (x2), Way over in the promised land."
"I wonder where is my dear old mother?" "Who will rise and go to my father?" "I know those angels are having a good time, Eating of honey and drinking of wine."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad wine

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
I Am Growing Old and Gray

DESCRIPTION: The old man laments, "I am growing old and gray ev'ry year," and laments his loss of sexual power, as well as the ability to hold liquor. The women "ask for much more" every year, but he can no longer supply it

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927

KEYWORDS: sex age bawdy

FOUND IN: US(SW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 53-54, "I Am Growing Old and Gray" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10140

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "She'll Be Coming Round the Mountain" (tune) and reference there
cf. "When I Was Young and in My Prime" (theme)

I Am On the Battlefield for My Lord

DESCRIPTION: Singer promises to serve the Lord "till I die." "I was just like you." "I heard a voice ... saying Christ has work for you." The singer left "friends and kindred" to roam crying "sinner come back home" Christ will "appoint my soul a place" by his throne.

AUTHOR: unknown (credited to Sylvana Bell and E. V. Banks in Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit)

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (sung by Rev. D.C. Rice on AAFM2)

KEYWORDS: religious Jesus

FOUND IN: US(SE) West Indies(Tobago)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Elder-FolkSongAndFolkLifeInCharlotteville, p. 62, "On the Battle Field" (1 text, 1 tune)
Elder-FolksongsFromTobago 42, "I'm On the Battlefield" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit, "I Am on the Battlefield for My Lord" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #21386

RECORDINGS:
Gullah Kinfolk, "On de Battlefiel" (on USSeasIsland04)
Sister Fleeta Mitchell, Rev. Nathaniel Mitchell and Lucy Barnes, "I Am On the Battlefield for My Lord" (2007, on "Art of Field Recording" Vol. 1, Dust to Dust CD DTD-08, recorded 1987 in Georgia)
Rev. D. C. Rice and his Sanctified Congregation, "I'm in the Battlefield for my Lord" (Vocalion 1262; on AAFM2)

NOTES [11 words]: The current description is based on the Rev. D. C. Rice recording. - BS

I Am Sold and Going to Georgia

DESCRIPTION: "O! When shall we poor souls be free? When shall these slavery chains be broken? I am sold and going to Georgia, Will go go along with me." The singer has lost his wife and child. He bids farewell, and says, "Go sound the jubilee."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1953

KEYWORDS: slavery travel separation family

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, pp. 95-96, "I Am Sold and Going to Georgia" (1 text)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, p. 304, "I Am Sold and Going to Georgia" (1
I Am Standing in the Shoes of John

DESCRIPTION: "I am standing in the shoes of John (x2), I am standing, I am standing, I am standing in the shoes of John." "If they fit me, I will wear them on...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad clothes

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 589, "I Am Standing in the Shoes of John" (1 short text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 589, "I Am Standing in the Shoes of John" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)

Roud #11837

NOTES [74 words]: There is, of course, no Biblical reason to think that there was anything special about the shoes of either John the Baptist (who said he wasn't even worthy to untie Jesus's shoes) or John the Apostle. The reference is probably to the John of the Apocalypse anyway. For what it's worth, the word rendered "shoe" in the King James Bible is typically rendered "sandal" in the newer translations, which presumably makes it easier to fit them. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1

File: Br3589

I am the Master (Dusty Bluebells)

DESCRIPTION: Singing game: "In and out those dusty bluebells (x3), I am the master. Tip a little apple on my shoulder (x3), I am the master." "Tippety, tappety, on your shoulder (x3), I am the master"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad

FOUND IN: Ireland Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H48a, p. 10, "I Am the Master" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 98, "Dusty Bluebells" (1 text, 2 tunes)
Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 79, "(In and out the dusty bluebells)" (1 text)
Roud #734

NOTES [33 words]: Roud classifies this as a version of "In and Out the Window/Marching Round the Levee." I would say the "I am the master" line makes them distinct. - RBW

Roud has Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame as #13206. - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: HHH048a

I Am the True Vine

DESCRIPTION: "I am the true vine (x3), My father is the husbandman." "I am in him and he's in me, My father is the husbandman, Every day he comforts me." "I know my Lord has set me free." "Look over yonder in the harvest field." "I know my Lord is kind and true."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (Work)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad farming floatingverses

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
I Am Waiting on the Levee

DESCRIPTION: "I am waitin' on the levee, Waitin' for the steamboat to come down, I hope she's loaded pretty heavy, I hope she's loaded to the ground. I think I hear her whistle blowin'... It must be the Natchez or the Robert Lee."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1944 (Wheeler)

KEYWORDS: racing ship river

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Wheeler-SteamboatinDays, pp. 57-58, "I Am Waitin' on the Levee" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #10019

NOTES [144 words]: The Natchez, built 1869, and the Lee, built 1866, were regular competitors on the Natchez/New Orleans run. In 1870, the two captains agreed to a race.

It wasn't an equal contest, though -- the Natchez (thought by many to have been the slightly faster boat) took an ordinary load of passengers and cargo; the Lee was stripped for the race and drove through a fogbank. The Lee won the race by seven hours -- six of which the Natchez spent waiting out the fog to protect her passengers' safety.

The race was famed in popular folklore (see, for instance, Botkin's Mississippi River Folklore, pp. 58-61), but it didn't really set any records; it was just a straight race. And, interestingly, true folk songs about it are rare. Wheeler's song is the first I've encountered to mention it, and it's only a fragment; the real subject might be something else. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: MWhee057

I an' Satan Had a Race

DESCRIPTION: "I and Satan had a race, hallelu, hallelu" (x2). "Win de race agin de course." "Satan tell me to my face." "He will break my kingdom down." "Jesus whisper in my heart." "Satan mount the iron gray." "Jesus mount the milk-white horse."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad racing horse

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 40, "I an' Satan Had a Race" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #11993

File: AWG040

I Ask that Gal

DESCRIPTION: When the singer asks her to give him some, she tells him to wait until the 'taters are done. He can't wait, and forces himself on her, only to lament "the 'taters got burnt an' so did I."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE:
I Asked That Girl to Marry Me

DESCRIPTION: "I asked that girl to marry me, She said, "O, no! I'd rather be free." "I asked that girl to be my wife, She cut at me with an old case knife." "I asked... bride, She sat right down and cried and cried."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Treat, in JAFL 52)

KEYWORDS: marriage rejection

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: James P. Leary, Compiler and Annotator, _Wisconsin Folklore_ University of Wisconsin Press, 2009, article "Kentucky Folksong in Northern Wisconsin" by Asher E. Treat, p. 233, "I Asked That Girl to Marry Me (1 text, 1 tune, sung by Pearl Jacobs Borusky)

Roud #4220

File: PJB233

I Been a Bad, Bad Girl

DESCRIPTION: "I been a bad, bad girl, wouldn't treat nobody right (x2), They want to give me 35 years, some one wanted to take my life." She begs the judge not to execute her, and promises to reform. She is sorry and says she will listen to everyone

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (collected from Ozella Jones)

KEYWORDS: crime punishment execution

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 364-366, "I Been a Bad, Bad Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #15591

File: LoSi364

I Believe This Dear Old Bible

DESCRIPTION: Sundry Bible stories told briefly and linked by the refrain, "I believe this dear old Bible from beginning to the end." Sample: "I believe that Father Adam was the first created man."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Randolph)

KEYWORDS: religious Bible

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Randolph 648, "I Believe This Dear Old Bible" (1 fragment)

Roud #7569

File: R648

I Belong to that Band

DESCRIPTION: "I never saw the like since I been born, People keep coming and the train done gone." "I belong to that band, Hallelujah, hallelujah, hallelujah, I belong to that band, Hallelujah."
"Some come crippled and some come lame." "Clouds look heavy...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Chappell)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad floating verses train disability
FOUND IN: US (SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 583, "I Belong to that Band" (1 text); also 624, "Old Satan's Mad" (5 texts, of which the short "A" text is probably "Free at Last"; "B" is a variation on "Down by the Riverside (Study War No More)"); "C" has the "Old Satan's Mad" stanza but a "climbing Zion's walls" chorus; "D" is an unidentifiable fragment perhaps related to "I Belong to that Band; and "E" is also a fragment, perhaps of "Free At Last")
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 87, "O I Believe in Jesus" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11900
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ten Stone" (lyric)
File: Br3583

I Bid You Goodnight (The Christian's Good-Night)

DESCRIPTION: Funeral hymn/spiritual, recognized by the chorus line, "And I bid you goodnight, goodnight, goodnight." The hymn form describes a farewell and the afterlife. Other versions encourage repentance or sound almost like a lullaby

AUTHOR: Probably Sarah Doudney (see NOTES)
EARLIEST DATE: 1871 (Doudney, Psalms of Life, according to Julian); traditional version probably 1965 (Spense and Pindar Family)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Funeral hymn/spiritual, recognized by the chorus line, "And I bid you goodnight, goodnight, goodnight." The hymn form describes a farewell and the afterlife. Other versions encourage repentance or sound almost like a lullaby, e.g. "Lay down my dear brother, Lay down and take your rest, I want you lay your head now upon your Saviour's breast, I love you, O but Jesus loves you the best, O I bid you good night, Lord, good night, Lord, good night"

KEYWORDS: death funeral religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US Britain(England(North)) West Indies(Bahamas, Jamaica)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
DT, BIDGNITE
ADDITIONAL: Olive Lewin, "Rock It Come Over" - The Folk Music of Jamaica (Barbados: The University of the West Indies Press, 2000), p. 134, "Sleep on Beloved" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST DTbidgni (Full)
Roud #15632
RECORDINGS:
Men from Andros Island, "I Bid You Goodnight" (on LomaxCD1822-2)
Five Gospel Souls [pseud. for the Five Soul Stirrers] "Sleep On Darling Mother" (Ebony 137, rec. 1945)
Lonnie McIntosh, "Sleep On, Mother, Sleep On" (Victor 21271, 1928)
Mound City Jubilee Quartette, "Sleep On, Darling Mother" (Decca 7158, 1936; rec. 1935)
Sister Rosetta Tharpe, "Sleep On, Darling Mother" (Decca 8657, 1944; rec. 1943)
Lena Thompson, Lucy Scott, & Lucy Smith, "Sleep On" (on VaWork)

NOTES [544 words]: This song has an incredibly tangled history. Bob Bovee tells me that he found a 78 of this song: "It's by Lonnie McIntosh with the title 'Sleep On, Mother, Sleep On' (Victor 21271). He's [a] black gospel singer with guitar recorded in Memphis in 1928." A version credited to F. A. and J. E. Sankey appeared in the Cokesbury Worship Hymnal in 1928. In 1936, Hazel Felleman's The Best Loved Poems of the American People (pp. 342-343) lists a version as by Sarah Doudney. This is probably the best attribution; according to John Julian, editor, A Dictionary of Hymnology, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes), p. 1590:
Sleep On, beloved, sleep and take thy rest. Sarah Doudney. [Death Anticipated.] Published in her Psalms of Life 1871, p. 76, in 7 stanzas of 3 lines, with the refrain, "Good night." It is entitled "The Christian's 'Good night,'" and is headed with the following sentence, "The early Christians were accustomed to bid their dying friends 'Good night!' so sure were they of awakening at the Resurrection morning."
(Perhaps Doudney wrote the lyrics, with the Sankeys adding a tune?)
And then there is the recording by Joseph Spence/Spense, with what amounts to only a single verse, applied to different relatives. It's hardly even the same song.
This hymn thoroughly deserves a detailed research project. Did the Sankeys write it, or just adapt it? Which versions of the song are traditional, and where? Did Spence create his version, or did it exist before him? I can't answer any of these questions from my library. - RBW Spence's version is quite similar to another, collected in the Bahamas in 1935 by Alan Lomax; both include traditional Bahamian "rhyming" -- improvised verses over a sung or chanted background.
And to another, found in Virginia in 1980 among crabpickers, who sang it as they worked.
It's also found in Yorkshire, and interestingly enough it is used there as a lowering-down song at funerals, just as it is in the Bahamas. - PJS
[The final words of the Long] Description [are] the first verse of the recording: " ... this version by the Pindar Family on a 1965 Nonesuch album called THE REAL BAHAMAS ... was very popular in folk circles because it featured performances by the legendary Bahamian guitarist and singer of sacred tunes, Joseph Spence (who was Jenny Pindar's brother)" (Blair Jackson, liner notes on verse is repeated with "my dear brother" replaced by "brother Spence" or "brother Pindar." The end of the verse is sometimes sung over by the leader with lines like "Oh in the morning now early and soon," "Walking in Jerusalem just like John," "John said I saw the number," "these are the children that would not be good," and "Join the words that I saw the sign."
Compare this to Sankey #216, "I heard the voice of Jesus say, 'Come unto me and rest: Lay down, thy weary one, lay down Thy head upon my breast" (Ira D. Sankey, Sacred Songs and Solos (London: Collins, n.d.), #216, also known as "Hear the Voice of Jesus." Also "My Number Will Be Changed": "I heard the voice of Jesus say, 'Come unto me and rest, Lay down, you weary wand'rer, your head upon my breast." - BS
Last updated in version 3.8
File: DTbidgni

I Binged Avree
DESCRIPTION: Travellers' cant. Singer meets two men in a North Scotland lodging house. They get drunk and start a fight; he hits one, then flees. He buys an accordion with the money he has begged and goes to Ireland. He meets two Tinkers who ask why he left Scotland
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (recorded from Davie Stewart)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Travellers' cant. Singer takes to the road, heads for northern Scotland, far from home, where he meets two men in a lodging house. They get drunk and start a fight; he hits one, then flees. He goes into a music shop and buys an accordion with the money he has begged; he gets tea and two shillings from a woman whose man is away at work. She tells him he'd best get away; he goes to Ireland. There he meets two Irish Tinkers who ask why he left Scotland
KEYWORDS: homesickness fight violence rambling travel music Ireland Scotland foreignlanguage
Gypsy
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 344, "I Binged Avree" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2159
File: K344

I Blamed My Mither and Never Anither
DESCRIPTION: "I blamed my mither and never anither" (x3) "For garin' me marry the carlin' [old woman]"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan7)
KEYWORDS: age marriage mother
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1368, "I Blamed My Mither and Never Anither" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #7240
I Bless the Lord, I'm Born to Die
DESCRIPTION: Fragment: "I bless the Lord, I'm born to die; Keep me from sinkin' down; I'm gwine to jedgment bye an' bye, Keep me from sinkin' down."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 13, (no title) (1 fragment)
File: ScaNF013

I Bocht My Wife a Bow o' Maut
DESCRIPTION: I bought my wife a bowl of malt, "Hey, how, the girdin' o't," and asked her to make good ale of it.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: drink nonballad wife
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1868, "I Bocht My Wife a Bow o' Maut" (1 short text)
Roud #13582
File: GrD81868

I Called My Dogs
DESCRIPTION: "I called my dogs through the rye To get to see them run and try. Ho oggie, ho doggie, harpin, tarpin rusty gills... call all your dogs home." The singer calls the dogs through various types of ground to see how they will perform
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Henry)
KEYWORDS: animal nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 4, "I Called My Dogs" (1 text)
File: MHAp004

I Can Drink an' No Be Drunk
DESCRIPTION: "I can drink and no be drunk An I can fight and no be slain I can kiss a bony lass [Greig/Duncan8: anither man's wife], And ay be welcome back again [Greig/Duncan8: to my ain]"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1759 (Bremner's Collection of Scots Reels or Country Dances, according to Hecht-Herd)
KEYWORDS: courting fight drink nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast "Folk-Song in Buchan," p. 17, ("I can drink and no be drunk") (1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan8 1719, "I Can Drink an' No Be Drunk" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Hans Hecht, editor, Songs From David Herd's Manuscripts (Edinburgh, 1904), #69 pp. 183,308, ("I can drink and no be drunke") [Not yet indexed as Hecht-Herd 69]
Roud #13197
I Can Forgive But Not Forget (Sweetheart, Farewell)

DESCRIPTION: "Sweetheart, farewell; at last we part. I leave you with an aching heart." The singer tells how (her?) lover scorned her. She says she loves him yet; "I can forgive but not forget." She thinks his false friends may prove untrue, and he will remember her.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: love separation betrayal nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 166, "Farewell, Sweetheart" (1 text)
Roud #6579
CROSS-REFERENCES:
fq. "Forget You I Never May" (theme)
File: BrII166

I Can Smoke a Pipe

DESCRIPTION: The singer loves the church, temple, bonnie lass, or can chew tobacco on a winter night, or is fit to serve the king. Then he can crack a biscuit, smoke a pipe and kiss a girl at night.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2)
KEYWORDS: courting food floatingverses playparty
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 204, "I Love the New Kirk" (1 text)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 73, "When I was a little boy My mammy kept me in" (2 texts; one of these is a fragment of Nicholson)
ADDITIONAL: Robert Craig Maclagan, The Games and Diversions of Argyleshire (London, 1900 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 79-80. ("Hullie go lee, go lee") (1 text, 1 tune)
James Orchard Halliwell, The Nursery Rhymes of England (London, 1843 ("Digitized by Google")), #293 p. 164, ("When I was a little boy my mammy kept me in")
Roud #15093
CROSS-REFERENCES:
fq. "Queen Mary (Auld Maid's Lament)" (floating verse)
fq. "Sailor Lad" (floating verse)
fq. "The Tailor and the Sailor" (floating verse)
NOTES [217 words]: A verse from "Sailor Lad," Gomme 2.147-148 is common to the texts: "He daurna brack a biscuit, He daurna smoke a pipe; He daurna kiss a bonnie lass At ten o'clock at night." The verse is also in Nicholson, cited for "Queen Mary (Auld Maid's Lament)." The variable first verse fits neither Gomme nor Nicholson. Otherwise I would have lumped this with one of those. Effectively, I am lumping the rhymes that are one verse plus this floating verse because I haven't found another home for them.

In Greig/Duncan1 57A, "The Tailor and the Sailor," as part of her rave about her sailor, the singer says, "He'll turn her east and turn her west an north and south an a' And bids me aye keep up my heart tho' he be far awa He daurna brak a biscuit, he daurna smoke a pipe He daurna kiss a bonnie lass at ten o'clock at night."

Yet another example is in Richard Eddy, History of the Sixtieth Regiment New York State Volunteers (Philadelphia, 1864), pp. 122-123. The author writes a letter for "William, my contraband." At the end of the letter William adds rhyming couplets beginning "As green as de leaves of de willow tree, Winchester ladies is hard to please"; lines about marriage and death; "If Miss Carter will think of me, I neber will be forgotten. I can handle a musket, I can smoke a pipe...." - BS

Last updated in version 2.6
File: LyCr2204

I Can Whip the Scoundrel

DESCRIPTION: "The Yankees came to Baldwin, They came up in the rear, They thought they'd find old Abner, But Abner wasn't there." The singer declares he can "whip the scoundrel That stole old Abner's shoes." He is a prisoner but hopes to fight again

AUTHOR: (earliest form, "Billy Patterson," by Daniel Decatur Emmett)

EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida); Emmett's song is from 1859

KEYWORDS: soldier Civilwar clothes floatingverses

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

Feb 1864 - The Olustee campaign

FOUND IN: US(MW, SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #7, "I Can Whip the Scoundrel" (1 text, incomplete, 1 tune)
Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 225-226, "I Can Whip the Scoundrel" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5019

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "As I Went Down to Newbern" (lyrics, theme, subject?)

NOTES [4317 words]: I'm going to leave my initial notes below, because they apply to the song as it currently exists, but Carter C. has resolved the questions I had; his quite impressive research (along with many texts of the song) is available on Mudcat.org. He finds that both "As I Went Down to Newbern" and "I Can Whip the Scoundrel" are derived from an 1859 song, "Billy Patterson," by the famous Daniel Decatur Emmett, apparently first printed in 1863. This song was based on a joke from the 1830s, and obviously predates the American Civil War. Clearly many people took the core of the Emmett song and adapted it to a local incident. For more on the original, and its evolution, I refer you to the Mudcat thread "Origins: I Can Whip the Scoundrel'; my earlier notes about this particular version follow (now somewhat expanded) follow:

This song is clearly derived from the same original as "As I Went Down to Newbern." It's not clear which is the earlier, but "Newburn" almost certainly refers to the earlier event, so it is the more likely to be older.

Carter C. also resolved my biggest question, the meaning of the reference to "Abner." All this will be covered below; I just want to set the background.

The question is, what event does this song refer to? Silber suggests the 1864 Florida campaign which tried to divide southern Florida from the rest of the Confederacy -- an attack foiled at Baldwin, near Jacksonville. But this was a very obscure campaign, and the song doesn't have enough detail to really identify it. If correct, the reference is to the Battle of Olustee (Ocean Pond), Florida, February 20, 1864, in which a relatively large Union force commanded by General Truman Seymour attacked piecemeal and was repulsed in the only real battle fought on Florida soil (HTIECivilWar, p. 545). On the whole, this makes sense.

Florida's population at the time was small, and the coastline indefensible; the Union could take points on the coast at almost any time, and the Union took Fernandina, Jacksonville, and St. Augustine early in the war (Nulty, pp. 42-45). In fact, they took Jacksonville multiple times, and abandoned it, with the third occupation starting in March 1863 (Nulty, p. 50); one of the effects of all these occupations and de-occupations was to recruit Blacks into the Union army (Nulty, pp. 56-57).

The 1864 event was a complicated campaign. "By the end of 1863, there was sufficient reason for the Federal government to take an interest in Florida. It was a source of recruits for the black regiments in the Department of the South, it represented a major source of commissary supplies for the Confederacy, and the Confederacy [which was dependent on its railroads but had no ability to make new rails or engines] planned to move scarce rails from the area to more strategic locations. Additionally, there was a strong possibility that Florida [or at least the Florida peninsula] could be severed from the Confederacy and restored to the Union, and a port in Florida might be opened to alleviate both the local economy and enhance certain people in the right positions. Troops were available, transportation was available, and the area was vulnerable -- a minimum risk that had good prospect of returning a maximum gain" (Nulty, p 75). The goals, according to Boyd, p. 3, was to "provide an outlet for the products of the state," deprive Confederate armies outside Florida from supplies from the state, recruit Blacks, and take steps toward returning Florida to the Union." Given the lack of defenders, it should have been easy. All that was needed was a competent commander.

And so it was that area commander Quincy A. Gillmore on February 4, 1864 sent off Truman Seymour's force for Florida (Nulty, p. 76).

The Federal force was strong, but its officers were dubious. Seymour, the expedition commander, was the only general officer, and his experience as a division commander was limited -- mostly he had taken charge when a senior officer was disabled. His brigade commanders were all inexperienced, and many of his troops were Black. The war showed that Black soldiers were just fine -- but their officers often weren't; the had a bad tendency to be men who had failed in other roles and took a job in a Black regiment to gain or keep an officer's ranking. And Seymour had so little transport that his men had to carry six days' rations (Nulty, pp. 76-77). Plus the troops had been reorganized just before the campaign (Boyd, pp. 4-5), so the officers generally didn't know their commands!

The invaders made a successful surprise landing at Jacksonville, which had been largely abandoned by its inhabitants after all those invasions and de-invasions (Nulty, pp. 81-82). Boyd, p. 4, suggests that not even Seymour knew where they were going until they were at sea; General Gillmore kept it secret. What is certain is that Seymour would be in charge of the troops that went out from Jacksonville.

Baldwin was a critical point; Florida had only three railroads, one a very short branch in the west that didn't connect to anything else in the state, the other two running from Tallahassee to Jacksonville (with Olustee being the next major stop east of Finnegans's base at Lake City, and Baldwin somewhat beyond that) and the other from the Gulf coast at Cedar Key to the Atlantic coast at Fernandina (Amelia Island). Very roughly, they were equivalent to modern Interstate Highway 10 for the east-west route and to US Highway 301 toward Gainesville and Floriay Highway 24 from there to Cedar Key. These two lines (neither of which connected to anything outside Florida) met at Baldwin. Thus, in 1864, Baldwin was the key to Florida's internal communications (Nulty, pp. 20-23). Olustee was a little to the west on the Tallahassee-Jacksonville rail.

The Federals had another advantage. The Confederate commander in the area was Brigadier General Joseph Finegan, who was no soldier; he was a lawyer jumped up directly to the status of General by the Confederate government (Nulty, p. 19). He was placed in charge of East Florida (with headquarters in Lake City) in 1862, but he was not assigned any regular troops (Nulty, pp. 36-37). When the Union forced landed in Jackson, Finegan had just two regular battalions and a few odd companies, plus a little cavalry and artillery -- fewer than 1300 men, and those scattered (Nulty, p. 84). General P. G. T. Beauregard, who commanded the whole southeast coast, was scrambling to find troops and to locate an officer who could either command Finegan's forced or who could take over in Charleston so Beauregard, who was based there, could head to Florida (Nulty, p. 83).

Once landed, it took the Union forces until the afternoon of February 8 to get started, but Seymour finally sent out a strong column -- although it was not under Seymour but under one of his subordinates, Colonel Guy V. Henry. The first major force they encountered was the Second Florida Cavalry under Lt. Colonel Abner McCormick -- clearly the "Abner" of the song. Cavalry at this time functioned primarily as scouts, but McCormick failed utterly in this task; the Union column bypassed him to attack an artillery camp several miles away, capturing several guns but letting McCormack's troops escape (Nulty, pp. 86-88; Boyd, p. 5). I would assume this was when Abner's shoes were stolen; his 202 men (Nulty, p. 128) did not play a great part in the battle. (Either that, or the reference to his shoes refers in some obscure way to the capture of the guns.)

The Union forces didn't inflict many casualties, but they captured several artillery pieces, then pushed on to Baldwin (Nulty, pp. 89-92), where both General Seymour and General Gillmore joined the troops. At this point, the Union forces seemed to have won; they had captured their single most important objective and blocked both of Florida's two railroad lines. After that, General Gillmore went back to Jacksonville, then to South Carolina, leaving General Seymour in charge of the advance (Nulty, pp. 96-97, 114). That may have been a mistake. Gillmore also turned passive, giving the Confederates time to deal with the situation (Nulty, p. 105). Gillmore apparently wanted to have the Federals fortify the region around Baldwin, thus controlling the eastern ends of the railroads. At the time Seymour took Baldwin, Finegan had just 490 infantry and 110 cavalry at Lake City, the logical next stop (Boyd, p. 8); Seymour could have swallowed him whole. But Seymour, despite saying he wanted to do more, waited a week, losing most of the benefits of surprise (Nulty, pp. 115-117)
The Confederates may have been weak and Finegan no soldier, but at least he started gathering troops. When the Federals backed off from a cavalry raid on Lake City, Finegan pushed forward to Olustee, which he regarded as easier to defend (Boyd, p. 9). And, on February 8, the Confederates started to send troops from outstate -- although, because of their incomplete railroad network, it would take them about a week to arrive (Nulty, p. 93). The troops General Beauregard found were two Georgia brigades under Alfred H. Colquitt and Colonel George P. Harrison (Boyd, p. 12). They were pretty good troops -- Colquitt's brigade had been part of the Army of Northern Virginia (in D. H. Hill's division) until after Chancellorsville, when Robert E. Lee traded Colquitt's troops for the brigade of Junius Daniel (Freeman, volume II, p. 710; on p. 664, he suggests that this was because Robert E. Lee was dissatisfied with Colquitt's performance at Chancellorsville. Other scholars also seem to agree that Colquitt's performance had been inept. Yet the brigade had fought with grim heroism; at Antietam, for instance, the 6th Georgia -- of which Colquitt had been colonel -- "was all but wiped out. Of the 250 men it brought to the Cornfield [on the left at Antietam], 24 survived unhurt" (Sears, p. 211). I seem to recall reading that the regiment -- which would normally be commanded by a colonel -- was led by a lieutenant. Given a chance, they would hit the Federals hard.

(It is possible that Chancellorsville cost him his brigadier's star; Nulty consistently calls him a colonel at Olustee. However, Boatner, p. 166, says he was made brigadier general September 1, 1862, and every other source I've checked agrees that he was a brigadier. Promotions to general had to be approved by the Confederate congress, which sometimes did not act on the promotions, so Colquitt could have lost his promotion. But no other source mentions this.) They arrived just in time (Nulty, pp. 121-122), and their 2000+ men gave Finegan the forces he needed to stand up to the Federals.

Nulty, p. 123, estimates 4600 Confederate infantrymen, with 12 cannon and fewer than 500 cavalry; the Federals he estimates to have had 5500 men and 16 cannon. Boyd, p. 16, also credits the Federals with 5500 men and 16 guns. Although the Federals had less firepower than that number implies, since a number had recently switched their weapons, meaning that some did not know how to use their pieces, and a number of the replacement rifles were defective (Boyd, p. 24). Seymour, after sitting around for a week, suddenly got very active on February 20, 1864, heading west to make railroad operations even harder for the Confederates (Nulty, pp. 124). He sent his cavalry ahead, but they didn't really scout; they just barged ahead with little attention to security (Nulty, p. 125) -- a sign, perhaps, of everyone's inexperience? Nulty, p. 213, concludes that Seymour moved "in the middle of enemy-occupied territory with little knowledge of the strength or location of the enemy and with inadequate logistic support" -- which seems to be true from everything I have read. The Confederates weren't doing much better as far as scouting was concerned; Abner McCormick's cavalry was sort of watching one flank, but McCormick wasn't even in charge the whole time (Nulty, p. 131). But the Confederates, being on the defensive, had less need for intelligence.

The battle started with leading elements of the Federal cavalry, and Barton's brigade, skirmishing with Colquitt's brigade, probably Finegan's best unit (Nulty, pp. 131-133, with map on p. 132; Boyd, pp. 17-18, with maps on pp. 19-21). Finegan assigned the field command to Colquitt (Boyd, p. 18) even as he sent more forces than just Colquitt's brigade to the battle site.

Neither side was ready for a fight, but it sounds as if the Confederates, who had their units in a relatively compact mass and were defending anyway, had the better of it. Boyd, p. 36, says "the entire Confederate force was quickly brought upon the field in fresh condition, while Seymour's columns, fatigued from a long march, were successively brought onto the field as individual brigades, and consequently for a great part of the action, each faced a numerically superior opponent." The Confederates routed part of the Federal advance guard and inflicted severe casualties on the rest (Nulty, pp. 137-145). Colquitt, who had field command (Nulty, p. 155), put reinforcements into line as they came up and advanced against the Federal vanguard (Nulty, pp. 148-155). Seymour, with his leading elements crushed, probably should have pulled back, built a defensive position, and tried to learn more about what was going on, but instead he just shoved more units into the fight piecemeal and let them get slaughtered. The Confederates came on until a shortage of ammunition forced them to halt (Nulty, p. 162). When they were finally resupplied, they apparently had the Union forces clumped together with the Confederates in a sort of a bowl around them (Nulty, p. 165).

The Union forces, badly beaten, retreated (and Seymour turned field command over to one of his subordinates, Colonel Barton; Boyd, p. 29. I find it hard to imagine what Seymour had to do that was more important than directing the retreat). Colquitt the cautious, despite having thoroughly wrecked the Union army, did not follow up his victory; it was not until the next day that a pursuit was organized (Nulty, p. 171). Nonetheless, Nulty, p. 209, attributes the Confederate success in the battle to Colquitt's management of the field. The consensus seems to be that General Finegan was overly cautious in following the Union forces (Nulty, p. 184). Seymour probably could have rallied the troops at Baldwin and defended that key railroad junction, but instead burned the town and kept on going (Nulty, pp. 178-179); Boyd, p. 29, notes that the retreating Federals were at least careful to damage the railroad.

The irony is, the Federals promptly scraped up about four brigades of reinforcements (organization table on p. 189 of Nulty). All the brigades were small, but still, they roughly doubled the Federal force. Since the Confederates had taken casualties, too, Seymour once again had the forces to win the campaign he had so thoroughly muffed. But he showed no signs of interest in further action. The Federals settled down in Jacksonville; the Confederates refused to attack, although they did work on fortifications at Baldwin (Nulty, p. 201). The most careful nineteenth century reckoning of losses (Phisterer, p. 215) concluded that Union forces at Olustee lost 193 killed, 1175 wounded, and 460 missing (total of 1828); the Confederates lost about 500. Boatner, p. 608, and Boyd, p. 30, say Seymour had 5115 effectives, and lists 203 killed, 1152 wounded, 506 missing, total of 1861 -- which Boatner regards as a loss rate of 36%

Nulty, p. 203, says 5115 Union soldiers fought, and 1335 were casualties, a casualty rate of 26.5%. On p. ix, claims that "by proportion of casualties to men engaged, was the third bloodiest defeat of the entire war for the Union" (on p. 203 he clarifies that the two bloodier battles were both in 1864: the combined Wilderness/Spottsylvania campaign and the June 14 Battle of Port Hudson. (There was, however, no battle at Port Hudson on June 14, 1864, according to Phisterer, p. 179; the date should be 1863, when Phisterer lists the "Second Assault... at Port Hudson, La.")

No matter which exact numbers you accept, Seymour had only ten regiments, although most of them had more than 500 men (Boyd, pp. 14-15; that was pretty strong for regiments at that stage of the war) so a loss of more than 1300 was definitely high, and if his losses were in excess of 1800, that would be simply staggering; one estimate I saw somewhere placed his losses at 40%. And two of Seymour's regiments (54th Massachusetts and 1st North Carolina) were of "Colored" soldiers (Gannon, p. 45), so some of those missing troops would presumably have ended up back in slavery. Gannon, p. 45, says that the two Black regiments in fact covered the Union retreat, and did it in such a gallant way as to prevent a Union rout; p. 44 shows an engraving of the event, although I doubt its accuracy.

Boatner give Confederate losses as 934 killed and wounded out of about 5200 engaged, so their rate of loss was about half that of the Federals. Gannon, p. 43, says that Finegan had 93 killed, 847 wounded, 6 missing, which isn't quite the same figure, but it's close.

Nulty, p. 217, assigns some of the blame for the defeat to General Gillmore, the district commander, who failed to coordinate the actions of his department and so let the Confederates concentrate their forces; Gillmore also failed to oversee Seymour. But he assigns much more to Seymour: "General Seymour's blundering in allowing his forces to be committed piecemeal and defeated in detail (something he had done before in the abortive attack on Battery Wagner [in Charleston]) pretty well ended hopes for what could have been achieved. General Seymour was too limited in vision to have commanded the advance force of the Federal expedition.... His disregard for security while in the enemy's territory, his failure to develop reliable intelligence, his failure to appreciate the strengths and weaknesses of his own units, his inertia when his forces had the advantage, his too-rapid piecemeal commitment of his units into an unknown situation, and his contradictory statements and behavior within a short period of time were responsible for the failure of what was potentially a low-cost, significant Union victory" (Nulty, pp. 216-217). I see no reason to disagree with any of this.

Despite the disaster, and the congressional investigation that followed, Seymour's career doesn't seem to have suffered too much. On March 24, he turned his command over to general J. P. Hatch (Boyd, p. 35) -- but he returned to the Army of the Potomac later in 1864. He was demoted to brigade command, but that was probably just the side effect of the transfer, and he later (after being taken prisoner and exchanged) returned to division command, and was allowed to remain in the regular army after the war (WarnerBlue, pp. 432-433; Nulty, p. 217). General Finegan's career doesn't seem to have been affected much, either. He was an unusual Confederate general, born in Ireland in 1814 and moved to Florida in the late 1830s. He became a planter and owned a lumber mill. He was a member of Florida's secession convention, and made a brigadier in April 1862.

Immediately after Olustee, when General Beauregard finally made it to Florida and looked things over, he certainly didn't act as if Finegan had just won a signal victory. He reorganized the local forces, taking most of Finegan's troops and giving them to other officers. Even a camp that had been named for Finegan was renamed (Nulty, p. 197). Clearly Beauregard felt that Finegan's performance had been poor. Before leaving the area on March 20, Beauregard put James Patton Andersen in charge of the Department of Florida (Nulty, p. 200. WarnerGray, p. 7, reports that Andersen, like Finegan, had been part of the Florida secession convention -- but his military record was far better, having commanded a brigade and division in the Army of Tennessee from Shiloh to Chattanooga).

Nulty's considered opinion of Finegan, pp. 217-218, is that he "received a great deal of credit for doing relatively little. One wonders how he was able to keep himself so busy so as not to appear on the battlefield until the Union forces were in full retreat. The failure to coordinate the efforts of the individual Confederate forces and immediately to pursue the defeated enemy rests on his shoulders..... Colonel (sic.) Colquitt, the real hero of Olustee, did an excellent job with the infantry but did not make enough use of the artillery and cavalry. General Seymour, given all his blunders, was fortunate in having General Finegan for an opponent." Boyd, p. 33, gives Finegan a little more credit, but also appears to think Colquitt deserves most of the credit. There is evidence (summarized by Boyd, p. 34) that several senior Confederate officers did not trust Finegan.

In 1864, after Olustee, some of the units that fought there returned to where they came from; others were formed into a brigade under Finegan (Boyd, p. 35). Finegan was sent to the Army of Northern Virginia in time for the Battle of Cold Harbour (WarnerGray, pp. 88-89), where his three regiments were joined with three regiments of the wounded Brigadier General Perry's brigade, with Finegan taking over the combined brigade (Furguson, pp. 96-97). The Florida units he took with him were joined with a handful of Florida regiments that were already in William Mahone's division to form a six regiment unit known as Finegan's Brigade (Ferguson, p. 273). His performance at Cold Harbor was not good; his brigade took 275 casualties at a battle in which most other units came out almost unscathed; there were some who thought he was drunk (Rhea, p. 384). Nonetheless, he stayed with the Army of Northern Virginia until March 1865, when he was sent back to Florida. After the war, he was involved in Florida politics and as a lawyer; he died in 1885 (Boatner, p. 279).

The whole business tends to get ignored in Civil War histories; it was a morale-booster for the Confederacy, but it didn't actually improve their position or hurt the Federals. Indeed, Nulty, p. ix, concludes that the Union campaign was, in outline, a success: "it came very close to severing Florida from the Confederacy, it forced the Confederacy to divert seventeen thousand men from a thinly manned defense of Charleston and Savannah, it delayed the critical reinforcement of the Southern Army of the Tennessee at a time when that army was fighting desperately to prevent the Union invasion of northwestern Georgia, it gave further proof of the ability of black soldiers to fight, and for a time it put a severe crimp in the subsistence supply lines that fed two Southern armies. In respect to the number of men the Union committed and the long-range ramifications of the expedition, the Federal expedition into Florida in 1862 was a success!"

The reference to "Abner" defeated me; the Confederate commander at Olustee was Joseph Finegan, and his two leading subordinates were Alfred H. Colquitt and George P. Harrison. Morris also seems to connect the song with the Olustee campaign, saying that part of G. V. Henry's Fortieth Massachusetts Mounted Infantry entered Baldwin, Florida on February 9, 1864. But he offers no explanation for the mention of "Abner."

It turns out, though, that Carter C. has a likely explanation of that one. "Brigadier General George H. Gordon, USA, commanding District of Florida, commanding Union expedition on the St. Johns River, reconnoitered the vicinity of Palatka, reported no Confederates at Camp Finegan, and Southern forces in East Florida were: 'At Camp Milton, the Second Florida Cavalry, Colonel Abner H. McCormick, CSA, 600 men; Camp Milton and McGirt's Creek strongly fortified. At Baldwin, no troops, strong fortifications, two pieces of artillery.'"

Checking four miscellaneous references, I find no record of McCormick ever rising above the rank of colonel or of doing anything else of note.

Abner McCormick, if he was not party to the post-Olustee atrocities against Black soldiers, certainly wanted to be: "Lt. Col. A. H. McCormick of the Second Florida Cavalry made a speech to his men before the battle, claiming the blacks were there to rape and pillage and stating that he would take no prisoners" (Nulty, p. 210). And it is noteworthy that there were few prisoners from the "Colored" regiments; Finegan reported taking 150 wounded prisoners, but only three of them Black (Boyd, p. 32), even though it is clear that at least a quarter and probably more than a third of Seymour's force was Black!

There is one other recent book about Olustee, Greg Ahlgren, Olustee: America's Unfinished Civil War Battle, Canterbury House Publishing, 2018. Despite having a title that sounds like non-fiction, it is in fact a novel, so I have not read it. It does have an afterword about the history, which is unpaginated. It mentions that, starting in 1977, re-enactors have replayed Olustee -- but, Ahlgren notes, Black re-enactors are rarely involved. Ahlgren also cites two personal accounts of atrocities committed against the Black union soldiers. (Nulty also mentions Confederate officers insulting the body and memory of a white colonel who was killed while commanding a Black regiment; Nulty, p. 190).

Ahlgren also mentions an hypothesis that Truman Seymour's reckless actions arose from the fact that he was known to suffer from "melancholia" -- which he equates, too loosely, with bipolar disorder. Bipolar II disorder does result in excessive optimism during periods of hypomania, so it could explain Seymour's actions, but I'd need better evidence than a mention of melancholia to be confident that that is what Seymour experienced. Nonetheless John Hay also wrote of Seymour's mood swings (Nulty, p. 119). Since the changes in mood were fairly rapid, it is highly unlikely that they were bipolar disorder, but some sort of emotional problem seems not unlikely. - RBW

Bibliography

- Boatner: Mark M. Boatner III, The Civil War Dictionary, 1959 (there are many editions of this very popular work; mine is a Knopf hardcover)
- Freeman: Douglas Southall Freeman, Lee's Lieutenants, 3 volumes, Scribners, 1942-1945
- Phisterer: Frederick Phisterer, Campaigns of the Civil War: Statistical Record of the Armies of the United States, 1883 (I use the 2002 Castle Books reprint, p. 215)

Last updated in version 5.3
File: SCwF225

I Can't Change It

DESCRIPTION: "One day I got a present from my old and faithful dad" -- a gold piece which proves bad. He tries to be rid of it, but he can't get (ex)change it. His wife turns out to have a wooden leg; he can't change her. She has four daughters; he can't change them.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Finger-FrontierBallads)
KEYWORDS: humorous gift father marriage wife disguise money children

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Finger-FrontierBallads, pp. 72-74, "(no title)" (1 text, t tune)
Roud #8828

NOTES [24 words]: Apparently this was intended to be funny. If the author had stopped with the first verse, it might have been. The rest is just prejudiced. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.0
File: Fing072

I Can't Help But Wonder Where I'm Bound

DESCRIPTION: The singer describes the life of a rambler, commenting "I can't help but wonder where I'm bound." He sees worried people everywhere, he misses his former girlfriend and his buddy; he advises people who have homes to stay there

AUTHOR: Tom Paxton
EARLIEST DATE: 1963
KEYWORDS: rambling home
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 52, "I Can't Help But Wonder Where I'm Bound" (1 text)
DT, WHERBOND*
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Can't Help But Wonder Where I'm Bound
Can't Help But Wonder
NOTES [61 words]: Obviously this isn't a traditional song, and it probably never will become one. On the other hand, it has been sung so widely by pop/folk singers (themselves ramblers, and so perhaps unusually sympathetic to the song) that I have seen a number of bluegrass sources list it as traditional. It may be that the song belongs in the Index just to refute that claim. - RBW
File: FSB052

I Can't Stand the Fire

DESCRIPTION: "I can't stand the fire (dear sister), I can't stand the fire (O Lord), I can't stand the fire, While the Jordan roll so swift."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1866 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 42, "I Can't Stand the Fire" (1 short text which the author suspect is a fragment, 2 tunes)
Roud #11997
File: AWG042B

I Can't Stay Behind

DESCRIPTION: "I can't say behind, my Lord, I can't say behind." "There's room enough (x3) in the heaven, My Lord,... I can't stay behind." "I've been all around." "I've searched every room." "The angels singing, all around the throne." "My father call...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 6, "I Can't Stay Behind" (1 text with extensive notes on variants, 1 tune)
Roud #11857
File: AWG006

I Can't Stay In Egypt Land

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Can't stay away (3x), Lord, I can't stay in Egypt land." Verses include "Tomorrow morning, baptism day,""My gospel's going from shore to shore," and "I looked at my feet, my feet looked new ... I swear by God I was running too"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious floatingverses
FOUND IN: West Indies(Bahamas)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories 28, "I Can't Stay In Egypt Lan'" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "My Lord's Riding All the Time" (theme: this world is Egypt)
I Canna Leave My Mither Yet
DESCRIPTION: Lizzie will not leave her mother "For nane can lo'e her like mysel'." Her lover asks her to go with him and herd sheep together. They would take her mother and "We baith will tend her fading years Amang the heathery hills o' Dee"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: age courting travel farming dialog sheep mother
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan4 899A, "I Canna Leave My Mither Yet" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6255
File: GrD4899A

I Cannot Be Your Sweetheart
DESCRIPTION: Singer asks his beloved to marry him. She refuses; she loves him, but is pledged to another. Ch.: "I cannot be your sweeheart, I cannot stay by your side, Another is patiently waiting, waiting to call me his bride, My heart it is almost broken,,,,"
AUTHOR: Abbie L. Ford (source: Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (copyright, according to Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer courts his beloved, asks her to marry him. She refuses, saying that though she loves him, she's promised to another. They part; he pines. Chorus: "I cannot be your sweeheart, I cannot stay by your side / Another is patiently waiting, waiting to call me his bride / My heart it is almost broken, your vows only add to my pain / I love you, sweetheart, I love you / Though we never meet again"
KEYWORDS: grief virtue courting love marriage promise rejection lover
FOUND IN: US(Ap,So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 44, "I Cannot Be Your Sweetheart" (1 text, 1 tune, plus mention of 2 more)
Roud #4964
RECORDINGS:
[Blind James] Howard & [Charles] Peak, "I Cannot Be Your Sweetheart" (Victor V-40189, 1930; rec. 1928; on KMM)
NOTES [23 words]: A classic plot, but apparently not a member of another song family. Nor could I find it in sheet music; possibly Howard or Peak wrote it. - PJS
Last updated in version 4.3
File: RcICBYSH

I Cannot Call Her Mother (The Marriage Rite is Over; The Stepmother)
DESCRIPTION: "The marriage rite is over," and the children have seen their father take a new wife. Their mother's picture is replaced by the pretty new girl's. The child "could not call her mother." She calls herself an orphan; "God gave us but one mother."
AUTHOR: Henry Harrison
EARLIEST DATE: 1855 (date of composition)
KEYWORDS: family marriage mother father children stepmother orphan
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Randolph 726, "The Stepmother" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Rorrer-RamblingBlues-LifeAndSongsOfCharliePoole, p. 79, "I Cannot Call Her Mother" (1 text)
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 298-299, "I Can Not Call Her Mother" (1 text, 1 tune)
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 246-247, "The Stepmother" (1 text, 2 tunes)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #956, p. 65, "I Cannot Call Her Mother" (1 reference)
cf. Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, p. 482, "The Stepmother" (source notes only)
ADDITIONAL: Fred W. Allsopp, Folklore of Romantic Arkansas, Volume II (1931), pp. 201-202, "(The Stepmother)" (1 short text)
John Burke, _Burke's Christmas Songster 1920_, self-published, 1918 (PDF available on the Memorial University of Newfoundland site), p. 19, "I Cannot Call Her Mother" (1 text)
ST R726 (Partial)
Roud #2091
RECORDINGS:
Bradley Kincaid, "I Cannot Call Her Mother" (Supertone 9565, 1929; Champion 15968, 1930 [as Dan Hughey])
[Roy Harvey and the] North Carolina Ramblers "I Cannot Call Her Mother" (Silvertone 5181 [as The Three Kentucky Serenaders], 1927; Supertone 9246/Silvertone 8147, 1928)
Charlie Poole and the North Carolina Ramblers, "I Cannot Call Her Mother" (Columbia 15307-D, 1928)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Blind Child" (theme)
File: R726

I Cannot Stay Here Baby

DESCRIPTION: "How can I stay here baby, when you treat me the way you do?" "... some other woman will care for me." "I don't want to marry, just want to be your man."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1969 (USMississippi01)
KEYWORDS: infidelity sex parting nonballad lover
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
James "Son Ford" Thomas, "I Cannot Stay Here Baby" (on USMississippi01)
NOTES [21 words]: The Thomas recording is an aab blues with the second a replaced by an instrumental interlude for all but the last verse. - BS
Last updated in version 5.1
File: RcICSHBa

I Catch-a Da Plenty of Feesh

DESCRIPTION: "I sail over the ocean blue, I catch-a da plenty of feesh; The rain come down like hell, And the wind blow through my wheesk. Oh, Marian, my good compan, O Viva le Garibaldi! Viva, viva, viva l'Italiane!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)
KEYWORDS: sailor work patriotic
FOUND IN: US(SW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 409, "I Catch-a Da Plenty of Feesh" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [50 words]: Garibaldi was, of course, the soldier who (in a military sense) was most responsible for the unification of Italy. The mention presumably dates the song to the period around 1861 when Cavour (sometimes helped, and sometimes hindered, by Garibaldi) was unifying Italy under the Piedmont dynasty. - RBW
File: San409

I Could'n Live Bedout de Flowers

DESCRIPTION: About southern living habits. "I could'n live bedout de flowers Ur fdat sweet magnolia tree. I could'n sleep where de mockin' bird Could'n sing he song to me." The singer claims he would "pine an' die on Boston beans, 'Caze possum is what we eat."
I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray

DESCRIPTION: " Couldn't hear nobody pray, I couldn't hear nobody pray, Well, way down yonder by myself I couldn't hear nobody pray. " " In the valley... On my knees... Callin' Jesus... So lonesome... In the mornin'... In the evenin'... "

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (recording, Fisk University Jubilee Quartette)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE,So)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Curtis-Burlin-NegroFolkSongs-TheHamptonSeries (I), pp. 22-31, "Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray" (1 text with variants, 1 tune with variants)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 246, "I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray" (1 text, 1 tune)
Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro, pp. 24-25, "I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray" (1 text, 1 tune); pp. 51-52, "Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 351, "I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray" (1 text)
Roud #11949
RECORDINGS:
Emory University Glee Club, "Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray" (Victor 20594, 1927)
Fisk University Jubilee Quartette, "I Couldn't Hear Nobody" (Victor 16448, 1909)
Fisk University Jubilee Singers, "Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray" (Columbia A-1932, 1916); "I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray" (on Fisk01)
Four Blues, "I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray" (DeLuxe 1003, 1945)
Paramount Jubilee Singers, "I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray" (Paramount 12070, 1923)
Southern Four, "I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray" (Edison 50885, 1921)
Vaughan Quartet, "Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray" (Vaughan 300, n.d.)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Wreck on the Highway" (words)
cf. "Settin' Down" (lyrics)
NOTES [15 words]: Not to be confused with "Wreck on the Highway," which uses a similar phrase in its chorus. -PJS
Last updated in version 6.0
File: LoF246

I Do Not Choose to Run

DESCRIPTION: "The leading question of today is argued everywhere, About who'll be the lucky jay to fill the White House Chair." President Coolidge doesn't want to run for re-election: "I do not choose to run." Maybe not, but if he meets a hodag, then he'll surely run

AUTHOR: William T. Allen (Shan T. Boy)
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Kearney, The Hodag, according to Peterson)
KEYWORDS: humorous political animal
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1920 - Calvin Coolidge elected vice-president under president Warren G. Harding 1923 - Coolidge becomes president when Harding dies
1924 - Coolidge elected president in his own right
1927 - Coolidge announces that he will not seek another term in 1928
1929 - Coolidge succeeded by Herbert Hoover

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: David C. Peterson, "Wisconsin Folksongs," chapter in _Badger History: Wisconsin Folklore_, State Historical Society of Wisconsin (Volume XXV, Number 2, November 1973), pp. 63-64. "I do not choose to run" (1 text, 1 non-traditional tune)

ST WHBD063 (Partial)

NOTES [946 words]: This must be one of the last songs written by William T. Allen (Shan T. Boy), best known as the writer of "The Banks of the Little Eau Pleine" [Laws C2]; it refers to events of 1927 and 1928. Since Allen generally wrote his pieces to fit particular tunes, it is reasonable to assume that this was sung to some well-known traditional melody, but presumably Kearney, who took down the tune, did not see fit to record it. David Peterson, who reprinted it, therefore saw fit to set his own tune, but I see no reason why this tune should be used. When I looked at the words, I thought of "Auld Lang Syne," but that's just a wild guess.

Calvin Coolidge was no one in particular when he became the Republican vice presidential nominee; born in 1872, he had spent six years in the Massachusetts legislature, being Senate president 1914-1915. He had served two years as mayor of Northampton. He had been lieutenant governor of Massachusetts 1916-1918, then governor 1918-1920 (DeGregorio, pp. 451-452). He had been nominated for President in 1920, but was not considered a serious candidate. For some reason, after Harding had become the Presidential nominee, there was a stampede to make Coolidge his running mate (DeGregorio, p. 452). If Harding had finished out his term, Coolidge would likely have gone back to Massachusetts and gone back to being a nobody.

But Harding, of course, did not serve out his term, dying on August 2, 1923. Coolidge then became president.

There was no serious opposition to Coolidge's re-nomination in 1924, and he won 54% of the popular vote. That translated into 382 electoral votes, entitling Coolidge to a full term in the White House (DeGregorio, p. 455).

This was not entirely a source of pleasure for Coolidge. After his nomination for president, but before the election, his sixteen-year-old son Calvin Jr. died of a bacterial infection in his foot (Greenberg, p. 97). Coolidge admitted that he was never the same after that (Greenberg, p. 98); he would write in his autobiography, "the power and the glory of the presidency went with [Calvin Jr.]" (Greenberg, p. 99).

Still, Coolidge could have chosen to run for a second full term. There was, as yet, no term limit on the presidency, and little precedent. Most vice presidents who had succeeded to the office (Tyler, Fillmore, Johnson, Arthur) had not managed to win a full term; the one exception, Theodore Roosevelt, had served almost two terms and then retired, although he ran again in 1912. Coolidge was the first president to have succeeded to less than half a full term and then been elected in his own right. So it was not only legal for him to run for a second full term, it was at least arguable that it did not violate Washington's precedent of not serving a third term.

Coolidge, however, was not interested. He felt ten years in Washington was "too long" (Greenberg, p. 138). By 1927, he had decided not to run again. On August 2, 1927, four years to the day after Harding died, he released a laconic statement, "I do not choose to run for president in 1928" (Greenberg, p. 137). That of course provided the tag line for this song.

Even before he retired, Coolidge developed a habit of taking very long vacations. "As president he... took up fishing and skeet shooting" (DeGregorio, p. 450), and took trips from Washington to indulge these interests. In 1927, for instance, he spent a long time in South Dakota's Black Hills (Greenberg, pp. 135-136). And in 1928, he went fishing in northern Wisconsin.

And that, obviously, attracted the attention of William Allen. This song opens with a description of Coolidge's fishing expedition, then gives a description of the hodag, then talks of what Coolidge would do if he were to meet a hodag; he would surely choose to run from the fearsome beast.

Fearsome -- and fictitious. It's clearly fakelore.

"The Black Hodag (Bovinus spiritualis) was discovered by E. S. "Gene" Shephard, a former well-known timber cruiser of Rhinelander, Wisconsin. Its haunts were in the dense swamps of that region. According to its discoverer, this fearful beast fed on mud turtles, water snakes, and muskrats, but it did not disdain human flesh" (Gard/Sorden, p. 73).

"The most famous mythical creature in Wisconsin is the Hodag, a prehistoric creature resembling a dinosaur with the body of an ox and the tail of an alligator. Along its back were sharply pointed spines. Gene Shephard of Rhinelander captured one at the turn of the century, using white bulldogs as bait, and exhibited it at county fairs.... [I]t is said the Smithsonian Institution was interested in this creature. Unfortunately, a fire destroyed the creature so the scientific world could not prove the Hodag's authenticity.... One question remains: If the Hodag was a hoax, why are there not more white bulldogs in northern Wisconsin today?" (Wyman, pp. 16-17).
The legend was quickly embellished -- e.g. it show up in Paul Bunyan tales (which are, of course, also fakelore). So we find this, e.g., on p. 85 of Barber/Riches: "Hodag[,] Ferocious man-eating animal, with formidable horns, large bulging eyes, claws and a line of sharp spikes which ran down the ridge of its back and long tail. It lived in dense swamps in Wisconsin. The hodag never lay lay down, but leant against a tree to sleep. It could only be captured by cutting deeply into the trunk of its favorite trees, and trapping it as it fell" (this trait perhaps lifted from Pliny's "Achlis"). William Allen lived in northern Wisconsin, and he worked in the lumber camps. So he would have known of the Hodag -- and would have known it was a hoax. So I truly don't know if he's satirizing Coolidge, or the hodag, or both. - RBW

Bibliography

- Wyman: Walker D. Wyman, Wisconsin Folklore, University of Wisconsin Extension (?), 1979

Last updated in version 4.5
File: WHBD063

I Do Wonder Is My Mother on That Train

DESCRIPTION: "I do wonder is my mother on that train (x2). Train is a-comin' roun' de curve, an' she's strainin' ever' nerve, I do wonder...." Sinners are told of the arrival of the train in heaven and told they should behave better.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious train nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 586, "I Do Wonder Is My Mother on That Train" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 586, "I Do Wonder is My Mother on That Train" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #11902
File: Br3586

I Don't Care If I Never Wake Up (My Money Never Gives Out)

DESCRIPTION: Two nearly-identical minstrel songs about imagined wealth
AUTHOR: "I Don't Care If I Never Wake Up": Paul J. Knox / "My Money Never Gives Out": Irving Jones
EARLIEST DATE: "I Don't Care If I Never Wake Up": 1899 (sheet music) / "My Money Never Gives Out": 1900 (sheet music)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Two nearly-identical minstrel songs containing successive surreal images of imagined wealth: "There's a certain yellow joker lives around this town/Just as lazy as lazy can be." Early one morning he takes a pipe of dope, says, "I'm known as the ragtime millionaire ... I'll go back to bed ... I don't care if I never wake up ... There's nothing like livin' like a moneyed king, drinkin' from a silver cup ... I am worth a million in my dreams... I'm always flush, and My money never runs out/Rich food is a-makin' me stout." "I'm a-livin' good all the time/I don't drink no cheap wine." "When you got money it's a pleasant treat/Your only occupation is to sleep and eat." "I got everything that a king could wish, on-a-Fridays I eat fried goldfish.... I cleans my teeth with diamond dust/It wouldn't jar me if all he banks went bust."
KEYWORDS: drugs money
FOUND IN: US
RECORDINGS:
Banjo Joe (pseud. For Gus Cannon), "My Money Never Runs Out" (Paramount 12604, c. 1927)
Arthur Collins, "My Money Never Gives Out" (CYL: Edison 7607, 1901)
Dom Flemons & Guy Davis, "My Money Never Gives Out" DixieFrog DFGCD 8771; on Protobilly)
[Note: This is mostly drawn from the Cannon recording.]
Silas Leachman, "I Don't Care if I Never Wake Up" (Victor 795, 1901; on Protobilly)
NOTES [51 words]: "Protobilly" credits Gus Cannon with blending these two 1901 minstrel songs of "financial fantasy." They already overlapped so much that one is invariably tempted to imagine plagiarism, or "folk process" if you prefer. The result, in all the versions reissued on "Protobilly," is imagistic and surreal. - PJS
Last updated in version 5.1
File: RcIDCINW

I Don't Feel Weary
DESCRIPTION: "I don't feel weary and noways tired, O glory hallelujah. Just let me in the kingdom
While the world is all on fire, O glory hallelujah." "Going to live with God forever." "And keep the ark a-moving."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 70, "I Don't Feel Weary" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, pp. 36-37, "I Am Seekin' for a City (I Don't Feel No-ways Tired)" (1 text, 1 tune; pp. 228-229 in the 1874 edition)
Roud #12028
File: AWG070A

I Don't Have To Worry About Where I Spend Eternity
DESCRIPTION: "I don't have to worry about where I spend eternity." "Jesus died in blood you see I'm so glad he included me." Jesus "claims the ocean," "master of every sea," "captain of every ship."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1968 (USMississippi01)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Essie Mae Brooks, "I Don't Have to Worry Where I Spend Eternity" (2008, on "Sisters of the South," DixieFrog DFGCD 8649)
Church of God in Christ, "I Don't Have To Worry About Where I Spend Eternity" (on USMississippi01)
NOTES [133 words]: The format of this minor key hymn is similar to that of "Motherless Children":
in some verses the first line -- "I don't have to worry about where I spend eternity" - -is repeated, followed by a rhyming couplet, and "I don't have to worry ....." For example,
Don't have to worry about where I spend eternity
Don't have to worry about where I spend eternity
Jesus died in blood can't you see
I'm so glad he included me
Don't have to worry about where I spend eternity
Verses that don't start with the title line have two rhyming couplets followed by the title line. - BS
I wonder if that line about Jesus "claims the ocean" should not be Jesus "calms the ocean"; in Matthew 14:22-33 and parallels, Jesus walks on the water during a storm on the sea, and when he enters the boat, the storm ends. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: RcIDHWSE
I Don't Know How We Made It Over

DESCRIPTION: "Lord, you know then, I don't know, you king, church, I don't know just how we made it over, Lord, thank you, Jesus, I don't know, you know it, Must have been the grace of God." The singer may be discouraged, but the Holy Spirit brings grace.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1980 (Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, pp. 148-150, "I Don't Know How We Made It Over" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #16270
File: Rose148

I Don't Know What I'd Do Without the Lord

DESCRIPTION: The singer says even prayerful activities can't be done without the Lord's support. When the way is dim the Savior will make the path light. See notes for other examples.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (recording, Belmont Silvertone Jubilee Singers)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Belmont Silvertone Jubilee Singers, "I Don't Know What I'd Do Without the Lord" (Decca 7685, 1939)
Johnny Brown, "I Don't Know What I'd Do without the Lord" (on USFlorida01)
Testerina Primitive Baptist Church, "I Don't Know What I'd Do Without the Lord" (on USFlorida01)
NOTES [145 words]: For notes on the origin of the Primitive Baptist Church see "Did Christ o'er Sinners Weep?"
The verse format is [first line] (x2), [second line],"I don't know what I'd do without the Lord," where [second line] approximates an internal rhyme. So, Belmont Silvertone Jubilee Singers sing "I don't know what I'd do without the Lord, I don't know what I'd do without the Lord, On our knees as we're alone just trying to make heaven my home, I don't know what I'd do without my Lord." The Testerina Primitive Baptist Church makes [second line] "Well singing and praying every day trying to walk this narrow way" and has [first line] lined out as one of the following: "I don't know just what I'd do without the Lord" "I can't even (humble down / bow down / sing a song / testify / say my prayers) without the Lord" Johnny Brown makes the last line the same as [first line]. - BS
Last updated in version 4.2
File: RcIDKWID

I Don't Know When Old Death's Gwine ter Call Me

DESCRIPTION: "I don't know when old death's gwine ter call me, He's ridin' every day. He don' let nobody stay. My heart is full of sorrow, my eyes is full of tears, Old death is gwine ter call me 'fore many more years."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: death
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCollectionNCFolklore3 590, "I Don't Know When Old Death's Gwine ter Call Me" (1 fragment)
Roud #11903
NOTES [37 words]: Although the editors of Brown list this among the religious songs, and it certainly could be one of those laments-on-death-but-I'll-wait-for-Jesus type songs -- but there is no indication of such in the actual text. - RBW
File: Br3590
I Don't Know Why I Feel So Shy

DESCRIPTION: "I don't know why I look so shy Ev'ry time I look into my honey's eye. He's quite polite, and he treats me right.... I've been told that he thinks me cold." So she has to say, "I'll like a little loving now and then"! He asks her to marry; she agrees

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1953 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: love courting humorous marriage
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 61, "I Don't Know Why I Feel So Shy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11325
File: Brne061

I Don't Let the Girls Worry My Mind

DESCRIPTION: "Little fish swim in the river, Big fish swim in the sea, But there ain't no use for the girls worrying me. Never was arrested, never paid a fine, Cause I don't let the girls worry my mind... I don't drink your wins, Cause I don't let the girls...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)
KEYWORDS: love courting drink
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 733, "I Don't Let the Girls Worry My Mind" (1 short text, 1 tune)
NOTES [15 words]: The description is based on the Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 fragment. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: BrS5733

I Don't Like a Nigger

DESCRIPTION: "I don't like a nigger, I'll be dinged if I do. Feet's so big Till he can't wear a shoe. Head like a hay-stack, Mouth like a frog's; Eats more bread than Forty Bull-dogs. Got de glory and honor! Praise de Jesus, to my dyin' land!....."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: Black(s) discrimination Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 484, "I Don't Like a Nigger" (1 text)
Roud #11866
NOTES [65 words]: For some reason, the notes in Brown equate this with "I Don't Like No Railroad Man." I wonder if this isn't an error -- "I Don't Like No Railroad Man" is much more like "Don't Like a Rich White Man Nohow," which occurs a few entries earlier in Brown. This may be a white man's answer to the latter complaint -- but if so, it is a clearly inferior product. As well as much less justified. - RBW
File: Br3484

I Don't Like No Railroad Man

DESCRIPTION: "I don't like no railroad man, Railroad man he'll kill you if he can, I don't like no railroad man." "I don't like no railroad boss, Railroad boss got a head like a hoss...." "I don't like no railroad fool, Railroad fool got a head like a mule...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1913 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: railroading nonballad floatingverses discrimination Black(s)
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 326, "I Don't Like No Railroad Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 481, "Don't Like a Rich White Man Nohow" (1 short text)
Roud #11802 and 11865
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Wish I Was a Mole in the Ground" (floating lyrics)
NOTES [131 words]: The similarity in lyrics between the Brown and Sandburg versions clearly make them the same, though Brown's is a clear reminiscence of the bitter era in the American South after the Civil War, when Jim Crow laws made life miserable for Blacks. The Brown lyrics are much more explicit:
Don't like a rich white man nohow (x2),
Head like a hoss, and he tries to be de boss,
An' I don't like a rich white man nohow.
Don't like a poor white man nohow (x2),
Head like a mule, an' he tries to act a fool....
An' I don't like a poor white man nohow.
The resulting texts, though almost entirely the same in form, have completely different feelings. I have to suspect Sandburg's text is a cleaned up version -- but it too is seemingly early, and it was indexed first, so I retain its title. - RBW
File: San326

I Don't Love Nobody
DESCRIPTION: "I love a nobody, nobody loves me, Ain't gonna get married, Live single and free, They're after my money, ain't after me, I love a nobody, nobody love me."
AUTHOR: original version by Lew Sully
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1896 (sheet music published)
KEYWORDS: love money
FOUND IN: US(SE,So)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Randolph 782, "I Love a Nobody" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 384-385, "I Love a Nobody" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 782)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 229, (no title) (1 fragment, possibly of this)
Roud #7414
RECORDINGS:
Elizabeth Cotten, "I Don't Love Nobody" (on Cotten01)
George Gaskin, "I Don't Love Nobody" (Berlin 928Z/0928Z, 1896)
Earl Johnson & his Dixie Entertainers "I Don't Love Nobody" (OKeh 45101, 1927)
Walter Morris, "Crazy Coo" (Columbia 15079-D, 1926)
Poplin Family, "I Don't Want to Get Married" (on Poplin01)
Riley Puckett "I Don't Love Nobody" (Columbia 150-D, 1924)
Hoke Rice & his Gang, "I Don't Love Nobody" (Brunswick 482, 1930)
Doc Roberts "I Don't Love Nobody" (Perfect 12929/Conqueror 8239, 1933)
Gid Tanner & his Skillet Lickers "I Don't Love Nobody" (Columbia 15123-D, 1927; rec. 1926)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
I Don't Want to Get Married
Duplin County Blues
I Ain't Got Nobody
NOTES [87 words]: Paul Stamler points out that this was a "popular string ragtime song in the 1920s," but I don't know whether that is the immediate source of Randolph's version, which was collected around that time.
Cohen speculates that this is derived from Lew Sully's 1899 song "I Don't Love Nobody," while admitting that that in turn may have been a reworking of something else. - RBW
And the date on the George Gaskin recording suggests it may have been. The chorus is often all that remains of the original, which was a "coon song." - PJS
File: R782
I Don't Love Old Satan

DESCRIPTION: "I don't love old Satan, Old Satan don't love me, And under the circumstances, Me and old Satan don't agree." "I'se gwine to Mount de Zion, My beautiful home." "I stepped in de water, And the water was cold; Got a free body, And I want a free soul."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious Devil nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 584, "I Don't Love Old Satan" (1 text plus an excerpt from 1 more, both from the same informant); also 595, "I'se Gwine Land on Dat Shore" (1 text, with a "I'se gwine land on dat shore" chorus, but not long enough to classify with anything else)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 584, "I Don't Love Old Satan" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #11899
File: Br3584

I Don't Mean to Tell You Her Name (I)

DESCRIPTION: The singer says "no lass can compare" with his "for innocence and native grace" but he won't tell her name. "The Lord and Squire" hope to win her but she loves the singer, and he won't tell her name.

AUTHOR: Thomas Hudson (lyrics), Robert Guylott (music) (source: Hudson)
EARLIEST DATE: 1826 (Hudson)
KEYWORDS: courting love nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 163-164, "I Don't Mean to Tell You Her Name" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 442)
ADDITIONAL: Thomas Hudson, Comic Songs (London, 1826 (seventh collection, "Digitized by Google")), pp. 29-30, "I Don't Mean to Tell You Her Name" (1 text)
Roud #1271

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(2590), "My Village Fair" or "I Don't Mean to Tell You Her Name" ("To my village fair no lass can compare"), J. Pitts (London), 1819-1844; also Harding B 11(2490), "The Lovely Village Fair" or "I Don't Mean to Tell You Her Name"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
"Oh! Breathe Not His Name" (theme of hidden name)
NOTES [108 words]: The original does not include the final verse, as in the Bodleian broadsides, in which the singer promises to reveal the name when they are married.

Bodleian, Harding B 11(1626), "I Don't Mean to Tell You Her Name" ("Where grow the sweetest of flowers"), unknown, no date; also Johnson Ballads 2627, "I Don't Mean to Tell You Her Name", and LOCsinging, as105820, "I Don't Mean to Tell You Her Name" ("Where grow the sweetest of flowers"), W. S. Fortey (London), no date, is a different song, possibly written to capitalize on the popularity of Hudson's original. Hudson's collections include complaints of, and warnings of prosecution for, piracy. - BS

Last updated in version 2.6
File: WT163

I Don't Mind If I Do

DESCRIPTION: Various reminiscences about courting, all ending with something like, "Bedad, then, says I, I don't mind if I do." The singer comes courting, enters the house, takes a drink, kisses the girl, learns she has a dowry, and marries her

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1885 (broadside Bodleian, Harding B 11(2164))
KEYWORDS: courting marriage
FOUND IN: Australia Canada(Mar) Ireland Britain(England(South,West))
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 328, "Joe Muggins" (1 text)
Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 58, "Joe Muggins" (1 text, 1 tune)
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 263-264, "Oh, Bedad Then, Says I" (1 text, 1 tune)
Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 268-269, "I Don't Care If I Do" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 106-107,252, "Pat Murphy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick, pp. 97-99, "Pat Murphy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Morton/Maguire-ComeDayGoDayGodSendSunday 20, pp. 46-47,111,164, "Joe Higgins" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #847
RECORDINGS:
John Maguire, "Joe Higgins" (on IRJMaguire01)
The McNulty Family, "I Don't Care If I Do" (on IRMcNulty-Night1)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(2164), "Joe Muggins"/"I Don't Care If I Do," ("If you listen to me I will sing you a song"), unknown (London), 1863-1885
File: MA263

I Don't Sing Like I Used to Sing
DESCRIPTION: "I don't sing like I used to sing, Jesus done changed, changed, changed Dis heart o' mine (x4). Jesus done changed this heart of mine." Similarly, "I don't pray like I used to pray," and also shout, talk, walk, moan, etc.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 585, "I Don't Sing Like I Used to Sing" (1 text)
Roud #11901
File: Br3585

I Don't Think Much of You
DESCRIPTION: An entertainer sings embarrassing or suggestive remarks about people in the room, each ending "I don't think much of you." He criticizes appearance or assumes the target to be simple-minded. The final verse usually claims "it's all in jest"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1855 (broadside, Bodleian Firth b.25(396))
LONG DESCRIPTION: An entertainer sings embarrassing or suggestive remarks about people in the room, each ending "I don't think much of you" The singer says I can "reckon you up with half an eye": "why didn't you wash your face?" ... no soap -- why not then make water do; a young man is buying plenty of drinks for a woman while he owes his washerwoman for last week's washing; the singer finds a pawn ticket in a pocket book and a bustle in a lady's shopping bag; a shabbily dressed man "thinks himself a swell"; some verses critique hats, shirts and other articles of clothing. Other verses are about simple-minded targets: "you made the pigs two wooden legs, for you broke the poor thing's two Because your pig would not lay eggs"; "you bought a cow to suck a calf, and set two fleas to fight"; you lit a carrot in a candlestick "to give light." The final verse usually claims "it's all in jest.
KEYWORDS: clothes humorous nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 673, "I Don't Think Much of You" (3 fragments, 2 tunes)
Roud #1602
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth b.25(396), "I Don't Think Much of You" ("Ah! you may chaff and wink your eye, and laugh and make a rout"), E.M.A. Hodges (London), 1846-1854; also Bodleian, Harding B 11(4003), Harding B 18(269), Firth b.26(385), "I Don't Think Much of You"
I Don't Want Nobody Stumbling Over Me

DESCRIPTION: "I don't want (nobody / that liar / that gambler / that peace broker) stumbling over me, stumbling over me, stumbling over me. I don't want (nobody / ...) stumbling over me, That is why I pray so hard"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (VaWork)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious worksong

FOUND IN: US(SE)

RECORDINGS: Creola Johnson, Audrey Davis and Group, "I Don't Want Nobody Stumbling Over Me" (on VaWork)

NOTES [27 words]: VaWork is a work song for shucking oysters. The first phrase is lined out and the workers join in singing. Each worker shucks to her own rhythm while singing. - BS

Last updated in version 4.2

File: RcIDWNS0

I Don't Want to Be a Gambler

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, I don't want to be a gambler, An' I'll tell you the reason why, My Lord, sittin' in his Kingdom, Got his eyes on me, God got his eyes on me...." "Oh, I don't want to be a lawyer, An' I'll tell you the reason why" "Oh, I don't want to be a drunkard"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)

KEYWORDS: religious virtue nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 465, "I Don't Want to Be a Gambler" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: San465

I Don't Want to Join the Army

DESCRIPTION: "I don't want to be a soldier, I don't want to go to war, I'd rather stay at home, Around the streets to roam." Rather than join the army, the singer prefers to hang around Picadilly, "living off the earnings of a highborn ly-dee."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE:

KEYWORDS: bawdy humorous soldier

FOUND IN: Australia Canada US(MW,SW) New Zealand

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 384-386, "I Don't Want to Join the Army" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, p. 67, "I Don't Want to be a Soldier" (1 text) Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, pp. 146-147, "I Don't Want to Be a Soldier" (1 text with variants, 1 tune)
DT, JOINARMY*
Roud #10263
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "On Sunday I Walk Out With a Soldier" (tune, according to Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang)
File: EM384

I Don't Want to Play in Your Yard
DESCRIPTION: Two girls were neighbors and close friends until "one day a quarrel came." The one tells the other "You can't play in our yard;" the other replies, "I don't want to play in your yard";
she will be sorry for all the fun she misses. Then they make up
AUTHOR: Words: Philip Wingate / Music: H. W. Petrie EARLIEST DATE: 1894 (sheet music by Petrie Music Company)
KEYWORDS: youth fight
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, pp. 92-94, "I Don't Want to Play in Your Yard" (1 text, 1 tune, plus a copy of the sheet music on pp. 96-98)
Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, pp. 254-256, "I Don't Want to Play in Your Yard" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Robert A. Fremont, editor, _Favorite Songs of the Nineties_, Dover Publications, 1973, pp. 132-135, "I Don't Want to Play in Your Yard" (1 text, 1 tune, the 1894 sheet music)
Margaret Bradford Boni, editor, _Songs of the Gilded Age_, with piano arrangements by Norman Lloyd and illustrations by Lucille Corcos, Golden Press, 1960, pp. 122-124, "I Don't Want to Play in Your Yard" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #16802
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "See, See, My Playmate" (theme, lyrics)
NOTES [37 words]: Reported by Spaeth to be "the most popular child's song of the [1890s]" other than the works of Charles K. Harris. It doesn't strike me as something children would sing, though;
it's what adults think children would sing. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: SWM254

I Don't Want to Stay Here Any Longer
DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Swing low, sweet chariot, Pray let me enter in, I don't want to stay here any longer." Verses: ""I had a little book and I read it through, I got my Jesus as well as you...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1874 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious floatingverses Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Don't Want to Stay Here No Longer (The Danville Chariot)" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 183 in the 1874 dition)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (lyrics)
cf. "All My Trials" (lyrics, theme)
NOTES [59 words]: Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute's verses include floaters: "I've been to heaven and I've been tried, I've been to the river and I've been baptized" and "Some go to church to holler and shout, Before six months they're all turned out." Each verse couplet is followed by "I Don't Want to Stay Here Any Longer." - BS
Last updated in version 4.0
File: Dett038
I Don't Want You Go On And Leave Me

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I'm coming Lord"(3x), "And I don't want you to go on and leave me." The singer says he was lost in the wilderness, but the Lord called him, and Jesus saved his soul. He heard the mourner's cry and saved the soul sure to die

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Barton-OldPlantationHymns)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious death Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Barton-OldPlantationHymns, p. 23, "I Don't Want You Go On And Leave Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: Bart023

I Don't Want Your Millions, Mister

DESCRIPTION: "I don't want your millions, mister; I don't want your diamond ring; All I want is the right to work, Mister; Give me back my job again." The worker describes his toils that made the owner rich. But he doesn't need riches -- just food for his children

AUTHOR: Words: Jim Garland
EARLIEST DATE: 1938
KEYWORDS: unemployment hardtimes work
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 153, "I Don't Want Your Millions, Mister" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 313, "I Don't Want Your Millions Mister" (1 text)
DT, MILLIONMR*
RECORDINGS:
Almanac Singers , "All I Want" (on Almanac04, PeteSeeger01)
Pete Seeger , "I Don't Want Your Millions, Mister" (on PeteSeeger39)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "East Virginia (Dark Hollow)" (tune & meter)
cf. "Greenback Dollar" (tune & meter)
File: LoF153

I Don't Work for a Living

DESCRIPTION: "I don't work for a living, I get along all right without, I don't toil all day, I suppose it's because I'm not built that way." The singer describes all the things he can accomplish if someone else does the work, and describes his relaxed way of living

AUTHOR: James Mullen & Edward Leroy Freeman
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (recording, Hobo Jack Turner)
KEYWORDS: work humorous unemployment
FOUND IN: Australia US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 142-143, "I Don't Work for a Living" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Frank Crumit, "I Don't Work for a Living" (Victor V-40214, 1930)
Walton Dalton, "I Don't Work for a Living" (Perfect 12574, 1930)
Jack Kaufman, "I Don't Work for a Living" (Broadway 8145, n.d. but c. 1930)
Frankie Marvin, "I Don't Work for a Living" (Brunswick 401, 1930); (Conqueror 7449/Romeo 1145 [both as Frankie Wallace], c. 1930)
Hobo Jack Turner [pseud. Ernest Hare], "I Don't Work for a Living" (Velvet Tone 2070-V, 1929)
Pete Wiggins, "I Don't Work for a Living" (OKeh 45412/Parlophone [UK] E-6357, 1930)
File: MCB142

I Drank a Drink

DESCRIPTION: A riddle: "I drank a drink, 'twas since the streen, I drank it from an earthen wall,
Where never earthen it did fall, And through the red gold it did run, And in a garden this was done

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: riddle nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1631, "I Drank a Drink" (1 text)
Roud #13071
NOTES [145 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan8 text.
Greig/Duncan8: "... the solution may relate to an egg...." - BS
I rather doubt this, although my best guess (a fountain with copper pipes) isn't much good either. I suspect the guess about the egg is because the riddle mentions gold, and another well-known riddle refers to "golden treasure" inside an egg. (The "golden treasure" version is from the riddle game in J. R. R. Tolkien's The Hobbit (based on a nursery rhyme). But note that this is RED gold. I'm more reminded of one of the Exeter Book riddles about an oyster -- an oyster in a pond fed by a fountain, perhaps. Or perhaps I'm all wet.
Alternately: A bottle of wine wrapped in foil drunk amid flowers. (And if you think that's bad, remember that there is an Anglo-Saxon riddle for which the suggested answer is "a one-eyed seller of garlic.") - RBW
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD81631

I Drank My Tay at Scatlan Brae

DESCRIPTION: "I drank my tay at Scatlan brae, I shoe't my horse at Biffey, I pu'd a wand in Benwal's yard, And ca'd him hyne [fee servant] to Bruxie"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: farming nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #30, p. 2, ("I drank my tay at Scatlan brae") (1 short text)
Greig/Duncan8 1907, "I Drank My Tay at Scatlan Brae" (1 short text)
Roud #13553
NOTES [35 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan8 text.
Greig, 1908: "... He [another informant] calls them counting out rhymes. I call them just nonsense rhymes, which I learned in Buchan seventy years ago." - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: Grd81907

I Dreamed I Went to the U.N.

DESCRIPTION: "It was a dream, dream I had last night, I dream I went to the U.N. and set the whole nation right." The dreamer resolves the missile crisis. The President asks for his help, but the dreamer prefers to add black singers to help him run the Senate.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (recording, Louisiana Red)
KEYWORDS: dream political
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1962 - October Missile Crisis. Revelation at the United Nations that Russian missiles are in Fidel Castro's Cuba is followed by a confrontation between the Soviet Union -- whose leader was Nikita Krushchev -- and the United States.
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Mississippi Fred McDowell and unidentified musician, "I Dreamed I Went to the U.N." (on USMississippi01)
Louisiana Red, "Red's Dream" (Roulette R-4469, 1962)
NOTES [172 words]: From David Evans's liner notes to USMississippi01: '"I Dreamed I Went to the U.N.' mentions several commercial blues recording artists of the 1960s and is based on a hit record of 1962 by Louisiana Red, but Red's own piece was based on an older recording by Big Bill Broonzy from the 1930s.
The description is based on the Louisiana Red and Fred McDowell tracks.
Evan's reference to a Broonzy recording is to "Big Bill Blues" (Paramount 12656, 1928): "My hair is rising my flesh begins to crawl, I had a dream last night another mule in my doggone stall; Some people said the Big Bill Blues ain't bad, Must not been them Big Bill Blues they had; I wonder what's the matter Papa Bill can't get no mail, The post office must be on fire mail man must undoubtedly be in jail; I can't be your wagon since you ain't going to be a mule, I can't fix up your black tradition I ain't going to be your doggone fool." That may be where Louisiana Red got the idea for "Red's Dream," but I think it's a stretch to make more of it than that. - BS

I Dropped the Baby
DESCRIPTION: "I dropped the baby in the dirt, I asked the baby if it hurt, But all the little thing could say was, 'Waa, waa, waa.'"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (recording, Dorothy Howard)
KEYWORDS: humorous baby
FOUND IN: US(So)
Roud #14046
RECORDINGS:
Dorothy Howard, "I Dropped the Baby" (on USWarnerColl01)

I Eat My Peas with Honey
DESCRIPTION: "I eat my peas with honey, I've done it all my life. It makes my peas taste funny, But it keeps them on the knife."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1969 (NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal)
KEYWORDS: food humorous
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
NOTES [27 words]: The NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal version does not list this as a song, but it seems to me that I've known this for decades, so I'm very tentatively including it. - RBW

I Feel Like My Time AIN't Long
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, de hearse keep a-rollin' somebody to de graveyard (x3), O Lord, I feel like my time ain't long." "Oh, my mother outrun me, an' she gone on to glory." "Lord, I know I'll see that resurrection morning." Similar verses about death and going to heaven
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (collected from Vera Hall)
KEYWORDS: religious death nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 31-32, "I Feel Like My Time AIN't Long" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12317

I Feel So Good
DESCRIPTION: "I feel so good I'm gonna boogie." "I feel all right." "Old folks boogie ... No one can boogie like me and you."

I Fight Mit Sigel

DESCRIPTION: "Dutch dialect" song, describing how a German immigrant came to the United States and worked, apparently with little success, at various occupations. Now he has given it up; "Dey dress me up in soldier clothes To go und fight mit Sigel"

AUTHOR: Words: F. Poole according to Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar

EARLIEST DATE: 1862 (The Double Quick Songster, according to Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar)

KEYWORDS: humorous Civilwar foreigner

FOUND IN: US(MW,So)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
- Randolph 217, "I Fight Mit Sigel" (1 fragmentary text, 1 tune, plus another fragment and tune which might be a chorus)
- Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 210-211, "I Fight Mit Sigel" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 217A)
- Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 78, p. 100, "I'm Going to Fight Mit Slegel" (1 text)
- Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 325-326, "I Goes to Fight mit SIgel" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1016, pp. 69-70, "I'm Going to Fight Mit Sigel" (13 references)

ADDITIONAL: Fred W. Allsopp, Folklore of Romantic Arkansas, Volume II (1931), pp. 222-223, "I Fights Mit Seigle" (1 text)

ST R217 (Partial)

Roud #4867

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- I Goes to Fight Mit Sigal [sic]

NOTES [287 words]: Franz Sigel (1824-1902), a German immigrant, was the leading German in the Union armies in the Civil War. His fame and influence brought many Germans to the colors. Despite having had officer training in Germany, he proved a poor soldier; his performance at Wilson's Creek contributed to the Union's loss of that battle, and his performance at Pea Ridge, though adequate, was hardly exceptional. Transferred to the east after that battle, his troops were badly mauled by "Stonewall" Jackson, and his XI (German) Corps came to be the laughingstock of the Army of the Potomac even before Jackson routed it at Chancellorsville in May 1863.

Sigel had retired from active duty in February of 1863, but his political clout led to him being re-appointed in 1864. Sent to the Shenandoah Valley, his incompetence once again shone through. One wonders if the Germans were as ardent for him in 1864 as they had been in 1861.

Shelby Foote, The Civil War: A Narrative (Volume I: Fort Sumter to Perryville) (Random House, 1958), reports that the phrase "I fights mit Sigel" was popular after Pea Ridge, during the brief time when people might delude themselves into thinking Sigel was a competent soldier.

Cohen reports that this is a parody of an obscure piece "I Fights Mit Sigel," said to be by Grant P. Robinson and printed in Songs of the Soldiers in 1864. It can also be found in Hazel Felleman's The Best Loved Poems of the American People, pp. 439-440.

Alfred M. Williams, Studies in Folk-Song and Popular Poetry, Houghton Mifflin, 1894, p. 47, declares "I'm going to fight mit Siegel" was "extremely popular."

Roud seems to lump this with a completely unrelated piece, "Why Did They Dig Grandmother's
I Found a Horseshoe

DESCRIPTION: "I found a horseshoe, I found a horseshoe, I picked it up and nailed it to a door. And it was rusty and full of nail holes, Good luck 'twill bring you evermore." "The man who owned the horse he lives in New York." "The horse... his name was Mike"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)

KEYWORDS: horse nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 382-383, "I Found a Horseshoe" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #10077

File: San382

I Gave Her Cakes

DESCRIPTION: "I gave her cakes; I gave her ale, I gave her sack and sherry; I kist her once, I kist her twice, And we were wondrous merry." "I gave her beads and bracelets fine...." "Merry my heard, merry my cocks... Merry my hey down derry... we were wondrous merry."

AUTHOR: Henry Purcell (1659-1695)

EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Scott); reported to have been composed 1690 (source: Wikipedia, as of Oct. 17, 2013)

KEYWORDS: courting love food drink nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scott-EnglishSongBook, pp. 18-19, 'Catch" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [28 words]: This is a composed "catch," and has not been found in tradition that I know of, but it has been recorded by several "folk" performers, so I decided to include it. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.2

File: SESC018

I Gave My Love a Cherry

DESCRIPTION: The singer gave his love "a cherry without a stone... a chicken without a bone," etc. He is asked how these things are possible. The reply: "A cherry when it's blooming, it has no stone," etc.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1430 (British Library, Sloane MS. 2593, "I have a yong suster")

KEYWORDS: riddle nonballad love gift MiddleEnglish

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South,West),Scotland) Canada(Mar) US(Ap,MW,NE,SE,So)

REFERENCES (50 citations):
Bronson (46), 18 versions given as an appendix to "Captain Wedderburn's Courtship"
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads (48), "Riddle Song" (5 versions: #1, #2a, #3, #7, #14, #16)
Hirsh-MedievalLyric-MiddleEnglishLyricsBalladsCarols #33, "(I haue a yong susten)" (1 text; p. 39 has a photograph of the Sloane Manuscript text)
Randolph 123, "The Four Brothers" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 12, "Captain Wedderburn's Courtship" (1 text plus mention of another, but it is nothing but riddles and not to be connected with Child #46)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 12, "Captain Wedderburn's Courtship" (3 excerpts, 3 tunes, all of which appear to be this song and not "Captain Wedderburn")
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 16 pp. 30-31, "I Gave My Love a Cherry (Captain Wedderburn's Courtship)" (1 text, 1 tune, which despite the second title consists solely of the riddles)
Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. 230-231, "Captain Wedderburn's Courtship"
Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #65, "I Have a Young Sister" (1 text); notes to #258 ("I have three presents from over the sea") (1 excerpt)
Richard M. Dorson, _Buying the Wind: Regional Folklore in the United States_, University of Chicago Press, 1964, pp. 393-394, "I Have Four Brothers" (1 text)
MANUSCRIPT: {MSSloane2593}, London, British Library, MS. Sloane 2593, folio 11
Roud #330 and 36
RECORDINGS:
Pete Seeger, "The Riddle Song" (on PeteSeeger18)
Tony Wales, "Piri-iri-igdum" (on TWales1)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Captain Wedderburn's Courtship" [Child 46]
cf. "Riddles Wisely Expounded" [Child 1]
ALTERNATE TITLES:
I Have a Young Sister
Perri Merri Dictum, Domine
NOTES [637 words]: Certain scholars have seen this as a worn-down form of "Captain Wedderburn's Courtship" [Child 46]. Since, however, it goes back at least to 1430, the dependency is if anything in the other direction. But there is no real reason to believe they are related in any but a casual way; riddle songs were popular for a long time. Still, because many scholars list versions of this song under "Captain Wedderburn," one should check both songs for complete references. "Go No More A-Rushing" (DT GONORUSH) appears to be an Elizabethan prologue tacked on to the old song.

In modern English and in far eastern folklore, cherries are associated with sex. Whether that has any significance here I do not know.

Various scholars have tried to wring meaning out of the nonsense "Piri-miri-dictum Domini" refrain. The third and fourth words can become Latin (dictum=word and Domine of course is the word for "Lord"). I've not seen a convincing Latin explanation for "piri" and "miri," however.
On the other hand, some sources, e.g. the Opies, offer "Perrie merrie Dixie dominie." This suggests "peri mare," i.e. "around (the) sea" (Latin mar-e, not "mare"), which makes sense given the reference to the sister beyond the sea. But, note, this refrain isn't in the Sloane MS. version. For more on the Sloane manuscript, which contains the original "I haue a ong suster / fer be- ondyn e se / many be e drowryis / at che sente me" text, see the notes to "Robyn and Gandeleyn" [Child 115].

Robbins, in his notes on this text on pp. 240-241, cites several Middle English parallels to paradoxical riddles; although none of these seem to survive to this day, it would appear the genre was fairly well known.

There is a Middle English poem, "Parche Michi Domine," which occurs in seven manuscripts; it is #561 and #3714 in the Brown/Robbins _Index of Middle English Verse_. But it is described as an "allegory of the bird with four feathers." Rigg, p. 53, gives a couple of verses:
By a foreste syde walking as y went,
Dysport to take yn a morning

. . .

God grawnte vs all to se they blessyd face
That seyth Parce michi domine.

This poem is in stanzas of eight to twenty lines; I don't think it related, except that perhaps the refrain inspired something. - RBW

Re "cherries are associated with sex," see Barre Toelken, "Context and Meaning in the Anglo-American Ballad" in _The Ballad and the Scholars: Approaches to Ballad Study_ (Los Angeles: William Andrews Clark Memorial Library University of California, 1986), pp. 37-38, in which Toelken reports hearing the song sung at a North Carolina family picnic as a dialog between "a young couple who were about to be married"; she sings "I gave my love a cherry...", he sings "I gave my love a chicken that had no bone," [and you can play out the rest of the dialog yourself] while the group at the picnic "exchanged knowing glances, nudges in the ribs, and suppressed looks of modesty surprised." Toelken continues, referring only to this context for the performance, "Each line is not only a potential reference to flowers, food, marriage, or family. In addition, we see in the sequence (cherry-egg[!?"chicken"=cock?]~ring-baby=virginity-impregnation-marriage-baby, the metaphor and its referent integrated by the couple's singing the last line together ["And a baby when it's making has no crying"]) a fairly accurate portrayal of a well-known courtship pattern in the Anglo-American world." - BS

Interestingly, the Sloane Manuscript, which has the first copy of the song, DOES contain a few other double-entendre pieces, such as "I Have a Gentle Cock," in which the cock is presented as a bird but also as... you know (see Boklund-Lagopolou, p. 72). But a much larger share of the contents are religious, so I am hesitant to try to dig too deeply for deliberate sexual messages. - RBW

Bibliography

- Boklund-Lagopolou: Karin Boklund-Lagopolou, I have a yong suster: Popular song and Middle English lyric, Four Courts Press, 2002

Last updated in version 6.1
File: R123

I Give Thee All (My Heart and Lute)

DESCRIPTION: "I give thee all -- I can no more -- Though poor the off'ring be; My heart and lute are all the store That I can bring to thee." "Though love and song may fail, alas! To keep life's clouds away, At least will let them lighter pass."

AUTHOR: Words: Thomas Moore (1779-1852) / Music: Sir Henry Rowley Bishop EARLIEST DATE: 1856 (_The Poetical Works of Thomas Moore_, 1856 edition)

KEYWORDS: love music

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

ADDITIONAL: [Thomas Moore], _The Poetical Works of Thomas Moore: A New Edition_, 1856 (available on Google Books), p. 345, "My Heart and Lute" (1 text)

NOTES [266 words]: I am including this on the thinnest of thin speculations. The poem "My Heart and Lute" is by Thomas Moore -- but it is not one of his more popular pieces. It is not found in the 1846 edition of _Moore's Irish Melodies_, and although _Granger's Index to Poetry_ catalogs about a hundred Moore poems, this isn't one of them. I know of no traditional collections. Obviously it has been nearly forgotten.

But we know that this is the tune Lewis Carroll meant to use for the White Knight's Song ("Haddock's Eyes," etc.). Obviously Carroll knew it, and obviously he thought the Liddells knew it too. The context seems to imply that Carroll thought it a rather folk-like song. Given the importance of the White Knight's song, and the preceding discussion of names, I'm including the song because, even if it isn't traditional, it's IMPORTANT.

(Although the tune for Carroll's piece is this, Sidney Herbert Williams and Falconer Madan, revised and augmented by Roger Lancelyn Green, further revised by Denis Crutch, _The Lewis Carroll Handbook_ (earlier editions titled _A Handbook of the Literature of the Rev. C. L. Dodgson_, 1932, 1961, 1970); Dawson Books, 1979, p. 313, say that the words are a distant paraphrase of Wordsworth's 1807 poem "Resolution and Independence, or the Leech-Gatherer," and that Dodgson had published an earlier version of the poem in 1856).

It is interesting that the White Knight claimed the tune as his own invention, although Alice at once knew it was not. It's almost as if Carroll anticipated the dubious copyright claims of early twentieth century songwriters.... - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
File: TTLGHadE

I Got a Bonnet Trimmed with Blue

DESCRIPTION: "I got a bonnet trimmed with blue Which I like to wear and so I do, Oh I do wear it when I can Oh when I go out with my man." The rest is all "chin music"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1897 (Hinkson)

KEYWORDS: courting clothes nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England) Canada(Newf) Ireland

REFERENCES (6 citations):

Greig "Folk-Song in Buchan," p. 14, ("Can you dance the polka? Yes I can") (1 fragment)
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 70, "I Have a Bonnet Trimmed With Blue" (1 text, 2 tunes)
I Got a Gal in Baltimore

DESCRIPTION: "I got a gal in Baltimore, Street-car runs right by her door, Crazy baby a-settin' on the floor, Get your hair cut pompadour!" Play-party version, "She's the belle of Baltimore, She's got her name wrote on her door, And a 40 dollar carpet on the floor."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, The Georgia Crackers)

KEYWORDS: technology hair playparty home

FOUND IN: US(SE,So)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Randolph 452, "I Got a Gal in Baltimore" (1 fragment)
Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty, p. 70, "Baltimore" (1 text, 1 tune)
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, Portia Naomi Crawford, "A Study of Negro Folk Songs from Greensboro, North Carolina and Surrounding Towns," Vol. XVI, No. 2 (Oct 1968), pp. 108-109, "I Got a Little Woman" (1 text, 1 tune, starting with "I got a little woman in Baltimore" and mixing in floating material about what the jay bird said to the crow)

Roud #7601

RECORDINGS:
Georgia Crackers "I've Got a Gal in Baltimore" (OKeh 45192, 1928; rec. 1927)

NOTES [122 words]: Randolph, taking a lead from Spaeth (in Read 'Em and Weep, p. 146 [Randolph prints 166 in error]), thinks this may be connected to "Ta-ra-ra boom-de-ay." The form suggests a connection to "Old Joe Clark" or a relative. But until we have more text to work with, any conclusions are shaky. - RBW

Well, here's a bit more [a second half-verse to the half-verse above]: "She don't wear no -- yes, she do/She don't wear no Sunday shoes." The tune is nothing like either "Old Joe Clark" or "Ta-Ra-Ra-Boom-De-Ay"; it's a string-ragtime sort of tune. - PJS

Which, however, still leaves us with only a single verse.... Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty has a clear playparty version with more words, but I suspect it came later. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1
I Got a Girl

DESCRIPTION: "I got a girl, she lives in town. She wrote me a letter, she's a comin' down." "Down the road and across the creek, I ain't had a letter since away last week." "I do red she ain't no fool, Tryin' to put a saddle on a hump-backed mule."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: love animal
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 448, "I Got a Girl, "" (1 short text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 448, "I Got a Girl" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #11791
NOTES [21 words]: Almost certainly a fragment of something more detailed -- but I've no idea what. - RBW
Ida Red? Pretty close to "I do red." - PJS
Last updated in version 4.1

I Got a Key to the Kingdom

DESCRIPTION: "Preacher, I got de key of de kingdom, De world can't do me no harm... Watch your secret keeper, Always bringin' you news, Tell a lie upon you And keep you all confuse','" The singer warns of false friends but doesn't think they matter

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (cf. Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 587, "I Got a Key of De Kingdom" (1 text)
Roud #11829
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "This Is the Key of the Kingdom" (lyric)

I Got a Letter from Jesus

DESCRIPTION: "I got a letter from Jesus, Ahah, ahah, I got a letter, I got a letter, I got a letter from Jesus, Mm--, mm--.""

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)
KEYWORDS: Jesus religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 487, "I Got a Letter from Jesus" (1 short text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I've a Letter from My Father" (theme)

I Got Mine

DESCRIPTION: The singer gets into all sorts of scrapes, getting out in some manner while maintaining "I got mine." Example: The police raid a craps game in which the singer is involved. He grabs the pot and successfully makes off.

AUTHOR: John Queen and Charles Cartwell
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (recording, Collins & Natus)
KEYWORDS: gambling chickens robbery trial escape trick
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 52, "I Got Mine" (1 text)
Gilbert-LostChords, p. 243, "I Got Mine" (1 partial text)
DT, IGOTMINE
Roud #7852
RECORDINGS:
Chris Bouchillon, "I Got Mine" (Columbia 15317-D, 1928)
Fiddlin' John Carson, "I Got Mine" (OKeh 40119, 1924)
The Four Aces, "I Got Mine" (BB-7548/Montgomery Ward M-7723, 1938)
Mississippi John Hurt, "I Got Mine" (on MJHurt05)
Bill Chitwood & Bud Landress, "I Got Mine" (Brunswick 2810/Silvertone 3049, c. 1925; rec. 1924)
Fleming & Townsend, "Yes, I Got Mine" (Victor 23676, 1932)
Jenkins Family, "I Got Mine" (OKeh 40247, 1924)
John McGhee, "I Got Mine" (Gennett 6403, 1928)
Peg Moreland, "I Got Mine" (Victor 23510, 1930)
Jesse Oakley, "I Got Mine" (Supertone 9256, 1928)
Frank Stokes "I Got Mine" (Victor V-38512, 1929; rec. 1928; on GoodForWhatAilsYou, Protobilly)
Gid Tanner & his Skillet Lickers, "I Got Mine" (Columbia 15134-D, 1927; rec. 1926)
Unknown baritone & tenor [probably Collins and Natus] "I Got Mine" (CYL: Standard 597, c. 1901) [this is probably from the same recording session as their Climax record]
NOTES [122 words]: The Digital Tradition footnotes claim that this is from McNeil's Southern Folk Ballads. This is incorrect; I have not been able to discover the source of the DT version. - RBW Perhaps the DT transcription came from the Carson recording? Or, more likely, from one of the several revival performances of the song, such as Roy Bookbinder's. - PJS Brown's text seems to be a racist version of the original (or other texts are cleaned up); the singer devotes his efforts to cheating "coons." - RBW Looking at the sheet music on the American Memory website makes it clear that the other texts were cleaned up; this was originally a "coon song." It was recorded by a duo that was probably Collins & Natus, who specialized in "coon songs." - PJS Last updated in version 5.1
File: Gill243

I Got My Questionnairy

DESCRIPTION: "Well I got my questionnairy, and it leads me to the war (x2), Well, I'm leavin', pretty baby. Child, can't do anything at all." "Uncle Sam ain't no woman, but he sure can take your man (x2), Boys, they got them in the service...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1963
KEYWORDS: war soldier separation infidelity love separation floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, p. 137, "(I Got My Questionnairy)" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, DRAFTBLU*
RECORDINGS:
Robert Dennis, "Questionnaire Blues" (on USFlorida01)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Draftee's Blues
Uncle Sam Blues
NOTES [139 words]: A revival version of this song, performed by the band Hot Tuna under the title of "Uncle Sam Blues," became popular during the Viet Nam war. -PJS The blues form of the [Robert Dennis] USFlorida01 track is aab. The text may be summarized as follows: I got my questionnairy ready and they need me in the war," "What you gonna do when they send your man to war? Drink muddy water sleep in a hollow log." "She's a mean mistreating mama and she don't mean me no good I'd be the same way if I could.
First verse is modified from Arthur "Big Boy" Crudup "Give Me a 32-20" (Bluebird B9019, 1942)
Second verse is shared with Blind Lemon Jefferson "Wartime Blues" (Paramount 12425, 1926)
Third verse is shared with Tampa Red "Mean Mistreater Blues" (Bluebird B5546, 1934) and Leroy Carr "Mean Mistreater Mama" (Columbia C30496, 1934) - BS, (RBW)
Last updated in version 4.2
File: CNFM137

I Got to Roll
DESCRIPTION: "Ham and eggs, pork and beans, I woulda et more, but the cook wasn't clean." "I got to roll, roll in a hurry, Make it on the side of the road." "If I'd-a known my Captain was blind... If I'd known my Captain was bad... If I'd known my Captain was mean..."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry)
KEYWORDS: chainingang work hardtimes prison
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 390-391, "I Got to Roll" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 292, "I Got to Roll" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, GORTROLL*
Roud #6713
File: LoF292

I Had a Heart that Doted Once
DESCRIPTION: "I had a heart that doted once In passion's boundless pain, An' though the tyrant I abjured, I could not break his chain."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: love
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 616, "I Had a Heart that Doted Once" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #7553
File: R616

I Had a Little Horse Whose Name Was Jack DESCRIPTION: "I had a little horse whose name was Jack, Put him in the stable and he jumped through the crack."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: horse
FOUND IN: US(SE,So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 176, "I Had a Little Horse Whose Name Was Jack" (1 short text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Had a Little Pony (I)"
cf. "I Had a Little Pony (II)" (lyrics)
NOTES [145 words]: The notes in Brown connect this with the English nursery rhyme, "I had a little pony, his name was Dapple Gray." This is possible -- but only that. - RBW
I don't see the connection either but Brown is refering to Opie/Opie-
OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 127, "I had a little pony" or--less likely--Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 223, "I had a little horse." [See also Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 12, 25, and especially Baring-Gould-
AnnotatedMotherGoose #157, pp. 118-119, about dapple gray, and notes there. - RBW]
There seems a more complete version from Texas at the Real Live Preacher site in Finding the
I Had a Little Lairdie
DESCRIPTION: The singer had a little manikin/husband/lairdie. She dressed him, and sent him riding to town on her thumb (or he's no bigger than her thumb). She sent him to the garden for sage but found him kissing Madge in the kitchen.

AUTHOR: unknown
KEYWORDS: nonsense husband wife
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #161, p. 2, ("I had a little lairdie That sat upo' my thoom") (1 fragment)
Greig-Duncan8 1563, "I Had a Little Lairdie" (1 text)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 234, "I had a little husband" (2 texts)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #64, p. 70, "(I had a little husband)"
ADDITIONAL: Robert Chambers, The Popular Rhymes of Scotland (Edinburgh, 1870 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 21, ("I got a little manikin, I set him on my thoomikin")
Robert Chambers (Edited by Norah and William Montgomerie), Traditional Scottish Nursery Rhymes (1990 selected from Popular Rhymes) #104, p. 64, ("I gat a little mannikin, I set him on my thoomikin")
Roud #12962
NOTES [81 words]: The inimitable Katherine Elwes Thomas claims that the little husband was Philip II of Spain, one of whose four wives was Mary Tudor, the first reigning queen of England (1553-1558). It's certainly true that Philip II quickly abandoned Mary, but that seems an insufficient reason to link that event to this much later song. Halliwell made the much more reasonable suggestion that this is part of the tale of Tom Thumb, and cites a Danish parallel. Still, even this is just speculation. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.6

File: GrD81563

I Had a Little Nut Tree
DESCRIPTION: "I had a little nutmeg, nothing would it bear But a silver nutmeg and a golden pear. The King of Spain's daughter came to visit me And all for the sake of my little nut tree." "Her dress was all of crimson.... She asked me for my nutmeg...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland); first printing appears to have been in one of the Tom Thumb songbooks (n.d. but c. 1790)
KEYWORDS: royalty food courting
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 210-211, "I Had a Little Nut Tree" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 381, "I had a little nut tree" (2 texts)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #130, p. 106, "(I had a little nut tree)"
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 83, "I Had a Little Nut Tree" (1 text)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 53, "I Had a Little Nut Tree" (1 text)
Roud #3749
NOTES [680 words]: Folklorists, ever desperate for an event upon which to hang a song, have connected this to the visit of Juana (Joanna) of Castile (the future Juana the Mad, 1479-1555, queen of Castile from 1505), the mother of the future Emperor Charles V, who visited England in 1506 during the reign of Henry VII. Apparently, according to the Opies, this hypothesis was adopted in Edith Sitwell's 1946 _Fanfare for Elizabeth_, who pictures it being sung to the daughters of Henry VIII.
This has the usual problems. For starters, Juana's father Ferdinand of Aragon was not King of Spain; he was King of Aragon, and it was not until Juana succeeded him in 1516 that Spain was properly a united kingdom. (Though, in fairness, Ferdinand was regent of Castile after his wife's death, so one might loosely call him King of Spain.)

Problem #2 is the dating; there is no hint of the existence of the song at the time of Juana's visit (although see below on "I have a new garden").

Problem #3 is the word "nutmeg"; the nutmeg tree grows natively only in parts of the Molucca Islands. Europeans didn't even discover them until the late sixteenth century (see the notes to "Of All the Birds"), and they could not have been known in England at the time of Juana's visit. Possibly there was some word other than "nutmeg" used in the original version, or there was a meaning for "nutmeg" which has been so completely forgotten that it does not appear in dictionaries, but if so, what?

It's also worth noting that, even if you project this song back 250 years before the earliest known version, there is still no real reason to connect it to Juana. Why not connect it to, say, Catherine of Aragon, Juana's sister, who happened to marry the son of Henry VII? (Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, in fact does so.)

In the incidentals department: I learned this song somewhere along the line, I think from my mother, and my tune is not Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland's (and I know of no other printed traditional tune).

There is even a faint hint that the idea predates the Tudors. Karin Boklund-Lagopolou, I have a yong suster: Popular song and Middle English lyric, Four Courts Press, 2002, p. 72, prints a much earlier piece which begins

I have a newe garden and new is begunne;
Swych another gardyn know I not under sunne.
In the myddis of my garden is a peryr set
And it wele none bere bern but a pere jenet.
The fayrest mayd of this toun preid me
For to gryffyn here a gryt of myn pery tre.
(Index of Middle English Verse #1302)

In other words,
I have a new garden, and new is begun;
Such another garden know I not under sun.
In the middle of my garden is a pear [tree] set,
And it will no pears bear but an early pear.
The fairest maid of this town prayed (=begged) me
For to graft her a graft/shoot of her pear tree.

Boklund-Lagopolou, p. 73, sees clear kinship of that poem to this, and I agree. And it comes from the Sloane Manuscript (British Library Sloane 2593), from the fifteenth century, which also contains "I have a yong suster," the earliest version of "I Gave My Love a Cherry," and quite a few other pieces in the Index. For this manuscript, see the notes to "Robyn and Gandeleyn" [Child 115].

Boklund-Lagopolou, p. 78, regards it as sort of a near-ballad that got deflected into a children's piece; that seems a little more speculative.

Boklund-Lagopolou, p. 73, observes that, in Chaucer's "Merchant's Tale," the two lovers go at it in a pear tree, and so suggests that pear trees were associated with sex. I'm not particularly convince by that argument, either; it doesn't seem to be mentioned in the Chaucer commentaries I checked. Whatever the origin of this item, it has inspired various imitations and parodies. Walter de la Mare, Come Hither, revised edition, 1928; #208, prints two under the collective title "Two Nut Trees." The first, credited to "Thomas Anon," simply adds a few lines. The second, by Edith Sitwell, is an independent poem about "The King of China's daughter," but clearly dependent upon this, because it also mentions nutmeg trees and the courting of the princess. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: Lins210

I Had a Little Pony (I)

DESCRIPTION: "I had a little pony, I rode him down town. And ev'ry time I turned him round, Turn him on an acre ground! Boots and show-line come down, Lady show-line come down; Boots and show-line come down, Lady show-line come down."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
I Had a Little Pony (II)

DESCRIPTION: "I had a little (pony/mule), His name was Jack; I rid his tail To save his back." "The lightning roll, the thunder flash, And split my coat-tail clear to smash."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: animal
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 184, (no title) (1 fragment, with only the first four lines); p. 185 (no title) (1 fragment, adding the "lightning roll" verse; I have a feeling those two floated together)
Roud #16341
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Had a Little Horse Whose Name Was Jack"
cf. "I Had a Little Pony (I)"
NOTES [64 words]: This might be a variant on any of several things -- the Brown piece "I Had a Little Horse Whose Name Was Jack"; the English folk poem "I had a little pony, his name was Dapple Gray" (for which see Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes, #127, and Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #157, pp. 118-119 and notes there); perhaps others. But all such links are just possibilities. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.5
File: ScNF184B

I Had a Little Puppy (Pussy Willow, Hot Dog)

DESCRIPTION: Riddle-song, with a description of something (cat, dog, etc.) that actually describes something else. E.g., "I had a little puppy, it had a stubby tail... you buy it at a butcher's shop" (describing a hot dog)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972
KEYWORDS: wordplay riddle nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 68, "Pussy Willow" (1 text, tune described but not printed)
Roud #10248
NOTES [65 words]: There are a whole class of songs of this sort. I learned "I had a little puppy" somewhere in an (obviously mis-spent) youth, and also heard "pussy willow" many years ago. Both use the same tune (or, rather, tune device: Each word in a line sung to a single note, with each line one note higher than the preceding). I imagine there are more of these things around. I'll just lump them here. - RBW
File: PHCFS068

I Had a Little Rooster (Farmyard Song)

DESCRIPTION: The singer enjoys the company of various animals, e.g. "I had a little rooster by the barnyard gate, And that little rooster was my playmate, And that little rooster went Cock-a-doodle-doo...." And so forth, cumulatively, for various animals

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1849 (Halliwell)
KEYWORDS: animal cumulative nonballad farming humorous chickens sheep horse dog
FOUND IN: Britain(England(All),Scotland(Aber)) Ireland US(Ap,SE,So) Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (33 citations):
Randolph 352, "I Bought Me a Rooster" (4 texts, 2 tunes)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 290-291, "I Bought Me a Rooster" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 352A)
McNeil-SouthernMountainFolksong, pp. 126-129, "I Bought Me a Cat" (1 text, 1 tune)
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 126, "Greenwood Trees" (1 fragment, 1 tune); p. 140, "Had a Little Rooster" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 124, "Barnyard Song" (1 text plus 3 excerpts and mention of 2 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 124, "Barnyard Song" (3 tunes plus text excerpts)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #219, "The Farmyard" (1 text)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 192, "The Farmyard" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wyman/Brockway-LonesomeSongs-KentuckyMountains-Vol1, p. 6, "The Barnyard Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 284-285, "Here's Luck to All My Cocks and Hens" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Ox 202)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 42, "Farmyard Song" (1 text)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 297, "I Bought Myself a Cock" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hamer-GarnersGay, pp. 66-67, "I Had a Little Cock" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #115, "I Went to Market" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, pp. 164-165, "The Barnyard Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #100, "The Cat Played Fiddle on My Fee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Thomas-DevilsDitties, pp. 156-157, "The Barnyard" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 218, "The Farmyard" (1 text)
Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 78, "The Farmyard" (1 text, 1 tune -- a composite version)
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 117, "I Had a Little Cock" (1 text, 1 tune)
Richardson/Spaeth-AmericanMountainSongs, p. 77, "Bought a Cow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan8 1666, "I Bocht a Hennie" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #159, p. 2, "I Haed a Hennie" (1 text)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 230, "Fiddle-I-Fee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Chase-AmericanFolkTalesAndSongs, pp. 171-174, "Fiddle-i-Fee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #48, "My Household" (1 short text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 387, "I Had a Rooster" (1 text)
Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 21-24, "Bought Me a Cat" (1 text)
Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 13, "(I had a wee cock and I loved it well)" (1 text)
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, Dan Patterson, "A Sheaf of North Carolina Folksongs," Vol. IV, No. 1 (Jul 1956), pp. 28, "I Had a Little Rooster" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, ROOSTR2 (I HAD A WEE COCK), ROOSTR3 (BOUGHT ME A CAT), ROOSTR4 (I HAD A ROOSTER), ROOSTR5 (LITTLE ROOSTER)
ADDITIONAL: Robert Chambers, The Popular Rhymes of Scotland (Edinburgh, 1870 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 31-32, "My Cock, Lily-Cock" ("I had a wee cock, and I loved it well, I fed my cock on yonder hill")
Robert Chambers (Edited by Norah and William Montgomerie), Traditional Scottish Nursery Rhymes (1990 selected from Popular Rhymes) #15, pp. 18-19, ("I had a henny")
Roud #544
RECORDINGS:
George Blackman, "I Bought Myself a Cock" (on FSB10)
John Curtis, "Farmyard" (on NFMLeach)
Maud Long, "Fiddle-i-Fee" (AFS; on LC14)
Jamesie McCarthy, "Kerry Cock" (on IRClare01)
Marieo Perkins, "I Love My Rooster" (on JThomas01)
Pete Seeger, "Bought Me a Cat" (on PeteSeeger03, PeteSeegerCD03); "I Had a Rooster" (on PeteSeeger08, PeteSeegerCD02)
Asher Sizemore & Little Jimmie, "My Little Rooster" (Bluebird B-5495, 1934)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Le Marche des Animaux (The Animal Market)" (theme and structure)
I Had a Wife

DESCRIPTION: Singer describes how he got rid of his wife by chopping off her head. Without evidence, the killing is ruled an "act of providence." Listeners are advised to follow the singer's example.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (recording, Pete Seeger)

KEYWORDS: marriage violence homicide death wife humorous

I Had But Fifty Cents

DESCRIPTION: The singer takes a girl to the ball. He thinks, since she is so delicate, that it is safe to take her to a restaurant, even though he has but fifty cents. But she orders a huge meal. The singer, unable to pay, is beaten up by the restaurant staff.

AUTHOR: Words: Billy Mortimer; Music: Dan Lewis

EARLIEST DATE: 1881 (sheet music, with the title "Fifty Cents")

KEYWORDS: food money poverty courting

NOTES: A piece entitled "Fifty Cents," by Billy Mortimer and Dan Lewis, was published in 1881. Paul Stamler has verified that this is the same song. This is the text published, e.g., by Emerson-StephenFosterAndCo. There are songster versions which appear to be from the late 1870s, but they cannot be precisely dated. - PJS, RBW

Last updated in version 5.1
I Had the Scarlet Fever
DESCRIPTION: "I had the scarlet fever, I had it very bad." The singer is taken to the hospital and wants to be taken home. Doctor Glannister slides down the bannister and rips his pants, or Doctor Brown asks silly questions all around.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
KEYWORDS: playparty doctor
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 138, "I Had the Scarlet Fever" (3 texts)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Am a Pretty Little Dutch Girl" (tune, per Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
File: OpGa138

I Hae ae Bit Son
DESCRIPTION: "I hae ae bit son, my gallant young Donald, Although I had ten, they'd a' follow Glengarry." She toasts the men who follow Prince Charlie. (S)he will go to Lochiel and the other leaders, "For these are the men that would die for their Charlie."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: Early 19th Century (Hogg's "Border Garland"")
KEYWORDS: soldier separation Jacobite
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1720-1788 - Life of Charles Edward Stuart, "Bonnie Prince Charlie," the Young Pretender, eldest son of James Stuart the "Old Pretender"
Jul 23, 1745 - Bonnie Prince Charlie lands on Eriskay
Aug 19, 1745 - "Gathering of the Clans." Official raising of the standard at Glenfinnan
Apr 16, 1746 - Battle of Culloden Muir ends the 1745 Jacobite rebellion
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Porter/Gower-Jeannie-Robertson-EmergentSingerTransformativeVoice #29, p. 164, "I Hae ae Bit Son" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7287
File: RP6029

I Hae Been at a Far Awa' Weddin'
DESCRIPTION: The singer went to a wedding and danced with and kissed "a bonnie young lassie An' I hae ne'er been well sinsyne" If she would fancy him he would marry her.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan7)
KEYWORDS: love wedding dancing nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1321, "I Hae Been at a Far Awa' Weddin"" (5 texts, 4 tunes)
Roud #7212
File: GrD71321

I Hae Layen Three Herrings a Sa't (I Cannot Come Every Day to Woo)
DESCRIPTION: A young man steps up to a girl and says, "If you'll love me, love me now." He says he has a home and lands and pays (two penny) rent. He can come courting only occasionally. He gives other monotonous details. The outcome of the courtship is not told
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1611 (_Melismata, Musical phansies ...._ according to Dixon-AncientPoemsBalladsSongsOfThePeasantryOfEngland)
I Hate That Train Called the M & O

DESCRIPTION: "I hate that train that they all call the M and O (x2), It took my baby away, and he ain't comin' back to me no more." Her man sticks his head out the window and says "I'm going away, baby." She wishes the train had not parted them

AUTHOR: unknown, but probably adapted by Lucille Bogan

EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (recording, Lucille Bogan)

KEYWORDS: train separation

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 444-445, "I Hate That Train Called the M & O" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
Lucille Bogan, "I Hate That Train Called the M. and O." (Banner 6-02--04/Oriole 6-02-04/Melotone 6-02-04/Perfect 6-02-04, 1936; rec. 1934)

File: LSRai444

I Have a Dog

DESCRIPTION: "I have a dog, I call him Pen; He's just as smart as lots of men. He goes with me to feed the cow...." "He will bound around, bark and yelp." "He makes the cats walk the chalk, And it does seem he tries to talk... He can already say 'bow-wow-wow.'"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Henry, from Mrs. L. S. Eams)

KEYWORDS: dog nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 226, "I Have a Dog" (1 text)

File: MHAp226

I Have a Father Gone to Glory (I Am Alone in this World)

DESCRIPTION: "I have a father gone to glory, I am alone in this world. I have a father gone to glory, I am alone.... Take me home, bless the Savior, take me home." Repeat with mother, sister, etc. with a conclusion that there is room in heaven for all.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Henry, from Granville Gadsey)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad home

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 201-202, "I Have a Father Gone to Glory" (1
Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #44, "I'm All Alone in This World" (1 text, 1 tune)
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, p. 79, "I'm All Alone" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4213, 3407, and 7519

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Other Bright Shore" (lyrics)

NOTES [112 words]: Roud lumps this with "Where Is Old Elijah? (The Hebrew Children, The Promised Land)," which seems a bit strong, and also with "The Other Bright Shore" and other material. The link to "The Other Bright Shore" is obvious, but there are no shores of any sort in Henry's version, so I think they have to be separated. I do, however, think it is the same as Roberts-SangBranchSettlers's #44 and the Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle piece, although Roud assigns different numbers to all of them. Roberts lumps his piece with a piece in Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates. Which just shows how hard it is to classify all these "Life is lousy but I'M going to heaven" pieces. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3
File: MHAp201

I Have a Father in My Native Land

DESCRIPTION: "I have a father in my native land, Oh, he's looking for me tonight, night, night, Oh, he's looking for me tonight." "He may look, he may look with his withering watery eyes, And it's oh, he may look to the bottom of the sea, sea, sea...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: sailor death father separation mourning
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 231, "I Have a Father in My Native Land" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 231, "I Have a Father in My Native Land" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "He Lies in the American Land" (theme)
File: Br3231

I Have a Little Home to Go To

DESCRIPTION: "If I was a young man and had no home like you, I'd marry me a wife if she was the plague of my life, And have a little home to go to." "How can a young man stay at home when the girls all look so well?" The singer looks forward to settling down

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (High-OldOldFolkSongs)
KEYWORDS: nonballad home wife courting
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
High-OldOldFolkSongs, p 23, "I Have a Little Home to Go To" (1 text)
File: High023

I Have a Loving Sister

DESCRIPTION: "I have a loving sister to be bap-per-tized (x3), Who loves a dying lamb." "Move along, move along, God give you wings to move along." Presumably repeated with brother, etc.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 243, "I Have a Loving Sister" (1 short text)
Roud #18157
NOTES [37 words]: The image of Jesus as the Lamb of God is stated in John 1:29, and the Lamb is a major character in the Apocalypse (book of Revelation), starting in chapter 5, although there are no direct references to the "dying lamb." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2
File: KiWa243

I Have a Sister, the Flower o' Manchester

DESCRIPTION: "I have a sister, the flower o' Manchester, I have a sister in the low counterie; I have gold and I have silver, Well rewarded will you be"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan8)

KEYWORDS: money sister

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1792, "I Have a Sister, the Flower o' Manchester" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

Roud #12995

NOTES [11 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan8 fragment. - BS

Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD81792

I Have Another Building

DESCRIPTION: "I know I have another building, I know it's not made with hands." "I haven't been to heaven, But I've been told, Not made with hands, That the streets are pearl and the gates are gold. 'Some of these mornings bright and fair, Going to meet my Jesus...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad home

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro, pp. 61-62, "I Have Another Building" (1 text)

Roud #11959

NOTES [28 words]: Revelation 21:21 says that the gates of the New Jerusalem are of pearl and the streets are of gold; Work's version appears to recall this verse but have it backward. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0
File: FSAN061A

I Have Been a Foster (The Old Forester)

DESCRIPTION: "I have been a foster (forester), long and many a day," but now he is laying down his bow. He will leave it on the greenwood bough, for he cannot shoot as he once did. Venus has left him behind; he can only watch as others find pleasure

AUTHOR: unknown (musical setting by Robert Cooper)

EARLIEST DATE: before 1700 (British Library, MS. Additional 31922)

KEYWORDS: age disability sex MiddleEnglish

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols, #465, pp. 313-314, "(Hange I wyl my nobyl bow vpon the grenewod bough)" (1 text)
Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic I, p. 50, "I Have Been a Foster" (1 partial text, 1 tune -- the chorus only; it is not clear if it is this or the version that says the forester will not retire)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #1303.5
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #2176

MANUSCRIPT: London, British Library, MS. Additional 31922, folio 65

NOTES [220 words]: This occurs in only one manuscript, which would ordinarily not be sufficient reason to include it in the Index -- especially as the manuscript containing it does not seem to contain any other demonstrably folk material. The manuscript is clearly of the sixteenth century (Greene says the first half of that century), containing as it does several pieces by Henry VIII. It also has several holly-and-ivy and greenwood pieces -- it almost makes me wonder if it isn't an attempt to fake a collection of rustic songs. (It includes musical notation as well as texts.) But Chappell decided to include this piece in his collection, and Greene thinks the chorus, at least, is borrowed, perhaps from a folk song. It sounds that way to me, too. Plus Greene's #466/DIMEV #2175 (from the same manuscript) seems to be an answer, or perhaps a preface. And Greene's notes record another poem, not a carol but just as folky-looking, "I have been a foster long and money day."

So there is a lot going on here. I don't really think this is a folk song, but it's just folky enough that I decided to include it to let you make your own decisions.

To this compare: Sidgwick/Chambers-EarlyEnglishLyrics CXVI, p. 247, "(no title)" (1 short text that looks like an abbreviation of this; it is found in British Library MS. Additional 5665). - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: MSIHBAF

I Have Been Redeemed

DESCRIPTION: "I have been redeemed, I know I have been redeemed, O hallelujah, I know I have been redeemed, O sinner, you better obey." "This world is not my home.... Oh, sinner, you better obey." "O, heaven is my home...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Chappell)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 84, "I Have Been Redeemed" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #16934
File: ChFRA084

I Have Long Since Been Learned

DESCRIPTION: "I have long since been leaned Dat de trumpets will be sounding... in dat day. Oh, sinner, where will you stand in dat day?" "He can able de blind to see... Jesus is knocking at de door." The singer describes heaven and resurrection.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 588, "I Have Long Since Been Learned" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 588, "I Have Long Since Been Learned" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #11838
File: Br3588

I Have No Loving Mother Now (Oh, See My Father Layin' There)

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, see my father layin' there (x3), I cannot stay here by myself." "Lord, I cannot stay here by myself (x2), When de wind blows east and de wind blows west, Lord I cannot...." "Oh, see my mother layin' there...." "Oh, see my brother layin' there...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad mother father
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
[Randolph 612, "I Have No Loving Mother Now" -- deleted in the second printing]
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 432-433, "I Have No Loving Mother Now" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 612)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 622, "Oh, See My Father Layin' There"
I Have No Pain, Dear Mother, Now

DESCRIPTION: "I have no pain, dear mother, now, But oh! I am so dry. Connect me to a brewery And leave me there to die."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang)

KEYWORDS: mother drink death

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, p. 43, "I have no Pain, Dear Mother, Now" (1 text)

Roud #10556

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "My Love Is Like a Red, Red Rose" (tune)

File: BrPa043B

I Have Worked in the Woods

DESCRIPTION: Singer describes all the things he's done while working as a logger, including both work and recreation: logged, driven, danced, fought, sung and slept on the floor.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks)

KEYWORDS: lumbering work logger

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 7, "I Have Worked in the Woods" (1 text)
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 12, "I Have Worked in the Woods" (1 text)

Roud #8868

File: Be007

I Hear from Heaven Today

DESCRIPTION: "Hurry on, my weary soul, and I heard from heaven today" (x2). "My sin is forgiven and my soul set free, And I heard from....." "A baby born in Bethlehem." :"The trumpet sound in the other bright land." "My name is called and I must go."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad travel

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 2, "I Heard from Heaven Today" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #11862

File: AWG002B

I Heard the Angels Singing

DESCRIPTION: "One morning soon (x3), I heard the angels singing. I believe, I believe, I do believe, I heard the angels singing. My soul King Jesus will revive." "Down on my knees (x3), I heard...." "I couldn't keep from crying" "One morning soon."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 160, "I Heard the Angels Singing" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #16308
File: Arno160

I Heard the Preaching of the Elder

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I heard the preaching of the elder, Preaching the Word (x2), I heard the preaching of the elder Preaching the Word of God" Verses are about the length of Noah's flood, Jonah's stay with "the whale," and the singer's time praying

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: Bible nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 62, "I Heard the Preaching of the Elder" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12223

NOTES [33 words]: In Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute's verses, every alternate line is "Preaching the Word of God."
The Biblical references are Genesis 6-8 and Jonah 1-2. - BS
Last updated in version 4.0
File: Dett062

I Heard the Reports of a Pistol

DESCRIPTION: "Well, I heard the reports of a pistol, whoa man, down the right-a-way.... Must a been my partner... tryin' a make a getaway. Whoe, they killed my partner...." A man serving a life term, he wishes he could escape, but warns others against trying

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (recorded from J. B. Smith by Jackson)
KEYWORDS: death prison escape
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 155-157, "I Heard the Reports of a Pistol" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: JDM155

I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say

DESCRIPTION: "I heard the voice of Jesus say, 'Come unto me and rest' Lay down, thou weary one...." The singer comes to Jesus weary and worn, and finds Jesus a resting place. Jesus freely gives living water and is the light of "this dark world."

AUTHOR: Words: Horatio Bonar
EARLIEST DATE: 1846 (see NOTES)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE) West Indies(Trinidad)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
ADDITIONAL: Ira D. Sankey, Sacred Songs and Solos (London: Collins, n.d.), #216 ("I heard the voice of Jesus say") (1 text)
Henry Date, Pentecostal Hymns Nos. 1 and 2 Combined (Chicago: Hope Publishing Company, 1894 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), #120 p. 115, "My Sins Are Taken Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
William T Dargan, Lining Out the Word (Chicago: Center for Black Music Research, 2006), pp. 72-
75, ("I heard the voice of Jesus say") (1 text, 1 tune) (transcribed by Dargan in Piedmont Georgia)
Roud #22461
RECORDINGS:
Leader Nurse and the Little Flock Spiritual Baptist Church Congregation, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say" (on "Spiritual Baptist Music of Trinidad" Folkways LP FE 4234 (1980 (recorded in 1976-1979 by Stephen D Glazier)))
James Garfield Smalls, "Lining a Hymn/I Heard the Voice of Jesus" (on USSealsland03)
United Southern Prayer Band of Baltimore, Washington and Virginia, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say" (on "African American Congregational Singing: Nineteenth-Century Roots, Wade in the Johnson Reagon)))
SAME TUNE:
Bright Crowns Laid Up ("I Heard the voice of Twiggins say") (Jon Raven, _The Urban and Industrial Songs of the Black Country and Birmingham_, Broadside, 1977, p. 21) NOTES [385 words]: Although there are very few traditional collections of this (and those of a sort that I suspect were learned in churches), the tune was popular enough to inspire parodies, so I've included it in the Index.
According to John Julian, editor, _A Dictionary of Hymnology_, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes), p. 556, this was "Written at Kelso, and published in [Bonar's]
_Hymns Original and Selected_, 1846, and in the first series of his _Hymns of Faith & Hope_, 1857, in 3 stanzas on 8 lines, and headed "The Voice from Galilee...." It has been rendered into Latin by
Dr. Macgill in his _Songs of the Christian Creed and Life_, 1876, as "Loquentem exaudivi."
Julian, pp. 161-162, gives a capsule biography of Bonar, who was born in Edinburgh on December 19, 1808, and attended the University of Edinburgh. He became a member of the Free Church of Scotland after the split with the established church; eventually he became moderator of the Free Church's General Assembly. Julian lists 84 of his writings as in "common usage," but I recognize none of them. One item of his which is NOT in Julian's list is "Only Remembered," which will be better-known to folkies than most of his productions. I suspect the reason Julian does not include it is because it is explicitly heretical (see the notes to that song). Looking at Bonar's other titles, they also appear to contain some rather dubious theology. Which perhaps explains why he was such a big name in a breakaway denomination. - RBW
The recordings by James Garfield Smalls, The United Southern Prayer Band, and The Little Flock Spiritual Baptist Church all illustrate hymn "lining out." In "lining out," the leader tells the coming verse or line to be repeated by the congregation (as opposed to call and response, where the leader sings a line and the congregation responds with a standard line that remains constant throughout the song). Lined out hymns usually have a steady slow beat (see the transcription by Dargan) and are sung early in the service (as opposed to "shouts" which typically are fast and, if anything, gain speed, and are sung late in the service. Dargan has "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say" as one of the commonly lined out hymns in the Missionary Baptist (for example) repertory
(Dargan, p. 27). - BS
Last updated in version 4.1
File: RCIHTVJS

I Hope I'll Join the Band (Soon in the Morning)
DESCRIPTION: Sundry verses about the pleasures of heaven ("Goin' to see my Jesus," "Meet our fathers there," "Lookin' over Jordan," etc.). Usual internal refrain is "Soon in the morning"; final chorus, "And I hope I'll join the band."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1874 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute); probably 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: music religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE,So)
REFERENCES (10 citations):
Randolph 266, "I Hope I'll J'ine the Band" (3 texts, 1 tune) Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 227-228, "I Hope I'll J'ine the Band" (1 text, 1 tune
-- Randolph's 266A)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 598, "I Wanter Jine de Ban" (1 text) Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 598, "I Wanter Jine de Ban" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
I Hopped up on the Gangway

DESCRIPTION: "I hopped up to the gangway and I hailed the picket boat" to head for Voller Street. He meets a girl -- but then her "fancy bloke" arrives. He is caught and put on trial; he is sent off to jail and suffers other penalties. He warns his hearers

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)

KEYWORDS: sailor courting punishment money

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 53, "I Hopped up on the Gangway" (1 text, with tune on p. 150)

File: Tawn038

I Just Arrived From Dublin

DESCRIPTION: Pat Murphy arrived from Dublin and attended a wedding. Lots of fine clothes, fine food food, drink, dancing and fighting. "They had cakes and wine and Irish spuds and ginger duds, Ham and jam and ginger beer and tea"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA-Leach)

KEYWORDS: wedding fight clothes dancing drink food party wine humorous moniker

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

Roud #30130

RECORDINGS:
- Cyril O'Brien, "I Just Arrived From Dublin" (on MUNFLA-Leach)

NOTES [65 words]: The first two lines of the chorus are quoted above, in the description. It continues: "Here we are boys, here again, here again, Here we are boys, here again, Irishmen are we."- BS

I don't find this in Johnny Burke's collected works, but I have a feeling he either wrote or made use of this, given the occasional similarities to "The Kelligrew's Soiree" and Burke's tendency to recycle. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.4

File: ML3IJAfD
I Just Got Over in the Heavenly Land

DESCRIPTION: "Lord, I just got over (x3). I just got over in the heavenly land." Old Satan mad and I am glad. Just got over... He missed the soul he thought he had." "Mind, my sister, how you cross, Your foot might slip and your soul be lost."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad travel
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, pp. 239-240, "Just Got Over" (1 text)
Roud #11051
File: KiWa239J

I Ken Something I'll No Tell

DESCRIPTION: The singer has a secret. All the lads/lasses are hiding but one. If he: he will have so-and-so and they will be married. If she: she has a baby in a dish-cloth; her lover goes to her father and is beaten.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2)
KEYWORDS: courting marriage sex nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 174, "I Ken Something I'll No Tell" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Robert Chambers, The Popular Rhymes of Scotland (Edinburgh, 1870 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 119, ("I ken something that I'll no tell")("I've found something that I'll no tell) (2 texts)
Roud #15526
NOTES [28 words]: Chambers: "... intended to convey an insinuation against the presumably prettiest young maiden of the party, usually called 'the Flower' of her place of residence." - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: LyCr2174

I Ken Whaur I'm Goin'

DESCRIPTION: "I ken whaur I'm goin', But you're no comin' wi' me; I've a lad o' my ain, But ye daurnae tak' him frae me. He wears a tartan kilt, He wears it in the fashin; An' every time he turns aroon', You'l burst your sides wi' laughin'."

AUTHOR: unknown
KEYWORDS: courting clothes derivative humorous
FOUND IN: Bristain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Porter/Gower-Jeannie-Robertson-EmergentSingerTransformativeVoice, #3, pp. 113-114, "I Ken Whaur I'm Goin'" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #18663
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Katie Cruel (The Leeboy's Lassie; I Know Where I'm Going)" (source song)
File: RPG003

I Knew It Was the Blood

DESCRIPTION: Verse format is [phrase] (x3) "One day as I was lost / He died upon the cross / I know it was the blood for me") [Phrase] includes "They led him to the judgment hall" "They whipped him with a purple cord" "They speared him in the side"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1945 (recording by Sister Vera Copeland)
KEYWORDS: death nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
I Know a Boarding-House

DESCRIPTION: "I know a boarding-house Not far away Where they have ham and eggs Three times a day," "Lord, how those boarders shout..." "Lord, how those boarders yell When they hear that dinner-bell!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (recording, Uncle Dave Macon)

KEYWORDS: food home humorous nonballad derivative

FOUND IN: US(MW,So)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Randolph 479, "I Know a Boarding-House" (1 text)
Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, "At the Boarding House Where I Live" (1 text, tune referenced); also p. 190, "While The Organ Pealed Potatoes" (1 text, tune referenced)
DT, BORDHOUS* (HAPYLNDA*)

ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 42, #2 (1997), p. 120, "Country Ham and Red Gravy" (1 text, 1 tune, a slightly cleaned-up transcription of the Dave Macon version)

Roud #7636

RECORDINGS:
Uncle Dave Macon, "Country Ham and Red Gravy" (Bluebird 7951, 1938)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "There Is a Happy Land" (tune, form)
cf. "The Barefoot Boy with Boots On" (floating lyrics)

NOTES [136 words]: This is one of those composite songs -- the key element is humorous verses to the tune of "Silver Threads." The most common verse -- shared with "The Barefoot Boy" -- is "while the organ pealed potatoes"; my father learned this from a substitute teacher in Detroit around 1941.

Dave Macon copyrighted his "Country Ham and Red Gravy" version of this song, which does indeed seem to be a rewrite (rather racist), but it's clearly from the same roots. Though he may have supplied the tune, also known as "New Five Cents," Laura Ingalls Wilder printed a stanza of this in By the Shores of Silver Lake, chapter 4. If she actually heard it then, it would date the song from 1879. But, of course, she was writing half a century later, and her work is much fictionalized anyway, so that's not a very trustworthy date. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4
I Know a Little Girl
DESCRIPTION: "I know a little girl, And she isn't very nice, Haw, haw, haw, haw, haw."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, p. 86, "I Know a Little Girl" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #16818
File: List086B

I Know It Was the Blood (One Day When I Was Lost)
DESCRIPTION: "I know it was the blood (x3), I know it was the blood for me. One day when I was lost, Jesus died upon the cross. I know it was the blood for me," "It was my savior's blood," "The blood came streaming down." "He suffered, bled, and died."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1997 (Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit)
KEYWORDS: religious death Jesus
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit, p. 56, "I Know It Was the Blood" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: WarSp056

I Know Moonlight
DESCRIPTION: "I know moonlight, I know starlight, I lay this body down." "I walk in the moonlight, I walk in the starlight, I lay...." "I walk in the graveyard, I lay in my grave, I lay...." "I go to the judgment, In the evening of the day, When I lay this body down."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious death burial nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (9 citations):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, pp. 19-20, "Lay This Body Down" (1 text, 1 tune, both with variants)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 451, "I Know Moonlight" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 611, "Mary Bowed" (1 short text, with a verse "I wonder where Sister Mary's gone... She's gone to some new buryin' ground For to lay her feeble body down" and a second verse from "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks")
Joyner-FolkSongInSouthCarolina, p. 89, "Lay Dis Body Down" (1 text, 1 tune)
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands 12, pp. 76-79, "Moonlight - Starlight" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 209-210, "Lay This Body Down" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 577-578, "Lay Dis Body Down" (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, p. 322, "Lay This Body Down" (1 text)
DT, KNOWMOON*
Roud #11839
File: San451

I Know My Love
DESCRIPTION: "I know my love by his way of walking," his speech, his clothes. She laments, "If my love leaves me, what will I do?" She knows he is courting strange girls in Maradyke. He rejects her because of her lack of money
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (sung by David Hammond on "I Am the Wee Falorie Man: Folk Songs of
I Know the Lord Will Make a Way

DESCRIPTION: ("Yes he will, yes he will") (4x), "I know the Lord will make a way, Yes he will," rhyming couplet, "I know the Lord will make a way, Yes he will"). A couplet example: "I may not have a friend But he will go with me right to the end"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (recording, Southern Gospel Singers (released 1945))

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus

FOUND IN: US(SE)

RECORDINGS:
The Caravans, "I Know the Lord Will Make a Way" (States S-128, 1953)
Church of God In Christ, "I Know the Lord Will Make A Way (Yes He Will)" (on USMississippi01)
Southern Gospel Singers, "I Know the Lord Will Make a Way" (1996, on "1940s Vocal Groups," Document DOCD-5608)

FILE: RcIKLWMW

I Know the Lord's Laid His Hands on Me

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I know the Lord (x3) has laid his hands on me (x2)." Verses: The singer has "been new born by the dying Lamb" and now walks "the narrow way." "I never felt such love before, Saying 'Go in peace and sin no more'"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 207, "I Know the Lord's Laid His Hands on Me" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 166 in the 1909 edition)
Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro, p. 64, "I Know the Lord's Laid His Hands on Me" (1 text)

Roud #11960

NOTES [174 words]: In Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute's and Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro's verses, every alternate line is "I know the Lord's laid his hands on me." - BS

The reference to sinning no more is presumably to "John 8:11" (a verse that is not an original part of the gospel of John but a later interpolation; the "John 8:11" numeration is that of the King James
Bible, but these verses are found in other place in other manuscripts, and most early manuscripts omit "John 7:53-8:11" entirely. This is the story of the "Woman taken in adultery." After Jesus has said, "Let the one without sin cast the first stone" and her accusers had left, Jesus told the woman, "Go your way and sin no more." None of this occurs in the Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro version. That refers more to direct salvation by Jesus. Both Jesus and Paul frequently cured by laying on of hands. The reference to being drawn out of the miry clay is a close allusion to Psalm 40:2, "He has brought me up... out of the miry clay." - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0
File: Dett207

I Know When I'm Going Home

DESCRIPTION: "Old Satan told me to my face, O yes, Lord, The God I seek I never find, O yes Lord. True believer, I know when I gwine home, True believer, I know when I gwine home, True believe, I know when I gwine home, I been afraid to die."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad death
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 30, "I Know When I'm Going Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11984
File: AWG030A

I Know You Rider

DESCRIPTION: "I know you rider, gonna miss me when I'm gone (x2), Gonna miss your li'l mama from rollin' in your arms." The singer sets out to find a man who will give her some "decent care." If she can't be her man's love, she won't be his dog. Many verses float

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Lomax)
KEYWORDS: love separation abandonment abuse floatingverses
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 196-197, "Woman Blue" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 77, "I Know You Rider" (1 text)
DT, KNOWRIDR
Roud #15575
NOTES [28 words]: The Lomaxes claim to have gotten one verse of this from a female prisoner (location unidentified). No word of the source for the other ninety percent of their text. - RBW
File: LxA196

I Know You're Tired

DESCRIPTION: Alternate lines are a chorus, "Lay down a little while," The hymn leader sings "I know you tired." "Come from a distance." "Tedious was my journey." "Rocky was my road." "Ain't you got somebody gone." "Body, ain't you weary."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1966 (Carawan/Carawan-AintYouGotARight)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Carawan/Carawan-AintYouGotARight, pp. 30-31, "I Know You're Tired" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: CaCa030
I Lay Around the Old Jail House (John C. Britton)

DESCRIPTION: Perhaps a composite song: The singer complains of life in jail and of working in the coal mines. There follows a brief item about a raid or a race from "Manthus" to Cairo in which John C. Britton suffers a grave loss of men

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: prison mining work hardtimes racing war death

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 364, "I Lay Around the Old Jail House (John C. Britton)" (1 text)
Roud #11734

NOTES [99 words]: It's not often that one encounters a song this confusing. The first four stanzas seem to be your standard prison/poverty song. Stanza 5 is a floater. Stanzas 6 and 7 are suspected of being from at least one and perhaps two other songs. The editors of Brown suggest that the last stanzas might be a description of a Civil War raid. Possible, but if so, it's too small to have left a dent in the standard histories. But I rather doubt it. It looks to me like a race between two boats, the John C. Britton and the (Robert E.?) Lee, from Memphis to Cairo. The rest must be referred to the reader. - RBW

File: Br3364

I Learned about Horses from Her

DESCRIPTION: "You can gen'rally tell when they kick you And you know by the scar when they bite." The singer was bitten by his horse Agnes when he clinched her too tight; a horse threw him when he spurred her. Etc. "I learned about horses from her."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe)

KEYWORDS: soldier humorous animal derivative

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 68-71, "I Learned about Horses from Her" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V35174 (parody of)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Learned about Horses from Her" (theme)

File: NiM068

I Learned about Horses from Him

DESCRIPTION: The singer describes the horses (and others) he has met in his life. Every incident ends with the rueful comment, "I learned about horses from him." There is a "horse," Conscience, he hasn't ridden; he expects hereafter to learn about that horse from Him

AUTHOR: George B. German

EARLIEST DATE: 1932

KEYWORDS: cowboy horse humorous gods

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 71, "I Learned about Horses from Him" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Learned about Horses from Her" (theme)

NOTES [13 words]: Modeled after Kipling's poem "The Ladies" ("I Learned about Women from Her"). - RBW

Last updated in version 3.3

File: Ohr071
I Left Inverquhomery

DESCRIPTION: The singer "left Inverquhomery and gaed to New Deer To plunge in the bogs wi' a bull and a steer." The plough breaks in two and the oxen carry half away home.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: farming work animal
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 380, "I Left Inverquhomery" (1 text)
Roud #5917

NOTES [55 words]: Greig/Duncan3 has a map on p. xxxv, of "places mentioned in songs in volume 3" showing the song number as well as place name; Auchmaliddie (380) is at coordinate (h4-5,v9) on that map [near New Deer, roughly 28 miles N of Aberdeen]; Inverquhomery (380,426) is at coordinate (h4-5,v0) on that map [roughly 26 miles N of Aberdeen] - BS

I Like to Be There

DESCRIPTION: "I like to be there when the engine starts early in the morning; I like to sit me down at breakfast time, Just when the engine's roaring.... Then hurrah for the life of the factory While we're waiting for the judgment day."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1954 (MacColl)
KEYWORDS: technology work
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
MacColl-ShuttleAndCage-IndustrialFolkBallads, p. 5, "I Like to Be There" (1 short text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Country Life" (form, lyrics)

NOTES [19 words]: This reminds me very strongly of "Country Life"; I'm fairly sure there is influence. But the tunes are different. - RBW

I Likes a Drop of Good Beer

DESCRIPTION: "Come one and all, both great and small... And let us sing, 'Bless Billy the King, Who bated the tax upon beer." The singer praises his beer and is thankful for lower taxes. He praises those -- Queen Victoria, the Farmer's Board -- who help production

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1876? (Raven)
KEYWORDS: drink nonballad royalty
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1830-1837 - Reign of William IV ("Billy the King")
1830 - The Beerhouse Act lowers liquor taxes
1837-1902 - Reign of Queen Victoria
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Henderson-VictorianStreetBallads, p. 90, "I Likes a Drop of Good Beer" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Jon Raven, _The Urban and Industrial Songs of the Black Country and Birmingham_, Broadside, 1977, pp. 241-242, "A Drop of Good Beer" (1 text)
Roud #1502

I Live Not Where I Love

DESCRIPTION: The girl laments that "I live not where I love." In flowery phrases she describes her fidelity. She hopes that she and her lover may be reunited/never part.
I Lo'e the Lasses

DESCRIPTION: In the chorus the singer loves lasses "short or tall," "dark or fair," "bless them all." One verse about grannie, "wrinkles on her brow But once she was a bonnie bonnie lass"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan7)
KEYWORDS: courting nonballad beauty
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1322, "I Lo'e the Lasses" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #7213
File: GrD71322

I Look Down The Road

DESCRIPTION: Verses are four lines: a non-rhyming couplet repeated. For example, "(I looked down the road and the road so lonesome, Lord I've got to walk down that lonesome road)(x2)." See notes for other examples.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang)
KEYWORDS: death nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang, pp. 284-285, "I Look Down duh Road" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [73 words]: The description follows Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang but I do not repeat the dialect.
Verses include "And I looked in the grave and the grave is so watery, Lord I've got to lie in that watery grave"; "And I looked upon the mountain and the mountain is so high, Lord I've got to climb that mountain by myself"; "And all I want to know is that my sins are forgiven, And all I want to know is that my soul is set free." - BS
I Lost My Lad

DESCRIPTION: "I lost my lad in the cairnie" or "an' I care-nae" "I'll get anither canary" or the lad is described with red cheeks: "I met him in the dance hall" or "in the shake-hand" The chorus line may be nonsense ("A ramshy-dasmshy-doo") or "Y-O-U"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1902 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)

KEYWORDS: derivative playparty

FOUND IN: Britain(England(West),Scotland(Bord,High))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 102, "I Lost My Lad" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #2075

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I've Lost My Love and I Kenna Weel Fu" (source for this derivative)

NOTES [19 words]: Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame makes the connection between this rhyme and "I've Lost My Love and I Kenna Weel Fu." - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: OpGa102

I Lost My Mull and A' My Sneeshin'

DESCRIPTION: The singer complains that he lost his snuff box and snuff while courting "a saucy quine." He can do without the girl [whore?] or snuff but wishes he had his snuff box again.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan7)

KEYWORDS: courting nonballad drugs

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1405, "I Lost My Mull and A' My Sneeshin" (2 fragments, 1 tune)
Roud #7257

File: GrD71405

I Love But One

DESCRIPTION: "I am in love and that is true I love but one and that is you"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)

KEYWORDS: love nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1836, "I Love But One" (1 short text)
Roud #13603

NOTES [20 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan8 text. Greig/Duncan8: apparently a verse for a valentine or album. - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD81836

I Love Him Better

DESCRIPTION: "I love Him better every day." "Close by his side I will abide"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (Elder-FolkSongAndFolkLifeInCharlotteville)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus

FOUND IN: West Indies(Tobago)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Elder-FolkSongAndFolkLifeInCharlotteville, pp. 55, 56, "I Love Him Better" (1 text, 2 tunes)
I Love Little Pussy

DESCRIPTION: "I love little pussy, Her coat is so warm, And if I don't hurt her She'll do me no harm. o I'll not pull her tail, Nor drive her away, But pussy and I Very gently will play."

AUTHOR: sometimes attributed to Jane Taylor, according to the Opies

EARLIEST DATE: 1830 ("The Child's Song Book," according to the Opies)

KEYWORDS: animal nonballad

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 427, "I Love Little Pussy" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #812, p. 302, "(I like little pussy)"
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 102, "I Love Little Pussy" (1 text)
Roud #12824
File: 002427

I Love Little Willie

DESCRIPTION: "I love Little Willie, I do, mama, I love Little Willie, But don't you tell Pa! For he wouldn't like it, you know, mama." Similarly: "He wrote me a letter," "He gave me a ring," "And now we are married," "We fuss and we scratch."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1884 (Boit)

KEYWORDS: love courting marriage trick father mother

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North)) US(Ap,MW,Ro,SE,So) Canada(Ont)

REFERENCES (12 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 307, "I Love Little Willie, I Do, Mamma" (1 text plus 1 fragment, 4 excerpts, and mention of 3 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 307, "I Love Little Willie, I Do, Mamma" (3 tunes plus text excerpts)
Randolph 382, "I Love Little Willie" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 23, "I Love Little Willie" (1 text)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol5, pp. 1-2, "I Love Little Willy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #84, "I Love Little Willie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, p. 51, "I'm Going to Get Married" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, p. 327, "I Love Little Willie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame, p. 478 ("I want to get married, I do, mama") (1 text)
JournalOfAmericanFolklore, Mellinger E. Henry, "Still More Ballads and Folk-Songs from the Southern Highlands," Vol. XLV, No. 175 (Jan 1932), #55 pp. 113-114, "I Love Little Willie" (1 text)
JournalOfAmericanFolklore, Leah Rachel Clara Yoffie, "Three Generations of Children's Singing Games in St. Louis," Vol. LX, No. 235 (Jan 1947), #38 p. 33, ("I love little Johnny, I do, mamma") (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Robert Apthorp Boit, Eustis: A Novel (Boston, 1884 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 166, ("O I have a beau, mamma, mamma") (1 text)
Roud #3538

RECORDINGS:
Mrs. Tom Sullivan, "I Love Little Willie" (on ONEFowke01)

SAME TUNE:
I Love My Union (Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, p. 128)

NOTES [70 words]: Yoffie includes "I love little Johnny" among a group of songs she learned in St Louis between 1895 and 1900.
Boit has a black four-year old sing this song at a Churchill County [fictional? apparently in Georgia or Alabama] school "exhibition." - BS
Roud splits off Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle's "I'm Going to Get Married" as a separate song (#7512), but the only difference I can see is that it doesn't mention Willie. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: R382
I Love My Love (I) (As I Cam' Owre Yon High High Hill)

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets a pretty girl, asks who her father is, asks where she lives, asks if she would marry. She is not overly enthusiastic. He bids farewell and hopes she will be kinder when he returns. In the chorus, he admits "But I love her yet...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan5)
KEYWORDS: courting rejection love floating verses
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #18, p. 1, ("As I cam' owre yon heich heich hill") (1 text)
Greig/Duncan5 964, "I Love My Love" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 129, "As I Cam' Owre Yon High High Hill" (1 text)
Roud #5548
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Trooper and Maid" [Child 299] (floating lyrics)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Wanton Lad
NOTES [69 words]: So much of this piece is shared with "Seventeen Come Sunday" and "Trooper and Maid" (which themselves cross-fertilize) that it cannot be regarded as an independent song. But this ends with the woman rejecting the man, and also has that interesting chorus: But I love my love, and I love my love, And I love my love most dearly; My whole delight's in her bonnie face, And I long to have her near me." So we split. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.5
File: Ord129

I Love my Love (II)

DESCRIPTION: "All my friends fell out with me/Because I kept my love's company." The singer must leave to go over the mountain because his fortune is low. "When I have gold she has her part/And when I have none she has my heart... And upon my honor I love her still."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1918 (Cecil Sharp collection)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer says "All my friends fell out with me/Because I kept my love's company." He must leave to go over the mountain because his fortune is low. "When I have gold she has her part/And when I have none she has my heart/And she gained it too with a free good will/And upon my honor I love her still." "The winter's past and summer's come/The trees are budding one by one/And when my true love chooses to stay/I'll stay with her till the break of day"
KEYWORDS: poverty courting love sex parting travel lover
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 190, "I Love my Love" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3612
NOTES [87 words]: It's hard to distinguish this from the plethora of songs with similar themes. The verses "All my friends fell out with me..." and "Over the mountain I must go/Because my fortune is so low/With an aching heart and a troubled mind/For leaving my true love behind" are good delineators.
Jean Ritchie used most of the lyrics for her song "One I Love," changing the sex of the singer and adding the chorus "One I love; two, he loves/Three, he's true to me" [Said chorus now being indexed as "One I Love, Two I Love." - RBW] - PJS

File: ShAp190

I Love My Love with an A

DESCRIPTION: "I love my love with an A, because he's A(greeable), I hate him because he's A---, He took me to the sign of the A---, And treated me with A---, His name is A---, and he lives in A---." Similarly through the rest of the letters of the alphabet.

AUTHOR: unknown
I Love My Sailor Boy

DESCRIPTION: The singer overhears a girl declare, "Let my friends say what they will, I love my sailor boy." She praises his appearance and virtues. Her mother calls her foolish and bids her wed a "steady farmer's son." The girl disdains such a lover.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Dean-FlyingCloud)

KEYWORDS: love sailor mother farming floating verses

FOUND IN: US (MW)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 84-85, "I Love My Sailor Boy" (1 text)
Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy (notes to #10, "The Shanty-boy and the Farmer's Son"), "I Love My Sailor Boy" (1 text)
Rickaby/Dykstra/Leary-PineryBoys-SongsSongcatchingInLumberjackEra, preface to #10, "(I Love My Sailor Boy)" (1 text)

ST Rick203 (Partial)

Roud #9603

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Farmer and the Shanty Boy" (theme)
cf. "Adieu Sweet Lovely Nancy" (lyrics)
cf. "Whistling at the Ploo" (theme)
cf. "Hearts of Gold" (theme)

NOTES [40 words]: This song is one of those items where every line has parallels elsewhere (especially in "Adieu Sweet Lovely Nancy," but the parallels are truly numerous to list). I'm not really sure it exists on its own. But when in doubt, we split. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: Rick203

I Love My Sweetheart the Best

DESCRIPTION: "The sun was sinking slowly, Sinking in the west; I love all those pretty boys, But I love my sweetheart the best." The girl regrets ignoring mother's advice; boys have led her astray. She points out that mother is wise and a friend; men are deceivers.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Kelly Harrell)

KEYWORDS: love mother betrayal

FOUND IN: US
I Love Nae Apples, I Love Nae Plums
DESCRIPTION: "I love nae apples, I love nae plums, I love nae young men that carry guns; But I love the cherry drops from the tree, And I love my ain love where'er he be."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)
KEYWORDS: love nonballad food
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #177, p. 3, ("I love nae apples, I love nae plums") (1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan8 1919, "I Love Nae Apples, I Love Nae Plums" (1 short text)
Roud #16135
NOTES [18 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan8 fragment. Is this a reworked "Do You Love an Apple?" - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: GrD81919

I Love Old Ireland Still
DESCRIPTION: The singer wants to see "old Ireland once more free." Ireland would prosper if allowed "the wealth that lies beneath her soil." "Let friends all turn against me, let foes say what they will, My heart is with my country, I love old Ireland still."
AUTHOR: probably J.H. Woodhouse (per broadside Bodleian Harding B 11(4009)
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland)
KEYWORDS: Ireland nonballad patriotic
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 131, "I Love Old Ireland Still" (1 text)
Roud #V4332
BROADSIDES:
NOTES [19 words]: Broadside Bodleian, Harding B 11(4009): "Written, composed, and sung with tremendous success by J.H. Woodhouse." - BS
Last updated in version 5.1
File: OCon131

I Love Sixpence
DESCRIPTION: "I love sixpence," spend a penny, lend a penny, and take fourpence home to the wife. The singer repeats the process with fourpence and twopence. With nothing left he says "I have nothing, I spend nothing, I love nothing better than my wife"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1810 (Ritson)
KEYWORDS: poverty humorous nonballad wife
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North,South),Scotland(Aber)) Canada
REFERENCES (9 citations):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 90, "The Jolly Shilling" (2 texts) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 405)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 480, "I love sixpence, jolly little sixpence" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #113, pp. 93-95, "(I love sixpence, a jolly, jolly sixpence)"
I Love the Blue Mountains

DESCRIPTION: Halyard shanty: "I love the blue mountains of Tennessee, that's the place for you and me." Singer is a former slave who was set free (in 1863), he's going back to Tennessee to get his wife and child (pickanniny) and then will quit sailing.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1945 (Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips)

KEYWORDS: shanty slave return family home

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 143-144, "I Love the Blue Mountains" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #9147

NOTES [34 words]: Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips apparently attributed this to Black sailors. It strikes me as a little too "still longing for the old plantation"-ish for me to trust that claim without more data. - RBW

File: Harl143

I Love the Lord

DESCRIPTION: "I love the Lord, he heard my cries And pitied every groan, Long as I live, when troubles rise, I'll hasten to his throne." "I love the Lord, he bowed his ear, And chased my grief away..." "The Lord beheld me sore distressed, He bade my pains remove."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1997 (Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad hardtimes

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit, p. 131, "I Love the Lord" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #21571?

File: WarSp131

I Love to Tell the Story

DESCRIPTION: "I love to tell the story Of unseen things above, Of Jesus and his glory, Of Jesus and his love.... I love to tell the story, 'Twill be my theme in glory." The singer says repeatedly how it is "pleasant to repeat" the inspiration supplied by Jesus

EARLIEST DATE: 1869 (source: Johnson)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  ADDITIONAL: Charles Johnson, One Hundred and One Famous Hymns (Hallberg, 1982), pp, 186-187, "I Love to Tell the Story" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Roud #17488
NOTES [260 words]: According to Morgan, Arabella Katherine Hankey's family came from the "Clapham Sect" that formed around anti-slavery agitator William Wilberforce. Marilyn Kay Stulken, Hymnal Companion to the Lutheran Book of Worship, Fortress Press, 1981, p. 430, describes her as an evangelical who at age 18 started a Bible school for girls; later, she would go on a trip to South Africa to carry an invalid brother home; in the process, she became involved in mission work.
  Hankey suffered a prolonged illness in 1865-1866, and wrote a long poem, "The Old, Old Story," during her recovery. Several portions of this were later set to music; this part, with music published in 1869 by William G. Fischer, became the best known.
  John Julian, editor, A Dictionary of Hymnology, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes), p. 483, says that Hankey is responsible for four significant hymns, "Advent tells us, Christ is near"; -"I love to tell the story, Of things unseen above"; "I saw Him leave His Father's throne," and "Tell me the old, old story." It appears that the second and fourth are both part of the long poem "The Old, Old Story," with #4 having been somewhat adapted for Ira Sankey's Sacred Songs and Solos, and has been translated into German, Italian, Spanish, Welsh, and perhaps other languages by now.

I Love You And I Can't Help It

DESCRIPTION: "I love you and I can't help it, fol dol day, fol dol day (x2)" "Oh my love you're too hard-hearted." "Oh my love I will call you honey." "If you do I will call you beeswax."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1940
KEYWORDS: dialog courting rejection humorous
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Randolph 363, "I'm Going Away to Texas" (3 texts, 1 tune, but only the "B" text goes here; "A" is the true "I'm Going Away to Texas" and "C" is a "Quaker's Wooing" type)
  Roud #6691
NOTES [26 words]: This may, as Randolph suggests, be a form of one or another of the courting-and-rejection songs -- but the verses which survive look independent to me. - RBW

I Love You, Jamie

DESCRIPTION: The singer says she loves Jamie better than he loves her. She was foolish to fall in love with an Irish boy who "spoke braw Scotch, when he courted me." He said only death would part them and showed her "the hoose that we will dwell"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: courting nonballad love
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
I Love-ed a Lass

DESCRIPTION: "I love-ed a lass, She prove-ed unkind, I'll sing you as arkard as ever I can, and I'll sing you as arkard as ever I can." "Her beautiful looks so enravished my mind, I'll sing you as arkard..." The rest is mostly nonsense verses about animal behavior

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Henry, collected from Samuel Harmon)

KEYWORDS: love humorous animal

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 20-22, "I Love-ed A Lass" (1 text)
Roud #4197

NOTES [43 words]: Looking at this, I have a very strong feeling that it's based on "Way Up on Clinch Mountain" or "Drunkard's Hiccups," with a lot of nonsense and floating material thrown at it. But with only one version known, and no access to the tune, I can't prove it. - RBW

File: MHAp020

I Loved You Better Than You Knew

DESCRIPTION: "Our hands are clasped at last forever, Perhaps we'll never meet again, I loved you as I could no other, This parting fills my heart with pain." The singer rehearses all that she will suffer, demonstrating the theme "I loved you better than you knew."

AUTHOR: Johnny Carroll ((?))

EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (copyright)

KEYWORDS: love farewell betrayal rambling

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Randolph 738, "I Loved You Better Than You Knew" (1 text); also 755, "The Broken Heart" (the "A" text includes a stanza from this piece)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 493-495, "The Broken Heart" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 755A)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5693, "I Loved You Better Than You Knew" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #6434

RECORDINGS:
The Carter Family, "I Loved You Better Than You Knew" (Victor 23835, 1933)

File: R738

I Married a Wife

DESCRIPTION: "I married a wife of late, To my unhappy fate, I took her for love, as fortune did prove, And not for the nearby estate." The singer opines, "all women are thus inclined... to a sad and dreary tongue" toward husbands. A quiet wife is better than a beauty

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams)

KEYWORDS: marriage beauty courting warning

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
I Maun Hae My Goon Made
DESCRIPTION: "I maun hae my goon made ... like ony ligger [camp-follower, per Greig/Duncan8], Side and wide about the tail An' jimp [close-fitting] for my body"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: clothes nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #159, p. 2, "I Maun Hae My Goon Made" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan8 1626, "I Maun Hae My Goon Made" (1 text)
Roud #13074
File: GrD81626

I Mean to Go to Heaven Anyhow
DESCRIPTION: "I mean to go to heaven anyhow... Jesus died, oh, he died on the cross, To set every sinner free." "You told mother when she was living... You would treat her chilluns good... But... you've driven us from your door."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang)
KEYWORDS: orphan hardtimes mother death Jesus religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 592, "I Mean to Go to Heaven Anyhow" (1 text)
Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang, pp. 304-305, "Anyhow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11905
File: Br3592

I Met a Handsome Lady
DESCRIPTION: Singer meets a lady who invites him into her parlor and says nice things; he says she can send for the preacher, he'll be ready and have his shoes greased. The preacher says she is too young; all sit down to a supper of chicken and underdone turkey
AUTHOR: Unknown; some verses added by H. N. Dickens EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (recording by H. N. Dickens)
KEYWORDS: age courting marriage wedding food party bird chickens clergy lover
FOUND IN: US(SE)
Roud #12644
RECORDINGS:
H. N. Dickens, "I Met a Handsome Lady" (on Stonemans01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Cindy (I)" (lyrics)
cf. "Pig at Home in the Pen" (lyrics)
cf. "Roving Gambler" (lyrics)
NOTES [18 words]: A most disjointed song, and I can't tell whether it was used as a dance tune or not (but I suspect not). - PJS
File: RcIMAHaL

I Met a Possum in the Road
DESCRIPTION: "I met a possum in the road, 'Bre'r Possum, whar you gwine?' 'I bless my soul and thank my stars To sunt some muscadine." "I met a possum in the road, and 'shamed he looked to be. He stuck his tail between his legs And gave the road to me."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: animal nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap,So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 177, (no title) (1 fragments, perhaps floating or not the same song)
File: ScNF177A

I Must And Will Get Married (The Fit)

DESCRIPTION: Mother and daughter are talking. The daughter says, "I must and will get married; I'm in the notion now" (or "...the fit comes on me now"). Mother asks who she will marry; she names the (miller Sam). If he won't agree, she'll find another

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1845 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(4262))
KEYWORDS: marriage mother loneliness
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) US(Ap,MW,NE,SE)
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Gi 57, "Twas on an Easter Morning" (1 text)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 128, "I Must and I Will Get Married" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 53, "I Must And Will Get Married" (1 text, 1 tune)
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 141, "The Fit's Come On Me Now" (1 text, 1 tune)
Huntington-FolksongsFromMarthasVineyard, pp. 40-41, "The Fit Comes On Me Now" (1 text, 1 tune)
Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin 8, "The Fit Comes On Me Now" (1 text)
Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic II, pp. 27-28, "The Fit's Upon Me Now" (1 tune, which may be this piece; no text is provided)
Roud #441
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(4262)[some words illegible], "The Fit Comes on me Now" ("It was on Easter Monday, the spring time of the year"), J. Pitts (London), 1819-1844; also Harding B 11(264), Harding B 11(1217), "The Fit Comes on me Now"
NLScotland, L.C.Fol.178.A.2(048), "The Tid is on Me Now," James Lindsay (Glasgow), c.1855
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Lolly-Too-Dum" (theme)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Fit Comes On Me Now
NOTES [21 words]: This song is thematically identical to "Lolly-Too-Dum," but the stanza form is different enough that I have separated them. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: SKE53

I Must Live All Alone

DESCRIPTION: "As I was a-walking one morning by chance, I heard a maiden making her moan... Alas! I must live all alone, alone..." Asked why she is out, she says her home is a burden. At eleven, she had sweethearts; now she has none. She hopes her sailor returns

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Broadwood)
KEYWORDS: love home separation sailor
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Broadwood-EnglishTraditionalSongsAndCarols, pp. 16-17, "I Must Live All Alone" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #62, "As I Was A-walking" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1059
File: LEB016
I Never Drink Behind the Bar

DESCRIPTION: "I once owned a fine saloon with mirrors on the wall... 'Good morning, Pete, they say to me... Oh, will you join?' "I must decline, For I'm behind the bar. I never drink behind the bar...."" Pete describes all the things he will do, but he won't drink

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1883 (McSorley's Inflation)

KEYWORDS: drink nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Finson-Edward-Harrigan-David-Braham, vol. II, #83, pp. 10-12, "I Never Drink Behind the Bar" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: Richard Moody, _Ned Harrigan: From Corlear's Hook to Herald Square_, Nelson Hall, 1980, after p. 54, "I Never Drink Beind he Bar" (a copy of the sheet music)
Edward Harrigan, _The Mulligans_, G. W. Dilingham, 1901, p. 81, "(no title)" (1 fragment, of the chorus, slightly different from the published sheet music)

Roud #V37806

RECORDINGS:
Mick Moloney, "I Never Drink Behind the Bad" (on HarriganBrahamMaloney)

NOTES [338 words]: For background on Harrigan and Braham, see the notes to "The Babies on Our Block."

Franceschina, p. 152: "Six new numbers were introduced in _McSorley's Inflation_, each receiving a 'heel and toe' accompaniment in the gallery, which indicted immediate audience approval. 'I Never Drink Behind the Bar, sung by Harrign, assisted by John Wild and James Fox (in the supporting role of Major Wabble) was a patter story song with a schottische 'echo' chorus that proved quite popular with the crowd."

The drama "dealt with Peter McSorley (Harrigan), a tenement landlord and candidate for the local coronership. Ashamed of the successful poultry-stall run in Washington Market by his wife, Bridget (Tony Hart), McSorley attempts to destroy her seller's permit. Bridget hides the document in her mattress, which is subsequently taken away by a black politician, Rufus Rhubarb (John Wild), at McSorley's request. Bridget follows the mattress robber to his home, where a group of African Americans are assembled to hear the political platforms of McSorley and his opponent, Coroner Slab (Edward Burt). Bridget, with the help of the female constituency, manages to recapture the bed, and McSorley, who has been knocked out by Tom Tough (Michael Foley), a bruiser in the employ of Coroner Slab, decides against a political career and vows never again to try to interfere with his wife's poultry business."

Moody, p. 133, explains that "Dan Mulligan [hero of a whole series of Harrigan plays; see again the notes to "Babies on Our Block"] had been rechristened Peter McSorley to honor the saloon [McSorley's Saloon, later McSorley's Old Ale House, a landmark near where the play was performed] and to take account of Yeaman's absence from the company" [Annie Yeamans played Cordelia Mulligan, wife of Dan Mulligan, and her absence was temporary -- she was still visiting Harrigan in the last days of his life]. The play premiered November 27, 1882 (Moody, p. 132).

For another song from "McSorley's Inflation, see "McNally's Row of Flats." - RBW

Bibliography

_Last updated in version 5.2_

File: HaBrINDB

I Never Saw a Man Speak Like This Man

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Look at death (x2), She's traveling through the land (x2), For I never saw a man speak like this man." Verses include "I heard such rambling in the sky ... I thought my Lord was passing by"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories)
I Never Will Marry [Laws K17]

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets a fair woman by the seashore. She (is reading a letter which) reveals that her lover is dead. The singer asks her to marry him. She vows she never will marry, and ensures it by drowning herself

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)

KEYWORDS: love death suicide

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber)) US(Ap,SE,So)

REFERENCES (11 citations):
Laws K17, "Down by the Sea Shore"
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 167-168, "The Lover's Lament for her Sailor" (2 texts)
Randolph 84, "Down by the Sea-Shore" (2 texts plus 1 fragment and 1 excerpt, 2 tunes)
McNeil-SouthernFolkBalladsVol1, pp.130-131, "The Maiden's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol5, pp. 74-75, "I Never Will Marry" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 114, "I Never Will Marry" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan6 1244, "The Banks of the Bann" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Ox 296, "My Love Is Gone"; Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 489, "My Love's Dead" (2 texts)
Seeeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 29, "I Never Will Marry" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 181, "I Never Will Marry" (1 text)
DT 405, CONSTLOV NEVMARRY* (FORSAKMM)

RECORDINGS:
Carter Family, "I Never Will Marry" (Montgomery Ward M-7356, c. 1935; Bluebird B-8350, 1940)
Texas Gladden w. Hobart Smith, "I'm Never to Marry" (Disc 6080, 1940s; on USTGladden01)
Pete Seeger, "I Never Will Marry" (on HootenannyCarnegie) (on PeteSeeger27)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Chowan River" (theme)
cf. "Oh! My Love's Dead" (lyrics; see NOTES)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Shells of the Ocean

NOTES [107 words]: Although most traditional collections of this are from the twentieth century, there are many related broadsides -- and it appears that there was a nineteenth century parody. Called "Oh! My Love's Dead," it appears on pp. 70-71 of Scott-EnglishSongBook, and is said to have words by Charles Sloman and to have been sung by Sam Cowell (for whom see the notes for "Billy Barlow (II)"). Cowell died in 1864, so that would seem to be an EARLIEST DATE for this song.

Roud lumps this in with the "standard" versions of Laws K17. But it is clearly a rewrite, and not traditional, so I would not list it as an actual version but rather a parody. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: LK17
I Never Will Turn Back Any More

DESCRIPTION: "When I was a boy I had a little mule That I always rode to Sunday School. Lord, I never will turn back any more." Humorous stanzas of religious life: The mule "got in an awful way"; the singer meets Satan in a meadow or runs into a hornet's nest

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious humorous floating verses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 345, "I Never Will Turn Back Any More" (1 text)
Roud #11739
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Chased Old Satan Through the Door" (floating verses)
NOTES [31 words]: This reads like a humorous take on a church hymn; several of the verses float. It looks a lot like "Chased Old Satan Through the Door," but that seems to be built on a different hymn. - RBW
File: Br3345

I Often Think of Writing Home

DESCRIPTION: Singer, a California miner, often thinks of writing to his family, but seldom does; he's half a mind to tell them he's coming home. "For it keeps a man a-hunting round to keep up with the times And pen and ink is very scarce for people in the mines...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1858 (Put's Golden Songster)
KEYWORDS: homesickness loneliness poverty home separation travel mining hardtimes nonballad
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1848 - gold found in Sutter's Mill, California.
1849 - multitudes of easterners emigrate west, hoping to "make their pile"
FOUND IN: US(SW)
RECORDINGS:
Logan English, "I Often Think of Writing Home" (on LEnglish02)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "My Irish Molly-O" (tune)
File: RcIOTOWH

I Once Had a Granny

DESCRIPTION: "I once had a granny And songs she had many And there ne'er will be any Shall sing them so well." She sang as she baked "of lovers who parted ... Of soldiers and sailors Of tinkers and tailors ...." Before she died she bade the singer not to cry.

AUTHOR: Hugh Quinn (1884-1956) (source: Hammond-SongsOfBelfast)
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (_Rann Magazine_ Summer 1952, according Roud)
KEYWORDS: music nonballad family
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hammond-SongsOfBelfast, p. 17, "I Once Had a Granny" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5109
File: Hamm017

I Once Had a Sweetheart

DESCRIPTION: "I once had a sweetheart but now I've none. He's gone to old Kentucky to never return." "I once was a snowbird but now I'm a lark"; she dreams of her sweetheart smiling at her, but it is not true. They will lock their love up and throw away the key.

AUTHOR: unknown
I Once Had a True Love

DESCRIPTION: Singer bids adieu to Molly whose parents slight him for his "want of gear". He dreams she comes to him and says "it will not be long love, till our wedding day". Floating lines. But she is not here. "I'll think of you Molly when I am alone".

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Tunney-StoneFiddle)

KEYWORDS: love rejection dream floating verses nonballad

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tunney-StoneFiddle, p. 153, "I Once Had a True Love" (1 text)

RECORDINGS:
Paddy Tunney, "I Once Had a True Love" (on IRPTunney03)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "If I Were a Fisher" (floating verses)
cf. "She Moved Through the Fair" (floating verses)

NOTES [109 words]: The "floating lines" include "if I was a fisher ... and my love was a salmon" and "if I was a blackbird and had wings to fly"; there are also lines that are more explicit than most floaters I have seen: "In a grove of green laurels I'd lay my love down And with my strong wings I would her surround" and "Since the notion has took me to make my own will Sure my own rod beats sorest and does hurt me still."

Tunney-StoneFiddle notes Tunney's hearing this song in 1960. He makes it "the original traditional song" behind Padraic Collum's "She Moved Through the Fair." Also see his comment on "My Young Love Said to Me" at "She Moved Through the Fair." - BS

Last updated in version 4.4

File: TSF153

I Once Loved a Beautiful Lady

DESCRIPTION: Singer, unjustly jealous of his sweetheart, tells her "her love was untrue." He goes to her home to make up and propose, but finds she has died. He blames himself, and hopes for forgiveness and to see her again "in that bright happy land"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Carter Family recording)

KEYWORDS: grief jealousy courting accusation beauty death mourning lover

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

Roud #17335

RECORDINGS:
Carter Family, "Why There's a Tear in My Eye" (on "The Carter Family 1930-1932," JSP Records JSP7701C CD (2010))
John Molloy, "I Once Loved a Beautiful Lady" (on MUNFLA-Leach)
Bill Monroe and his Bluegrass Boys, "The Old Man's Story" (1938, Bluebird B 7425, 2003, "Bill Monroe and his Bluegrass Boys - The Monroe Brothers 1937-1938," JSP Records CD JSP7712B)

File: MunLIOLB
I Onct Was Young

DESCRIPTION: "I onct was young but now I'm old, Am blind, but yet I have a soul, That soul to save... Or else sink down to endless woe." "My threescore years is at an end." "I have three sons before me gone... By faith through prayer we'll win the day."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Scarborough)

KEYWORDS: injury death religious

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. 40-41, (no title) (1 text)
ST ScaSC040 (Partial)
Roud #8814

NOTES [33 words]: Reportedly composed by the uncle of Grandma Bell on his deathbed. There are quite a few hints of older songs, though; I suspect he adapted rather than wrote. And, yes, that's "onct" in the title. - RBW

File: ScaSC040

I Owe Ten Dollars to O'Grady

DESCRIPTION: "My coat was getting shabby, my pants were just as bad," so the singer visits the tailor O'Grady -- and fails to pay: "I owe ten dollars to O'Grady, and you'd think he had a mortgage on my life." The singer beats O'Grady when the tailor arrives to collect

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Finger-FrontierBallads)

KEYWORDS: clothes hardtimes money fight

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Finger-FrontierBallads, p. 52, "I Owe Ten Dollars to O'Grady" (1 text)
Roud #8831

File: Fing052

I Picked My Banjo Too

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you sons of freedom, Come listen unto me...." "I used to be a rebel, I wandered from the Lord...." "The conflict between two parties, the gray coats and the blue, I volunteered for freedom, And picked my banjo too." But he then turns to Jesus

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: religious music freedom soldier slave

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 594, "I Picked My Banjo Too" (1 text)
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 175-177, (no title listed, but perhaps to be called "Rufus Mitchell") (1 text)
Roud #11904

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Southern Wagon (Confederate)" (lyrics, themes)

NOTES [114 words]: I have to suspect that this was composed in imitation of "The Southern Wagon," but I can't prove it.
It also shows signs of conflation: On the one hand, a slave who joins the Union armies (common and natural enough), on the other a banjo-picking sinner brought back to Christianity (and induced to give up the banjo). The problem with "that" is that almost all slaves were Christian -- and played the banjo anyway.
Frankly, the result looks like a modern banjo joke. And I'll also say that, instead of burning his banjo, the singer should have bashed that alleged preacher over the head with it. If he had to ruin the instrument, at least do something useful with it along the way. - RBW

File: Br3594
I Promised the Lord

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I promised the Lord that I would hold out (x3) If he meet me in Galilee."
Verses: Singer would meet Jesus in the air and asks for new wings if the old pair fails. Singer finds a resting place in Jesus

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 2014 (USSealsIsland03)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)

RECORDINGS:
Minnie Gracie Gadson, "I Promist de Lawd" (on USSealsIsland03)

NOTES [40 words]: In Mark 16:7 (followed by Matthew 28:7), the resurrected Jesus tells the women at the tomb to tell the disciples and Peter to meet him in Galilee. This is presumably a reference to that. The story is rather different in Luke and John. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1
File: RcIPrdL

I Ride an Old Paint

DESCRIPTION: "I ride an old paint, I lead an old Dan/dam... Ride around, little dogies, ride around 'em slow...." Verses on various topics: The cowboy's travels, the strayed children of Old Bill Jones, the cowboy's hopes for his funeral

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)
KEYWORDS: cowboy horse rambling funeral children
FOUND IN: US(So,SW)

REFERENCES (10 citations):
Larkin-SingingCowboy, pp. 33-35, "I Ride an Old Paint" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 63(B), "Old Paint" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 12-13, "I Ride an Old Paint" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 260-261, "I Ride an Old Paint" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, pp. 857-858, "I Ride an Old Paint" (1 text, 1 tune)
Tinsley-HeWasSinginThisSong, pp. 126-129, "I Ride an Old Paint" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abernethy-SinginTexas, pp. 85-87, "Ridin' Old Paint" (1 text, 1 tune)
Seeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 25, "I Ride An Old Paint" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 106, "I Ride An Old Paint" (1 text)
DT, RIDEPNT*

RECORDINGS:
Almanac Singers, "I Ride an Old Paint" (General 5020B, 1941; on Almanac01, Almanac03, AlmanacCD1)
Harry Jackson, "I Ride an Old Paint" (on HJackson1)
Tex Ritter, "A-Ridin' Old Paint" (Conqueror 8144, 1933; on BackSaddle)
Pete Seeger, "I Ride an Old Paint" (on PeteSeeger17)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Goodbye, Old Paint"

File: LxU063B

I Rock from Selma

DESCRIPTION: "I rock from Selma, ting tang, I'm a Georgia ruler, ting tang, I'm a Mobile gentleman, Susie-annah, Loan me de goar to drink water!" "Den all back-shuffle and clap yo' hands." "Come shuffle up, ladies, ting tang, Oh Miss Williams, ting tang."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: dancing nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 114, (no title) (1 short text)

NOTES [23 words]: This sounds like it's made up of floating verses -- but it isn't; none of the lyrics
I Saw a Sight All In a Dream
DESCRIPTION: "I saw a sight all in a dream, There's things before I never saw," the singer sees people following the Redeemer's path. A mother prays that her children be taken care of. Her life is a warning; "she is paid the debt we all must pay".
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (Roberts-SangBranchSettlers)
KEYWORDS: dream death mother family
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #36, "I Saw a Sight All In a Dream" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3400
File: Robe036

I Saw Esau
DESCRIPTION: "'Twas just about a year ago... I found a lass, but now, alas! I find that I have lost her." The singer repeatedly encounters her with her country cousin Esau. Chorus: "I saw Esau, he saw me, And she saw I saw Esau."
AUTHOR: unknown (Music attributed to Vincent Davies in Oliver Ditson & Co, The New Comic Songster, 1870)
EARLIEST DATE: 1870 (Oliver Ditson & Co, The New Comic Songster)
KEYWORDS: courting rejection humorous wordplay
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 65, pp. 88-90, "I Saw Esau" (1 text, 1 tune)
Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, pp. 201-202, "I Saw Esau" (1 text, 1 tune)
New-Comic-Songster, p. 61, "The Country Cousin, or, I saw Esau Kissing Kate" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Peter and Iona Opie, _I Saw Esau: Traditional Rhymes of Youth_, #2, "(I Saw Esau)" (1 fragment)
Roud #4864
NOTES [24 words]: To this compare Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 202, "I Saw Esau." It's not the same song, but it's the same gimmick. - RBW

I Saw from the Beach
DESCRIPTION: "I saw from the beach, when the morning was shining, A bark o'er the waters came gloriously on." In the evening, "The bark was still there, but the waters were gone." So it is with life: spring passes and we are left "on the bleak shore alone."
AUTHOR: Thomas Moore (1779-1852)
EARLIEST DATE: 1846 (Moore-IrishMelodies-1846)
KEYWORDS: ship nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Moore-IrishMelodies-1846, p. 199, "I Saw from the Beach" (1 text)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 33, "I Saw from the Beach" (1 text)
Roud #25541
File: HMHS033A

I Saw the Beam in My Sister's Eye
DESCRIPTION: "I saw the beam in my sister's eye, Can't see the beam in mine. You'd better lef' your sister door; Go keep your own door clean." "And I had a mighty battle like Jacob of old." "I didn't intend to lef' 'em go Till Jesus bless my soul."
I Saw the Light

DESCRIPTION: "I wandered so aimless, my life filled with sin That I would not let my dear Savior in." The singer had wandered "aimless" and "Like a blind man" until Jesus came to him. Then, "I saw the light, no more darkness, no more night."

AUTHOR: Hank Williams (see notes)
EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (recording, Hank Williams; see notes)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #48, "Praise the Lord, I Saw the Light" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3410
RECORDINGS:
Minnie Gracie Gadson, "I Saw De Light" (on USSealsIsland03)
Ola Belle Reed, "I Saw the Light" (on "Rising Sun Melodies," Smithsonian Folkways Recordings SFW CD 40202 (2010, recorded 1972))
NOTES [52 words]: The Hank Williams information is from Peter K. Siegel, Liner notes to "Friends of Old Time Music -- The Folk Arrival 1961-1965." - BS
It's interesting to note that the tune of the Roberts-SangBranchSettlers version, collected in 1955, already has a tune significantly unlike the versions of this I've heard. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
File: RcIStLi

I Saw the Light from Heaven (Dry Bones (I))

DESCRIPTION: "Enoch lived to be Three hundred and sixty-five And the Lord came down And took him up to heaven alive. I saw, I saw, I saw the light from heaven come shining all around." Other assorted Bible stories, such as the dry bones in the valley

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recording, Bascom Lamar Lunsford)
KEYWORDS: religious Bible
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5757, "Dry Bones" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #17922
RECORDINGS:
Bascom Lamar Lunsford, "Dry Bones" (Brunswick 231, 1928; Brunswick 314, 1929; on AAFM2, BLLunsford01, Babylon)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ezekiel in the Valley" (theme)
cf. "Dem Bones" (theme)
cf. "Dese Bones Gwine to Rise Again" (theme)
NOTES [68 words]: Among the incidents outlined here:
* Enoch's disappearance at age 365: Gen. 5:21-24
I Saw the Pale Moon Shining on Mother's White Tombstone

DESCRIPTION: "I am a little orphan, My mother she is dead, My father is a drunkard and won't give me no bread." "I saw the pale moon shining on mother's white tombstone, The roses round it twining it's just like me." The child, with "no mother now," tells of her grief

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (recording, Betty Garland)

KEYWORDS: mother children orphan burial mourning grief

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

RECORDINGS:
   Betty Garland, "I Saw the Pale Moon Shining on Mother's White Tombstone" (on BGarland01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
   cf. "Row Us Over the Tide" (subject)
   cf. "Orphan's Lament (Two Little Children, Left Jim and I Alone)" (subject)

I Saw Three Ships

DESCRIPTION: (While sitting on a sunny bank,) the singer sees three ships arrive on Christmas. In the ship are (pretty girls) or Mary, (Joseph), and/or (Jesus). (They/all) (sing/whistle/rejoice) as they sail on to Bethlehem

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1666 (Forbes's Cantus)

KEYWORDS: religious Jesus nonballad ship

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,West),Wales) US(Ap,MW,SE) Ireland

REFERENCES (17 citations):
   Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, p. 111, "As I Sat on a Sunny Bank" (1 text, 1 tune)
   Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 98, "As I Sat on a Sunny Bank, or I Saw Three Ships" (1 text, 1 tune)
   OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 147, "The Bells of Heaven" (1 text, 1 tune)
   Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 104, "I Saw Three Ships" (1 text)
   Dearmer/VaughnWilliams/Shaw-OxfordBookOfCarols 3, "Sunny Bank"; 18, "I Saw Three Ships" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
   Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates 315, pp. 141-142, "Three Ships Came Sailing In" (1 text)
   Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 53, "I Saw Three Ships Come Sailing In" (1 fragment)
   Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 53, "I Saw Three Ships Come Sailing In" (2 excerpts, 2 tunes)
   Ritchie-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 43, "I Saw Three Ships" (1 text, 1 tune)
   Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 152, "As I Sat on the Sunny Bank" (1 text)
   Rickert-AncientEnglishChristmasCarols, pp. 213-214, "I Saw Three Ships"; p. 255, "As I Sat under a Sycamore Tree" (2 texts)
   Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 471, "I saw three ships come sailing by" (2 texts)
   Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #331, pp. 180-181, "(I saw three ships coming by)"
   Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 252, "I Saw Three Ships" (1 text)
   Silber/FolksingersWordbook, p. 379, "I Saw Three Ships Come Sailing In" (1 text)
   DT, ISAW3SHP*

ST OBB104 (Full)

Roud #700
RECORDINGS:
Elizabeth Cronin, "The Bells of Heaven" (on IRECronin01)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Douce adds. 137(22), "The Sunny Bank," T. Bloomer (Birmingham), 1821-1827; also Harding B 7(38), Harding B 7(30), Harding B 7(37), Harding B 7(35), "As I Sat on a Sunny Bank"
("As I sat on a sunny bank")[some have no title]; Harding B 7(16), "The Sunny Bank"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Glasgow Ships" (some lines, but not the tune)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
As I Sat Under a Sycamore Tree

NOTES [517 words]: It probably need not be pointed out that there is no Biblical basis for this story, and that Bethlehem is nowhere near the ocean nor any body of water large enough for any kind of ship.
This makes it worthwhile to ask, Which version is older? There are secular and Christmas versions.
The "Christmas" version is the one now widely sung, and the Combs version (the only one I think that's traditional in America) is a religious text -- but two of Gomme's three versions are secular.
Similarly, the Opie version is set on New Year's day, and lists three pretty girls as passengers. On the other hand, several texts refer to "Our Savior Christ and His Lady." This sounds very Catholic -- and hence probably old -- to me.
(I do note that the new year at one time was held to take place on March 25, the day Jesus was conceived, but I don't see a hint of a connection in the song.)
Ian Bradley, in the Penguin Book of Carols, raises the question of why three ships are needed to bring two passengers -- in his version, Jesus and Mary. This is logical, but the likely answer is that the original included Joseph as well, but he was later written out or accidentally dropped. Bradley, though, has a different explanation: That three ships sailed in because they were bearing the relics of the three Magi, or perhaps the Magi themselves. Of course, the Bible nowhere says that there were three Magi; it merely says that the Magi (unnumbered) brought three gifts.
Personally, I'd guess that three is simply an auspicious number. Sure, one ship could carry Jesus and his mother, but three ships gives him an escort -- with the other two ships representing the other two persons of the Trinity. - RBW

Also see Calennig, "Sandy Banks" (on Callenig, "A Gower Garland," Wild Goose WGS 299 CD (2000)). The notes have it noted in Wales by Rev J.D. Davies in 1877. Just two ships here. - BS OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin has the form and "Christmas day in the morning" common with "I Saw Three Ships" but has none of the usual lines.
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin: "The bells of heaven began to ring... The bells of hell began to blow... The gates of heaven were dressed in white... The gates of hell were dressed in black... I'll buy for you a little red book... I'll send you up to school to heaven....."
My inclination is to split OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin from the rest of Roud #700 but sources frequently refer to a 1794 Ritson citation in Scottish Songs that link the "bells of heaven" to "I Saw Three Ships." I don't have the 1794 edition but, from the 1869 edition: "[an] Aberdeen collection, printed in 1666, contains many songs of a much earlier period.... At the end of the same publications are three singular compositions ... which are conjectured to have been sung by peasants in the Christmas holidays before the Reformation; the music is a church chant [f: ...
Our Lord harped, our lady sang, And all the bells of heaven they rang, On Christ's sunday at morn"
(Ritson,Scottish Songs (Glasgow: Hugh Hopkins, 1869 ("Digitized by Google")) Vol. I p. 99). - BS

I See Paris, I See France

DESCRIPTION: "I see Paris (London, New York), I see France, I see someone's underpants"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore)
KEYWORDS: clothes nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, p. 119, "(I see London (Paris))" (1 text); compare the next item,
"Teacher, teacher, I declare, I see someone's underwear"
NOTES [20 words]: Not a game, just a nasty rhyme -- but common enough that even I heard it on playgrounds, so I'm including it here. - RBW
I See the Moon

DESCRIPTION: "I see the moon, the moon sees me, God bless the (moon/sailors) and God bless me."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1784 (Gammer Gurton's Garland, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(MW) Britain(England)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 356, "I see the moon" (1 text)
- Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #425, p. 202, "(I see the moon, and the moon sees me)"
- Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 176, "I See the Moon" (3 texts)

ADDITIONAL: Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, third edition, 1928, notes to #444 ("I see the moon") (1 short text)
Roud #19690

NOTES [67 words]: I believe I learned this, or the first line of it at least, somewhere in my youth, with a tune similar to the "Fiddle-I-Fee" versions of "I Had a Little Rooster." I know of no folk recordings, but that seems to imply some sort of tradition somewhere. And I have seen variants printed in non-folk sources. Apparently there was a very popular recording issued some decades back, but I know no details. - RBW

I Shall Not Be Moved

DESCRIPTION: "I shall not, I shall not be moved/Just like a tree that's planted by the water/I shall not be moved". Other verses substitute "I'm sanctified and holy, I shall not be moved..." "I'm on my way to heaven..." etc..

AUTHOR: Alfred H. Ackley

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Ackley, "Hymns for His Praise No. 2")

KEYWORDS: virtue floatingverses nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 596, "I Shall Not Be Blue" (2 texts)
- Jones-MinstrelOfTheAppalachians-Bascom-Lamar-Lunsford, pp 221-222, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 288-289, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (2 texts, 1 tune)
- Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 240, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (1 text)

RECORDINGS:
- A. P. Carter Family, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (Acme DF-103, n.d. but prob. early 1950s)
- Rev. Edward Clayborn, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (Vocalion 1243, 1929; rec. 1928)
- Davis & Nelson, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (Paramount 3186/Broadway 8189/QRS 9023, 1930)
- Jimmie Dickens, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (Columbia 21068, 1953; rec. 1952)
- Dixie Reelers, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (Montgomery Ward M-7100, 1937; Bluebird B-7958, 1938; rec. 1936)
- Folkmasters, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (on Fmst01)
- Roosevelt Graves, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (Paramount 12974, 1930; rec. 1929; on StuffDreams1)
- George Herod, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (on MuSouth07)
- Harmonizing Four, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (Gotham G772, rec. early 1950s)
- Harvesters, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (Columbia 41074, 1957)
- I. C. Glee Club, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (OKeh 8872, 1931; rec. 1930)
- Kentucky Holiness Singers, "I Will Not Be Removed" (Vocalion 5439; rec. 1930)
- Frank & James McCravy, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (Brunswick 196, 1928; Brunswick 3784, 1928; Oriole 8103, c. 1932; rec. 1927) (Banner 32308, 1931)
Charley Patton, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (Paramount 12986, 1930; rec. 1929)
Rev. D. C. Rice & congregation "I Shall Not Be Removed" (Vocalion 1675, 1932; rec. 1929)
Joe & Emma Taggart, "I Will Not Be Removed" (Vocalion 1062, 1926)
Taskiana Four, "I Shall Not Be Moved" (Victor 20183, 1926)
Utica Jubilee Singers, "I Shall Not Be Moved" Victor 24113, 1932)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "We Shall Not Be Moved"

NOTES [54 words]: I include this hymn, common in African-American tradition, primarily because it formed the basis for the labor/civil rights anthem, "We Shall Not Be Moved." For the story of that song, see its entry. - PJS
As Paul says, it does have a place in tradition -- e.g. it is nearly the only pure hymn in Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: RcISNBM

I Shoo Shiwawa

DESCRIPTION: The boys on the football team love a girl. They ask how her father/boyfriend is. He died last night from eating raw fish. A player demonstrates how he died [Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame:"one girl falls into the other girl's arms"]

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1983 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)

KEYWORDS: love death food playparty

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame, p. 480, ("I know a little Dutch girl") (1 text)

NOTES [123 words]: Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame: "An amalgam of 'I Am a Pretty Little Dutch Girl', whose tune it uses, 'O Susie Anna' [for the name of the Dutch girl and chorus], and a quadruple 'Hi tiddley i ti' ending."
As David Rowan points out, the action in the Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame text also goes with another text, "I Shoo Shiwawa": "How was your boyfriend, all right? Down in the fish shop, last night. What did he die of? Raw fish. How did he die then? Like this...." In this version the Dutch girl becomes an English girl, and her name changes from "Hi Susie Anna" to "I Shoo Shiwawa."
(Source: David Rowan, "Have Children Really Forgotten How to Play?" at the DavidRowan site, reprinted from the (UK) Times Magazine, Saturday, May 21, 2005). - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: OpGa480C

I Shot My Poor Teacher (With a Big Rubber Band)

DESCRIPTION: "On top of (something), All covered with (something), I shot my poor teacher With a (big) rubber band. I shot her with glory, I shot her with pride. I hardly could miss her; she's forty feet wide." The student describes harassing, killing, burying teacher

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1975

KEYWORDS: humorous homicide abuse burial parody derivative

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 93, "I Shot My Poor Teacher" (1 text, tune referenced)
Roud #16483

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "On Top of Old Smokey" (tune)

NOTES [24 words]: The proof that this is a folk song is that I've learned at least two versions in my life. It's just that few adults will admit to knowing it. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: PHCF5993
I Sing of a Maiden that Is Makeless (Matchless, Mateless)

DESCRIPTION: "I sing of a maiden that is matchless/mateless, King of all kings To her son she chose." Jesus arrives as still as dew in April to his mother's bower."Mother and mayden Was never none but she. Well may such a lady God's mother be."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1430 (British Library -- Sloane MS. 2593)

KEYWORDS: religious Jesus nonballad childbirth MiddleEnglish

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (15 citations):
Hirsh-MedievalLyric-MiddleEnglishLyricsBalladsCarols #12, "(I syng of a mayden)" (1 text); there is a photo of the manuscript on p. 39
Rickert-AncientEnglishChristmasCarols, p. 6, "As Dew in April" (1 text)
Sidgwick/Chambers-EarlyEnglishLyrics LIV, p. 107, "(no title)" (1 text)
Steivick-OneHundredMiddleEnglishLyrics 38, "(no title)" (1 text)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #1367
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #2281

Douglas Gray, _The Oxford Book of Late Medieval Verse and Prose_, Oxford University Press, 1985, p. 161, "I Sing of a Maiden" (1 text)
Maxwell S. Luria & Richard Hoffman, _Middle English Lyrics_, a Norton Critical Edition, Norton, 1974, p. 170, "I Sing of a Maiden" (1 text)
Karen Saupe, editor, _Middle English Marian Lyrics_, TEAMs (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 1998, #13, p. 61, "(I syng of a myden)" (1 text)
R. T. Davies, editor, _Medieval English Lyrics: A Critical Anthology_, 1963, #66, p. 155, "I Sing of a Maiden" (1 text)
Karin Boklund-Lagopolou, _I have a yong suster: Popular song and Middle English lyric_, Four Courts Press, 2002, p. 67, "(I syng of a maiden)" (1 text)
Carleton Brown, editor, _Religious Lyrics of the XVth Century_, Oxford University Press, 1939, #81, p. 119,"The Maiden Makeless" (1 text)

MANUSCRIPT: {MSSloane2593}, London, British Library, MS. Sloane 2593, folio 10

NOTES [551 words]: When I started adding Middle English texts to the Index, I for a very long time resisted including this -- although it is found in the extremely important MS. Sloane 2593, that is the only full text, which is not much attestation, and to me it looks like a church piece, not folk. However, it is extremely well-known and liked -- e.g. Hirsh-MedievalLyric-MiddleEnglishLyricsBalladsCarols, p. 47, declares it "Quite possibly the greatest of all Middle English lyrics, a sophisticated, allusive, and engaging poem, which is both simple yet complex, affecting yet detached, reflective yet celebratory. Just as poems about the Nativity often encode Christ's passion, so this poem, so ostensibly about the Annunciation, encodes Christ's birth, which it identifies both in natural and scriptural imagery, and as a lover coming to his beloved." Many college English courses include it in their texts.

And there is a brief citation in a sermon of the period, which it has been claimed is evidence that it was widely known. I am far from sure I agree, but when in doubt, I index. The citation, according to the DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, is from Oxford, Bodleian Library Barlow 24, folio 188: "Mayde wyff and moder whas neuer but ye, Well may suche a Lady Goddys modyr be" -- an English text within a Latin sermon.

Also, the great scholar W. W. Greg saw similarities to a poem, "Nu is fules singet hand maket hure blisse," which is found in MScambridgeTrinity323: Cambridge University, Trinity College MS. 323, the manuscript which contains "Judas" [Child 23] (Boklund-Lagopolou, p. 67).

In addition to printing the text, Luria and Hoffman include four papers about this piece (only a tiny fraction of the critical literature) by Thomas Jemielity and Stephen Manning, D. G. Halliburton, and Leo Spitzer (pp. 325-349).

Hirsh (following various others) suggests that the stillness mentioned repeatedly in this song is derived from Wisdom of Solomon (the supposed source of a lot of Christmas material that bears only the faintest relation to the claimed source). In this case, the allusion is to Wisdom 18:13-15, given in the New Revised Standard Version as:

[13] ...God's child [the Greek says "son"].
For while gentle silence enveloped all things,
and night in its swift course was now half-gone, your all-powerful word leaped from heaven, from the royal throne...

Hirsh also mentions Isaiah 26:19 ("For your dew is a radiant dew") and Hosea 14:6 (actually 14:5, "I will be like the dew to Israel") as "a symbol for renewal and joy." One might perhaps add Judges 6:36-40, where Gideon asks God for two signs involving dew on a sheepskin.

According to George Arthur Buttrick et al, editor, The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible, four volumes, 1962 (a fifth supplementary volume was published later), volume I, p. 839, "As a figure of speech, 'dew' represents abundant fruitfulness (Gen. 27:28), refreshment and renewing (Ps. 110:3, Hos. 145-H[ebrew] 14:6), what is beyond man's powers (Mic. 5:7-H[ebrew] 5:6), a silent coming (II Sam. 17:2), impermanence (Hos. 13:3), and exposure (Song of S. 5:2)." Obviously all but the last two fit with this poem.

The piece was set to music by Benjamin Britten.

For more on manuscript Sloane 2593, see the notes to "Robyn and Gandeleyn" [Child 115]. - RBW

---

I Sowed Some Seeds

DESCRIPTION: The singer courts his landlord's daughter: "being a stranger I fell in danger." "I sowed some seed, all in some grove ... [where] grows no green." The landlord's daughter must "reap the seed that I have sown." She has a son.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Reeves-The Everlasting Circle)

KEYWORDS: sex childbirth pregnancy

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Reeves/Sharp-The Idiom Of The People 45, "I Sowed Some Seeds" (1 text)
Reeves-The Everlasting Circle 72, "I Sowed Some Seeds" (1 text)

Roud #914

File: ReSh045

I Struck for Better Wages

DESCRIPTION: "I struck for better wages and they said I was a fool, And the crafty 'agitator' merely used me as a tool." His children starve; they say it serves him right, because it hurts the economy -- except at election time, when the politicians pander

AUTHOR: unknown (one edition attributes it to "Kudyard Ripling")

EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Auckland "New Zealand Herald," according to Bailey/Roth-Shanties By The Way-NZ)

KEYWORDS: political New Zealand hardtimes strike

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Bailey/Roth-Shanties By The Way-NZ. p. 84, "I Struck for Better Wages" (1 text)
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-Song Of A Young Country, p. 84, "I Struck for Better Wages" (1 text, 1 tune)
Garland-Faces In The Firelight-NZ, p. 166, "(I Struck for Better Wages)" (1 excerpt)

File: BaRo084

I Tend the Leers for Seven Years

DESCRIPTION: "I tend the leers for seven years, And now I am the boss, I am the boss, I am the boss, I am the boss, you see." A song to tease a worker promoted to foreman. (Leers were annealing chambers in glassworks.)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (Nestler)

KEYWORDS: boss work

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
I Think I'll Get Wed When the Roses is Red

DESCRIPTION: "I think I'll get wed When the roses is red, And the weather is lovely and dry. Hand in hand we will stand, At the altar we'll stand, At the altar united to be."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (England)
KEYWORDS: marriage
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: George Allan England, _Vikings of the Ice: Being the Log of a Tenderfoot on the Great Newfoundland Seal Hunt_ (also published as _The Greatest Hunt in the World_), Doubleday, 1924, p. 233, "(no title)" (1 excerpt)
NOTES [49 words]: England describes this as a sentimental ballad, and everything else he cites in his book has been printed in some other folk collection, so I'm including it. But I don't recognize his fragment as part of anything else, so here it sits, awaiting, shall we say, union with the rest of its text. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: GAEV233

I Think They'd Be Fain that Wad Follow Wi' You

DESCRIPTION: The singer complains that some girls have one or even two lads, but none will have him. He says he would make a good and loving match but even black Maggie "bade me be gone, for an aul' stoopid soo"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan7)
KEYWORDS: courting nonballad bachelor
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1389, "I Think They'd Be Fain that Wad Follow Wi' You" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7248
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Howes o' Glenorchy" (tune, per Greig/Duncan7)

File: GrD81389

I Thought I Saw My Brother

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "It fit him very well (x2), He put on a starry crown, And it fit him very well." Verses: "I thought I saw my brother When he entered the bright kingdom." "Swing me chariot swing me All my trials with me."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious
FOUND IN: West Indies(Bahamas)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories 14, "I Tho't I Saw My Brothe" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [32 words]: The description is based on the Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories text. The first two lines of each verse are followed by two tag lines: "Put on the long white robe And it fit him very well." - BS

Last updated in version 4.2

File: Edwa014

I Thought to the Bottom We Would Go

DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls a voyage "with the skipper Of a god-damned Yankee clipper" in which "I thought to the bottom we would go." Leaving port with a large cargo of supplies and a few passengers (half of them whores), the crew narrowly averts disaster.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1982
KEYWORDS: ship storm hardtimes whore
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 97-98, "I Thought to the Bottom We Would Go" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [22 words]: I feel quite sure that this is a fragment of something else -- but the surviving portion is so damaged that I cannot tell what. - RBW
File: MCB097

I Tickled Nancy

DESCRIPTION: "I'm living in the city, but I like the country life." The singer recalls his happy past: "I'd tickle Nancy, and Nancy'd tickle me, Before we get married, some pleasure we'd see."

AUTHOR: unknown (but probably patched up by Uncle Dave Macon)
EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (recorded by Uncle Dave Macon)
KEYWORDS: courting
FOUND IN: US
Roud #18323
RECORDINGS:
Uncle Dave Macon, "I'll Tickle Nancy" (1935)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "She Tickled Me" (theme)
NOTES [25 words]: This is similar enough to "She Tickled me" that I considered lumping them. But the divergences are also large, and I can't find a connecting link. - RBW
File: RcITckNa

I Told Them That I Saw You

DESCRIPTION: The singer and girl of "Just Tell Them That You Saw Me" meet again. He tells her that her family "wants her to come home. Their hearts are breaking for you while far away to roam." She breaks down as she thinks of her aged mother and her childhood.

AUTHOR: George M. Cohen
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Dean-FlyingCloud)
KEYWORDS: mother children separation
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dean-FlyingCloud, p. 125, "I Told Them That I Saw You" (1 text)
Roud #9599
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Just Tell Them That You Saw Me" (characters)
NOTES [20 words]: This is a direct sequel to Paul Dresser's "Just Tell Them That You Saw Me," though with even less place in tradition. - RBW
File: Dean125

I Truly Understand You Love Another Man

DESCRIPTION: Floating verses; "I wish to the lord I'd never been born," "Who's going to shoe your foot," "I'll never listen to what no other woman says...." Chorus: "I truly understand that you love another man/And your heart shall no longer be mine."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recording, "Shortbuckle" Roark and family)
KEYWORDS: love floatingverses nonballad rejection
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblerSongbook, pp. 24-25, "I Truly Understand" (1 text, 1
I Tuck Me Some Corn to the County Seat

DESCRIPTION: "I tuck me some corn to the county seat, Three bushel of corn, three bushel of wheat. The miller tuck fur his millin'-turn, Three bushel of corn, three bushel of wheat."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (JAFL 45, from Harold Greene)

KEYWORDS: miller commerce nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 179, "I Tuck Me Some Corn to the County Seat" (1 text)

Roud #6583

File: BrIII179

I Used to Have a Father

DESCRIPTION: "I used to have a father who sat and talked to me, But now I have no father -- what pleasure do I see? I looked out of the window to hear the organ play And there I saw my father as in his grave he lay."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (JAFL 45, from Harold Greene)

KEYWORDS: death father music

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 247, "I Used to Have a Father" (1 short text)

Roud #4194

File: MHAp247

I Used to Work in Chicago

DESCRIPTION: The singer works in a succession of stores, asking female customers their desires, mistakenly fulfilling them and getting fired.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (recording, Three Bits of Rhythm)

KEYWORDS: bawdy humorous

FOUND IN: Australia Britain(England) US(Ro,SW)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 245-251, "I Used to Work in Chicago" (3 texts, 1 tune)

DT, CHCAGO*

Roud #4837

RECORDINGS:
Pearl Trio [Larry Vincent], "I Used to Work in Chicago" (Pearl 53-A, 1947)
Three Bits of Rhythm, "I Used to Work in Chicago" (Modern Music MM118, 1946)
I Walk the Road Again

DESCRIPTION: The singer is "a poor unlucky chap" and "very fond of rum." He has rambled far and wide, taking odd jobs here and there. Whenever things go bad, "I got up and hoisted my turkey and I walked the road again." (Now he hopes to find a job and settle down.)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1944
KEYWORDS: rambling work drink unemployment
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 178, "I Walk the Road Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST FSC178 (Partial)
Roud #4602
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "From Ogemaw" (floating lyrics)
cf. "The Feeing Time (II)" (floating lyrics)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
I'll Hit the Road Again, Boys
NOTES [28 words]: Cazden, early in his career, attributed this to the father of his informant George Edwards (who probably did adapt the text somewhat), but later retracted the claim. - RBW

I Wandered by the Brookside

DESCRIPTION: Walking by the mill at night the only sound the singer hears is her heart beating. She waits to hear one footstep or word. Finally "a touch came from behind ... the beating of our own two hearts Was all the sound I heard"

AUTHOR: words: R.M. Milnes/music: A.B. Clark ?
EARLIEST DATE: 1848 (broadside, LOCSheet sm1848 440340)
KEYWORDS: courting love separation
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 35, "As I Wandered by the Brookside" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Ox 301, "I Wandered By a Brookside" (1 text)
Roud #2418
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(405), "As I Wandered by the Brookside," J. Cadman (Manchester), 1850-1855; also Firth b.27(524), Harding B 11(3526), "As I Wandered by the Brookside"; Harding B 11(3162), "I Wandered by the Brook Side"
LOCSheet, sm1848 440340, "I Wandered by the Brookside," Wm. Hall and Son (New York), 1848; also sm1848 440340, sm1875 08167, sm1880 15884, "I Wandered by the Brookside" (tune)
LOCsinging, as106440, "I Wandered by the Brookside," J. Andrews (New York), 1853-1859; also as106450, "I Wandered by the Brookside"

NOTES [33 words]: Broadside LOCsinging as113120: J. Andrews dating per Studying Nineteenth-Century Popular Song by Paul Charosh in American Music, Winter 1997, Vol 15.4, Table 1, available at FindArticles site. - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: CrMa035
I Wanna Play Piano in a Whorehouse
DESCRIPTION: The singer tells us of his preferred profession, noting that "carnal copulation is here to stay."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1986
KEYWORDS: work music bawdy whore
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 251-252, "I Wanna Play Piano in a Whorehouse" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, PLAYPIAN
Roud #27846
File: EM251

I Want a Nice Little Fellow
DESCRIPTION: The singer hopes for a rich, pleasant husband so she won't spend her whole life working. Johnny promises her wealth, but mother notes that her husband made the same promise and broke it. The girl promises to return if Johnny breaks his promise
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Kelly Harrell)
KEYWORDS: courting love money hardtimes mother children father betrayal abuse technology drink
FOUND IN: US
Roud #13154
RECORDINGS:
Kelly Harrell, "I Want a Nice Little Fellow" (Victor 20867, 1927; on KHarrell02)
NOTES [45 words]: The reference to automobiles implies that this song is not much older than Harrell's recording. It also has a sort of a prohibitionist undertone. But it feels traditional. While I suspect it of being a composed song, I don't think Harrell learned it from sheet music. - RBW
File: RcIWANLF

I Want a Pretty Woman
DESCRIPTION: Call and response. Call is the singer saying he wants a pretty woman who can sell what he has grown. Response is a list of goods to be sold such as cane and corn.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (WITrinidadVillage01)
KEYWORDS: commerce farming nonballad beauty
FOUND IN: West Indies(Trinidad)
RECORDINGS:
Allen Lovelace and Henry Williams, "I Want a Pretty Woman" (on WITrinidadVillage01)
File: RcIwaPrW

I Want a Teddy Bear
DESCRIPTION: Skipping rhyme/game. "I want a teddy bear, With blue eyes and curly hair, Up among the Eskimos, Having a game of dominoes."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)
KEYWORDS: playparty animal
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 105, "(I want a teddy bear)" (1 text)
File: SuSm105A
I Want Jesus to Walk With Me
DESCRIPTION: "I want Jesus to walk with me (x2). All along my pilgrim journey, I want Jesus to walk with my." "In my trials, Lord, walk with me (x2). When the shades of life are falling, Lord, I want Jesus to walk with me." "In my sorrows, Lord..." "In my troubles,"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1997 (Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit, pp. 58-59, "I Want Jesus to Walk With Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #21566
RECORDINGS:
Gullah Kinfolk, "Walk Wit' Me" (on USSeasland04)
File: WarSp053

I Want More Religion
DESCRIPTION: "I want more religion, Lord, I want more religion, Lord, I want more religion To help me unto God. Religion makes me happy And then I want to go To leave this world of sorrow and trouble here below. Fathers, aren't you happy, And don't you want to go...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad death
FOUND IN: US(MA,So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, p. 59, "I Want More Religion" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7751
File: KPL059

I Want to Be a Cowboy
DESCRIPTION: "I want to be a cowboy and with the cowboys stand, Big spurs on my bootheels and a lasso in my hand." The singer desires life on the range, hopes to get drunk in Cheyenne, and expects to "rope the slant old heathen and yank them straight to hell."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1922
KEYWORDS: cowboy drink derivative
FOUND IN: US(Ro)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 79, pp. 173-174, "I Want to Be a Cowboy" (1 text)
Welsch-NebraskaPioneerLore, p. 10, "I Want to Be a Cowboy" (1 text)
Roud #4977
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Want to Be an Angel" (source song, according to Welsch)
File: LPnd173

I Want to Be a Mormon
DESCRIPTION: "I want to be a Mormon And live the Mormon shine (sic.) In the shade of a big cactus And drink sweet Dixie wine. The Mormons they are happy And contented all their lives, with a little patch of carrots And their houses full of wives."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah)
KEYWORDS: home marriage religious
FOUND IN: US(Ro)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #213, "I Want to Be a Mormon" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #10898
NOTES [76 words]: Although apparently collected from a Mormon, I have to suspect this is in fact an anti-Mormon song, given that it refers to drinking (discouraged by the Mormons) and refers to the man having multiple wives. The song seems to view Mormonism as great fun (at least for the men); in fact, the Mormons had to work extremely hard to survive in Utah, and (for the obvious reason that men and women are about equally numerous) very few ever had multiple wives. - RBW Last updated in version 3.8
File: Hubb213

I Want to Be an Angel

DESCRIPTION: "I want to be an angel And with the angels stand, A crown upon my forehead, A harp in my hand. Outshine the sun (x3), And that's Beulah land."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 233, "I Want to Be an Angel" (1 text)
Roud #18156
NOTES [27 words]: The name "Beulah," used in Isaiah 62:4, means "married"; it isn't really an appropriate name for a country, but this is not evident from the King James Version. - RBW Last updated in version 5.2
File: KiWaBlGI

I Want To Die A-Shouting

DESCRIPTION: Verse pattern is: (floating line), "I want to die a-shouting, I want to feel my Savior near, When soul and body's parting," (floating line) "I want to die a-shouting," (floating line) "I want to die a-shouting"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Barton-OldPlantationHymns)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Barton-OldPlantationHymns, p. 12, "I Want To Die A-Shouting" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [74 words]: Floating lines include "Amazing grace, how sweet the sound" and "Am I a soldier of the cross."
The refrain may also be a floater. Specifically, The Camp Meeting Chorister (Philadelphia: W.A. Leary, 1844 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), #115 pp. 109-110, ("Oh! that I had some humble place") includes the lines "I want to live a Christian here; I want to die while shouting; I want to feel my Saviour near, When soul and body's parting." - BS Last updated in version 4.0
File: Bart012A

I Want To Die Easy When I Die

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I want to die easy when I die, When I die When I die (x2), I want to die easy when I die Shout salvation as I fly, I want to die easy when I die, When I die" Verses, in the same pattern: "I want to see my mother (Jesus) when I die..."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Johnson and Johnson)
KEYWORDS: death nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslands, p. 244, ("I want a die easy when I die") (1 text)
Roud #16660
I Want to Die Like Weeping Mary

DESCRIPTION: The leader starts "I want to die like weepin' Mary," and the response to that and all other lines is "'side my Jesus." The leader continues "side by side," "any way," "sit 'side"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1983 (McIntosh1)
KEYWORDS: death Bible nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Lucille Holloway and the McIntosh County Shouters, "I Want to Die Like Weepin' Mary" (on McIntosh1)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Oh, Mary, Don't You Weep" ("Mary weeping" theme)

NOTES [620 words]: Mary weeping is in John 20:11-12: "But Mary [Magdalene] stood without at the sepulchre weeping; and as she wept, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre, And seeth two angels in white sitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain" (King James).

On the other hand, discounting the explicit reference to weeping, the reference could be to one of the other two Marys. At the crucifixion, "Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene" (John 19:25, King James). So Ramey -- looking at "Oh, Mary, Don't You Weep" -- believes it is Mary the mother of Jesus who weeps (Lauri Ramey, "The Theology of the Lyric Tradition in S African American Spirituals" in Journal of the American Academy of Religion, Vol. 70, No. 2 (Jun 2002 (available online by JSTOR)), p. 360).

There is no mention of either Mary's death in the Bible. What stories about that were current in the Sea Islands? - BS
The question of which Mary wept is complex. That Mary Magdalene did so in John 20 is clear, but often the reference is to Mary of Bethany. In John 11, Mary mourns for her brother Lazarus, although the weeping is not explicit. Mary is explicitly said to be the woman who anointed Jesus's feet and wiped them with her hair (John 11:2: 12:1-8). In John, she is not described as weeping, but there is a parallel in the Synoptic Gospels in which an UNNAMED woman anoints Jesus's feet at Bethany, and in Luke 7:38 this woman is said to weep, although this is not mentioned in Mark or Luke. Thus the weeping sinner might be Mary of Bethany. Or might not, of course.
[To make matters worse, there is much dispute about how many women were at the foot of the cross, because the four gospels give different lists. All, of course, were considered saints, and all had legends told about them:
* Mary mother of Jesus (John 19:25): Taken up bodily into heaven.
* Mary Magdalene (Matthew 27:56, Mark 15:40f.; John 19:25): Equated (surely falsely) with Mary of Bethany, and often said to have gone with Martha and Lazarus of Bethany (in this legend, her brother and sister) to evangelize Provence, where she died after a long life of prayer. In the east, where the equation with Mary of Bethany was less clear, there is a legend she died in Ephesus.
* Mary the mother of James and Joses/Joseph (Matthew 27:56, Mark 15:40, Luke 8:3): usually identified with one of the other Marys, so there are few explicit legends about her
* Mary the wife of Clopas (John 19:25; the grammar does not make it clear whether she is the sister of the Virgin Mary or someone else; the KJV spelling "Cleophas" is a textual corruption): Again, usually identified with one of the other Marys.
Matthew 17:56 says the mother of the sons of Zebedee was also there, but does not give her a name, unless she is also the mother of James and Joses. Mark 15:40 also lists Salome. Luke 24:10 lists Mary Magdalene, Joanna, and Mary Mother of Jesus were the ones who came to the empty tomb.
The confusion all this causes was so much that one Coptic source twisted itself into knots trying to make all these Maries into one person by saying that her father had two names, and she was born in Magdala, and she was related to James; see M(ontague) R(hodes) James, The Apocryphal New Testament, Oxford, 1924 (references are to the edition of 1972 of the corrected edition of 1953), p. 87.
And, as we saw, the foot of the cross the only place where a Mary weeps.
Bottom line: There were plenty of legends floating around from a very early date about how a weeping Mary died, but since they were non-Biblical, we cannot say if they are the legends the
I Want to Die Like-a Lazarus Die
DESCRIPTION: "I want to die like-a Lazarus die, Die like-a Lazarus die, I want to die like-a Lazarus die, like-a Lazarus die, like-a Lazarus die." "Titty Rita die like-a Lazarus die...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious death nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 98, "I Want to Die Like-a Lazarus Die" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12055
NOTES [58 words]: There are two Lazaruses mentioned in the New Testament, and both die in ways which would probably be considered desirable. The first Lazarus, described in Luke 16:9ffff., is merely a character in a parable, but he dies and goes to "Abraham's bosom." The story of the second fills much of John 11, which tells how Jesus brought him back to life. - RBW

I Want to Go Back to Georgia
DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I want to go back to Georgia, And I want to go back to Georgia." Verses float: "The 'coon he hates a ringy tail." "The higher you'll climb the cherry tree." "I won't have you to save my life... But I can get a-plenty more, For 18 cents a dozen."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1944 (Morris, Southern Folklore Quarterly)
KEYWORDS: travel home floatingverses courting
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #140, "I Want to Go Back to Georgia" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5047
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Fly Around, My Pretty Little Miss" (floating lyrics) and references there

I Want to Go to Baltimore
DESCRIPTION: "I want to go to Baltimore, I want to go to France, I want to go to Baltimore To see the ladies dance."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: playparty travel dancing nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 101, "I Want to Go to Baltimore" (1 fragment)
Roud #7902
NOTES [10 words]: Clearly a fragment of something, but it's not clear what. - RBW

I Want To Go To Heaven
DESCRIPTION: "Give away Jordan (3x), I want to go to heaven to see my Lord." Verses include "Just let me put on my long white robe ... I'll march Jerusalem 'round and 'round"
I Want to Go to Morrow

DESCRIPTION: Singer sets out for the town of Morrow. He tries to buy a ticket to Morrow "and return tomorrow night." The agent says he should have gone to Morrow yesterday and back today, for "the train that goes to Morrow is a mile upon its way."

AUTHOR: Lew Sully
EARLIEST DATE: 1898 (sheet music published)
KEYWORDS: questions train travel railroading humorous nonsense paradox
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 32-33, "To Morrow' (1 text)
DT, MORROW
Roud #9554
RECORDINGS:
Dan W. Quinn, "I Want to Go to Morrow" (Improved Berliner 438, c. 1900; Victor [Monarch] 12, 1900)
Bert Shepard, "I Want to Go to Morrow" (Victor 899, 1901)
Harry Spencer, "How I Got to Morrow" (Columbia 855, 1902)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Yuba Dam" (subject, such as it is, and general atmosphere)
NOTES [132 words]: Morrow, Ohio, said to be the subject of this song, is a small town just northeast of Cincinnati. - RBW
That may be, but according to the WPA guide for Kansas, the town of Morrowville "was named for its founder, Cal Morrow, State Senator (...). Until 1896 the town was called Morrow, but its name was changed to Morrowville after the railroad company had complained that its ticket agents were confused when travelers asked for 'a ticket to Morrow (tomorrow).'" Perfect timing for Lew Sully's song, published two years later. - PJS
You have me there. The only counterargument is, Why would enough people want to go to Morrow, Kansas for it to be a problem? - RBW
And, to be fair, the song does say, "There is a town called Morrow in the state of O-hi-o". Did the same thing happen twice? - PJS
File: DTmorrow

I Want To Go Where Jesus Is

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I Want to go where Jesus is," "To play upon the golden harp"(3x) Verse: "Jesus, my all, to heaven has gone, To play upon the golden harp, He whom I fix my hopes upon, To play upon the golden harp"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Barton-OldPlantationHymns)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus music
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Barton-OldPlantationHymns, p. 13, "I Want To Go Where Jesus Is" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: Bart013A
I Want to See Jesus (Bathe in the River)

DESCRIPTION: "I want to see Jesus in the morning -- Bathe in the river. I want to go to heaven -- Bathe in the river. Oh, chillun, get on board, Oh, chillun, get on board; Oh, Jesus is aboard, Oh, chillun, get aboard; Oh, preacher get on board."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Henry, from "the singing of Negroes at Skyland, Virginia")

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 192, "I Want to See Jesus" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Get On Board, Little Children" (lyrics)

NOTES [74 words]: This looks a lot like "Get On Board, Little Children," but with no tune, seemingly only the one text, and several lines quite unique, I think I have to keep them separate. Henry records the second line as "Bathe in the River" (note the capitalization), implying the River Jordan and the washing away of sins. This is probably a correct interpretation, but I have avoided this usage since we do not know what the singers meant with certainty. - RBW

File: MHAp192

I Want to See My Wife

DESCRIPTION: The worker (on the rail line?) expresses his loneliness and frustration: "I want to see my wife and children, Bim!... Captain Walker, where in the world did you come from?... Captain, send me a cool drink of water...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1963

KEYWORDS: work worker hardtimes loneliness separation

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 94-95, (no title) (2 texts, probably partial, 1 tune)

File: CNFM094

I Want You All to Be There

DESCRIPTION: "When I get on the mountain top, I want you all to be there, And hear my wings go flippety-flop, I want you all to be there."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Randolph)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Randolph 455, "When I Get on Yonder Hill" (2 texts, but only the "B" fragment goes here)

Roud #911

NOTES [36 words]: Randolph, for no reason I can see, classifies this with "When I Get On Yonder Hill," a fragment of "Shule Agra." To me it looks like a fragment of a southern hymn, which was also the understanding of the informant. - RBW

File: R455

I Wante Go Home

DESCRIPTION: "I wanta go home, I wanta go home, The bullets they whistle, the cannons they roar. I don't wanta go to the trenches no more. Ship me over the sea, Where the Allemand can't get at me: O, ny! I'm too young to die, I wanta go home!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions)

KEYWORDS: soldier homesickness home war

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (2 citations):
I Was Born About Ten Thousand Years Ago (Bragging Song)

DESCRIPTION: "I was born about ten thousand years ago, And there's nothing in this world that I don't know." The singer boasts of his past accomplishments, e.g. watching Adam and Eve eat the apple (and eating the core); teaching Solomon to read....

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1913

KEYWORDS: humorous bragging lie Bible

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,Ro,SE,So)

REFERENCES (14 citations):
- Randolph 410, "I Was Born About Four Thousand Years Ago" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 426, "I Was Born About Ten Thousand Years Ago" (2 texts plus a fragment and mention of 2 more)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 426, "I Was Born About Ten Thousand Years Ago" (1 tune plus a text ringing)
- Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 187, "The Historian" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Richardson/Spaeth-AmericanMountainSongs, p. 101, "Four Thousand Years Ago" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol3, pp. 14-15, "10,000 Years Ago" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 330-331, "I Was Born About Ten Thousand Years Ago" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #180, "I Was Born About Six Thousand Years Ago" (1 text)
- Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 346-350, "The Highly Educated Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Rorrer-RamblingBlues-LifeAndSongsOfCharliePoole, p. 69, "I'm the Man That Rode the Mule 'Round the World" (1 text, with a final verse, and probably an extended introductory verse, by Charlie Poole)
- Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 170, "I Was Born About Ten Thousand Years Ago" (1 text)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 26, "I Was Born About Ten Thousand Years Ago" (1 text)
- DT, (JUSTFACT) (BORN10K)

Roud #3127

RECORDINGS:
- Clarence Ashley & Tex Isley, "I'm The Man That Rode the Mule Around the World" (on Ashley01)
- Dwight Butcher, "The Man That Rode a Mule Around the World" (Victor 23810, 1933)
- Fiddlin' John Carson, "When Abraham and Isaac Rushed the Can" (OKeh 40181, 1924)
- Cramer Brothers, "I Was Born Four Thousand Years Ago" (Broadway 757, c. 1927 [as I Was Born 4000 Years Ago]); Broadway 8059, c. 1932; rec. 1927)
- Crockett's Kentucky Mountaineers "I Was Born 10,000 Years Ago" (Crown 3101/Homestead 23040/OMontgomery Ward M-3024 [as Harlan Miners Fiddlers]/Joe Davis 3506 [as Kentucky Mountaineers]/Varsity 5088 [as Hale's Kentucky Mountaineers], all c.1931)
- Vernon Dalhart, "I'm the Man That Rode the Mule Around the World" (CYL: Edison 5278, n.d.)
- Otto Gray & his Oklahoma Cowboys, "4000 Years Ago" (Vocalion 5479, rec. 1931)
- Georgia Organ Grinders, "Four Thousand Years Ago" (Columbia 15445-D, 1929)
- Kelly Harrell, "I Was Born About 10,000 Years Ago" (OKeh 40486, 1925; on KHarring01)
- Bradley Kincaid, "Four Thousand Years Ago" (Gennett 6761/Champion 15687 [as Dan Hughey]/Supertone 9362, 1929; Superior 2656, 1931; Champion 45057 [as Dan Hughey], c. 1935)
- Uncle Dave Macon, "Man That Rode the Mule Around the World" (Vocalion 5356, 1929)
- Lester McFarland & Robert Gardner, "I Was Born Four Thousand Years Ago" (Brunswick 110/Vocalion 5028, 1927; Supertone S-2033, 1930)
- Charlie Poole and the North Carolina Ramblers, "I'm the Man That Rode the Mule 'Round the World" (Columbia 15043-D, 1925, with an extended introductory verse by Poole; on CPoole04)
- Pete Seeger, "I Was Born 10,000 Years Ago" (on PeteSeeger11)
I Was Born on the River

DESCRIPTION: "I was born on the river, and the river is my home, As long as I can carry a chain, I won't leave the river alone." The singer asks the Captain for money, describes how the Captain bosses the gang, and advises against gambling

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1944 (Wheeler)

KEYWORDS: work river boss gambling money hardtimes poverty

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Wheeler-SteamboatinDays, p. 33-35, "I Wuz Borned on the Rivuh" (1 text, 1 tune); p. 118, "Woman, Woman, I See Yo’ Man" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #10007

NOTES [52 words]: The Wheeler text "Woman, Woman, I See Yo’ Man" differs in from from "I Was Born on the River," but half its verses are found in the longer song. As is often the case in Wheeler's material, there is no good way to classify the result. I combine because, if I didn't, I'd have to list every piece in Wheeler separately.

File: MWHee033

I Was Chasing One-Elevens

DESCRIPTION: "I was chasing One-Elevens up at Angels 23 (x3) With my canopy so frosted that I couldn't bloody see. Glory, glory, what a hell of a way to die...." This and other tales of how an aircraft can be in grave danger while in flight

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead)

KEYWORDS: death soldier technology

FOUND IN: Canada

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, pp. 124-125, "I Was Chasing One-Elevens" (1 text, tune referenced)

Roud #29397

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "John Brown's Body" (tune) and references there
cf. "He'll Never Fly Home Again" ("Glory, glory what a hell of a way to die" chorus) and references there

NOTES [545 words]: Although every problem mentioned in the Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead text is real, the details are sometimes a little inaccurate. The "One-Eleven," as Hopkins says, was the Heinkel He 111 medium bomber. A strange-looking plane with two engines and a very large nose, "the first HE 111 was a graceful machine with elliptical wings and tail, secretly flown as a bomber but revealed to the world a year later as a civil airliner. In February 1937 operations began with the Legion Kondor in Spain, with considerable success. To a considerable degree the success of the early elliptical winged HE 111 bombers in Spain misled the Luftwaffe into considering that nothing could withstand the onslaught of their huge fleets of medium bombers" (Gunston, p. 400). But by the time of the Battle of Britain, "the He 111 was hacked down with ease, its only defence being its toughness and ability to come back after being shot to pieces. The inevitable result was that more and more defensive guns were added, needing a fifth or even a sixth crew-member. Coupled with incessant growth in equipment and armour the result was deteriorating, so that the record-breaker of 1936-1938 was the sitting duck of 1942-1945" (Gunston, p. 401).

Despite this, the Germans were unable to replace the Heinkel; they never developed a better alternative or a successful four-engined bomber. "By the middle of the war the He 111 was obsolescent, but the lack of success of its potential replacements... necessitated keeping it in production well into 1944" (Munson, p. 95).

It is just barely possible that an Allied fighter would encounter a Heinkel at "Angels 23" (23,000 feet), but it's not very likely; the plane's service ceiling was 25,500 feet, but it could not fly above 16,400 when fully loaded (Gunston, p. 396).

In the second verse, the flyer is flying at Angels 41 (41,000 feet) when a bunch of Messerschmitts come at him out of the sun. It's not clear what plane the singer is flying, but the opponent is presumably the Messerschmitt Bf-109, or just possibly the Messerschmitt Bf-110. But the altitude is a problem here. The Bf-110 had a service ceiling of 32,800 feet (Gunston, p. 224). Some Bf-109s could go higher than that (one reason they continued to be produced after the superior Focke-Wulf 190 came on the scene is that the FW 190 sometimes had trouble at high altitude), but the highest service ceiling listed on p. 218 is 41,000 feet, and only a tiny handful of Bf-109s could go that high; most had a ceiling of 38,500 or less. And to come at the pilot out of the sun probably means they came in at him from above.

The Ju 88 of the last verse is the described by Hopkins as a twin-engined bomber, and it is true that it was designed as a medium bomber (Munson, p. 102). But "Parallel with the development of the Junkers Ju 88 as a medium bomber, the type was also being adapted to a variety of other roles, particularly those of night fighter, close support, and reconnaissance" (Munson, p. 103). So our pilot might have encountered the Ju 88 as a fighter. Once again the service ceiling is a little high; the song says the Ju 88 was at Angel 38 (38,000 feet), but the highest-flying Ju 88 reached only 36,000 feet, and most had ceilings below that (Gunston, p. 215). - RBW

Bibliography

Last updated in version 5.0
File: Hopk124

I Was Drunk Last Night

DESCRIPTION: "I was drunk last night, my darlin', And drunk the night before, But if ever I get sober, I'll never get drunk any more. Beautiful light o'er the sea...." "An' now I'll gather the roses To twine in my long braided hair...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: drink courting nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US (So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 407, "I Was Drunk Last Night" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7681
RECORDINGS:
Red Patterson's Log Rollers, "I'll Never Get Drunk Any More" (Victor 20936, 1927)
Riley Puckett, "I'll Never Get Drunk Anymore" (Columbia 15063, 1926)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Drunk Last Night" (initial line)
NOTES [103 words]: Rabdolph's verson is, in a way, impressive: In the space of twelve lines, it manages to invoke three songs: a "Never Get Drunk Any More" piece, the hymn "Beautiful Light," and something similar to "Wildwood Flower." Now all it needs is a stanza of a murder ballad to include every song-type known to humanity. - RBW
Not quite; it doesn't mention trains, trucks, prison, or mama. -PJS
"Trucks"? What do you think this is? A Nashville Nonsense Index? :-)
Note that this is a separate song from "Drunk Last Night," despite the similar opening. Some might lump them, given that this seems to be an almost-unique sport. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: R407

I Was Just Sixteen
DESCRIPTION: "I was just sixteen when I first started roving" the sinful world. He meets and leaves a pretty girl. They agreed to be true but she thinks "on the vows she broke." She commits suicide. At her funeral a letter arrives; "Willie fell from the yardarm"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1921 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)
KEYWORDS: courting love parting death funeral suicide lover mistress mother sailor separation
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 102, "I Was Just Sixteen" (1 text)
Peacock, pp. 720-721, "The Spanish Main" (1 text, 1 tune)
Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland 40, "The Spanish Main" (1 text, 1 tune)
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 349-353, "The Spanish Main (I Was Just Sixteen)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2296
RECORDINGS:
Mrs. Ambrose Coombs, "The Spanish Main" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
File: GrMa102

I Was Once a Sailor
DESCRIPTION: "Yes, I was once a sailor boy, I plowed the restless sea. I saw the sky look fair and glad And I felt proud and free." The sailor recalls his travels, but notes he made little profit. He now has a small farm and thinks his life is sweet
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1843 (Journal from the Florida)
KEYWORDS: sailor travel farming home
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 66-67, "I Was Once a Sailor" (1 text)
Roud #2021
NOTES [20 words]: Huntington thinks this might be related to "The Faithful Sailor Boy" [Laws K13]. I don't see any signs of kinship. - RBW
File: SwMS067

I Was Once in a Dark and Lonesome Valley
DESCRIPTION: "I was once in a dark and lonesome valley, And Satan led with trouble on de way. But de devil tryin' hard to stop me, And dey laugh at me whatever dey hears me say." "Here's a light, chillun (x2), Here's a light where de angels led before us."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious Devil
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 599, "I Was Once in a Dark and Lonesome Valley" (1 short text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 599, "I Was Once in a Dark and Lonesome
I Was Only Seventeen

DESCRIPTION: "I was only seventeen When first I went to sea. I was shipwrecked off the coast of France" and is rescued by a woman -- who then starts taking off her clothes, and proves to be tattooed with a world map. Before he can investigate, "her old man came along"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: sailor wreck disaster clothes derivative
FOUND IN: Britain
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 68, "I Was Only Seventeen" (1 text, tune referenced)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Let the Rest of the World Go By" (tune)
File: Tawn051

I Was the Boy for Bewitching Them

DESCRIPTION: Mothers warn their daughters to beware of the singer, irresistible Teddy. He had few rivals and, when Pat Mooney just met his Shelah, Teddy "twigged" him. "Beauty no matter how cruel ... Melted like mud in a frost"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c.1809 (Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland); c.1815 (broadside, Bodleian Firth b.26(452))
KEYWORDS: bragging rake
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, p. 122, "I Was the Boy for Bewitching Them" (1 fragment)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 196, "I Was the Boy for Bewitching Them" (1 text)
Roud #V17647
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth b.26(452), "I Was the Boy for Bewitching Them" ("I was the boy for bewitching 'em"), Todd and Son (Easingwold), c.1815; also Harding B 25(931), "I Was the Boy for Bewitching 'em"; Harding B 17(143a), "I Was the Boy, &c"; Harding B 28(128), "I Am the Boy for Bewitching Them"

NOTES [249 words]: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland has a fragment not in the broadsides but which "was a favourite some thirty years ago [c.1809]." The tone fits the broadsides but the words parallel "My God, How the Money Rolls In":
My father he married a Quaker,
My aunt she made hay with a fork;
And my uncle's a great grand brogue-maker
In the beautiful city called Cork
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland is a fragment; broadside Bodleian Firth b.26(452) is the basis for the description. The Croker fragment is quoted again in Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland by a Mr Windle "borrowing the words of an old song." (p. 162).
Croker's fragment is not in either Bodleian broadside. Maybe it does not belong here at all. Except for substituting father, aunt, and uncle for grandfather, uncle, and mither, it matches the first four lines of Greig/Duncan4 820, "My Grandfather Married a Quaker."
A note, Preliminary Finding List for Early Irish Tunes, at The Wrapper Band site says "I was the boy for bewitching 'em [Said to be from play, Matrimony, c 1804. Music by P. M. King. Song attributed to Kenny in US1 [The Universal Songster or Museum of Mirth, Vol. I,1825], p. 180]; CIR 49 [1808. Crosby's Irish Musical Repository]: The Boy for bewitching them; HIA 7 [One Hundred Irish Airs. New York: Pub. by P. M. Haverty] Matrimony opened Nov 20, 1804, at Drury Lane "by James Kenny (librettist) and M.P. King (composer)," according to William J Burling [Version 1.2 copyright 3/7/2003] at Missouri State University site. - BS
Last updated in version 6.1
I Was Traveling Down the Bogan
DESCRIPTION: "I was traveling down the Bogan Where the scrub was thick and dence, With a thousand head of Tyson's From Queensland's 'Border fence'... With a score of barbed wire fences -- What a bloody spread (?) of iron bars"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Fahey-Joe-Watson-AustralianTraditionalFolkSinger)
KEYWORDS: cattle travel
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fahey-Joe-Watson-AustralianTraditionalFolkSinger, [p. 18, page headed "Ditty: The plains of"], "(no title)" (1 short text)
File: FaWIWTDB

I Was Walking through the Dockyard in a Panic
DESCRIPTION: "I was walking through the Dockyard in a panic, When I met a matelot old and grey... And this is what I heard him say, I wonder, yes I wonder, Has the Jaunty made a blunder?" "It's a shame to send me off to sea." The man wants to stay on shore duty
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: sailor navy derivative
FOUND IN: Britain
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, pp. 43-44, "I Was Walking Through the Dockyard in a Panic" (1 text, tune referenced)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Wonder, Yes I Wonder" (tune)
File: Tawn027

I Went Down to My Girl's House Last Night
DESCRIPTION: "I went down to my girl's house last night, She met me at the door. She knocked me in the head with a rolling pin And I ain't been back no more."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: courting abuse abandonment floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 451, "I Went Down to My Gul's House Last Night" (1 fragment)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 451, "I Went Down to My Gul's House Last Night" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #11785
NOTES [14 words]: Obviously this is a floating fragment. It's not clear what it's floated free of. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Br3451

I Went Down to My Grandpa's Farm
DESCRIPTION: "I went down to my grandpa's farm, I chased that billy goat around the barn. I love coffee, I love tea, How many kicks did he give me?"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks)
KEYWORDS: playparty animal food
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks, p. 109, "(I went down to my Grandpa's
I Went Down to New Orleans (I)

DESCRIPTION: Discovered in bed with the daughter of the landlord and landlady, the rover has sex with the mother too, and violates the father with a brace of pistols.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE:
KEYWORDS: bawdy humorous landlord seduction sex
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 105-106, "I Went Down to New Orleans" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "O'Reilly's Daughter"

I Went Down to the Lowground

DESCRIPTION: "I went down to the low ground To see about my farm; I ran upon a black snake With an ash cake under his arm. How come that snake don't die? How come that snake don't die?"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: animal
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 187, "I Went Down to the Lowground" (1 text)
Roud #15770

I Went Downtown

DESCRIPTION: "I went downtown To meet Miss Brown. She gave me a nickel, I bought me a pickle. The pickle was sour; I bought me a flower. The flower was red, I bought some thread." And so on, though various swaps, perhaps with a special act to be done at the end

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks)
KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad commerce gift food
FOUND IN: US(MW) New Zealand
REFERENCES (3 citations):
McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks, pp. 103-104, "(I went up town)" (1 text)
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 112, "(Mother Brown went to town)" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Peter and Iona Opie, _I Saw Esau: Traditional Rhymes of Youth_, #58, "(I went downtown)" (1 fragment)
Roud #19420

I Went On Board the Ida

DESCRIPTION: "I went on board the Ida, I did not go to stay, I put my hand on the Yalla gal dress And the captain fainted away." "Champion Charles is my name"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Elder-FolkSongAndFolkLifeInCharlotteville)
KEYWORDS: courting clothes fishing ship shanty Black(s)
FOUND IN: West Indies(Tobago)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Elder-FolkSongAndFolkLifeInCharlotteville, p. 58, "I Went On Board the Ida" (1 text, 1 tune)
I Went to a Chinese Restaurant

DESCRIPTION: "I went to a Chinese restaurant, To buy a loaf of bread ... they wrapped it in a five pound note." The note said "My name is Alli, alli, Chickerlye chickerlye ... Chinese chopsticks, Indian chief says 'How!'"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1974 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
KEYWORDS: food playparty
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 143, "I Went to a Chinese Restaurant" (4 texts, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Elizabeth Grugeon, "Gender Implications of Children's Playground Culture" in Peter Woods and Martyn Hammersley, editors, Gender and Ethnicity in Schools (1993 (copyrighted material limited preview "Digitized by Google")) #3 p. 32, ("I went to the Chinese Restaurant") (1 text)
Roud #20093
File: OpGa143

I Went to Atlanta

DESCRIPTION: "I went to Atlanta, Never been there befo'; White folks eat de apple, Nigger wait fo' co'." The singer finds similar unfairness when visiting Charleston, Raleigh, etc. Chorus: "Cath dat Suth'n, Grab dat train, Won't come back no mo'."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1953
KEYWORDS: travel hardtimes Black(s) discrimination
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, p. 106, "I Went to Atlanta" (1 text)
File: Grnw106

I Went to My Sweetheart's House

DESCRIPTION: Stanzas of the form "I went to my sweetheart's house, I never was thar before, They sot me in the corner as still as a mouse, An' I ain't gwine thar no mo', mo', mo, An' I ain't gwine that no mo', my love, An' I ain't gwine that no mo'." Verses float

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: floatingverses home animal courting
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 166-167, "I Went to My Sweetheart's House" (1 text)
ST ScaNF166 (Partial)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Raccoon" (floating lyrics)
NOTES [32 words]: I thought seriously about filing this with "Raccoon"; they have that many
I Went to the Fair at Bonlaghy

DESCRIPTION: "I went to the fair at Bellaghy, I bought a wee swad of a pig, I got it up in my arms And danced 'The Swaggering Jig.' In all contexts, man, pig, poorhouse inmates, passersby, flowers, whistle and/or dance the jig.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: animal humorous commerce dancing
FOUND IN: Ireland US(MW)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
   Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H758, p. 23, "Bellaghy Fair" (1 text, 1 tune)
   Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 151, "I Went to the Fair at Bonlaghy" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
ST E151 (Partial)
Roud #5349
File: E151

I Went to the Woods

DESCRIPTION: "Shure I went to the woods where I heard a big drum. 'By the holy Saint Patrick,' says I, 'that's a drum.'" The Irishman complains about the land where he lives: Cold weather, girls always chewing gum, the dreadful smell of fermented cabbage

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Fowke)
KEYWORDS: food hardtimes
FOUND IN: Canada(West)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
   Fowke-LumberingSongsFromTheNorthernWoods #51, "I Went to the Woods" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4563

NOTES [73 words]: Fowke describes this song as "somewhat indelicate." This refers primarily to the first verse, which on its face is about a woodpecker drilling for food, but which Fowke considers to have a secondary meaning. Personally, I suspect the song is composite; the first verse is, well, either about a bird or about something that is describes as one but isn't -- but the rest is a straightforward gripe about a the place the Irishman lives. - RBW

File: FowL51

I Whipped My Horse

DESCRIPTION: "I whipped my horse till I cut the blood (x3) And then I made him tread the mud." "I fed my horse in a poplar trough (x3) And there he caught the whooping cough." "Now my old horse is dead and gone (x3) But he left his jaw-bones ploughing the corn."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (Cecil Sharp collection)
KEYWORDS: animal nonsense nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
   Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 219, "I Whipped My Horse" (1 text, 1 tune)
   Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 71, "I Whipped My Horse" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3267

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Poor Old Man (Poor Old Horse; The Dead Horse)"
cf. "Ox Driving Song" (floating lyrics)
File: SKE71
I Will Bow and Be Simple

DESCRIPTION: "I will bow and be simple, I will bow and be free, I will bow and be humble, Yea, bow like the willow tree." "I will bow, this is the token, I will wear the easy yoke, I will bow and will be broke, Yea, I'll fall upon that rock."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1847 (Mary Hazzard collection, according to Andrews)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Edward Deming Andrews, _The Gift to be Simple: Songs, Dances and Rituals of the American Shakers_, 1940 (references are to the 1962 Dover reprint), p. 113, "I Will Bow and Be Simple" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [89 words]: I have absolutely no evidence that this song is traditional; it is one of many Shaker songs on the theme of simplicity. But it has a beautiful melody that has caused it to be sung in the folk revival, so I have included it here.

The reference to the "easy yoke" is surely to Matthew 11:28-30: "Come to me, all who are tired and burdened, and I will give you rest. [29] Take my yoke [, zygon] upon you, and you will find rest for your souls [, psyches, i.e. psyches]. [30]. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: AndSh113

I Will Put My Ship In Order

DESCRIPTION: The singer puts his ship in order to sail to his true love. He arrives wet and tired, knocks at her window, and asks her to let him in. She delays (perhaps her parents are watching), and he leaves before she comes. She laments his departure

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1876 (Christie)

KEYWORDS: ship love reunion separation nightvisit betrayal

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North),Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 35-36, "I Drew My Ship into the Harbour" (1 text, 1 tune, with a "ripest apples" floating verse)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #54, p. 1, "I Will Set My Good Ship in Order" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan4 792, "I Will Set My Ship in Order" (19 texts, 16 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 318-319, "I Will Set My Ship in Order" (1 text)
DT, SHIPORDR* SHIPORD2*

ADDITIONAL: W. Christie, editor, Traditional Ballad Airs (Edinburgh, 1876 (downloadable pdf by University of Edinburgh, 2007)), Vol I, pp. 224-225, "I Will Put My Ship in Order" (1 tune)
Roud #402

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rise Up Quickly and Let Me In (The Ghostly Lover)" (lyrics, theme)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
My True Love Johnnie

NOTES [264 words]: This song is about 80% identical with the piece I've titled "Rise Up Quickly and Let Me In (The Ghostly Lover)"; the only differences are in the first verse (about the ship) and the ending (in this, the lover leaves; in the other, the girl arrives in time to admit him). Fragments could file with either song.

Some, including Roud, have identified this song with "The Drowsy Sleeper," and there is some justice to this; there may be cross-influence. Indeed, for a time I listed this as an alternate title of "Drowsy Sleeper." But we are splitters, and so the two are now separate. I think that's the proper decision anyway.

The last few verses of this song bear a resemblance to Song of Solomon 5:2-6, but that may be coincidence. - RBW

Greig/Duncan4: "Greig prints a composite version."

Christie [beware], "as sung by the Editor's grandfather," has a happy ending: "He turned him right and round so quickly, Says, 'Come with me, my lovely one, And we'll be wed, my own sweet lover, And let them talk when we are gone.'"
The Greig-Duncan texts at least have this parallel to "The Drowsy Sleeper": the lover -- at her window -- would have his lover ask her parents for her hand and she warns that neither will approve. The difference is that there is no danger: no silver dagger. Father, a merchant, is "in his bedroom writing, Busy with his merchandise; In his left pocket he holds a letter, And it speaks much of your dispraise" [he protests that any "dispraise" is unwarranted]; mother is sleeping and "sweet notes of love she will not hear" or "if I disturb her she'll be angry." - BS

I Will Rock You Wi' My Foot, Love

DESCRIPTION: "I will rock you wi' my foot, love, I will bind you wi' my hand; I'll gie you three locks o' my coal-black hair To be to you a cradle band"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan)

KEYWORDS: lullaby baby hair

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan 1558, "I Will Rock You Wi' My Foot, Love" (1 short text)

Roud #13507

NOTES [10 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan text. - BS

I Will Sail the Salt Seas Over

DESCRIPTION: "I will sail the salt seas over And the Shannon after me, For your equal in Loch Ray love Is rare to be seen. I would rather than a horse And a bridle for to steer That I ne'er mentioned the name of Loch Ray la she sheer"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick)

KEYWORDS: love separation

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 102, "I Will Sail the Salt Seas Over" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

Roud #2776

NOTES [36 words]: The current description is all of the Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick fragment. Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick: "The spelling of the last line ["Loch Ray la she shear"] may be incorrect." - BS

I Will Tell You My Troubles

DESCRIPTION: "I will tell you of my troubles, my ups and downs through life...." The singer complains about the life of a cowboy. Life is hard and lonely, and there is too much to do; the cows wander off even during the monotonous meals

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1966

KEYWORDS: work cowboy

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 25, "The Little Old Sod Shanty" (7 texts, 2 tunes, with the "G" text going here)

Roud #11208

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Little Old Log Cabin in the Lane" (tune) and references there

File: FCW025G
I Wish I Been Dere (I Wish I Been There)

DESCRIPTION: "My mother, you follow Jesus, My sister, you follow Jesus, My brother, you follow Jesus, To fight until I die. U wish I been there yonder, To climb Jacob's ladder, I wish I been there yonder, To wear the starry crown."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 29, "I Wish I Been Dere" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11982
File: AAWG029A

I Wish I Could Pray

DESCRIPTION: "I wish I could pray like Mary Magdalene (x2), I wish I could pray (x2), I wish I could pray, Lord, like Mary Magdalene." "Teach me the way like Mary Magdalene." "Anybody here like Mary Magdalene," "Cast out seven devils like Mary Magdalene."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious
FOUND IN: West Indies(Bahamas)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories 19, "I Wish I Could Pray" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [312 words]: The description is based on the Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories text. King James Mark 16:9 has "Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils." One line of Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories's text -- "Anybody here like Mary Mahg'alene" -- is like Booth's line -- "Is there anybody here like weeping Mary" - and shares the form of the title line of Work's and Barton-OldPlantationHymns's "Is there anybody here that loves my Jesus" (see the notes to "Is There Anybody Here"). The verse form is similar to Barton and Work but the tune and general theme is different. - BS
A number of notes here. First, Mark 16:9 is not part of the gospel of Mark (it's a later addition placed in footnotes or brackets in most modern translations). In most cases, Mark is the oldest gospel, from which Matthew and Luke derive material, but in the case of "Mark 16:9," the verse is a conflation of material in the other gospels -- the source of the statement that Jesus had cast seven demons out of Mary is Luke 8:2 and is never found in the proper gospel of Mark or in Matthew. Note therefore that Mary never cast demons out of anyone. Jesus cast demons out of her (in other words, she suffered from a severe mental illness, very possibly schizophrenia, which Jesus was said to have cured).
The part about Mary praying is a confusion of Mary Magdalene with Mary of Bethany, who in John is combined with the woman who washed Jesus's feet with her hair. Mary, according to Luke 10, was spending her time with Jesus and praying while Martha was trying to serve. It is to be emphasized that we have no reason to believe Mary Magdalene -- that is, Mary of Magdala! -- was the same as Mary of Bethany, although the confusion is ancient. For more on the issue, see the notes to "I Want to Die Like Weeping Mary." - RBW

I Wish I Had Someone to Call My Own

DESCRIPTION: "I wish I had someone to call my own; I wish I had someone to take my care." The singer lists all that he's tired of: coffee, tea, living, eating, sleeping, plus, "I'm so tired of livin' I don't know what to do; You're tired of me, an' I'm tired of you."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: hardtimes nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
I Wish I Was a Little Bird (Nobody Cares for Me)

DESCRIPTION: "I wish I was a little bird, I'd fly up in a tree, I'd sit and sing my little sad song (spoken:) But I can't stay here by myself." "I wish I was a little fish, I'd swim way down in the sea, I'd sit and sing my little sad song, But I can't stay here..."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)

KEYWORDS: loneliness nonballad animal bird

FOUND IN: US(MA,So)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
- Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, p. 489, "I Wish I Was a Little Bird" (1 text)
- Randolph 722, "Nobody Cares for Me" (1 short text, 1 tune)
- Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 188-190, "The Little Fish" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 338, "I Wish I Was a Little Bird" (1 text, 1 tune)
- McNeil-SouthernMountainFolksong, pp. 85-86, "I Can't Stay Here by Myself" (1 text, 1 tune, filed under "Free Little Bird")
- Roud #6357

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "I Have No Loving Mother Now (Oh, See My Father Layin' There)" (lyrics)

File: San338

I Wish I Was a Little Fish

DESCRIPTION: The singer wishes she could swim like a fish, like David Johnson. Johnson tried some long swim. "He swam just like a duck," he "got pluck," but "when everything were over I thought it were a failure"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (WITrinidadVillage01)

KEYWORDS: sea sports ordeal nonballad

FOUND IN: West Indies(Trinidad)

RECORDINGS:
- Martha Saunders, "I Wish I Was a Little Fish" (on WITrinidadVillage01)

File: RcM3IWIW

I Wish I Was a Mole in the Ground

DESCRIPTION: "I wish I (was/were) a mole in the ground (x2), If I was a mole in the ground, I'd root that mountain down...." The singer complains of Kempy's expensive tastes and his troubles with drink and/or the law. He may wish to be other things.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1921 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: animal money hardtimes floatingverses dancetune

FOUND IN: US(MW,SE,So)

REFERENCES (12 citations):
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 173, "Mole In the Ground" (1 text)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 173, "Mole in the Ground" (2 tunes plus text excerpts)
- Lunsford/Stringfield-30And1FolkSongsFromSouthernMountains, pp. 10-11, "I wish I wuz a Mole in the Ground" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Jones-MinstrelOfTheAppalachians-Bascom-Lamar-Lunsford, p. 240, "Mole in the Ground" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, pp. 900-901, "I Wish I Wuz a Mole in the Ground" (1 text, 1 tune)
I Wish I Was at Home

DESCRIPTION: "I'm marchin' down to Washington With a heavy load an' a rusty gun, An' I wish I was at home (x2). They carried me down to the navy yard, An' round me they placed a mounted guard, An' I wish I was at home (x2)."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Randolph)

KEYWORDS: home homesickness soldier

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 240, "I Wish I Was at Home" (1 text)

Roud #7710

File: R240

I Wish I Were a Single Girl Again

DESCRIPTION: "When I was single, marriage I did crave. Now I am married, it's trouble to my grave. Lord, I wish I was a single girl again!" The wife complains of hard work in the kitchen, of poverty, of poor clothes, hungry children, and a husband who steals her money

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)

KEYWORDS: husband wife marriage poverty

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE,So)

REFERENCES (22 citations):
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 126, "I Wish I Were a Single Girl Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, p. 437, "When I Was Single" (1 text, with no letter designation; the lettered texts are all "I Wish I Were Single Again (1 - Male)"
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 28, "I Wish I Was a Single Girl Again" (3 texts)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 28, "I Wish I Was a Single Girl Again" (2 tunes plus excerpts of text)
I Wish I Were Single Again (I - Male)

DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls the happy days when he was single. He recalls marrying a wife, "the plague of my life." She died and was buried, so he went and married again, to find that he "wished for the old one again"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin)

KEYWORDS: funeral marriage shrewishness wife

REFERENCES (42 citations):
Randolph 365, "I Wish I Was Single Again" (4 texts, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 329-331, "I Wish I Was Single Again" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 365A)
Arnold-FolkSongsOfAlabama, p. 77, "I Wish I Was Single Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 69, "When I Was a Young Man" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin 34, "When I Was Single" (1 text)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #130, "When I Was Single" (2 texts)
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 111, "Once I Was Single" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Öx 242)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Gl 150, "O Then, O Then" (1 text)
Gardham-EastRidingSongster 30, p. 38, "I Wish I Was Single Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 204, "I Wished To Be Single Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan7 1292, "When I Was Single, Oh Then" (6 texts, 6 tunes)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 19, "When I Was Single" (3 texts plus an excerpt and mention of 13 more, though most of the omitted texts are single stanzas)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 19, "When I Was Single" (2 tunes plus excerpts of text)
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 75, "When I Was Single" (1 text)
Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. 320-321, "The Single Girl" (1 text plus a fragment; the song is "I Wish I Were a Single Girl Again," but the fragment is this)
McNeil-SouthernFolkBalladsVol2, pp. 47-50, "I Wish I Was Single Again"; "I Wish I Were Single Again" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Abernethy-SinginTexas, pp. 56-58, "I Wish I Was Single Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 188, "I Wish I Was Single Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, pp. 13-14, "I Wish I Was Single Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, pp. 144-145, "I Wish I Was Single Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, pp. 124-125, "I Wish I Was Single Again" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains, pp. 20-21, "My First And Last Courtship" (1 text, 1 tune, in which the second wife tries to hang the husband and he shoots her after being rescued; Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains thinks the singer may have made up this material.)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 47, "I Wish I Was Single Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 215-217, "When I Was Single" (1 text, 1 tune)
I Wish I Were Single Again (II - Female)

DESCRIPTION: The wife complains of the troubles of matrimony. When first her husband courted her, all was kindness, but now it's nothing but work and care for the children and try to stay out of trouble. She says, "I hope I shall be hanged if I ever love again."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Randolph); the "Married Woman's Lament" versions are said to be from the nineteenth century

KEYWORDS: fight husband marriage

FOUND IN: US(MW,NE,So)

REFERENCES (6 citations):

Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 70, "How I Wish I Was Single Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 69, pp. 92-93, "A Married Woman's Lament" (3 fragments, with "A" and "B" probably being "I Wish I Were Single Again (II - Female)" and "C" being perhaps "Come All You Virginia Girls (Arkansas Boys; Texian Boys; Cousin Emmy's Blues; etc.)")
Randolph 366, "A Married Woman's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Spaeth-ReadEmAndWeep, pp. 26-27, "A Married Woman's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune, with the unrelated "The Sorrow of Marriage" in an appendix)
McNeil-SouthernMountainFolksong, pp. 40-41, "A Married Woman's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune, which McNeil says is from the nineteenth century)

DT, SNGLGLR2*
Roud #436

RECORDINGS:
Susan Brown, "I Wish I Was Single Again" (on HCargillFamily)
Margaret MacArthur, "Single Again" (on MMacArthur01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Wish I Were a Single Girl Again"
cf. "Single Girl, Married Girl"
cf. "When I Was Young (II)" (theme)
cf. "For Seven Long Years I've Been Married" (theme)
cf. "I'm Satisfied (II)" (theme)

NOTES [35 words]: Characterized by a stanza format something like this:
Once I was single and lived at my ease,
But now I am married with a husband to please,
Four young children to maintain;
Oh how I wish I were single again! - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
File: E070

I Wish My Captain Would Go Blind

DESCRIPTION: "I wish my captain would go blind. Wouldn't go to work till half past nine."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: curse worker
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 244, "I Wish My Captain Would Go Blind" (1 fragment)
Brown/Schinan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 244, "I Wish My Captain Would Go Blind" (1 tune plus the short text)

Roud #15775
File: Brow3244

I Wish My Granny Saw Ye

DESCRIPTION: Country lad Johnny Raw comes to town, where the girls giggle, "I wish my granny saw ye." He buys a girl a wedding dress; she laughs at him. A girl asks him to carry her baby; he consents. She disappears, and he is left to care for the child

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1886 (broadside Bodleian, Firth b.26(298))
KEYWORDS: clothes trick courting baby
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 395-396, "I Wish My Granny Saw Ye" (1 text)
McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen, pp. 60-61, 150, "Johnny Raw" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #5614

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth b.26(298)=Harding B 11(1674), "I WIsh My Granny Saw Ye," H. Such (London), 1863-1885
NLScotland, L.C.Fol.70(120a), "I Wish My Grannie Saw Ye," unknown, 1880-1900

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Basket of Eggs" (plot) and references there

NOTES [48 words]: Although the general theme of a country boy who falls prey to city tricks occurs throughout this song, I have to suspect it is at least somewhat composite, with the girl-and-baby theme translated bodily into a newer framework.
Thanks to Jim Dixon for pointing out broadside sources. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3
File: Ord395B
I Wish My Love (Pitman's Love Song)

DESCRIPTION: Singer wishes his love were various objects: a cherry, a beeskep, an ewe, etc., so that he might make love to her. After some lovely metaphors, in the last verse he wishes she was a warm turd, and he was a "shitten flea," that he might light upon her.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1834 (Sharp, The Bishopric Garland)
KEYWORDS: sex lyric nonballad scatological
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: [Cuthbert Sharp], _The Bishopric Garland, A Collection of Legends, Songs, Ballads, &c Belonging to the County of Durham_, 1834 (references are to the 1969 reprint), p. 65, "A Pitman's Love Song" (1 text)
Roud #8738
RECORDINGS:
A. L. Lloyd, "I Wish My Love" (on Lloyd2) = "I Wish, I Wish" (on Lloyd 3) [same recording, changed title]
ALTERNATE TITLES:
A Pitman's Love Song
NOTES [32 words]: Lloyd notes, "Rather to my own surprise I find myself too prudish to sing [the last verse], though I'm impressed by its intensity," but he reprints it in his book "Folk Song in England." - PJS
Last updated in version 3.1
File: RcIWML

I Wish My Love Was In a Ditch

DESCRIPTION: "I wish my love was in a ditch, Without no clothing to her, With nettles up and down her back Because she was not truer." She had been involved with the singer and another; he claims her child was fathered by the other, and will not sleep with her.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: love marriage infidelity pregnancy
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 126, "I Wish My Love Was In a Ditch" (1 text)
ST BrII126 (Full)
Roud #6572
NOTES [39 words]: The editors of Brown suspect this is Scottish, but can cite no other texts (Jamieson has a piece "I Wish My Love Was In a Mire," found also as #41 in _The Scot Musical Museum_, but the parallels are thematic rather than verbal). - RBW
File: BrII126

I Wish That Girl Was Mine

DESCRIPTION: "When I was a little boy, Just eighteen inches high, How I'd hug and kiss those girls To see their mammas cry." "Oh, I wish that girl was mine (x2), The only tune that I can play Is I wish that girl was mine." Of courting, banjos, and last regrets(?)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: love courting music
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 298, "I Wish That Girl Was Mine" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 298, "I Wish That Girl Was Mine" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #16859
CROSS-REFERENCES:
I Wish That You Were Dead, Goodman

DESCRIPTION: "There's six eggs in the pan, goodman (x2), there's one for you and twa for me, And three for (our John Hielandman)." The woman complains, and concludes, "I wish ye were dead, wi' a stone at your head, and I'd run awa wi' John Hielandman"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1823 (Sharpe)

KEYWORDS: food love curse death

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) Ireland

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan3 695, "Oh, Gin Ye Were Deid, Goodman" (1 fragment)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H531, p. 506-507, "I Wish That You Were Dead, Goodman" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, EGGSMAN WISHDEAD

ST HHH531 (Full)
Roud #5884
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Green Grow the Rashes" (tune, per Greig/Duncan3)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
There's a Herrin' in the Pan

NOTES [47 words]: Murray Shoolbraid's notes in the Digital Tradition discuss possible bawdy connections of this song. Interestingly, though they are all extremely subtle, Gordeanna McCulloch has a text which seems to have cleaned them all up and converted them into a complaint against landlords. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4

File: HHH531

I Wish the Wars Were All Over

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets Polly milking her cow singing "I wish that the wars were all over." She is afraid her Billy will be killed in America. She rejects the singer's advances and says she'll dress as a sailor and fight "till the wars are all over"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1770s (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)

KEYWORDS: love war separation cross-dressing America sailor

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame, pp. 129-130, "The Wars are All O'er" (1 text)

Roud #2036

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 302, "I Wish the Wars Were All Over" ("Down in the meadows where violets do grow"), J. Davenport (London), 1799-1800

File: OpGap129

I Wish There Was No Prisons

DESCRIPTION: The singer says "I only steal my belly to fill." Prison work is hard and makes him ill. He saw a girl with twins in a perambulator. He kissed one baby while he stole a potato from the other. "I wish there were no prisons. I do. Don't you?"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (recording, George Spicer)

KEYWORDS: prison theft humorous nonballad baby twins

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
I Wish They'd Do It Now

DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls how, when he was a child, the girls would run to kiss him, cuddle him, bathe him, etc. Unfortunately, he is grown and their attentions have ceased; he remarks, "I've got itches in my britches and I wish they'd do it now."

AUTHOR: E. Freeman Dixey? (author cited in the sheet music)

EARLIEST DATE: 1865 (sheet music for "Why Don't They Do It Now?" published)

KEYWORDS: courting youth loneliness humorous

FOUND IN: Australia US(MW,So) Britain(England(North),Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (8 citations):
- Greig/Duncan7 1447, "How I Wish They'd Do It Now" (1 fragment)
- Gardham-EastRidingSongster 16, pp. 20-21, 47, "I Wish They'd Do It Now" (2 texts, 1 tune, the second text being titled "The Doesn't Do It Now")
- Dean-FlyingCloud, p. 81, "I Was Born in Killarney" (1 text)
- Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 82, "When I Was a Little Boy" (1 fragment, 1 tune, almost certainly this although short enough that it might have floated); 167, "When I Was a Little Boy" (1 text, 1 tune, which appears to open with part of "I Wish They'd Do It Now," includes floating verses which sometimes are found in "Lynchburg Town," and end with the "Saturday Night My Wife Died" of "The Old Gray Goose (I) (Lookit Yonder)" or similar)
- Gilbert-LostChords, pp. 111-112, "'Why Don't They Do So Now?'" (1 text)
- Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 186-189, "They were very very Good to Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
- DT, DOITNOW*

ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 20, #5 (1971), pp. 16-17, "I Wish They'd Do It Now" (1 text, 1 tune, the Bob Davenport version)

RECORDINGS:
- Arthur Collins, "I Wish They'd Do It Now" (CYL: Edison 5412, c. 1898)
- Steve Porter, "I Wish They'd Do It Now" (American Record Co. 031354, c. 1906)
- Teddy Simmons, "I Wish They'd Do It Now" (CYL: Columbia 32895, c. 1906)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "The Smeller Song" (theme of a man who was popular as a boy but not now)
- cf. "Three Acres and a Cow" (tune)

SAME TUNE:
- Three Acres and a Cow (File: PaPl021)

NOTES [156 words]: [The original of this is] from "C.P. Hyland's I Wish They'd Do It Now Songster" published in [New York City] in 1869 [Michael Cooney in _Sing Out_ says 1879]. It was an American song. Not very good either, in the original, but the [folk] processed version was/is a gem. - MC

Those wishing to see something like the original version (as I understand it), with only minimal folk processing, are referred to the Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2 text. It is indeed rather less than inspired. The tune we tend to hear nowadays is much like "The Wearing of the Green." - RBW

You think those words are insipid? You should see the ones from "Why Don't They Do It Now?" (1865) from which this song is clearly derived. Without seeing the words from the 1869 "I Wish They'd Do It Now Songster", I can't tell whether those were a folk-processing of "Why Don't They Do It Now?" or a parody, if the distinction can even be drawn. - PJS

Last updated in version 4.5

File: Gil111

I Wish to My Lord I Was Single Again

DESCRIPTION: An aged, lame miser marries a twenty-one year old "silly young maid." He can't please her in speech, bed, or trying to help around the house. She scorns or beats him. He would be happy "if she should sicken and happen to die"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1839 (broadside, Bodleian Bod18614 Firth c.20(66))
KEYWORDS: age shrewishness infidelity marriage clothes dancing party sex rejection violence food ordeal
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 246-248, "I Wish to My Lord I Was Single Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, p. 124, "I Wish to My Lord I Was Single Again" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #17190
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Bod18614 Firth c.20(66), "Silly Young Maid" ("I am an old miser both aged and lame"), J. Catnach (London), 1813-1838: also Bod5931 Harding B 17(285b), Bod11747 Harding B 11(3519A), Bod2429 Harding B 11(3842), Bod13966 Harding B 11(752), Bod20866 Harding B 20(18), Bod12593 Harding B 11(3520), "Silly Young Maid"
File: Ow2E124

I Won't Be a Nun!

DESCRIPTION: "Now is it not a pity such a pretty girl as I Should be sent to a nunnery to pine away and die? But I won't be a nun... I'm so fond of pleasure that I cannot be a nun!" The girl is too fond of partying/men. The nuns couldn't handle a novice like her
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Songs of the People)' c. 1870 (Huntington-FolksongsFromMarthasVineyard)
KEYWORDS: clergy party freedom
FOUND IN: US(NE,So) Britain
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Huntington-FolksongsFromMarthasVineyard, pp. 9-10, "I Won't Be a Nun" (1 text, 1 tune)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 266-267, "I Won't Be a Nun" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph 400, "I Won't Be a Nun!" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henderson-VictorianStreetBallads, p. 92, "I Won't Be a Nun" (1 text)
DT, WTONTNUN*
Roud #7630
File: R400

I Won't Be My Father's Jack

DESCRIPTION: "I won't be my father's jack, I won't be my (mother's/father's) (Jill/Gill), I will be the fiddler's wife And have music when I will. T'other little tune, T'other little tune, Prithee, love, play me T'other little tune."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1767 (Newberry, _Mother Goose's Melody_)
KEYWORDS: music courting father mother nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 257, "I won't be my father's Jack" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #40, p. 54, "(I won't be my Father's Jack)"
Roud #19706
NOTES [38 words]: I've never met this as a genuine traditional song, as opposed to a nursery rhyme, but I heard it sung "somewhere* (the version in my head sounds like Peter Paul & Mary, I'm sorry to say), so I'm putting it in just in case. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: B6M6040
I Won't Go to Macy's Any More

DESCRIPTION: "I won't/don't go to school/Granny's/Macy's any more, more, more, There's a big fat teacher/copper/policeman at the door, door, door" who takes me by the hair/collar and sits me in a chair/makes me pay a dollar...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (Howard)
KEYWORDS: playparty hair police
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North,South)) US(MA,SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame, p. 478, ("I'm not going to school any more, more, more") (2 texts)
  JournalOfAmericanFolklore, Dorothy Mills Howard, "The Rhythms of Ball-Bouncing and Ball-Bouncing Rhymes," Vol. LXII, No. 244 (Apr 1949), #6 p. 168 ("I won't go to Macy's any more, more, more") (1 text)
RECORDINGS:
  Mabel Hillery, Janie Hunter and her grandchildren, "I Want To Go To Mexico" (on JohnsIsland1)
NOTES [46 words]: Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame has "not going to school" as a clapping game and separates it on that basis from a ball-bounce "don't go to Grannie's" which derives from "I won't go to Macy's." Macy's, as Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame notes, is a famous department store in New York City. - BS
Last updated in version 5.3
File: 0pGap478

I Wonder As I Wander

DESCRIPTION: "I wonder as I wander out under the sky How Jesus our savior did come for to die." Jesus comes for "poor ornery/ordinary people," is born to Mary in a "cow's stall," is celebrated in the skies; we are assured he could have had anything he wanted

AUTHOR: John Jacob Niles (?), based on at least one traditional stanza EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (sheet music); collected from tradition by 1940 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious Jesus childbirth poverty
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
  Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 600, "I Wonder As I Wander" (1 text)
  Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 600, "I Wonder As I Wander" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
  AddIOPN: Ian Bradley, _The Penguin Book of Carols_ (1999), #36, "I Wonder As I Wander" (1 text)
  Roud #15015
NOTES [47 words]: Given that this song says that Jesus could have had anything he needed, I can't help but note an irony: In the entire Bible, Jesus really makes only one request "for himself": "My father, if it is possible, take this cup from me" (Matt. 26:39, etc.)
The request was not granted. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Br3600

I Wonder If I'll Ever Reach Home

DESCRIPTION: "I looked down the road and I wondered... I wonder if I'll ever reach home." The singer buckles on his shoes and travels for a long time, wondering if he'll ever see King Jesus.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 2014 (USSeaIsland03)
KEYWORDS: home travel nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
  Rosa and Joseph Murray, "I Wunduh If I Ebbuh Reach Home" (on USSeaIsland03)
File: RcIWIIER
I Wonder Wha'll Be My Man?

DESCRIPTION: "A' kinds o' lads an' men I see, The youngest an' the auldest... I wonder wha'll be my man." The singer wonders about his work, where he is, how she will recognize him. She fears there might be none, and accuses him of keeping her waiting

AUTHOR: Edward Polin

EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Ford)

KEYWORDS: courting oldmaid nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 262-263, "I Wonder Wha'll Be My Man" (1 text, 1 tune); pp. 264-265, "I Wonder Wha'll Be My Wife" (1 text, clearly a male adaption of the preceding; Roud #13096)
Greig/Duncan7 1383, Greig/Duncan8 Addenda, "I Wonner Wha'll Be My Man" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Henderson-VictorianStreetBallads, p. 97, "I won'er wha'll be my man?" (1 text)
Roud #5571
File: FVS262

I Wonder What Is Keeping My True Love Tonight (Green Grass It Grows Bonny)

DESCRIPTION: Woman sings, "I wonder what is keeping my true love tonight?" He sings that he hasn't got anyone else, but he no longer loves her; he can't truly love a woman with two sweethearts. She warns other girls to beware false young men

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Ord-BothySongsAndBallads)

KEYWORDS: infidelity love warning lover

FOUND IN: Ireland Scotland(Aber)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 157, "Green Grass It Grows Bonny" (1 text, 1 tune)
Tunney-StoneFiddle, pp. 87-88, "Green Grass It Grows Bonnie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 187, "The Rose and the Thyme" (1 text, with the plot of this song but introductory stanzas from "Green Grows the Laurel")
McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen 38, "Green Grass it Grows Bonnie" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, KEEPLOVE
Roud #858
RECORDINGS:
Margaret McGarvey, "Green Grass It Grows Bonny" (on FSBFTX15)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Green Grows the Laurel (Green Grow the Lilacs)" (lyrics)

NOTES [59 words]: She should talk! - PJS

Oh, I don't know; they sound perfect for each other.

Interestingly, Ord-BothySongsAndBallads's text (which seems to mash together this song and "Green Grows the Laurel") doesn't mention the bit about the girl having two sweethearts. Neither does the version in the Digital Tradition, which, however, does not list a source. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: K157

I Wonder When I Shall Be Married

DESCRIPTION: "I wonder when I shall be married... For my beauty's beginning to (fail/fade)." The girl's parents would be happy to see her married; they offer a good dowry ("forty good shillings" and household furnishings) but there are as yet no takers

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Cox)

KEYWORDS: age loneliness marriage dowry beauty clothes nonballad family oldmaid

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,NE,SE)

REFERENCES (8 citations):
Cox/Hercog/Halpert/Boswell-WVirginia-B, #16, pp. 157-158, "Old Maid's Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 27, "I Wonder When I Shall Be Married" (1 text)
Ritchie-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 71, "I Wonder When I Shall Be Married" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol1, p. 104, "I Wonder When I Shall Be Married" (1 text, 1 tune, probably derived from a Ritchie Family recording)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #78, "I Wonder When I Shall Be Married" (1 text, 1 tune)
Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart2 48, "I Wonder When I Shall Be Married" (1 text, 1 tune)
Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster, pp. 180-182, "The Old Maid's Song" (1 text plus an excerpt, 1 tune)

DT, WHENMARI
Roud #818

RECORDINGS:
Jean & Edna Ritchie, "I Wonder When I Shall Be Married" (on Ritchie03)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Old Maid's Song (I)" and references there
cf. "O Gin That I Were Mairrit" (theme, lyrics)
cf. "I Am Gaun to the Garret" (theme, lyrics)

NOTES [80 words]: This probably began as a British broadside, "The Maiden's Sad Complaint for Want of a Husband," and has a sister in this Index known as "I Am Gaun to the Garret". Even the American versions are often still quite British (note the forty shilling dowry!). But British versions often end with her finding a husband, so I'm listing this as a separate song.
Note that Cox's text is from Kentucky, not West Virginia -- and almost identical to the well-known Ritchie Family version. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.1
File: CoxII16

I Wonder Where's the Gambler [Laws H22]

DESCRIPTION: The gambler spends all night at cards. In pain, he has to be helped home by friends. He is put to bed, and his mother asks the Lord to forgive him. The gambler says it is too late to pray. The chorus ends, "I wonder where he's gone" (i.e. Heaven or Hell)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Cecil Sharp collection)
KEYWORDS: gambling death farewell Hell

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Laws H22, "I Wonder Where's the Gambler"
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 96-97, "I Wonder Where's the Gambler" (1 text)
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, pp. 82-83, "The Gambler's Dying Words" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 152, "The Gambling Man" (2 texts, 2 tunes, but only the "A" text is this song; the "B" text is "Darling Corey")
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 659, "I Wonder Where's the Gambling Man" (1 short text, 1 tune, presumably this)

DT 829, WHERGAMB
Roud #428

RECORDINGS:
Sid Harkreader, "The Gambler's Dying Words" (Broadway 8115, c. 1930)
Panhandle Pete [pseud. for Howard Nash], "The Gambler's Dying Words" (Decca 5599, 1938)

File: LH22

I Wondered and I Wondered

DESCRIPTION: "I wondered and I wondered All the days of my life, Where you're goin', Mr. Mooney, To get yourself a wife, Where you're goin', where you're goin' To get yourself a wife."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: nonballad wife

REFERENCES (1 citation):
I Wore a Tunic

DESCRIPTION: "I wore a tunic, dirty khaki tunic, And you wore civilian clothes, We fought and bled at Loos When you were on the booze, The booze that no one here knows. Oh, you were with the wenches While we were in the trenches...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang)

KEYWORDS: soldier hardtimes clothes drink

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Sep 25-Oct 8, 1915 - Battle of Loos, in which the British Army (which for the first time has brought in many short-term volunteers) fails to break the German lines in a major offensive. British commander Sir John French afterward is replaced as British commander by Douglas Haig, which is about as disastrous a choice as making the offensive was

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, p. 47, "I Wore a Tunic" (1 text)
Roud #10505

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Wore a Tulip" (i.e. "When You Wore a Tulip"?) (tune)

File: BrPa047B

I Would Like to Read (I Know I Would Like to Read)

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I would" "like to read (x3) a sweet story of old" (4x). Verses: "Come on brother help me tell ... The story of King 'Manuel." "I just want to get up on the mountain top ... I'll praise my God and never stop."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, pp. 40-41, "I Would Like to Read (I Know I Would Like to Read)" (1 text, 1 tune; pp. 148-149 in the 1901 edition)
Roud #15287

NOTES [25 words]: In Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute's verses, every alternate line is "Like to read a sweet story of old." - BS

Last updated in version 4.0

File: Dett040

I Would Not Live Always

DESCRIPTION: The singer offers various reasons why "I would not live always:" "Since Jesus was laid there [in the tomb], I'll not fear its gloom." "Who would live always Away from his God?" The singer looks forward to the bliss of heaven

AUTHOR: William Augustus Muhlenberg

EARLIEST DATE: 1826 (source: Julian)

KEYWORDS: religious death burial

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 630, "I Would Not Live Always" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7558

RECORDINGS:
Clarence Ferrill, "I Would Not Live Always" (on CloseHomeMS)
NOTES [197 words]: The proper title of this hymn is "I Would Not Live Alway." According to John Julian, editor, A Dictionary of Hymnology, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes), p. 774, this was author Muhlenberg's first significant hymn, but there were many editions over the years "1st the Original; 2nd the version given in the Prayer Book Collection, 1876; 3rd the author's revised version of 1859; and the 4th his rewritten text of 1871, the second of these being that known to the hymn-books." Julian gives this biography of Muhlenberg (there is an umlaut over the u, incidentally):

D.D., so of Rev. Dr. Muhlenberg, and grandson of Henry Melchior Muhlenberg, the patriarch of Lutheranism in America, was born in Philadelphia Sept 16, 1796. He graduated at the University of Pennsylvania in 1814. Entering Holy Orders in 1817, he was successively Assistant Rector of St. James's Lancaster, 1823; Rector of the Church of the Holy Communion, New York, 1843; St. Paul's College, Flushing (1828) [sic.; probably should be 1848]; St. Luke's Hospital, New York (1855); St. John's and Long Island (1865) were established by him. He died April 6, 1877." - RBW

Last updated in version 3.7
File: R630

I Would That I Were Where I Wish

DESCRIPTION: "I would that I were where I wish, Out on the sea in a tombey dish, When the dish begins to fill, I wish I was on Mousehole Hill. When the hills begin to crack, I wish I was on daddy's back. When Daddy's' back begins to break... a-eating current cake."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Dean & Shaw)

KEYWORDS: father children food

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

ADDITIONAL: Tony Deane and Tony Shaw _The Folklore of Cornwall_, B. T. Batsford, 1975, p. 49, "(I would that I were where I wish)" (1 short text, probably an excerpt)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Katie Cruel (The Leeboy's Lassie; I Know Where I'm Going)" (lyrics)

cf. "Hush, Little Baby" (format)

File: DeSa049D

I Wouldn't Go There Any More

DESCRIPTION: "Goin' to the bathin' house, Goin' to the kitchen, My foot slip an' I fell down, I wouldn' go there no mo"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands)

KEYWORDS: nonballad injury

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands, p. 119, ("Goin' to the bathing house") (1 fragment)

NOTES [222 words]: The description is the Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands fragment. There are other fragments with the tag line "I won't go there any more." It's tempting to lump them all together but the evidence is too thin.

Here are a few examples: Robert Ford, editor, Vagabond Songs and Ballads of Scotland (second series) (Paisley:Alexander Gardner, 1901 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 71-78, "The Hogg's Tub," a humorous courtship with a chorus, "The hogg's tub, the hogg's tub, The tub behind the door; She tumbled me into the hogg's tub, And I'll never go there any more"; that chorus is shared as a verse in John A. Lomax and Allan Lomax, American Ballads and Folk Songs (The Macmillan Company: New York, 1953), pp. 277-280, "Old Joe Clark," "I won't go down to old Joe's house, I've told you here before; He fed me in a hog-trough And I won't go there any more"; the first verse and chorus has a life of its own in The Book of Nursery Rhymes Complete (Philadelphia: Theodore Bliss & Co., 1846 ("Digitized by Google")), #116, ("It's once I courted as pretty a lass") E.C. Perrow, "Songs and Rhymes from the South" in The Journal of American Folklore, Vol. 28 No. 108 (Apr-Jun 1915), #45 p. 183, "Sally Ann," "I asked her if she loved me, She said she felt above me; Out the door she shoved me -- I won't go there any more." - BS

Last updated in version 4.1
File: Parr119A
I Wouldn't Have an Old Man

DESCRIPTION: The singer refuses to have any part of an old man. She contrasts old and young men: The old are "slobbery," bony, have too many cows to milk, and hog the covers; young men are well-dressed and can keep a girl warm

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (recording, Frank Crumit)
KEYWORDS: nonballad age rejection youth marriage
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,Ro,SE,So)
REFERENCES (12 citations):
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 135, "I Wouldn't Have an Old Man" (1 text)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 174, "An Old Man and a Young Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, pp. 174-176, "Shoo Flies, Don't Bother Me" (1 text, 1 tune, with the chorus of "Shoo Fly" and the verses of "I Wouldn't Have an Old Man")
Randolph 401, "Stand Back, Old Man, Get Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 17, "I Wouldn't Marry" (7 text (some short) plus 6 excerpts, 1 fragment, and mention of 5 more, of which "M," "N," and "R" belong here)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 17, "I Wouldn't Marry" (5 tunes plus excerpts of texts, of which "M" and "R" belong here)
Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains, pp. 8-9, "Git Away, Old Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #78, "Go Way, Old Man" (2 texts)
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, p. 123, "Get Away Old Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol2, pp. 33-34, "Get Away, Old Man, Get Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, p. 199, "Get Away, Old Man, Get Away!" (1 text)
DT, AWAOLDMN*
Roud #3719
RECORDINGS:
Frank Crumit, "Get Away, Old Man, Get Away" (Victor 20137-B, 1926)
Vernon Dalhart, "Get Away Old Man" (Brunswick 123, 1927) (Pathe 32254, 1927)
(Columbia 969-D, 1927) (Supertone 9228, 1928) (CYL: Edison [BA] 5321, n.d.)
Durium Dance Band w. Carson Robison & his Pioneers, "Get Away Old Man" (Durium [UK] EN-25, 1932)
Arthur Fields, "Get Away Old Man" (Broadway 8049, rec. 1927)
Mack Brothers, "Get Away, Old Man, Get Away" (Decca 5073, 1935)
Charlie Newman, "Get Away Old Man, Get Away" (OKeh 45095, 1927)
Chubby Parker, "Get Away Old Maids, Get Away" (Conqueror 7888, 1931; Montgomery Ward M-4945, 1936; on CrowTold02)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Maids When You're Young Never Wed an Old Man"
cf. "Old Man Came Over the Moor, An (Old Gum Boots and Leggings)"
cf. "I Wouldn't Marry an Old Man"
NOTES [83 words]: I suspect this may be a clean version of "I Wouldn't Marry an Old Man," but Ed Cray did not equate the two, and who am I to argue? (It is worth noting that Roud doesn't seem to consider this a song in its own right).

Paul Stamler points out that this song also exists in a version which complains about women, sung by Chubby Parker, and wonders if we shouldn't do something about the title. But the majority of versions complain about men; I suspect the Parker text of being a deliberate rewrite. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0
File: R401

I Wouldn't Marry an Old Maid

DESCRIPTION: "I wouldn't marry an old maid. Tell you the reason why...." Various reasons are offered, e.g. "Her neck is so long and stringy, I fear she'll never die."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: courting oldmaid nonballad floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
I Wouldn't Marry an Old Man
DESCRIPTION: The singer prefers a young to an old man for explicit sexual reasons.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE:
KEYWORDS: bawdy age marriage sex
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 334-335, "I Wouldn't Marry an Old Man" (2 texts, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Maids When You're Young Never Wed an Old Man"
cf. "Old Man Came Over the Moor, An (Old Gum Boots and Leggings)"
cf. "I Wouldn't Have an Old Man"
NOTES [81 words]: A male version, "I Wouldn't Marry an Old Maid," also exists. Necessarily, its verses differ from the female's; thus there may be two songs on the same theme with similar titles. Presumably the tunes will determine the question. In Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, the melody for the female version given is more often associated with "No Balls at All." - EC
I suspect this may be a bawdy version of "I Wouldn't Have an Old Man," but Ed did not equate the two, and who am I to argue? - RBW
File: RL334

I Wouldn't Mind Dying
DESCRIPTION: "I wouldn't mind dying, got to go by myself (x3), I wouldn't mind dying if dying was all." In the same pattern," Bye and bye we're going to see the King," "After death we're going to stand the test," "Ezekiel saw a wheel, a wheel in a wheel."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Johnson recording)
KEYWORDS: death Bible nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands, p. 243, ("By an' by-e I'm goin' t' see the King") (1 text)
Roud #16077
RECORDINGS:
Blind Willie Johnson, "Bye and Bye I'm Goin' To See the King" (on "Praise God I'm Satisfied," Yazoo CD 1058 (1989, recorded about 1927)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ezekiel Saw the Wheel" (Ezekiel's wheel theme) and notes there
File: Parp243

I Yield
DESCRIPTION: "Fathers, bear your cross, for it will only make you richer, For to enter into that bright kingdom, by and by. I yield, I yield, oh, how I love to yield, For to enter into that bright kingdom, by and by." Similarly with mothers, brothers, etc.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
I-Yi-Yi-Yi (Limericks)

DESCRIPTION: Marked by verses in the form of limericks, always bawdy. Most deal with sexual machinery, either human or mechanical. Some may have a chorus such as "Sing us another one, Just like the other one."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1959

KEYWORDS: bawdy technology

FOUND IN: US(SW,So) Canada

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 216-223, "I-Yi-Yi-Yi" (4 texts, 2 tunes)
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, pp. 165-166, "Sing Us Another One" (1 text, 1 tune, very long and composite)

Roud #10247

RECORDINGS:
Anonymous singers, "Limericks" (on Unexp1)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Cielito Lindo" (tune) and references there
cf. "Waltz Me Around Again Willie" (lyrics)

NOTES [57 words]: As will be seen from the cross-references, this piece has an assembled tune, and not all versions have the same melody. Nor are there any lyrics found consistently. It classifies as a single song more or less by default; in essence, it's a bunch of bawdy limericks, often with each verse telling of one sexual exploit of a man or woman. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: EM216

I.W.A. Strike, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer is happy with Premier Joey Smallwood and life in Newfoundland in the 10 years since Confederation. The Americans and I.W.A. strikers cause trouble but Joey opposes them. The strike ends. The singer hopes the Liberals prevail.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports)

KEYWORDS: strike lumbering labor-movement Canada

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 202-205, "The I.W.A. Strike" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #25324

RECORDINGS:
Clara Stevens, "The I.W.A. Strike" (on NFAGuigné01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Loggers' Plight" (subject of the I. W. A. Strike)

NOTES [61 words]: "The Loggers' Plight" is about the same event. [See the entry on that song for more about the event; it is much more pro-Union. - RBW] "Confederation" refers to Confederation of Newfoundland with Canada in 1949. Joey Smallwood was not always so popular; see, for example, "Anti-Confederation Song (II)" before these events and "The Blow Below the Belt" afterwards. - BS

Last updated in version 4.4

File: Guig202
I'd Be a Violet

DESCRIPTION: "I'd be a violet, born in a bower, Roses and lilies by my side, Tra-la-la-la! Tra-la-la-la! And with my love would there abide."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Brown-MyGrandmothersSongbook)

KEYWORDS: flowers love home nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown-MyGrandmothersSongbook 14, "I'd Be a Violet" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #22144

File: BrGr014

I'd Like to Be in Texas When They Roundup in the Spring

DESCRIPTION: "In a lobby of a big hotel in New York town one day," a crow gathers to talk of the places where they have visited. One gray-haired man says, "I'd like to be in Texas when they round up in the spring"; he recalls the life of the cattlemen

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (ArkansasWoodhopper)

KEYWORDS: cowboy work travel

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
ArkansasWoodhopper, pp. 3-5, "I'd Like to Be in Texas for the Round Up in the Spring" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11309

RECORDINGS:
Leon Chappelear, I'd Like To Be In Texas For The Round-Up In The Spring (Champion 45068)

NOTES [20 words]: Curiously, although the Arkansas Woodchopper included this in his book, it does not appear that he ever recorded it! - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: ArWo003

I'd Like to Find the Sergeant

DESCRIPTION: "I'd like to find the Sergeant who forgot to hook me up (x3), And I ain't gonna jump no more." The paratrooper catalogs all the people whose sloppiness left his parachute non-functional. "Glory, glory, what a hell of a way to die."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead)

KEYWORDS: death soldier technology

FOUND IN: Canada

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, p. 123, "I'd Like to Find the Sergeant" (1 text, tune referenced)
Roud #29391

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "John Brown's Body" (tune) and references there

File: Hopk123

I'd Love To Be a Sailor

DESCRIPTION: "I love to be a sailor Sailing on the good ship Kangaroo." The singer thinks of a pretty girl he has courted forty years. It's not true that a sailor has a wife on every port, but "every sailor's wife has got a man on every ship"

AUTHOR: unknown
I'd Rather Be Dead

DESCRIPTION: "I rather be dead an' laid in de dirt Than to see my gal with her feelin's hurt." "I rather be dead an' laid in de sand Than to see my gal with another man." "I rather be dead an' laid in de ground Than to see my gal in anoder weddin' gown."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (White)
KEYWORDS: death jealousy burial
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 443, "I'd Rather Be Dead" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 443, "I'd Rather Be Dead" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #11780
NOTES [25 words]: I suspect this is a fragment of something longer, in which the singer explains the reason for his jealousy. But I can't say what the longer piece is. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Br3443

I'll Ask My Mother (And I'll Let You Know Next Sunday Afternoon)

DESCRIPTION: "A pretty little girl came courting me, Her name was Sarah Broome." When she asks the young man to marry, he says he will ask his mother and let her know. When she gives up on him, she asks for her tokens back, but always he asks his mother

AUTHOR: Harry Stanwood (source: New-Comic-Songster)
EARLIEST DATE: 1870 (New-Comic-Songster)
KEYWORDS: love courting mother
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
New-Comic-Songster, p. 23, "I'll Ask My Mother (And I'll Let You Know Next Sunday Afternoon)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12611
NOTES [37 words]: Common in broadsides, rare in tradition, but there are just enough hints that it was transmitted orally that I've indexed it. I'm not surprised that it's rare, though, since both men and women are implicitly insulted. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: NCSIIMMo

I'll Awa Hame (I)

DESCRIPTION: "Noo, I'll no bide with ma granny nae mair (x2), She skelps me face an' she pu's ma hair, An' I'll no bide...." "I'll away hame tae ma mother I will... She keeps a wee shop... An' she sells a wee drappie...." (S)he will sing and rejoice on her way home

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)
KEYWORDS: home mother travel drink music derivative
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
I'll Awa Hame to My Mither I Will

DESCRIPTION: "I'll awa hame to my mither I will." Mother warns the singer against "the ways o' young men" and "to shun ilk appearance o' ill" and so on. But "I'll meet ye next Friday at Mungo's maut mill" and "Be discreet be sincere an' ye're welcome back still"

AUTHOR: Alexander Rodger (1784-1846) (source: Whitelaw)

EARLIEST DATE: 1843 (Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong)

KEYWORDS: courting humorous nonballad mother

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Greig/Duncan4 897, "I'll Awa Hame to My Mither I Will," Greig/Duncan8 Addenda, "I'll Awa Hame to My Mither I Will" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, p. 164, "I'll Awa' Hame" (1 text)

Roud #6140

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "The Laird o' Cockpen" (tune, per Whitelaw and Greig/Duncan4)
- cf. "I'll Awa Hame (I)" (lyrics)

File: GrD4897

I'll Be a Good Boy

DESCRIPTION: The singer has spent his life sporting, robbing and drinking. He spends a year in jail until his rich uncle pays "my score" and, released, promises he will go home to his wife and get a job. As for his bad ways, "I'll be a good boy And do so no more"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1878 (Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin)

KEYWORDS: adultery prison punishment robbery freedom work dancing drink wife

FOUND IN: US(MW) Australia

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin 45, "I'll Be a Good Boy" (1 text)
- ADDITIONAL: John A Lomax and Alan Lomax, Cowboy Songs and Other Frontier Ballads (New York: The Macmillan Company, 1938), pp. 161-163, "The Bad Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Bob Bolton at Mudcat Cafe, "I Have Been a Wild Boy" ("Oh my father died and left me his estate") (1 text) [see Notes]

Roud #4274

NOTES [113 words]: The Lomax entry is a hybrid. Verses 4 through 6 are this song. Part of the rest is from "Logan County Jail" [Laws E17]. One verse is adapted from "Root Hog or Die" and I don't recognize the remaining verses.

Bob Bolton's thread on Mudcat Cafe says: "This is collected in the 1950s from Sally Sloane, a lovely old singer in New South Wales, Australia and, although a lot of Sally's songs came through her Irish grandmother, Sarah Alexander, this is clearly an English, indeed a London song." It's recurring line is "I've been a wild boy but I'll be no more."

The sense of this song is close to "Wild Rover" with its recurring line "I never will play the wild rover no more." - BS

Last updated in version 3.0

File: MuLa645
I'll Be a Sergeant

DESCRIPTION: "I'll be a sergeant, an orderly sergeant, I'll be a sergeant, on that just bet your life."
The singer will make the other soldiers hate him, but the girls will love them all. He won't take orders from a girl. The singer then thinks about being a colonel.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1863 (F. J. Child, War Songs for Freemen, according to Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar)

KEYWORDS: soldier nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 204-206, "I'll Be a Sergeant" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: SCWF204

---

I'll Be All Right

DESCRIPTION: "I'll be all right, I'll be all right, I'll be all right someday/Deep in my heart, I do believe, I'll be all right some day". Similarly, "I'll be like Him...", "I'll overcome"

AUTHOR: Unknown, perhaps adapted from a song by Charles Tindley

EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (recording, Rev. Gary Davis)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Carawan/Carawan-AintYouGotARight, p. 208, "I Will Overcome" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
Rev. Gary Davis, "I'll Be All Right Someday" (on GaryDavis02)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "We Shall Overcome" (tune, structure, lyrics)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
I Will Be All Right

NOTES [87 words]: Obviously, this song is a near-twin of "We Shall Overcome," and until recently I would have said that the latter was a minimal adaptation of this song. But the recent discovery that "We Will Overcome" was being sung as early as 1908, and in the context of a labor struggle at that, makes the question of ancestry more ambiguous. So I'll leave it up in the air, and simply give this song its own entry, separate from "We Shall Overcome," because of the drastically different social circumstances under which it is sung. - PJS

File: RcIBeAlR

---

I'll Be All Smiles Tonight

DESCRIPTION: The singer is carefully dressing and bedecking herself with flowers for a wedding -- the wedding of her false true love to another girl. She intends to put on a fine face: "Though my heart will break tomorrow, I'll be all smiles tonight."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (recording, Luther B. Clarke)

KEYWORDS: love wedding infidelity clothes

FOUND IN: US(SE,So) Australia

REFERENCES (8 citations):
Randolph 812, "I'll Be All Smiles Tonight" (2 texts)
High-OldOldFolkSongs, p. 20, "All Smiles To Night" (1 text)
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 116, "I'll Be All Smiles Tonight" (1 text plus an excerpt and mention of 7 more, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 138-140, "I'll Be All Smiles Tonight" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 691, "I'll Be All Smiles Tonight" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 32-34, 40-41, 174-175, "I'll Be All Smiles Tonight" (2 texts plus a fragment, 3 tunes)
cf. Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, p. 479, "I'll Be All Smiles Tonight" (source notes only)

ADDITIONAL: John Burke, _Burke's Christmas Songster 1920_, self-published, 1918 (PDF available on the Memorial University of Newfoundland site, p. 14, "I'll Be All Smiles To-Night, Love" (1 text)
Roud #3715
RECORDINGS:
Allen Bros. "I'll Be All Smiles Tonight" (Victor V-40210, 1930)
Carter Family, "I'll Be All Smiles Tonight" (Bluebird B-5529, 1934; Montgomery Ward M-4497, c. 1934)
Chuck Wagon Gang, "I'll Be All Smiles Tonight" (ARC 7-03-58/vocalion 03426/Conqueror 8963, 1937; rec. 1936)
Luther B. Clarke [Blue Ridge Highballers], "I'll Be All Smiles To-night Love" (Columbia 15069-D, 1926)
Frank Jenkins & his Pilot Mountaineers [Oscar Jenkins, Frank Jenkins, Ernest V. Stoneman], "I Will Be All Smiles Tonight" (Conqueror, unissued, 1929)
Jenkins & Whitworth, "I'll Be All Smiles Tonight" (OKeh 45331, 1929)
Bradley Kincaid, "I Will Be All Smiles Tonight" (Supertone 9566, 1929)
Lester McFarland & Robert Gardner (“Mac & Bob”), "I'll Be All Smiles Tonight" (Brunswick 164, 1927)
Linda Parker & the Cumberland Ridge Runners, "I'll Be All Smiles Tonight" (Conqueror 8164, 1933)
Reed Children, "I'll Be All Smiles Tonight" (Columbia 15525-D, 1930; rec. 1928)
Kitty Wells, "I'll Be All Smiles Tonight" (RCA Victor 21-0333, 1950)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "This Night We Part Forever"
File: R812

I'll Be Rusted When the Roll Is Called

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I'll be rested when the roll is called"(2x), "I'll be rested and I'll head toward heaven, I'll be rested...." Verse: "No more shouting when the roll is called...." "Meet my mother when the roll is called...." "Meet my elder when the roll...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Graves)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious
FOUND IN:
Roud #21793
RECORDINGS:
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "When That General Roll Is Called" (theme)
File: RcIBeRe

I'll Be There

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I'll be there" (3x), "When the last trumpet shall sound I'll be there." Verse: "If the mourners would believe When... The gift of life they would receive When..." "I never can forget the day When Jesus washed my sins away"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Barton-OldPlantationHymns); 1893 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute) (see notes)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Barton-OldPlantationHymns, p. 19, "I'll Be There" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 166, "When the General Roll Is Called (General Roll Call)" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 91 in the 1901 edition) [for 1893 edition, see notes]
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "When the Roll Is Called Up Yonder" (theme, some words)
NOTES [47 words]: The index to the 1893 edition [of Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-
I'll Be There, Mary Dear

DESCRIPTION: A soldier bids farewell to his sweetheart, giving her a golden leaf to remember him by. He loses an arm in battle, but friends tell him one arm is enough to hold her. When he returns home, however, he finds her dead and buried; he is heartbroken.

AUTHOR: Words: Andrew Sterling / Music: Harry von Tilzer (1872-1946)

EARLIEST DATE: 1902 (sheet music)

KEYWORDS: soldier death separation return grief love promise army war

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Rorrer-RamblingBlues-LifeAndSongsOfCharliePoole, p. 84, "Goodbye Mary Dear" (1 text)

RECORDINGS:
Richard Harold, "Mary Dear" (Columbia 15426-D, 1929; rec. 1928)
Roy Harvey and the North Carolina Ramblers, "I'll Be There, Mary Dear" (Brunswick 234/Aurora 22032, 1928)

I'll Be Waiting Up There

DESCRIPTION: "If you miss me from singing, And can't find me nowhere, Just come on up to sweet heaven, I'll be singing up there. "You can find me up there (x2), Just come on up to sweet heaven." "If you miss me from praying...." "If you miss me from shouting...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 247, "You Can Find Me Up There" (1 text)

I'll Be With You When the Roses Bloom Again

DESCRIPTION: The soldier must leave his sweetheart; as she pins a rose on his breast, he promises, "I'll be with you when the roses bloom again." He is killed in battle; and can only ask that the captain inform his sweetheart

AUTHOR: Will D. Cobb & Gus Edwards (sometimes listed as "Will Whitmore & Harry Hilliard")
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1901 (sheet music)
KEYWORDS: soldier separation death flowers
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
   Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 123, "When the Roses Bloom Again" (1 text)
   Cambiaire-EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads, p. 96, "When the Wild Roses Bloom Again Beside the River" (1 text)
   Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 138-139, "When the Roses Bloom Again Beside the River" (1 text)
ST RcIBWYWt (Partial)
Roud #2871
RECORDINGS:
   Elton Britt, "When the Roses Bloom Again" (Bluebird B-9000, 1942; ViDisc 44, 1943)
   [Richard] Burnett & [Leonard] Rutherford, "I'll Be With You When the Roses Bloom Again"
   (Columbia 15122-D, 1927; rec. 1926; on BurnRuth01, KMM)
   Carver Boys, "I'll Be With You When the Roses Bloom Again" (Paramount 3233/Broadway 8180 [as Cramer Boys], n.d.; rec. 1929)
   Cross & McCart, "When the Roses Bloom Again" (Columbia 15143-D, 1927)
   Vernon Dalhart, "I'm Be With You When the Roses Bloom Again" (Columbia 15054-D, 1926; rec. 1925)
   Delmore Brothers, "Till the Roses Bloom Again" (Bluebird B-7262/Montgomery Ward M-7321, 1937)
   Paul Joines & Cliff Evans, "Budded Roses" (on Persis1)
   Harry Macdonough, "I'll Be With You When the Roses Bloom Again" (CYL: Edison 8276, 1903)
   Blind Jack Mathis, "When the Roses Come Again" (Columbia 15344-D, 1929)
   Lester McFarland & Robert A. Gardner, "When the Roses Bloom Again" (Brunswick 111/Vocalion 5027, 1927; Supertone S-2028, 1930)
   Walter Scanlan "I'll Be With You When the Roses Bloom Again" (Edison 52063, 1927)
   Kilby Snow, "Buddied Roses" (on KSnow1)
   Ernest V. Stoneman, "When the Roses Bloom Again" (matrix # GEX 496-A recorded 1927 and issued 1927-1928 as: Herwin 17741, Gennett 6044 [as by Ernest V. Stoneman and his Graysen County Boys, Champion 1522 [as by Uncle Jim Seany], Challenge 244/Supertone 9255/Silvertone 5001/Silvertone 8155/Silvertone 25001 [as by Uncle Ben Hawkins]) (matrix #7224-1 recorded 1927 and issued as Banner 1993/Domino 3964/Regal 8324/Oriole 946 [as by Sim Harris], 1927; Homestead 16498 [as by Harris])
   Weaver & Wiggins [pseud. for Wilmer Watts & Frank Wilson], "When the Roses Bloom Again"
   (Broadway 8112, c. 1931)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
   cf. "The Dying Soldier (Erin Far Away I)" [Laws J6] (plot) and references there
   cf. "Little Sweetheart in the Spring" (theme)
   cf. "Down Among the Budded Roses" (some lyrics)
   cf. "When the Roses Bloom Again for the Bootlegger" (lyrics, tune)
SAME TUNE:
When the Roses Bloom Again for the Bootlegger (File: Morr045)
NOTES [102 words]: According to Spaeth, A History of Popular Music in America (p. 315), Cobb & Edwards were also the authors of "Mamie," listed as "an outstanding hit of 1901."
This sounds like a Civil War song, but given the era when Cobb and Edwards worked together, one must assume it was inspired by the Spanish-American War. - RBW
I place Joines & Evans's recording "Budded Roses" here, but with misgivings; for one thing, it makes no mention of the man being a soldier. But the story fits well enough that, for want of an alternative, I place it here. Ditto Snow, who probably learned his version from Charlie Poole. - PJS
Last updated in version 4.3
File: RcIBWYWt
I'll Build Me a Boat

DESCRIPTION: "I'll make me a boat and I'll down the river float... I'll see Mona, fair Mona, pretty Mona I'll see." Using his shirt for a sail, he arrives at Mona's -- but her four brothers break in, kill him, and throw him in the sea. She throws herself in after him

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: homicide brother ship river love courting suicide drowning sea
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 499, "Raise a Ruckus Tonight" (4 texts, of which "A" is this piece)
Roud #10054
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Raise a Ruckus" (lyrics)
NOTES [115 words]: The editors of Brown, seemingly followed by Roud, threw this in with "Raise a Ruckus Tonight" because it contains that key line, and other hints (e.g. the girl's name Mona) that it is related to that song.
Related, but assuredly not a version. The overwhelming majority of the text is a murder ballad -- and, by the looks of it, a very old and possibly very good one that somehow was mixed up with "Raise a Ruckus." Unfortunately, it's short enough that it can't be identified by its lyrics -- and the plot doesn't exactly match any others I know. The murderous brothers are common -- but throwing the body in the sea certainly isn't, and the use of a shirt for a sail is most intriguing. - RBW

File: Br3499

I'll Cheer Up My Heart

DESCRIPTION: "As I was a-walking ae May morning... There I saw my faithless lover...." "Well, since he's gane, joy gang wi' him.... I'll never lay a' my love upon ane." She laments her lost love, who prefers a rich girl, but will not let the grief ruin her life

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Ord-BothySongsAndBallads)
KEYWORDS: courting farewell abandonment
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 177, "I'll Cheer Up My Heart" (1 text)
Roud #5563
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Farewell He" (subject) and references there
File: Ord177

I'll Do Anything Dear

DESCRIPTION: "I'll do anything, dear, that you tell me to. I won't do much for Mary, for Sarah, Sal, or Sue, But I'll do anything that you tell me to." "I'll do anything, dear, that ou tell me to. I won't do much for Nancy, Mary Jane, or Sue, But I'll do anything..."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: love nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 18, "I'll Do Anything, Dear" (1 short text)
Roud #11385
File: Brne018

I'll Drink One (To Be a Good Companion, The Sussex Toast)

DESCRIPTION: "I'll drink one, if you'll drink two, And here's a lad that'll drink with you, And if you do as I have done, You'll be a good companion." Each verse adds a drink ("I'll drink two if you'll drink three, And here's a lad that will drink with thee," etc.)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1921 (Sharp MS.)
KEYWORDS: nonballad drink
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 285, "To Be a Good Companion" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, SUSSXTST*
Roud #885
File: K285

I'll Find My Way

DESCRIPTION: "My baby's gone and she throwed me down I'm just a nuisance all over town But it don't matter what they say, I'll find my way." "She left me... wishing that I were dead." "Look like each moment will be my last." "A gypsy told me to make a change"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (recording, Tampa Red)
KEYWORDS: grief love rejection separation nonballad lover
FOUND IN: US(SE)
Roud #29485
RECORDINGS:
Emmett Murray, "I'll Find My Way" (on USFlorida01)
Tampa Red, "I'll Find My Way" (Bluebird B5450, 1934)
File: RcIFiMY

I'll Fire Dis Trip

DESCRIPTION: "I'll fire dis trip an' I'll fire no mo', fire down below! (x2)" "Miss Nancy Bell, I wish you well, fire down below! (x2)" "De bullies' boy is Uncle Gable, fire down below! Bring on day wood while you be's able! Fire down below."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown); possibly first printed 1850 (see Notes)
KEYWORDS: ship work fire
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 222, "I'll Fire Dis Trip" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 222, "I'll Fire Dis Trip" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 115, "The Sailor Fireman" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #813
NOTES [103 words]: Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas suggests that this may be the original Negro song from which the tune of the verses of both "Ho for California" and "Camptown Races" stemmed. He found it in Sternvall's Sang under Segel (1935) where the author cites a book called Nigger Melodies, being the only entire and complete work of Ethiopian songs extant; Cornish Lamport & Co., NY, 1850. I found references to the book in WorldCat and other indexes, but haven't actually laid eyes on it. - SL
Roud lumps this with "Fire Down Below." There are similar words, but it seems to me the words are different enough to split them. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: Br3222

I'll Fly Away

DESCRIPTION: "Some glad morning, when this life is over, I'll fly away/To a home on God's celestial shore, I'll fly away" Cho: "I'll fly away, oh glory, I'll fly away/When I die, halleluiah bye and bye...." "Just a few more weary days and then...."

AUTHOR: A. E. Brumley
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (recording, Selah Jubilee Quartet); reportedly published in 1932, according I'll Gar Our Gudeman Trow

DESCRIPTION: A wife tells how she'd control her husband: threaten to sell the ladle unless he'd buy her a side saddle; threaten to sulk again unless he gives her twelve gold rings; threaten again to die unless he hires valets for her. She sneers at other women

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1824 (_The Ballad-Book_ [Not Sharpe] privately published in Edinburgh, according to Chambers)

KEYWORDS: bargaining bragging nonballad husband wife

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (4 citations):

Greig/Duncan7 1310, "I'll Gar Our Gudeman Trow" (1 text)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, p. 43, "I'll Gar Our Gudeman" (1 text)
Lyle/McAlpine/McLucas-SongRepertoireOfAmeliaAndJaneHarris, pp. 147-148, "I'll Gar our gudeman trow" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Robert Chambers, _The Scottish Songs_ (Edinburgh, 1829), Vol I, p. 123, "I'll Gar Our Gudeman Trow"

Roud #1560

File: GrD71310

I'll Give You One More As You Go

DESCRIPTION: The singer describes how his sweetheart sent him off, offering a final kiss: "I'll give you one more as you go." Her parents are less tolerant; they set the dog on him. As he departs, the father orders "Sic him, Towse, And give him one more as he goes."

AUTHOR: Ike Brown?

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (recording Carolina Buddies)

KEYWORDS: love courting family dog humorous

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Randolph 376, "I'll Give You One More As You Go" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 308-309, "I'll Give You One More As You Go" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 376)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 697, "Just Give Him One More As He Goes" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #3755

RECORDINGS:
Carolina Buddies, "My Sweetheart is a Sly Little Miss" (Columbia 15641-D, 1930)
The Carter Family, "Give Him One More As He Goes" (Conqueror 9664, 1941; rec. 1940)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I'm Just Going Down to the Gate" (general situation, a few words)
cf. "Nobody's Darling on Earth" (portions of tune)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Sic Him, Towe

NOTES [57 words]: Cohen reports this was written by Ike Brown in 1884. - RBW
To my ears this is a (rather poor) parody of "I'm Just Going Down to the Gate." Many other songs collected by Randolph seem to have originated as commercial hillbilly 78s, and I'm confident that this one could, if it were possible, be traced back to the Carolina Buddies recording. -PJS

I'll Go Back to Dear St. George Again

DESCRIPTION: "When me and my partner we left town this morning, A beautiful nag did run. We got to the foot of the Meriton dugway, A friend unexpectedly did come." They ride together to Slappie's for win. Then they ride on. The singer says he will return to St. George

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah)

KEYWORDS: travel drink

FOUND IN: US(Ro)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #232, "I'll Go Back to Dear St. George Again" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #10908

NOTES [12 words]: For Saint/St. George, see the notes on "Saint George and the Drag-On." - RBW

I'll Hang My Harp on a Willow Tree (i)

DESCRIPTION: "I'll hang my harp on a willow tree, I'm off to the wars again." The singer's love is to be wed to one of higher degree. For her sake he gave up soldiering and became a minstrel, but after her wedding he will resume soldiering, hoping to die in battle

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1846 (sheet music)

KEYWORDS: war infidelity wedding music harp

FOUND IN: US(MW,SE) Ireland Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (8 citations):
Greig/Duncan6 1203, "I'll Hang My Harp on a Willow Tree" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
McNeil-SouthernFolkBalladsVol1, pp. 113-115, "I'll Hang My Harp on a Willow Tree" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin 23, "Harp On a Willow" (1 text)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H155, p. 366, "I'll Hang My Harp on a Willow Tree" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 56-57, "I'll Hang My Harp" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Witshire-WSRO Mi 736, "Warrior's Grave" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1008, p. 69, "I'll Hang My Harp on a Willow Tree" (1 reference)
Heart-Songs, pp. 278-279, "I'll Hang My Harp on a Willow Tree" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST MN1113 (Full)

Roud #1444

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 17(134b), "I'll Hang My Harp on a Willow Tree" ("I'll hang my harp on a willow tree"). The Poet's box (Glasgow), 1851; also Firth b.26(282), Firth c.16(354), Harding B 11(2611), "I'll hang my harp on a willow tree"; Harding B 15(136a), Harding B 11(1701), Firth b.26(220), "I'll Hang My Harp on the Willow Tree"; Firth b.27(227), "I'll Hang Up My Harp on a Willow Tree"
I'll Have a New Life (In That Resurrection Morning)

DESCRIPTION: "(On/In) the resurrection morning, When the dead and Christ shall rise, I'll have a new body...." The singer gives thanks for a new home, a new life, and a body "raised in power, Ready to live in paradise."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (collected by Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains from Ruby Vass)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains, pp. 91-92, "I'll Have a New Life" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #4309

NOTES [128 words]: Roud lumps this with "We Shall Rise, Hallelujah," but while there may be some shared lyrics, I really don't think they're the same song.

The phrase "sown in weakness, raised in power" is from 1 Corinthians 15:43, which is sort of a hymn by Paul to the resurrection body.

The origin of this raises interesting questions. This really sounds to me like church hymn -- and, indeed, I have a Baptist hymnal, Soul-Stirring ongs and Hymns, which has a piece entitled "Hallelujah, We Shall Rise" and beginning "In the resurrection morning, When the trump of Go shall sound, We shall rise...." The tunes look fairly similar; the lyrics less so. I woner if this might not be another case of someone in the Vass family (probably John Daniel Vass) remaking an existing song. - RBW

File: Shel091

I'll Hear the Trumpet Sound

DESCRIPTION: "You may bury me in the east, You may bury me in the west, But I'll hear the trumpet sound In that morning." "Father Gabriel in that day, He'll take wings and fly away."

Christians, preachers, and the singer will take wings at Judgment Day

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1887 (College Songs)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad burial

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (2 citations):

DT, TRUMPSND*

ADDITIONAL: Henry Randall Waite, _College Songs: A Collection of New and Popular Songs of the American Colleges_, new and enlarged edition, Oliver Ditson & Co., 1887, p. 57, "I'll Hear the..."
I'll Kiss Ye Yet, and I'll Clap Ye Yet

DESCRIPTION: "I'll kiss ye yet, and I'll clap ye yet, An' I lie at your bonny back an' hap ye yet; An' fan ye lie doon, I'll draw the curtains roon, An' I'll bless the bonny day I gat ye, yet"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: love nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan4 874, "I'll Kiss Ye Yet, and I'll Clap Ye Yet" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #6299
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "To Daunton Me" (tune, per Greig/Duncan4)
cf. "Fat'll Mak a Bonny Lassie Blythe an' Glad?" (tune, per Greig/Duncan5) and references there
NOTES [10 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan4 text. - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD4874

I'll Lay Ye Doon, Love

DESCRIPTION: "I'll lay ye doon, love, I'll treat ye decent... For surely he is an honest man." The singer walks out to hear two lovers talking. One, who has traveled far, must travel on, "But when I come back, love, I'll lay ye doon."

AUTHOR: (based on a song by Edward Harrigan, but heavily rewritten)
EARLIEST DATE: 1974 (Sing Out!)
KEYWORDS: love sex courting travel
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
DT, LAYEDOON*
ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 23, #5 (1974), p, 17, "I'll Lay Ye Doon, Love" (1 text, 1 tune, with a few variant words, based on Jean Redpath's and Norman Kennedy's versions of a Jeannie Robertson original)
Roud #3355
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Muldoon, the Solid Man" (lyrics)
NOTES [32 words]: For what little we know about how this song changed from an American song sung by a stage Irishman to how it became a Scottish song of seduction, see the notes to "Muldoon, the Solid Man." - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: DTlayedo

I'll Let You Know the Reason

DESCRIPTION: The singer tells a girl he has come to gain her love. He has left another for her. She should not think about riches, which she has and he wants and is the reason she slights him. He hopes she will not slight him the next time and that they'll marry.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)
KEYWORDS: courting rejection money nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #81, p. 2, "Milton"; "Folk-Song in Buchan," p. 38, ("I'll let you know the reason") (1 text plus 1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan4 829, "Milton of Aberdour" (6 texts, 6 tunes)
Roud #6247
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Bogie Banks" (theme: rejecting the riches of Alexander)
NOTES [588 words]: None of the Greig or Greig/Duncan4 texts include "Milton" except in the title. The alternate title "Alexander" refers to the singer's reference to the woman's money. "Don't fix your mind on riches love nor yet on world's gear Look back to Alexander and there you'll find it clear He conquered all this wide warld sat doon and wept full sore To think there was but ae warld and that he wad gain no more."
This song shares one verse and the general theme with Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H589, p. 344, "The Rejected Lover" but I don't see enough of a similarity to lump them together, as Roud does. - BS
The cliche that Alexander wept because there were no more worlds to conquer is somewhat deceptive. Alexander had succeeded his father Philip in 336, when Philip was assassinated (Savill, p. 7). Philip had nearly conquered Greece (Bosworth, p. 16), but his death caused chaos, with several claimants to the Macedonian throne coming forward. Alexander managed to take charge by swift movement, the details of which are lost to us (Bosworth, pp. 25-27). Alexander then re-crushed the Greek city-states, destroying Thebes and terrorizing the rest (Mahaffy, pp. 10-11). He then picked up his father's plans to attack the once-great but now badly-ruled Persian Empire (Bosworth, p. 17).
Alexander first met local Persian forces in battle at Granicus (Mahaffy, p. 15). He then met their main army at Issus (Mahaffy, pp. 20-23) where he captured most of the Persian Emperor Darius III Codomannus's family (Roger, pp. 287-291), turned aside to conquer the restive Persian province of Egypt (Bosworth, pp. 67-74), and finally and completely defeated those Darius III at Gaugamela in 331 B.C.E. (Rogers, pp. 317-325). Darius fled the field, and was assassinated in 330 (Rogers, pp. 341-342). Alexander then married his daughter and claimed the Persian Empire (Arrian/Selincourt, p. 353).
Theoretically Alexander already controlled the world's largest empire. But Persia had been a collection of provinces, mostly distinct in culture, language, and religion, which had been content under the relatively benign yoke of the earlier Persians, but who had grown restive under recent bad Emperors. Alexander had to reconquer much of this territory. He succeeded well enough, but it took time. Then he headed through what is now Afghanistan and Pakistan toward what is now India.
It was in 326, at the Hyphasis River (the modern Beas in the Punjab) that the conquests stopped. "Stories [of the peoples to the east] could not but whet Alexander's appetite for yet another adventure; but his men felt differently" (Arrian/Selincourt, p. 291). Arrian/Selincourt, pp. 291-297, describes Alexander's attempts to jolly the men along. He reduced some of the men to tears, but failed. He then tried to shame them into following him; that too failed, although more men cried. Finally he started for home (Arrian/Selincourt, pp. 298-299). He would die in 323, in Babylon (Mahaffy, pp. 37-41).
There is much evidence that, by the end, Alexander was not entirely sane. He demanded an extreme form of worship, the proskynesis, and killed men who had once been his friends (one of them, perhaps, his lover); Savill, pp. 81-88. By the end, he was asking to be treated as a god (Savill, p. 139, although she denies this is a sign of mental disturbance). So he may have cried over a lot of things. But he never actually cried that there "were" no more worlds to conquer; at most, he cried because he would not be allowed to conquer them. - RBW
Bibliography
- Bosworth: A. B. Bosworth,Conquest and Empire: The reign of Alexander the Great, 1988 (I use the 1993 Cambridge Canto paperback)
- Mahaffy: John Pentland Mahaffy,The Empire of Alexander the Great, 1898 (I use the 1995 Barnes & Noble reprint)
- Savill:Alexander the Great And His Time (no copyright date listed; I use the 1993 Barnes & Noble edition)
I'll Lie nae Mair My Lane

DESCRIPTION: Jean, at sixteen, sits by a dyke complaining that she'll soon be old and gray and would not lie alone. Her mother says she's too young. She names boy friends who were not serious. Robin overhears her, proposes, they marry and no more lie alone.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan5)
KEYWORDS: courting love marriage mother
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan5 989, "I'll Lie nae Mair My Lane" (1 text)
Roud #6729
File: GrD5989

I'll Name the Boy Dennis, Or No Name At All

DESCRIPTION: "I'm bothered, yes, I'm bothered, completely perplexed, I'm the father of a little boy, I'm not happy but I'm vexed." Everyone in his immense family wants to give the child a different name. He puts his foot down for the name Dennis.

AUTHOR: Words: Fred Hatfield / Music: J. Small
EARLIEST DATE: 1880 (copyright on a sheet music arrangement by Jos. Schwenseck ?)
KEYWORDS: humorous baby wordplay
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 34-35, "Name the Boy Dennis Or No Name At All" (1 text)
Roud #6658
File: Dean034

I'll Never Get Drunk Any More (I)

DESCRIPTION: "When I go out on Sunday, what pleasure do I see? For the girl I loved so dearly Has gone square back on me." "I'll never get drunk any more, any more... I'll lay my head on the barroom floor." The singer laments how drink has ruined him.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1920 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: drink abandonment nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 36, "I'll Never Get Drunk Any More" (4 texts, all somewhat mixed; the "A" text is cited above, and the "B" text is probably from the same family; "C" and "D" are "Oh, Once I Had a Fortune")
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore536, "I'll Never Get Drunk Any More" (1 text plus an excerpt)
Roud #4625
File: Br3036

I'll Never Get Drunk Any More (III)

DESCRIPTION: The singer "got frisky Over some poteen whisky," fell, cracked his skull and had his pocket picked. The landlady won't give a drunk credit. "A man that's fond of boozing, His cash goes daily oozing" He swears off drink and warns others to do the same.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1839 (Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
KEYWORDS: warning drink nonballad money theft
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (3 citations):
I'll Never Leave Old Dixie Land Again

DESCRIPTION: Singer, a former slave, returns to Dixie and his beloved Dinah again, after having spent time living in Kansas. He says the weather there is enough to freeze him, and he misses his home, so he'll never leave old Dixie Land again.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (recording, Bogue Ford)

KEYWORDS: homesickness loneliness love home return reunion separation slavery

FOUND IN: US(MW)

Roud #15470

RECORDINGS:
Bogue Ford, "I'll never leave old Dixie land again" (AFS 4211 A1, 1939; in AMMEM/Cowell)

NOTES [29 words]: A minstrel-show song, without a doubt. Ford sings it in dialect.
A significant number of freed slaves did in fact settle in Kansas during the years after the Civil War.
- PJS

File: RcINLODA

I'll Never, Never Marry the Blacksmith Lad

DESCRIPTION: The singer will never marry a blacksmith because he works at the smitty and his clothes are dirty. She'll never marry a weaver because he complains and cries for his bobbins. She'll marry the Carpenter who works with planks and she'll get the shavings.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2)

KEYWORDS: marriage rejection weaving work nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 192, "I'll Never, Never Marry the Blacksmith Lad" (1 text)

Roud #21094

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Soldier Boy for Me (A Railroader for Me)" (theme: professional comparison) and references there

File: LyCr2192

I'll Not Marry at All

DESCRIPTION: The single woman proudly proclaims her intent to die an old maid. She reels off the defects of all sorts of men -- rich, poor, fat, lean, farmer, e.g. "I'll not marry a man that's rich, He'll get drunk and fall in the ditch, I'll not marry at all...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1913 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)

KEYWORDS: oldmaid

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,NE,Ro,So,SE) Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (19 citations):
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 72, "Shab-i-da Ru-dy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 262-263, "I Wouldn't Marry" (2 texts)
Randolph 364, "The Old Maid's Song" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 218-219, "The Old Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #80, "I'll Not Marry at All" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 17, "I Wouldn't Marry" (7 text (some short) plus 6 excerpts, 1 fragment, and mention of 5 more, of which "H," "J," "O," and "P" apparently belong here)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 17, "I Wouldn't Marry" (5 tunes plus excerpts of texts, of which "H" and "O" belong here)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #80, "I'll Not Marry at All" (2 texts)
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 56, "The Old Maid's Song" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 211-212, "I'll Not Marry at All" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wyman/Brockway-LonesomeSongs-KentuckyMountains-Vol2, p. 72, "The Old Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, pp. 91-92, "I'll Not Marry At All" (1 text)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 26, "The Old Maid" (1 text)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 173, "I Never Will Marry" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 99, pp. 208-209, "I'll Not Marry at All" (1 text)
Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 78, "I Won't Marry" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 100, "I Never Will Marry a Man Who Is Rich" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, pp. 86-87, "I Never Will Marry a Man who is Rich" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, NOTMARRY
Roud #2774
RECORDINGS:
Kentucky Thorobreds, "I'll Not Marry at All" (Paramount 3080, 1928; Broadway 8184 [as Old Smokey Twins], n.d.; rec. 1927)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Old Maid's Song (I)" and references there
cf. "A Young Virgin" (theme)
cf. "The Song of the Southern Volunteers" (form)
cf. "Yon Bonnie Lad" (theme)
NOTES [92 words]: Linscott, or her informants, thought this Irish. She cites no evidence, and the collections seem to be all, or nearly all, from the United States and Canada. The idea of a catalog of undesirable occupations can be traced all the way back to ancient Egypt, though there it was a young man being advised against them. The "Instruction of Duauft" consists of a father telling the son what's wrong with each job, e.g. a smith smells worse than fish roe. (The piece was apparently used to train scribes; the one form of employment it approves of is scribe.) - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: E072

I'll Owre Bogie

DESCRIPTION: The singer says she'll follow her love over Bogie, or anywhere. For example, "As I came by Strathbogie yetts Strathboggie's trees were green There I heard the drums to beat I'll owre Boggie wi' him"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: love travel nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan4 869, "I'll Owre Bogie" (2 texts)
Roud #6245
NOTES [172 words]: The Bogie is a tributary of the Deveron River in Aberdeenshire. - BS From The Illustrated Book of Scottish Songs from the Sixteenth to the Nineteenth Century, (London, 1854 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 40: "To go 'ower Bogie' is a phrase that expresses in Scotland the same idea as that of running to Gretna Green in England. It is also used to express a marriage performed by a magistrate instead of a clergyman." [Re Gretna Green -- "a small village on the west coast in the south of Scotland": "Its main claim to fame are the Blacksmith's Shops, where many runaway marriages were performed. These began in 1753 when an Act of Parliament, Lord Hardwicke's Marriage Act, was passed in England, which stated that if both parties to a marriage were not at least 21 years old, then consent to the marriage had to be given by the parents. This Act did not apply in Scotland where it was possible for boys to get married at 14 and girls at 12 years old with or without parental consent." (Source: Wikipedia article Gretna Green)] - BS

I'll Return, Mother Darling, to You

DESCRIPTION: "A mother was saying good-bye to her boy, Who was ready to start for the war." She asks if they are parting forever. He promises to return "When the roses of springtime are blooming." Eventually the boy returns and says he will never more part from her

AUTHOR: Words: Casper Nathan / Music: E. Clinton Keithley (1880-1955)
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (sheet music copyrighted)
KEYWORDS: war mother children separation reunion
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dean-FlyingCloud, p. 113, "I'll Return, Mother Darling, to You" (1 text)

NOTES [544 words]: The cover of the sheet music to this makes the mother look truly ancient; presumably the idea was to give the impression that the boy was her last son. Since the song was written in 1915, clearly the war is World War I. In a proper folk song, he probably would not have come back, but this item is too cheery to note the millions of casualties, or the many soldiers who came home blind, brain damaged, or missing one or more limbs.

Often not even the bodies returned home. John Keegan, The First World War, Alfred A. Knopf, 1999, pp. 421-422, notes, "Few Russian or Turkish soldiers were ever decently interred and many German and Austrian soldiers killed on the shifting battlefields of the Eastern Front imply returned to earth.... Of the British Empire's million dead, most killed in France and Belgium, the bodies of over 500,000 were never to be found or, if found, not identified. a similar proportion of the 1,700,000 French war dead had also disappeared."

Keegan, p. 423, "To the million dead of the British Empire and the 1,700,000 French dead, we must add 1,500,000 soldiers of the Habsburg Empire who did not return, two million Germans, 460,000 Italians, 1,700,000 Russians and many hundreds of thousands of Turks; their numbers were never counted.... Male mortality exceeded normal expectations, between 1914 and 1918, seven to eightfold in Britain, and tenfold in France, in which 17 per cent of those who served were killed.... [M]en who were between 19 and 22 when the ware broke out... were reduced by 35-37 per cent."

James L. Stokesbury, A Short History of World War I, Morrow, 1981, makes the figures even more grim. On p. 310, he calculates, "All the Allies together mobilized a total of just over 42 million men. They counted as casualties those who had been killed or died while in service, wounded, prisoners, and missing. The total of these was slightly more than 22 million, or about 52 percent.... Russia... had mobilized 12 million men and had 9,150,000 casualties, or 76 percent. The British Empire had mobilized 8,904,000 and suffered more than 3 million casualties, about 36%. Italy had 39 percent losses among her 5.5 million servicemen. France, by contrast, had put under arms half a million fewer than the British empire, 8,400,000, but had a far higher ratio of losses, over 6 million, or 73 percent, the highest of any of the surviving states." (Russia, of course, had collapsed under the strain, hence the distinction between non-survivors and survivors.) Stokesbury calculates American casualties as a relatively trivial 8%, and that on a relatively small force of 4,355,000 men. Stokesbury, p. 310, "The Central Powers sacrificed as many men losing the war as the Allies did winning it. Of 23 million men mobilized they had 15 million casualties, 15 more than the Allies. Germany lost more than 7 million of her 11 million fighting men. The worst record for the entire war was Austria-Hungary's, for she mobilized 7,800,000 and lost 7 million of them, an astonishing 90 percent."

Stokesbury, p. 309, notes that the was was estimated to have cost $337,980,579,560 -- and that's in 1920 dollars!

Bottom line: A million and a half British mothers had to face either losing a son or having him come back permanently maimed. - RBW

File: Dean113A
I'll Rise When the Rooster Crows

DESCRIPTION: Disjointed, some floating verses: "Going up yonder gonna put on my robes, gonna put on my golden shoes." "Where the duck chews tobacco and the goose drinks wine" Chorus: "I'll rise when the rooster crows... down where the sugar cane grows"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (recording, Uncle Dave Macon)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Disjointed, some floating verses: "Going up yonder gonna put on my robes, gonna put on my golden shoes." "Where the duck chews tobacco and the goose drinks wine/The old hen cackles while the rooster keeps the time." "What you gonna do when the women all dead/Gonna stand in the corner with a hung-down head/If I had to marry I wouldn't marry for riches/Marry a big fat girl who couldn't wear my britches." Chorus: "I'll rise when the rooster crows...I'm going back south where the sun shines hot, oh, down where the sugar-cane grows"

KEYWORDS: marriage drink floating verses nonballad chickens

FOUND IN: US(SE)

Roud #17514

RECORDINGS:
Binkley Brothers' Dixie Clodhoppers, "I'll Rise When the Rooster Crows" (Victor V-40048, 1929; rec. 1928.)
Uncle Dave Macon, "Rise When the Rooster Crows" (Vocalion 5097/Vocalion 15321, 1926)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "Devilish Mary" (floating verses)
  cf. "Hopalong Peter" (floating verses)
  cf. "Hen Cackle" (floating verses)

File: RcIRWTRC

I'll Sing You a Song

DESCRIPTION: "I'll sing you a song (that's not very long/the days are long) About a woodcock (or cuckoo) and a sparrow." A dog either burns its tail or bites the singer's ear and is to be hanged tomorrow.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1784 (Gammer Gurton's Garland, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)

KEYWORDS: execution nonballad bird dog

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 177, "I'll Sing You a Song That's No Very Long" (1 text)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 485, "I'll sing you a song" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #72, p. 80, "(I'll Sing You a Song)"; cf. #256, p. 159, ("I'll sing you a song")

Roud #15095

NOTES [103 words]: Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes: "Since this rhyme dates at least from the eighteenth century, the statement in the last line that the dog must be hanged on the morrow may be based on more than poetic fancy. The trial of animals and the judicial hanging of dogs, although uncommon, appears at one time to have been considered reasonable." - BS
The Baring-Goulds give examples of this phenomenon, noting that it applied particularly to animals which killed or maimed people. They fail to note that this is essentially a Biblical policy: A bull which fatally gored a person was to be stoned (Exodus 21:28). - RBW

Last updated in version 2.6

File: 002485

I'll Stick to Auld Style

DESCRIPTION: "I biggit a hoosie wi' divots and stanes, For to keep me sheltered frae the cauld wind and rains, But twa daft idle laddies, wha thocht it fine fun, Fell foul o't and ca'd it a' flat wi' the grun"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)

KEYWORDS: home
I'll Take This Glass into My Hands

DESCRIPTION: "I'll take this glass into my hands, and drink to all that's here; I cannot tell where we may be before another year. Some may wed, some may be dead, some may be lying low; some may be lying on a foreign shore, and not know where to go."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: drink nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 565, "I'll Take This Glass into My Hands" (1 text)
Roud #6036
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "When Fortune Turns Her Wheel" (theme)
NOTES [10 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan3 entry. - BS
Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD3565

I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen

DESCRIPTION: The singer promises to take Kathleen home across the ocean. He says that -- even though she has lost her looks and her voice is sad -- he still loves her as she loves him. Once home (in Ireland?), they will visit their old haunts

AUTHOR: Thomas P. Westendorf (1848?-1923)
EARLIEST DATE: 1876 (sheet music published by John Church & Co. of Cincinnati)
KEYWORDS: home love travel
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Jackson-PopularSongsOfNineteenthCenturyAmerica, pp. 83-86, "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dean-FlyingCloud, p. 107, "I Will Take You Back Again, Kathleen" (1 text)
Geller-FamousSongsAndTheirStories, pp. 5-10, "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 259, "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen" (1 text)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, p. 296, "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen" DT, KTHLEN
ST RJ19083 (Full)
Roud #12907
RECORDINGS:
Kaplan's Melodists w. Vernon Dalhart, voc. "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen" (Edison 51666, 1925)
Bradley Kincaid, "I'll Take You Home Again Kathleen" (Bluebird 5569, 1934)
Shannon Quartet, "I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen" (OKeh 40032, 1925)
Zack [Hurt] & Glenn [?], "I'll Take You Home Again Kathleen" (OKeh 45240, 1928)
NOTES [142 words]: This song has produced a its own folklore (that it's traditional, that it was written in 1900, that the author's wife was named/nicknamed/renamed Kathleen, that it has something to do with Ireland, etc.). The facts, which rarely resemble the folklore, have been gathered in Richard S. Hill's article "Getting Kathleen Home Again" in the June 1948 issue of Notes, the journal of the Music Library Association.
Spaeth (History of American Popular Music) and Jon W. Finson, The Voices That Are Gone: Themes in Nineteenth-Century American Popular Song, Oxford University Press, 1994, pp. 288-289, summarize the facts as follows: Westerndorf's wife was named Jennie, not Kathleen; he was
I'll Taste No More the Poisonous Cup

DESCRIPTION: "I'll taste no more the poisonous cup That brought on me destruction... But [by?] my vice sleeps one in a grave so fair, My lovely lovely Mary." They had lived happily, but "demon rum" overtook him; now she is dead and he hopes to join her

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1847 (Journal of the Cortes)
KEYWORDS: drink death burial love
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 338-339, "I'll Taste No More the Poisonous Cup" (1 text, 2 tunes)
Roud #25984
File: HGam338

I'll Tell My Ma (I)

DESCRIPTION: "I'll tell my my when I go home, The boys won't leave the girls alone; Pulling their hair and breaking their combs...." In some texts, the story ends there; in others, the girl says, "But that's all right till I go home"; we are told of her true love

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Jekyll-JamaicanSongAndStory); 1885 (parody, according to Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
KEYWORDS: courting hair fight
FOUND IN: Ireland Australia Britain(England(North)) Canada(Mar) West Indies(Jamaica)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H48e, p. 11, "I'll Tell My Ma" (1 fragment, consisting solely of the "I'll Tell My Ma" stanza, 2 tunes)
Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, p. 146, "(Polka)" (1 fragment, consisting solely of the "I'll Tell My Ma" stanza, 1 tune)
Jekyll-JamaicanSongAndStory 117, "(When I go home I will tell me mumma)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 95, "I'll Tell Mother" (4 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #2649
RECORDINGS:
Em Elliott, "I'll Tell My Ma When I Get Home" (on Elliotts01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Wind (Rain, Rain, the Wind Does Blow)" (lyrics)
NOTES [146 words]: The Clancy Brothers version of this involves a girl, "the belle of Belfast city," setting her heart on a man. This doesn't seem to happen in the other versions I've seen, which are just the complaints about the boys teasing the girl.
The question is, is this a conflate of "I'll Tell My Ma" with some other song (presumably "The Wind (Rain, Rain, the Wind Does Blow)," or is the Clancy version the original which broke in half? Roud lumps them, but I'm not sure that means much.
I eventually ended up splitting them, but I'm none too happy about the situation. - RBW
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame: "A ditty that was the rage in late Victorian times.... Two of the earliest recordings are parodies ... 1885 ... and ... c. 1900...."
Jekyll-JamaicanSongAndStory's text makes a different point: "When I go home I will tell me mumma That the girls in Jamaica won't leave me alone." - BS

I'll Tell Ye a Talie

DESCRIPTION: A tale about the colt and fillie? The singer goes to Ireland and sees a maiden chasing a cock that had stolen her comb. She asks "Blue-breekies" whether he had seen her husband. Yes: he burnt a hole in his breeches, and what's that to you?

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: travel hair Ireland humorous chickens horse clothes
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1635, "I'll Tell Ye a Talie" (1 text)
Roud #13067
NOTES [164 words]: I have no idea what's going on here. That may be what the singer intends. "Blue-breekies" may refer to a [police?] uniform.
Roud and the notes to Greig/Duncan8 look to Robert Chambers, The Popular Rhymes of Scotland (Edinburgh, 1870 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 27, ("There was a wee yowe") for a [closely?] related texts. The story lines, as far as I can tell, cross in a few places: the trip to Ireland, the burn, and mention of the "guidman." Here's what I think the Chambers text is about: A ewe looks at the moon and sees more wonders than fifteen; it goes to Ireland and Aberdeen and returns home; the husband is herding, the pigs are inside, the wife supervising the girls making cheese; the cat is in the stall eating when a cinder burnt its nose and it cries "yeowe, yeowe, yeowe." - BS
Based just on the description, it sounds like a hidden-meaning tale of a man seducing a virgin, ans of her following him to try to get him to marry her. But why, then, the humor? - RBW
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD1635

I'll Tell You a Comical Story
DESCRIPTION: Neilus buys Thady's donkey for an old donkey and two quid. Thady will buy a motor (car?) with the money. Neilus tries to cancel the deal: his new donkey has smashed the stall door. They brawl. The singer is knocked out and so can't say how it all ends
AUTHOR: Michael O Tuama (George Curtin) (source: OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)
EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)
KEYWORDS: fight money humorous animal
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 71, "I'll Tell You a Comical Story" (1 text)
Roud #16246
File: OCC071

I'll Tell Your Daddy
DESCRIPTION: "John, John, John, I'll tell your daddy (x3), So early in the morning." "The blue-eyed girl is dead and gone (x3) So early in the morning."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 100, "I'll Tell Your Daddy" (1 text)
Roud #3595
NOTES [22 words]: The editors of Brown link this implicitly to "Going to Boston," but that appears to be on the basis solely of a floating verse. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: Br3100

I'll Weave My Love a Garland
DESCRIPTION: "I'll weave my love a garland, He shall be dressed so fine, I'll set it round with roses... For I love my love, and I love my love Because my love loves me." The singer wishes she were an arrow, a fish, a reaper, that she might more easily find him
I'll Wear the Violets, Sweetheart

DESCRIPTION: "A lad was one day reading While the tears ran down his cheeks" as he reads a letter containing "violets from the dell." It asks him to wear them; he says he will do so though they will meet as strangers and/or are parted forever

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1953 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: love separation flowers request
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 100, "I'll Wear the Violets, Sweetheart" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #11391
File: Brne100

I'm a Day too Young

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets a girl and asks how old she is. She says, "I'm a day too young to be your bride ... to lay by your side." They have sex. "I found she was not a day too young" She asks when they will marry: never; "carry your big belly home to your mam"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople)
KEYWORDS: seduction rake youth
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan7 1311, "Linkin' Owre the Lea" (5 fragments, 5 tunes)
Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople 30, "I'm a Day Too Young" (1 text)
Roud #1003
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Broom
File: GrD71311

I'm a Decent Boy from Ireland

DESCRIPTION: The "decent boy" has been forced to roam. Brought up by good parents, he urges, "Be kind to your parents when their locks are turning gray... You'll never know their value till they lay beneath the soil."
I'm a Little Dutch Girl

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a little Dutch girl, from over the sea." "I'm a little Dutch boy, from over the sea." "I hate you." "Why?" "You stole my necklace." "Here is." "We're getting married ... having babies ... getting older ... in our coffins ... up in heaven ... angels"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
KEYWORDS: courting wedding childbirth death playparty
FOUND IN: Australia Britain(England(Lond,South),Scotland(Hebr),Wales) Canada(Ont)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 72, "I'm a Little Dutch Girl" (3 texts)
Carey-MarylandFolkloreAndFolklife, p. 78, "(no title)" (1 text)
Roud #13205
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "O du lieber Augustin" (tune, per Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame) [indexed under "Did You Ever See a Lassie?"]
 cf. "Poor Jenny Is a-Weeping" (tune, per Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
 cf. "I Am a Girl Guide" (lyrics of some versions)
File: 0pGa072

I'm a Little Dutch Girl All So Fat

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a little Dutch girl all so fat; I'm going to get married and what do you think of that? I'm not going to marry a butcher, with blood on his toes." Similarly baker, king, etc.; "I'm going to marry a Dutch boy who'll buy me a diamond ring"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks)
KEYWORDS: playparty marriage rejection
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks, p. 109, "(I'm a little Dutch girl all so fat)" (1 text)
NOTES [39 words]: McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks files this as a divination rhyme. It may derived from one of the other Dutch Girl rhymes, but it looks separate to me. It can be hard to be sure in the case of children's games.... - RBW
Last updated in version 4.3
File: McIn109

I'm a Little Dutchman

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a little Dutchman, I drink beer. It makes my stomach stick way out here. How many barrels can I drink?"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks)
KEYWORDS: playparty drink
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
I'm a Little Tea Pot

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a little teapot, short and stout, Here is my handle, here is my spout." The pot will "shout" when the tea is ready, at which time the tea can be poured out

AUTHOR: George H. Sanders and Clarence Z. Kelley (source: Dolby-OrangesAndLemons)

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (date of composition, according to Dolby-OrangesAndLemons)

KEYWORDS: food nonballad

NOTES [55 words]: Given how recent this song is, it's not a surprise that this doesn't show up in any folk music collections. But, interestingly, the version I learned of this has significant differences from the version in Dolby-OrangesAndLemons (which is also longer than the version I know), so apparently it has undergone some folk processing. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.3

File: Dolb161

I'm a Man That Done Wrong to His Parents

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a man that's seen trouble and sorrow, Oh I once was light-hearted and gay, Not a dime in this world can I borrow Since my own I have squandered away." The singer tells how he wronged his parents. Now they despise him, and he must beg for shelter

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1889 (Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs)

KEYWORDS: poverty hardtimes family father

NOTES: John Burke, _Burke's Christmas Songster 1920_, self-published, 1918 (PDF available on the Memorial University of Newfoundland site), p. 11, "I Am a Man That's Done Wrong to My Parents" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: John Burke, _Burke's Christmas Songster 1920_, self-published, 1918 (PDF available on the Memorial University of Newfoundland site), p. 11, "I Am a Man That's Done Wrong to My Parents" (1 text)

File: R839

I'm a Minder

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a minder [i.e. miner], I'm a minder, In de col' ground, Lawd, Lawd, Lawd, Lawd."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)

KEYWORDS: work mining

File: ScNF216B

I'm a Poor Old Chimney Sweeper

DESCRIPTION: "I am a poor old chimney sweeper, I have but one daughter and now I can't keep her. So since she has resolved to marry, Go choose you one and do not tarry." Once the girl has chosen her love, the couple is told to join hands, step over a broom, and be wed
I'm a Roaring Son of the Comstock

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a roaring son of the Comstock, And I work in the Chollar Mine." The singer works hard, never has money, and even when dead, "I'll still be a son of the Comstock, And the devil knows it well!"

AUTHOR: unknown

I'm a Rover and Seldom Sober

DESCRIPTION: The singer is seldom sober but on a starless night he can find his way to his lover. He goes to her window. He is "drenched to the skin." She lets him in and they lie together until cock crow. Then he gets up because he must be early at the plow.

AUTHOR: unknown

I'm a Roaring Son of the Comstock

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a roaring son of the Comstock, And I work in the Chollar Mine." The singer works hard, never has money, and even when dead, "I'll still be a son of the Comstock, And the devil knows it well!"

AUTHOR: unknown

I'm a Rover and Seldom Sober

DESCRIPTION: The singer is seldom sober but on a starless night he can find his way to his lover. He goes to her window. He is "drenched to the skin." She lets him in and they lie together until cock crow. Then he gets up because he must be early at the plow.

AUTHOR: unknown
Roud #3135
RECORDINGS:
Davie Stewart, "I'm Often Drunk and I'm Seldom Sober" (on Voice13)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rise Up Quickly and Let Me In" (two verses) and references there
NOTES [377 words]: Davie Stewart's version on Voice13 includes two verses that are standard for "Rise Up Quickly and Let Me In": the singer goes to his true love's bedroom window and she complains that he is "depriving me of [or disturbing me from] my long night's rest"; he says he is her lover, "pray discover ... I'm soaking love, to the skin." Another argument for including this song with "Rise Up Quickly and Let Me In" is Stewart's chorus -- "I'm often drunk and I'm seldom sober I'm a constant rover from town to town And when I'm dead and my days are over Oh, lay me down, my Molly Baun" -- which compares to the chorus in Kennedy 159, "A Health to All True-Lovers" and DT.IMAROVER* - "So I'm a rover and seldom sober I'm a rover of high degree It's when I'm drinking I'm always thinking How to gain my love's company" -- and Kennedy's song is, with the exception of that chorus, "Rise Up Quickly," without a doubt. Kennedy's chorus belongs to "I'm Often Drunk and Seldom Sober," an entirely different song.
So why haven't I put Stewart's song with "Rise Up Quickly"? His two verses -- he has only four altogether -- of meeting Molly Bann, and that last half of his chorus, are not "Rise Up Quickly..." though I could not argue too strongly with someone who insisted that those verses were incidental add-ons and that this must be "Rise Up Quickly." I haven't found the Molly Bann verses anywhere else, so I can't -- yet -- call this song a hybrid. Then there are the other versions of "I'm a Rover, Seldom Sober," at Digital Tradition, including MacColl's DT.IMAROVER*; they, have no Molly Bann reference and are, without a doubt, "A Health to All True Lovers." DT, IMAROVER*, once included here, is now at "Rise Up Quickly." - BS

The Dubliners' various recordings of this song had a very large influence on the Irish folk scene of the 60's [and] 70's, perhaps particularly in non-Irish countries. Porter and Gower, in discussing Jeannie Robertson's Scottish version, report that some scholars have argued this song is a descendant of the revenant lover in "The Gray Cock" (Child 248), but surely modern singers (and certainly those from outside Irish or Scottish tradition) will be closer to what Porter and Gower call "the more earthbound idea of night visiting." - DGE
Last updated in version 5.3
File: DTimarov

I'm A Running For My Life
DESCRIPTION: "I'm a-running for my life (x2), If anybody ask you What's the matter with me, Just tellum I say-a, I'm a-running for my life." "I'm a-moaning for my life." "I'm a-praying for my life."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 249, "I'm A Running For My Life" (1 text)
Roud #18164
File: KiW249I

I'm a Saginaw Valley Man
DESCRIPTION: "My name is Solomon (Harmless/Levi), From this world both wide and wild, I'm a regular mule in harness, I'm a wildcard when I'm riled." "I'm a Buffalo Bill, by jingo! ... I'm not much on the lingo; I'm a Saginaw Valley man."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan)
KEYWORDS: bragging nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, p. 121, "I'm a Saginaw Valley Man" (1 short text)
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 8, "I'm a Saginaw Valley Man" (1 short text)
Roud #6505
I'm a Soldier

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a soldier forward go, Let the dying sinner know, Jesus blood avail, Can never fail."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1940 (Elder-FolkSongAndFolkLifeInCharlottesville)

KEYWORDS: death nonballad religious Jesus

FOUND IN: West Indies(Tobago)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Elder-FolkSongAndFolkLifeInCharlottesville, p. 51, "I'm a Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: E1Ch051B

I'm a Soldier Bound for Glory

DESCRIPTION: Singer calls "all who love the Saviour" to "to arms": "Twas the Saviour's loving kindness" induced him to stay "in the fight," not "run away." "Here I raise my 'Ebenezer'" and at death's river "I mean to shout 'Salvation!' and go singing 'Glory' home"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Booth)

KEYWORDS: battle nonballad religious Jesus

FOUND IN: West Indies(Tobago)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Elder-FolksongsFromTobago 25, "I'm a Soldier Bound for Glory" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: William Booth, _Salvation Army Songs_ (Toronto: The Salvation Army Book Department, 1911 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), #276 pp. 193-194, ("I'm a soldier bound for glory") (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Come Thou Fount of Every Blessing (I)" ("Ebenezer" lyrics)
cf. "La Marseillaise" (tune)

NOTES [93 words]: Elder-FolksongsFromTobago: "Women in Tobago washing their clothes in the rivers and streams have been heard singing this song in chorus."
Elder-FolksongsFromTobago has the first verse and a modified chorus.
Booth has "To arms, to arms ye brave! See, see the standard wave! March on, march on, the trumpet sounds, To victory or death."
Elder-FolksongsFromTobago has "Hark, hark The trumpet call (2x), March on, March on, I say march on, To victory or death (2x)" - BS
For the meaning of "Ebenezer," see the notes to "Come Thou Fount of Every Blessing (I)." - RBW

File: ElTo025

I'm a Soldier in the Army of the Lord

DESCRIPTION: Alternate responsive lines are "In the army of the Lord" and "In the army." Verses and chorus are a single call line repeated: "I'm a soldier," "I'll die in the army," "I'm fighting for my rights," "I don't mind dying," "I want a clean man"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (recording, Rev. J. M. Gates)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

Roud #12132

RECORDINGS:
Rev. J. M. Gates, "I'm A Soldier In The Army Of The Lord" (Victor 20851, 1926)
Peerless Four, "I'm a Soldier in the Army of the Lord" (on LomaxCD1708)
I'm a Stranger Here

DESCRIPTION: "Ain't it hard to stumble When you got no place to fall? (x2) In this whole wide world I got no place at all. I'm a stranger here... I would go home, but... I'm a stranger here." The singer takes his mule -- all this baby left -- and seek a fair shake.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (collected from Louise Henson)
KEYWORDS: home abandonment hardtimes
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 371-372, "I'm a Stranger Here" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 81, "I'm a Stranger Here" (1 text)
Roud #15589
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. " Worried Man Blues" (floating lyrics)
cf. "I'm Worried Now But I Won't Be Worried Long" (floating lyrics)
NOTES [50 words]: The Louise Henson version in Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry includes the well-known lines "I'm worried now, but I won't be worried long; It takes a worried man to sing a worried song," but the rest seems to be separate. Henson seems to have been fond of those words, including them in multiple songs. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.2

File: FSWB081C

I'm a Stranger in this Country (The Darger Lad)

DESCRIPTION: Singer, a "darger loon" from a distant land, meets a "Scottish lass" in an alehouse. They drink. He takes her to his lodgings and they spend the night together. Next morning he leaves on the train as she cries on the station. At home he drinks her health

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: sex parting Scotland separation train
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan4 832, "The Darger Lad" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #3388
RECORDINGS:
Jimmy McBeath, "I'm a Stranger in this Country" (on Voice15)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Indian Lass" (theme, verses) and references there
cf. "Little Mohee" [Laws H8] (theme, verses) and references there
NOTES [241 words]: Hall, notes to Voice15, translates the text "darger loon" as "day-labourer lad." Yates, Musical Traditions site Voice of the People suite "Notes - Volume 15" - 13.9.02: "It appears to be related to 'The Indian Lass,' a song collected by Frank Kidson - see Traditional Tunes (1891) pp.109-11." I'm convinced. Compare first verses:
Kidson's first version "from a person's singing in North Yorkshire":
As I was a walking on a far distant shore,
I went into an ale-house to spend half-an-hour;
And as I sat smoking beside of my glass,
By chance there came in a fine young Indian lass.
Jimmy McBeath's version on Voice15.
I'm a stranger in this country from a far distant land.
I went into an ale-house for half an hour to spend.
And as I sat a-drinking, a-musing in my glass,
Wha stepped in but an old Scottish lass.
Kidson, or his informant, has elided the sex -- which can be found in Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 51 -- but, at the end,
So early next morning we were going to sail;
This lovely young Indian on the beach did bewail;
I took off my hankerchief and wiped her eyes, --
"O, do not go leave me, my sailor," she cries.
which McBeath has as
It was early next morning I ran to catch the train.
I left my bonnie lassie in the station to remain.
In drawing out her handkerchief, the tears dropped fae her ee.
'Oh, dinna gang and leave me, my darger loon,' cried she.
Neither of Kidson's tunes, nor Creighton's, match McBeath's. - BS

Last updated in version 2.5
File: RcIASITC

I'm a Tight Little Irishman

DESCRIPTION: "Tight Little Irishman" Larry O'Broom does well enough on his father's inheritance until he marries a wife, who abuses him and apparently bankrupts him
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939
KEYWORDS: marriage poverty shrewishness
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 144, "I'm a Tight Little Irishman" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
ST E144 (Full)
Roud #5344
File: E144

I'm a Workin' Chap

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a workin' chap, as you may see, You'll find an honest man in me." The singer is thrifty and industrious, for poor folks are "working life out to keep life in." The singer describes various poor people, and hopes listeners will not despise them
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: work poverty clothes
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan3 656, "I'm a Workin' Chap" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 51-52, "I'm a Workin' Chap" (1 text, 1 tune)
MacColl-PersonalChoice, pp. 35-36, "The working chap" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5591
NOTES [16 words]: Roud links this song with "Tak It, Man, Tak It" as found in Ford, etc. I flatly don't see it. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1
File: Ord051

I'm a Young Man from the Country

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a young man from the country... I'm a free and easy fellow, I need not tell my name. Oh, wouldn't you like to know me?" Town people try to trick him, but he knows his cab fares and all the tricks, and avoids the traps
AUTHOR: unknown (see NOTES)
EARLIEST DATE: 1862 (Charles John Martin, "Locals," according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)
KEYWORDS: travel trick
FOUND IN: US(Ap) Britain(England(South)) New Zealand
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #110, "I'm a Young Man from the Country" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 253, "I'm A Young Man from the Country" (1 text)
Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, pp. 28-30, "The New Chum" (1 text, 1 tune)
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 25, "I'm a Young Man" (1 text, 1 tune) (p. 15 in the 1972 edition)
Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, p. 61, 238, "(I'm a Young Man Just from England") (1 text plus an excerpt); also p. 294, "(I'm a boy from Ohingaiti)" (1 text, a modified "rugby version" of 1893)
New-Comic-Songster, pp. 26-27, "I'm a Young Man from the Country" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1510
NOTES [106 words]: Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, and Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ attribute this to Charles John Martin, who published a New Zealand version in 1862. But what is clearly a version of the same piece, without the localization, was published in Beadle's Dime Song Book #10, which can't be too much later, and in Oliver Ditson & Co, The New Comic Songster, from 1870. The two early printed versions lack attribution, but is clearly related to the both the American and New Zealand versions. Presumably there is an ancestor to all the versions somewhere; it might be worth an investigation. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: MHAp253

I'm a-Longin' for to Go This Road
DESCRIPTION: "Purtiest girl I ever saw since I come fro the west... I was loving her the best." "I'm a-longing for to go this road (x3), Down the courthouse road." She cries to see him coming, and faints and dies when he leaves. He laughs ever time she opens her mouth
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (Roberts-SangBranchSettlers)
KEYWORDS: humorous courting travel death
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #75, "I'm a-Longin' for to Go This Road" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3430
File: Robe075

I'm a-Rolling
DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I'm rolling (x3) through an unfriendly world (x2)." Verses: "O brothers (sisters, preachers) won't you help me (x3) in the service of the Lord"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute); 1893 (see notes)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, pp. 186-187, "I'm a-Rolling" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 94 in the 1901 edition) [for 1893 edition, see notes]
Roud #15318
NOTES [61 words]: The index to the 1893 edition [of Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute] has "I'm a rolling through an unfriendly world" on page 94, with the note "Fisk Jubilee Collection, by permission" (Thomas P. Fenner and Frederic G. Rathbun, Cabin and Plantation Songs (New York: G.P. Putnam's Sons, 1893)). I have not seen page 94. - BS
Last updated in version 4.2
File: Dett186

I'm A-Trouble in de Mind (I'm A-Trouble in the Mind)
DESCRIPTION: "I am a-trouble in the mind (x2), I ask my Lord what I do, I am a-trouble in the mind (x2), What you doubt for? I'm a trouble in de mind."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
I'm A'Deen, Johnnie

DESCRIPTION: The singer says "First when I cam' to this toon, I was red an' white an' bonnie" but now she's "done for likin' Johnnie" She writes him a letter. [lost text] She would have her baby tell Johnnie he's the father.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: pregnancy nonballad separation father
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan6 1082, "I'm A'Deen, Johnnie" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
Roud #6773
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Katie Cruel (The Leeboy's Lassie; I Know Where I'm Going)" (lyrics)
File: GrD61082

I'm Afloat, I'm Afloat (The Rover of the Sea)

DESCRIPTION: "I'm afloat, I'm afloat, on he fierce rolling tide, The ocean is my home and the barque is my bride." "I fear not the monarch I heed not the law." "Our flag of defiance still waves o'er the sea, Hurrah, boys, hurrah, boys, the rover is free."

AUTHOR: Words: Eliza Cook (1818-1889) / Music: Henry Russell (1812-1900)
EARLIEST DATE: 1847 (sheet music, according to Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs)
KEYWORDS: sailor pirate ship
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 80-81, "The Rover of the Sea" (1 text)
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 46, "I'm Afloat, I'm Afloat" (1 text, 1 tune, plus a broadside reprint on p. 146, #32 in the first edition which also includes on p. 76 a sheet music cover which is not in the revised edition)
Roud #2025
SAME TUNE:
The Song of the Trap (File: AnSt079)
File: FrPi046

I'm All Out an' Down

DESCRIPTION: "Honey-y-y, I'm all out an' down, Honey-y-y, I'm broke, babe, an' I ain't got a dime, Ev'ry good man gets in ha'd luck sometime, Don't they, baby?" Blues complaining of poverty, the noise made by women and hungry animals, work in the mud, etc.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936
KEYWORDS: work hardtimes poverty
FOUND IN: US
I'm Alone, All Alone (I)

DESCRIPTION: "I have no father (mother, sister, brother, sweetheart) in this world...Take me home, dear Saviour, take me home" Cho: "I'm alone all alone in this world...Take me home, dear Saviour take me home"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (recording, Ernest V. Stoneman)

KEYWORDS: loneliness nonballad religious Jesus

FOUND IN: US(SE)

RECORDINGS:
Ernest V. Stoneman w. Mike Seeger, "I'm Alone, All Alone"; Ernest Stoneman and Eddie Stoneman, "I'm Alone, All Alone" (ARC, unissued, 1934)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Free Little Bird" (lyrics)
cf. "Shivering in the Cold" (theme)

NOTES [54 words]: My first thought, upon seeing Paul Stamler's description, was that this was religious version of "Free Little Bird." But it's a much simpler form, though there is likely some sort of dependence. It may also have something to do with "Shivering in the Cold," with which it shares some ideas and even an alternate title. - RBW

File: RcIAloAA

I'm Bidding Adieu

DESCRIPTION: The singer, a poor farmer from Tralee, must emigrate. "They say there's luck in a foreign land, there's health and wealth galore." "We'll toil both night and day" He will return "of course" and dance "on the good old barn floor"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1988 (McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen)

KEYWORDS: poverty emigration return Ireland nonballad dancing work

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen 10, "I'm Bidding Adieu" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: McB1010

I'm Bound Away

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. "For the sake of you, my lassie, I'm bound away, my lassie. For the sake of you, my lassie, I'm bound away." Only this one verse given by Hugill

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (C. F. Smith, _A Book of Shanties_)

KEYWORDS: shanty farewell

FOUND IN: Britain

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 497, "I'm Bound Away" (1 excerpt, 1 tune, quoted from C.F. Smith) [AbEd, p. 365]

Roud #11254

File: Hugi497

I'm Bound to Cross the Jordan

DESCRIPTION: "I'm boun' to cross the Jordan(x5), Hallelujah!" "Oh, brothers, won't you join me? Sisters, won't you join me? Sinners, won't you join me? For I'm bound to cross the Jordan, Hallelujah!" "Oh, my brother's over Jordan, My sister's...."

AUTHOR: unknown
I'm Bound to Follow the Longhorn Cows

DESCRIPTION: "I'm bound to follow the longhorn cows until I git too old. It's well I work for wages, boys, I git my pay in gold." The singer boasts of his skills as a cowboy. He describes the difficulties of stampedes. He hopes to save up money to be married.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Lomax)

KEYWORDS: cowboy work bragging money gold loneliness love marriage

FOUND IN: US(So,SW)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Larkin-SingingCowboy, pp. 162-163, "I'm Bound to Follow the Long Horn Cow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 186, "I'm Bound to Follow the Longhorn Cows" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 97, pp. 228-229, "The Jolly Cowboy" (1 text, much shorter than Lomax's)
Dunson/Raim/Asch-AnthologyOfAmericanFolkMusic, p. 104, "The Lone Star Trail" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 114, "Lone Star Trail" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 137, "The Lone Star Trail" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #5765

RECORDINGS:
Ken Maynard, "The Lone Star Trail" (Columbia 2310-D, 1930; on AAFM3, WhenIWas1)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "We Love the Name of Texas" (theme)

NOTES [167 words]: This song was featured in the film "The Wagon Master"; Ken Maynard is described as the "pioneer of cowboy singing stars" in the movies. - PJS
Guy Logsdon, on p. 52 of Scott B. Spencer, editor, The Ballad Collectors of North America, Scarecrow Press, 2012, agrees in part, "In the early 1930s, Ken Maynard, though lacking vocal skills, became the first 'reel' cowboy to sing in a motion picture, but Gene Autry was the singer for whom the genre was created." It is interesting to note that (as of this writing) the Ballad Index cites six Maynard recordings -- but three of them appear to have been unissued at the time! If the texts printed by the Fifes are any indication, this piece can take on almost any form, and the incidents can take place in almost any order; the only line their texts have entirely in common is "My trade is cinches and saddles and ropes and bridle reins." And the Lomax text is again very different, with changes in all the verses, much new material, and a different order. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.3

File: LoF186

I'm But a Peer and Misguided Man

DESCRIPTION: "I'm but a peer and misguided man, Wi' a reeky [made dark by smoke] hoose, and a rinnin' oot [overflowing] pan [commode?], A girnin' [snarling] geet [brat], and a wife to ban [curse]"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Greig/Duncan8)

KEYWORDS: poverty children wife

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1913, "I'm But a Peer and Misguided Man" (1 fragment)
Roud #13557

NOTES [11 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan8 fragment. - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD81913
I'm Crossing Jordan River

DESCRIPTION: "I'm crossing Jordan river, Lord I want my crown (x2)." "Oh when I'm crossing Jordan River, I want my crown." "Jordan river chilly and cold, The love of Jesus is in my soul." "Jordan river deep and wide, None can cross but the sanctified." And similarly

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1963
KEYWORDS: religious river nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 258-259, "I'm Crossing Jordan River" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Michael Row the Boat Ashore" (floating lyrics)

I'm Deep In Love, My Mind Is Troubled

DESCRIPTION: "I'm deep in love, my mind is troubled, I know not where to wander to." The girl tells him he must stop drinking; he declares he will abandon women first. Many verses float: "I'll lay my head on a cask of brandy." "The oceans are wide, I cannot wade them"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales)
KEYWORDS: love drink rejection travel floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 260-261, "(no title)" (1 text)
Roud #6597
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Carrikerfergus" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Peggy Gordon" (floating lyrics)

I'm Despised for Being Poor

DESCRIPTION: "Farewell, false girl(s), I leave you In sorrow and in pain, My absence cannot grieve you, Soon you'll bear a stranger's name." He recalls courting the girl; though it grieves her, she has abandoned him for a rich stranger. He will enlist as a soldier

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)
KEYWORDS: love courting betrayal money soldier
FOUND IN: US(So) Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp.194-195, "I'm Despised for Being Poor" (1 text)
Roud #7944
RECORDINGS:
Mrs. Ghaney, "I'm Forsaken for Another" (on MUNFLA-Leach)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
I Was Despised Because I Was Poor
NOTES [39 words]: Nearly every word of this has close parallels elsewhere, except for the final line of each verse, "I'm despised for being poor" (or variants). But since that's the key to the whole song, the result probably should stand on its own. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.4
File: Beld195

I'm Dying for Someone to Love Me

DESCRIPTION: The girl reports "I am dying for someone to love me." Flirting and friendship are not enough; she wants the real thing. None of the local young men are up to the task. Mother calls her crazy, but the girl recalls that she was once much the same
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1887 (The Wonderful Eight Book of Poetry and Song)
KEYWORDS: love loneliness family
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Randolph 373, "I'm Dying for Some One to Love Me" (1 text, 1 tune) Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 303-305, "I'm Dying for Someone to Love Me" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 373)
Roud #7620
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Meet Me Tonight in the Moonlight" (lyrics)
NOTES [70 words]: Quite a few of the lyrics to this remind me of "Meet Me Tonight in the Moonlight" -- enough so that I suspect this may be a parody. But the thrust of the song is different.
The version in the "Wonderful Eight Book" is credited to W. F. Shaw, but Cohen notes that a song with this same title (not necessarily the same song) was copyrighted 1877.
Randolph's informant, Booth Cambell, thought he learned it around 1880. - RBW
File: R373

I'm Full
DESCRIPTION: "I'm full, absolutely full, But I know the country I was born in. My name is Jock McGrav And I dinna care a straw, For I've a wee bit drappie In the bottle for the mornin'."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions)
KEYWORDS: drink
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, p. 41, "I'm Full" (1 short text)
Roud #9609
File: SBar041

I'm Gaein in the Train
DESCRIPTION: "I'm going in a train, And you're not coming with me; I've got a lad of my own, and his name is Kilty Jimmy." "Jimmy wears a kilt, He wears it in a fashion, And every time he twirls it around, You cannot keep from laughing!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Montgomerie)
KEYWORDS: clothes
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 153, "(I'm going in a train)" (1 text)
Roud #18663
NOTES [42 words]: Roud lumps this with something similar to "I Know Where I'm Going," and that certainly was what I thought of when I first read the piece. Still, the evidence is thin. I'm including it in the Index, hesitantly, and giving it its own entry, hesitantly. - RBW
File: MSNR153

I'm Gaun to the Wood (I)
DESCRIPTION: Dialog between "bonny keen Nancy" and "silly coordy Willsie": Nancy: tomorrow is market day. Willsie: Maybe I have no silver. Nancy: Maybe I can lend you some. Willsie: Maybe I won't repay it. Nancy: Maybe I won't care.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: money dialog humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
I'm Glad I Live in Wyoming

DESCRIPTION: "I'm glad I live in Wyoming, The glorious state of Wyoming, Oh! I'm glad I live in Wyoming, The best of all the states."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Little Brown Song Book for Wyoming, according to Cohen)
KEYWORDS: patriotic nonballad home
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp 577-578, "I'm Glad I Live in Wyoming" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "We Won't Go Home Until Morning" (tune) and references there
File: CAFS2577

I'm Goin' Away to Texas

DESCRIPTION: "I'm goin' away to Texas, Oh dear me...." "Just go on an' just keep a-goin'." "When I get there I'll write you a letter." "I don't want you nor none of your letters." "You'll be sorry for all this." "If I am, you never will know it." Etc.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: dialog husband wife separation rejection shrewishness
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Randolph 363, "I'm Going Away to Texas" (3 texts, 1 tune, but only the "A" text and tune really belong here; "B" is "I Love You And I Can't Help It" and "C" is perhaps "The Quaker's Courtship")
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 327-329, "I'm Going Away to Texas" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 363A)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 248-250, "The Old Bachelor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 166, "I'm Going Away to Texas" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6691
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I'm Gaun to the Wood" (dialog format, characters and attitude)
cf. "Poor Greeting Wilsie" (dialog format, characters and attitude)
cf. "Rolling in the Dew (The Milkmaid)" (dialog format, characters and attitude)
File: R363

I'm Goin' Back to Good Ol' Birmingham

DESCRIPTION: "I'm goin' back to good old Birmingham. "I went to the depot, I looked up on the bo'd (x3), It's good times here but it was better way up the road." "Asked the depot agent, What train must I ride?" "I'm goin' back to Florida where it's warm...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1980 (Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices)
KEYWORDS: railroading travel floatingverses nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, pp. 198-199, "I'm GOin' Back to Good Ol' Birmingham" (1 text)
I'm Goin' to Beat This Rice

DESCRIPTION: "I'm goin' to beat this rice, Goin' to beat 'em so, Goin' to beat 'em till the husks come off, Ah hanh hanh!" "Goin' to cook this rice when I get through." "Goin' to eat my belly full."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslands)
KEYWORDS: work food nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, p. 116, (no title) (1 text)
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslands, p. 236, "I Gwine T' Beat Dis Rice" (1 text)

I'm Goin' to Pick my Banjo (Old Woman in the Garden)

DESCRIPTION: The singer watches his wife hoe the garden and cook while the lazy hound sits. He picks the banjo. The preacher tells him he'll never get to heaven; he repeats his refrain: "I'm goin' to pick my banjo... pick it while I can... right to the Promised Land."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl)
KEYWORDS: music clergy work
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 125, "I'm Goin' to Pick my Banjo (or, Old Woman in the Garden)" (1 text, 1 tune)

I'm Goin' to See My Jesus Soon

DESCRIPTION: "What a wonder in the moon (x3), I'm going to see my Jesus soon." "If you don't b'liev I've been redeemed... Then follow me down to Jordan's stream." "Jordan's stream so chilly and cold, I got Jesus in my soul." "Two big horses side by side."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 238, "I'm Goin' to See My Jesus Soon" (1 text)

I'm Going Back Home

DESCRIPTION: Dialog: She is "... going back home where I know I get better care." He begs her not to go but she will not change her mind. He says "Day you leave me that's the day you'll die, Oh honey baby mama please don't go."

I'm Going Down the Mobile Line

DESCRIPTION: "I'm going down the Mobile line (x2), I'm going down the line to see that girl of mine, I'm going down the mobile line."

I'm Going Down the River

DESCRIPTION: "I'm going down the river before long, Ba-baby..." "I know you're going to miss me when I'm gone." "Miss me from rollin' in your arms." "I think I heard the Joe Fowler blow." "She blewed like she ain't going to blow no more." And so forth

I'm Going Home (I)

DESCRIPTION: "I sought my Lord In the wilderness (x3), I sought my Lord in the wilderness, For I'm a-going home. For I'm going home (x2), I'm just getting ready, For I'm going home." "I found free grace in the wilderness." "My father preaches in the wilderness."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 84, "I'm Going Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12042
File: AWG084

I'm Going Home (Two Long Years)

DESCRIPTION: "Two long years have I been a-drivin'. . . . I'll hang my hammer upon the wall. I'm a-goin' home, I'm a-goin' home, I'm a-goin' home, Lord, I'm gonna leave these hills."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)
KEYWORDS: home return
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 747, "I'm Going Home" (1 short text, 1 tune)
NOTES [28 words]: The current description is all of the Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 fragment, which Schinhan says was very difficult to transcribe and incomplete. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: BrS5747

I'm Going to be Mother Today

DESCRIPTION: Singer's wife is ill so he cooks and watches the children: is mother. He cooks bacon, spills milk, the frying pan catches fire. The water boils over, he bumps his head and gets a black eye. He tells his wife "you can !!!!!ing well do the cooking yourself"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1976 (recording, Johnny Doughty)
KEYWORDS: humorous nonballad children wife food
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
Roud #8093
RECORDINGS:
Johnny Doughty, "I'm Going to be Mother Today" (on Voice14)
File: RcIGTBMT

I'm Going to Buy Me a Little Railroad

DESCRIPTION: "Well, I'm goin' to buy me a little railroad of my own, Ain't goin' to let nobody ride it but the chocolate to the bone."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: railroading
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 240, (no title) (1 short text)
NOTES [46 words]: Scarborough explains this as a reference to the singer's love. My instinctive reaction, though, was that the piece is political: In a day when Blacks were denied equal access to transportation, they might want to have a railroad where they were the ones with the rights. - RBW
File: ScaNF240
I'm Going To Cross That Ocean By Myself
DESCRIPTION: The tag line to each verse is "I'm going to cross that ocean by myself." Singer must go "when my Lord calls me." In the lonesome valley by myself I'll weep like a willow and mourn like a dove. Mary should stop weeping and Thomas should stop doubting
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands)
KEYWORDS: Bible nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands, p. 157, ("I'm goin' to cross that ocean by mysel") (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Lonesome Valley (I)" (lyrics)
cf. "Hello Stranger" (lyrics)
NOTES [18 words]: In John 20:11, Mary Magdalene weeps at Jesus's sepulchre. John 20:21-29 is the source for "Doubting Thomas." - BS
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Parp187

I'm Going To Cross the Sea
DESCRIPTION: "I'm going to cross the sea, my love, Oh how I hate to start, I'll shake your hand in a long farewell, And then we have to part." "Sift your meal and save your bran, There's gonna be a wedding down in Alabam." "Slice your bread and butter fine...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: playparty separation food
FOUND IN: US(Ap,So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Randolph 587, "I'm Going To Cross the Sea" (1 text)
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 40-42, (no title) (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7674
NOTES [66 words]: Although there are many songs with similar lines, there is no reason I can see (based on Randolph's fragmentary text) to link this with any other "Going Cross the Sea" song. Thomas's text is similar in scope: Three stanzas, sharing the first few lines with Randolph's and then being mostly floating. She does not list it as a playparty, rather as a chantey -- but her clasifications are suspect. - RBW
File: R587

I'm Going to Do All I Can
DESCRIPTION: "I'm going to do all I can for my Lord (x2), I'm going to do all I can, Till I can't do no more, I'm going to do all I can for my Lord." Similarly, "I'm going to pray all I can for my Lord," "I'm going to sing/mourn/love all I can for my Lord"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro, p. 109, "I'm Going to Do All I Can" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12073
File: FSAN109

I'm Going to Ride in Pharaoh's Chariot
DESCRIPTION: "I'm goin' to ride in Pharaoh's chariot (x2), One of these days God knows that, I'm going to ride in Pharaoh's chariot One of these days." Similarly, "I'm goin' to cross the river of Jordan," "...walk the golden streets," "talk with Paul and Silas," etc.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Bible
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 591, "I'm Goin' to Ride in Pharaoh's Chariot" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 591, "I'm Goin' to Ride in Pharaoh's Chariot" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #11906
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Hope I'll Join the Band (Soon in the Morning)" (lyrics, theme)
cf. "Welcome Table (Streets of Glory, God's Going to Set This World on Fire)" (form)
NOTES [78 words]: The reference to riding in Pharaoh's chariot is presumably to Genesis 41:43, where Joseph, after being made viceroy of Egypt, is made to ride "in [Pharaoh's] second chariot." - RBW
Paul Stamler mentions the possibility that this is a version of the "Welcome Table" group. This is very possible, though we can't prove it without a tune. But the emphasis seems to be a little different. I am, for the moment, keeping them separate, though I'm far from sure. - RBW, (PJS)
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Br3591

I'm Going to Sing
DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I'm going to sing, Going to sing (x3), all along the way (x2)." Verses are about battle, like "We want no cowards in our band that from their colors fly, We call for valiant hearted men Who're not afraid to die"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Barton-OldPlantationHymns)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious battle floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Barton-OldPlantationHymns, p. 27, "I'm Going to Sing" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: J.B.T. Marsh, The Story of the Jubilee Singers Including Their Songs (London: Hodder and Stoughton, 1903 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), #113 p. 278-279, "I'm Going to Sing All the Way" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12353
NOTES [23 words]: The description is based on the Barton-OldPlantationHymns text. "We want no cowards" floats here from "Hark! Listen to the Trumpeters." - BS
Last updated in version 4.0
File: Bart027A

I'm Going to Stand In My Back Door
DESCRIPTION: "I'se gwine to stan' I my back do', An' I'se gwine ter hab -- Let de Debbil blab! -- Dat gal wid de blue dress on. Oh, swing dat gal wid de blue dress on, Swing, you niggers, swing!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: home clothes love
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 231, (no title) (1 short text)
File: ScaNF231

I'm Going to Tell It
DESCRIPTION: "I'm going to tell it everywhere I go (x3), How Jesus bless' my soul." "One morning I was walking along, Jesus bless my soul, I heard a voice and saw no one, Jesus, bless...." "I went in the alley, didn't go to stay... My soul got happy I stayed all day"
I'm Going to the West

DESCRIPTION: "You say you will not go with me and turn your eyes away, You say that we can ne'er agree, no matter what I say, I'm going to the west." The singer will leave her in the land she loves; after three years together he will leave the mountains for the plains

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama)
KEYWORDS: love separation emigration
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 28, p. 28, "I'm Going to the West" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5113
NOTES [52 words]: Roud lumps this with "Going West." That song, however, is about a man cheerfully heading for the range. The only common element is the migration theme. Neither is this the song recorded by Connie Dover, although she knew the song and used some of the lyrics as the basis for her song "I Am Going to the West." - RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: Arno028

I'm Going to Walk With Jesus By Myself

DESCRIPTION: Typical verse: "I'm going to walk with Jesus by myself, by myself" (2x), "I'm going walk with Jesus" (2x), "I'm going to walk with Jesus by myself." Other verses: "I'm going to talk with Jesus (see King Jesus, live with Jesus) by myself..."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Barton-OldPlantationHymns)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Barton-OldPlantationHymns, p. 30, "I'm Goin' To Walk With Jesus By Myself" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [25 words]: The pattern and tune of "I'm Going To Walk With Jesus By Myself" and "When the Chariot Comes" are close to "She'll Be Coming Around the Mountain." - BS
Last updated in version 4.0
File: Bart030

I'm Gonna Dig Myself a Hole

DESCRIPTION: "I'm gonna dig myself a hole, Move my baby way down underground, And when we come out Won't be no war around." Planes. Bombs. Russians in Afghanistan. "When war break out It's gonna be hell to pay"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1980 (USFlorida01)
KEYWORDS: war Russia nonballad lover
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
I'm Gwine Away to Georgia

DESCRIPTION: "I'm gwine away to Georgia, U'm gwine away to roam, U'm gwine away to Georgia, chile, Fer to make it my home." "The turkle dove is a hollerin' 'Cause he hears my sad cry, U'm gwine away to Georgia now Fer to live till I die."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: love home separation bird
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 449, "I'm Gwine Away to Georgia" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 449, "I'm Gwine Away to Georgia" (2 tunes, 1 text plus an excerpt)
Roud #413
NOTES [9 words]: Roud links this with "The Cuckoo." I've no idea why. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Br3449

I'm Gwine to Alabamy

DESCRIPTION: "I'm gwine to Alabamy, Oh, For to see my mammy, Ah!" "She went from Old Virginy And I'm her pickaninny." "She lives on the Tombigbee, I wish I had her with me. "Now I'm a good big nigger, I reckon I won't get bigger." "But I'd like to see my mammy..."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: slave mother separation
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 89, "I'm Gwine to Alabamy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, pp. 904-905, "I'm Gwine to Alabamy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12047
File: BAF904A

I'm In Love with a Tipperary Miss

DESCRIPTION: "I'm in love with a flip/slip of a tip-tip-typical Tipperary Miss... From the tip of her toes to the tip-tip-top of her nose I love her so. I'd like to just take her and squeeze her... But she's many miles away." He left Ireland, and is madly misses her
AUTHOR: Leo Curley, James M. Fulton, Fred J. Helf EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin); reportedly written 1907
KEYWORDS: love separation
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 154-155, "I'm in love with a Tipperarry Miss" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9065
RECORDINGS:
Lester A. Coffee, "I'm In Love with a Tipperary Miss" (AFS 08422 A02, 1946; in AMMEM)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Tipperary
NOTES [59 words]: The sheet music calls this "Tipperary (An Irish Love Song)." Sigmund Spaeth, A History of Popular Music in America, Random House, 1948, p. 313, lists as J. Fred Helf's other
I'm in the Bottom

DESCRIPTION: Improvised cross-cutting song: "In the bottom, Oh Lordy now, wo, I'm in the bottom, Wo Lord." "I'm shovellin' dirt." "I'm gettin' tired." The singer complains about the captain, wishes for water, a doctor, rest; he begs for help from home

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (collected from Johnny Jackson by Bruce Jackson)

KEYWORDS: work hardtimes prison

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 215-217,"I'm in in the Bottom" (2 texts, 1 tune)

NOTES [82 words]: This is an interesting item: A piece of ephemera which happened to be recorded. Bruce Jackson reports that Johnny Jackson made up the song as he worked while Bruce was there. When Bruce returned, Johnny did not remember what he had done but said he could make up another song if need be. (Given the simplicity of the form, he probably could.) It makes you wonder how many similar songs have been made up and vanished simply because there was no Bruce Jackson along with recording equipment. - RBW

File: JDM215

I'm In Trouble

DESCRIPTION: "I'm in trouble, Lord, I'm in trouble, I'm in trouble, Lord, about my grave. Sometimes I weep, sometimes I mourn, I'm in trouble about my grave, Sometimes I can't do neither one, I'm in trouble about my grave."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad burial

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 94, "I'm In Trouble" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #12049

File: AwG094A

I'm In Want of a Substitute

DESCRIPTION: "I'm in want of a substitute, Oh, show me the man who will Buckle up his armor and fight for Uncle Sam. I'm in want of a hero, with a heart so brave and true, Who will fight for his country and the red, white, and blue."

AUTHOR: George P. Holt?

EARLIEST DATE: 1977 (Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin); collected c. 1941

KEYWORDS: Civilwar soldier

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 233-234, "I'm In Want of a Substitute" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2488, p. 168, "Wanted a Substitute" (2 references)

Roud #15676

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Wanted a Substitute

NOTES [55 words]: This appears to be a folk-processed version of "Wanted, a Substitute," a Civil War era song with words sometimes credited to George P. Holt and said to be to the tune of "Uncle Sam's Farm."

For background on the draft during the American Civil War, and the methods used to avoid it, see the notes to "How Are You, Conscript?" - RBW
I'm Just a Common Lumberhick (Bush LaPorte)

DESCRIPTION: "I'm just a common lumberhick, and I've made a pile of jack." The singer complains about the job. He remembers his first boss, Bush LaPorte, then working for "Old Kelly" and for the "Oval Dish" and others -- and says to shoot any many who wants to log

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Bethke-AdirondackVoices)
KEYWORDS: lumbering work hardtimes
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bethke-AdirondackVoices, pp. 91-93, "I'm Just a Common Lumberhick (Bush LaPorte)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4721
File: BeAd091

I'm Just from the Fountain

DESCRIPTION: "I am just from the fountain, I'm just from the fountain, Lord, I'm just from the fountain that never runs dry, Oh fathers, I love Jesus, I love him, yes I do, Oh fathers, I love Jesus, and you must love him too." "Oh mothers, I love Jesus," etc.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: religious Jesus nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 636, "I'm Just from the Fountain" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #7562
File: R636

I'm Just Going Down to the Gate

DESCRIPTION: Though the singer's sweetheart's parents think she is too young to marry, she's allowed to wander as far as the garden gate, where the two lovers meet regularly. Someday they will slip off to the parson's.

AUTHOR: Gus. Williams and Joseph P. Skelly
EARLIEST DATE: 1882 (sheet music published)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer describes his sweetheart as a "sly little fairy"; though her parents are protective and think she's too young to marry, she's allowed to wander as far as the garden gate, where of course she meets him. They talk sweet nothings while the parents debate weighty matters inside; she tells them "there's no sign of a storm, and the night is so warm." Someday they will slip off to the parson's. Chorus: "I'll just go as far as the gate, dear ma...The moon is so bright, and it's such a fine night/I love to stand here by the gate"

KEYWORDS: age courting elopement marriage nonballad family lover
FOUND IN: US(MW,SE)
Roud #6407
RECORDINGS:
Sid Harkreader, "Only As Far As the Gate" (Paramount 3035, 1927)
Uncle Dave Macon, "Only As Far As the Gate Dear Ma" (Vocalion 15323, 1926)
Murphy Brothers Harp Band, "When Katie Comes Down to the Gate" (Champion 16455, 1932)
Piedmont Log Rollers, "My Sweetheart is a Shy Little Fairy" (Victor 21187, 1928; rec. 1927)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I'll Give You One More As You Go" (general situation, a few words)
NOTES [89 words]: Chris Valillo has documented that this was taught at a singing school in Badet, IL as early as 1884. I've used the title of the original song, although it has apparently not been used much in tradition.
A parody of this song (not a very good one) was variously called "I'll Give You One More As You Go" and "My Sweetheart is a Sly Little Miss." See the Index entry under the former title for a recording and a field collection. -PJS
For background on composer Joseph P. Skelly, see the notes to "The Old Rustic Bridge by the Mill" - RBW.
Last updated in version 4.4
File: RcJGDttG

I'm Just Going Over to Sandy's
DESCRIPTION: The singer is going to Sandy's: he'll be a "dandy" when he visits Agnes "with the bloom on her cheeks like the roses." The singer is frightened away when Agnes gets consumption, but he returns to her when "the bloom had returned to the rose"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 2007 (but see NOTES)
KEYWORDS: disease courting love parting return reunion separation clothes farming logger
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
RECORDINGS:
Hector MacIsaac and Jerome Downey, "I'M Just Going Over to Sandy's" (on NFHMacIsaac01)
NOTES [69 words]: According to an unsigned review of the DVD at http://citizenfreak.com/titles/317538-macisaac-hector-a-man-you-don-t-meet-everyday, accessed February 20, 2015, "a tune written by a piper from Cape Breton some time in the 1930s. The first verse had been kicking around for years, but he (Jerome) added a few of his own." The song remains one of MacIsaac's favourites." I don't know how much of this is Downey's. - BS
Last updated in version 3.6
File: RecIJGtS

I'm Leavin' Town (But I Sho Don't Wanna Go)
DESCRIPTION: Singer asks his lover "where you stayed last night ... hair all wrinkled and your clothes ain't fitting you right." He "could not keep from crying ... my rider, she done put me down." His mother said, "These women and whiskey done carried my child astray"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (StuffDreams1)
KEYWORDS: infidelity love rejection drink floatingverses nonballad lover
FOUND IN:
RECORDINGS:
William Harris, "I'm Leavin' Town (But I Sho Don't Wanna Go)" (on StuffDreams1)
NOTES [59 words]: Three line blues: the first line is repeated -- more or less -- and the last line completes the thought.
The Jessie Thomas title, "I'm Leavin' Town (But I Sho' Don't Want To Go)" has nothing to do with the lyrics. During a mid-track break there is a background conversation about leaving town. If the verses aren't all floaters, most of the lines are. - BS
Last updated in version 5.2
File: RcILeTow

I'm Leaving Tipperary
DESCRIPTION: The singer is about to sail "across the broad Atlantic" on the "Dan O'Leary," "bound for New York City, boys, three thousand miles away." His portmanteau is packed with food. He bids all farewell. He will bring Mollie Burke when he is settled.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland)
KEYWORDS: emigration farewell food America Ireland friend
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1754, "My Good Ship Sails in Half-an-Hour" (1 text, 1 tune)
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 33, "Good-By, Mike, Good-By Pat" (1 text)
DT, GDBYMICK
ADDITIONAL: Michael D Morrissey, editor, Song and Story: An Anthology of Irish Folk Songs,
I'm Lonesome Since My Mother Died

DESCRIPTION: Mother dies and father remarries. My stepmother "beat me and she turned me out When I speaks of my mother dear." "If I could only call her back, Once more to sit down by her side, I would like her better than before; I'm lonesome since my mother died."

AUTHOR: Henry S. Thompson (1863) (source: Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports)

EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)

KEYWORDS: grief death mourning lament mother stepmother youth

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf) US(Ro)

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 181, "I'm Lonesome Since My Mother Died" (1 text)
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 239-240, "Lonely Since My Mother Died" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #94, "I'm Lonely Since My Mother Died" (1 text, which does not mention the father's remarriage)

Roud #6361

RECORDINGS:

Rebecca Bennett, "Lonely Since My Mother Died" (on NFAGuigné01)
Mrs. August Molloy, "I'm Lonely Since My Mother Died" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

File: GrMa181

I'm Looking Over My Dead Dog Rover

DESCRIPTION: Concerning the death of Rover, usually caused (inadvertently, one hopes) by the singer (e.g. by hitting Rover with a power mower). The text varies extremely, as does the cause of death; the only constant element seems to be the title line.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1988

KEYWORDS: dog animal death humorous parody

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 136, "I'm Looking Over My Dead Dog Rover" (2 texts, tune referenced)

DT, DEADROVR

Roud #15720

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "I'm Looking Over a Four-Leaf Clover" (tune)

NOTES [31 words]: I've never seen two versions of this song alike, and none of the printed versions matches my father's text. Looks to me like a genuine folk song, even if the plot is completely unfixed. - RBW

File: DTdeadro
I'm My Own Grandpa

DESCRIPTION: Singer marries a pretty widow; his father marries her red-haired daughter. By tortuous logic, the singer explains that this makes him his own grandfather. Chorus: "I'm my own grandpa...It seems funny, I know/But it really is so/I'm my own grandpa"

AUTHOR: Dwight Latham & Moe Jaffe

EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (recordings, Grandpa Jones, Korn Kobblers); reportedly copyright 1947

KEYWORDS: marriage nonsense paradox family father mother

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
DT, OWNGRNPA

RECORDINGS:
Grandpa Jones, "I'm My Own Grandpa" (King 694, 1948)
Korn Kobblers, "I'm My Own Grandpaw" (MGM 10136, 1948)
Lonzo & Oscar, "I'm My Own Grandpa" (RCA Victor 20-2563, 1947)

NOTES [434 words]: This is included because it seems to have begun passing into oral tradition [or at least universal folklore - RBW] -- certainly it appears often enough on the internet (in genealogy sites!) without attribution. The song is based on a short story by Mark Twain. - PJS

To make matters even more complicated, Fiddlin' John Carson's song "Papa's Billy Goat" (a version of what we index by its "urban" name of "Bill Grogan's Goat"), first recorded in 1923, concludes with this verse:

Then I acted an old fool, married me a widow,
And the widow had a daughter and her name was Maude;
Father being a widower married her daughter,
And now my daddy is my own son-in-law.

Obviously that isn't the whole burden of "I'm My Own Grandpa," but it's getting there, and Carson's version was popular enough that he was asked to re-record it twice.

Incidentally, Robert A. Heinlein eventually went this one better, and produced a story in which (by means of time travel and gender surgery) the main character became his own mother. And father. And, hence, grandmother and grandfather and.... (Wouldn't cloning have been easier?)

Not too surprisingly, that story ("All You Zombies," from 1959) mentions this song. It is, in a side note, the next-to-last short story Heinlein ever wrote (the last being "Searchlight," from 1962), and the last not associated with his "Future History" series.

Nor did Heinlein invent the conceit of a time-traveler who was his own parent. In the July 1942 issue of Astounding Science Fiction is a story by Frank Holby entitled "The Strange Case of the Missing Hero." A hero named Elliot Gallant had saved the world, then volunteered to ride a time machine. He was never seen again. A research firm eventually set out to find out his fate. The final sentence: "Elliot Gallant killed himself when he found out, with his great mind power, that he was his own father!"

Believe it or not, there is an actual bit of history which almost resembles this, except that it didn't quite come off. Christopher Allmand, Henry V, University of California Press, 1992, writes:

The year 1395 was to witness the first attempt to arrange [a marriage for Henry of Monmouth, the future Henry V]. His prospective bride was to be Marie, daughter of John IV, duke of Brittany, and his duchess, Joan. The plan fell through.... Yet the Breton link was not lost. In 1403 Henry's own father was to marry the duchess Joan, by then widowed. Thus the lady who might have become [Henry's] mother-in-law became his stepmother instead."

Again, not this exact plot -- but one can imagine getting to this plot from that one. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.5

File: DTowngrn

I'm Ninety-Five

DESCRIPTION: "I'm ninety-five, I'm ninety-five, And to keep single I'll contrive." Men have tried to win the spinster's love, but she wants no children, nor deceitful-tongued men, nor flattering husbands. She warns against men who wink at you

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1854 (various Bodleian broadsides)

KEYWORDS: courting rejection age

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
New-Comic-Songster, pp. 48-49, "I'm Ninety-Five" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #23116
BROADSIDES:
File: NCSIm95

I'm No' Comin' Oot the Noo
DESCRIPTION: "O a nice wee lass, a bonnie wee lass Is bonnie wee Jeannie McKay," but when she and the singer are to go out, her says "My mother's ta'en my claes tae the pawn... And I'm no comin' oot the new." In any situation, the singer pleads poverty and stays in
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1985 (recording, the Stewarts of Blair)
KEYWORDS: courting clothes bug poverty humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
ST RcInCotN (Partial)
Roud #5298
RECORDINGS:
Belle, Sheila, and Cathie Stewart, "I'm No' Comin' Oot the Noo" (on SCStewartsBlair01)
File: RcInCotN

I'm Not Myself At All
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, I'm not myself at all, Molly dear, Molly dear." At confession the singer asked Father Taff for half a blessing because his other half belongs to Molly Brierly. The singer wants her to marry him before he disappears entirely.
AUTHOR: Samuel Lover (1797-1868)
EARLIEST DATE: before 1861 (broadside, LOCSinging as201450)
KEYWORDS: courting love humorous nonballad clergy
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 22, "I'm Not Myself At All" (1 text)
New-Comic-Songster, p. 42, "I'm Not Myself At All" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V8651
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 18(267), "I'Am Not Myself At All", H. De Marsan (New York), 1859-1860 [same as LOCSinging as201450]; also Harding B 11(3984), "I'm Not Myself At All"; Harding B 11(4325), "Molly Dear" or "I'm Not Myself At All"
LOCSinging, as201450, "I'am Not Myself At All", H. De Marsan (New York), 1859-1860 [same as Bodleian Harding B 18(267)]; also sb20205a, "I'am Not Myself At All"
NOTES [38 words]: Broadside LOCSinging as201450 and Bodleian Harding B 18(267): H. De Marsan dating per Studying Nineteenth-Century Popular Song by Paul Charosh in American Music, Winter 1997, Vol 15.4, Table 1, available at FindArticles site. - BS
Last updated in version 5.3
File: OCon022

I'm Now Twenty-Two
DESCRIPTION: The singer had a new suit, fancy tie and watch chain, and swaggered. He describes his oiled moustache, but mourns his "half-Buchan English." The girls reject him because he is not well read. He gives up vanity: "I'll try and put wisdom into my heid"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)
I'm Off for California

DESCRIPTION: "Now, darkies gather round -- I got a thing to tell." "Oh, Jerusha! whose gwine to go? I'm gwine to California, so fotch along de hoe!" Letters from California are heavy with gold. The singer prepares to set out for the west.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 2008 (Cohen); probably published before 1859

KEYWORDS: gold travel derivative

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 652-654, "I'm Off for California" (1 text plus a broadside print)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1020, p. 70, "I'm Off for California" (3 references)

File: CAFS652

I'm Often Drunk and Seldom Sober

DESCRIPTION: Singer is seldom sober and "a rover in every degree," He says his lover is "as clever a woman as ever trod upon London ground." He wishes he were in Dublin or across the sea beyond lawyers' reach. She says her love is clever. They both love drink.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1831 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 25(894))

KEYWORDS: drink floatingverses nonballad

FOUND IN:

RECORDINGS:
Bodleian, Harding B 25(894), "I'm Often Drunk and Seldom Sober" ("Many cold winter nights I've travelled"), R. Walker (Norwich), 1780-1830; also Harding B 25(893), Harding B 11(1731), "I'm Often Drunk, and Seldom Sober" ("The sea is wide and I can't get over")

File: BdI0DASS

I'm Old But I'm Awfully Tough

DESCRIPTION: Singer describes himself as a happy old gentleman whom the girls adore. Chorus consists mostly of laughing.

AUTHOR: Cal Stewart?

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1900 (recording, Cal Stewart)

KEYWORDS: age humorous nonballad

FOUND IN: US

RECORDINGS:
Andrew Keefe, "I'm Old But I'm Awfully Tough" (CYL: Edison 9152, 1905)
Cal Stewart - change reference to: (Columbia 22, 1901; Columbia A-299, 1909; rec. 1900) (Victor 659, 1901; Zonophone C-5321, n.d.) (Victor 16403, 1909; rec. 1907)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Laughing Song" (chorus)

NOTES: This is a pop song, pure and simple, and I wouldn't include it in the Index, except that a massively folk-processed version of the song was collected in the 1970s from the Arkansas singer Tip McKinney (former member of Pope's Arkansas Mountaineers, who made 78s of traditional music in 1928). It's a classic example of a song moving from popular music into tradition. - PJS

File: RcIOBIAT

I'm On My Way

DESCRIPTION: "I'm on my way, and I won't turn back! I'm on my way, great God, I'm on my way." "I'm on my way to Canaan's land." "I ask my sister to go with me." "If she says no, I'll go alone." "I ask my boss to let me go." "If he says no, I'll go anyhow."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (recording, Carter Family)

KEYWORDS: religious travel

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Arnold-FolkSongsOfAlabama, "I'm On My Way" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, p. 100, "I'm On My Way" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cray-AshGrove, p. 40, "I'm On My Way" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 302, "I'm On My Way" (1 text)
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, Charles W. Joyner, "The Repertory of Nancy Jones as a Mirror of Culture in Scotland County," Vol. XXI, No. 3 (Sep 1973), p. 94, "(I'm on my way, I'm on my way, To Canaan land, To Canaan land" (1 text)

Roud #16309

RECORDINGS:
Carter Family, "On My Way to Canaan's Land" (Bluebird B-8167, 1939)
Pete Seeger, "I'm On My Way" (on PeteSeeger04) (on PeteSeeger15) (on PeteSeeger26); "I'm On My Way to Canaan's Land" (on PeteSeeger44)

SAME TUNE:
I'm On My Way (RECORDING: Mamie Brown, Carleton Reece & Birmingham Movement Choir, on SingFreeCD; RECORDING: Alabama Christian Movement for Civil Rights Choir, on VoicesCiv)

File: Grnw100

I'm Ower Young to Marry Yet

DESCRIPTION: The singer says "I'm owre young to marry" and "lads, ... ye for me maun tarry." It would "be a sin" to take "me frae my mammy." She has had her own way: "None daur to contradict me yet." and "in truth I darena venture yet," Soon she will have to obey.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1867 (broadside, Bodleian 2806 c.14(69)); Burns's version is from 1788

KEYWORDS: marriage nonballad mother

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig/Duncan4 900, "I'm Ower Young to Marry Yet" (1 fragment)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, p. 123, "I'm Oware Young" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: James Kinsley, editor, Burns: Complete Poems and Songs (shorter edition, Oxford, 1969) #195, pp. 305-306, "I'm o' er young to Marry Yet" (1 text, 1 tune, from 1788)
James Johnson, Editor, _The Scots Musical Museum_ [1853 edition], volume II, #107, p. 110, "I'm o' er young to Marry Yet" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST GrD4900 (Partial)

Roud #6142

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.14(69), "I'm Owre Young to Marry Yet" ("I'm owre young, I'm owre young"), J. Harkness (Preston), 1840-1866

CROSS-REFERENCES:
"My Love She's But a Lassie Yet" (tune, per Greig/Duncan4)

NOTES [30 words]: Whitelaw: "This is an old song, dressed up a little by Burns for Johnson's Museum." Whitelaw prints Burns's version. The description is based on broadside Bodleian, 2806 c.14(69). - BS

Last updated in version 3.2

File: GrD4900
I'm Sad and I'm Lonely

DESCRIPTION: "I'm sad and I'm lonely, My heart it will break. My sweetheart loves another; Lord I wish I were dead." The singer warns against the lies that young men tell, which are more numerous than "cross-ties on the railroad or stars in the skies."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)
KEYWORDS: love separation lie desertion floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(Ap,So)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 243-245, "I'm Sad and I'm Lonely" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 167, "I'm Sad And I'm Lonely" (1 text)
Cambiaire-EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads, p. 84, "I'm Sad and I'm Lonely" (1 text)
Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, p. 8, "Goin' to Georgia" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST San243 (Full)
Roud #414
RECORDINGS:
Eller Family, "I'm Goin' to Georgia" (on FolkVisions1)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Troubled In My Mind" (floating lyrics)
cf. "On Top of Old Smokey" (floating lyrics)
cf. "A Warning to Girls" (floating lyrics)
NOTES [163 words]: This appears to be another of those collections of floating verses that has taken on some life of its own. - RBW
The Eller Family recording is actually a mishmash of floating verses from here, "On Top of Old Smoky," "The Cuckoo" and, if I'm not mistaken, "Poor Ellen Smith." But I put it here because, well, why not? It has to go somewhere. - PJS
When I ran across the transcription in Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, I was preparing to file the Eller recording as its own song, because it is so composite and because the first verse (which is also the ninth and eleventh) is unusual in this context: "I'm goin' to Georgi', I'm goin' to roam, I'm goin' to Georgi', I'll make it my home." But the Eller song is, as Paul says, an incredibly composite mess. Since we filed it here once, we might as well do it again.
Roud files this with an extremely large group of floating-verse songs; I would (and did) divide the song farther, but I definitely sympathize with his decision.... - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: San243

I'm Satisfied (I)

DESCRIPTION: The singer says she's "satisfied, tickled too" and "old enough to marry you." She says she's a "total shaker from navel down" and she'll "give my total" to whom she please. She's satisfied that that will bring him back.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1963 (MJHurt05)
KEYWORDS: courting marriage sex nonballad
FOUND IN:
RECORDINGS:
Mississippi John Hurt, "I'm Satisfied" (on MJHurt05)
File: RcImSati

I'm Satisfied (II)

DESCRIPTION: "Once I was single and in my prime, Now I am married and have to walk a line, I'm satisfied, I'm satisfied!" She has two children, chores to do, not much food, a poor home; it's too much work, but still she sys, "I'm satisfied! I'm Satisfied."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Richardson/Spaeth-AmericanMountainSongs)
KEYWORDS: work marriage hardtimes husband
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Richardson/Spaeth-AmericanMountainSongs, p. 58, "I'm Satisfied" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3120
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Wish I Were Single Again (II - Female)" (them) and references there
File: Rich058

I'm Seventy-Two Today
DESCRIPTION: "I'm seventy-two today, my boys; They say I'm growing old. I feel as young as I used to be; My heart is strong and bold." The old man says he can and will ride and court as well as ever (if perhaps a bit faster), and expects to enjoy the process
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl)
KEYWORDS: age courting
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Randolph 433, "I'm Seventy-Two Today" (1 text)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 158, "Seventy-Two Today" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST R433 (Full)
Roud #4387
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "If I Were As Young As I Used to Be (Uncle Joe)" (plot)
File: R433

I'm Shirley Temple
DESCRIPTION: "I'm Shirley Temple, the girl with curly hair, I've got two dimples, and wear me skirts up there; I'm not able to do the Betty Grable ... leg like nobody's business ... figure like Marilyn Monroe ... hair like Ginger Rogers... You should see Salome ..."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1976 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
KEYWORDS: playparty hair
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Bord))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 120, "I'm Shirley Temple" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [448 words]: "Shirley Jane Temple (born April 23, 1928) is an Academy Award-winning actress most famous for being an iconic American child actor of the 1930s, although she is also notable for her diplomatic career as an adult." (Source: Wikipedia article Shirley Temple).
[Note that Temple later came to be known as Shirley Temple Black, and died in 2014. - RBW.] Betty Grable, Marilyn Monroe and Ginger Rogers are movie stars of the 1930's, 1940's and 1950's.
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame: "The fact that the names are meaningless to the players [in the seventies] is evident from the variations."
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame: "The Salome verse ... came into being when Maud Allan, clad in little more than pearls, was scandalizing London with her dance 'The Vision of Salome', first performed at the Palace Theater on 17 March 1908." See C.P. Vicarion [Christopher Logue], Count Palmiro Vicarion's Grand Grimoire of Bawdy Ballads and Limericks (1955 (copyrighted material limited preview "Digitized by Google")), #60 pp. 87-88, "Salome." - BS To further clarify: In the New Testament, the daughter of Herodias (so Matthew 14:6; in Mark 6:22 some texts say "Herodias's daughter" but the best texts say "his [Herod's] daughter Herodias") danced before Herod Antipas, and so pleased him that he offered her anything she asked for -- and she asked for John the Baptist's head.
Nowhere in the New Testament do we learn the girl's name. But Josephus, Antiquities XVIII.136-137 (Loeb numbering) says that Herodias and Philip the Tetrarch had a daughter named Salome. Josephus does not say that Salome danced before Herod Antipas or asked for John the Baptist's head. And Salome was not the daughter of Antipas, which would be required by the Markan account. But most people assume that it was Salome who did the dancing.
Neither does the New Testament say that the girl's dance was lewd. The Greek word , "orcheomai" in fact is used of children's games elsewhere in the New Testament, and in classical Greek is also used of miming, and of jumping and bouncing around. Nonetheless the tradition is firm that Salome daughter of Herodias danced a lascivious dance before Herod Antipas and so induced him to offer her whatever she wanted. And, admittedly, it makes sense -- can you imagine someone getting that excited about a pantomime?

As a result, Salome has become the subject of very many portrayals centered around her behavior and lack of attire. The earliest of these were literary, but Richard Strauss composed an opera "Salome" in 1905, based on a book by Oscar Wilde (Benet, pp. 983-984). "The Dance of the Seven Veils" is often said to have been danced by Salome (see the Wikipedia entry). - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: OpGa120

I'm Sighing to Catch a Nice Beau

DESCRIPTION: "I'm sighing, I'm sighing, I'm sighing to catch a nice beau, And if I don't catch the fight fellow, My heart will be sad I know. I'm sighing ... And if I get the wrong fellow, My heart will be sad I know."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: love nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 84, "I'm Sighing to Catch a Nice Beau" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #11322
File: Brne084

I'm Sitting on the Stile, Mary (The Irish Emigrant II)

DESCRIPTION: "Oh I'm sitting on the stile, Mary, where we sat side by side." He thinks of their life together and the graveyard where he buried her "with your babe all on your breast." He promises not to forget her "in that land I'm going to"

AUTHOR: Words: Lady Helena Selina Blackwood Dufferin (1807-1867), Music: William R. Dempster (1843?)
EARLIEST DATE: before 1835 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(4048))
KEYWORDS: marriage emigration burial lament baby wife separation promise
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf) Ireland US(MW) Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (10 citations):
Peacock, pp. 462-464, "I'm Sitting on the Stile, Mary" (1 text, 2 tunes)
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 156, "The Irish Emigrant" (1 text)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 604, "Irish Emigrant" (1 text)
Dean-FlyingCloud, p. 81, "The Lament of the Irish Emigrant" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 133, "I Was Sitting on a Stile" (1 fragment, which the editors apparently regard as a part of this song -- though with only four lines, it's almost unfileable)
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 250-252, "The Lament of the Irish Emigrant" (1 text, 1 tune)
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 42, "I'm Sitting by the Stile, Mary" (1 short text)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, pp. 37-38, "Irish Emigrant's Lament" (1 text)
Charles W. Eliot, editor, English Poetry Vol II From Collins to Fitzgerald (New York, 1910), #574, pp. 919-920, "Lament of the Irish Emigrant" (by bHelena Selina, Lady Dufferin)
ST Pea462 (Partial)
Roud #2661
RECORDINGS:
Nicholas Keough, "I'm Sitting on the Stile, Mary" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
Mrs. Stephens, "Sitting on a Stile" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(4048), "The Irish Emigrant" ("I'm sitting on the stile, Mary"), G. Walker (Durham), 1797-1834; also 2806 c.14(195) View 4 of 5, Harding B 11(1773), Firth b.25(157), Johnson Ballads 1690, Firth b.27(499), Firth c.12(134), Harding B 11(2181), Firth c.26(135), Harding B 11(465), 2806 c.16(140), Harding B 11(1778), Harding B 11(1777), Firth b.25(303), Harding B 11(239), Harding B 26(270), Harding B 6(18), 2806 b.10(93), 2806 b.10(76), Harding B 20(74), Harding B 15(139a), Harding B 11(1776), "The Irish Emigrant"

LOCSinging, as107440, "Lament of the Irish Immigrant," J. Andrews (New York), 1853-1859

Murray, Mu23-y4:016, "Irish Emigrant," John Ross (Newcastle), 19C

NLScol, L.C.Fol.70.(2a), "The Irish Emigrant," Robert McIntosh (Glasgow), c. 1875

SAME TUNE:

Parody on The Irish Emigrant (broadside Murray, Mu23-y1:068, "Parody on The Irish Emigrant" ("I'm sitting on a rail Judy, Where oft across ye'd stride"), James Lindsay (Glasgow), 19C)

Soldier's Sister ("I am sitting in our camp, sister," by J. Dyer, of the 104th Reg't P[ennsylvania] V[olunteers]) (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 145)

When I Was in the Tombs ("I am standing in the cell, Dina") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, p. 174)

ALTERNATE TITLES:

The Irish Emigrant's Lament

NOTES [466 words]: Not the song by William Kennedy.

GEST Songs of Newfoundland and Labrador site is one of many sources for the author of the words; Museum of the City of New York site refers to sheet music source for tunesmith.

Killeagh County Down site: The village of Killyleagh grew up around a fortified tower, built in the 12th century by a Norman knight, John de Courcy....Lady Helen Dufferin wrote the famous poem "The Lament of the Irish Emigrant" in the castle, It is still possible to visit Mary's Stile in the shadows of the Castle today.

Murray, Mu23-y1:068, "Parody on the Irish Emigrant," James Lindsay (Glasgow), 19C (the singer stays in Ireland, glad his wife has died)

Bodleian, Firth b.26(206), "Answer to the Irish Emigrant" ("I'm coming back to you, Mary, Australia's shores I find"), A. Ryle and Co. (London), 1845-1859; also Harding B 11(88), "Answer to the Irish Emigrant" (the singer returns from Australia)

LOCSinging, as107460, "Lament of the Irish Gold Hunter," J. Andrews (New York), 1853-1859; also as107450, "Lament of the Irish Gold Hunter!!" (Tune: "I'm Sitting on the Stile, Mary"; the singer is digging for gold but expects to return to Ireland, if he survives "sitting on the stile, Mary, Away up in the mines")

LOCSinging, hc00011a, "Paddy's Lament" ("I'm sitthin on de sthile, Molly, wid a grape shot in my leg"), Charles Magnus (New York), 1864 (Tune: "I'm sitting on the stile &c."; attributed to John Ross Dix; the singer is fighting in America for the Union but hopes to return "when peace returns once more.

Broadside LOCSinging as107440 and LOCSinging as107460: J. Andrews dating per Studying Nineteenth-Century Popular Song by Paul Charosh in American Music, Winter 1997, Vol 15.4, Table 1, available at FindArticles site. - BS

There is some question about who wrote the music to this. Amsco's uncredited book The Library of Irish Music lists the tune as by G. Barker. But many of its attributions are inaccurate.

Jon W. Finson, The Voices That Are Gone: Themes in Nineteenth-Century American Popular Song, Oxford University Press, 1994, p. 285, accepts the attribution to Dempster and says of him, "Dempster (b. 1808), a British immigrant, played an active role in the musical life of New York as a singer of Scottish and English 'ballads' (popular songs)."

Finson reports that 1844 saw the publication of a response, "The Answer to the Lament of the Irish Emigrant," by John S. Murphy and T. Bissel, and another sequel by Miss S. C. Cobb and F. W. Paisley. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1

File: Pea462

I'm So Glad My Time Have Come

DESCRIPTION: "I'm so glad my time have come, Around Sheman no more will I bum, The last bumm' I did I remember it still, With six long months I stayed in the cell." "Oh judge, oh judge, I liked to forget." Chorus: "I've tidied I rule, I've a rudulideer" (x2)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (recorded from J. B. Smith by Jackson)

KEYWORDS: hardtimes travel prison
I'm So Glad Trouble Don't Last Alway

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I'm so glad trouble don't last always (x3), O my Lord, O my Lord, What shall I do?" Verses: "Christ told the blind man to go to the pool and bathe." "Christ told Nicodemus he must be born again."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: Bible nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 235, "I'm So Glad Trouble Don't Last Alway" (1 text) (1 tune)
Roud #12231
NOTES [128 words]: Biblical references are King James John 9:1-7 ("And as Jesus passed by, he saw a man which was blind from his birth... And said to him, Go, wash in the pool of Siloam ... He went his way therefore, and washed, and came seeing.") and John 3:1-3 ("There was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews.... Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."). - BS
(To be sure, what Jesus actually told Nicodemus was that he had to be "born from above," and the King James Bible mistranslated it, but the songwriter wouldn't know that. There are other accounts in the Synoptic Gospels of Jesus giving the blind their sight, but none involve the blind man going to the pool. - RBW)
Last updated in version 4.0
File: Dett235

I'm Standing on a Solid Rock

DESCRIPTION: "I'm standin' on a solid Rock, and it won't give way (x3), Lord, I need you everywhere I go." "My mother says it's a solid Rock, and it won't give way." "My pastor says it's a solid Rock." "My deacon says it's solid rock."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 248, "I'm Standin' on a Solid Rock" (1 text)
Roud #18163
NOTES [46 words]: Peter (, "petros") was "the rock" (, "petra") was the Rock on which Jesus built his church (Matt. 16:8 and parallels), but I suspect this is actually an allusion to the story of the house built on rock which withstood flood and storm (Matt. 7:24-27 and parallels). - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: KiWa238I

I'm Sticking to the Murphys

DESCRIPTION: "I'm sticking to the Murphys, I'll fight 'em till I die; I can't help spitting cotton Because I am so dry. You'll bust your lips with laughter; Stick to the pledge I must, But the more I drink cold water The more I'm belching dust."
AUTHOR: unknown
I'm the Man that Wrote Ta-ra-ra Boom-de-ay

DESCRIPTION: "I am the Man that Wrote Ta-ra-ra Boom-de-ay, Promise me you won't give it away...." The singer was a poor showman until he produced the famous song. Now the police seek him, people throw brickbats, and not even Shakespeare can equal his claim.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: parody music
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 409, "I'm the Man that Wrote Ta Ra-ra Bumdia" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7614
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ta-ra-ra Boom-der-e"
NOTES [14 words]: For the actual (uncertain) authorship of "Ta-ra-ra Boom-der-e," see that song. - RBW

I'm Thine Over the Left

DESCRIPTION: "I'm thine in my gladness, I'm thine in my tears. My love it can change not with absence of years "(x2). Even a dungeon would be the singer's home were she with her lover. "But life has no beauty since of thee I'm bereft... I'm thine over the left."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois)
KEYWORDS: love separation
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois, p. 235, 'I'm Thine Over the Left" (1 text)
Roud #4328
File: Neel235

I'm Tired

DESCRIPTION: "I'm tired, so tired, My soul need resting" (3x). "I'm going to find myself a resting place"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (LomaxCD1708)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
Roud #17302
RECORDINGS:
Bright Light Quartett, "I'm Tired" (on LomaxCD1708)
File: RcImTire

I'm Tired of Living Alone

DESCRIPTION: "I'm tired of living alone. I went to the river, and I saw a pretty rose, I plucked it and
I'm To Be Marrit in May

DESCRIPTION: "The win' at the window is rattlin', The sheep huddle close on the brae... But what care I for the weather, I'm happy's a queen a' the day... And I'm to be marrit in May." The girl praises her love Johnny and describes the joy she feels

AUTHOR: James M. Taylor
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Ord-BothySongsAndBallads)
KEYWORDS: love marriage

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 164, "I'm To Be Marrit in May" (1 text)

NOTES [19 words]: Since Ord had this from the (reported) author, there is no real reason to think it exists in oral tradition. - RBW
File: Ord164

I'm Trabling Back to Georgia

DESCRIPTION: "I'se trabling back to Georgia, Dat good ole land to see, De place I left to wander, De day dat I was free." The ex-slave, now "getting old and weary," wants to go back to Georgia; to "live and die in Georgia, Dat's good enough for me."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1874 (Wehman broadside, according to Cohen)
KEYWORDS: home return slave travel

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 304-305, "I'm Trabling Back to Georgia" (1 text)

NOTES [19 words]: Since Ord had this from the (reported) author, there is no real reason to think it exists in oral tradition. - RBW
File: CAFS1304

I'm Travelling to the Grave

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I'm travelling to the grave (x3) For to lay this body down." Verses: "My massa (missis, brother, sister) died a-shouting, The last words he (she) said to me, Was about Jerusalem"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute); 1893 (see notes)
KEYWORDS: death nonballad religious

REFERENCES (2 citations):
I'm Very Very Well I'm Glad to Tell (Shore Cry)

DESCRIPTION: "I'm very very well I'm glad to tell, I fear no judge nor jailer... so list to the lees (lies?) of a sailor." "Ah, what a delight on a stormy night To sit beside a burning log, A-swapping tales of wondrous whales And drink a glass of grog."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 2009 (Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ); reportedly collected in the 1920s by John Leebrick

KEYWORDS: whaler sailor drink nonballad

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 13, "Shore Cry" (1 text, 1 tune)
Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, p. 48, "(Shore Cry)" (1 text with an unidentified added verse)

File: Garl048

I'm Waiting for Thee, Nellie

DESCRIPTION: "Oh Nellie, dear Nellie, I'm waiting for you, With the stars glimmering faintly away in the blue." Out on the sea, the sailor years for his love. He thinks he hears her coming. He hopes she will be true

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1855 (Journal of the Wayne Clifford)

KEYWORDS: love sailor nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 287-288, "Nellie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27511

File: HGam287

I'm Wearing My Heart Away for You

DESCRIPTION: "The bees are humming in the wild wods, love, The flowers their tiny heads bow low.... I'm wearing my heart away for you. It cries, 'My love will be true.'" The singer wonders where his love is, and whether she prefers another man.

AUTHOR: Charles K. Harris (source: Spaeth via Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)

EARLIEST DATE: 1902 (Spaeth via Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)

KEYWORDS: love separation

FOUND IN: US(MW,So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, pp. 167-168, "I Worry My Heart Away for You" (1 text, 1 tune)
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 110, "I'm Wearing My Heart Away for You" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11399
I'm Working My Way Back Home

DESCRIPTION: If "the boat keep steppin'" and his back doesn't give out, the singer will get back to his woman in Memphis. "All that I crave fo' many a long day Is yo' lovin' when I git back." He urges the fireman to make speed, and describes the route the boat follows

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE:
KEYWORDS: river work love separation ship
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Wheeler-SteamboatinDays, pp. 13-14, "I'm Wukin' My Way Back Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryMississippiRiverFolklore, p. 575, "I'm Wukin' My Way Back Home" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST BMRF575 (Full)
Roud #9991
File: BMRF575

I'm Working On a Building

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I'm working on a building (x3), For my lord (x2)." "It's a Holy Ghost building (x3), For my lord (x2)." Verses: If the singer were a liar (drunkard, preacher) he'd quit lying (quit drinking, keep preaching) and work on a building too

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Odum and Johnson)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (3 citations):
McNeil-SouthernMountainFolksong, pp. 106-108, "I'm Workin' on a Building" (1 text, 1 tune)
Howard W. Odum and Guy B. Johnson, The Negro and his Songs (Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1925 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), p. 72, "(no title)" (1 text)

Roud #4276
RECORDINGS:
Carter Family, "I'm Working On a Building" (on "The Carter Family 1927-1934," JSP Records JSP7701E CD (2010))
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "For My Lord" (some lines, "working on a building" theme)
cf. "Working on the Building" ("working on a building" theme)

File: JWW097

I'm Worried Now But I Won't Be Worried Long

DESCRIPTION: "Went to sleep, babe, last night in a snow-white feather bed, I woke up... with the blues all around my bed. I'm worried now...." The singer has no home and lives in a crooked world. He wishes his girl would not treat him like a dog. He will go to Waco

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (collected from Louise Henson)
KEYWORDS: hardtimes travel
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, p. 373, "I'm Worried Now But I Won't Be Worried Long" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4753
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Worried Man Blues" (floating lyrics)
cf. "I'm a Stranger Here" (floating lyrics)
I've a Lad in Edinburgh
DESCRIPTION: The singer claims to have a lad in Edinburgh, Sta'bogie, Musselburgh, Ardlogie, and more. "I'm in love wi' twenty, I could adore as many more ... Variety is charming"
AUTHOR: unknown
I've a Letter from My Father

DESCRIPTION: "I've a letter from my Father in my hand, I have read it and I know that it is grand, 'Twas writ across the sea and 'twas sent right here to me, And it tells me all the news that's in this land"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (collected from Dr. Sam Clark by Boswell)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MW,Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 103, p. 158, "I've a Letter from My Father" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #11023

CROSS-REFERENCES:
ct. "I Got a Letter from Jesus" (theme)

File: BoWo103

I've a Long Time Heard

DESCRIPTION: "I've a long time heard the sun will be bleeding, The sun will be bleeding, the sun... I've a long... SInnere, where will you stand in that day?" "I've a long time heard the angels will be singing..." "Devils will be howling." "Sinners would be crying."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1913 (Journal of American Folklore 26)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad sin

FOUND IN: US(SE, So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #87, "Signs of Doom" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Tristram P. Coffin and Hennig Cohen, _Folklore in America: Tales, Songs, Superstitions, Proverbs, Riddles, Games, Folk Drama and Folk Festivals_, Doubleday, 1966, p. 71, "I've a Long Time Heard" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5026

NOTES [144 words]: Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida says that this "bears close resemblance to a medieval metrical homily entitled 'The Signs of Doom.'" I am guessing that this is the homily "The Signs of Doom," printed on pp. 148-157 of O. F. Emerson, _A Middle English Reader_, 1905; revised 1915 (I use the 1921 Macmllan hardcover). Emerson says (p. 289) "The 'Metrical Homily' here chosen is from a MS. preserved in the Library of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons at Edinburgh, though also found in at least five different MSS. in Cambridge, Oxford, and London." The Edinburgh collection was copied around 1330, and is in a northern form of Middle English. But that homily is 280+ lines long, and much of the imagery is from the Christian Apocalypse. A lot of the lines of the Florida version could just as well be from the song "Sinner Man." I strongly doubt dependence. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.7

File: CoCo071

I've a Wee Dog That Barks at the Moon

DESCRIPTION: The singer says, My dog barks at the moon. Every bark gets him a pair of shoes (thrown?). Give him bread and cheese or he'll bark till you're done.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2)
I've Been Born Again

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I've been born again (been born again)" (2x) "hey, hey", Indeed I know (born again), "born again (born again)" Verse: see Notes) ("I believe (I've been born, ah)" "I've been born again (Born again)"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1968 (USMississippi01)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

RECORDINGS:
The Southland Hummingbirds, "I've Been Born Again" (on USMississippi01)

NOTES [73 words]: In the description the hymn is call and response with the responses in parentheses. For example, in "I've been born again (been born again)," the call is "I've been born again" and the response is "been born again." The Southern Hummingbirds recording is one verse repeated many times with clapping. The liner notes has the verse "Went to the river to be baptized, Leave my burden and I feel all right.' I could not make out the verse. - BS

Last updated in version 5.1

File: RcIVBeBA

I've Been Faithful to You

DESCRIPTION: "Why did you turn from me, darling? Why all this coldness today?" The (girl) declares "I have been faithful to you," and asks why the other is false. Later he finds her body, holding tight to a note that reads "Love, I've been faithful to you."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Henry, collected from Mary King)

KEYWORDS: love betrayal death

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 161-162, "I've Been Faithful to You" (1 text)

File: MSAp161

I've Been Roaming

DESCRIPTION: The singer has been "where the meadow dew is sweet," "O'er the rose and lilly fair," "Where the honey suckle creeps," "over hill, and over plain" and is returning with "pearls upon my feet," "With blossoms in my hair," "to my bower back again"

AUTHOR: George Sloane (1882-1949) (source: Thompson-APioneerSongster)

EARLIEST DATE: 1825 (broadside, Bodleian Johnson Ballads fol. 16)

KEYWORDS: home return travel nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) US(MA)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
I've Been to Australia, Oh!

DESCRIPTION: The singer warns, "So now my friends, take my advice, and never think to go Or you will rue the day you went to Australia-oh." While there, his wife, money, and clothes were stolen. Facing with high prices, he has to do manual labour. He hopes to go home

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (Old Bush Songs); Ron Edwards reportedly found a version dated 1862; Anderson estimates his broadside as c. 1854

KEYWORDS: Australia poverty work hardtimes emigration robbery

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Anderson-FarewellToOldEngland, pp. 203-204, "I've Been to Australia O" (1 text)
Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 106-107, "I've Been to Australia, Oh!" (1 text, 1 tune)
Paterson/Fahey/Seal-OldBushSongs-CentenaryEdition, pp. 105-108, "I've Been to Australia-o" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Pommy's Lament" (theme)

File: FaE106

I've Been To Donovan's

DESCRIPTION: A week long party celebrates Donovan's and Kitty Maine's jubilee anniversary. "There must have been a thousand" from all over Ireland. Some are named. Piper's music, potatoes, and lots to drink from the sugar bowl.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)

KEYWORDS: drink food music party Ireland humorous moniker husband wife

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

Roud #18213

RECORDINGS:
Morris Houlihan, "I've Been To Donovan's" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

File: RcIBtDon

I've Been to France (Turn the Bowl Over)

DESCRIPTION: "I've been to (Plymouth/France/Holland/etc.) and I've been to (Dover); I have been rambling, boys, all the world over... Drink up your liquor and turn your (cup) over, Over and over and over and over"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Simpson)

KEYWORDS: drink travel nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Jacqueline Simpson, _The Folklore of Sussex_, B. T. Batsford, 1973, p. 130, "(I've
I've Been Toiling at the Hill

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I've been toiling at the hill so long (x3), And about to get to heaven at last." Verse: "O mother (father, sister, brother) ain't you glad (x3), And about to get to heaven at last"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, pp. 226-227, "I've Been Toilin' at de Hill" (1 text, 1 tune; pp. 142-143 in the 1901 edition)

Roud #15276

File: Dett226

I've Been Working on the Railroad

DESCRIPTION: The singer describes working on the railroad "all the live-long day" and waiting for Dinah to blow the horn. He describes someone being "in the kitchen with Dinah, strumming on the old banjo."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1894 (Carmina Princetonia)

KEYWORDS: railroading work courting

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (12 citations):
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 537-542, "I've Been Working on the Railroad" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 234, "Working on the Railroad" (1 text plus two unrelated fragments, probably of "Roll on the Ground (Big Ball's in Town)"); the "A" text is a jumble starting with this song but followed up by what is probably a "Song of All Songs" fragment
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 234, "Working on the Railroad" (2 tunes plus text excerpts)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 248, "I've Been Working on the Railroad" (1 text, with the first verse being this and the second being probably some sort of courting song)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 81, "I've Been Working on the Railroad" (1 text)
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 130, "Dinah" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, p. 39, "I've Been WORkin' on the Railroad" (1 short text, with just the first part)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 148, "I Been Wukkin' on de Railroad" (1 text, 1 tune)
Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 35-36, "I've Been Working on the Railroad" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 103, "I've Been Working on the Railroad" (1 text, including some parody verses)

DT, WORKRAIL

Roud #12606?

RECORDINGS:
Blankenship Family, "Working on the Railroad" (Victor 23583, 1931)
Art Mooney, "I've Been Working on the Railroad" (Vogue R-713-32, n.d. but prob. 1930s)
Sandhills Sixteen, "I've Been Working on the Railroad" (Victor 20905, 1927)
Pete Seeger, "I've Been Working on the Railroad" (on PeteSeeger21) (on PeteSeeger32)

SAME TUNE:
We've Enlisted in the Navy (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 151)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Levee Song
NOTES [181 words]: Although this is surely a composed song, Fuld cannot find any references to the "Railroad" verses prior to 1894 (when it was twice published as "The Levee Song," and in both instances associated with Princeton). No composer is listed in the extant materials.
The "Dinah" verses are dated by Fuld to the period before 1850. How they came together is a mystery; they don't fit all that well -- but as I've never heard the halves done separately (though Scarborough's and Shay's texts consist only of the first part, and the Cohen text, from the Blankenship family omits the "Dinah Won't You Blow" stanza, substituting something Cohen thinks is a school rouser), I keep them together here.
Cohen cites Theodore Raph as claiming the song became popular in 1881. But Cohen himself agrees with Fuld's 1894 date. Probably it will take a more detailed study than any undertaken so far to finally settle the matter. - RBW Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame: "'Someone's in the House with Dinah' was sung by Ethiopian minstrels in the 1840s and 1850s, but with a different tune from that known today." - BS
Last updated in version 4.3
File: FSWB209

I've Bin to the 'Bama and I Just Got Back DESCRIPTION: "I've bin to the 'Bama and I just got back. I didn't bring no money but I brought the sack."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1920 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: money travel
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 498, "I've Bin to the 'Bama and I Just Got Back" (1 fragment)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 498, I've Been to the 'Bama and I Just Got Back" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #11765
NOTES [12 words]: Roud lumps this with the "Hesitation Blues." Tough to prove either way. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Be3498

I've Buried Three Husbands Already (Wherever There's a Goose There's a Gander)
DESCRIPTION: "Oh I buried three husbands already ... And now I am mostly all ready For another young son to come on." "Wherever there's a goose there's a gander." "The older the bow and the fiddle, The sweeter the tune it can play"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1985 (IRTravellers01)
KEYWORDS: age marriage death humorous nonballad husband
FOUND IN: Ireland
Roud #16725
RECORDINGS:
Mary Delaney, "I've Buried Three Husbands Already" (on IRTravellers01)
NOTES [9 words]: Did someone set the Wife of Bath's prologue to music? - RBW
File: RcIB3HA

I've Busted Broncs
DESCRIPTION: "I've busted broncos off an' on since first I struck their trail." He knows them very well. But there is one on Powder River -- only one -- that he can't bust. The animal was worthless, but it bucked so hard he could not ride it
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (ArkansasWoodchopper)
KEYWORDS: cowboy horse injury
FOUND IN:
I've Got a Brother in the Snow-White Fields

DESCRIPTION: "I've got a brother in the snow-white fields, Praying all night long. I want to go to Heaven when I die, Oh my Lawd (x2), I want to go to...." "I want to go to Heaven and I want to go right... dressed in white." "I want to go to heaven at my own expense."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious death brother nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 535, "I've Got a Brother in the Snow-White Fields" (1 text)
Roud #11822
File: Br3535

I've Got a Chorus

DESCRIPTION: "I've got a chorus I want you all to sing. It's a beautiful refrain, Let it go with might and main... And if you know what it's all about -- You know a lot more than me."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Fahey-Joe-Watson-AustralianTraditionalFolkSinger)
KEYWORDS: music nonballad nonsense
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fahey-Joe-Watson-AustralianTraditionalFolkSinger, [p. 22, page headed "this item was obviously...."], "(no title)" (1 short text)
File: FaWAGoCo

I've Got a Daughter

DESCRIPTION: "I've got a daughter, lives in the ocean" or "My girl's a corker, She's a New Yorker." The singer would "do anything to keep her alive" or "in style." "That's where all my money goes"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
KEYWORDS: playparty
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North),Scotland(Bord))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 123, "I've Got a Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #18313
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "My Girl's from USC" (a bawdy derivative of "My girl's a 'Corker'"
NOTES [36 words]: Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame: "This cheerfully insulting song derives from the much-parodied American popular song 'My Girl's a 'Corker,' or The Race Track Girl', 1895, words by William Jerome and music by John Queen...."

Last updated in version 2.6
File: OpGa123
I've Got a Feeling
DESCRIPTION: "I've got a feeling ev'rything's gonna be all right, O (x3), Be all right, be all right, be all right." "Jesus already told me, ev'rything's gonna be all right. "The Holy Ghost has confirmed it, ev'rything's gonna be all right."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1997 (Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit, pp. 142-144, "I've Got a Feeling" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: WarSp142

I've Got a Master and I Am His Man
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, I've got a master and I am his man, Galloping steadily on, Oh, I've got a master and I am his man, I'll marry me a wife as soon as I can, With a higglety pigglety, gambling gay, Higglety pigglety, gambling gay, Galloping steadily on."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: servant work horse
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 148, "I've Got a Master and I Am His Man" (1 fragment)
Roud #15768
File: Br3148

I've Got a Motto
DESCRIPTION: "I've got a motto always merry and bright; Look around you and you will find Every cloud is silver-lined, The sun shines bright.... I've often said to myself, I've said, 'Cheer up, Coffee, you'll soon be dead.' It's a short life but a day one."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 284, "I've Got a Motto" (1 short text)
Roud #10933
File: Pet284

I've Got No Use for the Women
DESCRIPTION: "I've got no use for the women; A true one can never be found. They use a man for his money...." The singer tells how his partner killed a man who insulted his sweetheart's picture, and was himself killed and buried on the prairie.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Travis B. Hale)
KEYWORDS: death homicide revenge love burial
FOUND IN: US(MW,SE)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 65, "I've Got No Use for the Women" (1 text, 1 tune)
Welsch-NebraskaPioneerLore, pp. 11-13, "I've Got Not No Use for the Women" (1 text)
Tinsley-HeWasSiginThisSong, pp. 184-188, "I've Got No Use for the Women" (1 text, 1 tune)
ArkansasWoodchopper, pp. 46-48, "Bury Me Out on the Prairie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4104
RECORDINGS:
Edward L. Crain, "Bury Me Out on the Prairie" (Crown 3239, 1932; Homestead 22991, c. 1932;
Crowder Brothers, "Got No Use for Women" (Conqueror 8943, 1937/Vocalion 03030, n.d./ARC 08-3-57, 1938; rec. 1936)
Vernon Dalhart, "Bury Me Out on the Prairie" (Conqueror 7729, 1931)
Delmore Brothers, "Oh Bury Me Out on the Prairie" (Montgomery Ward M-4060, 1933; Bluebird B-5338/Sunrise S-3419 1934; Montgomery Ward M-4458, c. 1934)
The Farm Hands, "Bury Me Out on the Prairie" (Paramount 3294, 1931)
Travis B. Hale, "Oh Bury Me Out on the Prairie" (Victor 20796, 1927)
Harry Jackson, "I Ain't Got No Use for the Women" (on HJackson1)
Bradley Kincaid, "Bury Me Out on the Prairie" (Silvertone 5187/Silvertone 8218/Supertone 9208, 1928) (Vocalion 5474, 1930; Conqueror 8091, 1933)
Ranch Boys, "Bury Me Out on the Prairie" (Decca 5341, 1937)
Carson Robison’s Trio, "Oh Bury Me Out on the Prairie" (Broadway 4060, n.d.)
Roy Shaffer, "Bury Me Out on the Prairie" (Bluebird B-8213, 1939)
Tune Wranglers "I've Got No Use for the Women" (Bluebird B-7089, 1937)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Jack Haggerty (The Flat River Girl)" (lyrics)
cf. "Bury Me Not on the Lone Prairie" (lyrics)

NOTES [27 words]: What an excuse for not being able to find a girlfriend. - RBW
This uses more phrases from "Bury Me Not on the Lone Prairie" than can be explained by coincidence. - PJS

Last updated in version 5.2

File: FCW065

I've Just Come from Sydney

DESCRIPTION: "I've just come from Sydney across the range of mountains Where the nanny goats and the billy goats and the moo cows do dwell." He looks for his girl. Informed she has run off, he says he will wander by the sea and lay himself down and -- get up!

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964
KEYWORDS: love separation elopement humorous
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, p. 143, "I've Just Come from Sydney" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [26 words]: From the language, this sounds like a children's song; from the tone, it's clearly a gag. I suspect it's a parody of something, but I've no idea what. - RBW

File: PASB143

I've Just Got in Across the Plains

DESCRIPTION: "I've just got in across the plains, I'm poorer than a snail, My mules all died but poor old Chip." The singer tells of his terrible troubles on the way to California, and warns those who would follow that gold is hard to find AUTHOR: Enuel Davis?

EARLIEST DATE: 1912 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)
KEYWORDS: travel hardtimes animal gold warning
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 345-346, "I've Just Got in Across the Plains" (1 text)
Roud #7775

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Miner's Song

NOTES [48 words]: Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety mentions that this was written "on the California Trail around 1850 by Enuel Davis," who contributed other complaints about the trail to California. But in context, it appears possible that Davis was the transcriber or publisher. - RBW
I've Lived in Service
DESCRIPTION: "I've lived in service seven long years, A fancy I took to a maid, sir." He would be happy to marry her -- but he sees their master take her to bed. Offered money to marry her, he takes the down payment and flees, leaving the girl behind
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Vaughan Williams collection)
KEYWORDS: love courting servant bastard money trick escape adultery infidelity
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #37, "I've Lived in Service" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1483
File: PECS037

I've Lost My Love and I Kenna Weel Fu
DESCRIPTION: The singer says she has lost her love and "keena weel fu" [doesn't know how], but it would be childish to complain. Men are "as fickle as winter in sunshine an' shower." "The lossing o ane's the gainin o twa." He dares not return.
AUTHOR: James Hogg (1770-1835)
EARLIEST DATE: 1829 (Hogg)
KEYWORDS: courting infidelity nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan6 1147, "I've Lost My Love and I Kenna Weel Fu" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, LOSTLOVE*
ADDITIONAL: James Hogg [writing as The Ettrick Shepherd], ("I hae lost my love, an' I dinna ken how") in _The Edinburgh Literary Journal_ (Edinburgh, 1829 ("Digitized by Google")), (No. 10, Jan 17, 1829) p. 141 (1 text)
Roud #2075
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "O'er the Water to Charlie" (tune, per Greig/Duncan6)
cf. "I Lost My Lad" (a derivative game song)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
I've Lost My Love, and I Carena
NOTES [80 words]: Hogg's poem takes the man's view. In James Hogg, Songs by The Ettrick Shepherd (Edinburgh, 1831 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 247-248, "I Hae Lost My Love," he subtitles the poem as "A bitter song against the women." Hogg describes women as "fickle as winter, in sunshine and shower, The hearts o' a' mankind beguiling.... Their ill faults I couldna tell ower in a day But their beauty's the warst thing about them! ... 'tis her that will bring this ill warld to an end...." - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: GrD61147

I've Lost My Rifle and Bayonet
DESCRIPTION: "I've lost my rifle and bayonet, I've lost my pull-through too, I've lost my disc and my puttees, I've lost my four-by-two. I've lost my housewife and hold-all, I've lost my button-stick too, I've lost my rations and greatcoat, Sergeant, what shall I do?"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang)
KEYWORDS: soldier clothes
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, p. 66, "I've Lost My Rifle and Bayonet" (1 text)
Roud #10525
CROSS-REFERENCES:
I've Nine Bairns and That's Nae Mony

DESCRIPTION: "I've nine bairns and that's nae mony And if I get anither ane I'm gaun tae ca him Johnnie"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan7)

KEYWORDS: nonballad children

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1453, "I've Nine Bairns and That's Nae Mony" (1 text)

Roud #7280

NOTES [10 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan7 text. - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD71453

I've Only Been Down to the Club

DESCRIPTION: "Lasts night I was out rather late. It was only an innocent spree! My wife for my coming did wait, When sleeping I thought she would be." He stumbles but declares he isn't drunk. She is in a rage and threatens to leave him. He promises her (a new dress)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions)

KEYWORDS: drink fight husband wife

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 165-166, "I've Only Been Down to the Club" (1 text)

Roud #4941

File: SBar165

I've Rode the Southern and the L & N

DESCRIPTION: Blues; singer says he's ridden the Southern & L&N railroads, has been treated badly, is a rambling man, and has found his "two blue eyes" at last. He has had to offer her his watch, his chain, and all he had before she would agree to marry him

AUTHOR: Possibly Homer Callahan, but since it's mostly floating verses...

EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (recording, Homer Callahan)

KEYWORDS: courting marriage bargaining rambling train floatingverses

FOUND IN:
Roud #8589

RECORDINGS:
Callahan Brothers, "I've Rode the Southern and the L & N" (ARC 351011/Conqueror 8557, 1935; the ARC master was issued on Banner, Melotone, Romeo, Oriole and Perfect; some labels issued it under the name Homer Callahan)

Merle Lovell, "I Rode Southern, I Rode L & N" (AFS 4111 A1, 1940; on LC61)

NOTES [49 words]: The "L & N" was the Louisville & Nashville Railroad.

This barely qualifies as a ballad, but the narrative thread, though thin, is present, and while some of the floating verses come from Jimmie Rodgers via Homer Callahan, they've floated through enough places to become part of tradition. - PJS

Last updated in version 4.2

File: RcIRtSLN

I've Sair'd wi' Men

DESCRIPTION: "I've sairt wi' men that eased me well Wi' men that tried to skin." The singer names the places he has worked but "the like o' the Aucheddly My fit was never in"
I've Travelled This Country (Last Friday Evening)

DESCRIPTION: "I've traveled this country both early and late; Hard has been my fortune and sad has been my fate." He comes to his love's home and sees her with another man. He gets drunk and/or questions her and wishes he were a fisherman and could catch her

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)
KEYWORDS: love betrayal drink
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE,So)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, p. 194, "Last Friday Evening" (1 text)
Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, p. 333, "Lovely Polly" (1 text; tune on p. 447)
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 143-144, "I've Rambled This Country Both Earlye and Late" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 164, "Pretty Polly" (1 fragment, 1 tune -- a single verse characteristic of this song although similar things are found in other songs as well)
Roud #1795
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Green Grows the Laurel (Green Grow the Lilacs)" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Farewell Ballymoney (Loving Hannah; Lovely Molly)" (floating lyrics)
cf. "If I Were a Fisher" (floating lyrics) and references there

File: Beld194

I've Two or Three Strings To My Bow

DESCRIPTION: "I am a fair maiden forsaken, but I have a contented mind." Her love has forsaken him, but she does not intend to mourn; she has other options. She warns girls against men, and says she will "care no more for him than he cares for me."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1768 (Ramsey)
KEYWORDS: love betrayal
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H70a+b, pp. 340-341, "I've Two or Three Strings To My Bow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4788
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Farewell He" (theme) and references there

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Frugal Maid

File: HHH070

I'ze the B'y that Builds the Boat

DESCRIPTION: "I'ze the b'y that builds the boat, And I'ze the b'y that sails her; I'ze the b'y that catches the fish And takes 'em home to Liza." Stories of a Newfoundland life and diet -- and of the odd things that can happen at a Newfoundland party

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: nonballad ship sailor
NOTES [726 words]: Gordon Bok reports the following anecdote:
"A friend of mine came back from fishing in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and he told me he was sitting in a bar in Cornerbrook when the fellow beside him punched him in the arm and said, 'How do you kill a Newfoundlander?'

"My friend says: 'I dunno.'

"The fellow says, 'You nail his boots to the floor and play "I'ze the Bye."'

This is a very Newfoundland song, both in its geography and in its language. Fogo, Twillingate, and Moreton's Harbour are all small towns on the small islands north of Newfoundland itself -- Fogo on Fogo Island, Twillingate on South Twillingate Island just to the west, and Moreton's Harbour on New World Island just south of there. Bonavista might be Bonavista Bay, or the town of Bonavista on its shores, fifty or so miles to the southeast of the three towns.

The name "Twillingate," according to David J. Clarke, A History of the Isles: Twillingate, New World Island, Fogo Island and Change Islands, Newfoundland and Labrador, DJC, 2016, p. 11, is a distorted anglicized form of French "Toulinguet" (though the meaning of that word is itself uncertain, and might be Breton or even Basque; Clarke, p. 23) the area was explored by the French, and technically their property, until the eighteenth century. It is not certain when Twillingate was first settled, but by 1738, there were 184 people residing there -- 16 families plus supposedly 114 servants (Clarke, p. 27).

"Fogo" is thought to be derived from Portuguese "y del fuego," or "island of fire," although it is not clear just when the name came to be used for the island and town (Clarke, p. 129). Fogo is the name of both the island and its chief town, although Fogo Town has a harbour that is hard to enter due to rocks. But it provided good shelter once past that, which may be why the area was settled (Clarke, p. 145).

At the time when the western part of Newfoundland was still French, the northern islands fell within the French region, but Fogo and Twillingate were English from the start; they marked "the northern boundary of the English settlement in the early eighteenth century" (Clarke, p. 147, who notes on the same page that there were English settlers at Fogo by 1728 despite it being in French territory). Fogo, Twillingate, and Moreton's Harbour were all the most important towns in their general vicinities, and hosts to many fishermen; Moreton's Harbour was also noteworthy for the production of small boats until the timber supplies ran out (Clarke, p. 111), although the population has declined sharply in the late twentieth and early twenty-first centuries (Clarke, p. 116). One might suggest, then, that our "b'y that builds the boat" is from there.

G. M. Story, W. J. Kirwin, and J. D. A. Widdowson, editors, Dictionary of Newfoundland English, second edition with supplement, Breakwater Press, 1990, defines most of the special words of the song:
"Hip": "In dancing the lancers, to bump (one's partner) lightly on the hip" (p. 254, citing this song as an example).

A "flake" is "A platform built on poes and spread with boughs for drying cod-fish on the foreshore" (p. 187), i.e. it is a fish-drying platform. Hence it is covered with "sods and rinds": soil (possibly peat) and "The bark or cortex of a tree, specif. a 6-ft. (1.8 m) length of bark removed in one piece from a standing spruce or fir and used for various fishing and building purposes" (p. 411).

"Cake" is often a term for bread, especially hardtack (p. 79).
"Maggoty: "Of cod-fish, improperly cured and infested with the larvae of blow-flies; spoiled, unsavory; freq. in names of small coves where fish are landed and offal discarded" (p. 319). For some reason, the quality of Newfoundland cod went down over the years, eventually becoming almost unsalable outside Newfoundland in the early twentieth century as the Newfoundlanders failed to dry it properly, so it might make sense that one of the Islanders would think the people of relatively "civilized" Bonavista would dry their cod badly.

"Gravel": could be "a pebble-strewn isthmus or sea-bottom" (p. 223) -- in other words, Liza being "up to her knees in gravel" means that she is in the water up to her knees.

Finally, "fish" in Newfoundland can generally be assumed to mean "codfish" unless otherwise specified; this is the "first" meaning on p. 176 of Story et al. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0
File: FJ116

Ibby Damsel
DESCRIPTION: "Some old Robin Down they call me/But I'm a weaver by my trade/In this fair berth, in which I'm dwelling/And Ibby Damsel my heart betrayed." Two succeeding verses praise Ibby Damsel's beauty, and note that "from her chamber I can't get free"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (collected from Rosie Hensley by Cecil Sharp)
KEYWORDS: captivity love betrayal beauty weaving
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 119, "Ibby Damsel" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3635
NOTES [24 words]: A fragment, but it just avoids nonballad status by its hint of a narrative. There are no further notes on this song in Sharp's collection. - PJS
File: ShAp2119

Ice Bound Hunting Seals
DESCRIPTION: "The wind was still from the nor'east As we sat down to our humble feast" as the sealers talk of days gone by. They recall happier voyages; finally old "Garge" "Cried out, 'tis the "infarnal" steal -- that's what done it."
AUTHOR: probably James Murphy (1868-1931)
EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff)
KEYWORDS: hunting technology
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, p. 67, "Ice Bound Hunting Seals" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V44841
NOTES [359 words]: A manuscript text, with no author cited, but thought to be the work of James Murphy.

The Newfoundland seal fishery went back very early in the colony's history, and the hunt was on such a large scale that it soon dramatically reduced the seal population. By the 1850s, the number of seals was falling fast, and the hunt was shifting from small ships to large. In the 1860s, the large sailing vessels were pushed aside by steam-powered sealers. These took many more seals on a per-ship basis, but only a few dozen sailed each year, carrying crews numbering in the hundreds rather than the dozens. But, because the steamers were so few, many sealers were out of work -- and those who did work lived a very different life. This is presumably a grumble about the change.

The irony of it is, the steamers, because they could move without a wind to power them, were much less likely to get ice bound than the older sailing ships. But it still happened sometimes. The song lists three captains, all by first name only: "Captain Mick," who is identified by Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff as Mick Fitzgerald, and Captains John and Dan, not identified. Ryan and Ryan/Drake have no mentions of any Captain Fitzgerald, but Chafe, p. 91, lists a Captain T. Fitzgerald who captained the steamer Mastiff in 1877, took only 700 seals, and never commanded another steamer. I suspect this is the "Mick" involved (if Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff are correct in saying his name was Fitzgerald); it was quite common for a successful captain of sailing sealers to try to make the transition to steam -- and fail and lose his job (Ryan, p. 221, or see the notes to "Captain Bill Ryan Left Terry Behind"). Captains John and Dan are, obviously, harder to identify, but a Captain John Hicks commanded the Mastiff in 1872, with only slightly better luck than Fitzgerald (Chafe, p. 91), a Captain John Winsor had a horrid trip in the Mastiff in 1886, and a captain John Dawe had little success in the Iceland in 1880. These seem to be the only steamer captains who are early enough to fit the song, but the three captains were, of course, primarily sailing captains. - RBW

Bibliography

Last updated in version 5.0
File: RySm067

Ice-Floes, The

DESCRIPTION: The Eagle sails for the ice and sends out sealing parties. The crews find many animals. After several successful expeditions, the singer and colleagues are unable to find the ship. Some eventually find their way back, but 60 die

AUTHOR: E. J. Pratt
EARIEST DATE: 1962 (Pratt, Here the Tides Flow)
KEYWORDS: storm disaster death hunting
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1950 - Scuttling of the SS Eagle, the last of the Newfoundland sealing steamers
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, pp. 59-62, "The Ice-Floes" (1 text)
Roud #V44842
NOTES [1390 words]: Not traditional, not true, and not a song. As written, the poem cannot be set to music, and the event, while similar to some actual tragedies (see, e.g., the several "Greenland Disaster" songs for a similar tale), was made up by the author. Don't ask me what induced Ryan and Small to include it in their book.
Nonetheless the ship is, in a sense, real. There were two sealers named Eagle. One Eagle or the other is mentioned in "Sealer's Song (I)," "Captains and Ships," and "The Sealer's Song (II);" also, I suspect, in Johnny Burke's "Trinity Cake (Mrs. Fogarty's Cake)," although the ship in that song is not explicitly described as a sealer. The first Eagle had been owned by the sealing/sailing firm of Bowring's from 1871 to 1893 (she was the first steamer owned by Bowring's, which came late to the steaming trend but eventually became the largest owner of steam sealers; Busch, p. 67), and had been considered successful. Her first commander was the famous William Jackman, for whom see "Captain William Jackman, A Newfoundland Hero." She had been lost while whaling in 1893 (Keir, p. 163). As a result, when Bowring's bought the Norwegian ship Sophie (built 1902) in 1904, they renamed her the Eagle (II) (Greene, p. 276; Squires, p. 12; Feltham, p. 46, says her original name was Sophia).
As built, she was 176 feet long, 418 tons (Chafe, p. 47, says 394 tons, but that may refer to her size before a 1908 rebuild), and had an engine generating 82 n.h.p. (Squires, p. 12) -- a relatively weak engine, but because she was also small, she was apparently regarded as good in the ice (Ryan-Last, p. 154). She wasn't nearly as good in the open sea, though, and Squires, p. 14, describes her as a coal hog. And, like most sealing steamers, she had no plumbing worthy of the name (Squires, p. 20), few other amenities, and -- when she went to the ice -- was overcrowded by a factor of eight or so (sealing expeditions usually carried about 200 men, but the Eagle went to the Antarctic with just 28, and that was enough men to make her feel fairly full).
Arthur Jackman (the brother of William Jackman; for Arthur, see the notes to "First Arrival -- 'Aurora' and 'Walrus' Full") was the second Eagle's commander in 1904-1906 (Chafe, p. 99); her first season, in 1904, was a flop, but she went on to have significant success (Feltham, pp. 46-47), especially after a rebuilding in 1908 lengthened her bow (Ryan/Drake, p. 34); she served until 1949 (with a break in 1943) under eight different captains -- three members of the Kean family (for whom see "Captain Abram Kean," although Abram himself never commanded the Eagle) and five assorted others.

She also made history by being the first sealer to take an airplane to the ice to hunt seals (Ryan/Drake, p. 34, although I've also heard of the Neptune being involved in aviation), although it took quite a while to make a runway for her on the ice. She was also one of the first sealers to use wireless (Ryan-Ice, pp. 192-193). Despite her early failures and her many captains -- and the fact that she went through three bows (needing a rebuild in 1908; Winsor, p. 39, and again after World War II) -- she was widely regarded as lucky by sealers (Ryan-Last, pp. 366-367).

In 1944-1945, she was part of a secret mission, "Operation Taberin," which was intended to build British bases in the Falklands and the Antarctic. According to Squires, p. 1, the British government felt that it needed to have sovereignty over the Antarctic Peninsula, and to maintain that sovereignty, needed an Antarctic colony. (This was mostly to keep pro-German Argentina from getting a foothold, according to Squires, p. 48). A colonizing attempt in 1943 had failed because of ice, so the British government called on the one remaining sealing steamer (Squires, pp. 1-2) -- ships that had been designed for service in the Arctic ice. The Eagle was damaged on this mission; an iceberg took off her bowsprit and part of her bow even as another hit her side; she took so much water that the crew thought her doomed (Squires, pp. 84-86). She managed to survive, though, and was repaired in Port Stanley.

Nonetheless, she was pretty clearly worn out; Squires, p. 36, reports that "in every port we had visited, the ship had to have repairs." And so much seal residue had soaked into her timbers that she stank abominably when she reached warm waters and it started to air out. Even though she had been given her role because she was the last sealing steamer, it is noteworthy that another ship was sent to bring back the expedition (Squires, p. 101). I'm frankly surprised Bowring's took her back when she returned to Newfoundland. But they did. Briefly. She went to the ice in 1946-1949 under Captain Charles Kean -- and was the only sealer to go out in the first and last of those years. Another member of the Kean family had been captain of the first Newfoundland sealing steamer, the Wolf, in 1863, so there was a Kean in charge of a sealer from beginning to end of the tradition! (Winsor, p. 28).

In 1950, the last survivor of the fleet of sealing steamers (at least if one excludes the Bear, which had served as a sealer but then became a sort of arctic patrol vessel and lasted until 1963; Watson, pp. 180-181; Paine, p. 55), she was scuttled at the end of her long service (O'Neill, p. 967) -- one newspaper account said she was "buried at sea" (Feltham, p. 49). Keir, who wrote the official history of her owner Bowring's, on p. 404 says that "at last she went down with all the dignity of an ancient Viking funeral." Although that song never says so, I'm pretty sure this is the event referred to in "Last of the Wooden Walls."

Winsor, p. 40, prints a long excerpt from the newspaper the Daily News, from which I will quote the first few sentences:

"Sealers from Cape St. John to Cape St. Mary's will learn with regret that Bowring Brothers, Ltd., have decided to scrap the S. S. Eagle. No more will the doughty ship 'punch her way' through the ice-floes of our coast in search of seals. "Hundreds of Newfoundland sealers will think of the time when they got 'duff' from her galley; going down her 'side sticks' to take the young harps from the pans; the joy that was felt when the ship bore up with a bumper load of whitecoats...." If nothing else, all the verbiage shows how strongly Newfoundlanders felt about the seal hunt.

Ryan/Drake, p. 34, prints a photo of her from 1934. Feltham, p. 173, has a photo of her as she made her final voyage, as does Ryan/Drake, p. 81; O'Neill, p. 946, has a different photo of this voyage, with a comment that a few were enraged by this "wanton destruction" but that most did not care about the loss of the last wooden-walled sealer. On p. 967, O'Neill writes, "When she reached the Deeps a small crew set the Eagle on fire, her seacocks were opened, and the coverings knocked from scuttling holes that had been cut in the hull. The crew were taken off by pilot boat.... Another irreplaceable element in Newfoundland history was irrevocably lost." Important as she doubtless was historically (I certainly wish she had been saved and used as a museum), I doubt she was worth much as a sealer by then -- sealer Stephen Whitten recalled that "It wouldn't be worth the money to do her up to pass Canadian steamship inspection" (Ryan-Last, pp. 244-245; Newfoundland became part of Canada in 1949, so Canadian laws would begin to apply in the year she was scuttled). Winsor, p. 40, also has a photo of her sinking, with a photo of her in service on p. 39.

The fact that she lasted so long might explain this piece, though. E. J. Pratt wrote this after the last wooden sealers were gone; he used the name of the last of them for the subject of his poem. People in Newfoundland remembered her; Squires declared, "Her memory will endure forever" (Squires, p. 104), and I'm sure many Newfoundlanders felt the same way. There was apparently another song about the Eagle, and captain Sid Hill, preserved in Hill's own family, that has never been printed; two verses are on p. 166 of Ryan-Last, and begin "Come all of you seal hungers and listen unto me, While I'll tell of the spring now in 1933."

Squires has many photos of the Eagle, although only the one on p. 104, which shows her as she is sinking, gives much idea of what she looked like. - RBW

Bibliography

- Feltham: John Feltham,Sealing Steamers, Harry Cuff Publications, 1995
- Greene: William Howe Greene,The Wooden Walls among the Ice Floes: Telling the Romance of the Newfoundland Seal Fishery, Hutchinson & Co, London (PDF available on the Memorial University of Newfoundland web site)

_Last updated in version 5.2_

_File: RySm059_

Icham of Irlaunde (The Irish Dancer; Good Sir I Pray Thee)

_DESCRIPTION:* "Icham of Irlaunde, Ant of the hole lond Of Irlaunde. Gode sire, prey ich (you), For of saynte charite, Come and daunce wyt me In Irlaunde." "I am of Ireland, And of the holy land of Ireland. Good sir... Come and dance with me In Ireland."

_AUTHOR: unknown_

_EARLIEST DATE:_ before 1450 (Oxford, Bodleian Library Rawlinson D.913)

_KEYWORDS:_ Ireland dancing nonballad MiddleEnglish

 FOUND IN: Britain(England)

_REFERENCES (15 citations):

Stevick-OneHundredMiddleEnglishLyrics 37, "(I Am of Ireland)" (1 text)
Hirsh-MedievalLyric-MiddleEnglishLyricsBalladsCarols #22, "(Ich am of Irlaunde" (1 text, with a much-reduced photograph of the manuscript on page 75)
Sidgwick/Chambers-EarlyEnglishLyrics p. 279, "(no title)" (1 text, included as a dance text rather than a "lyric")
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #1008
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #1647

24, "(Icham of Irlaunde)" (1 text, part of a full transcription of this page of the Rawlinson manuscript)

Kenneth Sisam, editor, _Fourteenth Century Verse and Prose_, Oxford, 1925, p. 166, "The Irish Dancer" (1 text)

Rossell Hope Robbins, _Secular Lyrics of the XIVth and XVth Century_, Oxford University Press, 1952, p. 11, "The Irish Dancer" (1 text)

E. K. Chambers, _English Literature at the Close of the Middle Ages_, Oxford, 1945, 1947, pp. 77-78, "(Icham of Irlaunde)" (1 text)

Karin Boklund-Lagopolou, _I have a yong suster: Popular song and Middle English lyric_, Four Courts Press, 2002, p. 31, "(Icham of Irlaunde)" (1 text)

MANUSCRIPT: {MSRawlinsonD913}, Oxford, Bodleian Library, Rawlinson D.13 (Bodleian 13679), folio 1

NOTES [358 words]: Although no tune is preserved, several scholars (Chambers, Greene) are certain that this was sung, probably as a traditional song (Greene, p. xxxvi). Greene is further convinced that it can be divided into stanza and burden, even if all the other stanzas are lost.

Wells, p. 493, declares it "perhaps the earliest English dance-song now extant." Chambers, p. 77, is a little more cautious, but says the surviving text "may be the beginning of a dance-song, with its refrain."

It is indexed on that basis, and because of the important manuscript containing it, Oxford, Bodleian Library Rawlinson D.913 (13679). That makes it one of the "Rawlinson lyrics," found on a single strip of parchment in Bodleian library MS. Rawlinson D.913. It has several short poems, in both English and French (Burrow/Turville-Petre, p. 235). Several of the other pieces also appear somewhat "folky"; Wells, p. 492, suggests that the page came from a minstrel's notebook.

This is the seventh piece in the book, by Wells's count; the eighth is the famous "Maiden in the Mor Lay (The Maid of the Moor)"; see that entry for more about the manuscript.

According to Sisam, p. 256, Ireland is called holy because it was "par excellence 'the land of the Saints.'"

John Speirs had a different take, which seems more real to me: "Ireland, the Isle of the Saints because earlier it had been the Isle of the Gods, is here sacred still perhaps in a pagan as well as a Christian sense. The dancer from across the sea -- from a sacred or magical other country -- is still perhaps essentially a faery or otherworld visitant. . . . Essentially, or symbolically, the dancer will steal away or abduct her partner" (quoted on p. 14 of Burrow).

Burrow himself (pp. 14-15) has a much more down-to-earth understanding: he suggests that this is in effect a game song, in carol form, and "Ireland" is the area in which the lead singer stands. The "holy land" is then explained by the fact that the carol singers encircle it in their dancing. But he suspects that the scribe of the Rawlinson Manuscript himself did not know what the poem was about, although he offers no evidence for this. - RBW

Bibliography

- Chambers: E. K. Chambers, English Literature at the Close of the Middle Ages, Oxford, 1945, 1947
- Wells: John Edwin Wells, A Manual of the Writings in Middle English 1050-1400, 1916 (references are to the 1930 fifth printing with three supplements)

Last updated in version 5.3

File: MsIcOIr1
Ickle Ockle Black Bottle

DESCRIPTION: "Ickle ockle black bottle, Ickle ockle out, If you come into my house, I will kick you out." Or "...bottle, Fishes in the sea, If you want a pretty maid, Please choose me." Or "...bottle, Ickle ockle out, O-U-T spells out, And out you must go."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)
KEYWORDS: playparty wordplay
FOUND IN: Britain New Zealand
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 238, "Ickle ockl, blue bockle" (1 text)
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 88, "(Ickle ockle black bottle)" (4 texts); p. 98, "(Ickle ockle black bottle)" (2 texts); there may also be relics of this among the texts on p. 95
Roud #20650
CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "One Two Three Four, Mary at the Cottage Door" ("O-U-T spells out" lyric) and references there NOTES [61 words]: NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, Leonidas Betts, "Folk Speech from Kipling [North Carolina]," Vol. XIV, No. 2 (Nov. 1966), p. 40, has an interesting form beginning "Eeny, meeny, tipsy, teeny, Apple jack, John Sweeney" and proceeding for six more lines, then ending "O-U-T spells out, And out goes you"; this appears to be an unusual composite of several counting rhymes.

Icky Acky

DESCRIPTION: "Icky acky chew the baccy/tobaccy, Icky acky out."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)
KEYWORDS: playparty drugs
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 95, "(Icky acky chew the baccy_" (1 short text)

Ida Ho

DESCRIPTION: "For her I'd leave Virginia, I'd leave my Mary Land, I'd part with Mrs. Sippi, That widow, fair and bland. I'd leave Louisa Anna, and other Annas, too." "I'd give them all the go-by And stick to Ida Ho." "I like her breezy manners And her honest ways."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Idaho Lore, according to Cohen)
KEYWORDS: home patriotic nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, p 587, "Ida Ho" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "The States Song (What Did Delaware?)" (device of using state songs as personal names)

Ida Red (I)

DESCRIPTION: "Ida Red, Ida Red, I'm in love with Ida Red." Verses often concern Ida, but are frequently silly and exaggerated: "Ida Red, she ain't a fool, Bigger'n an elephant, stronger'n a mule."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (recording, Fiddlin' Powers & Family)
Ida Red (II)

DESCRIPTION: "I went down one day in a lope, Fool around till I stole a coat." In love with Ida Red, the singer turns criminal (against Ida's wishes). He winds up in prison, and she cannot raise his bail. He regrets his mistake, and looks forward to seeing Ida again.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934

KEYWORDS: love prison separation theft

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 110-111, "Ida Red" (1 text)

Roud #3429

NOTES [22 words]: This song is item dI23 in Laws's Appendix II. Roud lumps this with Ida Red (I), which is a humorous item; this is a crime ballad. - RBW

File: LoA110

Ida Red (III)

DESCRIPTION: "Unprintable" song about Ida's exploits, with chorus something like "Ida Rad and Ida Blue, And I love Ida same as you."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Sulzer-TwentyFiveKentuckyFolkBallads)

KEYWORDS: bawdy courting

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sulzer-TwentyFiveKentuckyFolkBallads, p. 12, "Ida Red and Ida Blue" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Cripple Creek (I)" (lyrics)
NOTES [20 words]: Note that Roud lumps this with the other Ida Red songs. Expurgated nonballads are always a classification problem.... - RBW
Last updated in version 3.2
File: Sulz012

Idaho, The
DESCRIPTION: Fragment: "She was laden with slates and heavy crates And was bound for New Orleans"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast)
KEYWORDS: sea ship wreck commerce
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast, p. 127, "The Idaho" (1 fragment)
NOTES [12 words]: Apparently not the Idaho that struck Coningmore Rock on June 1, 1878. - BS
File: Ran127D

Ierne United
DESCRIPTION: "When Rome, by dividing, had conquered the world," Ireland, united, escaped. Eventually "our domestic dissensions let foreigners in.... our freedom was lost.... Let us firmly unite, and our covenant be, Together to fall, or together be free"
AUTHOR: Theobald Wolfe Tone (source: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)
EARLIEST DATE: 1792 (according to Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)
KEYWORDS: Ireland nonballad political
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 120, "Ierne United" (1 text)
NOTES [314 words]: The claim of this song is a half-truth: Ireland was never conquered, or even attacked, by Rome. But it wasn't because Ireland was united; it was because Ireland was remote. The Romans never finished conquering Britain, and had no harbors on her west coast; of course they didn't go after Ireland. But Ireland was not united at any time in its history prior to the Tudor conquest; there were always at least the four kingdoms of Leinster, Munster, Ulster, and Connaught, and those usually subdivided. A king like Brian Boru could say he ruled all as High King, but at best his authority resembled that of the modern British monarch: Respected, bowed to -- and utterly ignored.
Still, it is true that internal strife led to the English invasion: There was strife between Diarmat Mac Murchada (MacMurrough), king of Leinster, and Tigernan Ua Ruairk of Breifne/Breffni. There was also a conflict over who was High King of Ireland, which had lesser lords taking sides. In a complex multi-sided war, Diarmat was deprived of most of his power -- and sailed to England, where he offered to marry his daughter to Richard FitzGilbert de Clare, known as "Strongbow," the Earl of Pembroke. Pembroke invaded (1169, then in more force in 1170 as MacMurrough, successful in Leinster, decided to try for the High Kingship). King Henry II, who early in his reign had been granted a patent by the (English) Pope to straighten out the much-too-independent Irish church, later followed him to keep Strongbow under control (1172; Strongbow had become, in effect, King of Leinster when MacMurrough died, and Henry couldn't have that).
The Normans, by a combination of politics, marriage, and warfare, gradually took over eastern Ireland (see Peter and Fiona Somerset Fry, A History of Ireland, pp. 58-73; Mike Cronin, A History of Ireland, pp. 11-15; Terry Golway, For the Cause of Liberty, p. 11). - RBW
File: Moyl120

If a' Wrocht That's Ta'en in Hand
DESCRIPTION: If a' were wrocht that's ta'en in hand, And a' were peyed that's promised me, I'd gang again the gate I cam', And a better laddie I wad be"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)
If All the Seas Were One Sea

DESCRIPTION: "If all the seas were one sea, What a great sea that would be! If all the trees were one tree.... And if all the men... And if the great man took an axe, And cut down the great tree, And let it fall into the great sea, What a splish-splash that would be!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1842 (Halliwell)

KEYWORDS: sea nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 466, "If all the seas were one sea" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #92 n. 75, p. 92, "(If all the seas were one sea)"
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 31, "If All the Seas Were One Sea" (1 text)
Roud #19775

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "If All the World Were Paper"

NOTES [19 words]: It has been suggested that this is a parody of "ecclesiastical language." It doesn't feel like it to me, though. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.3

File: 002466

If All the World Were Paper

DESCRIPTION: "If all the world were paper, And all the sea were ink, If all the trees were bread and cheese, What should we have to drink?"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1641 (Wit's Recreations)

KEYWORDS: food drink nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 548, "If all the world were paper" (2 text plus many similar texts)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #106, p. 92, "(If all the world was apple-pie)"
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 31, "If All the World Were Paper" (1 text)
Roud #19693

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "If All the Seas Were One Sea"

NOTES [88 words]: This is the first verse of a poem published in Witt's Recreations in 1641, but it seems to have circulated independently. Many see connections with the church, and claim that it goes back to the eleventh or twelfth century. This is most unlikely, however, since paper was not available in England at that time; the only real writing material was parchment. The version "If all the world was apple-pie" apparently originated with Gammer Gurton's Garland, and appears to be an error; why would anyone pair apple pie with ink? - RBW

Last updated in version 3.3

File: 002548

If But One Heart Be True

DESCRIPTION: "There's mony a freen wea' may meet in bright and prosperous days Who when adversity draws near their confidence betrays Yet hopefully and cheerfully our courage we'll renew
If but one heart be true to us, if but one heart be true
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: nonballad friend
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 670, "If But One Heart Be True" (1 text)
Roud #6096
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Hard Up and Broken Down" (theme) and references there
cf. "Buddy, Can You Spare a Dime" (theme)
cf. "Nobody Knows You When You're Down and Out" (theme)
cf. "Up a Tree" (theme)
NOTES [10 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan3 entry. - BS
Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD3670

If Ever I Cease to Love
DESCRIPTION: Singer's true love is perfect: "a modern Taglioni and Sims Reeves rolled into one."
If he stops loving her, may these things happen: "little dogs wag their tails in front," "cows lay eggs and fowls yield milk," "we never have to pay Income Tax..."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1871 (broadside, Bodleian Firth c.21(153))
KEYWORDS: love nonballad parody
FOUND IN:
Roud #V6278
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth c.21(153), "If Ever I Cease to Love" ("In a house, in a square, in a quadrant"), The Poet's Box(Glasgow), 1871; also Firth b.27(343), "If Ever I Cease to Love"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "That the Stones of the Street May Turn Up the Pig's Feet" (subject and some text)
NOTES [177 words]: Broadside Bodleian Firth c.21(153) is the basis for the description. A parody of the "if ever I prove false" theme floating among songs such as "When First Into this Country" and "I Live Not Where I Love." The parody is carried further by a broadside on drinking, to the tune of "If Ever I Cease to Love":
Bodleian, Firth c.16(407)[some lines illegible], "If Ever I Cease to Lush" ("I think its a sin, if ever there was one"), unknown, n.d. [but with a reference to the performers N.C. Bostock and Mark Alberts].

Maria Taglioni (1804-1884) was an Italian ballerina, most famous beginning in 1832; she retired in 1848 (source: "Maria Taglioni" in Columbia Encyclopedia, Sixth Edition, Copyright (c) 2005). She is named as the quintessential dancer in other humorous broadsides; for example, see: NLScotland, L.C.Fol.70(48a), "Newhaven Fishwife"; LOCsinging, sb30394a, "The Obstinate Girl."
John Sims Reeves (1818-1900) was an English opera singer who "made a great sensation" in 1848; he retired in 1891 (source: "John Sims Reeves" at the Wikipedia site). - BS
Last updated in version 5.0
File: BdIEICTL

If Ever You Go to Kilkenny
DESCRIPTION: "If ever you'll go to Kilkenny Enquire for the Hole-in-the-Wall" for free or inexpensive food: the governor comes around with it in the morning. The singer was drunk there last Friday and the governor insisted he strip before entering.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1985 (IRTravellers01)
KEYWORDS: drink food nonballad clothes
FOUND IN: Ireland
Roud #16989
RECORDINGS:
Mary Delaney, "If Ever You Go to Kilkenny" (on IRTravellers01)
NOTES [98 words]: Jim Carroll's notes to IRTravellers01: "'The Hole in the Wall' was, from the middle of the eighteenth century to 1850, one of Ireland's more renowned supper-houses.... There was another 'Hole in the Wall' in Kilkenny ... where, before the existence of the public market, farmers used to sell ... farm produce. It is quite possible that Mary's song refers to this latter location although her text gives the impression that the premises referred to was a prison." The notes also mention the first verse of a song, referring to the supper-house, that is very close to the first verse here. - BS
File: RcIEYGTK

If He'd Be a Buckaroo

DESCRIPTION: "If he'd be a buckaroo by his trade, I'd have him a hondo ready-made... He can scratch my hondo every night, With his ring ting tinny...." Similarly for other occupations: "If he'd be a preacher/sheepherder/sailor by his trade...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (collected from Blaine Stubblefield)
KEYWORDS: work worker love sex
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 249-250, "If He'd Be a Buckaroo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3586
File: LoSi249

If I Call You Mama

DESCRIPTION: When singer calls his lover she won't call back. She brags about her looks ("brick house") and she "hauls" (ashes) for "two high yellows." He asked her for "whisky" got "gasoline." He's going home to New Orleans.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (StuffDreams1)
KEYWORDS: infidelity sex bragging farewell parting drink bawdy nonballad lover
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1919 - The Volstead Act establishes prohibition of "intoxicating liquors" to carry out the 18th amendment to the U.S. Constitution.
1933 - The 21st amendment to the U.S. Constitution ends prohibition.
FOUND IN:
RECORDINGS:
Luke Jordan, "If I Call You Mama" (on StuffDreams1)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Got the Jake Leg Too" (Prohibition alcohol surrogates) and references there
cf. "Clarksdale Moan" (Son House) (Prohibition alcohol surrogates)
cf. "Old Rub Alcohol Blues" (Dock Boggs) (Prohibition alcohol surrogates)
cf. "Canned Heat Blues" (Tommy Johnson) (Prohibition alcohol surrogates)
cf. "Alcohol and Jake Blues" (Tommy Johnson) (Prohibition alcohol surrogates)
NOTES [201 words]: Three line blues: the first line is repeated -- more or less -- and the last line completes the thought.
I assume "gasoline" was slang for poison in 1929 and not the alcoholic drink it is now. Or is this not about drink at all? Tommy Johnson sings "I'd asked (her) for water, (she) give me gasoline" ("Cool Drink of Water Blues" (Victor 21279, 1928)). See the rubbing alcohol (Son House and Dock Boggs), jake and canned heat (Tommy Johnson again) prohibition-time songs for poisonous whisky surrogates. As a market for ethanol, some gasoline-ethanol blends were sold during prohibition, so this may add to the already bitter sarcasm.
On the other hand, if the "gasoline" line started with Tommy Johnson, he claimed "that this song was based on an actual experience. He was walking along a railroad track and met a woman whom he asked for a drink of water. She gave him gasoline instead," and continued telling how the whole recording was based on a set of actual happenings, according to Evans. But, Evans continues, "This makes a nice story but it is almost certainly untrue or highly exaggerated." (David Evans, Big Road Blues (Boston: Da Capo Press, 1987), pp. 134-135). But, "sometimes a cigar...." - BS
Last updated in version 5.2
If I Can't Have You (I Don't Want Nobody Else)
DESCRIPTION: "If my heart beats better times it's all on account of you." "If I can't have you I don't want nobody else." "When I feel bad I'll tell you what I'll do. I won't stay long. I just want to have a little talk with you."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (USChartersHeroes)
KEYWORDS: love nonballad lover
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Henry Townsend, "If I Can't Have You (I Don't Want Nobody Else)" (on USChartersHeroes)
NOTES [18 words]: Three line blues: the first line is repeated -- more or less -- and the last line completes the thought. - BS
Last updated in version 5.2

If I Could Only Hear My Mother Pray Again
DESCRIPTION: "If I could only hear my mother pray again, If I could only hear her tender voice within, 'Twould mean so much to me, How happy I would be, If I could hear...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1966 (Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol1)
KEYWORDS: mother religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol1, pp. 89-90, "If I Could Only Hear My Mother Pray Again" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #7129
RECORDINGS:
Roy Acuff, "If I Could Hear My Mother Pray Again" (Columbia 20684)
McFarland & George Reneau, "If I Could Hear My Mother Pray Again" (Oriole 1000)

If I Die a Railroad Man
DESCRIPTION: "They took John Henry to the steep hillside, He looked to the heaven above, He said, 'Take my hammer and wrap it in gold And give it to the girl I love." "If I die a railroad man, go bury me under the tie So I can hear old Number 4 As she goes rolling by"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)
KEYWORDS: train railroading death nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 362-363, "If I Die a Railroad Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #30223
RECORDINGS:
Green Bailey, "If I Die a Railroad Man" (Gennett 6732/Champion 15652 [as Aaron Boyd]/Supertone 9320 [as Harvey Farr], 1929; rec. 1928; on KMM)
Tenneva Ramblers, "If I Die a Railroad Man" (Victor 21406, 1928)

If I Die in Arkansas
DESCRIPTION: "If I die in Arkansas (x2), Ship my body to my mother-in-law." "If my mother refuses me, ship it to my paw." "If my paw refuses me, ship it to my girl." "If my girl refuses me, shove it in the sea, Where the fishes... make a fuss over me."
AUTHOR: unknown
If I Got My Ticket, Can I Ride?

DESCRIPTION: "Lord, if I got my ticket, can I ride? (x3) Ride away to heaven that morning." The singer says Judgment Day is coming and asks the Lord to tell him if he lacks anything. "Jehovah" will send his angels to clean the world. The gospel train will be on time

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (collected from Jim Boyd and Percy Ridge)
KEYWORDS: religious death nonballad train
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 32-34, "If I Got My Ticket, Can I Ride?" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #15643
File: LoSi032

If I Had a Donkey

DESCRIPTION: "If I had a donkey that wouldn't go, Do you think I'd wallop him? No, no, no…. I'd put him in the barn and give him some corn, The best little donkey that ever was born." Some versions tell of cruelty to animals and Bill Burns getting in trouble for it

AUTHOR: unknown (modified version by Jacob Beuler)
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Henderson-VictorianStreetBallads); the Pitts broadside presumably was existence in the early nineteenth century (Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes); the Beuler version is from 1822
KEYWORDS: animal food warning trial
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
  Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 142, "If I had a donkey that wouldn't go" (2 texts)
  Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #830, p. 309, "(If I had a donkey, and he wouldn't go)"
  Henderson-VictorianStreetBallads, pp. 76-77, "If I had a Donkey Wot Wouldn't Go" (1 text, based on the Beuler version)
ADDITIONAL: Leslie Shepard, _John Pitts, Ballad Printer of Seven Dials, London 1765-1844_, Private Library Association, 1969, p. 121, "If I Had a Donkey WOt Wouldn't Go" (reprint of a Pitts broadside)
Roud #19735
NOTES [62 words]: According to the Opies, this began as a nursery rhyme with only a few lines. Jacob Beuler heard the rhyme, and, acknowledging their use, wrote a song about the effects of the 1822 British "Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act." I have no real evidence that the Beuler text is traditional, but I'm citing it here because everyone seems to cite the two pieces together. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: HenV076

If I Had But a Thousand a Year

DESCRIPTION: Robin Ruff tells Gaffer Green, "If I had but a thousand a year... What a man I would be, And what sights I would see." Green tells him to be calm and determine what he would do. Green reminds him that everyone must die, and he should plan for it

AUTHOR: Henry Russell (source: Heart-Songs)
EARLIEST DATE: 1870 (New-Comic-Songster)
KEYWORDS: nonballad warning money
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
New-Comic-Songster, p. 9, "If I Had But a Thousand a Year" (1 text, 1 tune)
Heart-Songs, pp. 334-335, "Robin Ruff" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #23101

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth b.25(355), "If I Had But a Thousand a Year," E. M. A. Hodges (London), 1846-1854; also Harding B 11(4075), H. Such (London), 1863-1885; also Firth b.27(391)=Harding B 20(14), unknown, n. d.; also Firth c.26(18), "If I Had a Thousand a Year." J O. Bebbington/J. Beaumont (Manchester and Leeds), 1855-1858; also Harding B 11(1693), Ryle and Paul (London), 1838-1859; also Harding B 40(20), J. F. Nugent and Co (Dublin?), 1850-1899; 2806 c.14(4), J. Harkness (Preston), 1840-1866; 2806 c.16"(144)=Harding B 11(1692), J. Cadman (Manchester), 1850-1855

ALTERNATE TITLES:
If I Had a Thousand a Year
File: NCSIIHBT

If I Had It You Could Get It
DESCRIPTION: "I went right down to my old friend Joe," (to ask for money?), but Joe has none to spare. "If I had it, you could get it, But I am very sorry I haven't got it. For I am all in and down and out." The singer says he will hold his money if he ever gets more
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: money poverty hardtimes begging
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 494, "If I Had It You Could Get It" (1 short text)
Roud #11761
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Nobody Knows You When You're Down and Out" (lyrics)
File: Br494

If I Had the Gov'ner
DESCRIPTION: "If I had the gov'ner Where the gov'ner has me, Before daylight I'd set the gov'ner free. I begs you' gov'ner, Upon my soul: If you won't gimme a pardon, Won't you gimme a parole?"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: prisoner request pardon
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 31, (no title) (1 short text)
NOTES [52 words]: Scarborough reports having gotten this from Texas governor Pat Neff, who heard it as the refrain of a song by a prisoner requesting help. I rather doubt this; it looks like a loose fragment of something else -- perhaps "Take This Hammer." But until something more definite emerges, it has to file separately. - RBW
File: ScaNF031

If I Live to Grow Old
DESCRIPTION: "If I lie to grow old... Let this be my fate in a fair country town." "May I govern my passions with absolute sway, And grow wiser and better as my strength wears away." He hopes for a good home, health, a good view, good books, good food, a good death
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1685 (Playford, Theatre of Music, according to Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland)
KEYWORDS: death age nonballad virtue
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
If I Lose, I Don't Care

DESCRIPTION: Floating verses; singer is clearly a rambler, but the song has no cohesion. "I can't walk/Neither can I talk/Just getting back from the state of old New York/One morning, just before day." Chorus: "If I lose, let me lose/I don't care how much I lose."

AUTHOR: credited to Tom Delaney

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (recording, Maggie Jones)

KEYWORDS: rambling gambling nonballad floating verses

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 187, "If I Lose, I Don't Care" (1 text, 1 tune)
Rorrer-RamblingBlues-LifeAndSongsOfCharliePoole, p. 75, "If I Lose, I Don't Care" (1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 284-285, "If I Lose, I Don't Care" (1 text)
DT, IFILOSE*

Roud #12399

RECORDINGS:
Maggie Jones, "If I Lose, Let Me Lose" (Columbia 14059-D, 1925)
J. E. Mainer's Mountaineers, "If I Lose, Let Me Lose" (Bluebird B-7471, 1938)
New Lost City Ramblers, "If I Lose, I Don't Care" (on NLCR05)
Charlie Poole and the North Carolina Ramblers, "If I Lose, I Don't Care" (Columbia 15215-D, 1927; on CPoole02 as "If I Lose, Let Me Lose")

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Battleship of Maine" (tune, floating lyrics)
cf. "Joking Henry" (tune)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
If I Lose, Let Me Lose
Let Me Lose

File: CSW187

If I Was a Fair Maid

DESCRIPTION: "If I was a fair maid... I'd marry a tailor before I'd marry any,... He'd sew, and I'd sew 'n' we'd all sew together." "I'd marry a sailor... we'd all sail...." "I'd marry a shoe-maker... we'd all sew." "I'd marry a carpenter... we'd all chip...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)

KEYWORDS: marriage work nonballad

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 72, "If I Was a Fair Maid" (3 texts)

Roud #16247

File: 0CC072

If I Went Up To a Hill-Top

DESCRIPTION: "If I went up to a hill-top I will go down to Barbaree, Den madame, madame, come an' hol' dat dog I am gwine down to Barbaree." "If you fight me a golden sword I will fight you a silver one, Den madame ...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1921 (Beckwith-Ballad)

KEYWORDS: fight violence travel dog
If I Were a Fisher

DESCRIPTION: Composite of floating material: The singer goes to the garden to pick flowers. He wishes he were a fisher, to catch Molly, a salmon; he wishes he were a scholar. He would build Molly a castle. But he lost her by courting too slow

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Creighton-NovaScotia)

KEYWORDS: love courting rejection flowers bird floatingverses

FOUND IN: Ireland Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H709, p. 348, "If I Were a Fisher"; H24a, pp. 248-349, "The Star of Benbradden" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 46, "Pretty Polly" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #6873

RECORDINGS:
Betty Garland, "Lovin' Nancy" (on BGarland01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Pretty Saro" (floating verses)
cf. "The Cuckoo" (floating verses)
cf. "The Streams of Lovely Nancy" (floating verses)
cf. "The False Bride (The Week Before Easter; I Once Loved a Lass)" (floating verses)
cf. "On Top of Old Smokey" (floating verses)
cf. "As I Walked Out (I) (A New Broom Sweeps Clean)" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Green Grows the Laurel (Green Grow the Lilacs)" (floating lyrics)
cf. "I've Travelled This Country (Last Friday Evening)" (floating lyrics)
cf. "I Once Had a True Love" (floating lyrics)

NOTES [101 words]: Another composite of floating verses; see the cross-references. Sam Henry's earlier text, "The Star of Benbradden," starts with an original verse, but the rest is the same as "If I Were a Fisher." Since they're both composites, I decided to lump them -- and use the "If I Were a Fisher" name as more memorable.

I tossed Betty Garland's "Lovely Nancy" here on the same principle; it's massively composite, in the "Pretty Saro/If I Were a Fisher" mold.

Creighton's single stanza is really just a floating verse, but it's a floating verse often found with this song; this is as good a home for it as any. - RBW

File: HHH709

If I Were a Merry Maid

DESCRIPTION: "If I were a merry maid, Which thank the Lord I'm not, sir, The kind of man I would wed Would be a Number One, sir." The woman describes what she would do were she married to each individual member of an artillery crew

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead)

KEYWORDS: courting sex marriage soldier nonballad
If I Were As Young As I Used to Be (Uncle Joe)

DESCRIPTION: The singer is now (84/92); his black hair has turned gray, and youngsters call him "Uncle Joe." But he still feels young, and promises "If any girl here is in love with me, She'll find me as young as I used to be."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1882
KEYWORDS: age humorous
FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,So,SW)
REFERENCES (7 citations):
- Randolph 434, "Uncle Joe" (1 texts, 1 tune, plus two fragments that might or might not belong with this song)
- Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 337-338, "Uncle Joe" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 434A)
- Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart2 45, "When I Was Young and In My Prime" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 150, "If I Were As Young As I Used to Be" (2 texts, 1 tune)
- Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 179-180, "Uncle Joe" (1 text, 1 tune, missing the initial statement of age but otherwise clearly this)
- Gilbert-LostChords, pp. 7-8, "Not So Young As I Used to Be" (1 text)

DT, UNCLEJOE
Roud #4377
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Seventy-Two Today" (plot)
File: R434

If I Were Back Home in Hampshire

DESCRIPTION: "If I were back 'ome in 'Ampshire, Where they birds do flock round I, I'd clap my 'hands an' laugh like buggery, An' all they birds would fly away." "I wonder where that blackbird be... 'E see I an' I see 'e an' I be after 'e...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973
KEYWORDS: home England bird nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Copper-SongsAndSouthernBreezes, pp. 296-297, "If I were back 'ome in 'Ampshire" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #16931
File: CoSB296

If It Keep On A-Rainin'

DESCRIPTION: "If it keep on a-rainin' Can't make no time. If it keep on a-rainin' I'm goin' to Birmingham."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore)
KEYWORDS: travel work
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 232, "If It Keep On A-Rainin'" (1 short text)
Roud #18176
File: KiWa232I
If This Book Should Chance to Roam

DESCRIPTION: "If this book should chance to roam, Box its ears and send it home."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Henry)

KEYWORDS: nonballad

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 238, (no title) (1 short text)

NOTES [16 words]: This sounds more like a bookplate than a song, but I index it in the absence of better data. - RBW

File: MHAp238C

If Thou Serve a Lord of Price (For Service Is None Heritage)

DESCRIPTION: "Beware, squire, yeoman, and page, For service is no heritage." "If thou serve a lord of price, Be not too boisterous in thine service, Damn not thy soul in no wise." Weather and women and fortune change, so serve God and take heaven as heritage

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1430 (British Library -- Sloane MS. 2593)

KEYWORDS: warning servant MiddleEnglish

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (8 citations):
Sidgwick/Chambers-EarlyEnglishLyrics CIV, p. 185, "(no title)" (1 text)
Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols, #381, p. 255, "(If thou serve a lord of prys)" (2 texts)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #1433
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #2407

MANUSCRIPT: {MSSloane2593}, London, British Library, MS. Sloane 2593, folio 8

NOTES [339 words]: The attestation of this song by itself would not justify its inclusion in the Index; it is found in only one manuscript, although that one manuscript, British Library MS. Sloane 2593, is exceptionally important. However, Sidgwick/Chambers-EarlyEnglishLyrics point out that three other poems or songs use the refrain "För servys ys none erytage" ("For service is no heritage"), and it is quoted by Shakespeare as a proverb in "All's Well that Ends Well," I.iii.26. Greene-Selection calls it "one of the commonest and longest-lived of medieval proverbs," known even to Sir Walter Scott. He mentions a use in Hoccleve's _The Regiment of Princes_, line 841.
Greene also notes that the first lines of the second stanza are similar to a proverb recorded by John Ray in 1678, "Winter-weather and women's thoughts change oft."
Thus there is some sort of tradition between the line, at least. Since Sloane is the folkiest of the sources, I've indexed its text that uses the line.
The Shakespeare passage, as given in the Riverside Shakespeare, is spoken by Lavatch the clown, in conversation with the Countess and Rinaldo the Steward: "In Isbel's case and mine own. Service is no heritage, and I think I shall never have the blessing of God till I have issue a' my body, for they say barnes [bairns, children] are blessings."
The Hoccleve passage, as given on p. 63 of Thomas Hoccleve _The Regiment of Princes_, edited by Charles R. Blyth, TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 1999, is "Service, I woot wel, is noon heritage;
When I am out of court anothir day,
As I moot whan upon me hastith age,
ANd that no lenger I laboure may,
Upon my poore cote [glossed as "cottage," not "coat"], it is no nay [it can't be denied],
I moot me draw [withdraw] and my fortune abyde,
And suffre storm after the mery tyde.... [etc. The passage also warns of the loss of friendship.]
For more on manuscript Sloane 2593, see the notes to "Robyn and Gandeleyn" [Child 115]. - RBW
If You Can Love Me

DESCRIPTION: "If you can love me, why not love me, While you have so many in Tennessee! By this you may be led, To think of me when I am dead."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Henry, from Mary King)

KEYWORDS: love

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 232, (first of several "Fragments from Tennessee") (1 fragment)

NOTES [23 words]: Although the first line of this sounds "Green Grow the Lilacs"-ish, the form implies that it's something different. Don't ask me what. - RBW

File: MHAp232A

If You Don't Believe I'm Sinking

DESCRIPTION: "If you don't believe I'm sinking, just look what a hole I'm in. If you don't believe I love you, just look what a fool I've been. You made me love you and now your man have come, I'll see you later when I've got my gun."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1919 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: love fight

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 447, "If You Don't Believe I'm Sinking" (2 fragments)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 447, "If You Don't Believe I'm Sinking" (2 tunes plus text excerpts)

Roud #11783

File: Br3447

If You Don't Want Me

DESCRIPTION: "If you don't want me, baby, Got to have me anyhow." The singer asks his woman what she has in mind and tells her "you can't quit me"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1963 (MJHurt04)

KEYWORDS: courting nonballad lover

FOUND IN:

RECORDINGS:
Mississippi John Hurt, "If You Don't Want Me" (on MJHurt04; MJHurt05)

File: RcIYDwaM

If You Get There Before I Do

DESCRIPTION: "If you get there before I do, all right, all right, Jesus will make it all right. Just tell them that I am coming too, all right, all right. If you get there before I do, all right, Just scratch a hole and pull me through, all right, all right."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1919 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Jesus

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 531, "If You Get There Before I Do" (1 fragment)
If You Have the Toothache

DESCRIPTION: "If you have the toothache, And greetin' with the pain," the answer is not sweets, which cannot help. Instead, take a mouthful of water and castor oil "And put your arse upon the fire, Till it begins to boil."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 2006 (Stewart/Belle-Stewart-QueenAmangTheHeather)
KEYWORDS: disease humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stewart/Belle-Stewart-QueenAmangTheHeather, p. 60, "(If You Have the Toothache)" (1 short text)
Roud #1496?
NOTES [44 words]: This is probably a Stewart Family composition, but Helen Creighton collected a song with the same title from Angelo Dornan of New Brunswick. They're probably different songs, but in the absence of more information, I have held off listing an author for this. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.8
File: SteQu061

If You Love God, Serve Him

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "If you love God, serve Him, Hallelujah! (Praise ye the Lord/Love and serve the Lord)" (2x). "Come, go to glory with me (Praise .../Love ...)"(2x). Verses: The singer was a sinner "on the road to hell" but the Father and Son redeemed his soul.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1874 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, pp. 8-9, "If You Love God, Serve Him (Love an' Serve de Lord)" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 178 in the 1874 edition)
Roud #15262
File: Dett008

If You Love Me Like I Love You

DESCRIPTION: "If you love me like I love you, No knife can cut our love in two."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1971 (Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore)
KEYWORDS: love
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, p. 122, "(If you love me like I love you)" (1 text)
Roud #21828
File: SaKo122A

If You Love Me, Pop and Fly

DESCRIPTION: "If you love me, pop and fly, If you hate me, lie and die." (Or "If he hates me...., etc.) Said to be used as a form of divination when a chestnut is placed in a fire.

AUTHOR: unknown
If You Meet a Woman in the Morning

DESCRIPTION: "If you meet a woman in the morning, Bow yo' head, buddy, bow yo' head." "When you hear that turkle-dove a-hollerin', Sign it's gwi' rain, buddy, sign it's gwi' rain." Other bird calls indicate other times: Whip-poor-will planting, screech owls cold

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1921 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: bird
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 446, "If You Meet a Woman in the Morning" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 446, "If You Meet a Woman in the Morning" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #11792
CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "Swannanoa Tunnel" (form, lyrics)
NOTES [25 words]: The notes in Brown suggest a link to "Swannanoa Tunnel." The form is obviously the same. But this, at the very least, is used for other purposes. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Br3446

If You See My Mother

DESCRIPTION: "If you see my mother, partner, tell her pray for me, I got life on the river...." "They 'cuse me o' murder, Never harmed a man." The singer bemoans the hard work on the prison, and asks a dead man to lighten his burden

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (recorded from Mack Maze by Jackson)
KEYWORDS: homicide accusation lie prison hardtimes mother floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 79-80, "If You See My Mother" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #18889
NOTES [31 words]: Almost every word of this has a parallel in other songs (so many and so various that it seems hopeless even to try to cross-reference them all), but the combination seems to be unique. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: JDM079

If You Sneeze on Monday

DESCRIPTION: "(If you) sneeze on Monday, (you) sneeze for danger, Sneeze on Tuesday, kiss a stranger, Sneeze on Wednesday, sneeze for a letter... Sneeze on a Sunday, your safety seek, Or the devil will take you for the rest of the week."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1844 (Halliwell)
KEYWORDS: nonballad Devil warning
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North)) US(MW)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #536, p. 219, "(If you sneeze on Monday, you sneeze for danger)"
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 47, "Sneeze on Monday" (1 text)
Welsch-NebraskaPioneerLore, p. 269, "(no title)" (1 text, very different ("Sneeze on Monday, sneeze for news, Sneeze on Tuesday, new pair of shoes"), but obviously built about the same notion); p. 276, "(no title)" (1 text, again very different: "Sneeze on Monday for health, Tuesday for wealth....")
Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, pp. 86-87, "(Sneeze on Monday, sneeze for danger)" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Marjorie Rowling, _The Folklore of the Lake District_, Rowman and Littlefield, 1976, p. 132, "(Sneeze on Monday, sneeze for danger)" (1 text)
Roud #16325
File: Dolb047B

If You Want a Bargain Handy
DESCRIPTION: Honest Sandy is the man to see for a bargain.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: commerce nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1649, "If You Want a Bargain Handy" (1 short text)
Roud #13053
NOTES [17 words]: From the sound of this, there were used car salesmen even before there were used cars to sell.... - RBW
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD81649

If You Were The Only Girl in the World
DESCRIPTION: "If you were the only girl in the world, And I was the only boy, Nothing else would matter in the world today, We would go on loving the same old way, A Garden of Eden made just for two With nothing to mar our joy... If you were the only...."
AUTHOR: Words: Clifford Grey / Music: Nat D. Ayer
EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (musical revue "The Bing Boys Are Here," according to Wikipedia)
KEYWORDS: love courting nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, pp. 216-217, "(If You Were the Only Girl in the World)" (1 text)
Roud #25963
File: BrPa216C

If You'll Only Let Liquor Alone
DESCRIPTION: The singer reminds her husband that he promised when they married "that you would leave liquor alone." Nevertheless, he breaks his vows "to your kind wife and baby at home."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1963 (Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick)
KEYWORDS: promise drink baby husband wife betrayal lie marriage
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick, pp. 90-92, "If You'll Only Let Liquor Alone" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1951
File: IvNB90
If Your Gal Gets Mad
DESCRIPTION: "Ef yore gal gits mad an' tries to bully you (x2), Jes' take your automatic an' shoot her through an' through! (x2)"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: courting rejection homicide
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 275, (no title) (1 short text)
NOTES [43 words]: Needless to say, this method has not been shown to cause women to be come more amenable to men's wishes.
I suspect this may be the ending of a longer ballad in which the woman provokes the man until he shoots her, but I cannot recall seeing such a song. - RBW
File: ScNF275A

Ijzere Man, The (The Iron Man)
DESCRIPTION: Dutch. Capstan shanty. "In Hellevoetsluis daar staat een huis." There is a house in Hellevoetsluis where one can find Mr. Baggerman's daughters, whom he abuses. One escapes to church; the singer tells of the responses. The ship sails for America
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1977 (Hugill-SongsOfTheSea)
KEYWORDS: shanty foreignlanguage abuse children
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 96-97, "De Ijzere Man" (2 texts, Dutch & English, 1 tune)
File: HSoSe096

Ik Kwam Last Over Een Berg
DESCRIPTION: Capstan shanty. Dutch. "Ik kwam lest over een berg gegangen." The singer would like to... would like to... would like to drink" (the key word is given only in the final repetition). He drinks, is stripped, beds the landlord's daughter, gets paid off
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1977 (Hugill-SongsOfTheSea)
KEYWORDS: shanty foreignlanguage drink money sex
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 172-173, "Ik Kwam Last Over Een Berg" (2 texts, Dutch & English, 1 tune)
NOTES [4 words]: In your dreams, sailor. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: HSoSe172

Ike Brown's Song
DESCRIPTION: "There is a few songsters, Their like could not be found, Who have been making a song Upon old Isaac C. Brown." The singer tells "how I tended my crops." He leaves home to dredge the big canal." He describes other canal workers
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Chappell)
KEYWORDS: work hardtimes farming canal
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 118, "Ike Brown's Song" (1 text)
ST ChFRA118 (Partial)
Roud #16942
NOTES [35 words]: As it stands, the song in Chappell is singularly incoherent; at first glance, it
Il Faut Aller en Guerre (To War We Must Go)
DESCRIPTION: French. "We must go to war / Drink, then we'll go.". Soldier, leaving for war, visits his sweetheart. He finds her weeping; he asks why she is weeping, and she tells him it's because he's leaving. He tells her it's true. "We must drink, and then go."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage grief love war parting drink lover soldier
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes, p. 70, "Il faut aller en guerre (To War We Must Go)" (1 text + translation, 1 tune)
SAME TUNE:
For all its potential tragedy, this sounds more like a drinking song. - PJS
File: BerV070

Il Faut Voir Que Je Me Sauvais (So I Ran Away)
DESCRIPTION: French. A reaper says "Quelle chaleur!" The singer thinks it said "Here is the robber." He runs. A mill says "Tri que traque." He thinks it said "Catch him." He runs. A priest says "Dominus vobiscum." The singer thinks he said "Here he is." He runs
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage humorous wordplay
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peacock, pp. 62-63, "Il Faut Voir Que Je Me Sauvais" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: Pea062

Ilka Blade o' Grass Keps Its Ain Drap o' Dew
DESCRIPTION: "What is't that gars ye hang your heid and quit the cheery sun?" The depressed listener is urged to cheer up; troubles are certain but can be overcome, and there is a place for everything: "Ilka blade o' grass keps its ain drap o' dew."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Ord-BothySongsAndBallads)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 385, "Ilka Blade o' Grass Keps Its Ain Drap o' Dew" (1 text)
Roud #5612
BROADSIDES:
NLScotland, R.B.m.143(128), "Ilka Blade o' Grass Keps Its Ain Drap o' Dew," Poet's Box (Dundee), c. 1890
File: Ord385

III Fares the Family
DESCRIPTION: "A Woman's Rule should ... Only ... guide her household ... So long as ... Husband lasts or Reason. Ill fares the hapless family that shows A Cock that's silent, and a Hen that crows." What's worse: "Obedient Husbands, or commanding Wives"?
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1671 (Ebsworth)
KEYWORDS: shrewishness marriage husband wife
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
Ill-Fated Vernon, The

DESCRIPTION: "All you true-feeling Christians, I hope you will draw near, And hear my doleful story...." The Vernon, with six men aboard, sailed on October 25. A storm blew up (on Lake Michigan). The Vernon sank with 25 passengers. Other ships refused to help out.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (collected from John W. Green by Walton; supposedly composed 1887/1888)

KEYWORDS: ship disaster death

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
October 1867 - the Vernon Wreck

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 176-177, "The Ill-Fated Vernon" (1 text plus mention of 1 more)

Roud #19833

NOTES [283 words]: Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors give only a brief account of this disaster, though they mention that it cost the lives of six men from Beaver Island. Benjamin J. Shelak, Shipwrecks of Lake Michigan, Trails Books, 2003, pp. 61-62, adds a number of details. The ship was new (about a year old), but though Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors say she was considered entirely seaworthy, she was said to have had high upperworks which, combined with her narrow beam, made her hard to handle in rough weather (she was 177 feet long, had a 26 foot beam, and was 18 feet deep).

Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors and Shelak disagree about the date of the wreck; the former says October 25, 1887; the latter, October 28. Vernon says it had made a trip from Chicago to Cheboygan, Michigan, and was on its way back. The ship was in trouble by the time it passed Two Rivers, Wisconsin. Reportedly the boat was overloaded. The number of people on board is unknown, but Shelak says it was between 36 and 41. At least some of the passengers and crew went into the water, but though other ships passed through the area and saw wreckage, none attempted to help. As a result, only one man -- a crewmember named Axel Stone -- survived; he was picked up two days after the sinking. Stone claimed to have told the captain that the ship was taking on water and suggested dropping cargo -- and was told off for it. The ship survived for some time after that, but went down around 3:00 a.m.

Stone reported that several ships came so close that he could make out the faces of those aboard, but they did nothing. Hence, presumably, the bitterness of this song. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: WGM176

Immigration

DESCRIPTION: "Now Jordan's land of promise is the burden of my song, Perhaps you've heard him lecture and blow about it strong." But the singer warns that it is a land of bad food, hard work, vermin, and thirst. He warns people not to come
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Paterson's _Old Bush Songs_)
KEYWORDS: Australia emigration warning food animal
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
NOTES [39 words]: According to Patterson/Fahey/Seal, Mr. Jordan lectured in England in the 1860s about the benefits of Australian living. This song is the answer of someone who has been there. There is little evidence that it has gone into tradition. - RBW
File: PFS109

Immigration Song

DESCRIPTION: "Come all ye sons of labor who wish to change your lot, Who've spunk enough to travel beyond your native cot." Listeners are urged to leave the cities and head for Kansas, where soil is good: "Come with us and settle in peerless Lane County."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (Lane County Farmer, according to Cohen)
KEYWORDS: home travel emigration
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
   *Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, p. 504, "Immigration Song" (1 text)
File: CAFS504A

Immortal Washington

DESCRIPTION: "Columbia's greatest glory Was her loved chief, fair Freedom's friend." Listeners are urged to respect and praise the (recently deceased?) Washington, and God is asked to "Receive into thy bosom Our virtuous hero -- Washington"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1836 (The American Songster)
KEYWORDS: patriotic death nonballad recitation
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
   1732-1799 - Life of George Washington
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
   *Cox-FolkSongsSouth 59, "Immortal Washington" (2 texts, though only the first is from tradition)
   Roud #5465

NOTES [86 words]: Almost makes you forget, in your nausea at such saccharine stuff, that Washington was a slaveowner who lost more battles than he won in his career.
I've tagged this with the "recitation" keyword because the only traditional text seems to be the badly garbled version in Cox. Even this is from manuscript, but certainly from memory (it contains too many senseless errors to be taken from print). There is no indication that it ever possessed a tune (it is hard to imagine a tune to this metrical pattern anyway). - RBW
File: JHCox059

Imph-m

DESCRIPTION: In his youth the singer would defiantly say "Imph-m,": "ower dour to say Aye!"
Later, he stole a kiss from Jean when she shook her head "no" but said "imph-m." Now his children taunt him the same way "sae I've gi'en ower the 'Imph-m', it's no a nice word"

AUTHOR: James Nicholson (1822-1897) (source: Ford)
EARLIEST DATE: 1863 (Nicholson)
KEYWORDS: courting children humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
   *Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #170, pp. 1-2, "Im-Hm" (1 text)
   ADDITIONAL: Robert Ford, editor, Vagabond Songs and Ballads of Scotland [second series]
In a Boxcar Around the World

DESCRIPTION: "I'm the man that rode the boxcar around the world, boys, it's a pleasure to me." The singer tells of travelling around the world a dozen times by train. He asks, when he dies, to be left aboard the train and allowed to "ride forevermore."

AUTHOR: Cliff Carlisle
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (recording and copyright by Cliff Carlisle)
KEYWORDS: train rambling death nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 397-399, "In a Boxcar Around the World" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Cliff Carlisle, "In a Box Car around the World" (Bluebird B-6438, 1936)
File: LSRai1397

In a Fine Castle

DESCRIPTION: "In a fine castle Have you seen x?" "We are the prettiest." "We want one of you." "Which one do you want?" "We want y." "[Now] we want one of you." "We'll give you z." "He's too ugly." "We'll give you so-and-so" "That will do." "Bye bye"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
KEYWORDS: dialog playparty
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 100, "In a Fine Castle" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: OpGa100

In a Handy Four-Master

DESCRIPTION: "In a handy four-master I once took a trip, Hooray boys, heave 'er down, An' I though that I was aboard a good ship, Way down, laddies down." The sailor finds she is a "workhouse." Sailors are worked hard and the food is bad. He will not sail her again

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (collected by Walton from Henry Ericksen)
KEYWORDS: ship hardtimes
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 71-72, "In a Handy Four-Master" (1 text)
Roud #19891
File: WGM071

In a Little Village Churchyard

DESCRIPTION: "In the dear old village churchyard, I can see a mossy mound, Where my mother she is sleeping, In the cold and silent ground." He recalls the sad night his mother died, and her last words. He has no one to love him now that mother lies beneath the willow

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1974 (Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills)
KEYWORDS: love mother death burial
In Arthur's Court Tom Thumb Did Live

DESCRIPTION: "In Arthur's court Tom Thumb did live, a man of mickle might"; born when his father asked help of Merlin. His small size causes him many adventures. He sickens, and is too small for the doctor to treat. Arthur and his knights mourn him

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1630 (edition printed by John Wright, according to Ritson)

KEYWORDS: childbirth magic disease death doctor

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Roud #21162

NOTES [43 words]: Although Ritson thinks this older than the 1630 text (probably rewritten by an Elizabethan), I see little evidence of older wording, and I know of no evidence that it's genuinely traditional. I'm putting it in the Index mostly because Steve Roud indexed it. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: JRIACTT

In Bethlehem, that Fair City

DESCRIPTION: "In Bethlehem, in that fair city, A child was born of our Lady, Lord and prince that he should be." Many children were slain by Herod. Jesus shone even in Mary's body. "To bli God bring us all and some, Christe redemptor omnium."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1537 (Richard Hill MS., Balliol Coll. Oxf. 354, folio 165b)

KEYWORDS: religious childbirth death MiddleEnglish

FOUND IN: Britain(England)

REFERENCES (14 citations):
Dearmer/VaughnWilliams/Shaw-OxfordBookOfCarols 120, "In Bethehem, That Fair City (1 text, 1 tune, very much modified)
Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols, #21, pp. 14-16, "(no title)" (4 texts)
Rickert-AncientEnglishChristmasCarols, pp. 50, 183-184, "To bliss God bring us all and some" (2 texts)
Sidgwick/Chambers-EarlyEnglishLyrics LXXIV, p. 138, "(no title)" (1 text)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #1471
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #2481

ADDITIONAL: Roman Dyboski, _Songs, Carols, and Other Miscellaneous Poems from the Balliol Ms. 354, Richard Hill's Commonplace Book_. Kegan Paul, 1907 (there are now multiple print-on-demand reprints), #22, p. 12 "To Blys God Bryng us all & sum" (1 text)

Richard Greene, editor, _A Selection of English Carols_. Clarendon Medieval and Tudor Series, Oxford/Clarendon Press, 1962, #8, p. 61, "(To blis God bryng us all and su)" (1 text)

MANUSCRIPT: {MSRichardHill}, The Richard Hill Manuscript, Oxford, Balliol College MS. 354, folio 222

MANUSCRIPT: {MSEngPoetE1}, Oxford, Bodleian Library, MS. Eng. Poet. e.1 (Bodley 29734), folio 35

MANUSCRIPT: {MSCamTrinityO.3.58}, Cambridge, Trinity College MS. O.3.58, folio 1

MANUSCRIPT: Cambridge, University Library MS. Ee.1.12 [The James Ryman manuscript, 1492], folio 35

MANUSCRIPT: London, British Library, MS. Additional 31042 [the London Thornton Manuscript], folio 94 (a 1-verse fragment, probably this)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Coventry Carol" (subject of the Massacre of the Innocents) and references there
NOTES [446 words]: The Massacre of the Innocents, briefly alluded to here, is the subject of Matthew 2:1-18; for more background, see the notes to "The Innocents."

According to the notes in Greene, p. 357, "Of all the figures of speech which the Middle Ages applied to the Virgin Mary none is more prominent in the carols than the simile which likens the action of the Holy Spirit in causing her to conceive to the sun's shining on a glass, which penetrates it without injuring" -- a comparison going back to Augustine of Hippo.

There is no proof that this piece is traditional, but there is good evidence that it was at least somewhat popular. The first is its inclusion in the Hill manuscript, which includes some folk pieces, and in Bodleian MS. Eng. poet e.1, which is thought to date from the fifteenth century and includes many popular pieces. And there are two other manuscript copies, Cambridge University MS. Ee.1.12 and Cambridge, Trinity College MS. O.3.58 (1230) -- the latter two having music, though apparently not the tune used by the Oxford Book of Carols. So this is definitely a song, not a poem, and there is fair reason to think it went into oral tradition.

Chambers, p. 96, has this to say of Cambridge MS. Ee.1.12: it is associated with "James Ryman, a Franciscan, whose house is unknown. Most of the manuscript is written by a scribe, and apparently corrected bythe author. Then comes a colophon, dated in 1492, 'Explicit liber ympnorum et canticorum, quem composit frater Iacobus Ryman ordinis minorum'. The rest may be in Ryman's own hand.... In all, the collection contains 166 English and Latin items, of which 119 are English carols. As Dr. Greene points out, these amount to a quarter of the total number of carols surviving from dates up to 1550."

Chambers adds on p. 97 that Ryman's work is pedestrian and littered with favorite phrases: "he repeats himself indefinitely."

But very little of James (or Jacob) Ryman's work gives any hint of being traditional, or indeed of having circulated outside his one manuscript. Which raises the question of whether this is by Ryman. Greene doubted it; so do I, given that Bodleian MS. Eng. poet e.1 very possibly precedes his earliest activity; even the Hill manuscript is only slightly later. Note that this is on folio 1 of the Ryman manuscript; it looks like an older outside carol slipped into his volume. Chambers, p. 97, admits the possibility, while pointing out that "it contains one of Ryman's favourite phrases." But this might be why it was slipped into the Ryman corpus!

For more about the famous anthology Bodleian MS. Eng. Poet. e.1 (Bodleian 29734), see the notes to "The Golden Carol (The Three Kings)." - RBW

Bibliography

- Chambers: E. K. Chambers, English Literature at the Close of the Middle Ages, Oxford, 1945, 1947

Last updated in version 5.3
File: MSIBitFC

In Bohemia Hall

DESCRIPTION: "In Bohemia Hall, in Bohemia Hall, Where ev'ry man is king, In Bohemia Hall, in Bohemia Hall, We'll laugh, we'll drink, we'll sing, With a big stein on the table, we'll drink while we are able, And we don't give a damn for any old man In Bohemia Hall"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions)
KEYWORDS: drink nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 220-221, "In Bohemia Hall" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #9550
File: SBar220
In Bohunkus, Tennessee
DESCRIPTION: The singer's father was responsible for cleaning up horse refuse in the streets of (Bohunkus). In the process, he once found "diamond(s) in the dung," which allowed the singer to pledge to the Beta (Theta Pi) fraternity
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (Cray-EroticMuse)
KEYWORDS: scatological
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 354-356, "In Bohunkus, Tennessee" (4 texts, 1 tune; the "D" text is not obviously related to the other three)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Tramp! Tramp! Tramp!" (tune) and references there
File: EM354

In Bright Mansions Above
DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "In bright mansions above (x2), Lord I want to live up yonder, In bright mansions above." Verse: "My mother's (father's, sister's, Saviour's) gone to glory, I want to go there too, Lord, I want to live up yonder, In bright mansions above."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, pp. 42-43, "In Bright Mansions Above" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 124 in the 1901 edition)
Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro, p. 62, "In Bright Mansions Above" (1 text)
Roud #12074
NOTES [26 words]: Probably an allusion to John 14:2, "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you." - RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File: Dett042

In Camden Town
DESCRIPTION: William seduces Polly. She becomes pregnant and asks that he marry her. He sends her home to her parents. "I'll not go home to my parents For to bring them to disgrace But I will go and drown myself Down in some secret place." He says he'll die with her.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: seduction rejection pregnancy suicide drowning
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar) Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan6 1155, "The Collier Lad" (4 texts)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 53, "In Camden Town" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Bk 4, "False Hearted William" (1 text)
Roud #1414
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Collier's Sweetheart
File: CrSNB053

In Contempt
DESCRIPTION: "Build high, build wide your prison wall, That there may be room enough for all Who hold you in contempt." The song asks how the wardens can imprison people for their consciences, and says they can never lock up all who dissent
In Cortachy Cottage

DESCRIPTION: "In Cortachy cottage there lives a young lassie, A lassie that I like wondrous fine"; she is beautiful and the singer wishes she were his. The singer first saw her by the Esk as the birds sang.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1873 (Harris manuscript)
KEYWORDS: love courting river
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lyle/McAlpine/McLucas-SongRepertoireOfAmeliaAndJaneHarris, p. 159, "In Cortachy Cottage" (1 short text)
Roud #18047
NOTES [25 words]: The current description is based on the Harris fragment. The piece is short enough that it could be a modified version of any number of other songs. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: HLMM159

In Cupid's Court

DESCRIPTION: Fishing, the singer meets a maid. She asks if he is a stranger "brought up in Cupid's court ... an angler ... Or was it Cupid sent you here Young virgins to ensnare?" He asks her to marry, she agrees. "Instead of catching salmon He caught a prudent wife"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs)
KEYWORDS: courting marriage fishing love beauty wife
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar,Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 52, "In Cupid's Court" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2731
RECORDINGS:
Mrs. Bulger, "Trout and Salmon" (on MUNFLA-Leach)(note: continued over two cuts)
Grace Clergy, "In Cupid's Court" (on MRHCreighton)
NOTES [11 words]: Not to be confused with "Cupid's Garden" or variants thereon. - PJS
Last updated in version 4.4
File: CrMa052

In Days When We Went Gypsying

DESCRIPTION: "In days when we went gypsying A long time ago, The lads and lasses in their best Were dressed from head to toe." The singer looks back on the gay times of his early life. (He wishes he were back under the old oak tree.)

AUTHOR: Edwin Ransford (1805-1876) (source: Bodleian note to broadside Harding B 11(808))
EARLIEST DATE: 1847 (Journal of William Histed of the Cortes)
KEYWORDS: home travel nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 69, "In the Days We Went a-Gipsying" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 402)
In de Vinter Time
DESCRIPTION: "In de vinter, in de vinter-time, Ven de vin' blows on de window-pane, An' de vimmen, in de vaud'vil, Ride de veloc'pede in de vestibule, Ah, vimmins! Ah, mens!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)
KEYWORDS: nonsense
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 334, "In de Vinter Time" (1 short text, 1 tune)
DT, VINTIME
File: San334

In Defense of Polygamy
DESCRIPTION: "There's a lot of whisky bloats polluting our fair land, And they're here to see their country's laws enforced. Their pious hearts are filled with grief to see the Mormons sin"; they'll do what it takes to end polygamy, including separating men and women
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah)
KEYWORDS: husband wife separation humorous
FOUND IN: US(Ro)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #246, "Governor Zane" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10835
File: Hubb246

In Doots
DESCRIPTION: "The snaw has been fa' in the hale day lang." The singer doubts her lover will come tonight. Her father, mother and sister say he won't come. The collie hears him at the door. "I micht weel hae kent he wad be here the nicht"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: love storm nightvisit family
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan4 797, "In Doots" (1 text)
Roud #6202
NOTES [82 words]: This is not the usual night visit song. The visitor, says mother, would not trudge "thro' drift for a kiss or twa," but the family seems well disposed toward the singer's "laddie." The difference is illustrated by a comparison with "This Is the Nicht My Johnnie Set"; in that song the waiting singer curses the collie for making noise when her lover "softly slips the ha' door"; here, "look at aul' collie, he's aff to the door His towsie tail waggin' a welcome kin": no softly slipping here. - BS
In Duckworth Street There Lived a Dame

DESCRIPTION: The singer courts an ugly woman on Duckworth Street. One night "I found her faithless she Fryin' sausages fer he." When he tells her "we must part ... With a fryin' pan she broke my head."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: infidelity sex bawdy humorous wordplay lover
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peacock, p. 287, "In Duckworth Street There Lived a Dame" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9969
RECORDINGS:
Howard Morry, "In Duckworth Street There Lived a Dame" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "A Rich Old Miser" [Laws Q7] (theme of being hit over the head with cookware)
cf. "A Week's Matrimony (A Week's Work)" (imagery)
cf. "Charming Sally Ann" (imagery)
NOTES [46 words]: If "sometimes a cigar is just a cigar" maybe there is no double entendre here about frying sausages. On the contrary, this seems a song in which the writer let the metaphor get away. Peacock points out that Duckworth Street is one of the main commercial streets in St John's.

-In-
BS

In Eighteen Hundred and Sixty

DESCRIPTION: "In eighteen hundred and sixty I used to go to see A pretty little gal in Georgy, How dearly she loved me, She wanted me to marry, Soon as the war was over, She said we'd live together Like chickens in the clover, Tr la la la la..."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: playparty courting
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Randolph 530, "In Eighteen Hundred and Sixty" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty, pp. 114-115, "In Eighteen Hundred and Sixty" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #6616

In Eighteen-Forty-Nine

DESCRIPTION: "When I came to this country in 1849, I saw many a true love, but I never saw mine... I am a poor soldier and a long way from home." Floating verses of longing: "Farewell to my old father" "If... I could write a fine hand" "I wish I were a lark"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: love separation courting family rambling floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Randolph 745, "In Eighteen-Forty-Nine" (2 texts, 2 tune)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 48, pp. 164-165, "Pretty Saro" (1 text, beginning with stanzas from "In Eighteen-Forty-Nine" and ending with "Pretty Saro," plus mention of 1 more text)
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 9, "Pretty Saro" (2 fragments, 2 tunes; the first text is solely this; the second begins with the first verse of "In Eighteen-Forty-Nine" and continues with a verse of "Pretty
In einem kiehlen Grunde (In Yonder Lovely Valley)

DESCRIPTION: German. "In einem kiehlen Grunde, Do schteht ein Miehlenrad. "A mill stands in the valley, where the singer's love lived. She gave him a ring; now her vow and the ring are broken. He wishes he were a minstrel, to sing his sorrows, or a knight, to fight

AUTHOR: Joseph von Eichendorff and Friedrich Gluck (source: Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends)

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends); reportedly composed 1814

KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage love abandonment ring

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, pp. 118-120, "In einem kiehlen Grunde (In Yonder Lovely Valley)" (1 German text plus poetic translation, 1 tune)

File: KPL118

In Former Times

DESCRIPTION: Now we drink swipes instead of good ale. Farmer's daughters used to spin but now "their fingers they're afraid to soil"; they play the piano instead of mop or broom. Farmer's used to ride a horse to the market or fair, but now it's to fox-hunting.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames)

KEYWORDS: vanity farming hunting drink nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 139, "In Former Times" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 358)

Roud #1262

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Good Old Days of Adam and Eve" (theme) and references there
NOTES [24 words]: "swipes ... Brit: poor, thin, or spoiled beer" (source: Webster's Third New International Dictionary of the English Language Unabridged, 1976) - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: WT139
In Frisco Bay (A Long Time Ago; Noah's Ark Shanty)

DESCRIPTION: Pulling shanty. "In Frisco Bay there lay three ships, To my way-ay-ay-o. And one of those ships was Noah's Old Ark, A long time ago." Up to 30 verses describing the ship, the animals and the conditions on the ark.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys)

KEYWORDS: shanty ship animal

FOUND IN: Britain US

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, LIV, p. 59, "In Frisco Bay" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 66-67, "A Long Time Ago" (fragments quoted from Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys)
- Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 99-100, "A Long Time Ago" (1 text, version "C" of "A Long Time Ago") [AbEd, pp. 90-91]
- DT, NOAHARK

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "A Long Time Ago" (partial chorus)
- cf. "Old Uncle Noah" (subject) and references there

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- The Frisco Ship

NOTES [22 words]: Sometimes listed as a variant of "A Long Time Ago," but this has a distinct and (for a shanty) an unusually coherent story line. - SL

Last updated in version 3.5

File: Hugi099

---

In Good Old Colony Times

DESCRIPTION: Three rogues (king's sons? miller, weaver, and tailor?) "fell into mishaps / because they could not sing." Eventually they turn to robbery. "The miller drowned in his dam / the weaver was hung in his yarn, and the devil clapped his claws on the tailor..."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1804 (broadside, Bodleian Johnson Ballads fol. 84)

KEYWORDS: robbery punishment death

FOUND IN: Britain(England(All),Scotland(Aber)) US(Ap,MA,MW,NE,Ro,SE,So)

REFERENCES (32 citations):
- Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 268-269, "The Three Rogues" (3 texts)
- Randolph 112, "In the Good Old Colony Times" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 80, "The Three Rogues" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois, pp. 189-190, "In the Good Old Colony Days" (1 text)
- Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, pp. 171-172, "The Three Rogues" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 108, "The Old King and His Three Sons" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, "Three Roguish Chaps" (1 text)
- Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 307, "Three Scamping Rogues" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, pp. 20-21, "King Arthur" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 194, "When Arthur Ruled This Land" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 384)
- Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #31, "Good King Arthur" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #113, "Three Sons of Rogues" (2 texts, 1 tune, although the second text is short and could be something else)
- Greig/Duncan3 704, "Oh the Miller He Stole Corn" (5 texts, 4 tunes)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 188, "The Three Rogues" (1 text plus 2 excerpts and mention of 1 more)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 188, "The Three Rogues" (2 excerpts, 2 tunes)
- Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 63, "In Good Old Colony Times" (1 text, 1 tune) tune)
Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart1 14, "Three Roguish Chaps" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 1, "In Good Old Colony Times" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 116, pp. 234-235, "In Good Old Colony Times" (1 text)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 166, "The Three Rogues" (1 text plus mention of 1 more)
Bush-FSoCentralWestVirginiaVol3, pp. 7-9, "The County of Kerry" (1 text, 1 tune)
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, p. 44, "Three Roguish Chaps" (1 text, 1 tune)
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, p. 103, "The Farmer's Three Sons" (2 fragments)
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 213-214, "In Good Old Colony Times" (1 text, 1 tune)
Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, p. 7, "Old Colony Times" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryOfNewEnglandFolklore, p. 531, "Old Colony Times" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 48, "Good King Arthur" (1 short text, a floating fragment sometimes found with "Johnny Lad (I)" and sometimes with "In Good Old Colony Times")

DT, ROGUES3* ROGUES2* (ROGUES32)
ADDITIONAL: The Quaver; or Songster's Pocket Companion (London, 1844 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 287, "King Arthur Had Three Sons" (1 text)
Evelyn Foster Morneweck (Stephen Foster's niece), _Chronicles of Stephen Foster's Family_, University of Pittsburgh Press, 1944, pp. 42-43, "The Three Rogues" (1 text, allegedly from Stephen Foster's father)
Roud #130

RECORDINGS:
George Maynard, "Three Sons of Rogues" (on Maynard1, Voice07)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads fol. 84, "The Miller, Weaver, and Little Tailor ("In good king Arthur's days")," Laurie and Whittle (London), 1804
LOCSheet, sm1878 07980, "Old Colony Times," John Church & Co. (Cincinnati), 1878 (tune)
LOCSinging, as104730, "Good Old Colony Times," L. Deming (Boston), n.d.
SAME TUNE:
Gin-Sling (Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, p. 21)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
King Arthur
Three Jolly Rogues
Three Jolly Rogues of Lynn
When Bold King Edward
King Arthur's Servants
In Good King Arthur's Days
When Arthur Ruled this Land
The Little Tailor Dick
The Miller's Sons

NOTES [200 words]: Botkin has a report that this was quoted by German Chancellor Otto von Bismarck to the Reichstag in 1888. Allegedly Bismarck learned it from a friend in 1832. I do not know how the latter could be verified, but it is certain that Bismarck knew the song. Lyle Lofgren forwarded to me a note from Eamonn Noonan, mentioning that Bismarck's recitation (which he dates to 1889) was recorded and has now been publicly released; there was actually a story about it in the _New York Times._

One has to suspect that this has had a complex history of moving between the broadside press and the folk; how else can one explain its tendency to take on new settings, from King Arthur's court (very common in British settings) to the American colonies to "Lynne" (King's Lynn?). The song is also quoted by Thomas Hardy in _Under the Greenwood Tree_ (a single "King Arthur" stanza in chapter 2, "Honey-taking, and Afterwards," of Part IV, "Autumn"). And it apparently was known in Stephen Foster's family. - RBW

Broadside Bodleian Johnson Ballads fol. 84: "A much admired song sung by Mr Chas Johnston, & proper to be sung at all Musical Clubs." In this version "Three Sons of Whores were turn'd out of doors ..." - BS

_Last updated in version 6.0_
File: R112
In Kansas

DESCRIPTION: A quatrain ballad, this describes the unseemly, unsanitary, unhealthy conditions and people in that state, at Yale, in Mobile, in Zamboanga or any other place disliked by the singer.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1844, when a version of the song was published in New York City by Atwill. Said to date from a song about the Irish famines, "Over Here."

KEYWORDS: bawdy scatological humorous

FOUND IN: Australia Canada Britain(England) US(MA,MW,NE,So,SW) New Zealand

REFERENCES (12 citations):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 49-53, "In Kansas" (4 texts, 1 tune)
Cray-AshGrove, pp. 37-38, "In Kansas" (1 text, 1 tune)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 428-429, "Kansas" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Randolph 344, "In Arkansas" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 280-282, "In Arkansas" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 344A)
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 265-267, "In Kansas" (4 texts, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 495-496, "In Kansas," "Potatoes They Grow Small (In Kansas)" (2 texts)
Welsch-NebraskaPioneerLore, pp. 53-54, "In Kansas" (1 text)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 32, "In Kansas" (2 texts, 1 tune; the first belongs here, while the second is "Way Out West in Kansas")
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 204, "In Kansas" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, pp. 212-213, "In Kansas" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 43, "In Kansas" (1 text)

ST EM049 (Partial)

RECORDINGS:
Chubby Parker, "In Kansas" (Conqueror 7894, 1931)
Art Thieme, "In and Around Nashville" (on Thieme06)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Over There (I - The Praties They Grow Small)" (tune & meter, floating lyrics)
cf. "Way Out West in Kansas" (theme)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Taters They Grow Small

NOTES [160 words]: Cray and Legman have historical notes, disagreeing on the origin of the American bawdy song. - EC

Given that this appears to be a clear parody of "The Praties They Grow Small," but that the 1844 version precedes the worst of the potato blights, the song origins are indeed mysterious. One suspects that the 1844 text is not the "full version," but a predecessor (the more so as Kansas was beyond the usual settlement line in 1844).

Randolph reports that "several old-timers have told me that this piece was written by an Missourian named Beecham or Beecher, shortly after the Civil War." He does not believe the story, however, and certainly this can only refer to the local adaptation.

There is no clear dividing line between this and "The Praties They Grow Small"; there are versions of this piece that are short enough and clean enough to belong with either. But, as often happens, we must classify them separately because the extremes are so distinct. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: EM049

In Kerry Long Ago

DESCRIPTION: The singer thinks back to his "boyhood in Kerry long ago." He thinks about dances, and his girl friend Mary, nights listening to fairy stories and holding colleens "for to save them from the fairies."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)

KEYWORDS: courting dancing nonballad youth

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 73, "In Kerry Long Ago" (3 texts)
In London so Fair

DESCRIPTION: A girl goes to serve a lady whose son is a sea captain. They fall in love; when he must go to sea, he pledges to be true. She dresses as a man and enlists on his ship. He says she reminds him of his love. She reveals her identity and they are married.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan1)
KEYWORDS: love sailor disguise cross-dressing marriage
FOUND IN: Ireland Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H203, pp. 330-331, "The Sailor on the Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Greig/Duncan1 178, "Up in London Fair" (5 texts, 2 tunes)
Roud #2989
RECORDINGS:
  Mary Ann Carolan, "In London So Fair" (on Voice02)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Ship that I Command

In Lonely Belvedere

DESCRIPTION: "My love he was a fine young man ... he lies within his grave in lonely Belvedere. 'My curse upon you Major Grant,' in anger she did say. 'My curse upon you Bennett ... Was you that caused my sorrow In lonely Belvedere"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs)
KEYWORDS: homicide love burial soldier
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
  May 13, 1861 - the St. John's Riot
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 209, "In Lonely Belvedere" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 61-62, "Lonely Belvedere" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2725
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Riot in St. John's" (subject)
NOTES [64 words]: Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs: "[The singer] said that the young man was killed in a riot in Newfoundland between the Orangemen and Roman Catholics." This could refer to the Belvedere Cemetery in St John's, Newfoundland. - BS
  Kenneth Goldstein believes this song refers to the 1861 St. John's riot which is also described in "The Riot in St. John's"; see that song for the details. - RBW
  Last updated in version 4.5

In Low Germanie

DESCRIPTION: "As I sailed past Jura's isle, Among the waters lone, I heard a voice, a sweet low voice Atween a sigh and moan" as a girl with babes on her knee laments her husband fighting in Germany. Her brothers and her love have all been called away

AUTHOR: Allan Cunningham ?
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Ord-BothySongsAndBallads)
KEYWORDS: love separation soldier war
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 360-361, "The Wars o' Germanie" (1 text)
In Marble Walls as White as Milk

DESCRIPTION: Riddle: "In marble halls as white as milk, Lined with a skin as soft as silk, Within a fountain crystal-clear, a golden apple doth appear. No doors there are to this stronghold, Yet thieves break in and steal the gold." Answer: an egg.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1844 (Haliliwell), with a manuscript version from around 1810, according to the Opies; Jack dates it to 1765 and _Mother Goose's Melody_

KEYWORDS: riddle nonballad food

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 199, "In Marble Halls as White as Milk" (1 text)
- Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #673 note 7, p. 270, "(In Marble Halls as White as Milk)"
- Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 85, "In Marble Walls as White as Milk" (1 text)
- Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 185, "In Marble Walls As White As Milk" (1 text)

NOTES [147 words]: Although this doesn't seem to be well known in folk circles today, it was famous enough in the last century that J. R. R. Tolkien indirectly testified that it was the basis for one of the riddles in _The Hobbit_. And Tolkien rewrote it in Old English; Tolkien's version opens "Meolchwitum sind marmanstane" and ends "saga hwæt ic hatte" -- "Say what I have." See J. R. R. Tolkien, _The Annotated Hobbit_, annotated by Douglas A. Anderson, second edition, Houghton Mifflin, 2002, pp. 123-125, n. 19.

- RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: 002199

In Measure Time We'll Row

DESCRIPTION: A song for rowing, listed as a round: "Then you'll see our oars with feathered spray, As they sparkle in the beam of day, In our little bark we glide, Swiftly o'er the silent tide... The warrior his heritage to restore... Oh, in measure time we'll row."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951

KEYWORDS: river work

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 172-173, "In Measure Time We'll Row" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #9432

File: Doe172

In Memorial of 77 Brave Newfoundland Sealers

DESCRIPTION: "Sad comes the news from o'er the sea, To fill our hearts with dread, To tell us that the ones we loved Are numbered with the dead." The poem briefly mentions their home lives, and hopes that God will make things well.
In Memoriam

DESCRIPTION: The supply boat has to stand by and watch Ocean Ranger sink. ODECO collects its eighty million from Lloyd's acknowledging no blame. The singer hopes the inquiry and "days when lives are sacrificed to corporate greed" end soon.

AUTHOR: Jim Payne

EARLIEST DATE: 1983 (Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou)

KEYWORDS: death sea disaster storm memorial

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

Feb 15, 1982 - The Ocean Ranger oil rig, 225 miles east of Cape Race, Newfoundland, sinks in a storm. All 84/86 are lost. NSDB: "It's said everyone in NF was related to, or knew, someone onboard" (Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou, Northern Shipwrecks Database)

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 55, "In Memoriam" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #30702

NOTES [1057 words]: Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou: "ODECO, or the Ocean Drilling and Exploration Company, is the American company that owned the Ocean Ranger."

For a detailed account of the disaster and its causes see Inviting Disater: Lessons from the Edge of Technology by James R. Chiles (HarperBusiness paperback, 2002), pp. 18-36. While Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou sees the ballad as questioning the courage of the crew of the supply ship Seaforth Highlander, Chiles has them doing the best they could. - BS

The way I read Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou's notes, the song does not question the crew of the supply ship; rather, the song's author Jim Payne was offended that others had questioned the crew's actions, and wrote the song in part to defend them.

The problem at the heart of this song is probably deeper, going back to Newfoundland's desperate attempt to find something to base its economy on. It was founded on cod, of course, and then started making money off seals, then pulpwood. But the cod fishery declined, and no one wanted seals any more, and Newfoundland has only so many trees. So they started looking for another non-renewable resource, oil -- but perhaps moved too fast:

"The Newfoundland government and Ottawa locked horns on the question of jurisdiction over offshore oil, leading [Alfred Brian] Peckford [who became leader of the Progressive Conservatives in 1979 at the age of 37] to win a provincial general election in 1982 by campaigning against Ottawa's position.

"Although Newfoundland and Ottawa were antagonists in the battle over which order of government would have jurisdiction over offshore oil development, both rushed to foster exploration and exploitation in the context of the energy crisis and the federal National Energy Program of the 1970s. The desire on the part of the federal and provincial governments for rapid development benefited the major multinational corporations such as Mobil Oil that were involved in the search for oil off the east coast. The Newfoundland government's interest focused almost entirely on which jurisdiction would control the economic benefits of development, and, like the federal government, it paid little attention to the regulation of offshore workers' safety. The offshore oil industry, sadly, took on a more tragic significance for the people of Newfoundland and Labrador in 1982. On Valentine's Day, a winter storm damaged and led to the sinking of the Ocean Ranger. All hand aboard the oil drilling rig lost their lives; fifty-six of the eighty-four crew members were Newfoundlanders and Labradorians.... Subsequent investigations, including a royal commission, concluded that the Ocean Ranger had been generally well built, although it was designed for, and tested in, the waters of the Gulf of Mexico -- a very different marine environment than the Grand Banks.... Worst of all, the workers who operated the Ocean Ranger did not fully understand how to operate the ballast controls during an emergency such as the storm that developed that February night. Having to abandon the rig, workers were without survival suits and found its lifeboats almost impossible to launch in the prevailing conditions. Although the royal commission that investigated the tragedy was unwilling to say that the Newfoundland government's local hiring preference had led the rig's operators to hire untrained workers, it suggested that hiring 'guidelines requiring a very rapid phase in of local residents can affect the overall level of safety of the drilling operations.'" (Cadigan, pp. 268-269).

Looker, p. 49, says that the Ocean Ranger was a 15,000 tonne steel oil rig. "The largest of three rigs in the area, the Ocean Ranger was operated by ODECO, a Louisiana engineering firm, under contract to Mobil Oil of Canada." Major, p. 437, says "The Ocean Ranger was billed as the largest semi-submersible rig, and unsinkable. The deck and drilling area were the size of two football fields. It towered thirty storeys. The upper hull rested on eight vertical columns, set in two immense pontoons each holding a dozen ballast chambers. From the corner columns ran twelve gigantic anchors holding the rig to the ocean floor."

She was commanded by Clarence Hauss, who, after being on the job for just eight days, almost sank her on February 6. But his error in running the controls was fixed -- that time. On February 14, the storm was so bad that they cut the Ocean Ranger loose from the ocean floor (Looker, p. 50). The storm also caused the standby ship, the Seaforth Highlander, to be blown away; instead of being within two miles, as was supposed to be the rule, she drifted at least seven miles away.

At 1:05 a.m. on February 15, the Ocean Ranger sent a signal requesting assistance. Their last signal, at 1:30 a.m., reported that the crew was going to their lifeboat stations. It has been speculated that the ballast control system had been broken by the storm (Andrieux, p. 164; Major, p. 437, reports this as fact).

The Seaforth Highlander arrived at 2:00 a.m. to find a badly damaged lifeboat whose crew were desperately bailing her out (Looker, p. 51; Major, p. 438, thinks the others had been destroyed by their fall from the listing oil rig). Before the Highlander could rescue them, the boat capsized, possibly due to the weight of the survivors all moving to the side closest the ship. Conditions were so cold that the men could not grasp ropes to be rescued. The Ocean Ranger itself disappeared from radar at 3:38 a.m. Only 22 bodies were recovered.

Andrieux, p. 165, has a photo of the Ranger and a picture of one of her overturned rubber boats. Pp. 167-168 have photos of salvage operations which re-floated the wreck (this was not a repair attempt; it was a navigation hazard, so the platform was raised and dumped in deeper water; Andrieux, p. 169).

The song said that insurance paid out $80 million. In fact the payment, according to Looker, p. 51, was $86 million, which was more than the depreciated value of the Ocean Ranger, causing many people to think that the excess should have gone to the families. But ODECO was not under legal obligation to do so, and in any case needed to buy a new oil rig. It sounds to me as if the real responsibility to the families rests with those who put so many untrained crewmen on the Ocean Ranger. - RBW

Bibliography

- Cadigan: Sean T. Cadigan, Newfoundland and Labrador: A History, University of Toronto
In My Father's House
DESCRIPTION: "There ain't no liars there in my Father's house (x3), Oh, there's peace, peace everywhere." "There ain't no crapshooters there...." "There ain't no cardplayers there...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad virtue cards
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 483, "In My Father's House" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Carter Family, "There'll Be Joy, Joy, Joy" (Bluebird B-5911/Montgomery Ward M-4547, 1935)
File: San483

In My Garden Grew Plenty of Thyme
DESCRIPTION: The singer laments the loss of her thyme. She had spent her life making herself fair, only to find her thyme stolen by a sailor. Now "I gaze on the willow tree," and "I would I were clasped in my lover's arms fast, for 'tis he who has stolen my thyme"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle)
KEYWORDS: loneliness sailor seduction virginity gardening
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,So) Britain(England(Lond,South)) Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (15 citations):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 85-86, "I Once Had Plenty of Thyme" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 451)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 116D, "Flowers and Weeds" (1 text)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #86, "The Red Running Rue" (1 text, 1 tune, although since Vaughan Williams took down only the first and last verses, it's not absolutely clear that the tune goes with this song)
Randolph 90, "Keep Your Garden Clean" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 122-124, "Keep Your Garden Clean" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 90)
Wells-TheBalladTree, pp. 272-273, "Keep Your Garden Clean" (1 text, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 28, "Once I Had Plenty of Thyme" (2 texts, 1 tune, although both texts are largely derived from "The Seeds of Love")
Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 34, "The Sprig of Thyme" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 138, "The Green Willow Tree: or, Once I Had Plenty of Thyme" (1 text)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol1, p. 90, "A Warning Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 196-197, "Come All You Pretty Fair Maids" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, p. 52, "Come All You Pretty Fair Maids" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 26, "When I Was in My Prime" (1 text, 1 tune, more like this than the other thyme songs, though it's long and has probably picked up some outside elements)
Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, pp. 98-99, "When I Was In My Prime" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, THYMEGAR THYMSEED (THYMTH2)
Roud #3
RECORDINGS:
Cyril Poacher, "Plenty of Thyme" (on Voice12)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(2793), "Sprig of Thyme," J.O. Bebbington (Manchester), 1855-1858
In My Laddie's Company

DESCRIPTION: The singer complains that her sailor with light brown hair has forsaken her. When she goes to bed she can't sleep "for thinking on my true love ... But he seldom minds on me." She wishes for a half-hour in his company.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: love nonballad sailor hair
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan6 1084, "In My Laddie's Company" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #6774
File: GrD61084

In North America

DESCRIPTION: "Wine sparkles in our glasses, We have no debts to pay, We spend our time in pleasure In North America."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands)
KEYWORDS: nonballad money drink
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 196, "In North America" (1 fragment, seventh of seven "Quatrains on the War")
ST Fus196C (Full)
File: Fus196C

In Old Paul Bunyan's Camps

DESCRIPTION: "Have you heard about Paul Bunyan's camps, Where they used moon and stars for lamps?" There are ten thousand men. Paul's pants are made of wood. His daughter leaves the camp and is surprised to see a farmer and team. She brings them back in her apron

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan)
KEYWORDS: lumbering talltale humorous farming recitation
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, pp 72-73, "In Old Paul Bunyan's Camps" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6525
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Paul Bunyan" (subject) and references there
File: BBun072

In Old Pod-Augur Times

DESCRIPTION: "I'll sing to you of the good old times When people were honest and true, Before their brains were rattled and crazed By everything strange and new." The singer grumbles about modern ways, and longs for "old pod-auger times"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1829-1837 - Presidency of Andrew Jackson
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 69-71, "In Old Pod-Augur Times" (1 text, 1 tune)
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 251-253, "In Old Pod-Augur Times" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, PODAUGER*
ST FlBr069 (Partial)
Roud #3739
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Good Old Days of Adam and Eve" (theme) and references there
cf. "The Old Pod Auger Days" (pod auger theme)
NOTES [228 words]: We really need a keyword "Whining-about-the-end-of-the-good-old-days." See the cross-references for similar songs.
The song lists the time of Andrew Jackson as the ideal, but I can't see anything in it that's specific to that era.
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland states that this comes from Comical Brown's Songs, after "Comical Brown," whom she describes as a nineteenth century solo performer. She gives no other details, however.
According to Young, p. 134, "pod auger days" or "pot auger days" refer to "a long time ago. From the era when fireplaces were used for cooking. A pot auger was an adjustable pot hanger which could raise and lower the pot over the fire to control the cooking temperature."
StoryKirwinWiddowson, p. 384, cite various American usages, the earliest in 1833 (i.e. just about the time Andrew Jackson was re-elected) and the last in Maine in 1887, but cite eight Newfoundland uses; it would appear that the term is still in use there, but probably not in the United States.
It was probably still in use in the Canadian Maritimes, or perhaps in New England, around the turn of the twentieth century, since Larry Gorman clearly knew this song, and understood it, basing his piece "The Old Pod Auger Days" on it. Roud lumps the two, and certainly the ideas are very similar, but since the Gorman song is a clear rewrite, I've split them.- RBW

Bibliography

- Young: Ron Young, Dictionary of Newfoundland and Labrador, Downhome Publishing Inc

_Last updated in version 6.1_
In Our Grandfathers' Days

DESCRIPTION: "A song now to please all my kind friends before me... I'm going to sing of our grandfather's days. In our grandparents' days men were judged by merit...." Now money settles things. Clothes weren't so fancy, people gambled less, politicians were good men

AUTHOR: Tony Pastor (source: New-Comic-Songster)
EARLIEST DATE: 1870 (New-Comic-Songster)
KEYWORDS: nonballad hardtimes
FOUND IN: US(Ro)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #185, "In Our Grandfather's Days" (1 text, 1 tune)
New-Comic-Songster, "Our Grandfathers' Days" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10924
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Good Old Days of Adam and Eve" (theme) and references there

In Poland schteht en Haus (In Poland There Is a House)

DESCRIPTION: German. "In Poland schteht en Haus (x3), Joe Keiser piepa Polischen Haus." "In Poland there stands a house... Joe Kaiser's ??? house." "Who lives in the house?" "A landlord lives in the house," helping a girl bring up a child who writes on the walls

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage nonballad children home
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, pp. 90-91, "In Poland schteht en Haus (In Poland There Is a House)" (1 German text plus English translation, 1 tune)
NOTES [26 words]: The notes in Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends says that in Germany this functions as a game song, but I can find no references to it under this title. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.2

In Praise of John Magee

DESCRIPTION: John Magee finds no peace with his wife "So he says, 'I can auction you according to the law.'" The bidding is active and she goes to a farmer from Killarney for twenty-five shillings. "May the devil follow after her, the auctioneer did say"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster)
KEYWORDS: shrewishness abandonment commerce humorous husband wife
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster 12, "In Praise of John Magee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Morton/Maguire-ComeDayGoDayGodSendSunday 36, pp. 90-91,122,170, "In Praise of John Magee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2899
RECORDINGS:
John Maguire, "In Praise of John Magee" (on IRJMaguire01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sale of a Wife" (subject)
cf. "The Scolding Wife (V)" (theme: sale of a wife)
cf. "Danny Sim's Sow" (theme: sale of a wife)
NOTES [72 words]: I don't believe this should be lumped with "Sale of a Wife." While they both have the auction they have no lines in common.
[It's interesting to note that both songs seem to be Irish, though; perhaps one inspired the other,
In Praise of Seafaring Men, in Hope of Good Fortune

DESCRIPTION: "Who seeks the way to win renown, Or flies with wings of his desire... Let him his native soil eschew, Let him go range and seek a new." "I must abroad to try my lot." Hard work at home has no value. The singer recalls Jason and the Greeks going to Troy

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1841 (Halliwell, Early Naval Ballads of England, according to Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs)

KEYWORDS: sailor travel nonballad

FOUND IN: Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 4, "In Praise of Seafaring Men, in Hope of Good Fortune" (1 text)

File: PaSe004

In Praise of the City of Mullingar

DESCRIPTION: "Ye may strain your muscles to brag of Brussels" or any other great city "But they're all far inferior" to Mullingar. The singer describes many scenes, the Royal Canal, the courthouse and workhouse, railway station, and finally "the beauteous females"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1874 (_Songs and Fables_ by Professor W.J. Rankine, according to OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)

KEYWORDS: humorous nonballad beauty

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 87, "In Praise of the City of Mullingar" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [7 words]: Mullingar is in County Westmeath, Ireland. - BS

File: OLCm087

In Rockley Firs

DESCRIPTION: The singer, a poacher, escapes from Rockley Firs but is caught at the tavern and taken to Marlborough jail. He stands trial. He apparently does time "in a dark cell" but "I am got free, I am not transported, you all may see"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames)

KEYWORDS: poaching prison punishment trial prisoner

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 123-124, "In Rockley Firs" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Ox 268)
Roud #2341

File: WT123

In Savannah

DESCRIPTION: "'Neath the Southern skies there stands a humble cottage, 'Neath its roof sits a mother old and gray." The singer wishes to return to Savannah, embrace his mother, and care for her in her "declining years."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE:

KEYWORDS: love mother home return
In Selma, Alabama

DESCRIPTION: "We've got a rope that's a Berlin Wall, A Berlin Wall, (x2), Well, we've got a rope that's a... In Selma, Alabama." "Hate is a thing that's a Berlin Wall." "Ol' George Wallace helped to build that wall." "Love is the thing that will make it fall."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 2008 (COhen)
KEYWORDS: Black(s) discrimination political
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, p. 333, "[In Selma, Alabama]" (1 text)
File: CAFS1333

In Seventeen Ninety-Five

DESCRIPTION: Singer comes into the country in 1795; considers himself lucky just to be alive. He knocks at a girl's door; she lets him in and says not to ramble any more. They marry and live happily, "And the stars sang a banjo tune/When she said that she'd be mine"

AUTHOR: unknown (additional words by Art Thieme)
EARLIEST DATE: 1966 (learned by Art Thieme)
KEYWORDS: courting love marriage emigration wife
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
RECORDINGS:
Art Thieme, "In 1795" (on Thieme06)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "In Eighteen Forty-Nine" ("In17XX/18XX I found myself quite lucky to be alive" lyrics) and references there
cf. "The Backwoodsman" (lyrics)
NOTES [43 words]: Thieme learned the first verse from Louis Marshall "Grandpa" Jones, added the second verse several years later. Despite a few similarities to "In Eighteen Forty-Nine," the song and its gestalt are sufficiently different that I've classified them separately. - PJS
Last updated in version 6.0
File: RcIn1795

In Soho on Saturday Night

DESCRIPTION: "They tell us in Soho on Saturday night, Most ev'ry person you meet they are tight." The singer sees a woman fall into a sewer -- and get up to admit the dangers of drink. Various drunken Pittsburgers are listed

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends)
KEYWORDS: drink warning
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, pp. 432-433, "In Soho on Saturday Night" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7755
File: KPL432

In Some Lady's Garden (I)

DESCRIPTION: "In some lady's fine brick house, In some lady's garden, You walk so high you can't get out, So fare you well, my darling." "Oh, swing a lady ump-tum, Swing a lady round, Swing a lady ump-tum, Promenade round."
In Some Lady's Garden (II)

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, somebody come and let me out of here, I'se in some lady's garden. I'll roll like a log if you let me out of here, I'se in...." "Oh, somebody come... I'll pant like a lizard if you let me out...." "I'll run like a rabbit." "I'll kick like a donkey."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: playparty captivity rescue animal
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 140, "In Some Lady's Garden" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Do, Do, Pity My Case" (lyrics) and references there
File: ScaNF140

In Some Lonesome Graveyard

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I hear a mighty moaning (x3), In some lonesome graveyard." Verses: "Mother (father, preacher) don't let your daughter (son, member) condemn you (x3), In some lonesome graveyard"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang)
KEYWORDS: burial death nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands 46, pp. 193-195, "In Some Lonesome Graveyard" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang, pp. 234-237, "Ole Egyp" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
NOTES [15 words]: The current description is based on the Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands text. - BS
Last updated in version 5.1
File: Parr046

In Tarland Toon

DESCRIPTION: "In Tarland toon, near by Aboyne Bill Morrice doth abide"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: home
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1923, "In Tarland Toon" (1 fragment)
Roud #18048
NOTES [11 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan8 fragment. - BS
In That Beautiful World on High (I Hope My Mother Will Be There)

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Oh, I will be there, (x2) With palms of victory, crowns of glory you shall wear In that beautiful world on high." Verses: "I hope my mother (sister, brother) will be there That used to join with me in prayer"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1874 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)

KEYWORDS: Bible nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 130, "In That Beautiful World on High (I Hope My Mother Will Be There)" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 218 in the 1874 edition)

Roud #15249

NOTES [50 words]: In Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute's verses, every alternate line is "In that beautiful world on high." The "crown of glory" is from 1 Peter 5:5: "And when the Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away" (King James). - BS

Last updated in version 4.0

File: Dett130

In That Eternal Day

DESCRIPTION: The singer says nobody had anything to say to him when he was in the world, but now, in the House of God everybody talks to him. "Carry me and bring me in that eternal day"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands)

KEYWORDS: burial death nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands, p. 190, ("When I bin in de worl' bin a sin") (1 text)

File: Parp190A

In That Great Day

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Why are you running sinner," "I'm running from the fire"(2x). "In that great day," "O Israel"(3x). "In that great day." Verses have the same pattern as "O Israel...." See notes.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Barton-OldPlantationHymns)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Barton-OldPlantationHymns, p. 43, "In That Great Day" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: William Booth, Salvation Army Songs (London: The Salvation Army Book Department, 1911 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), #144 p. 100, "The Heavenly Music" ("We shall see the Judge descending On that great day") (1 text)

NOTES [52 words]: The description is based on the Barton-OldPlantationHymns text. Booth and Barton-OldPlantationHymns verses include "Don't you hear your Savior calling," "Don't you hear the trumpet sounding," "We shall hear the thunder rolling," "We shall see our children coming," and "Don't you hear the saints a-shouting."- BS

Last updated in version 4.0

File: Bart043
In that Great Gettin' Up Morning

DESCRIPTION: "In that great gettin' up morning, Fare thee well, fare thee well..." Call and answer about the deeds of Gabriel (the Annunciation to Mary and the Last Trumpet). The refrain "Fare thee well" occurs throughout

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1874 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)

KEYWORDS: religious resurrection

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, pp. 154-156, "In Dat Great Gittin'-Up Mornin'" (1 text, 1 tune; pp. 235-237 in the 1874 edition)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 106, "Great Gittin' Up Mornin'" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit, pp. 63-65, "In Dat Great Gittin' Up Mornin'" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 349, "Great Getting Up Morning" (1 text)

Roud #15228

RECORDINGS:
Four Dusty Travelers, "Great Gittin' Up Mornin'" (Columbia 14499, 1930; rec. 1929; on VocalQ2)
James Garfield Smalls, "In dat Great Gittin-Up Mornin'" (on USSeaIsland03)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "We've Come to Judgment" (lyrics)

File: LxU106

In That Morning

DESCRIPTION: Spiritual: "In that morning, what a beautiful morning that shall be... Everybody got to rise for your Master Jesus in that morning...." Chorus: "...rise for your Master Jesus in that morning"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia)

KEYWORDS: religious Jesus nonballad

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar) US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 280-281, "In That Morning" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #3349

NOTES [61 words]: Surely a fragment of something else -- but given the amount of text, it's not clear what.
The Creighton and NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal texts don't have much in common apart from the words "In that morning," but they're both about That Morning, they're both religious, they're both joyful, and they are both fragmentary messes. Might as well stick them together. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1

File: CrSe280

In the Bar-Room (The Celebrated Working-Man)

DESCRIPTION: Singer boasts of his abilities as a coal miner, saying he can hew more coal than anyone in the region, and if anyone doubts him, they should check out his abilities -- "and haven't I often proved it in the bar-room (public bar)"

AUTHOR: Ed Foley

EARLIEST DATE: 1892 (reported to have been sung by the author at the wedding of a niece in that year)

KEYWORDS: pride bragging drink mining work drink nonballad worker

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North)) US(MA)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, pp. 366-368, "A Celebrated Workingman" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, CELEBWRK*
Roud #3486

RECORDINGS:
Jack & Reece Elliott, "In the Bar-Room (The Celebrated Working-Man)" (on Elliotts01)
Jack Elliott, "In the Bar-Room" (on Voice20)
A. L. Lloyd, "The Celebrated Working-Man" (on IronMuse1)

NOTES [83 words]: This song, written by an American anthracite miner, took up residence in the mining districts of northern England and entered the tradition almost instantaneously. For once we have an idea of the connection; apparently the person who carried it across the water was Yankee Jim Roberts, an anarchist miner from Kentucky who settled in Co. Durham and became a union activist. The song also became part of the tradition in its native Pennsylvania, and was collected there by the Archive of Folk Song. - PJS
Last updated in version 3.2
File: RcITBRCW

In the Days of Old Rameses

DESCRIPTION: "In the days of old Rameses, are you on, are you on, They told the same thing... In the days of old Ramesis, that story had paresis...." The story sarcastically mentioned was told by Adam in Eden, by Joshua at Jericho, etc., and now is old and tired

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)
KEYWORDS: nonballad Bible
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 202-203, "In the Days of Old Rameses" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [26 words]: Reported by Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag to be the theme song of the Whitechapel Club, "a group of thirsty intellectuals who were opposed to everything." - RBW
File: San202

In the Days when I Was Hard Up

DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls how difficult life was when he faced poverty. He was scorned by family, and forced to all sorts of tricks to keep alive. He barely overcame the temptation to steal. His consolation was that he wore his ragged clothes honestly.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1860
KEYWORDS: poverty hardtimes
FOUND IN: US(MA,SE)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 99, "In the Days when I Was Hard Up" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1035, p. 71, "In the Days When I Was Hard Up" (3 references)
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, Paul Robertson, "Ballads & Bytes: The Digitally Reproduced Folksong Collections of Dr. I. G. Greer and Dr. W. Amos Abrams" Vol. LV, No. 2 (Fall-Winter 2008), pp. 60-61, "Hard Up" (1 short text)

ST FSC099 (Partial)
Roud #4621
File: FSC099

In the Dense Woods

DESCRIPTION: The singer is lost and alone in the woods in a storm. He laments, "The cold wet ground must be my bed... The tempest howls, the rain descends. Oh Jesus, must my life here end?" After breathing his final prayers, he dies

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1945 (Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland)
KEYWORDS: death storm
HISTORICAL REFERENCES: 1860 - Death of James Fernald, said to be the hero of this song
In the Evening by the Moonlight (I)

DESCRIPTION: "In de ebening by de moonlight when de darkies work was over... Dat's de only time we had to spare.... Uncle Gabe would take de fiddle down...." "All dem happy times we used to hab, will ne'er return again... In de eb'ning...."

AUTHOR: James A. Bland
EARLIEST DATE: 1880 (sheet music published by Benj. W. Hitchcock of New York)
KEYWORDS: Black(s) nonballad fiddle music

In the Evening by the Moonlight (II)

DESCRIPTION: "When you're coming from the firing line (x2), You can hear them huffling along; You can hear the Sergeant-Major calling, "Come along, boys! Get into some sort of line, Fill up the last blank file,"In the evening, by the moonlight, When you're coming...

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang)
KEYWORDS: soldier

In the Garden

DESCRIPTION: "I come to the garden alone, While the dew is still on the roses, And the voice I hear, Falling on my ear, The Son of God discloses. And he walks with me...." The singer would stay and listen to the voices forever, "But he bids me go."

AUTHOR: C. Austin Miles (1868-1946)
EARLIEST DATE: 1912 (published, according to Johnson)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Charles Johnson, One Hundred and One Famous Hymns (Hallberg, 1982), pp, 188-189, "In the Garden" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #18447
ALTERNATE TITLES:
I Come to the Garden Alone

NOTES [127 words]: According to William Reynolds, Companion to Baptist Hymnal, Broadman Press, 1976, p. 96, author C. Austin Miles was sitting in his darkroom, where he had photographic equipment and a camera. He chanced to open his Bible to John Chapter 20 (the resurrection, where Jesus meets Mary Magdalene). He had a vision in which he was part of the scene. Immediately after, he wrote the words to the poem, adding the tune a few hours after. Reynolds, p. 381, says that Miles was born and died in New Jersey and trained in Pennsylvania as a pharmacist, but after writing his first song, he was hired by the company that published it and worked for them for the rest of his life. This appears to be his only song of any significance, and even it is not especially common. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1
File: bdIthGar

In the Good Old Summertime

DESCRIPTION: "There's a time in each year that we always hold dear, Good old summertime." The singer recalls the happy days, "In the good old summertime (x2), Strolling through the shady lanes with that baby mine." He describes life as a child in summer

AUTHOR: Words: Ren Shields / Music: George Evans EARLIEST DATE: 1902 (sheet music by Howley, Haviland & Dresser)
KEYWORDS: nonballad courting
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 257, "In The Good Old Summertime" (1 text)
Geller-FamousSongsAndTheirStories, pp. 191-194, "In the Good Old Summertime" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #166, "Good Old Summer Time" (1 text)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, p. 300, "In the Good Old Summertime"
DT, OLSUMMER
ADDITIONAL: Robert A. Fremont, editor, Favorite Songs of the Nineties, Dover Publications, 1973, pp. 157-160, "In the Good Old Summertime" (1 text, 1 tune, the 1902 sheet music)
Margaret Bradford Boni, editor, Songs of the Gilded Age, with piano arrangements by Norman Lloyd and illustrations by Lucille Corcos, Golden Press, 1960, pp. 116-118, "IN the Good Old Summertime" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #17274
SAME TUNE:
Coal Ship Song (III) (File: Tawn004)

NOTES [321 words]: This is another of those parlour songs whose chorus has entered tradition without reference to the verse. The result, however, seems popular enough to warrant inclusion here.

According to Thomas S. Hischak, The American Musical Theatre Song Encyclopedia (with a Foreword by Gerald Bordman), Greenwood Press, 1995, p. 163, this "is the popular favorite that opened the door for other songs about the seasons of the year. The memorable... number was heard in vaudeville at the turn of the century, but didn't catch on until Blache Ring sang it in The Defender (1902). Music publishers were reluctant to print the song, arguing that performers could only appropriately sing it three months out of the year. But once it was published it sold over a million copies of sheet music and a flood of seasonal songs followed." It went on to appear in other musicals; a 1904 show "The Good Old Summertime" was built around it.

According to David A. Jasen, Tin Pan Alley: The Composers, the Songs, the Performers and their Times: The Golden Age of American Popular Music from 1886 to 1956, Primus, 1988, p, 61, this
In the Highlands of Scotland There's Weeping You Know

DESCRIPTION: The singer notes weeping in the Highlands because the young men have been sent "where the maidens daurna go." She looks forward to her Donal's return and his kisses "unless some brighter beauty blinks blithe in his e'e."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: love war separation nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan6 1115, "In the Highlands of Scotland There's Weeping You Know" (1 text)
Roud #6831
File: GrD61115

In the Hills of Roane County

DESCRIPTION: Singer courts and marries; his wife's brother Tom stabs him. Three months later, he kills Tom. He's sentenced to life in prison. His family mourns; he tells prison friends that when they write home, "put one of my songs in your letter for me"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (unissued recording, Andy Patterson)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer courts and marries; for unknown reasons, his wife's brother Tom stabs him. Three months later, he kills Tom. Tried, no one will speak up for him, and he's sentenced to life in prison. His mother weeps and his sister watches as his train departs; he now works in a prison foundry and awaits death, telling prison friends that when they write home, "put one of my songs in your letter for me"

KEYWORDS: grief courting love marriage fight violence farewell crime punishment prison revenge brother wife
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Abrahams/Riddle-ASingerAndHerSongs, pp. 37-38," Rome County" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 26, #2 (1977), p, 9, "Hills of Roane County" (1 text, 1 tune, the Wilma Lee Cooper version)
Roud #3387
RECORDINGS:
Blue Sky Boys, "In the Hills of Roane County" (Bluebird B-8693/Montgomery Ward M-8848, 1941; on ConstSor1; rec. 1940)
Jimmie Osborne, "Hills of Roane County" (King 1231, 1953)
Andy Patterson, "Willis Mabry (In the Hills of Rowan County" (unissued Gennett recording, 1929) (unissued Gennett recording, 1930 [as "Willie Mabery")]
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Cruel Brother" (theme, sort of)
cf. "Roane County Strike at Harriman, Tennessee" (form)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Rhone County Prison
Hills of Rome County
NOTES [144 words]: I could swear we did this one someplace else. - PJS
That happens to me all the time. The interesting thing, to me, is whether the song was known prior to the Blue Sky Boys recording. Roud has an interesting mention of a collection by Beck, possibly in the 1930s, but this does not seem to be well-documented or publicly available. [There are the unissued 1929 and 1930 recordings by Andy Patterson. -PJS] Wilma Lee Cooper does claim to have learned it from her family, which would predate the Blue Sky Boys recording if her memory is correct. Ditto for Almeda Riddle's version, which we note has been folk processed enough to get the name of the county "wrong."

In addition, Henry Garrett recorded (and probably wrote) "Roane County Strike at Harriman, Tennessee" in 1936, and it probably derived from this song. So that's more evidence that the song is older. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
File: RcItHoRC

In the Jailhouse Now

DESCRIPTION: Bill Campbell disregards warnings and keeps gambling; he's in the jailhouse now. Bill Austin tries to vote twice; he's in the jailhouse now. Singer meets a girl; after a spree, he finds her hand in his pocket. She's in the graveyard, he's in the jailhouse

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (recording, Whistler's Jug Band)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer's friend (Bill Campbell) disregards warnings and keeps gambling; he's in the jailhouse now. Another friend (Bill Austin) tries to vote twice (in the white folks' election); he's also in the jailhouse now. Singer meets a girl (Ivy); they go out and paint the town, but when it comes time to pay, he finds the girl's hand in his pocket. She's in the graveyard now, and he's in the jailhouse

KEYWORDS: captivity warning crime homicide prison punishment theft death gambling drink humorous prisoner thief

FOUND IN: US(SE)

Roud #18801

RECORDINGS:
Pink Anderson, "He's in the Jailhouse Now" (on PinkAnd1)
Arkansas Woodchopper [pseud. for Luther Ossenbrink], "In the Jailhouse Now" (Gennett 7036/Supertone 9570/Champion 15852 [as West Virginia Rail Splitter], 1930; Champion 45038. C. 1935)
Blind [Arthur] Blake, "He's in the Jailhouse Now" (Paramount 12565, 1927; Broadway 5053 [as Blind George Martin; as "He's in the Jailhouse"], n.d.)
Bill Bruner, "He's in the Jail House Now" (OKeah 45438, 1930)
Walter Dalton, "In the Jail House Now" (Perfect 12468, 1928)
John Dilleshaw, "She's in the Jailhouse Now" (recorded for OKeah, 1929, unissued)
Adelyne Hood, "He's On the Chain Gang Now" (Columbia 2158-D, 1930) (Oriole 1935, 1930)
Jim Jackson, "He's in the Jailhouse Now" (Vocalion, unissued, 1927) (Vocalion 1146, 1928)
Frankie Marvin, "In the Jailhouse Now" (Edison 20002, 1929) (Brunswick 248, 1928) (Cameo 8328/Conqueror 7164 [both as Frankie Wallace], 1928)
Earl McDonald's Original Louisville Jug Band, "She's In the Graveyard Now" (Columbia 14255-D, 1927; on Ruckus1)
Memphis Sheiks [pseud. for Memphis Jug Band], "He's in the Jailhouse Now" (Victor 23256, 1930; on GoodForWhatAilsYou)
Billy Mitchell, "In the Jailhouse Now" (Bluebird B-6651, 1936)
Jimmie Rodgers, "In the Jailhouse Now" (Victor 21245, 1928; Bluebird B-5223, 1933; Montgomery Ward M-4721, c. 1935)
Whistler's Jug Band "Jail House Blues" (Gennett 5614, 1925; recorded 1924)

SAME TUNE:
Gene Autry, "In the Jailhouse Now No. 2" (Champion 16141, 1930; Montgomery Ward M-4975, 1936); "He's In the Jail House No. 2" (Banner 32082/Jewel 20035/Oriole 8035/Regal 10259/Romeo 5035/Perfect 12667/Conqueror 7708, 1931; Broadway 4062, n.d.; Piccadilly [UK] 872, 1932)
Frankie Marvin, "I'm in the Jailhouse Now - No. 2" (Crown 3026/Homestead 22992, 1930)
Jimmie Rodgers, "In the Jailhouse Now - No. 2" (Victor [US & Can.] 22523, 1930; Montgomery Ward M-4315, 1933; RCA Victor 20-6092, 1955)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
He's In That Jail House Now
NOTES [119 words]: I'm astonished we haven't indexed this song yet -- looking at the keyword list, it has every important ingredient except, perhaps, trains and Mama. While Jimmie Rodgers' version is probably the best-known, the song was also current in African-American tradition; a very different version was recorded by blues singer Luke Jordan. - PJS
I've encountered this phenomenon many times: Songs well-known in folk revival circles don't always have much currency in books. I don't know if it's lack of collections or lack of respect for the songs; perhaps it's something of each.
Jimmie Rodgers copyrighted his version in 1928, and he is sometimes listed as the author, but the earlier recordings argue against this. - RBW, PJS

Last updated in version 5.0
File: RcItJHN

In the Kingdom
DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "In the kingdom (7x), In the kingdom today." Verse: "My mother (father, sister) has gone to journey away (x3), In the kingdom today"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, pp. 92-93, "In the Kingdom" (1 text, 1 tune; pp. 108-109 in the 1901 edition)
Roud #11620
NOTES [19 words]: Roud lumps this with "Way in the Kingdom (Aunt Susie)," but the contents are so different that I've split them. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: Dett092

In the Mansions Above
DESCRIPTION: "Good lord, in the mansions above, (x2), My Lord, I hope to meet my Jesus in the mansions above." "If you get there before I do..." "My lord, I've had many crosses and trials here below..." "Fight on, my brother, for the mansions above."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, pp. 59, "In the Mansions Above" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12019
File: AWG059

In the Men's Apartment
DESCRIPTION: "She does all her endeavor ...": if she finds the women in the men's apartment "she'll beat their backs wi her twa fists And tear their very hair"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: violence hair courting
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1906, "In the Men's Apartment" (1 fragment)
Roud #16885
File: Grd81906
In the Merry Month of June, Love
DESCRIPTION: The singer complains that "times are nae wi' me love, as they hae been." He describes his love and says "surely ye've been very unconstant To change yer old love for any new." She says "you will have pleasure I would rather my old love than twenty new"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: courting infidelity beauty dialog nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan4 808, "In the Merry Month of June, Love" (1 text)
Roud #6209
NOTES [23 words]: This reminds me a bit of "Will Ye Gang, Love," as sung, e.g., by Archie Fisher. But I don't have enough data to know if they're linked. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD48098

In the Mormon Beds Out West
DESCRIPTION: "In the Mormon beds out West, There the concubines do rest While husbands visit Emily and Jane! Oh! how the babies do abound By the thousands all around While the husband now slips in to see Elaine."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah)
KEYWORDS: humorous wife husband children
FOUND IN: US(Ro)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #223, "In the Mormon Beds out West" (1 short text)
Roud #10951
File: Hubb223

In the Morning
DESCRIPTION: "We're a 65-ton hooker, and we're jammed up in the Bight." Sailing her is hard; she may well sink. "And for two-pound-ten a month we have to go where duty calls. We can't be much worse off... whatever luck befalls In Kingdom-blanky-Glory in the morning."
AUTHOR: Marshall Nalder (source: Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)
EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Sydney Bulletin, according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)
KEYWORDS: ship hardtimes
FOUND IN: Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, p. 132, "In the Morning" (1 text)
File: BaRo132

In the Morning (I)
DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Ride on (x3), King Emanuel, Don't you want to go to heaven in the morning." Verses: "Some of these mornings bright and fair, Take my flight right through the air." "You say your aiming for the skies, Why don't you stop telling lies."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: Bible nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 194, "Ride On" (1 text, 1 tune; pp. 120-121 in the 1901 edition)
In the Morning (II)

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "In the morning (x2) When the dark clouds roll away (x2) I'll be praying with my mother, When...." "No more sorrow / crying / praying, When...." "I'll be happy in the morning, When...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1980 (USFlorida01)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

RECORDINGS:
Elia Mae Wilson, Lillie B. Williams, and Richard Williams, "In the Morning" (on USFlorida01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Since I Laid My Burden Down" (tune)
cf. "Will the Circle Be Unbroken" (tune)

File: RcFloItM

In the Morning by the Bright Light

DESCRIPTION: "I'se gwine away by the light of the moon. Want all the children to follow me, I hope I'll meet you darkies soon, Oh, hally, hally hallelujah!..." Chorus: "In the morning, morning by the bright light Hear Gabriel blow his trumpet in the morning."

AUTHOR: James Bland

EARLIEST DATE: 1879 (sheet music published by John F. Perry & Co. of Boston)

KEYWORDS: religious

FOUND IN: US(SE,So)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Randolph 304, "In the Morning by the Bright Light" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 569, "Going to Heaven by the Light of the Moon" (1 fragment)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 569, "Going to Heaven by the Light of the Moon" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)

ADDITIONAL: Henry Randall Waite, _College Songs: A Collection of New and Popular Songs of the American Colleges_, new and enlarged edition, Oliver Ditson & Co., 1887, pp. 22-23, "In the Morning by the Bright Light" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST R304 (Partial)

Roud #7776

File: R304

In the Pines

DESCRIPTION: Usually about a man whose girl has left him (on a train) (to meet another) ("in the pines, in the pines, where the sun never shines, And I shivered the whole night through"). The girl, who rides the "longest train I ever saw," may die in a wreck

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: train separation loneliness love death

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE,So)
REFERENCES (15 citations):
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 491-502, "The Longest Train/In the Pines" (3 texts containing many floating verses, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 283, "In the Pines" (2 text plus a fragment; the "A" text, though very full, is damaged and probably mixed; the "B" text is mostly floating verses; "C" is only three lines, and may not belong here); also 297, "You Caused Me to Lose My Mind" (1 fragment, mostly of floating lyrics but with hints it goes here); also 301, "High-Topped Shoes" (2 texts, both mixed; "A" is mostly "Pretty Little Foot" with verses from "Don't Let Your Deal Go Down" while "B" is a hash of "Don't Let Your Deal Go Down," "More Pretty Girls Than One," "In the Pines," and others)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 301, "High-Topped Shoes" (2 tunes plus text excerpts, of which "B" has verses of this song)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 283, "In the Pines, Where the Sun Never Shines" (3 tunes plus text excerpts)
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 96, pp. 149-150, "The Longest Day I Ever Saw" (1 text, with two verses that appear to be from a hobo or perhaps a chain gang or prison song)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 203, "Black Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol1, pp. 32-33, "In the Pines" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #61, "In the Pines" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 290, "The Longest Train" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 231, (fifth of several "Fragments from Tennessee") (1 fragment, which might be this although it's too short to know)
Seeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 28, "Little Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 103 "In The Pines" (1 text)
DT, INPINES*
ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 26, #6 (1978), p, 5, "Where Did You Sleep Last Night?" (1 text, 1 tune, the Lead Belly version)
Roud #3421
RECORDINGS:
Gerald Duncan et al, "In the Pines" (on MusOzarks01)
Roscoe Holcomb, "In the Pines" (on Holcomb1, HolcombCD1)
Bascom Lamar Lunsford, "To the Pines, to the Pines" (on BLLunsford01)
Marlow & Young [pseud. for Burnett & Rutherford] "Let Her Go, I'll Meet Her" (Champion 15691, 1929; on KMM)
Clayton McMichen's Wildcats, "In the Pines" (Decca 5448, 1937)
Bill Monroe & His Blue Grass Boys, "In The Pines" (Bluebird B-8861, 1941); (Decca 28416, 1952)
Riley Puckett, "The Longest Train I Ever Saw" (Decca 5523, 1938) (Bluebird B-8104, 1939)
Lou Ella Robertson, "In the Pines" (Capitol 1706, 1951)
Texas Jim Robertson & the Panhandle Pushers, "In the Pines" (RCA Victor 20-2907, 1948)
Arthur Smith & his Dixieliners [or Arthur Smith Trio], "In the Pines" (Bluebird B-7943/Montgomery Ward M-7686, 1938)
Pete Seeger, "Black Girl" (on PeteSeeger18) (on PeteSeeger43)
Tenneva Ramblers, "The Longest Train I Ever Saw" (Victor 20861, 1927)
Dock Walsh, "In the Pines" (Columbia 15094-D, 1926)
Ephraim Woodie & the Henpecked Husbands, "Last Gold Dollar" (Columbia 15564-D, 1930) [Filed here by Paul Stamler despite the title - RBW]
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Lonesome Road" (lyrics)
cf. "Old Alec Brown" (lyrics)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Where Did You Sleep Last Night?
NOTES [202 words]: This song became the basis of "Blue Diamond Mines" in the 1970s. -PJS
The elements in this song may vary widely, and it is best recognized by its form and the references to the pines. The plot described above is common but by no means universal.
Cohen briefly summarizes Judith McCulloh's Ph.D. dissertation ("In the Pines": The Melodic-Textual Identity of an American Lyric Folksong Cluster), which analyses over 150 texts she identified with this song. She seems to have identified three common textual motifs: "In the pines, where the sun never shines" (118 texts), "The longest train I ever saw" (96 versions), and "(His/her) head was (found) on the driver's wheel, (His/her) body never was found." There is also a fairly characteristic tune. Still, the boundaries of this type are very vague; long versions almost always include very many floating verses and have no overall plot except perhaps a feeling of loneliness. - RBW

The Marlow & Young [Burnett & Rutherford] recording is a conglomerate of floating verses; I put it here because the one that floated from this song came first, but it could as easily go under, "Goodnight, Irene" -- it has the "Sometimes I live in the country" verse. - PJS

Last updated in version 4.3
File: LoF290

In the Pit from Sin Set Free
DESCRIPTION: "In the pit from sin set free, Sudden death would glory be, That is why I sing with glee, Jesus saves." The miner, even as he struggles to bring up the coal, is thankful to Jesus.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl)
KEYWORDS: religious mining
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 27, "In the Pit from Sin Set Free" (1 text, 1 (non-traditional) tune)
ST Wa027 (Partial)
Roud #7467
NOTES [42 words]: The tune to the Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl recording was supplied by Sam Bayard, as the only one he knew to fit the words supplied by Benjamin S. Davies. The composite is not traditional, and the words may not be. - RBW
File: Wa027

In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree (I)
DESCRIPTION: "The oriole was sweetly singing" over the lovers. Chorus: "In the shade of the old apple tree, Where the love in your eyes I could see... With a heart that is true, I'll be waiting for you, In the shade...." The girl dies and is buried under the tree
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (sheet music)
KEYWORDS: love death burial
FOUND IN: US
Roud #10242
RECORDINGS:
Milton Brown & His Musical Brownies, "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree" (Decca 5129)
Haydn Quartet (Harry Macdonough, vocalist), "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree" (Victor 4337, 1905)
Kentucky Thoroughbreds, "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree" (Broadway 8128)
Uncle Dave Macon, "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree" (Vocalion 5149)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Maggie Jones" (parody of this piece)
NOTES [20 words]: Roud lumps the Williams/van Alstyne original with the bawdy parody, but I would consider them clearly separate songs. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.3
File: JWF112

In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree (II)
DESCRIPTION: A girl shows the singer her anatomy "in the shade of the old apple tree," and he makes the appropriate reply
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960
In the Summer of Sixty

DESCRIPTION: "In the summer of sixty as you very well know The excitements at Pike's Peak was then all the go." The singer buys a ranch, but a miner jumps his claim. He gets into a crooked card game, loses all his money, and flees the area

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1911

KEYWORDS: hardtimes gold poverty gambling cards

FOUND IN: US(Ro)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 89, pp. 189-190, "In the Summer of Sixty" (1 text)
Welsch-NebraskaPioneerLore, pp. 7-8, "In the Summer of '60" (1 text)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 590-591, "In the Summer of Sixty" (1 text)

Roud #4978

File: LPed189

In the Vale of Abraham

DESCRIPTION: "In the vale of Abraham, Christ himself he made Adam." Adam is shown "the bliss of paradise" and the Tree of Knowledge. The fiend lures him to eat. He sees that he is naked, and is driven into the desert

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1430 (British Museum -- Sloane MS. 2593)

KEYWORDS: religious MiddleEnglish

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols, #336, p. 230, "In the Vale of Abraham" (1 text)
Stevick-OneHundredMiddleEnglishLyrics 55, "(Now bethenk thee, gentilman)" (1 text)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #1568
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #2630

MANUSCRIPT: {MSSloane2593}, London, British Library, MS. Sloane 2593, folio 2

NOTES [372 words]: This piece occurs in only one manuscript, although the manuscript is a very important one (Sloane 2593, the "Sloane Lyrics"). Ordinarily that would not be enough reason to include the piece in the Index; there is no direct evidence that it is traditional. There are some interesting indications, though, that -- although clearly a religious piece, and probably a carol -- it was not produced by the church.

For starters, it is set in "the vale of Abraham." If there is such a place in any Bible translation, I've never heard of it.

Second, it says that Christ -- not God, Christ -- created Adam. This may sound trivial, since orthodox doctrine says that God is three-in-one, but it has a strong whiff of several heresies about it.

Next, it says that the forbidden fruit was an apple. This is a widespread belief, but it is definitely not Biblical. There is a Hebrew word that is often rendered "apple" (although it's thought it might be an apricot or quince), but the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge is not called by that term; it's just a fruit, as anyone who reads Genesis will be able to tell (in the Vulgate text used in medieval England, the word is "fructus" -- e.g. Genesis 3:2).
The song says that "the fiend," not "the serpent," tempted Adam. Genesis says that it was the serpent, and only later was the serpent equated with the Devil. This equation would be accepted by the Church, but it doesn't come from Genesis, hinting that the song was written without reference to a Bible manuscript.
In the seventh stanza, Adam is mentioned as naked only after he eats the fruit. Greene suggests that this means that eating caused him to become naked. I don't think this necessarily so, but it's an interesting point.
But the key point is this: Eve does not tempt Adam. The fiend talks to Adam directly, and Adam, not Eve, eats the fruit. Eve is mentioned only obliquely, in verse 1; she has no part in the Fall. The medieval church was utterly misogynist; under no circumstances would they shift the blame from Eve to Adam. This is not a writing of the church, and would not have been accepted by the church.
So I suspect it is "folk."
For more on manuscript Sloane 2593, see the notes to "Robyn and Gandeleyen" [Child 115]. - RBW

In the Valley

DESCRIPTION: "I was in Judah's(?) land by God's (immortal) hand That Jesus Christ was born in the valley, In the valley, in the valley, That Jesus Christ was born in the valley." The early life of Jesus is recounted, and listeners advised to heed and rejoice

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Library of Congress recording)

KEYWORDS: religious Jesus

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 534, "In the Valley" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 534, "In the Valley" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Wells-TheBalladTree, p. 192, "In the Valley" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #11874

NOTES [68 words]: This is a rather odd song; most of the early verses are based on the Biblical accounts of the Nativity in Matthew and Luke -- but the reference to "the valley" has no Biblical connection that I can see. Unless it refers to the Jordan valley, where John the Baptist, and presumably Jesus, began his ministry.

Jean Ritchie learned this song early in life, but forgot most of the words and composed new ones. - RBW

In This Ring You Stand So Fair

DESCRIPTION: "In this ring you stand so far, You look so sad and lonesome, Choose the one that you love best, And choose the one that's handsome." "Now you think you've done quite well, Go prove yourself, get married... And tell her that you love her."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains)

KEYWORDS: playparty love courting

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains, p. 22, "In This Ring You Stand So Fair" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #7894

NOTES [45 words]: Roud (who, as of this writing, had not indexed Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains) appears to lump this with "Getting Married (Hog and Hominy)." The themes are the same, but the form so different that I am splitting them until I see some intermediate forms. - RBW
In This Time Christ Hath Us Sent

DESCRIPTION: "In this time Christ hath us sent, His own son to be present, To dwell with us in verament, God, that is our savior." He was born in an ox's stall. The shepherds came. The star shone. So "Man, be glad in hall and bower"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1537 (Hill MS., Balliol Coll. Oxf. 354)
KEYWORDS: religious Jesus MiddleEnglish
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols, #27, pp. 19-20, "(no title)" (3 texts)
Rickert-AncientEnglishChristmasCarols, pp. 47-48, "(Man, be glad in hall and bower)" (1 text)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #1575
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #2641
ADDITIONAL: Roman Dyboski, Songs, Carols, and Other Miscellaneous Poems from the Balliol Ms. 354, Richard Hill's commonplace book, Kegan Paul 1907 (there are now multiple print-on-demand reprints), #11, p. 7, "(Make we mery in hall & bowr)" (1 text, with an additional text on p. 170)
MANUSCRIPT: {MSSloane2593}, London, British Library, MS. Sloane 2593, folio 24
MANUSCRIPT: London, British Library, MS. Royal 20 A.I, folio 120
NOTES [84 words]: Although no longer found in tradition, it is found in two very important manuscripts. It is in the Hill MS. (Balliol College, Oxford, 354) and in Sloane MS. 2593, an important collection which contains many folk songs. (The British Library Royal manuscript is less important and has only a few scraps of poetry). I am not sure this is a folk song, but its credentials are strong enough to tentatively include it.
For more on manuscript Sloane 2593, see the notes to "Robyn and Gandeleyn" [Child 115]. - RBW

In Town

DESCRIPTION: "Whee-oop! Whoop-ee! Does anyone find any flies on me?" The cowboy arrives in town with his check, having worked for six months on the trail. He can't find a girl who really wants him, so he intends to spend his money on drink.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934
KEYWORDS: cowboy drink
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, p. 416, "In Town" (1 text)
Roud #15582
File: LxA416

Increase of Crime

DESCRIPTION: The singer says London's, or "the Union's," "great increase in crime" results from the rich hoarding gold while the poor are underpaid and hungry, and the police arrest the poor while letting the real criminal thrive.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1871 (broadside, LCOSheet sm1871 12156W)
LONG DESCRIPTION: The singer explains London's, or "the Union's," "great increase in crime." John Bull, or Uncle Sam, respectively, think it's a puzzle in spite of peace and "plenty of gold." Gold is stowed away "while the poor man with hunger may rot" Honest working girls turn to prostitution "when blood sucking firms barely give enough to ward off destitution." Police arrest the poor but "the law cannot touch" real criminals. The rich should "go and visit the homes of the poor... and list to the great voice of hunger But never more wonder at crime"

KEYWORDS: greed poverty crime commerce gold money work nonballad police political

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin 43, "Increase of Crime" (1 text)

Roud #4271

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(1905), "John Bull, Can You Wonder at Crime?" ("I've been thinking of late, I've been thinking"), H. Disley (London), 1860-1883; also Firth c.17(84), Harding B 11(1902), Harding B 11(1903), "John Bull, Can You Wonder at Crime[?]!!"
LOCsSheet, sm1871 12156, "Increase of Crime" ("I've been thinking of late I've been thinking"), Zundel & Brand (Toledo), 1871 (1 text, 1 tune); also sm1872 01263, sm1872 07433, "Increase of Crime"
LOCsinging, as106770, "John Bull Can You Wonder at Crime" ("I've been thinking of late I've been thinking"), unknown, no date

PopMusicMTSU, 94-017 Goldstein ID 000320-BROAD, "Increase of Crime" ("I've been thinking of late I've been thinking"), A.W. Auner (Philadelphia), 1875

NOTES [16 words]: Broadsides Bodleian Harding B 11(1903) and LOCsinging as106770 appear to be the same edition. - BS

Last updated in version 3.0
File: MuLa043

Independent Broom, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, say did you ever in years long gone by, When you bachelor's hall were so lonesomely keeping, To sweep with an old lopsided broom try?" For 24 years there has been no new broom (political party). "The broom Independent" will sweep the state

AUTHOR: Words: Luna E. (Mrs. J. T.) Kellie (1857-1940)

EARLIEST DATE: 1890 (Farmer's Alliance, September 6, 1890 edition, according to Welsch-NebraskaPioneerLore)

KEYWORDS: poverty derivative political

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Welsch-NebraskaPioneerLore, pp. 64-65, "The Independent Broom" (1 text, tune referenced)

ADDITIONAL: Nebraska Folklore, Pamphlet Eighteen, "Farmers' Alliance Songs of the 1890's," Federal Writers' Project, 1938, p. 12, "The Independent Broom" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Star-Spangled Banner" (tune)

NOTES [12 words]: For background on Luna Kellie, see the notes to "Marching for Freedom." - RBW

Last updated in version 3.6

File: Wels064

India's Burning Shores

DESCRIPTION: "I stood beneath the lofty palms on India's burning shores" where the singer meets an old man who declares he is a native of Ireland. He was exiled in the aftermath of 1848. His wife and daughter were killed. The singer promises to take him home to die

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (Beck-FolkloreOfMaine)

KEYWORDS: Ireland rebellion wife children death exile return

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Beck-FolkloreOfMaine, pp. 94-95, "India's Burning Shores" (1 text)

Roud #950

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Irish Patriot" (lyrics, theme)

NOTES [63 words]: Roud lumps this with "The Paisley Officer (India's Burning Sands)" [Laws N2]. But there is no similarity except for the title; that ballad is about a lover in disguise following her soldier to India; this is about an exile from Ireland wanting to go home. It appears to me that it is instead related to "The Irish Patriot," but I am not sure of the nature of the relationship. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5
File: BeMe095

Indian Camp-Meeting Song
DESCRIPTION: "Pitch my tent on the camp ground And a-hu'um, and a hu'um! For to give the devil anotehr round, And a-hu'u'm, and a-hu'u'm! Yes, glory be to God, my soul's high; Leap for joy and let us fly, And a-hu'u'm, and a-hu'u'm!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Henry, from Elsie Burnett)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 195, "Indian Camp-Meeting Song" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Few Days" (lyrics)
NOTES [48 words]: Clearly derived from "Few Days" (or, just possibly, the other way around), but equally clearly a different song. I have no idea why this is called an "Indian" song; presumably it's a reference to that "a-hu'um" lyric, but I rather doubt that is actually derived from any native dialect. - RBW
File: MHAp195

Indian Chief, The
DESCRIPTION: Fragment: "My curse upon the timber with the wood in which it grew, That built the Indian Chief to drown Tom Cannon and his crew"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast)
KEYWORDS: drowning sea ship wreck sailor
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast, p. 126, "The Indian Chief" (1 fragment)
Roud #20539
NOTES [54 words]: Before January 1, 1846 the Indian Chief was lost at Blackwater Bank, Wexford (source: Bourke in Shipwrecks of the Irish Coast v1, p. 61)
Ballads of "The Wreck of the Indian Chief," by Charles Steer and by Sir William Topaz McGonagall, are about a different wreck and rescue (January 8, 1881 in the English channel). - BS
Last updated in version 5.0
File: Ran126A

Indian Children, The
DESCRIPTION: "Once upon this very ground, Indian children played around, Overhead the sky was blue, Underfoot the green grass grew." The children heard the birds, lived in huts, dressed in blankets. The singer wishes they were here so they could learn how to play
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (High-OldOldFolkSongs)
KEYWORDS: Indians(Am.) nonballad home clothes
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
High-OldOldFolkSongs, p. 6, "The Indian Children" (1 text)
Roud #15841
File: High006

Indian Hunter (I), The
DESCRIPTION: "Oh come with me in my light canoe While the sea is calm and the sky is blue, Come with me for I long to go To the isle where mango apples grow. Then come with me and give my love...." The hunter describes how he will care for the girl

AUTHOR: Words: Eliza Cook / Music: Henry Russell ?

EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Randolph); the Cook/Russell sheet music (which I cannot verify as the same song) was published 1836/7

KEYWORDS: love travel home hunting

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 781, "The Indian Hunter" (1 short text, 1 tune)

Roud #2843

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "The Gum Tree Canoe" (theme)

NOTES [27 words]: Randolph's text sounds like a cross between "Gum Tree Canoe" and Christopher Marlowe. Ick.
For background on Eliza Cook, see the notes to "Grandmother's Chair." - RBW

File: R781

Indian Hunter (III), The

DESCRIPTION: "Why does the white man follow my path?" The white man has taken enough but wants more. "...[t]he white man wrongs the one Who never did harm to him"

EARLIEST DATE: 1856 (Thompson-APioneerSongster)

KEYWORDS: greed lament nonballad Indians(Am.)

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Thompson-APioneerSongster 77, "The Indian Hunter" (1 text)
- Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1044, p. 71, "Indian Hunter No. 2" (1 reference)
- ADDITIONAL: Jon W. Finson, _The Voices That Are Gone: Themes in Nineteenth-Century American Popular Song_, Oxford University Press, 1994, pp. 246-248 (1 partial text, 1 partial tune, plus notes)
- Roud #2843

NOTES [55 words]: Finson's notes point out a genuine irony in this song: Cook's ode to the noble savage contrasts sharply with Russell's florid arrangement, which has similarities to Italian opera. Although even Cook's text views the Indian as an ineffective hunter-gatherer.
For background on Eliza Cook, see the notes to "Grandmother's Chair." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1

File: TPS077

Indian Hymn

DESCRIPTION: Alone in the wood the singer looks to heaven; God looks down and says "Poor Indian never fear, I'm with you night and day." When he dies he'll go "above the sky" with no need of blanket or wigwam, "the better habitation share With Jesus good and kind"

AUTHOR: Rev. Silas Tertius Rand ?

EARLIEST DATE: 1945 (Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Indians(Am.)

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 171, "Indian Hymn" (1 text)
- Roud #2729

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "The Little Indian Maid" (theme)
- cf. "When I Go Up to Shinum Place" (theme)

NOTES [31 words]: Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs: "Apparently this was a hymn written by Rev. Silas Tertius Rand who ministered to the Micmac Indians."
See "When I Go Up to Shinum Place" for similar phrases. - BS
Indian Lass, The
DESCRIPTION: At a foreign ale house the singer meets "a young Indian lass [from] a place near Orleans." She invites him home, offers him a drink and they spend the night. She begs him not to leave but he sails away and offers "a health to the young Indian lass!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1852 (broadside, Bodleian Harding Harding B 11(1759))
KEYWORDS: love sex farewell drink sailor Indians(Am.)
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar,Newf,Ont) Britain(England(Lond,North,South))
REFERENCES (9 citations):
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 51, "Young Indian Lass" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 57, "The Indian Lass" (1 text)
Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario 58, "The Young Spanish Lass" (1 text, 1 tune)
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 346-348, "The Spanish Lass (The Young Spanish Lass: The Indian Lass)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Witious-WSRO Wt 502, "Indian Lass" (1 text)
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 109-111, "The Indian Lass" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart1 24, "The Indian Lass" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #29, "The Indian Lass" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1045, p. 71, "The Indian Lass" (1 reference)
ST CrNS051 (Partial)

Indian Song: Ah, Pore Sinner
DESCRIPTION: "Ah, pore sinner, under the rock, Till the moon goes down in blood, You can hide yo'self on the mountain top, To hide your face from God. Um, ah, ta-talk about Jesus! Halle, halle, lu, there's glory in my soul."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious
Indian Student, The

DESCRIPTION: "O Give me back my bended bow ... You took me from my native wild." The singer has studied the White's "ancient pages" but now "I long to see my native home." "I hate the antiquated halls; I hate the Grecian poet's song."

AUTHOR: "Mrs. L. L. D. J." (source: Finson)

EARLIEST DATE: 1851 (source: Finson)

KEYWORDS: home separation lament nonballad Indians(Am.)

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Thompson-APioneerSongster 78, "The Indian Student" (1 text)
- Flanders-ChapBook Flanders-VermontChapBook, pp. 6-9, "The Indian Student" (1 text, very different from Thompson's)

ADDITIONAL: Jon W. Finson, _The Voices That Are Gone: Themes in Nineteenth-Century American Popular Song_, Oxford University Press, 1994, pp. 244-246 (1 partial text with partial tune)

Roud #2844

NOTES [86 words]: Jon W. Finson, _The Voices That Are Gone: Themes in Nineteenth-Century American Popular Song_, Oxford University Press, 1994, says "The most explicit portrayal of the unadaptable Native American [which he regards as a common mid-nineteenth-century motif] appears in 'The Indian Student' (dedicated to Mrs. Mary Gentry, 1851) by 'Mrs. L. L. D. J.'" The composer used a minor tune to suggest a lament, and some Scottish feeling to the combination of words and tune, comparing it to "My Heart's in the Highlands." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2

File: TPS078

Indian's Death Song, The

DESCRIPTION: The Indian tells his captors "Begin, ye tormentors, your threats are in vain, For the son of Alknomook shall never complain." He tells how his valor hurt the white men. Death will free him of pain and take him "to the land where my father is gone."

AUTHOR: Mrs. John Hunter

EARLIEST DATE: 1790 (Atkinson); 1789 (The Philadelphia Songster, according to Thompson-APioneerSongster)

KEYWORDS: death Indians(Am.) captivity punishment

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Thompson-APioneerSongster 75, "Alknomook" (1 text)
- Fife-Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 40, "The Indian's Death Song" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: Frederick Atkinson, _The Banquet of Thalia_ (York, 1790 ("Digitized by Google"), p. 26, "Indian Death Song" (1 text)

Roud #11212

File: FCW040

Indians' Farewell

DESCRIPTION: "When shall we all meet again? (x2) Oft shall glowing hope expire, Oft our wearied love retire, Oft shall death and sorrow reign, Ere we all shall meet again." Though the company is parted, and will in time grow old, they will meet again hereafter
Indygo Blue

DESCRIPTION: "Kind freens if ye listen a while tae me, I'll sing tae ye of a chap in Dundee.... The king ower the bairns was Indygo Blue." He is teased by children, harassed by adults. He breaks a lamp and is imprisoned for ten days, where they wash the blue off him

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)
KEYWORDS: prison commerce colors
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 51, "Indygo Blue" (1 text)
NOTES [67 words]: Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee explains that Indygo Blue sold blue camstone. Camstone/caumstone was a clay or a limestone with a large clay component, used to make pipes and hearth tiles. Normally such a material would be white; blue would be an impurity. It is not clear whether there was a natural source of blue camstone or if Indygo Blue added a blue (presumably indigo) to make it that color. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.5
File: Gath051

Infantry, The

DESCRIPTION: "The infantry, the infantry with dirt behind their ears, They can whip their weight in wild cats and drink their weigh tin beers. The cavalry, the artillery, the lousy engineers, They couldn't lick the infantry in a hundred thousand years."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe)
KEYWORDS: soldier nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 29-30, "The Infantry" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27866
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Son of a Gambolier" (tune & meter) and references there
File: NiM029

Inglewood Cocky, The

DESCRIPTION: "'Twas an Inglewood cocky of whom I've been told, Who died, it is said, on account of the cold." He divides his estate, in the form of assorted animals, among his children, and tells them to raise their children on "pumpkin and beer"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (Paterson's _Old Bush Songs_)
KEYWORDS: father death lastwill
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, p. 109, "The Inglewood Cocky (or, The New England Cocky)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ingo-Ango Fay

DESCRIPTION: "Go fay, go fay! Ingo-ango fay! Circle this house in a hoo-sal lay, In a ingo-ango fay. Go fay, go fay! Ingo-ango fay! Will hew my 'ligion away, Mimbi, kiki, joki lo, In a ingo-ango-fay!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)

KEYWORDS: nonsense foreignlanguage nonballad

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 26, "Ingo-Ango Fay" (1 short text, 1 tune)

NOTES [50 words]: Scarborough says this "seems to be a combination of African and English." Apart from the fact that "African" isn't a language, the formulaic nature of the text implies that it is either nonsense or, just possibly, a code version of English. Without more text, though, we can't establish the latter. - RBW

File: ScaNF026

Initiation of a Brother, The

DESCRIPTION: "Welcome, brother, to our band; Welcome, brother, heart and hand; True, together we will stand, Or together fall. By brave Schomberg's martyr fame, By great William's glorious name, We are brethren still the same, Brethren one and all"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark)

KEYWORDS: ritual nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark 36, "Lines on the Initiation of a Brother" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [44 words]: The description is the complete text from Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark. - BS

William III is of course William of Orange, and Schomberg is General Schomberg, killed at the Battle of the Boyne. For additional background, see the notes to "The Battle of the Boyne (I)." - RBW

File: OrLa036

Injy-Rubber Overcoat

DESCRIPTION: "Injy rubber overcoat, hip-te-doo-den-doo (x3), Injy rubber overcoat, molasses candy shoe. Oh what's the matter Susan, Oh what's the matter, my dear? Oh what's the matter Susan? I'm goin' away to leave you."

AUTHOR: (chrous from Dan Emmett's "What's de Matter, Susy?")

EARLIEST DATE: 1919

KEYWORDS: nonballad clothes separation

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Inky Pinky

DESCRIPTION: "Ink pink, I smell a big stink, And it comes from Y-O-U." Or, "Inky pinky penny wink, Out goes she." Possibly related: "Inky pinky ponky, You're a dirty donkey."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1895 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)

KEYWORDS: playparty

FOUND IN: New Zealand

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 91, "(Inky pinky penny wink)"; "(Ink pink, I smell a big stink)" (2 short texts); there may be some related texts on p. 98; p. 131, "(Inky pinky ponky)" (1 text)

NOTES [23 words]: There are several children's games which include an "ink pink" or "inky pinky" line, but none is clearly identifiable with this piece. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.4

Innishowen

DESCRIPTION: The singer, a resident of Magilligan, crosses Greencastle Ferry to live in Innishowen "where the purty girls go neat and trim in every degree." He describes the girl he loves. Assured of his character, she agrees to marry him

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: love courting beauty home marriage

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H209, pp. 465-466, "Innishowen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9458

NOTES [29 words]: Sam Henry reports that this is based on the actual story of John Smith of Magilligan. Given that the song seems to have had only very local currency, it may even be true. - RBW

Innocent Hare, The

DESCRIPTION: Sportsmen and hounds hunt the hare; after searching, the game is found. She takes off running; the huntsman blows his horn; the hare is killed. The singer declares she has led them a noble run, drinks success to all sportsman and to the "innocent hare"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (recorded from Mark Fuller & Luther Hills)

KEYWORDS: death hunting sports drink animal dog

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 251, "The Innocent Hare" (1 text, 1 tune)
Copper-ASongForEverySeason, pp. 280-281, "Sportsmen Arouse" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1216

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Hare of Kilgrain" (theme: fatal hare hunt)
cf. "The Granemore Hare" (theme: fatal hare hunt)
cf. "The White Hare" (theme: fatal hare hunt)
cf. "Bold Reynard the Fox (Tallyho! Hark! Away!)" (theme)
cf. "The Echoing Horn" (theme)
cf. "Joe Bowman" (theme)
Innocent Prisoner, The

DESCRIPTION: "On a bright starry night sat two lovers." They discuss their plans for marriage, and part for the night. He does not return the next day; he is falsely arrested for stealing money from his work. When at last he is released, she is still waiting AUTHOR: Bradley Kincaid?

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Bradley Kincaid songbook #3)

KEYWORDS: love separation punishment lie reunion prison

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 140-141, "The Innocent Prisoner" (1 text)
Roud #18137

File: MHAp140

Innocents, The

DESCRIPTION: A tale of the birth of Jesus. In the time of Octavian and Herod, Isaiah's prophesy comes true and the King of the Jews is born. Brutal Herod orders the children of Bethlehem slain. Jesus escapes, but there is great mourning in Bethlehem

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1920 (Oxford Book of Ballads)

KEYWORDS: Jesus religious Bible execution death Jew

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
44 B.C.E. - Death of Julius Caesar brings Octavian to the front of Roman politics
37-4 B.C.E. - Reign of Herod the Great in Palestine
31 B.C.E. - Battle of Actium. Octavian gains sole control of Roman world
27 B.C.E. - Octavian named "Augustus" and declared "Princeps" by the Senate
6 B.C.E. - Approximate date of the birth of Jesus
14 C.E. - Death of Octavian/Augustus

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 108, "The Innocents" (1 text)

ST OBB108 (Partial)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Coventry Carol" (subject of the Massacre of the Innocents) and references there

NOTES [247 words]: Loosely based on the story of Herod and the Massacre of the Innocents in Matt. 2:1-18. For more on the Massacre, see the notes to "The Coventry Carol."

However, this is very obviously a literary production. It shows an apparent knowledge of Josephus (at least indirectly), since it refers to Herod as a "Paynim born" -- which is technically true (Herod was of Idumean/Edomite ancestry, and his grandfather had been converted, possibly forcibly, by the Maccabees) but rather unfair; Herod regarded himself as Jewish (see Peter Richardson, Herod: King of the Jews and Friend of the Romans, University of South Carolina Press, 1996, pp. 54-55, summing up information from Josephus, Strabo, and others).

Even more interesting is the reference to Octavian as Roman Emperor. It is true that Octavian was Roman Emperor when Jesus was born (so explicitly Luke 2:1, but we would have known it even without that reference). But the Bible refers only to "Caesar Augustus" (, Kaisaros Augoustou; the Syriac, Armenian, and Georgian versions read "Augustus Caesar" instead). The name "Octavian" never occurs in the Bible. So the author either got the name from Josephus (though this is unlikely; Josephus usually says "Augustus" or "(Young) Caesar") or more likely from a Roman history. This effectively precludes the possibility of folk composition.

Overall, the language of the whole rather over-stylized business strikes me as probably being of the seventeenth century. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: OBB108
Insa Ghaorthaidh Thuit
DESCRIPTION: Gaelic. "The poet laments his single status and wishes for female company."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage loneliness courting marriage lament nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 74, "Insa Ghaorthaidh Thuit" (2 texts)
NOTES [17 words]: The description follows the "English Summary" provided by OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin. - BS
Last updated in version 3.2
File: OCC074

Inside the Pearly Gates
DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Inside the pearly gates A mansion for me waits Will you my neighbor be Across the mystic sea Inside the pearly gates," The second and fourth line of each verse is "Inside the pearly gates." Friends have gone where we shall "live eternally"
AUTHOR: Myles Doss (source: Dyen, see notes)
EARLIEST DATE: 1980 (USFlorida01)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Florida-Alabama Progressive Seven-Shape-Note Singing Convention, "Inside the Pearly Gates" (on USFlorida01)
Last updated in version 5.0
File: RcIntPeG

Inspiration (The Rowan County Teachers)
DESCRIPTION: "The Rowan County teachers Convened the other day... I thought I would attend... And watch our modern teachers." He describes the meeting in the courthouse, praises the teachers' abilities, and hopes they will continue to spread learning
AUTHOR: Words: Edgar Hamm
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 252-253, "Inspiration" (1 text)
NOTES [102 words]: I can't say with certainty that this is the most trivial thing I've ever seen memorialized in song -- but, other than Edgar Hamm's other school song, "Welcome (to Lyda Messer Caudill)," I haven't a better candidate off the top of my head. The claim that the Rowan County school superintendent Lyda Messer Caudill was descended from Mary Queen of Scots is certainly possible (the song being written some three and a half centuries after her death, she would have uncounted descendants) -- but since Mary had only one child, James VI and I, the link to the British royal line must be more recent than Mary Stuart. - RBW
File: ThBa252A

Internationale, The
DESCRIPTION: Communist anthem, translated into most major languages. English: "Arise, you pris'ners of starvation, Arise you wretched of the earth...." The workers are urged to rise up, throw off their chains and their overlords, and work toward a united human race
AUTHOR: Words: Eugene Pottier/Music: Pierre Degeyter
EARLIEST DATE: 1887 (Chants Revolutionnaires)
KEYWORDS: political nonballad foreignlanguage
Intoxicated Rat, The

DESCRIPTION: Singer spills rum on the floor; rat licks it up, gets drunk and carries on. The cat comes out; the rat sobers up and runs back to his hole (or gets caught)

AUTHOR: probably Dorsey Dixon & Wade Mainer

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (recording, Dixon Brothers)

KEYWORDS: drink humorous animal

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 234 "The Intoxicated Rat" (1 text)

DT, INTOXRAT

Roud #11257

RECORDINGS:
The Dixon Brothers, "Intoxicated Rat" (Bluebird B-6327/Montgomery Ward M-4823, 1936; Victor 27495, 1941)
Farley Holden & his Six Ice-Cold Papas, "Intoxicated Rat" (King 628, 1947)
Cisco Houston, "Drunken Rat" (Disc 5067, 1940s)

New Lost City Ramblers, "The Intoxicated Rat" (on NLCR08)

NOTES [35 words]: The first verse of this is apparently derived from "Four Nights Drunk," and the metre of the whole song implies that "Four Nights" may have been the source -- but it clearly has gone in its own direction. - RBW

File: FSWB234
Invasion Song, The

DESCRIPTION: 'Sad and dismal is the tale I now relate to you, 'Tis all about the cattlemen, Them and their murderous crew.' Nate and Nick are "murdered by Frank Canton and his crew" as they defend the town of Buffalo. The singer tells how cattle raiders were repelled

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Burt-AmericanMurderBallads)

KEYWORDS: cowboy homicide war outlaw

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1891-1892 - Peak of the "Johnson County War"

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 173-174, "Invasion Song" (1 text)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp 574-575, "Invasion Song" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Marilyn S. Johnson, _Violence in the West: The Johnson County Range War and the Ludlow Massacre: A Brief History with Documents_, Bedford/St. Martin's, 2009, pp. 80-81, "The Invasion Song" (1 text, from Burt)

Roud #4051

CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "The Blood-Stained Diary" (subject)

NOTES [194 words]: Burt-AmericanMurderBallads links this with an event she calls the Johnson County War, a conflict in Wyoming between honest herders and cattle rustlers. There are, apparently, conflicting versions of what happened; see Burt-AmericanMurderBallads for details, or see "The Blood-Stained Diary."

There are several books on the topic: Billy O'Neil, _The Johnson County War;_ John W. Davis, _Wyoming Range War: The Infamous Invasion of Johnson County;_ Jack R. Gage, _The Johnson County War Is A Pack Of Lies: The Baron's Side AND The Johnson County War Ain't A Pack Of Lies: The Rustler's Side;_ D. F. Babar, _The Longest Rope: The Truth About The Johnson County Cattle War;_ and Marilynn S. Johnson, _Violence In The West: The Johnson County Range War And Ludlow Massacre: A Brief History With Documents._ Other books sound as if they might be about it, but I can't be sure. Just those five titles, though, show clearly how controversial the topic is!

The form of the piece makes me think that it was inspired by "The Persian's Crew" [Laws D4]. But since that song has many different tunes, that is no clue as to the melody.

This is item dB40 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: Burt173

Inverness-Shire

DESCRIPTION: "O as I came in by Inverness-shire, It was to view the brave Loch Ness, It was there I met wi' a fair young maiden...." The singer tries to induce her to marry. She says she had her chance years ago, and refused. He urges her to change her mind.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1985 (recording, Belle Stewart)

KEYWORDS: courting rejection sailor

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

Roud #6856

RECORDINGS:
Belle Stewart, "Inverness-shire" (on SCStewartsBlair01)

NOTES [34 words]: This sounds like it ought to have a broken-token-and-reunion ending, but in the Stewart version at least, it ends with the girl rejecting the sailor and the sailor saying she should change her mind. - RBW

File: RcInvSh

Inverquhomery Ploughing Match, The

DESCRIPTION: The contestants appear before the match: Andrew Penny from Shannas, William Morris from Yokieshill, Alex Cheyne from Middletown. After an ellipsis "a social evening we had through, And parted all a happy crew"

AUTHOR: John Sim (source: Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)
Iomairibh eutrom ho ro (Row Lightly)

DESCRIPTION: In Scots Gaelic; "The milkmaid went to the seashore/And she did a thing that others would not do there/She gathered shell-fish at high tide there/And she broke her leg and cut her hand there." Chorus: "Row lightly, ho ro"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (recording, Allan MacDonald)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage sea work injury worksong worker
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Hebr))
RECORDINGS:
Allan MacDonald, "Iomairibh eutrom ho ro (Row Lightly)" (on Lomax43, LomaxCD1743)
NOTES [11 words]: Why do I get the feeling something else happened to the milkmaid? - PJS
File: RcIEHR

Iounndrain-Mhara, An (Sea-Longing)

DESCRIPTION: Scots Gaelic. The singer laments being far from the sea, "For in the glen I am a stranger." She recalls her brother on the ocean, and asks where is the ship to carry her home. No joy can reach her far from the sea

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Kennedy-Fraser/MacLeod-SongsOfTheHebrides)
KEYWORDS: ship exile foreignlanguage
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Hebr))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 11, "Fath Mo Mhulaid a Bhith Ann (Being Here Has Caused My Sorrow)" (1 text+English translation, 1 tune)
Kennedy-Fraser/MacLeod-SongsOfTheHebrides II, pp. 225-229, "Sea-Longing (An Iounndrain-Mhara)" (1 text+English translation, 1 tune)
NOTES [45 words]: The Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland text of this is long and conveys better than anything I've seen the emptiness they say sea-folk feel away from the waves. The Kennedy-Fraser/MacLeod-SongsOfTheHebrides text is shorter and more lyric, probably somewhat trimmed. - RBW
File: K011

Ireland Must Be Heaven, For My Mother Came from There

DESCRIPTION: "I've often heard my daddy peak of Ireland's lakes and dells. The place must be like heaven if it's half like what he tells." As proof he offers the fact that his mother was an angel, and she came from Ireland

AUTHOR: Words: Joe McCarthy & Howard Johnson / Music: Fred Fisher
EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (sheet music)
Ireland's Glory

DESCRIPTION: In 1776 "we were lazy and slavish," "Our woman were sluts and their husbands all slovens" and "The King was a god." But "Our peasants grew smart," "We could look at a King without much admiration" and "From a nation of slaves we've emerg'd into glory"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c.1783 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)

KEYWORDS: pride nonballad patriotic royalty

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 3, "Ireland's Glory" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 11, "Ireland's Glory" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [675 words]: The complete title of Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion's text is "Ireland's Glory" or "A Comparative View of Ireland, in the Years 1776 and 1783."

Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion p. 36: "Street ballads we were used then [1724 and 1725] as a form of protest by the Anglo-Irish "garrison," but this protest was not so much nationalism as the reaction of planters merely demanding the same rights as were enjoyed by the people of Britain. A spirit of independence awoke among the Anglo-Irish when a Volunteer army was raised, in 1779, to check a possible invasion from the combined forces of France, Spain and Holland. Martial enthusiasm extended to the Catholic population. Eventually some 80,000 men were in arms. With the example of the revolution achieved by their "fellow subjects" in America, they became conscious of their force and began to claim the removal of economic disabilities, (song [Zimmermann] 2). They enforced freedom of trade in 1780 and legislative independence in 1782. Songs reflected the increased feeling of self-confidence, (song [Zimmermann] 3)."

The text states
But great was the change in the year seventy-seven.

We then were inspired by a spark sent from heaven.

Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 speculates that the Battle of Saratoga may have been that spark. - BS

Possibly, but there were plenty of events in Ireland which might have inspired it. For example, 1778 saw the repeal of most of the anti-Popery act of 1704, giving Catholics much greater land and worship rights (see Peter and Fiona Somerset Fry, A History of Ireland, pp. 183-184); I believe this was proposed in 1777. The same period saw the rise of the Volunteers, which included Catholics; Terry Golway, For the Cause of Liberty, p. 51, reports that there were 40,000 armed Volunteers by 1778, and Mike Cronin, A History of Ireland, p. 99, says there were 80,000 two years later. Cronin, p. 98, mentions much other legislation passed in the late 1770s. Obviously this was largely in response to the American rebellion, but any of these several events might have helped inspire the song. (See the notes to "The Song of the Volunteers.")

1782 was indeed the year of Irish semi-independence, as Grattan's Parliament gave Ireland what would later be called "Home Rule." The economy also improved. (We should note that Ireland had had a parliament before that, but had had very little real power. For one thing, the British had held absolute veto power on legislation through a trick known as Poyning's Law, which had hobbled the parliament since 1494. Plus the British parliament retained the right to deal with Irish surpluses -- see, e.g., Cronin, p. 95. And, until Lord Townshend changed the rules in 1767, parliament were elected for the life of the monarch, which of course made it completely unresponsive to events; see Cronin, p. 96).

The old Irish parliament had to be absolutely unified to accomplish anything, and even then, the British could find ways to get around their legislation. Grattan's more independent parliament changed that.

There were, sadly, three problems. One was that the parliament and electorate were still Protestant. The second was that England still controlled Irish trade -- and still had a veto under Poyning's Law.

And third, while it was an independent parliament, it wasn't a particularly representative parliament. As in England, there were many "rotten" boroughs. Robert Kee, in The Most Distressful Country (volume I of The Green Flag), p. 36, notes that "once the independence of the Irish parliament had been technically granted, the English government's hold over it was actually tightened by its systematic ever-increasing outlay of Crown patronage in Ireland."

Gradually Irish optimism turned to disillusionment, ending in the 1798 rebellion and the Act of Union. The truly sad part is, Grattan's Parliament "did" represent progress, and the biggest single concession England made until the 1920s. Had Ireland been a little more patient, a century of violence could perhaps have been saved. - RBW

Ireland's Liberty Tree

DESCRIPTION: A tree has been planted in Ireland ... 'Tis called 'Ireland's Liberty-Tree!' Protect the tree. Emmet, Fitzgerald and Grattan died in its defence. Sheil and O'Connell forsee freedom. "Heaven will surely protect those Who guard Ireland's Liberty-Tree!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: second half 19C? (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)

KEYWORDS: Ireland nonballad patriotic

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 67, "Ireland's Liberty Tree" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [287 words]: Robert Emmet (1780-1803) "Irish nationalist rebel leader. He led an abortive rebellion against British rule in 1803 and was captured and executed." (source: "Robert Emmet" at the Wikipedia site)

Lord Edward Fitzgerald (1763-1798) Irish revolutionary. "As a member of the United Irishmen, he helped organize the Irish Rebellion of 1798 against British rule in Ireland." He was arrested and died of his wounds in Newgate prison. (source: "Lord Edward Fitzgerald" at the Wikipedia site)

Henry Grattan (1746-1820) Lead the campaign leading, in 1782, to an Irish parliament in Dublin. He advocated Catholic emancipation in 1793. He opposed Union, which ended the Irish Parliament in 1801. In the English House of Commons he continued supporting Catholic emancipation. (source: "Henry Grattan: 1746-1820" in The Age of George III at the Web of English History site)

Daniel O'Connell (1775-1847) tried to convince the British to reform administration of Ireland and was the leading figure on behalf of Catholic Emancipation. - BS

For Emmet, see also "Bold Robert Emmet." Fitzgerald is the subject of "Edward (III) (Edward Fitzgerald)." Grattan role is covered in the notes to "Ireland's Glory." And Daniel O'Connell is the subject of a vast array of songs; see the notes and references under "Daniel O'Connell (I)."

For other songs about the Tree of Liberty, and some discussion of its origin, see the notes to "The Tree of Liberty." - RBW
Irish Boy and the Priest, The DESCRIPTION: A son of Catholic father and Protestant mother prefers Protestantism. Father takes him to confession. The priest explains that all Catholics pay their confessor except the Pope who prays directly to God at no charge. The boy decides to do the same.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark)
KEYWORDS: money religious father clergy
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark 29, "The Irish Boy and the Priest" (1 text)
NOTES [82 words]: Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark prints no music for this entry but has no comment as to whether or not it was sung. The text is rhymed couplets. - BS
There is something rather curious about this, in that the Catholic church generally does not recognize marriages made by other denomination, and also expects children of Catholic marriages to be brought up Catholic. Both parents are expected to agree to this. So -- clever as is the conceit of this song -- it would not often happen in practice. - RBW

Irish Colleen, The

DESCRIPTION: A party of four girls, from England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland each toasts her own land and national flower. "Though the flowers all resemble there's a vast gulf between The rose, leek, and thistle, and the Irish colleen"

AUTHOR: W. C. Robey
EARLIEST DATE: before 1885 (broadside, Bodleian Firth b.28(10a/b) View 2 of 8)
KEYWORDS: party wine England Ireland Scotland nonballad patriotic flowers
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peacock, pp. 366-368, "The Irish Colleen" (1 text plus a fragment, 2 tunes)
ST Pea366 (Partial)
Roud #6459
RECORDINGS:
Mike Kent, "The Irish Colleen" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
Jack Mooney, "The Irish Colleen" (on ITMA/CapeShoreNL)
Patrick W Nash, "The Irish Colleen" (on PeacockCDROM)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth b.28(10a/b) View 2 of 8, "The Irish Colleen," R. March and Co. (London), 1877-1884
NOTES [58 words]: The authorship claim is from the broadside: "Written and composed by W.C. Robey Sung by Miss Lizzie Howard Music, Francis, Day & Hunter, London, W."
Library of Congress American Memory 19th century song sheets collection lists 13 different songs, not including this one, attributed to W. C. Robey and published in New York between 1882 and 1884. - BS
Last updated in version 4.5

Irish Emigrant's Lament (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "I never will forget the sorrows of that day," when the singer sailed from home. He knows he will miss the land, the friends, "the trusty heart [of the girl] I once could call my own." He will eat strangers' bread, and feel their scorn, and wish for home

AUTHOR: William Kennedy
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: emigration separation farewell
FOUND IN: Ireland Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Irish Family, The

DESCRIPTION: Singer describes his family: "Me father had a horse/And me mother she'd a mare... So we'd a ride from father's horse/And a gallop from mother's mare." Cho: "So the more we have to drink/And the merrier we shall be/For we all do belong/To an Irish family"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Sharp mss.)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer describes life in his family: "Me father had a horse/And me mother she'd a mare/Sister Susie had a rabbit/And Johnny he'd a hare/So we'd a ride from father's horse/And a gallop from mother's mare/We'd a pie from Susie's rabbit/And a course from Johnny's hare." Successive verses follow the same pattern of ownership and use. Chorus: "So the more we have to drink/And the merrier we shall be/For we all do belong/To an Irish (happy) familie"
KEYWORDS: farming drink food nonballad animal bird bug horse sheep brother family father mother sister
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,South))
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Bk 7, "Song of Stock" (1 text)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 275, "The Irish Familie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henderson-VictorianStreetBallads, p. 70, "My Father Kept a Horse" (1 text)
DT, HAPFFAMILY
Roud #850
RECORDINGS:
Harold Covill, "The Happy Family" (on FSB10)
Jasper Smith, "Father Had A Knife" (on Voice11)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
My Father Had a Horse
NOTES [58 words]: It's worth noting that although the song was collected twice under the name of "The Irish Family," it's never been found in Ireland. - PJS
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland claims that this tune is "similar" to "Click Go the Shears." There are certainly points of contact, but it's not close enough (in my opinion) to list them as the same. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.4
File: K275

Irish Free State, The

DESCRIPTION: "I went to see David, to London to David, and what did he do? He gave me a Free State, a nice little Free State, A Free State that's bound up with Red, White, and Blue." The singer rejects any British influence and demands freedom from the crown
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Galvin)
KEYWORDS: Ireland freedom
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Dec. 6, 1921 - Negotiations for the Irish Treaty concluded. (It will be accepted by a bare majority of the Irish government, with the minority, including President de Valera, demanding more)

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Galvin-IrishSongsOfResistance, pp. 71-72, "The Irish Free State" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, IRISHFREE*

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Ash Grove" (tune)

NOTES [1749 words]: In the aftermath of the 1916 Dublin Rising, Irish opinion was strongly divided about what came next. Had the British responded with concessions, Ireland might still be part of the Commonwealth. But it was World War I, and the British in any case have never been good at understanding the needs of their colonies. Gradually, the quiet Irish hostility turned to open warfare.

The result was mass rebellion and mass reprisal (for this, see e.g. "The Bold Black and Tan" and "General Michael Collins"). Eventually, the British had to make a decision: They could either make peace through genocide or they could negotiate. Give them this much credit: They decided to treat with the provisional Irish government.

The "David" of the song is David Lloyd George, the British Prime Minister at the time. The Irish negotiators were a divided group; the two most distinguished were Arthur Griffith, who simply wanted peace and self-determination, and Michael Collins, the de facto head of the guerrilla army, who was much more determined to have independence.

Notably missing was Eamon de Valera, who was head of the Irish government insofar as it existed. He had named his arch-rival Collins, who didn't want the job, to the commission, but de Valera was unwilling to go himself. Coogan, p. 228, says that that was the "worst single decision of de Valera's life, for himself and for Ireland." (And that, frankly, is saying a lot, because de Valera made quite a few irrational choices.)

The negotiators were stuck; de Valera's behavior meant that they ended up with divided opinions and no real list of demands. (According to Coogan, p. 230, de Valera eventually admitted to deliberately creating a delegation he expected to deadlock: Griffith the moderate, Collins the fire-breather who was nonetheless a realist, Erskine Childers the extremist.) In the end, the deal they worked out involved withdrawal of British forces from Ireland, and complete internal self-government; the only limitations were in defense and external affairs, and those very limited. They also got their way on trade relations with England.

It was a great deal by rational standards. But not by de Valera standards. The Treaty contained two objectionable provisions: Ulster -- which had already been granted a separate government (Moody/Martin/Keogh/Kiely, p. 285) -- was given the right to remain British (a boundary commission was promised, but it never did its work; the British refused to set it up with Ireland in conflict, and other attempts to a solution were halted by intransigence either in Dublin or Ulster; in any case, Lloyd George had made irreconcilable informal promises about it to the Ulster and Nationalist Irish), and Ireland was to become a Dominion, with internal autonomy but still formally under the British crown.

For more on the evolution of this problem, see especially "A Loyal Song Against Home Rule."

Kee, pp. 156-157, defines the internal Irish problem pretty well, in my view: As long as there was no serious hope of an Irish republic, the rebels (Fenians, Irish Revolutionary Brotherhood, Volunteers) didn't have to resolve their differences. Now, though....

As Kee says, "There had always been moderates and extremists in the movement though the difference had been fairly efficiently concealed. More important: there had always been realists and fantasists and this difference was now revealed clearly for the first time as some of the toughest of the extremists in the past -- Commandants of the IRA like MacEoin, of Ballinalee, and Mulcahy the Chief of Staff -- followed Collins, the toughest of them all, in support of the Treaty." He notes, sadly, that it was the often the widows and family who were the worst fantasists: The mother of Padraic Pearse, the widow of Tom Clarke, the sister of Terence MacSwiney.

The Ulster question was an ironic one in that the compromise it produced sounded good and was unworkable. The Ulster Unionists had initially wanted all nine counties of Ulster; had they their way, Ireland might well be united now (if still highly uncomfortable), because Ulster would have had a Catholic majority. On the other hand, some of the British, including Winston Churchill, had been willing to give away Ulster (see, e.g., Coogan, p. 334); they knew it would bring more trouble than it was worth. But they couldn't simply hand Ulster to the Irish; parliament wouldn't stand for it and the Unionists would fight (Randolph Churchill, the father of Winston, had said, "Ulster will fight; Ulster will be right"; Moody/Martin/Keogh/Kiely, p. 273).

The temporary compromise -- a six county Ulster still part of Britain -- might have been adjusted had Ireland been organized enough for further negotiations (a boundary commission, religious protections, some self-government). Or Michael Collins, who had had thoughts of conquering Ulster, might have pulled another rabbit out of his hat. But Collins died, the Irish Civil War came, and further negotiations had to wait until after Ulster Protestants and Catholics had hunkered down and come to hate each other.

In the interim, the British has insisted on maintaining Ulster as a six-county unit (rather than ceding the two Catholic counties while retaining the four Protestant areas). Even so, Ulster actually was a safer place for both Catholics and Protestants during the twenty years after the Treaty was accepted than was the Irish Republic. In any case, Britain and the provisional Irish government were both willing to try to solve Ulster; this was not the final cause of Ireland's war.

The worst of it was, if Ireland had not descended into war, the problem might have solved itself. The boundary commission, if done properly, would have left Ulster with only about four and a half counties -- and would quite possible have split off (London)derry, the second city of the province. Almost everyone agreed that this rump would be economically unviable (indeed, a lot of people thought the six counties unviable); they would be forced in time to turn to Ireland. That question was never to be resolved.

The idea of Dominion status, and the loyalty to the crown it required, proved the bigger sticking point at the time; de Valera was only one of many who refused to acknowledge any ties to Britain (de Valera in fact resigned his Presidency). It was only words -- they were supposed to pledge fealty to the King, but they didn't have to act on that fealty -- but, to the Irish radicals, they were fighting words.

Kee, p. 150, says that the real problem in the negotiations with Britain was that the issues of Crown and Partition somehow came to be linked, which forced the outcome. His opinion is that, with more "give" on each side, Ireland could have been more strongly linked to the crown while being kept united. For the majority of the Irish people, this would probably have been a better solution. It's less clear that it would have satisfied the radical nationalists.

Given the course the negotiations had taked, the commissioners insisted that the deal they brought home was the most Britain would offer -- and they were probably right; Lloyd George's government, after all the disasters it had faced, was shaky and could not afford to look any weaker than it already did. A bare majority of Irish leaders accepted this, and on January 7, 1922 the Irish Dail voted (by 64 votes to 57) to accept the treaty. The population was almost certainly much more heavily in favor, since opponents of Sinn Fein generally had not dared to run in the election which had created this Dail.

If there were defects in the Treaty, one may lay much of the blame on the Irish government. It gave its negotiators plenipotentiary powers, but never told them what to ask for, and then tried to change the results. De Valera's conduct was particularly suspect -- he had hinted that he would accept dominion status, but when the commissioners came back with something that was essentially that, he condemned it out of hand.

The result was a civil war which lasted until 1923. It took two new constitutions, a split within Sinn Fein, the founding of the Fianna Fail and Sine Gael parties, sundry assassinations (including that of Collins), and many restrictive government measures to bring political stability to Ireland.

This even though the people clearly supported the Treaty and the Free State; they wanted an end to war. (Kee makes the valid point, p. 158, that the IRB and other militants hadn't paid any attention to the people's wishes until that point; there was no logical reason why they should start now.)

Younger (pp. 313-314) gives vote totals for the election which follows (which was largely a referendum on the treaty): "pro-Treaty panel candidates gained 239,193 votes of a total of 620,283 votes cast [39%]; anti-treaty panel candidates... polled 133,864 [22%]; and Labour, Independents and Farmers won between them 247,226 votes [40%]."

Coogan, p. 329, notes that this election cost both the de Valera and Collins factions in parliament, but the former much more heavily: "Certainly the result was a severe blow to the de Valera faction which held only thirty-six seats, a loss of twenty-two. The Collins/Griffith party won fifty-eight seats, a loss of eight, but which taken with the pro-Treaty Labour Party's seventeen seats, the Farmers' Party's seven, the six independents, and the four Unionists represented a solid pro-Treaty majority."

Still, the government that was elected was fragile, and there had already been some shooting. It would get worse.

"King George and Queen Mary" are, of course, George V of England and his wife Mary of Teck, to whom, under the Treaty, the Irish still owed technical allegiance.

The term "Free State" is an interesting one. The Irish were pushing for the establishment of the "Saorstat Eireann." That's usually translated as the "Republic of Ireland," and of course the more vehement Irish nationalists called themselves "Republicans."
The British, however, proposed to translate it as "Free State" (Coogan, p. 263). This little bit of wordplay solved a major problem on the British side while technically giving the Irish what they wanted. At least, what the Irish-speaking ones wanted. Evidently not all that the Anglophones (which were, of course, all of them) wanted. Although Galvin lists no author for this piece, it definitely looks contemporary with the events described; it appears that someone is putting words in the mouth of either Collins or Griffith. - RBW

Bibliography

- Coogan: Tim Pat Coogan, Michael Collins, 1992 (I used the 1996 Roberts Rinehart edition)
- Kee: Robert Kee, Ourselves Alone, being volume III of The Green Flag (covering the brief but intense period from 1916 to the establishment of constitutional government in the 1920s), Penguin, 1972
- Younger: Calton Younger, Ireland's Civil War (1968, 1979; I used the 1988 Fontana edition)

---

Irish Girl, The

DESCRIPTION: (The singer meets a girl by the river, lamenting her love gone to America). (She describes the pain of love.) (She) wishes she were far away with her love, or were a butterfly or a nightingale or a rose to be with her lover

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1845 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(2654))

KEYWORDS: love separation bird loneliness floating verses

FOUND IN: Ireland Britain (England (South), Scotland (Aber)) US (Ap, MW, SE, So, SW) Canada (Mar, Newf)

REFERENCES (27 citations):

- Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 292-293, "The Irish Girl" (3 texts)
- Broadwood-EnglishTraditionalSongsAndCarols, pp. 60-65, "The Irish Girl or The New Irish Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Copper-ASongForEverySeason, pp. 246-247, "As I Walked Out" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #48, p. 2, "The Irish Girl"; #59, p. 2, "The Irish Girl"; #61, p. 2, "The Irish Girl" (3 text plus 2 fragments)
- Greig/Duncan5946, "The Irish Girl" (9 texts plus a single stanza on p. 595, 5 tunes)
- Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H711, pp. 234-235, "The Manchester Angel" (1 text, 1 tune -- a fragment with no beginning)
- OLochlann-MoreIrishStreetBallads 2, "The New Irish Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 131, "The Irish Girl" (1 text)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 131, "The Irish Girl" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
- Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #223, "That Irish Girl" (1 text)
- Davis-TraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 21, "The Lass of Roch Royal" (The "F" text in the appendix appears to be this, though heavily mixed with floating stanzas)
- Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 159-161, "The Irish Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, p. 90, "The Irish Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart2 46, "The Irish Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 180, "The Irish Girl" (1 text plus 2 fragments, 3 tunes, but the "A" text is "Handsome Molly"; "B" and "C" are single-verse fragments which may or may not be this song)
- Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 44, "The Irish Girl" (1 text, 1 tune, a confused and conflate mix of this song and "Farewell Ballymoney (Loving Hannah; Lovely Molly)"
- Reeves/Sharp-TheidiomOfThePeople 48, "The Irish Girl" (1 text)
- Dean-FlyingCloud, p. 109, "Molly Bawn" (1 short text)
- Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 98, "The Lament" (1 text)
- Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 195-198, "Pretty Polly" (2 texts, 2 tunes, even more infected by floating material than most songs of this group, but it appears to be this piece)
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 81, "My Irish Polly" (1 text, 1 tune, a long but very confused and mixed version)
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 46, "Ruby Were Her Lips" (1 text, 1 tune)
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladsOfIreland, p. 15, "The Irish Girl" (1 text)
Green-OnlyAMiner-RecordedCoalMiningSongs, p. 230, "The Irish Girl" (1 text)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 116, "The Irish Girl" (1 text)
DT, IRISHGRL* IRISHGR2*
ADDITIONAL: Maud Karpeles, _Folk Songs of Europe_, Oak, 1956, 1964, p. 47,"The Irish Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #308
RECORDINGS:
Robert Cinnamond, "I Wish My Love Was a Red Rose" (on IRRCinnamond02)
James McDermott, "Let the Wind Blow High or Low" (on IRHardySons)
Walter Pardon, "Let the Wind Blow High or Low" (on Voice10)
BROADSIDES:
LOCSinging, as106240, "The Irish Girl," J. Andrews (New York), 1853-1859; also as106250, "The Irish Girl"
Murray, Mu23-y1:025, "The Irish Girl," James Lindsay Jr. (Glasgow), 19C
NLScotland, L.C.Fol.178.A.2(065), "The Irish Girl," James Lindsay (Glasgow), c.1875
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Farewell Ballymoney (Loving Hannah; Lovely Molly)" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Buddy Won't You Roll Down the Line" (lyrics)
cf. "Bonny Tavern Green" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Lover's Resolution" (floating lyrics)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
I Wish I Were Yon Red, Red Rose
The Blue Cuckoo (the singer's name on IRHardySons)
NOTES [436 words]: This mostly-lyric piece easily degrades and easily mixes. Sedley and Sharp both had versions which mixed with "Farewell Ballymoney (Loving Hannah; Lovely Molly)"; it is often hard to guess which song Roud will include a particular version with Sharp compounded the problem by tacking on verses from another version. And because the song is so lyric, it often loses parts (e.g. the Henry text has lost the first verses which describe the whole motivation). What tends to survive is the handful of "I wish I were" lyrics, e.g.
I wish I were a butterfly, I would light on my love's breast.
I wish I were a linnet, I would sing my love to rest.
I wish I were a nightingale, I'd sit and sing so clear,
I wish I were a red, red rose... and (he) to be the gardener.
Based on the contents, this could well be a degenerate fragment of "Erin's Flowery Vale (The Irish Girl's Lament)" [Laws O29]; at least some versions of this scattershot song seem to presuppose the situation described in that. But Laws ignores all the various versions of this song he should have known (e.g. Sharp, Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, Brown). It must therefore be assumed that he either separates them or that he thinks these versions too lyric to include in his list. In any case, we've separated them. - RBW
Some clarity is provided for this confusing song by the LOCSinging broadsides as106250 and as106250. Their description, omitting floating verses and floating themes, is: The singer meets an expensively dressed Irish girl, crying and tearing her hair. Her lover has left and she won't follow. The lover says "I was of some noble blood and she of low degree." Her lover still loves her. All of the broadsides I have seen include the floating verse "I wish I was in Dublin town [or Manchester, or Monaghan], and sitting on the grass, With a bottle of whiskey in my hand and on my knee a lass, We'd call for liquors merrily, pay before we go, And fold thee in my arms let the winds blow high or low."
Among the floating verses is this by Walter Pardon on Voice10, connecting to "The Manchester Angel" version:
I wish I were in Manchester, a-sitting on the grass
With a bottle of whisky in my hand and upon my knee a lass.
Also collected and sung by David Hammond, "The Irish Girl" (on David Hammond, "I Am the Wee Fatorie Man: Folk Songs of Ireland," Tradition TCD1052 CD (1997) reissue of Tradition LP TLP 1028 (1959)).
Broadside LOCSinging as106240: J. Andrews dating per Studying Nineteenth-Century Popular Irish Girl's Opinion, An

DESCRIPTION: "An Irish girl, and proud of it, a word I'd like to say... Paddy fights for England.... Then give to him old Ireland." No longer are Irishmen hung for wearing of the green, thanks to Dan O'Connell.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland)

KEYWORDS: Ireland nonballad patriotic

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1775-1847 - Life of Daniel O'Connell

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 66, "An Irish Girl's Opinion" (1 text)

Roud #V5153

BROADSIDES:

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Daniel O'Connell (I)" (subject: Daniel O'Connell) and references there

Irish Harvestmen's Triumph, The

DESCRIPTION: Irishmen that "reap the English harvest" should be prepared to fight "with John Bull and his crew." Irish harvestmen beat some Englishmen and go to look for work. At a railway line they fight navvies and beat them with bricks, stones, scythes, and hooks.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c.1860 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)

KEYWORDS: fight harvest drink England Ireland patriotic

FOUND IN: Ireland Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 66, "A New Song on the Irish Harvest Men's Triumph Over the English" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 104, "John Bull and His Crew" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

Roud #13468

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 2235a, "The Irish Harvests Triumph Over the English ," P. Brereton (Dublin), c.1867; also 2806 c.8(223), "The Irish Harvestmen's Triumph" [title spelled "Thriump"]

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Boys of Old Erin the Green" (subject)

NOTES [191 words]: Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion's variant last verse and other comment identifying the "holy priest" as Father Maguire are both illustrated by Bodleian broadside 2806 c.8(223).

The navvies were British railway workers [see Coleman, Terry The Railway Navvies:A History of the Men Who Made the Railways (BCA, 1972)]

Zimmermann guesses at the tune: "The final words of the last stanzas suggest "The Shamrock Shore," Joyce, No. 415." Creighton's tune, with an Angelo Dornan fragment, is probably a better bet. - BS

The name "John Bull" as a symbol for England or the English comes from John Arbuthnot's 1712 satire The History of John Bull, and does not represent a real person. (It's interesting to note that "The Roast Beef of Old England" by Richard Leveridge [c. 1670-1758] was an anthem of the Royal Navy.)

Dornan's fragment ("Be sure you're well provided for With comrades stout and true, For you'll have to fight both day and night With John Bull and his crew") initially made me think of a navy song -- a boast to the French, perhaps, during the Napoleonic Wars. Which just shows how hard it can be to Irish Jaunting Car, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, my name is Larry Doolin, I'm a native of the soil." The singer offers a day's diversion in his red-and-green jaunting car. He claims the Queen enjoyed his car, and the Lord Lieutenant recommended it. Others have enjoyed it a well

AUTHOR: unknown (New-Comic-Songster says "Composed by Valentine Vousden"

EARLIEST DATE: 1884 (Universal Irish Songster)

KEYWORDS: royalty travel

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 115-116, "The Irish Jaunting Car" (1 text)
New-Comic-Songster, pp. 42-43, "The Irish Jaunting Car" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #5497

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Bonnie Blue Flag" (tune & meter) and references there

NOTES [39 words]: Not to be confused with Sam Henry's "My Irish Jaunting Car (The Irish Boy)."

Although I have not (yet) found a copy of this reliably dated before 1884, it must be older, since Harry McCarthy used the tune for "The Bonnie Blue Flag." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: Dean115B

Irish Jubilee, The

DESCRIPTION: "A short while ago An Irishman named Doherty Was elected to the Senate By a very large majority." This is cause for a tremendous party, described in loving and silly detail, e.g. those invited included "Old men, young men, Girls who were not men at all."

AUTHOR: Words: James Thornton / Music: Charles Lawler

EARLIEST DATE: 1890 (sheet music)

KEYWORDS: party humorous political

FOUND IN: US(MW,So) Canada(Mar) Ireland

REFERENCES (9 citations):
Randolph 472, "The Irish Jubilee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 363-366, "The Irish Jubilee" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 472)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp.286-288, "Irish Jubilee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 80, pp. 101-102, "The Irish Jubilee" (1 text)
Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 160-162,247, "Irish Jubilee" (1 text, 2 tunes)
Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, pp. 225-228, "The Irish Jubilee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster 49, "The Irish Jubilee" (1 text, 1 tune)
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 166, "The Irish Jubilee" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: James P. Leary, Compiler and Annotator, _Wisconsin Folklore_. University of Wisconsin Press, 2009, article "The Wanigan Songbook" by Isabel J. Ebert, pp. 215-216, "Irish Jubilee" (1 text, sung by Emory DeNoyer)

Roud #2916

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Auld Lang Syne" (tune for final half-verse)
cf. "The Kelligrews Soiree"
cf. "O'Dooley's First Five O'Clock Tea" (theme)
cf. "Gilhooly's Dinner Party" (theme)

NOTES [87 words]: William H. A. Williams, _Twos Only an Irishman's Dream_. University of Illinois Press, 1996, pp. 144-145, implies that this is about a real event: "'The Irish Jubilee' (1890) describes a massive wingding to celebrate the rise of a local Tammany politico. When Doherty is elected to the Senate, he decides to celebrate. He throws a banquet, sending out invitations in twenty different languages." I can't find a record of a New York Senator named Doherty. There may have been a state senator by that name, to be sure. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: R472
Irish Laborer, An

DESCRIPTION: Singer is an Irish laborer, willing to work but told "No Irish wanted here". He retains his pride, praising the Irish for their generosity and their willingness to fight for America. He asks Americans to welcome the Irish.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Creighton-NovaScotia)
KEYWORDS: emigration discrimination Ireland nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 84, "An Irish Laborer" (1 text)
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 123, "Irish Labourer" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, IRSHLABR*
Roud #1137
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "No Irish Need Apply" (subject)
cf. "The Honest Irish Lad" (subject)
cf. "There Is Na Luck About the House" (tune)
NOTES [59 words]: The potato famine of 1845 brought millions of Irish emigrants to America; they were often resented by nativists and segments of the American labor movement. This is clearly related to "No Irish Need Apply," sharing a few lines, but as it consists mostly of praise and exhortations, and lacks the narrative of that song, I've classified it separately. - PJS
File: Be084

Irish Mail Robber, The [Laws L15]

DESCRIPTION: The Irish youth turns bad despite his father's warnings. To support his wild habits, he turns to crime and is at last convicted of mail robbery. He is sentenced to transportation for nine years, forcing him to leave his father and sweetheart

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster)
KEYWORDS: father crime robbery separation transportation punishment
FOUND IN: US(NE,So)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Laws L15, "The Irish Mail Robber"
Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster, pp. 140-141, "The Irish Mail Robber" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph 164, "A Prisoner for Life" (4 texts, 3 tunes, but only the "A" text is this piece)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 76-77, "A Prisoner for Life" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 164A)
DT 424, IRSHMAIL*
Roud #1905
File: LL15

Irish Mother's Lament, An

DESCRIPTION: The Irish mother nurses her child and laments for her dead husband, "Won't you come back to your fond wife's arms? Have you no care for your sweet babe's charms?" She says she has no friends and no hope; "Cushla mavourneen, why did you die?"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: love death children father mother abandonment mourning
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H600, pp. 140-141, "An Irish Mother's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9448
File: HHH600
Irish Paddy

DESCRIPTION: An Irishman says the Irish always supported the English in battle: "The Irishman was never behind With his bayonet by his side Pat have often turned the tide And helped build the honour of old England." Yet "with England somehow we never can agree"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA-Leach)
KEYWORDS: war England Ireland nonballad patriotic
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
Roud #30121
RECORDINGS:
Pat Critch, "Irish Paddy" (on MUNFLA-Leach)
NOTES [50 words]: This obviously sounds like an Irish song. But the population of Newfoundland was about half English Protestants, half Irish Catholics. So it would make sense in a Newfoundland context too -- perhaps even more than in Ireland, because the people of Newfoundland often supported Britain in its wars. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.4
File: Ml3IrPad

Irish Patriot, The

DESCRIPTION: "On Africa's burning shore" an old Irishman says an English lord killed his wife and baby because he would not join the rebels. In the army in Africa, he kills the lord and hides. The singer takes the old man home; he is buried near his wife and baby
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (Beck)
KEYWORDS: age homicide revenge return escape help Africa Ireland patriotic soldier baby wife
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar,Newf) US(NE)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 90-91, "The Irish Emigrant" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick, pp. 142-144, "The Irish Patriot" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-FolksongsFromMaine 18, "The Irish Patriot" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12486
RECORDINGS:
Tom Murphy and Minnie Murphy, "India's Burning Shore" (on ITMA/CapeShoreNL)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "India's Burning Shores" (lyrics, theme)
NOTES [561 words]: The singer considers the old man "a true [Irish] patriot" although his crime was killing an English lord who wanted him to "join the rebel horde." I suspect that a broadside source for this ballad might have a different story.
Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick begins "As I strayed below those lofty paths on India's burning shore, A-listening to a tiger's howl or a savage lion's roar." India, rather than Africa [see Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland], is the place to find tigers. On the other hand, even Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick has the action taking place in Africa: "And to fulfill the oath I took I revenged on him to be, I sailed in that same ship with him to the coast of Cape Colony. When I arrived at Capetown, I was chosen for to be Lieutenant in the army, his lone bodyguard to be." Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick makes more sense with the problem coming up when "that cruel rebellion came and we were forced to go To fight for home and liberty with a [hated Saxon foe]." However, the []-bracketed words were inserted by Ives.
Ives says that this song "doesn't show up much (only twice, in fact) in published collections, [but] is very much a part of the old lumbercamp tradition." Ives's two other sources are Edward D Ives, Folksongs from Maine, 1965, 18, "The Irish Patriot" (collected 1962) and Horace P Beck, The Folklore of Maine, 1957, pp 93-95. Ives notes "that the song seems to have been reasonably popular in the lumbercamps" (p. 81). [Ives apparently did not know] Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland.
Re "tigers" in Africa: From Captain James Riley, Sufferings in Africa, 2000 edition of book published in 1817, an account of the ordeal of Riley and his crew in North Africa in 1815: "... near watering places: some tigers also now and then made their appearance. Such is the great western desart, or Zahahrah...." p. 298. Is Captain Riley referring to leopards or other desert cats? Is "tiger" a generic term for "dangerous cat"? If so, how common was that usage? - BS
"Tiger" did indeed originally mean, broadly speaking, any big feline that isn't a lion. The word originated in Greek (, "tigris,"), and seems to have come into use only around the time of Alexander (e.g. Aristotle uses it); it is possible that the first actual tiger to be seen in Europe was sent by Alexander's successors. This word then passed through Latin to Old French to English. There was apparently a time when leopards were thought to be hybrids of lions and something else, so "tiger" was the word for a non-lion bred in captivity. It does seem as if its use in this song is anachronistic. On the other hand, lions and tigers can interbreed (to produce ligers and tigrons).... - RBW

Re "Tiger" in tales and songs about Africa:
In her introduction to Jekyll's Jamaican Song and Story, Alice Werner writes: "Mr Jekyll thinks 'Tiger' is a substitute for 'Lion' [in Afro-Jamaican tales], but it seems equally possible that 'Leopard' is meant. All over South Africa, leopards are called 'tigers' by Dutch, English, and Germans, just as hyenas are called 'wolves,' and bustards 'peacocks' (paauw). 'Tiger' is used in the same sense in German Kamerun, and probably elsewhere in West Africa" (Walter Jekyll, Jamaican Song and Story (New York: Dover Publications, 1966 (reprint of David Nutt publication, 1907)), p.xxxviii). - BS

Irish Peasant Girl, The
DESCRIPTION: Singer thinks about widow Brown's daughter. She crosses the Atlantic to send money home. Her dying wish is that a letter be written to her mother and brother at home. Singer in Ireland thinks of "the lily of the mountain furze that withers far away"
AUTHOR: probably Charles Joseph Kickham (1825-1882)
EARLIEST DATE: 1865 (Duncathail)
KEYWORDS: emigration dying hardtimes Ireland separation money
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (3 citations):
O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 126, "The Irish Peasant Girl" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Duncathail (pseud.), Street Ballads, Popular Poetry, and Household Songs of Ireland_, McGlashan & Gill, 1865 (avaialble on Google Books), p. 66, "The Irish Peasant Girl" (1 text)
RECORDINGS:
Tommy McGrath, "She Lived Beside the Anner" (on Voice04)
NOTES [106 words]: O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland has the author as John Banim (1798-1842), who wrote "Aileen," "Soggarth Aroon," "The Reconciliation," "The Irish Maiden's Song," and "The Irish Mother in the Penal Days." Sparling makes Kickham the author and is supported in that by the article "Charles Joseph Kickham" at the New Advent site Catholic Encyclopedia. The first line is "She lived beside the Anner at the foot of Slievenamon"; Catholic Encyclopedia notes that the same was true of Kickham. - BS
Colum's An Anthology of Irish Verse also credits it to Kickham. For more on him, see the notes to "Patrick Sheehan" [Laws J11]. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.0
File: RcTirPGi

Irish Rebel Spy, The
DESCRIPTION: "In the city of Mialco, near the county of Leone There lived a comely maiden ... And the proper name she goes by is the Irish Rebel Spy." Her brother and true love die as Fenians. She outwits detectives, steals a horse, and warns the Fenians.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi)
KEYWORDS: rebellion trick Ireland patriotic
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi 76, "The Irish Rebel Spy" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST MaWi076 (Partial)
Roud #9178
Irish Refugee, The (Poor Pat Must Emigrate)

DESCRIPTION: Leaving Ireland. "We have fought for England's queen ... why should we be so oppressed?" I'm going to America "for there is bread." "If ever again I see this land I hope it will be with a Fenian band, So God be with old Ireland, poor Pat must emigrate!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1884 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3100))

KEYWORDS: emigration hardtimes America Ireland nonballad patriotic

FOUND IN:
O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 53, "The Irish Refugee" (1 text); pp. 106-107, "Poor Pat Must Emigrate" (1 text)

Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #`060, p. 72, "The Irish Refugee, or Poor Pat Must Emigrate" (1 reference)

Roud #2558

BROADSIDES:

Bodleian, Harding B 11(3100), "Poor Pat Must Emigrate", H. Disley (London), 1860-1883; also Harding B 11(3101), Harding B 11(3102), "Pat Must Emigrate"; 2806 b.10(79), Harding B 26(515), "Poor Pat Must Emigrate"; Harding B 18(297), "The Irish Refugee" or "Poor Pat Must Emigrate"; Harding B 19(78), "Irish Patt Must Emigrate"

SAME TUNE:

Podgee and Rhu [i.e. Paudeen Rhu] (per broadside Bodleian Harding B 18(297))
Apple Potatoes (per broadside Bodleian Harding B 19(78))
Apple Praties (per broadside Bodleian Harding B 26(515))

NOTES [28 words]: The famine year of 1848 is sometimes stated as 1854. As for the tune it may be that there are a number of songs on "the latest travels of the raking Paudheen Rhu." - BS

Last updated in version 3.5

File: 0Con053

Irish Rover, The

DESCRIPTION: "In the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and six We set sail from the coal quay of Cork." The ship, with too many masts, too strange a crew, and too unusual a cargo, sinks on its... own improbabilities; only the singer is left to tell the tall tale

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1963
KEYWORDS: sailor ship talltale humorous disaster wreck
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
DT, IRSHROVR*
Roud #4379
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Katey of Lochgoil" (theme)
File: DTirshro

Irish Sailor Boy, The

DESCRIPTION: "My parents raised me tenderly, I being their only joy, When my first stroll I took to roam," Cried the Irish sailor b'y The captain and eleven of a crew of twenty four survive a ship wreck and land in St Peter's, Newfoundland

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1920 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)
KEYWORDS: drowning sea ship wreck sailor disaster death
FOUND IN: Canada(Newfi)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 128, "The Irish Sailor Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6347
RECORDINGS:
Pattie Maher, "The Irish Sailor Boy" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
File: GrMa128

Irish Shore, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer wasted his youth on gambling and fast women. In London he spent his money on women and went to China. Now he is going home. "My rambling's oer, I'll hae a wife.... by pious works of sweet contemplation I'll end my days on the Highland shore"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1825 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 28(69))
KEYWORDS: sex rambling return gambling China
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 534, "The Highland Shore" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #5897
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 28(69)[some words illegible], "The Irish Shore" ("You curious searchers of each narration"), W. Armstrong (Liverpool), 1820-1824; also 2806 b.10(180), "Irish Shore"; Harding B 17(280a), 2806 b.10(211), Harding B 25(1756), Harding B 11(3471), Harding B 11(246), Harding B 11(247), Harding B 11(560), Harding B 11(561), 2806 c.18(283), ["The] Shamrock Shore"
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Ye Curious Sages
NOTES [81 words]: This singer blames all his misfortunes on women. In his youth "women's pleasures I freely tasted Which makes me wander thro' foreign clime." In London he sees "madams and crowds of lasses ... But do believe me their painted faces Are to ensnare us poor wanton slaves They hae nae love in their lewd embraces And we're all fools to their jilting ways." He condemns women of every country he has seen: "your gaudy dresses I do despise ... Wi' your surly looks and your greasy faces." - BS
Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD3534
Irish Sixty-Ninth, The

DESCRIPTION: A song telling the story of the 69th regiment, "The Irish Sixty-Ninth." The training of the regiment is described, then its long career in the Peninsula, at Antietam, Fair Oaks, Glendale, and perhaps Gettysburg.

AUTHOR: M. Fay? (The Johnson broadside is "Dedicated to the Sixty-ninth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, by M. Fay")

EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (recorded from John Galusha)

KEYWORDS: Civilwar soldier

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl, "The Irish Sixty-Ninth" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #705, p. 46, "Gallant Pennsylvania 69th, Irish Volunteers" (1 reference)

ST Wa014 (Full)
Roud #7455

RECORDINGS:
"Yankee" John Galusha, "The Irish 69th" [excerpt] (on USWarnerColl01)

BROADSIDES:
- LOC, no number, "Gallant Pennsylvania 69th, Irish Volunteers" ("To Erin's sons of hill and plain, come listen to my feeble strain"), J. H. Johnson (Philadelphia), 1863

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "McKenna's Dream" (tune)

NOTES [4507 words]: Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, pp. 175-176, prints a song "The Gallant 69th" (Roud V41521), sung by Ned Harrigan and Tony Hart and written by Harrigan and David Braham (for whom see "Babies on Our Block"). I formerly filed it with this song, but it is not the same piece and probably did not go into tradition.

My initial notes on this song contained a great deal of sleuthing to determine what it was about. Then I found what is clearly this song in Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, p. 46. The entry is titled "Gallant Pennsylvania 69th, Irish Volunteers," and begins "To Erin's sons of hill and plain, come listen to my feeble strain." The air is listed as "McKenney's Dream," which is surely "McKenna's Dream." That eliminates the need for much of the reasoning below, but I'll leave it anyway.... The very name "The Irish Sixty-Ninth" immediately brings to mind the 69th New York regiment, a famous unit of the equally famous "Irish Brigade" that saw service through the entire Civil War. (For more about that unit, see the notes to "By the Hush.") Williams, p. 43, reports that there were "dozens of ballads relating to the exploits of the Sixty-Ninth Regiment," although few of these became traditional, and Wolf has many songs about a "69th regiment" (more on this below), most of them probably about the 69th NY.

There was also an "Irish Ninth," the Massachusetts Ninth Regiment (Pfanz, p. 154), but apart from the fact that it would take a significant rewrite to get from a phrase such as "famous Irish Ninth" to "Irish Sixty-Ninth," this regiment doesn't seem to have gotten much press.

However, the unit in the song is said to have been commanded by "Colonel Owens," and the song refers several times to Philadelphia. Thus the 69th NY is not meant, nor the Massachusetts Ninth; we must look to the 69th Pennsylvania.

This regiment is not as famous (and it certainly didn't suffer the extreme -- 90% -- casualties faced by the 69th NY), but it was mustered in in August 1861 (as in the song; the 69th NY mustered in in September) and its original commander was Col. (later Brig. Gen.) Joshua T. Owen (Boatner, p. 614; HuntMidAtlantic, p. 14). It was very Irish -- "so much so that next to the national colors was displayed the emerald flag of Ireland rather than the usual regimental flag" (Sears, p. 448). And it was a Philadelphia regiment -- in fact it was a member of what later came to be called the "Philadelphia Brigade." It is ironic to note that this Philadelphia formation was originally known as the "3rd California"; the Philadelphia Brigade had been raised at the instance of California Senator James MacDougal, who paid for the arms of the "1st California," later the 71st Pennsylvania, and was commanded by another Western Senator, Edward D. Baker, a friend of Abraham Lincoln's who had spent time in California and who now represented Oregon (and had turned down a general's commission so that he could stay in the Senate while still commanding his regiment as a Colonel! -- Foote, p. 105). But on October 21, 1861, Baker was killed at the battle of Ball's Bluff, and the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and 5th California became the 71st, 72nd, 69th, and 106th Pennsylvania (HTIECivilWar, p. 580. There was no 4th California; it had been planned to be an artillery/cavalry unit, but was never formed;
The 69th Pennsylvania was the only Irish formation in the brigade. It is not coincidence that it became the 69th regiment; the original plan was to renumber the 3rd California the 68th Pennsylvania. Colonel Owen, however, "formally requested it to be designated the 69th Pennsylvania as a way of linking 'the two Irish regiments of the Empire and Key-States" -- i.e. the 69th New York and 69th Pennsylvania (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 42).

The 69th PA fought in most of the battles in the east, starting with the fiasco at Ball's Bluff (happily, it was not one of the regiments directly involved, and suffered no real casualties), and was hit hard at Antietam but went through Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville relatively unscathed (HTIECivilWar, pp. 580-581). It was one of the regiments that received Pickett's Charge on July 3, 1863 at Gettysburg (Sears, pp. 436-437; possibly referred to in stanza 6, though this could refer to the Battle of Fair Oaks; Sears, p. 469, adds that the 69th took roughly 47% casualties in facing the charge, the highest loss rate of any of the regiment involved). That was the last great fight for the Philadelphia Brigade; some of the units mustered out in 1864, and the 69th was merged with other units although it officially remained on the books until the end of the war (HTIECivilWar, p. 581).

There are at least two books about the Philadelphia Brigade. The modern volume is Gottfried's. The older one is Charles H. Banes, History of the Philadelphia Brigade: Sixty-Ninth, Seventy-First, Seventy-Second, and One Hundred and Sixth Pennsylvania Volunteers, J. B. Lippincott & Co, Philadelphia, 1876; the latter is available on Google Books, and includes (pp. 295-300) a depressingly long list of those killed in action. There is also a rather silly volume that the survivors of the brigade published long after the war, after a posthumous publication of Frank Haskell's notes on the Battle of Gettysburg, which roused the indignation of the brigade's survivors and inspired them to, quite frankly, protest too much. Gottfried-Brigades, p. 151, concludes: "While the 69th Pennsylvania and the 106th Pennsylvania had performed superbly during the battle, the behavior of the brigade's other two regiments was suspect. The cloud of doubt about the brigade's effectiveness would follow it through the remainder of the war."

If there were only one version of this song, I might suggest that the name "Irish Sixty-Ninth" arose by confusion out of the World War I regiment with that nickname, in which Joyce Kilmer ("I think that I shall never see A poem as lovely as a tree") served and died. There was in fact a pop song about that regiment ("The Fighting Sixty-Ninth," by Anna L. Hamilton). However, with multiple versions, all clearly Civil War, this does not seem possible.

Among the other references in the song:
"It was in August, sixty-one, When Colonel Owens took command": The 2nd and 3rd California were indeed formed in August 1861, although the 3rd did not reach full strength until a couple of months later (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 13).

"In February, sixty-two... To Washington we went straight way, And sailed in steamers down the bay": In February and March, the Philadelphia Brigade marched around quite a bit as it prepared for the Peninsular Campaign. On March 28, the 69th boarded the Champion to head for the Peninsula. (Gottfried-Philadelphia, pp. 56-57).

"To land at Fort Monroe": Fort Monroe, at the end of the Virginia Peninsula, was starting point of the Peninsular Campaign.

"At Hampton then we camped around, Until brave Little Mac came down": "Little Mac" is Gen. George McClellan, who commanded the Army of the Potomac for most of 1862 and directed the Peninsula Campaign. Hampton is a plantation in the Peninsula about two miles from Fort Monroe (Map on p. 61 of Gottfried-Philadelphia). Around this time, the brigade saw General McClellan as they prepared to move out for Yorktown (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p 58).

Yorktown: besieged in the Peninsula Campaign (Apr. 5-May 4, 1862). The Confederates evacuated it just before the Federal assault was to begin (Boatner, p. 953).

"From Yorktown then we sailed away, And landed at West Point next day": After the Yorktown debacle, McClellan wanted to send troops by boat around the Confederate army. The Philadelphia Brigade was one of those sent up the York River to Eltham Landing (Gottfried-Philadelphia, pp. 68-69). Eltham Landing and West Point are both located around the place where the Pamunkey and Mattaponi Rivers join to form the York River, a few dozen miles above Yorktown; West Point is more often mentioned in the histories, because McClellan made it a base, but they're really the same place.

"Then double quick away we went, Along the river we were sent To drive the rebels back we meant, No man fell out of line": As McClellan approached Richmond, he put part of his army on the left bank of the Chickahominy River and part on the right. The Chickahominy was a big enough river to form a major obstacle, and bridges were few. Joseph E. Johnston, the Confederate commander, knew that he was outnumbered heavily, and decided to attack the smaller half of the Federal army and defeat it in detail. The result was the Battle of Fair Oaks/Seven Pines, the first major battle of the Peninsula Campaign (May 31-June 1, 1862).
Abominable staff work caused the attack to fail (with Johnston wounded in the fight, meaning that Robert E. Lee took charge of the Confederate army), but the two Federal corps that came under attack had a very bad time for a while. Sumner's II Corps, which contained the Philadelphia Brigade, was eventually sent across the river -- over a bridge that seemed in imminent danger of collapse -- to help rescue the beleaguered troops (Gottfried-Philadelphia, pp. 71-75). Happily, the brigade's losses at this time were light (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 78).

"Pickett's guns": One way or another, this is out of place; it looks to me as if the next three verses have been disordered. This is possibly a reference to Gettysburg, where the 69th faced Pickett's Charge, but even if you ignore the fact that this would be very much out of place, no other event in the song takes place after the end of 1862, so I think that likely out. Another possibility is the Battle of Williamsburg, after the Confederate retreat from Yorktown; where Pickett was actively involved (Freeman, vol. I, p. 178) and did well enough to be regarded as "distinctly promising" (Freeman, vol. I, p. 192). A third possibility is at Fair Oaks/Seven Pines, where Pickett "increased the reputation he had gained at Williamsburg" (Freeman, vol. I, p. 243). But I think the most likely explanation is that the reference is to the fight at Glendale during the Seven Days (more on this below).

"Then on Antietam's field again, We boldly faced the iron rain. Some of our boys upon the plain They found a bloody grave": Antietam was fought in Maryland, Sept. 17, 1862, to repel Robert E. Lee's invasion of that state. The battle did indeed allow McClellan "to send the ragged rebels back Across Potomac's waves" -- but it was a terrible battle and the 69th's part of it neither particularly useful nor particularly glorious. Merely -- as the song implies -- bloody.

McClellan had already sent two corps, Hooker's I Corps and Mansfield's XII Corps, to attack the Confederates to the left. The Confederates had held, barely, injuring Hooker and killing Mansfield (Palfrey, pp. 72-82). That made it the turn of Sumner's II Corps, which included the Philadelphia Brigade. Sumner was given his order late, and had never seen the ground; he simply sent his divisions forward, without any preparation at all -- the first division into battle, Sedgwick's, wasn't even properly formed to attack (Palfrey, pp. 82-84). The Philadelphia Brigade was part of Sedgwick's division, and paid for it. The Confederates had not planned an ambush, but they could hardly have managed a better one had they tried. Sedgwick's three brigades found themselves in a pocket surrounded by ten Confederate brigades (Murfin, p. 231). Sedgwick's division was shot to pieces without accomplishing anything. The official reckoning is that Sedgwick lost 2255 men killed, wounded, or missing (Palfrey, p. 90) -- meaning that its casualties were on the order of 50%.

Sedgwick himself was wounded three times. The Philadelphia Brigade suffered slightly less than the other brigades of the division, but it still took 568 casualties (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 120). Sedgwick's injury affected the 69th. He was out for many months, and when he came back, it was as commander of the Sixth Corps, not of his old division. As a result, Oliver O. Howard, who had been leading the Philadelphia Brigade, was given command of the division (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 123.) And that meant the Philadelphia Brigade needed a commander. Colonel Owen of the 69th was promoted Brigadier General as a result, to date from November 29, 1863; the Senate did not confirm that appointment and it expired March 4, 1863, but he was reappointed on March 30, and this time, the Senate agreed (Phisterer, p. 281, although the name is misspelled "Owens"). As a result, Lt. Colonel Dennis O'Kane was promoted Colonel of the 69th as of December 1, 1862 (HuntMidAtlantic, pp. 14, 129).

O'Kane is clearly the officer referred to in the verse that begins "O'Keen, our colonel, nobly stood." This stanza offers more evidence that the song was written in late 1862 or early 1863, because O'Kane was mortally wounded on July 3 at Gettysburg and died the next day (HuntMidAtlantic, p. 129); there is no mention of this or of his successor.

"Fair Oaks:" an inexplicable reference at this place in the song. If it points to Fair Oaks/Seven Pines, mentioned above, it is out of sequence, since Fair Oaks took place long before Antietan; if it refers to the Fair Oaks battle of October 1864, the 69th PA was not present and the results were in any case unfortunate for the Federals. The likely explanation is that the reference is to Fair Oaks, and this half-verse is out of place.

"Had picket fighting night and day": If we assume that this statement refers to the period immediately after the Battle of Fair Oaks, this is a good description of what happened in this period. From June 6 to June 27, the Philadelphia Brigade fought eight minor engagements with the Confederates (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 80), and the pickets were in conflict even more often.

"Where other regiments they fell back": "When the II Corps [which contained the 69th Pennsylvania] reached Savage Station [early in the Seven Days' Battles], General Heintzelman [commanding the III Corps] ordered his men to continue their retreat toward the White Oak Swamp. General Sumner [commanding II Corps] later bluntly described this movement..." When the enemy appeared on the Williamsburg road I could not imagine why General Heintzelman did not attack him, and not till some time afterward did I learn, to my utter amazement, that General Heintzelman had left the field and retreated with his whole corps” (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 85). I'm not sure that this action is what the song refers to, because the Seven Days involved a lot of retrograde movements, but this is a reasonable fit.

"We stood as at Glendale." I'll speculate that this should be "We stood STILL at Glendale."

Glendale (also known as White Oak Swamp) was one of the Seven Days' Battles, fought June 20, 1862 at the end of the Peninsula Campaign. Glendale was a road crossing that the Army of the Potomac needed to hold as it transferred its base from West Point to the James River, and the Confederates tried a converging attack to smash the Federals holding the position.

The Confederate attack was badly coordinated, but the Philadelphia Brigade was at the heart of the defense, and the 69th Pennsylvania was in direct conflict with Pickett's Brigade (the map on p. 92 of Gottfried-Philadelphia makes this clear); General Sumner of the II Corps at this time called the 69th "one of the best regiments in my corps" (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 93). The 69th fought against A. P. Hill's division, including notably Pickett's brigade, which is why I suspect the mention of "Pickett's guns" above is a reference to Glendale. Indeed, some of Pickett's troops had captured several Federal cannon, and were about to turn them on the Union forces, when a charge by the 69th drove them away (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 93), so the reference to "Pickett's guns" is particularly appropriate here.

The 69th, and the Federals, did manage to hold on at Glendale, but just barely (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 95); after holding the line, the Union forces continued their retreat. But the 69th's conduct was exemplary and deserves its mention.

"O'Keen, our colonel, nobly stood Where the grass was turning red with blood": O'Kane was colonel of the regiment at Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, and Gettysburg. The regiment was hit hard at both Fredericksburg and Gettysburg (it served at Chancellorsville but took no casualties; Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 146).

But there are two arguments for Fredericksburg. First, whichever battle it refers to, it's the last one in the song. If the song were written after Fredericksburg, it would make sense to refer only to that battle, whereas if it were written after one of the other battles, it would make sense that all the remaining battles would be mentioned. Plus Fredericksburg fits: The II Corps made a completely useless advance on the Confederates that accomplished nothing at all (Gottfried-Philadelphia pp. 130-134). The brigade took some unfair criticism, but Owen's report said that it took 265 casualties (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 135). That's less than other brigades in the division, but that merely means that they had the sense to go to ground sooner rather than be slaughtered.

After Fredericksburg, the regiment was the one at dead center of Pickett's Charge, although this seems to be after the song was written. It was hit so hard that it lost Colonel O'Kane killed, Lt. Colonel Tschudy mortally wounded, and Major Duffy wounded; Captain William Davis ended up commanding the regiment (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 174). A regiment was supposed to have at least 800 men (although few Union regiments had more than 400 when they went into Pennsylvania); the 69th had only 115 in the ranks after Gettysburg (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 115); the whole brigade had only 660, and was commanded by a lieutenant colonel rather than a brigadier. The four regiments, which would normally be commanded by colonels, were commanded by one lieutenant colonel, one major, and two captains (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 183).

The history of the 69th, and the Philadelphia Brigade, after Gettysburg was rather sad. It took part in the early phases of Grant's final campaign against Richmond, but mostly without much distinction. With so many of the officers dead or promoted, and most of the best of the enlisted men also gone, the brigade was no longer a very effective unit. Often the men showed a significant willingness to attack enemy entrenchments (which, to be sure, was simply smart). In 1864, division commander John Gibbon pressed charges against General Owen. No court was ever convened (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 218), but General Grant considered him ineffective enough that he recommended that Owen no longer serve. Lincoln approved (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 219), and Owen was mustered out of the service July 18, 1864 (Phisterer, p. 281).

The enlistments of the Philadelphia Brigade expired in 1864. The government at this time was making desperate attempts to get soldiers to re-enlist, but very few members of the 71st (Baker's old regiment) were willing; it was mustered out on July 2, 1864 (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 219). The rest of the brigade served until the army moved to attack Petersburg -- where it met disaster. Most of the 106th regiment, and four companies of the 69th, were captured there (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 223; on p. 226, he notes that the 106th had only thirty men left with the colors), as were many individual soldiers from the 72nd. Although the brigade had been in an untenable position, its performance had been very bad, and on June 26, the brigade was broken up -- to the men's intense dissatisfaction (Gottfried-Philadelphia, pp. 225-226). The terms of the 72nd and 106th expired soon after, and they were mustered out (Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 226). That left the 69th as the last unit of the famous brigade still in service -- it had re-enlisted en masse, meaning that it was entitled to retain its regimental number and honors. (A few companies of the 106th were also retained, as a battalion rather than a regiment; the 69th and the 106th battalion served all the way to Appomattox, and were disbanded on July 1 and June 30, 1865, respectively; Gottfried-Philadelphia, p. 228).

Gottfried-Philadelphia's conclusion (p. 230) is that "Few can argue that the 69th['s] activities at Glendale and Gettysburg cause it to be considered the finest fighting unit in the brigade." On p. 234, Gottfried-Philadelphia lists the fate of the men of the unit: 7.1% were killed or mortally wounded. 7.2% died (presumably mostly of disease). 14% deserted. 22.5% were discharged before the end of their term. 9.1% were wounded at the time their term ended. 1.9% were in prison. 0.2% were missing. 3.1% were transferred to another unit. 9.9% had an "other" fate. Only 24.9% were around to be mustered out with the unit at the end of its term. This shows in the number of soldiers present over the years (listed on p. 232 of Gottfried-Philadelphia): 952 at the beginning of 1862. 726 at the time of Yorktown. 486 after Antietam. 408 after Fredericksburg. 344 were present at Gettysburg. There were only 324 present at the end of 1863. And it went downhill from there. It will be evident that John Galusha's version of this song is disordered in the final verses. The broadside has six stanzas of eight long lines. Yankee John's version has stanzas of eight short lines. So one of the broadside's stanzas is equivalent to two of Galusha's. In other words, the broadside had twelve stanzas; Yankee John had nine. And Yankee John had scrambled the stanzas, and half-stanzas, that he remembered. My tentative conclusion was that Yankee John's text should be re-ordered 1A/1B, 2A/2B, 3A/3B, 4A/4B, 5A/7A, 5B/7B, 6A/6B, 8A/8B, 9A/9B. This is roughly correct when compared with the broadside, although I was wrong to reverse 7A and 5B (for reasons given below). The following list shows the correct order, along with the first part of each half-stanza. Half-stanzas that Galusha remembered are given their stanza numbers in his text (e.g. "1B" would be the second half of his first stanza); half-stanzas that Yankee John forgot are shown in [brackets] and not numbered.

[To Erin's sons of hill and plain, come listen to my feeble strain]
[I'll sing you of our long campaign, through Summer's sun and Winter's rain]
1A. It was in August sixty-one, that Colonel Owen took command
1B. He drilled us every day we rose, to learn us how to thresh our foes
2A. In February sixty-two, when passing in a grand review,
2B. To Washington we went straightway, and sailed in steamers down the Bay
3A. At Hampton then we camp'd around, until brave little Mac came down
3B. Where there we work'd both night and day, and drove the rebel hordes away
4A. From Yorktown then we sailed away, and landed at West Point next day
4B. And there we stopped three weeks or more, until we heard the cannons roar
5A. Then double quick away we went, across the river we were sent
5B. There Philadelphia's adopted sons, bravely supported Rickett's guns,
7A. At Fair Oaks then long weeks we lay, and Pickett fighting night and day,
7B. And in the seven days going back, on bloody fields we left our track,
[Where horse and foot retreat that day, all bleeding from that dreadful fray]
[And when our bullets were all spent, three cheers we for the Union sent]
6A. And on Antietam field again we boldly faced the Iron rain
6B. Where our brave General, Little Mac, made boasting Lee to clear the track
[At Fredericksburg our old brigade, with Owens, who never was afraid]
[And though the bullets flew around, we drove the grey coats from the town]
8A. Next day upon the battle field, old veterans they were forced to yield,
8B. The cannons blazing shot and shell, 'twas like the gaping jaws of hell,
9A. O'Kane, our Colonel, nobly stood, where the grass was turning red with blood
9B. Though many got a bloody shroud, as Philadelphia's sons we are proud.
Note that Yankee John's stanza 5B had a major error, "Pickett's" for "Rickett's," which changes the meaning of the verse very much. Pickett was a Confederate general, James B. Ricketts (at the time of the song) a Union artillery captain. At First Bull Run, he commanded Company I of the 1st U.S. Artillery (McDonald, p. 194), where he was wounded and captured. He was not exchanged until 1862, when he was made a brigadier and given an infantry brigade; he later rose to division command (Boatner, p. 699). But since no regular army officer was promoted to replace him, Company I could still be called Ricketts' in the Peninsula, even though it was commanded by Lt. Edmund Kirby. And Company I was in the same division as the Philadelphia Brigade, so they fought together.

As outlined above, if "Pickett" had been meant by Yankee John's source, the reference was probably to Glendale -- but in the original, it's a reference to Fair Oaks.
For some reason, 69th Regiments seem to have been very popular in Civil War broadsides. Wolf, p. 31, includes "The Departure of the 69th Volunteers" (I'm not sure which regiment this refers to); p. 46 has "The Gallant Pennsylvanians 69th, Irish Volunteers" and "The Gallant 69th" by Harrigan and Braham; p. 47 offers "The Gallant 69th No. 8" and "The Gallant 69th" (not sure about the regiment in the latter three); p. 50 is "Glorious 69th!" (not clear which regiment this is, but it was printed at least five times); p. 79 gives "The Jolly 69th" (which we can only say is an Irish regiment); p. 89 is "Long Live the Sixty-Ninth" (which doesn't say if the regiment is Irish). Page 135 offers the "Return of the 69th" by John Flanagan. Page 142 gives us "69th Regiment, No. 4"; there is no way to tell which regiment is involved. On page 158 is "To the Glorious 69th!" ("These noble sons of Erin, who to this country came"); again, it's not clear which regiment is meant. On p. 168 are "War Song of the New-York 69th Regiment" and "War Song No 2 of the 69th Regiment." Page 171 has "Welcome Our Gallant 69th," which doesn't give a clue as the regiment but is to the interesting tune "Marshal Ney."

Pages 134-135 have the "Return of Gen. Corcoran of the Glorious 69th," referring to the 69th New York Militia, not the 69th Pennsylvania or the "regular" 69th New York, and popular enough to have been printed three times -- although some of that may have been due to Corcoran himself; an Irish exile with a record of fighting against the British in the 1840s; the 69th Militia had existed before the war, and Corcoran had gotten in trouble for refusing to take part in a salute to the Prince of Wales, but he was restored to his regiment at the start of the war because he was so popular (Craughwell, p. 9).

On p. 142, there is also a song "The 69th Brigade," beginning "My true love, William, to the war he is gone." Civil War brigades weren't numbered (except as "first brigade, second division, third corps" or the like), so this is presumably another reference to a sixty-ninth regiment, although there is no clue which.- RBW

Bibliography

- Boatner: Mark M. Boatner III, The Civil War Dictionary, 1959 (there are many editions of this very popular work; mine is a Knopf hardcover)
- Craughwell: Thomas J. Craughwell, The Greatest Brigade: How the Irish Brigade Cleared the Way to Victory in the American Civil War, 2011 (I use the 2013 Crestline illustrated paperback)
- Freeman: Douglas Southall Freeman, Lee's Lieutenants, 3 volumes, Scribners, 1942-1945
- McDonald, JoAnna M. McDonald, We Shall Meet Again: The First Battle of Manassas (Bull Run) July 18-21, 1861, Oxford, 1999
- Palfrey: Francis Winthrop Palfrey, The Antietam and Fredericksburg, Campaigns of the Civil War series, 1882 (I use the 2002 Castle Books reprint)
- Phisterer: Frederick Phisterer, Campaigns of the Civil War: Statistical Record of the Armies of the United States, 1883 (I use the 2002 Castle Books reprint)
- Williams: Alfred M. Williams, Studies in Folk-Song and Popular Poetry, Houghton Mifflin, 1894
Irish Soldier Boy, The

DESCRIPTION: "At a cottage door one winter night as the snow lay on the ground," a soldier and his mother bid a tearful farewell as he prepares to leave. He dies in battle, and sends a last message bidding farewell to his mother and to Ireland

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: soldier mother separation death Ireland

FOUND IN: Ireland Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H678, p. 89, "The Irish Soldier Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #22061

RECORDINGS:
Mrs. Bulger, "Irish Soldier Boy" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

NOTES [42 words]: This is so close to "The Faithful Sailor Boy" that it seems almost certain that one is derived from the other; initially I lumped them. Now that we have two versions of this, we've split them, but it's still best to see that song as well as this. - RBW

Irish Song

DESCRIPTION: "Water! Water! Holy Water! Sprinkle the Catholics one by one. We'll bring them to battle, Their communes to rattle, And make them lie under the Protestant drum. Bible, Bible, Holy Bible, We'll read to the Catholics.... Three cheers for King William...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida)

KEYWORDS: religious battle royalty

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1689-1702 - Reign of William III of Orange as King of England

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #241, "Irish Song" (1 short text)

Roud #5001

NOTES [63 words]: Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida connects this bit of invective with the Battle of the Boyne (for which see, e.g., "The Battle of the Boyne (I)"). This is likely enough, but all that is really certain is that it should be associated with the reign of King William III, which was spent mostly in fighting Louis XIV, James VII and II, and other Catholics in Ireland and the continent. - RBW

Irish Song (The Gay Wedding)

DESCRIPTION: "It's of a gay weeding, As you soon shall hear, Got up in good style, And it ain't far from here." "Three hundred gay fellows That day marched along, All with their great cudgels." "You'd think them the locusts From the Egyptian plains...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks)

KEYWORDS: wedding humorous dancing foreignlanguage

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks, p. 107, "Irish Song" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
Irish Spree, The
DESCRIPTION: The boys and girls go to Patsy Murphy's restaurant. A fight starts followed by a fire. A policeman has his head split. Soldiers are called, 16 are dead: warrants are issued for murder and robbery. "I set sail for Australia in the morning"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland)
KEYWORDS: violence homicide drink fire police transportation
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 80, "The Irish Spree" (1 text)
Roud #V15031
File: 0Con080A

Irish Stranger, The
DESCRIPTION: "I ne'er shall return to Hibernia's bowers.... It grieves me to ponder On the wrongs of thy injured isle... America might yield me some shelter from pain, I'm only lamenting whilst here I remain For the joys that I'll never see more"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1839 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(1240))
KEYWORDS: emigration hardtimes America Ireland nonballad patriotic
FOUND IN: Ireland Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, pp. 111-112, "The Irish Stranger" (1 text)
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 59, "The Irish Stranger" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1629
RECORDINGS:
John M. Curtis, "The Irish Stranger" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
BROADSIDES: Bodleian, Harding B 11(1240), "Irish Stranger", J. Catnach (Durham), 1813-1838; also 2806 b.11(219), Harding B 16(334b), Harding B 11(1797), Harding B 11(1631), Harding B 11(1657), Harding B 11(1241), "[The] Irish Stranger"
NOTES [28 words]: Bodleian, 2806 c.17(179),"Irish Stranger" or "Joys That Are Gone", W. Armstrong (Liverpool),1820-1824 may be the earliest for this ballad at Bodleian but is illegible. - BS
Last updated in version 4.2
File: 0Con111A

Irish Transport, The
DESCRIPTION: "In the county of Limerick, near the town of Ramshorn," the singer was born, but "I could not behave," so he is transported. He would think himself free despite his chains were his Polly with him. When his sentence is over, he will return to her
Irish Trot

DESCRIPTION: "Hands all round in the Irish trot (x3), A long time ago." "Promenade in the Irish trot." "Rights and lefts in the Irish trot." "Trot, trot, trot, that pretty little trot." "Had an old Negro and his name was Sam." (In one text, Sam steals a ham.)

Irish Wake, The [Laws Q18]

DESCRIPTION: Pat Malone, being "pressed for ready cash," decides to fake death to collect his life insurance. All goes well until the wake and funeral; he thinks they cost too much. At last, shortly before he is buried, realizing the consequences, he gives up the sham

AUTHOR: probably, per Levy song sheet, Words: Harry C. Clide / Music: Jas. J. Sweeney
EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Levy song sheet is from 1895)
KEYWORDS: death funeral trick
FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,Ro,So) Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (9 citations):
Laws Q18, "The Irish Wake"
Bennett/Downey-JeromeJustOneMoreSong 6, pp. 79-82, "Pat Malone Forgot That He Was Dead" (1 text)
Randolph 473, "The Irish Wake" (1 text plus an excerpt, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 366-368, "The Irish Wake" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 473A)
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 121, "Pat Malone" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 300-302, "Pat Malone Forgot That He Was Dead" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #169, "When Pat Malone Forgot that He Was Dead" (1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 148-149, "Pat Malone" (1 text)
DT 529, PATFORGT*
Roud #1008
RECORDINGS:
Jerome Downey, "Pat Malone Forgot That He Was Dead" (on NFJDowney01)
Lawrence Older, "Pat Malone" (on LOlder01)
Dan W. Quinn, "Pat Malone Forgot That He Was Dead" (CYL: Columbia Concert 5048, n.d.)
BROADSIDES:
Irish Wedding, The

DESCRIPTION: "Sure won't you hear what roaring cheer was spread at Paddy's wedding, O?" All the boys and girls are named, there is music, food, dancing and drink. No fights! "Decadórou we'll have, says Father Quipes." A grand time is had by all.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland)

KEYWORDS: wedding humorous dancing drink food music party moniker

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, pp. 57-58, "The Irish Wedding" (1 text)

Roud #17123

BROADSIDES:

File: OCon057

Irishman (I), The

DESCRIPTION: The singer, a new emigrant wandering in New Jersey, comes across "an oasis" -- the home of an old Irishman. They stop and talk; the old man asks about all the places he left behind long ago

AUTHOR: James O'Kane

EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: rambling emigration homesickness

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H712, pp. 221-222, "The Irishman" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: HHH712

Irishman (II), The

DESCRIPTION: "The savage loves his native shore," so the Irish love Erin. Who a friend or foe can meet So generous as an Irishman?" He is warm-hearted, honest, forgiving, generous, open, honorable and fearless. "If the field of fame be lost It won't be by an Irishman"

AUTHOR: James Orr

EARLIEST DATE: before 1820 (broadside, Bodleian Johnson Ballads 871)

KEYWORDS: Ireland nonballad patriotic

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 119, "The Irishman" (1 text)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 91, "The Irishman" (1 text)

Roud #17109

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 871, "The Irishman" ("The savage loves his native shore"), J. Pitts (London), 1802-1819; also Harding B 18(294), Harding B 16(115a), 2806 c.8(153), "The Irishman"
Irishman, The
DESCRIPTION: An Irishman arrives in America and sees many new things. He thinks a ship's anchor is an axe for a giant. A parrot singing "God Save the Queen" makes him think it a person; he would kill it were it not wearing green. He tries to hatch a pumpkin. Etc.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (collected by Logsdon from Riley Neal)
KEYWORDS: humorous emigration bird
FOUND IN: US(SW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 59, pp. 268-270, "The Irishman" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10109
File: Loga059

Irishman's Christening, An
DESCRIPTION: The parson mistakenly christened the singer with whisky: "it made me a sot." At his marriage he pulls out whisky instead of the ring. Were he dead in the ground where "no whisky is found" would he "call out from his grave to be christened again?"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1839 (Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
KEYWORDS: childbirth death drink humorous clergy
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 71-73, "An Irishman's Christening" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Kathleen Hoagland, editor, One Thousand Years of Irish Poetry (New York, 1947), pp. 270-271, "An Irishman's Christening"
File: CPS071

Irishman's Farewell to his Country, The (The Shamrock Shore IV)
DESCRIPTION: Farewell, dear Erin's native shore, For here I cannot stay." The singer is leaving for America. "As our ship she lies at anchor, boys, Now ready for to sail." He bids farewell to friends, parents, grandfather.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)
KEYWORDS: emigration farewell sea ship America Ireland nonballad friend family
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 88, "The Shamrock Shore" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1455
RECORDINGS:
Margaret Barry and Michael Gorman, "Farewell, My Own Fair Native Land" (on Voice04)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.8(157), "The Irishman's Farewell to his Country." Haly (Cork), 19C; also 2806 c.8(121), "The Irishman's Farewell to his Country"; 2806 b.10(89), "The Irishman's Farewell to his Native Land"
File: OLcM088

Irishman's Goldmine, The
DESCRIPTION: An Irishman comes to Australia and to look for gold. He innocently trusts to a man who points to a "gold" patch. The Irish boy sets to digging as the ants swarm out onto his skin -- and start biting. He concludes that gold "is" the root of evil
AUTHOR: Duke Tritton (source: Meredith/Tritton-DukeOfTheOutback)
Irishman's Shanty

DESCRIPTION: "Did you ever hear of an Irishman's shanty Where water was scarce and whiskey was plenty? A two-legged stool and a table to match A stick in the door instead of a latch?"

AUTHOR: George W. Osborn

EARLIEST DATE: 1870 (New-Comic-Songster)

KEYWORDS: poverty, drink, humorous, nonballad

FOUND IN: Canada (Newf), Ireland, US (SE)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
- Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 109, "Irishman's Shanty" (1 fragment)
- O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, pp. 118-119, "The Irishman's Shanty" (1 text)
- Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #243, "The Irishman's Shanty" (1 short text)
- New-Comic-Songster, p. 59, "The Irishman's Shanty" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol1, pp. 64-65, "Irish Woe" (1 short text, 1 tune, possibly this although it's hard to be sure)

Roud #4838

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Harding B 18(295), "The Irishman's Shanty," H. De Marsan (New York), 1864-1878 [same as LOCSinging sb20211b]; also Harding B 18(296), "The Irishman's Shanty"
- LOCSinging, sb20211b, "The Irishman's shanty," H. De Marsan (New York), 1864-1878 [same as Bodleian Harding B 18(295)]; also as106270, as106280, as201680, "The Irishman's shanty"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Irish Washerwoman" (tune and meter)
cf. "The Railroad Corral" (tune and references for the "Irish Washerwoman" tune)
cf. "The Old Country Party" (tune)

NOTES [38 words]: Broadsides LOCSinging sb20211b and Bodleian Harding B 18(295): H. De Marsan dating per Studying Nineteenth-Century Popular Song by Paul Charosh in American Music, Winter 1997, Vol 15.4, Table 1, available at FindArticles site. - BS

Irishman's Song, The

DESCRIPTION: "Sure it's just about ten years ago, as near as I can tell" when the singer set out for Australia. On arrival, he gets drunk and spends most of his money -- but finds a job and is quickly promoted; he's married and happy -- and recalls his warm welcome

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1983 (Meredith/Tritton-DukeOfTheOutback)

KEYWORDS: immigration, drink, worker, home

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Meredith/Tritton-DukeOfTheOutback, pp. 90-91, "The Irishman's Song" (1 text, tune referenced)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Shearing at Castlereigh" (tune, according to Meredith/Tritton-DukeOfTheOutback)

Irishman's Toast, The

DESCRIPTION: 'Don't call me weak-minded. Perchance I should sing Of the dearest old spot upon earth." The singer recalls all the places of home: the cabin, the church, the school. The old folk are gone, but "Here's to the land of the shamrock so green"
Irishmen All

DESCRIPTION: "Townsmen and countrymen we're Irishmen all." "Faithful to Erin we answer her call ... True-hearted Irishmen Irishmen all," "Ready are we as our fathers before us To strike for our glory we're Irishmen all"

Irishtown Crew, The

DESCRIPTION: "On the first day of April, I'll never forget, / The Irishtown boys at Ratigan's met. / They filled up their glasses and swore solemnly / That that very day they'd go out on a spree!" The rest of the song is devoted to the participants and their antics

Iron Door, The [Laws M15]

DESCRIPTION: When the rich girl falls in love with a poor boy, her father locks her in a iron-doored prison. Her lover breaks in and sneaks her out (in men's clothing), but they meet her father. The boy prepares to die, but the father gives in
The Iron Horse (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "Come Hielandman, come Lowlandman... I'll tell you how I got atween Dundee and Perth, man, I gaed upon an iron road -- a rail they did it ca'...." The singer tells of his ride, the conductor, the demand for a fare. He says he will use his feet hereafter

AUTHOR: Charles Balfour ?

EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Ford)

KEYWORDS: train technology humorous

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (7 citations):

MacColl-ShuttleAndCage-IndustrialFolkBallads, p. 19, "The iron horse" (1 text (conflate), 1 tune)
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 158-160, "The Iron Horse" (1 text)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #12, p. 2, "The Iron Horse" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan2 291, "The Iron Horse" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 67, "The Iron Horse" (1 text, 2 tunes)

ADDITIONAL: Jon Raven, _Victoria's Inferno: Songs of the Old Mills, Mines, Manufactures, Iron Horse (II -- Utah version)

DESCRIPTION: "Th' iron horse draweth nigh, With his smoke nostril high, Eating fire as if grazing." It takes much work to build its trail. In Salt Lake City they rejoice as it approaches. "May the iron horse and Mormons Always right every wrong."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1868 (Bee-Hive Songster, according to Cohen)
KEYWORDS: technology railroading
FOUND IN: US(Ro)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #245, "The Iron Horse" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 599-600, "The (Utah) Iron Horse" (1 text)
Roud #8597
File: CAFS2599

Iron Merrimac

DESCRIPTION: The Merrimac starts from Norfolk to "make an end of Yankee Doodle Dandy-O." After sinking the Cumberland, the Merrimac confronts the Monitor.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (recording, Judge Learned Hand)
KEYWORDS: battle Civilwar navy war ship
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
March 8, 1862 - U.S. frigates Congress and Cumberland sunk by the CSS Virginia (formerly USS Merrimac). The Minnesota runs aground; had not the Monitor arrived the next day, the Merrimac would have sunk that ship also
FOUND IN: US(MA)
Roud #4767
RECORDINGS:
Judge Learned Hand, "Iron Merrimac" (AFS, 1942; on LCTreas)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Cumberland" [Laws A26] (subject)
cf. "The Cumberland Crew" [Laws A18] (subject) and references there
NOTES [48 words]: This song is a rewrite of "The Constituion and the Guerriere"; however, as it describes a different battle, with different ships, half a century later, I've given it a separate entry. - PJ
For the historical background on this battle, see the notes to "The Cumberland Crew" [Laws A18]. - RB
Last updated in version 5.2
File: RcIroMer

Iron Mountain Baby, The

DESCRIPTION: "I have a song I would like to sing, It's awful, and it's true, About a babe thrown from a train By a mother, I know not who." The injured child is found by Bill Helm, and cared for. The singer warns people to beware of judgment

AUTHOR: J. T. Barton

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety); probably written 1902

KEYWORDS: train abandonment orphan

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Aug 14, 1902 - Discovery of the baby later to be known as William Moses Gould Helm

FOUND IN: US(MW,So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 419-420, "The Iron Mountain Baby" (1 text)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 379-380, "The Iron Mountain Baby" (1 text)

Roud #4162

RECORDINGS:
Johnny Iron, "Iron Mountain Baby Song" (Local Artists RC6-1B, n.d., prob. early 1950s)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Dying Preacher (Hick's Farewell)" (tune)

NOTES [100 words]: Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety reports that J. T. Barton wrote this song to help support the infant it commemorates. One can but hope the parents were better at caring for children than was Barton at crafting lyrics. Barton said that this piece was printed and sold, so there may be a broadsheet copy somewhere, but no one seems to have found one. It really is a lousy piece of poetry, as well as being obnoxiously moralizing; one suspects that it was preserved only by people who personally remembered the story or the sales pitch.

This is item dH43 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.7

File: Beld419

Iron Ore by 'Fifty-Four

DESCRIPTION: "Come, ladies and gentlemen, listen to me, I'll sing you a song of our north Counteree... Bound north to Ungava for rich iron ore In July, nineteen fifty-four." The building of a railroad into Labrador, and the four years of work involved, are described

AUTHOR: Words: Alan Mills

EARLIEST DATE: 1960

KEYWORDS: work technology Canada

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong, pp. 215-217, "Iron Ore by Fifty-Four" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

File: FMB215

Iroquois Lullaby (Ho, Ho, Watanay)

DESCRIPTION: Iroquois: "Ho, ho, Watanay (x3), Ki-yo-ki-na, ki-yo-ki-na." Singable translation: "Sleep, sleep, little one (x3), Now go to sleep, now go to sleep" -- but it is also said that the text is just meaningless vocables

AUTHOR: unknown (English translation by Alan Mills)

EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong)

KEYWORDS: Indians(Am.) lullaby nonballad foreignlanguage

FOUND IN: Canada(Queb)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong, pp. 2-3, "An Iroquois Lullabye" (1 text, 1 tune)
Salt-BuckeyeHeritage-OhiosHistory, p. 13, "Iroquois Lullabye" (1 text, 1 tune)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Hey Hey Wataney

File: FMB002
Irrawaddy, The

DESCRIPTION: Fragment: "The curse upon Crossgadden, likewise his robbing crew; They robbed the Irrawaddy and the John R Skiddy, too"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast)

KEYWORDS: sea ship wreck commerce theft shore

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Apr 1, 1850 - "... Captain Shipley the master of the _John R Skiddy_ ... sailed his vessel ashore on Glascarrick beach .... he described the locals as 'the most abandoned set of villains that he had encountered'. They pillaged the wreck and anything brought ashore in defiance of both coastguard and police" (source: Bourke in _Shipwrecks of the Irish Coast_ v1, p. 49)

Oct 13, 1856 - "... the _Irrawady_ was wrecked opposite Cahore Point on the Blackwater Bank. A fleet of local fishing boats was organised by the local coast-guards and rescued the crew and passengers.... The teak from her hull was used to form the pews at Ballyragget Church" (source: Bourke in _Shipwrecks of the Irish Coast_ v1, p. 69)

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast, p. 127, "The Irrawaddy" (1 text)

Roud #20541

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Old Mayflower" (theme of wreckers) and references there

NOTES [119 words]: Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast: "The 'John R Skiddy' had 430 passengers aboard, all of whom were saved. When the 'Irrawaddy' ran aground ... between four hundred and five hundred people ... boarded the vessel and carried away a large quantity of goods from her.... The coast-guards, evidently, had a hand in the looting for Mr Crossgadden was a coast-guard."

It may be unusual on the Irish coast, but not elsewhere, for coastal inhabitants to consider the cargo and ship remains among wreckage to be a fair source of enrichment. See, for example, "The Old Mayflower" from Newfoundland and "Mariposa" from Labrador. On the other hand see Ranson's "The Middlesex Flora" for similar activity on the Wexford coast. - BS

Last updated in version 5.2

File: Ran127A

Irreverence

DESCRIPTION: "The Batsman is my shepherd, I shall not crash. He maketh me to land on flat runways. He bringeth me in off rough waters, He restoreth my confidence.... He attacheth my hook to the wire. My deck space runneth over."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1969 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)

KEYWORDS: technology humorous derivative

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 107, "Irreverence" (1 text)

NOTES [106 words]: For the "batsman," who guided carrier pilots to safe landings, see "A-25."

This is, of course, a parody of Psalm 23, but it appears to be incomplete -- either Tawney didn't collect the whole thing or the typesetters missed the ending. After "My deck space runneth over" (derived from "My cup runneth over") should be a line parodying "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever." Perhaps it was something like, "Surely armorers and fuel techs shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will dwell on the deck of the Ark Royal [or other carrier] forever." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.1

File: Tawn079

Irthing Water Hounds, The

DESCRIPTION: October 11, 1873, hounds from Irthing Water are on a fox hunt. Finally "the celebrated Mowdie" finds a fox in a hole. A terrier flushes Reynard and his trail flushes a vixen. Both foxes are killed. "Drink success to the Irthing lads"
Is There Anybody Here

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Is there anybody here that loves my Jesus? Anybody here that loves my Lord, I want to know if you love my Jesus, I want to know if you love my Lord." Other verses float.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Barton-OldPlantationHymns)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious death Jesus floating verses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Barton-OldPlantationHymns, p. 21, "Anybody Here?" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10435
NOTES [129 words]: The description is based on the Barton-OldPlantationHymns text. Barton-OldPlantationHymns's and Work's floating verses include "This world's a wilderness of woe So let us all to glory go," "When I was blind and could not see King Jesus brought the light to me," "What kind of shoes are those you wear That you may walk upon the air," "I do believe without a doubt That a Christian has a right to shout," .... The line "Is there anybody here" -- for example, "Is there anybody here like Weeping Mary" -- start's each Booth verse, but the form of the remaining lines is different from Barton-OldPlantationHymns and Work (William Booth, Salvation Army Songs (London: The Salvation Army Book Department, 1911 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), #70 p. 48, "Weeping Mary")). - BS
Last updated in version 4.0
File: Bart021

Is Your Lamps Gone Out

DESCRIPTION: "Is your lamps gone out? (x2), Oh, what you going to do in Egypt When your lamps gone out?" "If you get there before I do, O what you going to do... When your lamps gone out?" "The tallest tree in paradise..." "The Christians call it the tree of life..."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (field recording, unknown artists)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad floating verses
FOUND IN: US(MW, So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Wheeler-SteamboatinDays, pp. 75-77, "Is Yo' Lamps Gone Out" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10025
RECORDINGS:
Art Thieme, "Is Your Lamps Gone Out?" (on Thieme06)
Unknown artists, "When Yo' Lamp's Gone Out" (AFS CYL-11-1, 1933)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Wade in the Water" (floating lyrics) and references there
Isabeau S'y Promène (Isabel)

DESCRIPTION: French: Isabel goes walking by the sea side. She meets a sailor who sings sweetly to her. She joins him on his boat, but then grieves because she has lost her gold ring. He dives three times to try to find it; the third/hundredth time he does not come up.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1880 (E. Gagnon, Chansons Populaires du Canada)

KEYWORDS: courting ship death drowning ring foreign language grief

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar) US(MW)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
- Hugill, Shanties From The Seven Seas, pp. 515-517, "La Danae" (2 texts, French & English, 1 tune)
- Hugill, Songs Of The Sea, pp. 154-155, "La Danae" (2 texts, French & English, 1 tune)
- Berry, Folk Songs Of Old Vincennes, p. 20, "Isabeau se promene (Isabeau Went a-Strolling)" (1 text + translation, 1 tune); also p. 89, "Mon joli coeur de rosier (Little Rosebud Fair)" (1 text + translation, 1 tune)
- Scott, The Ballad Of America, pp. 297-300, "Isabeau S'y Promene (Isabel)" (2 texts (1 French, 1 English), 1 tune)

DT, ISABEAU

ADDITIONAL: Edith Fowke and Richard Johnston, _Folk Songs of Quebec (Chansons de Quebec)_., Waterloo Music Company, 1957, pp. 74-75, "Isabeau s'y Promène" (One day Isabel Wandered)" (1 French text plus English translation, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
- Pete Seeger, "Isabeau S'y Promeneau" (on PeteSeeger29)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Jolie Fleur de Rosier (Lovely Flower of the Rose-Tree)" (plot)

NOTES [18 words]: Reported by Scott to be sung in France, Quebec, and Louisiana, though his version is from New Brunswick. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: SBoA297

Isabella

DESCRIPTION: "Last night when we parted I left you broken hearted... I saw your young man Isabella." "Who will you have?" "You" "Come to church" "Kneel down" "Say your prayers" "Stand up" "Sing a hymn" "Come back" "Kiss" "Shake hands" "Say good-bye" "Farewell"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Thoyts)

KEYWORDS: courting parting play party

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,South,West))

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 35, "Isabella" (2 texts, 1 tune)

Emma Elizabeth Thoyts, "Old Berkshire School-Games" in The Antiquary (London, 1893 Island Unknown, The

DESCRIPTION: Singer has led a reckless life; leaving home, he joins the US Navy. His ship is wrecked in a storm. The lone survivor, he makes his way to a desert island. Resigned to death, he writes his life story, hopes his body will be found, and bids farewell

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (recording, Eck Robertson)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer says he has led a reckless life; leaving home, true love and parents, he joins the "jolly band" (of the US Navy). He sails, while they (and he) lament. After three weeks, his ship is wrecked in a storm. The lone survivor, he clings to wreckage, and makes his way to a desert island where no one has been before. Resigning himself to death, he writes his life story in a diary, and hopes his body will someday be found; he bids farewell to his loved ones

KEYWORDS: grief homesickness farewell parting separation travel death sea ship disaster storm wreck family lover sailor

FOUND IN: US(So)

RECORDINGS:
Eck Robertson & Family, "The Island Unknown - Parts 1 & 2" (Victor 40166, 1929; on ConstSor1)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

NOTES [57 words]: The parallel with "William and Harriet" is obvious: a desert island, starvation, death. But the circumstances of his leaving home are different, and he is traveling alone when shipwrecked rather than with his sweetheart. Those are enough differences for me to classify this as a separate ballad -- but see the cross-reference nonetheless. - PJS

File: RcIslUnk

Islaside

DESCRIPTION: "Until that I return again To walk on Islaside"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan8)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1810, "Islaside" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

NOTES [11 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan8 fragment. - BS

File: GrD81810

Isle de France, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, the sun went down, and the moon advanced When the convict came to the Isle de France." The Irish convict was on his way home when a storm cast him ashore on the Isle. A letter from the queen sets the convict free

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Manifold; broadside printed probably c. 1890)

LONG DESCRIPTION: A convict is shipwrecked on the Isle of France; he had been sentenced to seven years' transportation (for unruly behavior), and was on his way home when his ship, the "Shamrock Green," foundered. Cast up on the island, he is offered sustenance and comfort by the Coast Guard, who sends a sympathetic letter to the Queen. The convict is pardoned; he blesses the Coast Guard and wishes success to the Isle of France

KEYWORDS: royalty ship wreck rescue freedom transportation captivity crime punishment mercy pardon wreck Australia France prisoner

FOUND IN: Australia Britain(England(South),Scotland)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
MacColl/Seeger-TravellersSongsFromEnglandAndScotland 93, "The Isle of France" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Witshire-WSRO Gi 28, "Isle of France" (1 text)
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, pp. 24-25, "The Isle de France" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #12, "The Isle of France" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1575

BROADSIDES:

NOTES [240 words]: The Isle de France mentioned here is not the Parisian region of France (the old crownlands of the French king), but (in the Australian version; the British versions may refer to one of the Channel Islands) the island of Mauritius.
The island was originally colonized by the Dutch (from 1638; they discovered it in 1507), then taken over by the French in 1721. The British occupied it in 1810, and renamed it Mauritius at about the same time. It became an independent member of the Commonwealth in 1968.
Mauritius was not a true prison colony, but it was uninhabited when the Dutch occupied it. The French brought in slaves from Africa to grow sugar. The British abolished slavery in 1834, but this left them with a need for workers, whom they imported primarily from India. Thus Mauritius was sort of a guarded colony even though it was not a destination for prisoners.
Manifold believes the Queen of the song to be Victoria, making the "Isle de France" of the song an anacronym. But it is at least possible that a non-ruling queen could have expedited the convict's appeal.
Alternately, it occurs to me that Ile-de-France has been the name of a number of French ships. Perhaps the name is a corruption of a version in which the sailor was rescued by a ship called Ile-de-France? - RBW
Perhaps it's not surprising, given our field of study, that we lack the keyword "kindness," but that is without question the subject of this ballad. - PJS

Last updated in version 4.1
File: PASB024

Isle of Beauty, Fare Thee Well

DESCRIPTION: "Shades of ev'n'ing close not o'er us, Leave our lonely bark a while, Morn, alas, will not restore us, Yonder dim and distant isle." The singer thinks of the places at home as he paces the deck; absence will make the heart grow fonder

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1844 (Bodleian broadsides)
KEYWORDS: home separation
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 14, "Isle of Beauty, Fare Thee Well" (1 text)
Roud #2553

BROADSIDES:

File: HMHS014A
Isle of Doagh (I), The

DESCRIPTION: The singer is leaving Isle of Doagh "to taste the cup of freedom in Americay." He thinks about the island and the school "where my childhood days I spent." "It will break my heart full sore to part with my comrades one and all."

AUTHOR: Willie "Jack" McLaughlin (source: McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen)

EARLIEST DATE: 1988 (McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen)

KEYWORDS: emigration America Ireland nonballad

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen 41, "The Isle of Doagh" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [20 words]: Isle of Doagh is in Donegal. - BS

File: McB1041

---

Isle of Doagh (II), The

DESCRIPTION: The singer is leaving Isle of Doagh for a foreign land. He recalls when he first arrived and how surprised he was to find it so lovely. He is sad to leave it now.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1988 (McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen)

KEYWORDS: emigration lyric home

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen 42, "The Isle of Doagh" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [5 words]: Isle of Doagh is in Donegal. - BS

File: McB1042

---

Isle of Fugi

DESCRIPTION: "Then I'm bound for the Isle of Fugi; Fugi, Fugi; Then I'm bound for the Isle of Fugi; And from there to Tennessee."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia)

KEYWORDS: nonballad shanty

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, p. 29, "Isle of Fugi" (1 text)

Roud #9417

NOTES [66 words]: Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia: Smith's comment is "Well-known shanty for general work." Fowke notes that Hugill suggests "Fiji" may be meant. - BS

Since we're talking about Pacific destinations anyway, how about "Fuji," which would mean Japan? (Japan also has a city "Fukui," for that matter.) There is also an anchorage off the Philippines known as "Fuga." - RBW

File: SmHa029

---

Isle of Man Shore, The (The Quay of Dundocken; The Desolate Widow) [Laws K7]

DESCRIPTION: The singer and her family set out for Liverpool. A storm strikes; the passengers abandon the ship. The boats are swamped; Willie sees his wife (the singer) ashore, but is lost trying to save his father. The singer and her children must turn to begging

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1883 (Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia)

KEYWORDS: ship storm family begging shore travel drowning sea wreck baby father husband wife

FOUND IN: US(NE) Canada(Mar,Newf)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Laws K7, "The Isle of Man Shore (The Quay of Dundocken; The Desolate Widow)"
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 104, "The Quay of Dundocken" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 486-487, "Willie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, pp. 89-91, "The Desolate Widow" (1 text)
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, pp. 106-107, "The Quays of Belfast" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 818, ISLEMAN
Roud #525
RECORDINGS:
Kate McCarthy, "The Wild Shore" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
File: LK07

Israelites Shouting
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, I wonder where's my sister, She's gone away to stay, Got hidden behind God's altar, She'll be gone till judgment day. Goodbye, the Israelites shoutin' in the heaven...."
Remaining verses describe the departure of other family members
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (recording, Rich Amerson)
KEYWORDS: death religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, p. 71, "Israelites Shouting" (partial text); pp. 248-249, "Israelites Shouting" (1 tune, partial text)
Roud #16362
RECORDINGS:
Rich Amerson, "Israelites Shouting" (on NFMAla4)
NOTES [27 words]: Although the title immediately makes me think of the fall of Jericho, there is no clear evidence of that in the song; the shouting seems simply to be joyous. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.5
File: CNFM071

It Came Upon a Midnight Clear
DESCRIPTION: "It came upon a midnight clear, That glorious song of old": Angels bring the word of "Peace on the earth, goo will to men." People are told to rest and listen to the angels. Someday the whole world will join the song
AUTHOR: Words: E. H Sears (1810-1876) / Music: Richard Storrs Willis (also sometimes sung to a tune by Sir Arthur Sullivan)
EARLIEST DATE: 1850 ("Christian Register," according to Julian); reportedly written 1849
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Jesus
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #208, "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear" (1 text)
Roud #24746
NOTES [123 words]: John Julian, editor, _A Dictionary of Hymnology_, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes), p. 1036, says that Edmund Hamilton Sears was born and died in Massachusetts, and was a Unitarian pastor. He published five books and sundry hymns, most of them published in _Sermons and Songs of the Christian Life_. Julian lists three significant Sears hymns: this one (the only one I recall hearing), "Calm on the Listening Ear of Night," and "Ho, Ye That Rest Beneath the Rock."
I seem to recall reading idea that Jesus was born at midnight is said to come from a passage in the apocryphal/deuterocanonical book Wisdom of Solomon, about the /word coming down at midnight, but I cannot trace the memory. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File: JMSo208
It Can't Be Done
DESCRIPTION: "Now folks never say that I am the best.... You can't hit a ball with the bat of an eye, Don't try it, 'cause it can't be done. You can't take a goose and make gooseberry pie, Don't try it, 'cause it can't be done." Other impossibilities are listed
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (ArkansasWoodchopper)
KEYWORDS: nonballad warning humorous
FOUND IN: REFERENCES (1 citation):
ArkansasWoodchopper, pp. 51-53, "It Can't Be Done" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS: Pie Plant Pete [pseud. for Claude Moye], "Don't Try It, It Can't Be Done" (Conqueror 8446)
Riley Puckett, "Don't Try It For It Can't Be Done" (Columbia 15392-D)

It is Not the Cold Wind
DESCRIPTION: "It is not the cold wind that makes me tremble" but the singer's love for a false man who left her for a new sweetheart. "But after evening there comes a morning, And after morning a sunny day, And after false love there comes a true love"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Hayward-UlsterSongsAndBalladsOfTheTownAndCountry)
KEYWORDS: courting infidelity love nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hayward-UlsterSongsAndBalladsOfTheTownAndCountry, p. 38, "It is Not the Cold Wind" (1 text)
Roud #6528

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Farewell He" (theme) and references there

It Is Not the White Swan that Floats on the Lake
DESCRIPTION: "It is not the white swan that floats on the lake"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: bird
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1800, "It Is Not the White Swan that Floats on the Lake" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
NOTES [11 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan8 fragment. - BS
Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD81800

It Makes a Long-Time Man Feel Bad
DESCRIPTION: "It makes a long-time man feel bad... When he can't-a get a letter... from home," There's a wreck out on the road somewhere...." "Captain George, don't you drive me all the time...." "Hattie Belle, don't you cry about a dime...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1947
KEYWORDS: prison chaining gang loneliness
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 291, "It Makes a Long-Time Man Feel Bad" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 77-78, "Make a Longtime Man Feel Bad" (2 short texts, both beginning "Roberta, let your hair grow long"; 1 tune); pp. 123-126, "Sure Make a Man Feel Bad" (1 tune) text, 1 tune; Jackson apparently considers this a separate song, but it shares many lyrics with "Long-Time Man" and much of the rest is floating or improvised verses)
Roud #15968
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Alberta, Let Your Hair Hang Low" (lyrics)
File: LoF291

It Snows And It Blows (Sudden Departure)
DESCRIPTION: "It snows and it blows, and it cuts off my nose, So play, little girl, let me in; I'll light my pipe, and warm my toes, And then I'll be gone again."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren)
KEYWORDS: playparty travel injury storm
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #60, "Sudden Departure" (1 short text)
File: Newel060

It Was a Lover and His Lass
DESCRIPTION: "It was a lover and his lass With a hey and a ho and a hey nonnie no." "In spring time (x3), the only pretty ring time, When the birds do sing... Sweet lovers ove the spring." The song alludes to courting in the rye, but there is little real plot.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1600 (Morley's "The First Book of Ayres or Little Short Songs")
KEYWORDS: love courting nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic I, pp. 114-115, "It Was a Lover and His Lass" (1 text, 1 tune)
HarvardClassics-EnglishPoetryChaucerToGray, pp. 263-264, "A Lover and His Lass" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 155, "It Was A Lover And His Lass" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Norman Ault, _Elizabethan Lyrics From the Original Texts_, pp. 290-291, "It Was a Lover and His Lass" (1 text)
DT, LOVERLAS
NOTES [93 words]: This is quoted by Shakespeare in "As You Like It" (Act V, Scene III, lines 13-30 or so). I'm far from convinced it's traditional; it was obviously a popular piece of Shakespeare's time -- and is attributed to Shakespeare, e.g., in Palgrave's _Golden Treasury_ (item XI). But it shows up in enough songbooks that I decided to include it. Morley, who in 1600 first published the lyrics, in 1599 published a tune called "O Mistress Mine" in _The First Book of Consort Lessons_. It is generally assumed, but cannot be proved, that they are to be connected. - RBW
File: FSWB155B

It Was a Mayde of Brenten Arse
DESCRIPTION: "It was a maid of brenten arse, She rode to mill upon a horse, Yet was she mayden never the worse." She asks the miller not to hurt her back as she lays upon a sack. The maid returns often to the mill -- and the miller's two millstones
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1550 (Kele)
KEYWORDS: miller sex bawdy MiddleEnglish
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols, #460, p. 311, "(It was a mayde of brenten arse)" (1 text)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #1641.5
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #2759
ADDITIONAL: Edward Bliss Reed, editor, _Christmas Carols Printed in the Sixteenth Century:_

It Was A' For Our Rightful' King

DESCRIPTION: "It was a' for our rightfu' king We left fair Scotland's strand; It was a' for our rightfu' king We e'er saw Irish land...." "Now a' is done that men can do, And a' is done in vain." The defeated soldier must leave his love and go into exile

AUTHOR: Robert Burns?

EARLIEST DATE: 1796 (Scots Musical Museum)

KEYWORDS: Jacobites soldier separation exile

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1685-1688 - Reign of James II (James VII of Scotland), the last Catholic king of Britain
1688 - Glorious Revolution overthrows James II in favor of his Protestant daughter Mary II and her husband and first cousin William III of Orange Mar 12, 1689 - James arrives in Ireland and begins, very hesitantly, to organize its defense.
April-July, 1689 - Siege of Londonderry. James's forces fail to capture the Protestant stronghold, leaving Ireland still "in play" for William August, 1689 - Marshal Schomberg brings the first of William's troops to Ireland. James continues to be passive, allowing more troops to reinforce them
March, 1690 - James receives reinforcements from France but still does nothing
June 14, 1690 - William lands in Ireland
July 1, 1690 - Battle of the Boyne. William III crushes the Irish army of James, at once securing his throne and the rule of Ireland. Irish resistance continues for about another year, but Ireland east of the Shannon is his; James flees the country, and many of his followers also depart into exile, to become the "Wild Geese" of Irish legend

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Hogg-JacobiteRelicsOfScotlandVol1 15, "It Was A' For Our Rightfu' King" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: James Kinsley, editor, Burns: Complete Poems and Songs (shorter edition, Oxford, 1969) #589, p. 694-695, "It was a' for our rightfu' king" (1 text, 1 tune, from the Scots Musical Museum)
Charles Sullivan, ed., Ireland in Poetry, p. 89, "The Farewell" (1 text)
Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #196, "The Farewell" (1 text)
Robert Chambers, The Scottish Songs (Edinburgh, 1829), Vol I, p. 124, "It Was A' For Our Rightful' King"

ST SMM5IWAF (Full)
It Was at the Town of Caylen

DESCRIPTION: "It was at the town of Caylen this gelding we sold" then we stole a gallon of wine from Thomas Grant. "I and two more were condemned to the rope. But I led a scheme and the prison we broke."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick)

KEYWORDS: theft trial escape

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 101, "It Was at the Town of Caylen" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

Roud #2775

NOTES [41 words]: The current description is based on the Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick fragment.
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick: "If the music is any guide, this song in which the hero overcomes his difficulties must be a cheerful one." - BS

File: CrSNB101

It Was Early One Cold Winter's Morning

DESCRIPTION: Singer sees a woman "with an infant baby in her arms all through the frost and snow." She blames her father and mother for turning their back on her, and the girl that stole her lover. She prays and "they both lay down and died"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)
It Was Not for the Diamond Ring

DESCRIPTION: The singer met a man with land, diamond ring, and "noble name" at a dance. She loved him and he promised to marry. He will marry "some smiling dame Of lineage like tae thine" She wishes he had passed her by.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan6)

KEYWORDS: infidelity love promise nonballad nobility ring

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan6 1186, "It Was Not for the Diamond Ring" (1 text)

Roud #6809

File: GrD61186

It Wasna Sae

DESCRIPTION: These days we have only stumbling horses that falter in the bog but our cows can do that work. These days our farmers "are grown sae big Wi’ thrashin' mills and a’, It wasna sae in my young days When the ploomen thresh the straw"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: farming technology humorous nonballad animal horse

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 444, "It Wasna Sae" (1 text)

Roud #5956

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Good Old Days of Adam and Eve" (theme: Whining about the good old days)

File: GdR3444

It's a Cold Frosty Morning

DESCRIPTION: On a cold frosty morning a farmer, drinking cider, complains that he lost his lover: "where shall I find her?" "She's standing by your side," looking like a bride. He should hug and kiss her and call her his own. "Then she'll marry you"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslnds)

KEYWORDS: courting marriage farming drink nonballad playparty

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslnds 19, pp. 102-103, "It's Cold Frosty Mornin'" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #7889

NOTES [52 words]: The Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslnds text shares the "cold frosty morning" with a number of courting and action game songs. See, for example, "Round About the Punch Bowl," "A Young Lady Sat Down to Sleep," "Jingo Ring," "Three Dukes," "On a Cold Frosty Morning," and "Here We Go Round the Mulberry Bush." - BS

Last updated in version 4.1

File: Parr019
It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary

DESCRIPTION: Of an Irishman who comes to London then is called back home by his sweetheart. Know mostly for the chorus: "It's a long way to Tipperary, It's a long way to go, It's a long way to Tipperary, to the sweetest girl I know. Goodbye, Piccadilly...."

AUTHOR: Jack Judge (and Harry Williams?)

EARLIEST DATE: 1912 (copyright)

KEYWORDS: love separation return

FOUND IN: Britain(England) US(SE) Canada

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, pp. 22-23, "Tipperary" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #21, "Tipperary" (1 text)
Colonial-Dames-AmericanWarSongs, p. 177, "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary" (1 text)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, pp. 308-309, "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary" DT, TIPRARY*

Roud #11235

RECORDINGS:
Fiddlin' John Carson, "Long Way to Tipperary" (OKeh 45077, 1927; rec. 1926)
Frank Hutchison, "Long Way To Tipperary" (OKeh 45089, 1927)
John & Emery McClung "It's a Long, Long Way to Tipperary" (Brunswick 136, 1927)
Gid Tanner & his Skillet Lickers, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" (Columbia 15249-D, 1928; rec. 1927)

SAME TUNE:
The Harvest War Song (Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, p. 211)
It's a Long Way from Amphioxus (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, pp. 68-69)
It's a Long Way down to the Breadline [Joe Hill song rewritten by Charles Ashleigh] (Barrie Stavis and Frank Harmon, editors, _The Songs of Joe Hill_, 1960, now reprinted in the Oak Archives series, pp. 35-36)
The Pawnshop (adapted by Dominic Behan?) (Behan-IrelandSings #70/p. 104)

NOTES [180 words]: The folklore about this song is, if anything, better than the song itself (which, apart from the tune of the chorus, is banal). Jack Judge came into a town on New Year's night and claimed he could write a song then and there. Challenged, he wrote "Tipperary."

Harry Williams was (like Judge) a vaudeville performer, although Reginald Nettel, _Seven Centuries of Popular Song_, Phoenix House, 1956, p. 222, says that he was crippled and the son of a Warwickshire inkeeper. The legend says that Judge owed Williams money, and offered this song in payment of the debt.

It is, of course, no longer possible to verify this. What is certain is that the song became immensely popular in the First World War, though more for the chorus (many, many Tommies came from London, after all) than the plot. Nettel, pp. 221-222, in fact says that the song's initial popularity had faded by the time the war came, and it was more popular at home than among the troops. The troops often shouted down someone who started to sing "Tipperary," according to Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang.

Last updated in version 6.1

File: DTtiprar

It's a Shame to Whip Your Wife on Sunday

DESCRIPTION: "It's a shame to whip your wife on Sunday/When you've got Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday...." Subsequent verses "It's a shame to play cards on Sunday...." "It's a shame to get drunk on Sunday."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Fiddlin' John Carson)

KEYWORDS: abuse gambling drink humorous nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 78, "It's A Shame to Whip Your Wife on Sunday" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 22, "Ain't It a Shame" (1 text)
DT, AINTSHAM
ADDITIONAL: Moses Asch and Alan Lomax, Editors, _The Leadbelly Songbook_, Oak, 1962, p. 27, "Ain't It a Shame" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #17576
RECORDINGS:
Fiddlin' John Carson, "It's A Shame To Whip Your Wife On Sunday" (Okeh 45122, 1927)
New Lost City Ramblers, "It's a Shame to Whip Your Wife on Sunday" (on NLCR12)
Pete Seeger, "Ain't It a Shame" (on PeteSeeger32)
NOTES [52 words]: Some joke. -PJS
I have to suspect this is funnier in concert than in print. (It would be hard for it to be LESS funny, after all.)
The version in the Folksinger's wordbook omits the crucial first verse, but I don't think it actually circulated in that form; I think it's just a case of political correctness. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: CSW078

It's After Six O'Clock
DESCRIPTION: "It's after six o'clock After seven and weary After eight o'clock And then I'll see my dearie"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: courting
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan4 806, "It's After Six O'Clock" (1 fragment)
Roud #6207
NOTES [48 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan4 text. - BS
Possibly related to the item underlying Burns's "Ay waukin O"? The meter fits, and the idea is similar; the chorus of the Burns song is "Ay waukin O, Waukin still and weary; Sleep I can get nane, For thinking on my Dearie." - RBW
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD4806

It's All Night Long
DESCRIPTION: "Of all the animals in this world, I'd rather be a squirrel, I'd climb up on a telephone pole And peep all over the world. It's all night long. It's all night long."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: animal nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 170, "It's All Night Long" (1 text)
NOTES [24 words]: This song may be a version of one of the other "All Night Long" pieces, but I haven't seen the verse anywhere else, so it lists separately. - RBW
File: Br3170

It's Almost Day
DESCRIPTION: "Chickens crow for midnight and it's almost day (x2)" "Christmas is a-coming and it's almost day." "Santa Claus is coming...." "Turkey's in the oven...." "I thought I heard my mother say...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (recording, Lead Belly)
It's Braw Sailin' on the Sea

DESCRIPTION: "There cam a letter late yestreen, Our ship maun sail in the morn." The girl gives back his ring, declaring, "Tak that, my bonnie lad, For I hae changed my mind." The song is largely comparisons: "It's braw sailing on the sea, It's better drinkin' wine."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: love sailor separation betrayal ring
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #129, p. 1, "It's Braw Sailin' on the Sea" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan6 1217, "It's Braw Sailin' on the Sea" (3 texts, 3 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 203, "It's Braw Sailin' on the Sea" (1 text)
Roud #5537
File: Ord203

It's But a Man

DESCRIPTION: The singer, long past her twenties, cannot stop thinking about marriage "wi a'thing I need but -- a man." She makes a case that she would be a good catch and she will never give up.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan7)
LONG DESCRIPTION: The singer, long past her twenties, cannot stop thinking about marriage "wi a'thing I need but -- a man" A gypsy fortold she would marry "a dark haired lad." She's "weel eneuch aff" and thrifty and a good cook and housekeeper: the marriage would be "nae cost ava to my man." She admits "I'm nae very bonny" nor dainty "but he'll get a' the bigger a bargain." Men talk politics, and such -- "stuff I can ne'er understand" -- but they don't ask the question "will ye hae me for a man." Her "lassie companions they mock me ... 'But never give up' is my motto.... my weel baited line I'll aye dangle Until I at length hook a man"

KEYWORDS: nonballad oldmaid
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1384, "It's But a Man" (1 text)
Roud #7245
File: GrD81384

It's Down in Old Ireland

DESCRIPTION: The singer was born in Limerick. In spite of his mother's pleading he "carried on with my wicked career." He marries and takes up highway robbery to care for her, is convicted and transported for seven years. Women are deceitful but he'd have no other

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1953 (Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs)
KEYWORDS: prison robbery transportation mother wife Ireland
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 161, "It's Down in Old Ireland" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #490
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Salisbury Plain" (theme)

NOTES [52 words]: Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs includes this verse partly floated to/from "Old Kimball" (as sung by Texas Gladden):
Now oftentimes I've wondered how women loves man,
And more times I've wondered how men can love them,
For robbing by night and a-planning by day
Which caused me behind this prison walls walls for to lay. - BS

File: CrMa161

It's Funny When You Feel that Way

DESCRIPTION: The singer says, "when first I fell in love ... I felt as though I'd tumbled into honey And somebody had left me all their money." She rejects him, then accepts his advance and her father gives his permission to wed. "I long to hear the wedding bells"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1873 (broadside, LOCsheet sm1873 14066)

KEYWORDS: courting love wedding father

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1901, "Isn't It Funny When You Feel That Way" (1 fragment)
Roud #3693

FILE:
GrD81901

It's Getting Late in the Evening

DESCRIPTION: "Lord, it's gettin' late over in the evenin'... The sun most down." The singer asks that John not seal his book until the singer's name is entered. The Spirit seals the book. The singer warns sinners against their ways and prepares to depart

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (recording, Rich Amerson)

KEYWORDS: Bible religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 65-66, "(It's Gettin' Late over in the Evening)" (1 text); pp. 234-
235, "It's Getting Late in the Evening" (1 tune, partial text)
ADDIITIONAL: Harold Courlander, _A Treasury of Afro-American Folklore_, Crown Publishers, 1976, pp. 330-331, "(It's Getting Late in the Evening" (1 text)
Roud #10967

RECORDINGS:
Rich Amerson, "It's Getting Late in the Evening" (on NFMAla4)

FILE:
CNFM0665
It's Good fuh Hab Some Patience

DESCRIPTION: "It's good fuh hab some patience, patience, patience, It's good fuh hab some patience, Fuh ter wait upon de Lawd." "My brudder, won't you rise en' go wid me (x3), Fuh ter wait upon de Lawd." "My sister...." "My fader...." "My mudder...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1913 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 597, "It's Good fuh Hab Some Patience" (1 text)
Roud #11910
File: Br3597

It's Hard on We Po' Farmers

DESCRIPTION: "Work all week and don't make enough Pay my board and buy my snuff, It's hard (x3) on we po' farmers." The farmer works all week for fifteen cents. All he has in the pot is peas and an old jawbone.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (collected from Lemuel Jones)
KEYWORDS: hardtimes farming money work food
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, p. 281, "It's Hard on We Po' Farmers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6709
NOTES [33 words]: One verse of this, "Work all week in the noonday sun, Fifteen cents when Saturday come," is found in the bluegrass/modern old-time country song "Lazy John," but the connection is not clear to me. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.2
File: LoSi281

It's Jesus That Keeps Me Alive

DESCRIPTION: "Well, he's all over me and he keeps me alive (x3), Well, it's Jesus that keeps me alive." Cho: "Well, it's Jesus, it's Jesus that keeps me alive (x4)." "And he feeds me when I'm hungry and he keeps me alive." "And he clothes me." "He's all in my heart"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Jesus
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 181, "It's Jesus That Keeps Me Alive" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #16304
File: Arno181

It's Me for the Inland Lakes

DESCRIPTION: "If ever I follow the ships again, To gather my spuds and cakes, I'll not be working a deep-sea hack,, It's me for the inland Lakes." The singer says that sailors on lakers live in better conditions, make short runs, and get better pay

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (collected from Captain Walkingthaw by Walton)
KEYWORDS: sailor work
FOUND IN: Canada(Ont) US(MW)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Walton/Grimm/Murdoch, pp. 85-86, "It's Me for the Inland Lakes" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 26, "(no title)" (two stanzas following an entry titled "Great Lakes
It's Mony's the Race That I Have Run
DESCRIPTION: The singer thinks of ending a courtship. If s/he "had wings like a dove ... I would go and see my love Which makes one dull this evening"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: courting nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan6 1090, "It's Mony's the Race That I Have Run" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6828
File: GrD61090

It's No Business of Mine
DESCRIPTION: The singer, while proclaiming "Of course it's no business of mine," criticises the girls who are "after the fellow that's got the cash," the "temperate" men who "wouldn't touch whisky" but have red noses "caused by the cold," etc.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: courting drink money accusation
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 392, "It's No Business of Mine" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7616

NOTES [49 words]: Oliver Ditson & Co, The New Comic Songster, 1870 (indexed as New-Comic-Songster; p. 28), has a piece "Of Course It's No Business of Mine," which is very similar in its idea, but since they seem to have no actual words in common except the "No Business of Mine" line, I have not listed it here. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: R392

It's Not the House That Makes a Home
DESCRIPTION: A boy tells a poor girl "you can't play with us because you're so poor" and "you don't live in a mansion like us." She says love, not the house, makes a home. He grows up and sails the seas to find a home with "love that lives inside"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)
KEYWORDS: poverty love home travel children
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
Roud #18249
RECORDINGS:
Winifred O'Driscoll, "Your Home" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
File: RcINHTMH

It's Oh That My Christening Robe
DESCRIPTION: "It's oh that my christening robe my winding sheet had been That ever I was born to sae muckle grief and woe Sae fare ye weel my bonnie lad for I must go"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: grief courting nonballad clothes
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
It's Raining Here

DESCRIPTION: "It's raining here, storming on the deep blue sea (x2) Ain't no black-headed mama Can make a fool out of me. "Now I can see a train coming...." "Talk about trouble, that's all I've ever known." The singer, despite poverty, will not sing the blues

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: poverty separation train
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 508, "It's Raining Here" (1 text)
Roud #11810
File: Br3508

It's Raining, It's Pouring

DESCRIPTION: "It's raining, it's pouring, The old man is snoring. (He) bumped his head and he went to bed And he couldn't get up in the morning."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1988
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MW) New Zealand
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 133, "(It's raining, it's pouring)" (1 text)
List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, p. 88, "It's Raining" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 227, "It's Raining, It's Pouring" (1 text)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 166, "It's Raining, It's Pouring" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Peter and Iona Opie, _I Saw Esau: Traditional Rhymes of Youth_, #6, "(It's Raining, It's Pouring)" (1 text)
Roud #16814
SAME TUNE:
It's raining it's pouring, the old man's snoring, Thunder and lightning stop life being boring (Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, p. 291)
NOTES [22 words]: Another of those things I learned too far back to remember and without really wanting to learn. Makes it a folk song in my book. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: PHCF227b

It's Seven Long Years

DESCRIPTION: Willie the sailor is gone seven years with no letter to Nancy. She regrets "it was my trembling hand deceived you, Caused my youthful tongue to lie." She dreams "Willie was landed safe on shore" but wakes to reality, "stark despair to reign supreme"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick)
KEYWORDS: grief love separation dream sailor
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 59, "It's Seven Long Years" (1 short text, 1 tune)
ST CrSNB059 (Partial)
Roud #2757
It's the Fashion

DESCRIPTION: "When a poor man asks for bread, or a place to lay his head, He will get a kick instead. That's the fashion. But a poodle dog they keep...." Most want to be in fashion, but the singer hopes to "stay clear of that fashion" -- until heavenly robes are in

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: clothes dog warning
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 133, "It's the Fashion" (1 text plus mention of 1 more, 1 tune)
Roud #11341

It's the Sime the 'Ole World Over (II)

DESCRIPTION: "'Ave you 'eard of Sally Carter, Who should 'ave been Joe Johnsing's wife? First 'e gets 'er into trou-bell, Then he ups and tikes a knife." She says she will marry him; he kills her. "An' now 'e's... Passing laws in England's name" while the poor suffer

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions)
KEYWORDS: homicide rejection sex
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, p. 58, "It's the Sime the 'Ole World Over II" (1 text)
Roud #9621
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "She Was Poor But She Was Honest (I)" (form)
NOTES [72 words]: Since Shay's version seems to be unique, and there are many variations on the basic form of "She Was Poor But She Was Honest (I)," Roud lumps this with that song, based on Shay's title. But Shay's piece has a completely different plot, about murder, and never uses either the "She Was Poor But She Was Honest" line or "It's the same the whole world over"; I would consider them separate songs which (probably) use the same tune. - RBW

It's Time I Was a Bride

DESCRIPTION: "I'd like mighty well to change my name And share another's home." The woman is of marriageable age, and tired of being alone. "But he must be a soldier, A veteran of the wars, One who has fought for southern rights Beneath the Stars and Bars."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: Civilwar patriotic oldmaid marriage
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 241, "It's Time I Was a Bride" (1 text)
Roud #7711
NOTES [27 words]: I can't help but suspect that this song is an old piece about a girl who misses a man. Someone then tacked on the final stanza to give it a Confederate twist. - RBW

It's Your Auld Wife and My Auld Wife

DESCRIPTION: "It's your auld wife and my auld wife Gaed oot to gaither snaw; Says your auld wife to my auld wife Wid ye gie my [...] a claw"
J. B. Marcum (A Kentucky Feud Song) [Laws E19]

DESCRIPTION: Curt Jett shoots J. B. Markham dead in the courthouse. Judge Jim Harkis allegedly tries to prevent a conviction by fixing the jury; this fails when the case is transferred to another county. Jett and accomplice Thomas White end up in prison

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recording, Ted Chestnut)
KEYWORDS: homicide trial prison feud
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1905 - Murder of J. B. Markham in Breathitt County, Kentucky
FOUND IN: US(Ap,So,SE)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Laws E19, "J. B. Marcum (A Kentucky Feud Song)"
Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates 60, pp. 159-160, "J. B. Marcum" (1 text)
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 249-251, (no title) (1 text)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, p. 259, "J. B. Marcum" (1 text)
DT 773, JBMARCUM
Roud #692
RECORDINGS:
Ted Chestnut [as Chesnut], "The Death of J. B. Marcum" (Gennett 6513/Champion 15524 [as Cal Turner], 1928)
Lester McFarland & Robert Gardner ("Mac & Bob"), "The Murder of J. B. Markham" (Brunswick 305, 1929; Supertone S-2035, 1930; rec. 1928)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Jesse James (I)" [Laws E1] (tune & meter)
File: LE19

J. C. Holmes Blues

DESCRIPTION: "Listen, people, if you want to hear a story about a brave engineer, J. C. Holmes was the rider's name...." Floating verses about Holmes, the people who want to ride his trains, the freight he wants to carry, the rails he'd like to ride

AUTHOR: Gus Horsley (but based on older materials)
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (recording, Bessie Smith)
KEYWORDS: nonballad railroading floatingverses
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 163-165, "J. C. Homes Blues" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Casey Jones (I)" [Laws G1] (form, lyrics)
NOTES [108 words]: I suffered for quite a while trying to decide whether to list this as its own song or as a by-blow of "Casey Jones." Formally, I probably should have done the latter; the amount of original material in this song is almost nil. It's simply a fixup of the blues ballad version of Casey Jones/Joseph Mikel/Jay Gould's Daughter (which already constitute an almost impossible mess to untangle).
I finally decided to keep this separate because it appears "J. C. Holmes" is a sport: It split off from the main "Casey" stock, but did not go into tradition in any recognizable form. Neither does it seem to have further influenced the "Casey" tradition. - RBW
File: LSRa163
J. V. Johnson

DESCRIPTION: "'Twas on a gloomy Sunday night, When Johnson thought he was all right, A hundred hearts of an angry mob Did disobey the laws of God." A mob opens his cell and takes him out to hang him. He bids farewell and wonders what will happen to his soul

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1966 (Brundage);
KEYWORDS: murder execution death
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Dec 27, 1905 - Guinn Johnson is murdered, probably by his sister's husband J. V. Johnson
Apr 16, 1906 - J. V. Johnson is tried for the murder. The jury cannot reach a verdict (11 are for conviction on a charge of second degree murder; one is for acquittal); a mistrial is declared. A second trial is scheduled for July
May 27/28, 1906 - A mob takes J. V. Johnson from prison and hung from a pine tree; the body is shot repeatedly after the hanging (source: Baker)

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Emma Hartsell" [Laws F34] (tune and form, according to Baker, who however does not print a tune)
NOTES [115 words]: Baker, p. 244 n. 19, says this was collected only once, from Novella Caudle Carpenter, Peachtree, North Carolina, in 1966. There is very little additional information available about it; I don't trust the history very much. But it is treated as traditional, so I'm including it. Baker thinks it is based on "Emma Hartsell," which is also about a North Carolina murder. The events took place in and around Morven, North Carolina, which is just north of the South Carolina border roughly ESE of Charlotte. Concord, where Hartsell was murdered eight years before the events of this ballad, is not too far from Charlotte, so Emma's song could well have reached Morven by then. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1
File: BrJVJohn

J'ài Tant d'Enfants a Marier (I Have So Many Maids to Wed)

DESCRIPTION: French. Dance. Singer says he has so many young women to marry, he doesn't know how to manage. He implores one woman to dance, and gives instructions on how to do it. In the dance, a gentleman in the center of the circle chooses one woman to embrace/kiss

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes)
KEYWORDS: courting dancing dancetune nonballad foreignlanguage
FOUND IN: US(MW) Canada(Que), France
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes, p. 44, "J'ai tant d'enfants a marier (I Have So Many Maids to Wed)" (1 text + translation, 1 tune)

NOTES [52 words]: The lack of equivalency between the French texts and the English translations in "Folk Songs of Vincennes" is particularly acute in this example. - PJS
[For example, in Paul's original description, which I had to shorten, the French version has the man choose a woman to embrace; in the English, he kisses her. - RBW]

Last updated in version 2.5
File: BerV044

J'ài Tant Danse (I've Danced So Much)

DESCRIPTION: French. Singer has ripped the sole from her shoe dancing. A shepherd lad pays for the repair. The shepherd says they should marry in a month. She would rather wait a year. ch.: "Dansons, ma berger', joliment! / Quelle plancher en rompe!"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes)
LONG DESCRIPTION: French. Singer, a shepherdess, says she's danced so much, she's ripped the sole from her shoe. A shepherd lad offers to find her a cobbler and pays for the repair. The shepherd says they should go find a priest and marry in a month. The girl replies that a month isn't enough; she'd rather wait a year. ch.: "Dansons, ma berger', joliment! / Quelle plancher en rompe!" (Dance, my shepherdess, nicely, until the floor breaks (or resounds))

KEYWORDS: foreign language courting love marriage clothes humorous shepherd

FOUND IN: US(MW) Canada( Que) France

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes, p. 56, "J'ai tant danse! (I've Danced So Much)" (1 text + translation, 1 tune)
File: BerV056

J'ai Trouve une Maitresse (I Found a Young Sweetheart)

DESCRIPTION: French. Singer meets a girl of 15 and falls in love. He asks her to love him; he'll wait until she's old enough. She says he won't have to wait long, and that her parents wish her never to wed. She, or he, regrets that a girl might never meet a lover

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes)

KEYWORDS: foreign language age grief courting love family father mother lover

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes, p. 78, "Ja'i Trouve une Maitresse (The Young Sweetheart)" (1 text + translation, 1 tune)
File: BerV078

J'avais une Vieille Grand-Mere (Grandmother Complains)

DESCRIPTION: "I had a very old grandmother, jig-a-don-dain', jig-a-don-de." The grandmother weeps all the time; asked why, she replies that she's weeping for her husband, who has been eaten by wolves

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes)

KEYWORDS: age grief death mourning animal husband

FOUND IN: US(MW) Canada( Que)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes, p. 34, "J'avais une vieille grand'mere (Grandmother Complains)"
(1 text + translation, 1 tune)

NOTES [80 words]: Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes says this is a torn-away fragment of a longer ballad about "a shepherdess whom her suitor found weeping because her sheep had wandered away from her. The young swain played on his pipe and at the strains of his music the sheep came back and began to make merry, except for an old ewe who was disconsolate. When asked by a lamb why she was grieving, she replied, 'I am weeping over the death of your grandfather who has been eaten by the wolves.'" - PJS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: BerV034

Ja, Ja, Ja!

DESCRIPTION: Shanty, aimed at sailors whose native language is not English. The chorus runs, "Ja, Ja, Ja!"; the rest may be deliberate gibberish or slurs on those who say "Ja" for "Yes" or talk of the usual sailor-ashore themes of drinking and chasing women

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951

KEYWORDS: shanty foreigner

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, p. 86, "Ja, Ja, Ja!" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 504-505, "Yaw, Yaw, Yaw!" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, pp.
Jack and Jill

DESCRIPTION: "Jack and Jill went up the hill To fetch a pail of water. Jack fell down and broke his crown, And Jill came tumbling after." "Up Jack got, and home did trot, As fast as he could caper, He went to bed to mend his head, With vinegar and brown paper."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1767 (Newbery)

KEYWORDS: injury

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 254, "Jack and Jill went up the hill" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #48, pp. 58-59, "(Jack and Gill)"; also a reproduction of a chapbook edition of c. 1820 facing p. 58
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 86, "Jack and Jill" (1 text)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 68, "Jack and Jill" (1 text)
Heart-Songs, p. 277, "Jack and Gill!" (1 text, 1 tune, with just the one verse from this song; the other seven I would guess to be a modern addition)

ADDITIONAL: Sabine Baring-Gould, _Curious Myths of the Middle Ages_ , "New Edition," 1894 (references are to the 2005 Dover paperback reprint), pp. 112-113, "(Jack and Jill)" (1 short text)

Roud #10266

NOTES [96 words]: In line with her standard attempts to make mountains out of nursery rhymes, Katherine Elwes Thomas thought that this song was about Cardinal Thomas Wolsey (d. 1530). Baring-Gould referred it back to the Scandinavian Eddas, with Hjuki and Bil being children with a pole and bucket who were placed in the sky. Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel reports a story that it's about the execution of Louix XVI and Marie Antoinette (which has the disadvantage of having taken place after Newberry published the piece!). Evidently it isn't just Republican Presidents who live in fantasy worlds. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: BGMG058

Jack and Joe

DESCRIPTION: Jack and Joe set sail to seek their fortunes. Jack is quickly successful. As he prepares to go home, Joe ask him to "Give my love to Nellie, Jack, Kiss her once for me." When Joe at last heads home, he finds that Jack has married Nellie

AUTHOR: William B. Gray (died 1932)
EARLIEST DATE: 1894

KEYWORDS: love work exile return infidelity marriage

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,Ro,SE,So) Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (14 citations):
Randolph 813, "Jack and Joe" (1 text, 1 tune)
McNeil-SouthernFolkBalladsVol1, pp. 116-118, "Jack and Joe" (1 text, 1 tune)
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 76, "Give My Love to Nell" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 274, "Jack and Joe" (3 texts plus 1 excerpt and mention of 10 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 274, "Jack and Joe" (3 excerpts, 3 tunes)
Morris-FolksongsOfflorida, #29, "Jack and Joe" (1 text)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 135, "Jack and Joe" (1 text)
Jack and Tom

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a North-countrie man, in Redesdale born... And two such lads to my house never com' As them two lads called Jack and Tom." The two decide to set out to sea. They visit various inns along the way. But both die overseas

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1847 (Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland)

KEYWORDS: drink sailor death

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 415-416, "Jack and Tom" (1 text)

Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOffNorthernEngland, pp. 126-127, "Jack and Tom" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST StoR126 (Partial)

Roud #3157

NOTES [60 words]: Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland opines that this pertains to the visit of the future Charles I and the Duke of Buckingham to Spain in 1623. I don't believe it, but if you want background on that escapade, see the notes to "A Carrion Crow" and even "A Horse Named Bill," which has also been linked to Charles and Buckingham. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.8

File: StoR126

Jack Barry

DESCRIPTION: Commodore Barry in Alliance meets the British Sibyl. "We fought them till our cannon brought the British ensign down." Alliance captures Sibyl and returns with their prize to Philadelphia.

AUTHOR: William Collins (1838-?)
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast, p. 80, "Jack Barry" (1 text)

NOTES [279 words]: Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast: "In searching for the songs of the Wexford coast I was very anxious to find something in ballad form about the Tacumshane man who was the founder of the American Navy. [This ballad is] attributed to William Collins, the Irish-American poet." - BS

John Barry (1745-1803) did not actually found the American navy, though he was its senior officer when he died. (Not admiral, we note; the American navy did not have its first admiral until the Civil War.)

Born in Tacumshane, he moved to Philadelphia in 1760, and was given his first ship, the Lexington, in 1776. He commanded the Alliance from 1780-1782, though she did not make her first voyage under his command until 1781. Peace with Britain came in January 1783, but with communications so slow, neither Barry nor the commander of the 28-gun Sybil knew of it, and so fought their battle during peacetime. The battle is usually dated March 10, but I've seen a source dating in March 11.

The Alliance (36 guns), built in 1777, was initially named Hancock but renamed when the French allied with the American revolutionaries. Her early career was not distinguished; Captain Pierre Landais seemed to have more interest in attacking his commander John Paul Jones than in fighting the British (at one point, he is thought to have deliberately rammed the Bonhomme Richard). He was eventually relieved, commandeered what had been his own ship, and was imprisoned by his crew.

Alliance itself was paid off in 1785, the last ship in the American navy at the time. When the navy was revived a few years later, Barry became the commander of its first major ship, the United States. - RBW

File: Ran080

Jack Be Nimble

DESCRIPTION: "Jack be nimble, Jack be quick, Jack jump over The candlestick."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1844 (Halliwell); c. 1815 (Douce MS., according to the Opies)

KEYWORDS: nonballad

FOUND IN: New Zealand

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, "(Jack, be nimble)" (1 text)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 255, "Jack Be Nimble" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnnotatedMotherGoose #411, p. 194, "(Jack be nimble)" (1 text)
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 90, "Jack Be Nimble" (1 text)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 71, "Jack Be Nimble" (1 text)

Roud #13902

File: 002255

Jack Combs

DESCRIPTION: "As I passed by where Jack Combs was murdered, As I passed by there so early one day, I spied a cold corpse wrapped up in fine linen." The victim (?) discusses his burial and says "For I have been murdered and you know they've done wrong"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1967

KEYWORDS: cowboy homicide burial

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Jack Donahue [Laws L22]

DESCRIPTION: Irish highwayman Jack Donahue, transported for life, soon escapes prison and returns to his trade. After a hair-raising career, he is confronted by a gang of police and shot after inflicting several casualties upon the constables.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1883 (Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia)

KEYWORDS: transportation crime death prison

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Sept 1, 1830 - Jack Donahue, formerly of Dublin (transported 1823), is killed by police near Sydney. He was 23. None of the police were injured in the battle.

FOUND IN: US(MW,So,SW) Canada(Mar) Australia Ireland

REFERENCES (23 citations):
- Laws L22, "Jack Donahue"
- Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 103, pp. 241-242, "Jack Donahoo" (1 text)
- Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, pp. 104-106, "Bold Jack Donahue" (1 text)
- Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 123, "Jack Donahue" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 97-98, "Bold Jack Donahue" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 119-121, "Bold Jack Donahoe" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Scott-ACollectorsNotebook-31TraditionalSongs, p. 9, "Jack Donahue" (1 text, 1 tune, the latter fitted by Scott from "The Banks of the Condamine")
- Ward-PenguinBookOfAustralianBallads, pp. 44-45, "Bold Jack Donahue" (1 text)
- Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 76A, "Bold Jack O'Donohoe" (1 text)
- Morton/Maguire-ComeDayGoDayGodSendSunday 21, pp. 47-49,111,165, "Bold Jack Donohue" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 99, "Bold Jack Donohue" (1 text)
- Lomax-FolksongsOfNorthAmerica 59, "Bold Jack Donahue" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 82-83, "Bold Jack Donahue" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 71, pp. 158-159, "Jack Donahoo" (1 text)
- Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, pp. 48-49, "Bold Jack Donahue" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Paterson/Fahey/Seal-OldBushSongs-CentenaryEdition, pp. 69-72, "Bold Jack Donahoe" (1 text)
- Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 111-113, "Jack Donahue" (1 text -- the Lomax "Cowboy Songs" version)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 198, "Bold Jack Donahue" (1 text)
- DT 428, DONAHUE DONAHU2*

ADDITIONAL:
- Bill Beatty, _A Treasury of Australian Folk Tales & Traditions_, 1960 (I use the 1969 Walkabout Paperbacks edition), p. 268, "Bold Jack Donahoe" (1 text)
- Lyn Innes, _Ned Kelly: Icon of Modern Culture_, Helm Information Ltd., 2008, pp. 83-84, "Bold Jack Donahoe" (1 text)

Roud #611

RECORDINGS:
John Greenway, "Bold Jack Donahue" (on JGreenway01)
A. L. Lloyd, "Bold Jack Donahue" (on Lloyd4, Lloyd08)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Bold Jack Donahue" (on NLCR05)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Bold Jack Donahoe" (subject)
cf. "Jack Donahue and His Gang" (subject)
NOTES [1237 words]: John Greenway believes this ballad to be the ancestor of "The Wild Colonial Boy" (see the notes on that song). He is not alone; EncyAust, p. 158, declares, "The song 'A Wild Colonial Boy,' based on his [Donahue's] exploits, was banned." Nunn, p. 76, says that it was "Bold Jack Donahue" which was banned and then, when underground, became "The Wild Colonial Boy." On the other hand, it looks to me as if Greenway's version is a mixture of "Bold Jack Donahoe" and "The Wild Colonial Boy." And the fact that "The Wild Colonial Boy" is widely known outside Australia hints that it did not originate there.
This piece mixes frequently with the other Donahue ballad, "Bold Jack Donahoe." The key element to distinguishing them appears to be that the other song describes Donahue's desertion by his companions at the time of his fatal fight. This song does not mention the companions. (Exception: The Lomax text in "Cowboy Songs" mentions the companions, but in very debased form. It might be another of the Lomaxes' deliberately muddied versions. But Laws files it here, so I do the same.)
Hughes, p. 126, notes that Jack Donahue was not the first bushranger -- in Van Diemen's Land, in fact, they existed from the start, because the only means the colony survived was by hunting kangaroos, which meant that the convicts were armed. But the Tasmanian bushrangers, even though they all but controlled the island, left little if any ballad record.
Bushranging came much later to Australia proper, and Jack Donahue was the first truly memorable example. Hughes, p. 237, declares that "'Bold Jack' was a short, freckled, blond-haired, blue-eyed Irishman named John Donohoe (1806-1830), sentenced to life transportation in Dublin in 1823." The source of this might be the Sydney Gazette of June 8, 1830, which reported Donohue as a "Native of Dublin, twenty-three years of age, five feet four inches in height, brown freckled complexion, flaxen hair, blue eyes, and has a scar under the left nostril" (quoted in Manifold, p. 26). Arriving in Australia 1825, he was assigned to work for a settler named John Pagan, acted up, spent time on a road gang, was assigned again, and took to the bush (Hughes, pp. 237-238; Manifold, p. 26). Donahue's crime in Australia was robbing bullock teams; at this time (December 1827), he had companions Kilroy and Smith (Hughes, p. 128). All three were taken; they were sentenced to be hung in March 1828. "Kilroy and Smith duly swung" (Hughes, p. 238, though Nunn, p. 16, gives the date as 1832), but Donahue escaped. The price on his head eventually reached a hundred pounds (Hughes, p. 239).
In this time "he carried on a successful career of highway robbery (that is to say, at something over subsistence level) for another two years; for the first part of the time with one associate, Walmsley or Underwood, and for the latter part with two, Walmsley and Webber. He does not appear to have worked with Macnamara, though it was believed at the time that he did" (Manifold, p. 26). Manifold adds that Donahue and associated worked on foot, not horseback, and "showed decency to women and children as well as to settlers who were known as goo masters.... Landowners and big-wigs were his main victims, with storekeepers and teamsters in second place." In the winter of 1830 Donahue was wounded but survived.
When the police caught him near Bringelly, Donahue cursed them and tried to fight, but was shot in the head (not the heart!) by a trooper named Muggleston or some similar name (Hughes, p. 240; Manifold, p. 28, offers the names "Mugglestone" and "Mucklestone"). His confederate Walmsley would later turn informer, and led police to some thirty settlers who had traded with him. According to Nunn, p. 76, Donohue was only 21 at the time of his death, which would mean he was barely in his teens at the time of his transportation (but recall that Hughes, p. 237, gives his birth year as 1806, making him 23 or 24 when he died and 16 or 17 when first convicted). Nunn adds that the Underwood Gang, to which Donohue belonged, operated in the vicinity of "Campbelltown, Liverpool, Penrith, and Liberty Plains for nearly twelve years" [i.e. 1820-1832]. On p. 16, Nunn reports that Webber was also killed in 1830, and Underwood in 1832.
Prior to his death, Donohue seems to have been less noteworthy than his companions. Boxall refers to him only once, on pp. 55-56, calling him "Johnny Donahue," listing him as a member of the Underwood gang, and briefly mentioning that he was killed by "Maggleton." Nunn, p. 16, also calls him a member of the Underwood gang, though conflating his time with Underwood, Webber, and Walmsley with his earlier exploits with Kilroy and Smith.
Nunn, p. 76, reports that Donohue was known as "The Stripper" but was "less violent than most bushrangers, gallant to women and had a sense of humour enough to make him a popular hero." He does not cite the source for this data. But Hughes, p. 240, seems to agree: "If Donohoe had been a sadist, a rapist or a baby-killed like Mark Jeffries in Van Diemen's Land, the outpouring of popular emotion that coalesced in the Donohoe ballads would not have occurred. But Australians admired flashiness; most of them disliked Governor Darling and took great glee in seeing his authority ridiculed by this elusive bushranger." As a result, we are told that, in addition to songs, there were other memorabilia, including a series of clay pipes which allegedly showed Bold Jack's head, complete with bullet hole, released less than a month after his death (Hughes, p. 240).

About his companions, Manifold, p. 28, says, "Both were caught later, Walmsley in January 1831 and Webbe in June. Both offered to give information in return for pardon, and there appears to have been public information in their favour. Walmsley's offer was accepted; Webber was hanged. You will notice that their offer puts them outside the pale of ballad-sympathies. Walmsley's information led to the arrest of dozens of 'few-acres settlers' for 'receiving,' six of whom were condemned to fourteen years' transportation to a penal colony, e.g. Moreton Bay. Four of the condemned were adolescent colonials, two were elderly transports."

Ironically, Donahue was the only famous bushranger of the transportation era. All the other "big names," such as Ben Hall and Ned Kelly, came later. This is somewhat surprising, given that Clark, p. 71, states that the bushrangers "were recruited in the main from absconding Irish convicts." Clark also thinks there was an element of Catholic/Protestant tension in their behavior, although I have seen little sign of this in the ballads.

Donohue did become the subject of standard outlaw legends; according to Davey/Seal, p. 90, he was (said to be) courteous to women, never robbed 'the poor' (in this case the convict and ex-convict population), was heroically daring, and 'died game'."

Compare Manifold, pp. 24-25: "It may be chance that links so many of these early ballads around the name of a single hero, Jack Donahue. It may, on the other hand, be seen as the outcome of a natural process, the addition of a catalyst to the right ingredients. The ingredients are: a language rapidly becoming common, a common hatred of The System, a common habit of clandestinity in singing "the treason-songs" and of picking them up by ear rather than from print. The catalyst is a ballad-hero, and Donahue was precisely that."- RBW

Bibliography

- Clark: Manning Clark, A Short History of Australia, fourth revised edition with an addendum by Sebastian Clark, Penguin, 1995
- Davey/Seal: Gwenda Beed Davey and Graham Seal, A Guide to Australian Folklore, Kangaroo Press, 2003

Last updated in version 5.2
File: LL22

Jack Donahue and His Gang

DESCRIPTION: "If Ireland lies groaning, a hand at her through, Which foreigners have from the recreants bought, Forget not the lessons our fathers have taught... Be brave and true." The singer, exiled, will still fight for Ireland. He reveals he is (Jack?) Donahue

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 2008 (Innes)
KEYWORDS: emigration transportation Ireland patriotic
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Lyn Innes, _Ned Kelly: Icon of Modern Culture_, Helm Information Ltd., 2008, p. 84, "Jack Dohahue and His Gang" (1 text)
NOTES [74 words]: Innes says that this is an "early ballad, no doubt known to the Kellys" (i.e. Ned Kelly and his gang), but cites no source, and I've never seen it elsewhere. And what traditional ballad would use the word "recreant"? What's more, although the Kellys tried to portray an image of Irish nationalism, there doesn't seem to be much of that in the history of Jack Donahue. I've included this in the Index, but I don't really think it traditional. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: Innes084

Jack Gardner's Crew

DESCRIPTION: Jack Gardner is the lumber camp's "champion boy of the day." When in town, the loggers (?) find themselves in a barroom fight. Thanks to Gardner, the loggers are victorious. Gardner moves on to still greater fighting triumphs

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1982
KEYWORDS: logger fight
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 7, "Jack Gardner's Crew" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, JACKGARD*
Roud #4617
CROSS-REFERENCES:

File: FSC007

Jack Haggerty (The Flat River Girl) [Laws C25]

DESCRIPTION: Jack Haggerty has reformed his behavior to be a fit husband for the blacksmith's daughter. Following his long absence at work, she jilts him. He blames her mother, but gives up on women in general

AUTHOR: Dan McGinnis
EARLIEST DATE: 1872
KEYWORDS: courting virtue separation love work
FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,NE,So) Canada(Mar,Ont)
REFERENCES (19 citations):
Laws C25, "Jack Haggerty (The Flat River Girl)"
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 245-246, "Jack Haggerty" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 260, "Jack Haggerty" (1 text)
Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy 1, "Jack Haggerty's Flat River Girl" (3 texts plus a fragment, 3 tunes)
Rickaby/Dykstra/Leary-PineryBoys-SongsSongcatchingInLumberjackEra 1, "Jack Haggerty's Flat River Girl" (3 texts plus a fragment, 3 tunes)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 140, "Flat River Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 108, "Jack Haggerty" (1 text plus an excerpt and mention of 4 more, 1 tune)
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 214-217, "Jack Haggerty or The Flat River Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-FolkloreOfMaine, pp. 262-263, "Jack Haggerty's Flat River Girl" (1 text)
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 6, "The Flat River Raftsman" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Bethke-AdirondackVoices, pp. 72-73, "Jack Haggerty" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke-LumberingSongsFromTheNorthernWoods #63, "Jack Haggerty" (1 text, 1 tune)
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 421, "Jack Haggerty" (1 text)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 392-393, "Flat River Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryOfNewEnglandFolklore, pp. 566-567, "Jack Haggerty, or the Flat River Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 50, "The Flat River Girl" (6 texts, 1 tune)
Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, pp. 182-188, "The Flat River Girl" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
The Flat River Girl

DT 607, FLATRVR*

Roud #642

RECORDINGS:
John Leahy, "Jack Haggerty" (on Lumber01)
John Norman, "Jack Haggerty (The Flat River Girl)" (AFS, 1938; on LC56)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Harry Bale (Dale, Bail, Bell)" [Laws C13] (tune)
cf. "I’ve Got No Use for the Women" (lyrics)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Platte River Girl
The Salt Creek Girl

NOTES [1325 words]: While this is usually a lumberjack's song, Beck reports a cowboy version from Texas. [That's the text "The Cowboy's Flat River Girl - RBW.] - PJS
It's actually a sort of a gag; see the report Geraldine J. Chickering (summarized by Laws, NAB pp. 58-59). The full article, "The Original of a Ballad," is now available on the Internet Archive; it's in Modern Language Notes volume L (or, as the Archive puts it, Modern-Language-Notes-Voll-L; the text was very badly scanned and contains numerous errors, but still has details not in Laws), November 1935. The key portion of Law's summary is as follows:
In 1872 Anna Tucker was the belle of Greenville, Michigan, a town "almost on the banks of the Flat River." Her fiancé, George Mercer, was made foreman of the lumber camp where Jack Haggerty and Dan McGinnis worked. Jealous that such a young man had been placed over him, Dan composed this ballad. He used Jack's name in it, although "Anna had never paid any special attention to Haggerty." Furthermore, "McGinnis did not know Anna Tucker but knew that she was Mercer's fiancée and used this song as a means of hurting him."
Chickering's informants said that Haggerty was about 19 at the time (and that he wasn't bright enough to have written the song).
Supposedly the key source for this was Anna Tucker's brother-in-law, Joseph L. Kitzmiller, who had married Mary Tucker, Anna's younger sister, in 1873.
One might still be inclined to doubt this story -- Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, for instance, found a Greenville in Maine and located the song there. She also knew a report that the song was by Larry Gorman; this of course is just legend. More significantly, Rickaby had earlier investigated in the Flat River area of Michigan, where he reported that every singer claimed to have known Haggerty (whom he reports to have died c. 1915 -- obviously quite possible if he was a young man in 1872), giving additional details about the man's career. But there are plenty of claims by singers to have met people in songs who demonstrably never existed, so that doesn't mean much, and, interestingly, Rickaby failed to uncover McGinnis's involvement in the song.
Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, p. 182, reports that Anne Tucker's family (and presumably Anne's husband George Mercer) disliked the song, but "In time the family aversion wore away, and Anne herself is said to have sung it to her Canadian friends." Unfortunately, this information is at third hand or worse.
So can we trust any of Chickering's report, which is based entirely on interviews with informants and not on historical research?
My conclusion is a (very slightly tentative) yes, because some of these people show up in the census, although census records from Greenville, Michigan are confusing. In the 1860 census, there is an "Ann Tucker" who is listed as born in 1854. But in the 1870 census, there is an ANNA, not ANNE, Tucker, who was born in 1856, not 1854. And, in the 1880 census, as Anna Mercer, she is listed as born in 1855. My assumption would be that the census taker guessed at her age in one year or another, or that the forms are hard to read. (I can't check this in detail because you have to pay for full access to the records.)
There is no Jane Tucker living in Greenville in 1860 or 1870. Both reports include a Sarah Tucker, however, confirming Chickering's statement that Anna's mother was named Sarah, not Jane. Sarah was born 1835 according to the 1860 census, in 1834 according to the 1870 record.
There were two John Tuckers in Greenville in 1860 and 1870, one born 1830 (1860 census) or 1828 (1870) and one 1859 (both reports); presumably the one born in 1828 is Anna's father, and the one born in 1859 is the one Chickering called Anna's brother. Since he was said to be three years younger than Anna, this is secondary evidence that the correct date for Anna's birth was 1856.
Mary Tucker, presumably the sister of Anna who married Kitzmiller, was born in 1858 according to both the 1860 and 1870 reports.

Mary Tucker, presumably the sister of Anna who married Kitzmiller, was born in 1858 according to both the 1860 and 1870 reports.
George Mercer apparently had not arrived in Greenville in time for the 1860 or 1870 censuses, but he is listed in the 1880 census, which says he was born in 1846. He and Anna seem to have had two children by then, "Nuie Mercer," born 1877, and Willie G. Mercer, born 1879. Willie Mercer is presumably the William Mercer to whom Chickering spoke; "Nuie Mercer" is probably a mis-reading or mis-hearing of "Nora Mercer," who according to Chickering later became Mrs. Nora Nichols and also remembered the story.

Mary Kitzmiller (the former Mary Tucker) also shows up in the 1880 census of Greenville, although this time, Mary is listed as born in 1857. J. L. Kitzmiller, presumably her husband Joseph who was Chickering's informant, is listed as being born in 1852 (which matches up with an age of 83 in 1935). The record also shows children John (born 1875) and Mary (born 1876).

The 1890 census is not online as if this writing, but Anna Mercer no longer lived in Greenville in 1900. Chickering does not have any details about Anna's later life other than the mention of her two children.

Bottom line: Census records confirm all the Tucker relationships reported by Chickering.
This doesn't mean that the census records confirm everything, which is why there is still some doubt. There was no John, James, or Jack Haggerty in the 1860 or 1870 census in Montcalm County (which contains Greenville). Nor can I find Dan McGinnis in any census, but of course
"McGinnis" might have a different spelling. I looked at every name in Greenville without finding him, but I couldn't search every name in all of Montcalm County, let alone all of Michigan. Plus, of course, lumbermen moved around a lot. I also checked John W. Dasef, History of Montcalm County Michigan: Its People, Industries and Institutions, Volume 1, E. P. Bowen, 1916 (I use the 2019 Facsimile Publisher reprint); the index does not list any of the principals, and there is no mention of any of them in the chapter on Greenville. I do find a "Big Head McGinness" credited by E. C. Beck's informant with writing the song "Paddy Hart," which has some of the same sort of classical allusions as this song, and whose description sounds a big like the Dan McGinnis Chickering's informants described. So there is some very tenuous secondary evidence that there was a song-writing McGinnis in the Michigan woods in the late nineteenth or early twentieth century.

So there is still some residual doubt, but certainly Chickering's tale seems the likeliest explanation for the origin of this song.

Greenville is, as you might guess, a town on the Flat River, which runs mostly north to south and joins the Grand River a little east of Grand Rapids. Greenville itself is about thirty miles northeast of Grand Rapids.

Greenville, according to Wikipedia, was founded in 1844 by John Green, who built a sawmill there.
That was normal for Michigan towns; according to Bruce Catton, Michigan, A History, 1972, 1976 (I use the 1984 Norton edition), p. 83, "It was not the timber that pulled the early settlers.... The forest was looked upon as an encumbrance, rather than an asset. When a new town was founded, one of the first buildings to be put up (provided water power was available...) was a sawmill.... The lumber had no cash value"; they built the sawmill to do something with the wood that they cleared to make fields. That was starting to change by the time Green founded his town, though. The town was platted in 1853, incorporated in 1867. And the town was on a railroad as well as a river, so it was easy to ship wood products. So it is no surprise to find lumber camps in the area in the 1870s.

A 1940 field recording by Dan Grant of Bryan, Wisconsin, from the Helene Stratman-Thomas collection and available on the University of Wisconsin-Madison library web site, puts this to the tune of "Vilikens and his Dinah." It sounds strange -- the tune is much too cheerful for the words! - RBW

Jack Hinks

DESCRIPTION: Jack Hinks is described by the singer as a sailor with heroic qualities who is never short of money or fun and is successful with women. The singer finds himself and others wrecked on the rocks but Jack manages to save himself.

AUTHOR: Johnnie Quigley

EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)

KEYWORDS: sailor wreck rescue talltale

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 131, "Jack Hinks" (1 text)
Jack Is Every Inch a Sailor
DESCRIPTION: "Jack is every inch a sailor; He'd see a pretty girl and hail 'er. He'd vow his love will never fail 'er, Then go sailing with his heart still free." All the girls come running when Jack is in town, all hoping to win his heart, but he will not settle down
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recording, Frank Crumit)
KEYWORDS: sailor courting sex
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 84, "Jack Is Every Inch a Sailor" (1 text)
Roud #4541
RECORDINGS:
Frank Crumit, "Jack Is Every Inch a Sailor" (Victor 21668, 1928)
NOTES [56 words]: This should not be confused with "Jack Was Every Inch a Sailor," which has a similar first line and some similarities in form and tune. The other song is a tall tale about a sailor who won a battle with a whale. - RBW
Although this song concerns Jack and the ladies, it's still clean -- but we have a hint that it was once bawdy. - PJS
File: FSWB084B

Jack Lane's Adieu
DESCRIPTION: "Farewell, sweet America, dear Mary, adieu, Can the gales be auspicious that bears me from you?" He will love her however far away. All parts of the ship remind him of her. He hopes for a speedy return during the watches of the night.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (New York Folklore Quarterly), from the journal of Henry CLay Murdock, who went to sea in 1840
KEYWORDS: love separation sailor
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Harold Nestler, "Songs from the Hudson Valley" (article in New York Folklore Quarterly, Volume V, #2, Summer 1949), pp. 31-32, "Jack Lane's Adieu" (1 text)
NOTES [29 words]: The name "Jack Lane" is not used in the song; presumably the title was in the Murdock manuscript. But the New York Folklore article never explains its significance if any. - RBW
Jack Monroe (Jackie Frazer; The Wars of Germany) [Laws N7]

DESCRIPTION: A rich girl loves a soldier/sailor; her father does not, and has the boy pressed to Germany. She disguises herself and enlist under the name (Jackie Monroe). When her lover is wounded, she nurses him. She reveals her identity; they are married

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1818 (Garret, _Merrie Book of Garlands_)

KEYWORDS: love cross-dressing disguise injury medicine marriage

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,SE,So) Britain(Scotland) Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (34 citations):
Laws N7, "Jack Monroe (Jackie Frazer; The Wars of Germany)"
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #45, pp. 1-2, "Jack Munro" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan1 171, "Jack Munro" (8 texts, 6 tunes); Greig/Duncan1 172, "Jackie Went A-Sailing" (3 texts, 1 tune)

Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 171-177, "Jack Munro" (5 texts)
Randolph 42, "Men's Clothes I Will Put On" (Of Randolph's six texts, only two -- "C", with melody, and "F" -- belong with this piece; "A" and probably "D" are variants of "The Banks of the Nile"; "B" and "E" may be "Banks of the Nile" or "William and Nancy I")
Arnold-FolkSongsOfAlabama, pp. 50-51, "Jack the Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 35, "Jack Went A-Sailing" (2 texts plus fragments, 3 tunes)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 59, "The Wealthy Merchant" (1 text, 1 tune)

Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 139, "Jack Munro" (1 text, 1 tune); p. 143, "Johnny's Gone A-Sailing" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, pp. 180-181, "Johnny's Gone A-Sailing" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 99, "Jack Monro" (2 texts plus 1 fragment and 1 excerpt)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 88, "Jack Munro" (4 excerpts, 4 tunes)
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoaanokeAndTheAlbermarle 59, "Jackie Went A-Sailing" (1 text)

Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #189, "Jackie Frazier" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 34, pp. 147-148, "The Wars of Germany" (1 text)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 82, "Jackie Frazier" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. "203-210, The Silk Merchant's Daughter" (4 texts, which despite Scarborough's title are all this song; local titles are "Jackaroe," "Jacky Freasher," "Jackie Frazier," "Jackie Frazier," "Jackie Frazier"; 1 tune on p. 410)

Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #26, "Ellen Smith" (1 text, 1 tune, which begins with a few verses of an Ellen Smith ballad -- probably "Ellen Smith" [Laws F11] based on the tune -- and follows it with a scrap of a sweetheart-going-to-war-with her lover ballad, which I think is "Jack Monroe (Jackie Frazer; The Wars of Germany)" [Laws N7])
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 37, "Jackie Fraisure" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Peters-FolkSongsOfWisconsin, p. 152, "Sing Lay the Lily Low" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wyman/Brockway-LonesomeSongs-KentuckyMountains-Vol1, p. 38, "Jackaro" (1 text, 1 tune)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol3, pp. 85-86, "Pretty Polly" (1 text, 1 tune, which Bush incorrectly lists as a version of "Polly Oliver (Pretty Polly)" [Laws N14], which may have supplied a few words, especially at the beginning)

Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 65, "Jack Went A-Sailing" (20 texts, 20 tunes)

Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 32, "Jack Went a-Sailing" (1 text, 1 tune -- a composite version)

Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, pp. 53-54, "Jackie Frazier" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 170-172, "Lily Munro" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 82, "Lily Munroe" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 98, "Jackie Fraisure" (3 texts)
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLoosCityRamblerSongbook, pp. 30-31, "Across the Rocky Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune -- a rewritten and expanded version by Roscoe Holcomb)

Abrahams/Foss-AngloAmericanFolksongStyle, pp. 82-83, "Jackie's Gone A-Sailing" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 74-76, "Jack the Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 121-123, "Jack Monroe" (1 text)
DT 331, JACKROE* JACKROE2 JCKSAIL* JCKSAIL2* ACROSRCK*
ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 23, #2 (1974), p. 16, "Lilly Munroe" (1 text, 1 tune, the Uncle Eck Dunford version)
Roud #268
RECORDINGS:
Pearl Jacobus Borusky, "Sing Lay, Sing Lay the Lily Low" (AFS 4172 B, 1940; in AMMEM)
George Davis, "Love of Polly and Jack Monroe" (on GeorgeDavis01)
Sarah Hawkes, "Ho Lilly Ho" (on Persis1)
Roscoe Holcomb, "Across the Rocky Mountain" (on MMOK, MMOKCD)
Doug Wallin, "Jackaro" (on Wallins1)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 28(152), "Jack Munro," W. Armstrong (Liverpool), 1820-1824; also Harding B
25(934), Harding B 11(392), Johnson Ballads 2086, Harding B 11(1835), "Jack Munro"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Jolly Plowboy (Little Plowing Boy; The Simple Plowboy)" [Laws M24]
cf. "Disguised Sailor (The Sailor's Misfortune and Happy Marriage; The Old Miser)" [Laws N6]
cf. "William and Nancy (I) (Lisbon; Men's Clothing I'll Put On I)" [Laws N8]
cf. "The Banks of the Nile (Men's Clothing I'll Put On II)" [Laws N9]
cf. "High Germany ()"
cf. "The London Heiress (The Brisk and Lively Lad)"
cf. "The Bonnie Lass o' Benachie" (plot)
cf. "The Chatham Merchant" (theme)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Bold Munro
Pretty Polly

NOTES [79 words]: The Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook version, from Kentuckian Roscoe Holcomb, shares some words with "The Girl I Left Behind." - PJS
The version in Fife and Fife, "Roving Cowboy," at first glance bears no relationship with this piece, since it lacks the ending about the girl rescuing the young man. However, the earlier verses are clearly "Across the Rocky Mountains," which is evidently a version of this song. "Roving Cowboy" has simply lost the ending. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File: LN07

Jack of Diamonds (I)
DESCRIPTION: "Jack o' diamonds, jack o' diamonds, Jack o' diamonds is a hard card to find."
"Say, whenever I gets in jail, Jack o' diamonds goes my bail." The singer vows to get even for being worked too hard. He admits to losing his money to Jack o' diamonds
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: gambling cards hardtimes work chaingang
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 279-280, "Jack o' Diamonds" (1 text, 1 tune, with a final verse probably from a "Lula" song)
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 303-305, "Jack o' Diamonds" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rye Whiskey" (lyrics)
NOTES [37 words]: This is pretty definitely related to the "Jack of Diamonds" versions of "Rye Whiskey," but the direction is different enough that I decided to split them. But fragmentary texts might well have been filed with that song. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.2
File: ScaNF280

Jack Returned from Sea
DESCRIPTION: "Here I am, poor Jack, Come home a long voyage from sea... Many droll sights I have seen, But I wish the wars was over." The singer describes some of the hard struggles he has faced. He repeats his wish for peace, but will continue to fight if needed

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (Ashton-RealSailorSongs)
KEYWORDS: sailor navy war battle

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ashton-RealSailorSongs, #90 insert, "Jack Return'd from Sea" (1 text)
ST AshS090i (Partial)
Roud #22807

BROADSIDES:

File: AshS090i

Jack Robinson

DESCRIPTION: Robinson lands in Portsmouth with "prize money." He recognizes the alehouse landlady to be Polly. He shows her the handkerchief she had given him. She says she married when someone told her he had died. "He was off before you could say Jack Robinson"

AUTHOR: Thomas Hudson (1791-1844)
EARLIEST DATE: before 1830 (broadside, Firth c.13(200))
KEYWORDS: return farewell sailor gold promise reunion marriage

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #168, p. 2, "Jack Robinson" (1 text)
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 40, "Jack Robson" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ashton-RealSailorSongs, #97, "Jack Robinson" (1 text)

ST CrNS040 (Partial)
Roud #1794

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth c.13(200), "Jack Robinson," T. Birt (London), 1828-1829; also Harding B 11(1847); Harding B 17(143b), Harding B 11(52), Johnson Ballads 2587, Harding B 16(117a), Harding B 11(51), Johnson Ballads fol. 132 [barely legible], Firth c.13(199), Harding B 11(53), "Jack Robinson"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Brave Marin" (Brave Sailor) (theme)
cf. "Le Jeune Militaire" (The Young Soldier) (theme)

SAME TUNE:
The College Hornpipe (per broadsides Bodleian Firth c.13(200), Bodleian Harding B 16(117a), Bodleian Johnson Ballads fol. 132, Bodleian Harding B 11(53))
The Heart of a True British Oak, or The College Hornpipe (per broadside Bodleian Firth c.13(199))

NOTES [227 words]: Jack Robinson shares this theme with the (older?) French ballads: the sailor/soldier returns after a long absence, stops at an inn, recognizes the hostess as his sweetheart/wife, and leaves when she explains that she has married because he had been reported dead.
The attribution is from the wordorigins site explaining "faster than you can say Jack Robinson"."there was a very popular song by Thomas Hudson in the early 19th century that told the story of a sailor of that name who returns to find his lady married to another. Given the date, it is obviously not the origin."
A description -- posted by the bookseller Olde Musick & Cokery Books, Hobart, Australia, on the Abebooks site -- of The Spider & the Fly and A Frog He Would a Wooing Go by Thomas Hudson and W Wilson; "The composer/singer Thomas Hudson (1791-1844) was one of the stars of the very early music hall/supper clubs and indeed for many years ran his own theatrical tavern near Covent Garden and is considered one of the original constituents that developed into the music hall. He published his songs yearly from 1818-31 and his most notable were Jack Robinson The Lively Flea and of course The Spider & the Fly written in the 1830s and most famously sung by Henry Russell. Here coupled with A Frog He would a Wooing Go made notable by amongst others the famous clown Grimaldi in 1837." - BS

Last updated in version 3.2
File: CrNS040

Jack Rock Song

DESCRIPTION: "Well there's a little to used to strike, you see, Made by elves in a hollow tree... But if you're a scab you're made a big mistake." The "jack rock" of the unions is "more dangerous than a loaded gun." The singer says to respect the union

AUTHOR: Elaine Purkey
EARLIEST DATE: 1993 (Cohen)
KEYWORDS: labor-movement nonballad strike
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1989 - Pittston Coal strike. The use of "jack rocks" to flatten tires was a noteworthy feature of the strike
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 229-230, "Jack Rock Song" (1 text)
File: CAFS1229

Jack Rogers

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you tender Christians, I hope you will lend ear... For the murder of Mr. Swanton I am condemned to die," "My name it is Jack Rogers, my name I'll never deny." Drunk, he assaults Swanton in the street, flees, is captured, and is condemned to die

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Dean-FlyingCloud); 19C (Wolf)
KEYWORDS: homicide drink gallows-confession fight trial punishment execution
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Oct 17, 1857 - A drunken James Rodgers kills John Swanston in an unpremeditated fight (source: Cohen)
Nov 12, 1858 - Execution of Rodgers
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 50-51, "Jack Rogers" (1 text)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 108-111, "The Lamentation of James Rodgers" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1212, p. 83, "Lamentation of James Rodgers" (1 reference)
Roud #9557
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Charles Guiteau" [Laws E11] (form & meter) and references there
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Confession of Jack Rodgers
NOTES [57 words]: Although the earliest dated version of this appears to be Dean-FlyingCloud's, it was certainly composed in the nineteenth century; Edwin Wolf 2nd, American Song Sheets, Slip Ballads, and Political Broadsides 1850-1870, Library Company of Philadelphia, 1963, p. 83, lists a broadside, "Lamentation of James Rodgers," which is surely this. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.5
File: Dean050

Jack Sheppard [Laws L6]

DESCRIPTION: Jack Sheppard, the apprentice of carpenter William Woods, is scorned by his master's daughter. After marrying two (!) women, he seeks to rob Woods, is captured, but is freed by an accomplice. Imprisoned, he escapes again, but is at last taken and hanged

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia)
Jack Simpson the Sailor

DESCRIPTION: Jack Simpson and his captain both have beautiful young wives. When the Captain sees Jack's wife, he promises to pay her and promote Jack. She agrees. When Jack finds out, he tricks his way into the Captain's clothes and bed. He then fines the captain.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (Beck-FolkloreOfMaine)

KEYWORDS: trick clothes infidelity money wife husband sailor humorous

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Beck-FolkloreOfMaine, pp. 186-188, "Jack Simpson the Sailor" (1 text)
Jack Sprat

DESCRIPTION: "Jack Sprat could eat no fat, His wife could eat no lean, And so between the two of them They licked the platter clean."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1639 (John Clarke’s _Paroemiologia Anglo-Latina_, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)

KEYWORDS: food husband wife

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 264, "Jack Sprat could eat no fat" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnnotatedMotherGoose #52, p. 63, "(Jack Sprat)"
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 93, "Jack Sprat" (1 text)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 72, "Jack Sprat" (1 text)

Roud #19479

NOTES [177 words]: This is probably only a nursery rhyme, and not a nursery song, and so properly does not belong in the Index. But Tony and Irene Saletan recorded it as part of their version of "Hail to Britannia" (which includes many nursery rhymes), so I decided to play it safe and include it.

The Baring-Goulds and the Opies believe that the hero of this song was initially the dwarf "Jack Prat."

Katherine Elwes Thomas, who proves that scholars can produce tall tales as well as any entertainer, believes that this refers to Charles I of England (executed 1649) and his Catholic wife Henrietta Maria of France (died 1666). The events she attributes to some of Charles's early troubles with his parliaments.

Even that is perhaps more sane than the story in Albert Jack, who has a story which refers this to the imprisonment of King Richard I and the attempts in England to raise his enormous ransom, which "licked the platter clean." Of course, Richard I reigned 1189-1199, which was still early in the Middle English period; the rhyme could not have been composed then. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.3

File: BGMG052

Jack Tar (I) [Laws K39]

DESCRIPTION: Jack newly paid off from sea, enters an inn and calls for a party. All goes well until his money is spent, whereupon the landlady bids him to leave. Jack starts a brawl, but the watch at last persuades him to return to sea

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (Ashton-RealSailorSongs)

KEYWORDS: sailor party fight poverty

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar,Newf,Ont) Britain(England(Lond,South)) US(MA,NE)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Laws K39, "Jack Tar"
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 78, "Flash Gals of the Town" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #81, "Jack Tar" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 168-169, "Jack Tar" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Ashton-RealSailorSongs, #48, "Jack's Disaster" (1 text)
DT 743, JACKTAR1* JACKTAR2
Roud #919

RECORDINGS:
Harry Cox, "Jack Tar on Shore" (on LastDays)
Jim Doherty, "When the Shantyboy Comes Down" (on Lumber01 -- a version in which the sailor
Jack Tar (III) (Come Brave Honest Jack Tar)

DESCRIPTION: "Come brave honest Jack Tar, once more will you venture? Press warrants they are out...." The captain promises good treatment. The sailor says that he beat back the press gang, and will not submit to all the abuse of naval service

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Firth)

KEYWORDS: sailor hardtimes rejection

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 58, "Jack Tar" (1 text)
Roud #V23361

Jack the Guinea Pig

DESCRIPTION: "When the anchor's weigh'd and the ship's unmoored, And the landmen lag behind, sir, The sailor... prays for a wind, sir!" The singer compares sailors, who brave every danger, with landmen who get sick, go below, and despair at sea

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Shay)

KEYWORDS: sailor bragging humorous nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Shay-AmericanSeaSongsAndChanteys, pp. 132-135, "Jack the Guinea Pig" (1 text)

NOTES [23 words]: I could imagine sailors singing this, since it certainly flatters their courage, but based on the evidence, I rather doubt they did. - RBW

File: ShaSS132

Jack the Jolly Tar (I) (Tarry Sailor) [Laws K40]

DESCRIPTION: Jack overhears a girl tell her lover that she will lower a string from her window to let him find her. Jack comes to her window early and enjoys the girl's charms until morning when she realizes the truth. Having had his romp, he returns gaily to his ship

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Cecil Sharp collection)

KEYWORDS: sailor love trick sex bawdy humorous

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar,Newf) Britain(England(South)) US(MW,Ro)

REFERENCES (16 citations):
*Laws K40, "Jack the Jolly Tar (I)"
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 50, "Tarry Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 288-290, "Jack the Jolly Tar" (1 texts, 3 tunes)
Karpes-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland 38, "Jack in London City" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 63, "Jolly Jack Tar" (1 text, 1 tune)
Harlow-ChantingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 168-169, "Do Me Ama" (1 text, 1 tune)
Grimes-StoriesFromTheAnneGrimesCollection, pp. 46-447, "The Substitute" (1 text)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #54, "Jack and Nancy" (1 text)
Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland2, pp. 82-86, "Jack, the Jolly Tar" (2 texts plus a fragment, 1 tune)
Finger-FrontierBallads, pp. 16-17, "Doo Me Ama" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
VaughanWilliams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs, pp. 54-55, "Jack the Jolly Tar" (1 text, 1 tune)
Butterworth/Dawney-PloughboysGlory, pp. 24-25, "Jack went up to London city" (1 text, 1 tune)
Copper-SongsAndSouthernBreezes, pp. 260-261, "The Squire's Lost Lady" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jack the Painter

DESCRIPTION: "At the mouth of Portsmouth Harbour, where the old chain ferry plied, Some say a spirit hangs in chains...." Jack the Painter set Portsmouth Yard ablaze, was taken and executed, and sailors put his bones in a sack, "but the dockyard's working yet"

AUTHOR: Brian Hooper (source: Browne-FolkSongsOfOldHampshire)
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Browne-FolkSongsOfOldHampshire)
KEYWORDS: sailor ship fire death execution drink
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1752 - birth of future pyromaniac James Aitkin, the subject of this song (source: Browne-FolkSongsOfOldHampshire)
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jack the Sailor (The Tarry Sailor III)
DESCRIPTION: "So late it was one Saturday night, on the quayside I was walking, There I beheld a pretty maid, to her father she was talking." When he asks her to marry, her fathers says no. He demonstrates that he is wealthy; the father relents
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Vaughan Williams)
KEYWORDS: sailor love courting money father marriage
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #64, "The Tarry Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Purslow-TheConstantLovers, pp. 44-45, "Jack, the Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1454
File: VWp064

Jack Was A Sailor On Board A Whaler
DESCRIPTION: Before Jack goes whaling, a friend asks that he repay a debt. Jack says, "When my ship comes in... you'll get your tin." The ship is lost in a gale. When Jack returns he is asked for the money. Jack says, "When my ship comes in... you'll get your tin."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (ITMA/CapeShoreNL)
KEYWORDS: rescue money sea ship storm wreck sailor
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
Roud #30314
RECORDINGS:
Caroline Brennan, "Jack Was A Sailor On Board A Whaler" (on ITMA/CapeShoreNL)
File: ITMAJWSW

Jack Was Every Inch a Sailor
DESCRIPTION: "Jack was every inch a sailor... He was born upon the bright blue sea." Having been brought up as a whaler, one day Jack is swept overboard and swallowed by a whale. He escapes by pulling the whale inside out
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)
KEYWORDS: talltale sea humorous whaler
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 125, "Jack was Ev'ry Inch a Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke/Johnston-FolkSongsOfCanada, pp. 40-41, "Jack Was Every Inch a Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Doyle-OldTimeSongsAndPoetryOfNewfoundland, "Jack Was Every Inch a Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune): p. 13 in the 2nd edition; p. 33 in the 3rd; p. 29 in the 4th; p. 29 in the 5th
Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, p. 56, "Jack Was Every Inch a Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mills-FavoriteSongsOfNewfoundland, pp. 4-5, "Jack Was Every Inch a Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 84, "Jack Was Every Inch a Sailor" (1 text)
England-HistoricNewfoundlandAndLabrador, p. 63, "Jack Was Every Inch a Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, EVRYINCH
Roud #4541
RECORDINGS:
Omar Blondahl, "Jack Was Every Inch a Sailor" (on NFOBlondahl01,NFOBlondahl05)
Eddy Primroy, "Jack Was Every Inch a Sailor" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ambletown" (occasional floating lyrics)
cf. "Paddy and the Whale" (theme)
cf. "The Catfish" (Banjo Sam) (fish story)
NOTES [57 words]: This is almost certainly a cleaned-up bawdy song. - PJS
The versions I know all seem more in the Paul Bunyan vein -- extraordinary exaggerations. (But maybe I don't have imagination enough.) I suspect Paul is referring to "Jack Is Every Inch a Sailor," which is similar only in its first line and metrical form, and which IS sexual in theme. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0
File: FJ040

Jack Williams [Laws L17]

DESCRIPTION: Jack Williams, a boatman, meets a fine young girl. He turns to robbery to support her. He is captured and sent to prison; she scorns him, saying "I hate thievish company." He is sentenced (to transportation/execution) (but escapes and vows to avoid women)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1916

KEYWORDS: crime prison trial transportation courting

FOUND IN: US(MW) Britain(England) Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (9 citations):
Laws L17, "Jack Williams"
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 538, "Boatman" (1 text)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 114, "Jack Williams" (1 text)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 62, "Jack Williams" (1 text)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 136, "Jack Williams" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 67, pp. 152-153, "Jack Williams" (1 text)
Forget-Me-Not-Songster, pp. 112-113, "Jack Williams" (1 text)
DT 572, JCK/WLM

ADDITIONAL: James P. Leary, Compiler and Annotator, _Wisconsin Folklore_ University of Wisconsin Press, 2009, article "Kentucky Folksong in Northern Wisconsin" by Asher E. Treat, p. 232, "I am a Bo’s’n by My Trade (1 text, 1 tune, sung by Pearl Jacobs Borusky)
Roud #1906

BROADSIDES:

File: LL17

Jack-a-Needle

DESCRIPTION: "Jack needle, Jack needle, I work with my needle And when I get married 'tis apples I'll buy" or "how happy I'll be." The singer will sit in a garden and whistle to a girl to come. "Last night when we parted, I was nigh broken hearted"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1896 (Hinkson)

KEYWORDS: playparty marriage courting

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 94, "Jack-a-Needle" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #22350

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Jack Beetle

File: OpGa094
Jacket So Blue, The (The Bonnet o' Blue)

DESCRIPTION: The girl sees a (soldier/sailor) marching past and falls in love. She meets him and offers to buy his discharge; he replies that he already has a girl at home. She asks for a portrait to console her; this at least is granted

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1806

KEYWORDS: love courting soldier clothes separation

FOUND IN: US(MA,NE,So) Ireland Britain(England,Scotland(Aber)) Canada(Mar,Newf)

REFERENCES (16 citations):
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 212-214, "The Bonnet o' Blue" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #105, pp. 1-2, "The Bonnet o' Blue" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan992, "The Bonnet o' Blue" (10 texts, 7 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 295-296, "The Bonnet o' Blue" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 118-119, "The Bonny Scotch Lad" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 43, "The Jacket So Blue" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-FolkloreOfMaine, pp. 217-218, "Jacket So Blue" (1 text)
Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks, pp. 112-115, "The Jacket So Blue" (1 text, from a broadside, probably the same as one of the Bodleian broadsides although the information is not enough to be sure)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, p. 301, "The Wagoners" (1 text, fragmentary and localized to make the soldier a wagoner)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 121, "Jacket So Blue, or A Company of Boatmen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Logan-APedlarsPack, pp. 101-106, "Bonnet o' Blue" (1 text)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H644, p. 367, "The Bonnet sae Blue" (1 text, 1 tune)
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 275-277, "The Bonnet of Blue" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 42, "His Jacket Was Blue" (1 text, 1 tune); 43, "His Jacket Was Blue" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, pp. 174-175, "His Jacket Was Blue" (1 text, 1 tune)
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 209-211, "The Jacket So Blue (Bonnet So Blue)" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST FSC43 (Full)
Roud #819

RECORDINGS:
Nathan Hatt, "His Jacket Was Blue" (on NovaScotia1)
Raymond Noseworthy, "Jacket of Blue" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(393), "Bonnet So Blue" ("In Liverpool town in fair Lancashire"), W. Armstrong (Liverpool), 1820-1824; also Harding B 25(251), Harding B 28(160), Harding B 11(4088), Harding B 28(104), Firth c.14(187) , Firth c.14(188), Firth c.14(190), Harding B 11(2653), "Bonnet So Blue"; 2806 c.17(52), Harding B 11(392), "Bonnet So Blue" ("At Kingston upon Woolwich, a town near Yorkshire")
LOCSinging, as101360, "Bonnet So Blue" ("In Liverpool town, in fair Lancashire"), L. Deming (Boston), 19C; also as101360, "Jacket So Blue" ("A ship's crew of sailors as you shall now hear")

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Manchester Angel" (theme)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
My Bonnie Scotch Laddie
Down in Yon Green Valley
The Bonnie Scotch Laddie and His Bonnet o' Blue

NOTES [53 words]: Broadside LOCSinging as101360 includes both a "troop of soldiers ... from Scotland" version ("Bonnet So Blue") and a "crew of sailors ... from Greenwich" version ("Jacket So Blue"). These correspond to Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 42 and Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 43, respectively. - BS

Last updated in version 5.0

File: FSC43
Jackets Green, The
DESCRIPTION: "When I was a maiden young and fair on the pleasant banks of the Lee," the girl loved young Donal in his jacket green. Donal serves under Sarsfield in the fight against the English and is slain. The singer urges Irish women to love only Irish patriots
AUTHOR: Michael Seanlan
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (for USBallinsloeFair, according to site irishdance.info, Irish Traditional Music Tune Index: Alan Ng's Tunography, ref. Ng #2612)
KEYWORDS: Ireland rebellion battle
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1690 - Battle of the Boyne. William III crushes the Irish army of James, at once securing his throne and the rule of Ireland
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Galvin-IrishSongsOfResistance, pp. 97-98, "The Jackets Green" (1 text, 1 tune)
Healy-MercierBookOfOldIrishStreetBalladsVol2, pp. 38-39, "The Jacket Green" (1 text, tune on pp. 20-21)
Roud #9520
RECORDINGS:
The McNulty Family, "The Jackets Green" (on IRMcNulty-Night1)
John Sheridan, "The Jackets Green" (on USBallinsloeFair)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 3214, "The Jacket Green," P. Brereton (Dublin), c.1867; also 2806 c.7(38)[some words illegible], "The Jacket Green"
LOCSinging, as106510[barely legible], "The Jacket Green," unknown, 19C
NOTES [90 words]: Patrick Sarsfield, made Earl of Lucan by James II, was one of the Irish cavalry commanders. After Aughrim (for which see "After Aughrim's Great Disaster"), he defended Limerick, but seeing that his cause was hopeless, he made a treaty with William III and surrendered. (This was not a betrayal of the Irish cause; Sarsfield gained significant concessions, including religious tolerance, in return for ending Irish resistance.) - RBW
Broadside LOCSinging as106510 looks like the Bodleian Brereton broadsides but all are difficult to read. - BS
Last updated in version 4.2
File: P6a097

Jackie and Mossy
DESCRIPTION: Jack and his master compare endowments; Jack is much better equipped. The "old woman," hearing of this, declares that a mouse has run up her "belly-gut" and that she needs help. Jack "lays her on the ground." She releases a mouse from her sleeve
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1770, as published in Frisky Songster (London or Dublin, 1770, reprinted 1802) [according to G. Legman]
LONG DESCRIPTION: When a mouse runs into the private parts of a farmer's wife, the farmer is forced to call upon Jackie the farmhand to use his much longer "root" to pry the rodent out. In older versions, Jackie makes the farmer agree to double his wages before he will consent to have sex with the wife, and when the woman has been sexually satisfied, she lets the mouse out of her sleeve.
KEYWORDS: bawdy humorous farming wife animal
FOUND IN: US(MW,So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArmsI, pp. 293-295, "Jackie and Mossy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Grimes-StoriesFromTheAnneGrimesCollection, pp. 44-46, "Jack and His Kind Master" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11226
File: RL293
Jackie Jackie
DESCRIPTION: "Jackie Jackie was a smart young fellow... Yet he sat by the river of his people Underneath a great gum tree." Jackie's ancestral life is described. It is pointed out that the whites took this away, substituting liquor and gambling
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1968
KEYWORDS: Australia discrimination
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, p. 147, "Jackie Jackie" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [30 words]: "Jackie" is, of course, white slang for an Australian aborigine. The song is surprisingly balanced in its outlook -- probably because it is believed to be of aboriginal origin. - RBW
File: MA147

Jackson and Jane
DESCRIPTION: Jane is Hugh Jackson's grey mare. She is challenged to win the steeplechase cup at Cootehill a third time. The odds were ten to four against her. Half way around the jockey tells her that her opponents "are not yet in view." Jane wins easily.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster)
KEYWORDS: horse gambling racing
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster 43, "Jackson and Jane" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2913
NOTES [39 words]: Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster: The singer tells Morton that "Jackson owned a linen-spinning mill in Ballybay, Co Monaghan, though he doesn't know in what period." - BS
It makes me think of "Creeping Jane," though I'm not sure why. - RBW
File: MorU043

Jackson County
DESCRIPTION: "Oh Jackson, our County, we greet thee, And sing with sweet Freedom's refrain, While the echoes o'er valley and hillside Resound with our county's high fame." It's by the Father of Waters, and named for General (Andrew) Jackson
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks)
KEYWORDS: nonballad home
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks, pp. 22-23, "Jackson County" (1 text, tune referenced)
Roud #14052
NOTES [82 words]: McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks says this is sung to "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean." I'd have guessed "My Bonnie Lies over the Ocean." Admittedly both odd tunes for an inland state....
Jackson county is in southern Illinois, on the east bank of the Mississippi, explaining the reference to the Father of Waters. This means that the reference to Egypt must be to the region of Illinois around Cairo (known locally as "Egypt"), not to the nation around the Nile RIver. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.3
File: McIn022

Jackson's Victory
DESCRIPTION: "Come, all you brave Americans, don't let us disagree." The singer says that the "free sons of America" are never afraid. They came to New Orleans with Jackson and defeat the British. "We'll show the British Grenadiers that Uncle Sam is free."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 2008 (Cohen); probably published by 1837
KEYWORDS: war patriotic battle
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Jan 8, 1815 - Battle of New Orleans. Although a peace had already been signed, word had not yet reached Louisiana, which Pakenham sought to invade. Andrew Jackson's backwoodsmen easily repulsed Pakenham's force; the British commander was killed in the battle.
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 341-342, "Jackson's Victory" (1 text)
Roud #V29199
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Battle of New Orleans" [Laws A7] and references there
NOTES [62 words]: For background on the Battle of New Orleans (which this song describes with a mixture of accuracy and inaccuracy), see the notes to "The Battle of New Orleans" [Laws A7]. Looking at the song, I wonder a little if it wasn't intended to support one of Andrew Jackson's political campaigns. Jackson was an extremly controversial figure, but it asks people not to disagree. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: CAFS1341

Jacksons
DESCRIPTION: "As we started out from Nariel one early morn in spring," the group stops at "Jacksons on the road to Omeo." They have a wild spree, spend their money, and have to head home. The singer declares that he will not return to Jacksons
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987
KEYWORDS: drink money rambling
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 272-272, "Jacksons" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Lazy Harry's (Five Miles from Gundagai)" (plot, lyrics, portions of tune)
NOTES [29 words]: When I read this, I thought it was a version of "Lazy Harry's," but Meredith et al consider it distinct though clearly related. So it gets its own listing. Just barely. - RBW
File: MCB271

Jacky Me Lad
DESCRIPTION: Progressive rhymed chant: "Oh, Jacky me lad, he loved his dad, He put him in a peer flad [sic]; The peer flad it was so thick They put him in the bacon click; The bacon click it was so fat, They put him in old grand-dad's hat...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1955
KEYWORDS: nonballad nonsense humorous
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, p. 60, "Jacky Me Lad" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: MA060A

Jacky Tar With His Trousers On
DESCRIPTION: After Jack sets out for sea, his love mourns. Even after peace is proclaimed, he is slow to return. At last he returns "with his trousers on." She greets him with joy. He tells of his far voyages. He promises he will travel no more
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1855 (broadside, NLScotland L.C.Fol.70(130a))
Jacky-Jacky

DESCRIPTION: "Jacky-Jacky was a smart young fellow, Full of fun and energy." Jacky hunts in the wild till the white men come and fence the land. The white give government handouts until money runs short, then try to give the land back to Jacky instead

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1964

KEYWORDS: Australia discrimination money

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, pp. 94-95, "Jacky-Jacky" (1 composite text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Gwenda Beed Davey and Graham Seal, _A Guide to Australian Folklore_, Kangaroo Press, 2003, p. 162, "Jacky-Jacky" (1 partial text)

NOTES [32 words]: Presumably based on some particular incident in the long sad history of Aboriginal relations in Australia, but the details are vague enough that I can't tell what it refers to in particular. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1

File: PASB094

Jacob's Dream (Jacob's Ladder IV)

DESCRIPTION: "Jacob dreamt he seed a ladder, Climbing up the sky, Angels going up and down it, Climb up, children, climb." "Climb up, ye little children, Climb up, ye older people, Climb up to the sky. Go up in six and sevens, Climb up, children, climb."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: religious Bible

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 536, "Jacob's Ladder" (3 texts; this is the short "A" text)

Roud #2286

NOTES [26 words]: In Gen. 28:12, Jacob dreams of a "ladder" (ramp/stairway) from earth with its top "reaching to heaven, and the angels of God climbing up and down it." - RBW

File: Br3536
Jacob's Ladder (I)

DESCRIPTION: "I am (we are) climbing Jacob's ladder... And I won't be troubled any more. As soon as my feet strikes Zion's walls, I won't be troubled any more." "Goin' to see my father/mother/sister/brother in the kingdom...." Alternate end: "Soldiers of the cross."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE) West Indies(Bahamas)
REFERENCES (10 citations):
- Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 118, "We Are Climbing Jacob's Ladder (Jacob's Ladder)" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 118 in the 1901 edition)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 536, "Jacob's Ladder" (3 texts, but only the "B" text could be this, and even it might be something else)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 536, "Jacob's Ladder" 3 tunes plus text excerpts
- Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates 320, p. 190, "Jacob's Ladder" (1 text)
- Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 235, "Jacob's Ladder" (1 text, 1 tune, plus a union/liberal parody)
- Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 204, "Hide Thou Me" (1 text, probably a mix, with the form of "Rock of Ages (II -- Hide Me Over Rock of Ages" but verses from "Jacob's Ladder"); p. 213, "I Am On My Way" (1 text)
- Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 212, "Jacob's Ladder" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber/FolksingersWordbook, p. 358, "Jacob's Ladder" (1 text)
- JournalOfAmericanFolklore, Elsie Clews Parsons, "Spirituals and Other Folklore from the Bahamas," Vol. 41, No. 162 (Oct-Dec 1928), Anthems: Cat Island #24 p. 463, ("Oh gwine ter climb up Jacob ladder") (1 text)
- DT, JACOBLDR*
- Roud #2286
- Armstrong & Highley, "Climbing Jacob's Ladder" (Paramount 3291, 1932)
- Chumbley Family, "Jacob's Ladder" (Columbia 15481-D, 1929)
- Maddox Bros. & Rose, "We Are Climbing Jacob's Ladder" (4-Star 1473, n.d. but post-WWII)
- Frank & James McCravy, "Jacob's Ladder" (Victor 21188, 1928) (OKeh 45128, 1927) (Brunswick 192, 1928)
- Pete Seeger, "Jacob's Ladder" (on HootenannyCarnegie) (on PeteSeeger47) (on PeteSeeger26)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Don't You Weep After Me" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Jacob's Ladder (V)" (lyrics, theme)
NOTES [26 words]: In Gen. 28:12, Jacob dreams of a "ladder" (ramp/stairway) from earth with its top "reaching to heaven, and the angels of God climbing up and down it." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
File: CW190A

Jacob's Ladder (V)

DESCRIPTION: "I want to climb up Jacob's ladder, Jacob's ladder, O Jacob's ladder, I want to climb up Jacob's ladder, But I can't climb it till I make my peace with the Lord." "O praise ye the Lord, I'll praise him till I die... And sing Jerusalem."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 96, "Jacob's Ladder" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Roud #2286

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Jacob's Ladder (I)" (lyrics, theme)
NOTES [108 words]: In Gen. 28:12, Jacob dreams of a "ladder" (ramp/stairway) from earth with its top "reaching to heaven, and the angels of God climbing up and down it."
Roud and others have lumped this with the common "Jacob's Ladder (I)," which is the commonly-known "Jacob's Ladder." Obviously they share a theme, but there are very few words in common except "climb" and "Jacob's Ladder," and the tune of this is not the "Jacob's Ladder" tune I know. It's perfectly possible that the same image could have inspired two songs, or that one inspired but was not the actual source of the other. Certainly they strike me as distinct songs "now." So I split them. - RBW

Jaeger Gik At Jage, En (A Hunter Went Out Hunting)

DESCRIPTION: Norwegian or Swedish pumping shanty. Translation: "A hunter went out a-hunting (2x) out in the woods so green. Chorus: Hali, hali, hali, hali, We sail and we pull (2x). Further verses were supposedly too obscene to print.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1888 (L.A. Smith, _Music of the Waters_)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage shanty hunting
FOUND IN: Sweden Norway
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 505-507, "En Jaeger Gik At Jage" (3 texts-Norwegian & English, 2 tunes)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Keeper" (general feeling)
NOTES [22 words]: Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas makes note that this shanty was originally a hunting song, though doesn't give a specific reference. - SL

Jail Down Careira, The

DESCRIPTION: Call and response. The singer tells about "de jail down Careira Where dey try me fo' murder" and what he wants to happen in his absence ("A want a Chinese mama To drive me Lincoln Zephyr"). The response is "De jail, de jail, de jail down Careira"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (Elder-FolksongsFromTobago)
KEYWORDS: crime homicide prison humorous nonballad Caribbean
FOUND IN: West Indies(Tobago)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Elder-FolksongsFromTobago 15, "The Jail Down Careira" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [19 words]: Elder-FolksongsFromTobago: "Careira is the name of a convict island off the North-Western coast of Trinidad." - BS

Jake and Roanie

DESCRIPTION: Jake and Roanie spot (a) steer and give chase; it lures them into a gulley and they are thrown by their horses. Forced to flee the steer, Roanie climbs a tree while Jake heads for a cave. Jake keeps popping out; there is a bear in the cave

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1930
KEYWORDS: cowboy horse animal humorous
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 46, "Jake and Roanie" (1 text, 1 tune)

Jal Along

DESCRIPTION: Travellers' cant. Singer tells her girl to walk along; they hope to find a good house to beg food or cash in exchange for matches. They've drunk up all their money in champagne

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 or 1966 (collected from Caroline Hughes)
KEYWORDS: poverty drink begging foreign language children Gypsy
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
MacColl/Seeger-TravellersSongsFromEnglandAndScotland 128, "Jal Along" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [40 words]: According to Caroline Hughes, in the old days Travellers would make matches, sell them, buy champagne and get drunk. After recovering, they'd have no money left for food. The song is macaronic, incorporating cant and English. "Jal" = walk. - PJS
File: McCST128

Jam on Gerry's Rock, The [Laws C1]

DESCRIPTION: Young Monroe and his crew do not wish to work on Sunday, but when a log jam forms, they turn out. The jam breaks and all are cast into the water, with foreman Monroe being drowned. In some accounts, his sweetheart dies for love and is buried with him

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1904
KEYWORDS: logger death drowning lumbering
FOUND IN: US(Ap, MA, MW, NE, NW, SE) Britain(Scotland) Canada(Mar, Newf, Ont, Que)
REFERENCES (57 citations):
Laws C1, "The Jam on Gerry's Rock"
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #132, pp. 1-2, "The Lumbering Boys" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan 230, "The Lumbering Boys" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 238-239, "The Jam on Gerry's Rock"; pp. 239-
240, "The Jam on Jerry's Rock" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Shay-AmericanSeaSongsAndChanteys, pp. 111-113, "Young Monroe at Gerry's Rock" (1 text, 1

Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 180-182, Young Monroe at Gerry's
Rock" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 213, "The Jam at Gerry's Rock" (3 texts)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #52, "The Jam on Gerry's Rocks" (1 text, 1 tune) Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 164, "The Jam at Gerry's Rock" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 267-268, "The Jam at Gerry's Rock" (1 text,
1 tune)
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 102, "The Jam at Gerry's Rocks" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 153, "The Jam on Gerry's Rocks" (2 texts)
Ives-DiveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 33-35,247, "The Jam on Gerry's Rock" (1 text,
1 tune)
Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick, pp. 26-29, "The Jam on Gerry's Rock" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiriamichi 23, "The Jam on Gerry's Rock" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks, pp. 409, "The Jam at Gerry's Rock" (2 texts)
Beck-FolkloreOfMaine, pp. 260-262, "The Jam on Gerry's Rock" (1 text)
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 259-260, "Garian's Rock" (1 text)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolksongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 16, "The Jam on Gerrion's
Rock" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 51, "The Jam on Gerry's Rocks" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, pp. 126-130, "The Jam on Gerry's Rocks" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [1065 words]: Although this is probably the best-known of all lumbering ballads, its origins have never been traced. Various sources have been claimed:
Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks, pp. xv-xvi, met a Mr. Reid who claimed his brother was part of the crew involved in the accident. Gerry's Rock was on the Penobscot River in Maine, just above Mawatum. Reportedly jams were common there until the rock was blown up. A Mr. Perkins corroborated aspects of this story. They claimed the song was composed communally. Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks does not give a date for his conversations, although both men apparently lived in the area of Orono, Maine.

The attribution to Maine is accepted by Gardner and Chickering; they do not report any Michigan tradition about the origin of the song. Cox also accepts this account, and has no local lore about its origin.

A problem with the Maine attributions is that both Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks texts mention Monroe's love coming from Saginaw town. Googling, I managed to find one reference to "Saginaw, Maine," but it is on no atlas or geographical dictionary. If there was such a place, it was no more than a flyspeck -- at most a village, never a town. Saginaw in Michigan is a town, a river, and a country.

* Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, p. 217, was told by Samuel Young of North Anson, Maine that Gerry's, or Gerrish, Rocks are on the Kennebec River above "The Forks." Linscott's text has "Sagmor Town," and suggests that the original may have been Saguenay, a river in Quebec. This is a reasonable conjecture but would be much better for evidence. We do find "Saguenay" in Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast -- but the Leach text is not particularly good (it is short, has several obvious errors, and converts the girl usually known as "Clara" to "Mary"). Nor does Leach have a local story of how the song came about.

* Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy says that all his informants assigned it to Canada or (more commonly) Michigan -- although the name "Saginaw" could have influenced this.

* Fowke-LumberingSongsFromTheNorthernWoods, while declaring it the best-known lumbering song in Ontario, has no local traditions about it.

Korson, Pennsylvania Songs and Legends, pp. 345-346, has a version in which the site is Hughey's Rock who came from "Young Woman's Town," but there is no indication of where these might be.

* Eckstorm, after extensive research, concluded that there was a Gerry's Rock on the East Branch of the Penobscot River but could not link the event to an actual event. Her research is on pp. 193-194 of Eckstorm/Smyth and is summarized by Laws on pp. 59-60 of Native American Balladry. Eckstorm also contended that the author was a Canadian. On the latter point, I think her evidence clearly inadequate, although Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman seems to have accepted it.

Eckstorm and Barry would later mention a location near Loganville on the St. John in Nova Scotia.

* Beck and Holbrook (cited by Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman and Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer) claim a Garry's Rock on the Tittabawasee River -- which just happens to be a tributary of Michigan's Saginaw River; the nearest town is Edensville. Holbrook also reported a Garion's Rock in Ontario.

There seems to be a general sense that the song comes from the 1860s. This does not preclude a setting near Saginaw, Michigan. According to Bruce Catton, Michigan: A History, Norton, 1976, 1984, Saginaw was a well-established town by then. There was a trading post there before 1819 (Catton, p. 69), and fort was built there in 1822 (Catton, p. 72), although quickly abandoned. By the 1830s Saginaw was established (Catton, p. 113) and becoming a "sawmill principality" (Catton, p. 103). Catton also makes the interesting note on p. 103 that so many Maine loggers came to the Michigan woods that they named a town "Bangor," after the Maine settlement of the same name.

With respect to this dating, I would note that the song is often sung to a tune related to "Peter Amberley" [Laws C27], which is based on an event reliably dates to the early 1880s. If you put a gun to my head and forced me to guess, the fact that the song is so common argues that it is early, and that argues for Maine or eastern Canada. This still leaves a problem with place names, though. The Penobscot and Kennebec both flow into the Atlantic. The Saguenay flows into the Saint Lawrence in Quebec, flowing almost due east from Lake Saint John to reach the larger river at Tadoussac. This is far to the north of the Maine rivers, on the wrong side of the Saint Lawrence, which at this point has entered its estuary and is over a dozen miles wide. A girl from the Saguenay is not at all likely to be alone on the Penobscot or the Kennebec. Thus it is impossible to make all the data fit a Maine setting.

It does seem possible that we might learn something from studying local variants. An obvious place to start is the name of the dead girl. Breaking this down by name and the state or province in which informants lived, I find the following (among others):

-- Clara Dennison: Dean-FlyingCloud (MN), Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin (WI), Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy A (MN)
--- Clara of Denville Town: Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors (MI?)
--- Clara Fenton: Fowke-LumberingSongsFromTheNorthernWoods B (Que)
--- Clara Vernon: Beck (ME?), Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks A (ME?), Cox (WV)
--- Clara Verner: Fowke-LumberingSongsFromTheNorthernWoods A (Ont)
--- Clara [no last name]: Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi (N.B.), Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan (MI), Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer B (NY)
--- Clary Benson: Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl (NY)
--- Clary Wells: Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer A (NY)
--- Mary [no last name]: Leach (Labr)
--- Miss [no first name] Clark: Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag (OR? from James Stevens), Gray-
SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks B (ME?), Linscott (ME), Rickaby-
BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy B (WI)

This is only a small sampling of versions, but there appears to be a "Clara Dennison" group from the Upper Midwest, and a "Clara Vernon" group from Maine. Further investigation, adding in perhaps the tune, and the name of the nearby town/river, might allow us to construct enough of a stemma to learn something. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0
File: LC01

Jamais de la Vie

DESCRIPTION: French, supposedly between a soldier trying to learn to swear in French and a French woman who speaks "clean" French: "Ou peut dire 'vache sepagnole?' Jamais de la vie [Not on their life]. On peut dire 'tu sal chemeu?' Jamais...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage dialog soldier
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 184-187, "Jamais de la Vie" (1 text, 1 tune)

James and A

DESCRIPTION: "James and A, it cannot be, Although you know so well," he cannot kiss her now;
Grandma says it's wrong. He should not be sad. They will be married soon, and he can kiss her then. Or perhaps he can kiss her now after all....

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: love courting humorous
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 60, "James and A" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #11326

James and Flora (Flora and Jim, The United Lovers)

DESCRIPTION: Flora asks James to leave sailing. He won't. She breaks a ring and gives half to him. She dresses as a sailor and follows him until he is discharged. She tells the captain the story.
The captain gives them gold to get married.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1863 (broadside, Bodleian Firth c.12(254))
KEYWORDS: courting marriage ring promise cross-dressing sea ship broken token lover sailor money reunion disguise
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Peacock, pp. 190-191, "Flora and Jim" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ashton-RealSailorSongs, p. 67, "James and Flora or The United Lovers" (1 text)
James Bird [Laws A5]

DESCRIPTION: James Bird leaves his family to join Perry's fleet on Lake Erie. In the battle, he fights valiantly, continuing to serve even after being wounded. Later, however, he tells his parents that he is to be executed for desertion.

AUTHOR: James Miner

EARLIEST DATE: 1814 (newspaper, "The Gleaner")

KEYWORDS: execution war battle

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

Sept 10, 1813 - Battle of Lake Erie. The Americans under Perry defeat the British.
Oct 1814 - Execution of James Bird for desertion while on guard duty

FOUND IN: US(All) Canada

REFERENCES (27 citations):

Laws A5, "James Bird"

Thompson-APIoneerSongster 52, "James Bird" (1 text)
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 345-347, "(James Bird)" (1 text)
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 104-107, "James Bird" (1 text, 1 tune)

Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 118, "James Bird" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 228-229, "James Bird" (1 text, 1 tune)

Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 296-297, "James Bird" (1 text)
Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland, pp. 18-21, "James Bird" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 9, "The Kingston Volunteers" (1 text, 1 tune, much more heavily "folk processed" than most other texts)

Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 17, "James Bird" (1 text, 1 tune)

McNeil-SouthernFolkBalladsVol1, pp. 38-41, "James Bird" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 41, pp. 93-97, "James Bird" (1 text)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 62, "James Bird" (1 text)

Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 221, "James Bird" (1 text)
Brown/Schinh-Diary-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 273, "James Bird" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 130, "James Bird" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #153, "James Bird" (1 text, 1 tune)
RICKABY-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy 38, "James Bird" (1 text, partial text)
RICKABY/Dykstra/Leary-PineryBoys-SongsSongcatchingInLumberjackEra 38, "James Bird" (1 text, partial text)

Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 183-184, "(James Bird)" (1 excerpted text, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, p. 140, "James Bird" (1 text)
Forget-Me-Not-Songster, pp. 97-99, "James Bird" (1 text, with the tune listed as "The Tempest")
Leach-HeritageBookOfBallads, pp. 140-142, "James Bird" (1 text, 1 tune on p. 201)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 158-159, "James Bird" (1 text)
cf. Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, p. 479, "James Bird" (source notes only)

DT 361, JAMEBIRD*

Roud #2204

RECORDINGS:
O. J. Abbott, "James Bird" (on GreatLakes1)
John W. Green, "James Bird" (1938; on WaltonSailors; the text printed in Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors does not list an informant, but is similar to Green's version, except that it is fuller; the tunes are not entirely the same)
Warde Ford, "James Bird" [fragment] (AFS 4202 A1, 4202 A2, 1938; in AMMEM/Cowell)
Mike Roark, "Lake Erie" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

BROADSIDES:
LOC Singing, as100590, "Mournful Tragedy of James Bird" ("Sons of freedom, listen to me, and ye daughters too, give ear"), L. Deming (Boston), no date
VonWalthour, CDDrive>b>b(5), "Mournful Tragedy of James Bird" ("Sons of freedom, listen to me, and ye daughters too, give ear"), L. Deming (Boston), no date

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Dying Fifer" (tune)
cf. "The Battle of Lake Erie" (subject: The Battle of Lake Erie)
cf. "The Battle of Lake Erie -- 1813" (subject: The Battle of Lake Erie)

SAME TUNE:
The Dying Fifer (File: BrII227)

NOTES [2044 words]: The American victory on Lake Erie was something of a surprise due to the inexperience of the U.S. forces. To that point, the Americans had done very badly on the Canadian frontier (see the notes to "Brave General Brock [Laws A22]" and "The Battle of Queenston Heights"). If the Americans were to have any hope of reversing things, command of the waters of Lakes Erie and Ontario seemed crucial.

To make matters worse, both sides were concentrating most of their forces on Lake Ontario, which was downstream, easier to reach, and and has more people in the area. The naval force the British sent to Lake Erie, for instance, consisted of only about two dozen men headed by a 27-year-old Lieutenant named Robert Heriot Barclay (Borneman, p. 121) -- who was, however, a veteran of Trafalgar, and who had lost an arm in later fighting. If nothing else, he was aggressive.

The commander of the American fleet was a 27-year-old Master Commandant (a rank later retitled "Commander") named Oliver Hazard Perry, who had accepted the Lakes command (considered a step down from the blue-water navy) in order to at least see some action (Mahon, p. 166). He was a friend of the James Lawrence who had recently died on the U.S.S. Chesapeake (see the notes to "The Chesapeake and the Shannon (I)" [Laws J20]). Perry would try to emulate Lawrence's spirit; fortunately he did not emulate Lawrence's inept tactics.

Perry initially suffered one major disadvantage: His base was in Presque Isle Bay, by what is now Erie, Pennsylvania -- a good place to build a ship, but there was a bar in the harbor mouth which was too shallow to get his biggest ships out. Barclay blockaded the harbor entrance; had Perry tried to take his big ships out in those circumstances, they would surely have been destroyed and would have blocked the passage as well. But Barclay at the end of July 1813 briefly sailed away, and the Americans managed to get their ships out (Borneman, pp. 123-125; Hickey, p. 131; Mahon, p. 170; Pratt, p. 86, opines that the British, who had not yet completed their flagship Detroit, thought the American fleet too large to fight, but most others think it was a supply problem or the like. Mahon mentions a folktale that Barclay went to a dinner in Dover). The Americans would settle at Put-In Bay, near the western end of Lake Erie, not far from the British base at Amherstberg (Mahon, p. 170).

That may have been the decisive move of the campaign. Rather than the blockader, Barclay was now the blockaded. He had the single biggest ship on the lake, the Detroit, but it was not finished until mid-August, by which time the American blockade had made it impossible for the British to bring in big guns. The Detroit ended up armed rather haphazardly, using the few guns at hand (taken from a land fort; Mahon, p. 171); according to Hickey, p. 132, most of them had to be fired by shooting a pistol over the fire-hole (Mahon, p. 176, blames this on bad matches, but the result is the same). The next-best British ship, the Queen Charlotte, had almost no long guns -- that is, it was hard for her to hurt enemy ships at a distance. To add to Barclay's problems, he had to supply not only his own ships but the sundry army troops and Indians in the vicinity (Hickey, p. 132).

The Americans had their own problems. The main force of their fleet consisted of the two brand-new brigs (these were the two ships that had been so hard to get out of Presque Isle Bay), the Lawrence (named for James Lawrence) and the Niagara, both armed mostly with short-range carronades. He also had a medium-sized vessel, the Caledonia; the rest of his fleet was small schooners with only a few guns.

The fleets that fought at Lake Erie were probably about equal in practical strength. The American fleets had ten ships to six for the British (so most sources; Mahon, p. 169, credits the Americans with only nine and gives numbers of guns I haven't seen elsewhere), but in ships larger than gunboats, the British had four and the Americans three. Worse, none of the Americans vessels had ever served as warships before, nor even had much of the way of a shakedown (all the British ships, except the Detroit, had at least spend time maneuvering on Lake Erie), and the crews were inexperienced. And the American vessels were badly undermanned; it had initially been thought Perry would need about 740 crewmen, but apparently he decided to sail with only about 500 (Borneman, pp. 123, 125; Mahon, p. 169, says he had 490) -- and many of these were landsmen from General Harrison's army (Hickey, p. 132).

Barclay too had to put soldiers on his ships (Mahon, p. 169; p. 176 cites a British enquiry which claims there were no more than ten experienced seamen on each ship), but only Mahon seems to think this seriously handicapped him. According to Mahon, the American vessels had a combined broadside of 896 pounds, the British 459 -- though Mahon has a tendency to magnify American competence, and no other source mentions quite such a discrepancy.

The battle was a rather disorderly affair. Perry had the advantage of the wind gauge, letting him choose the time and distance of the fight (Hickey, p. 132); but Perry used that to change his fleet arrangements once he saw Barclay's fleet. In the confusion that followed, the two biggest British ships, the Detroit and the Queen Charlotte, both turned on American flagship Lawrence, while the Niagara (commanded by Jesse Duncan Elliot, formerly Perry's superior; Borneman, p. 125) stayed in its place far back in the line rather than doing something about Queen Charlotte. As a result, the Lawrence would be crippled and out of the fight (Borneman, p. 128; Hickey, p. 133, reports that her crew suffered 80% casualties).

Perry eventually decided to leave the Lawrence (which would suffer about two-thirds of the American casualties in the battle; Borneman, p. 132) and head for the Niagara. Even though his ship was being destroyed (she was still floating, but dismasted and unmaneuverable and incapable of firing a proper broadside) and his crew slaughtered, he forbid his former flagship to surrender (Ratigan, p. 172). Sure, he might cause many more men to die -- but what was that compared with his reputation?

Barclay, meanwhile, had been wounded; he ordered his men to try to sink the boat in which Perry was fleeing, but then had to be taken below. And Perry got lucky. Queen Charlotte had lost her captain and the next two officers in command (Mahon, pp. 175-176), and Barclay was disabled on the Detroit (which had itself suffered badly at the hands of Lawrence), and the two mis-handled British ships ran afloat of each other. Niagara was able to cross the T of the other two ships, and Elliot (who had left the Niagara when Perry came aboard) brought up several smaller American ships to attack the other side, and the four smaller British ships were unable to stop him. Queen Charlotte struck her colors, then Detroit (Borneman, p. 132), and the other four British ships apparently preferred to give in rather than fight or flee (to be sure, Niagara, a square-rigged ship, should have been faster than the schooners and could probably have sunk most of them).

The fate of the British ships varied; that of the Detroit was particularly absurd. There was apparently in this period a habit of loading a boat with innocent animals and sending it over Niagara Falls (Ratigan, p. 179). The Detroit was one ship so used; Ratigan, p. 181 reports that her sacrifice ended the appalling practice; "that is the last record of such a fresh-water Roman holiday."

Perry's announcement of the battle result is famous; he reported to General William Henry Harrison, "We have met the enemy and they are ours."

This was fortunate for Harrison (one of many lousy American generals of 1812; with the military academy still new, most of the generals were political picks -- see Mahon, p. 103, which lists the four Major Generals, including Harrison, appointed in early 1813; all were old and well-connected. It says something that, relative to his peers, Harrison was a good general; the others were basically disasters). Perry's win would profoundly help Harrison's career.

Harrison had already suffered badly at the hands of British commander Henry Proctor, who defeated pieces of Harrison's army in detail. After Lake Erie, with his supply lines in danger, Proctor should have fallen back, but waited too long, then let his Indian allies talk him into battle at Moravian Town on the Thames River (about half way between modern Windsor and London, Ontario). And his forces were not very strong -- perhaps 800 regulars and 500 Indians, most of whom had been on short rations (Hickey, p. 137; Mahon, pp. 182-183). The Americans charged, and Proctor's thin line was broken; his surviving European troops were sent reeling back, and many of the Indians, including the brilliant Tecumseh, were killed (Borneman, pp. 158-161). Harrison, though he couldn't advance much farther, had secured Detroit, and that, combined with his treacherous slaughter at Tippecanoe, would later make him President.

Richard Mentor Johnson, who had trained up an elite cavalry unit (nearly every Kentucky regiment was mounted, but only Johnson's were allowed to take their horses into Canada; Mahon, pp. 181-182) and led the charge that won the battle and took part in the slaughter of the Indians, would eventually end up in a presidential race against Harrison in 1836; he was Martin Van Buren's vice presidential candidate, with the absurd campaign slogan "Rumpsey dumpsey, Rumpsey dumpsey, Colonel Johnson killed Tecumseh" (Morison, p. 454. Johnson almost certainly did not personally kill Tecumseh, but no one knew who had -- his body was reportedly never found, though Hickey, p. 139, talks of soldiers bringing home Tecumseh relics). As a result, Johnson was able to make at least an informal claim to have killed the Indian leader.

So strange was the 1836 election -- which featured three Whig candidates plus Democrat Martin Van Buren -- that, though Van Buren was elected directly by the electoral college, the college did not settle on a Vice President and the matter was settled in the Senate, where the Democratic majority naturally picked Johnson over the leading Whig candidate. I can't help but wonder if -- no matter what people said -- Johnson's non-election was because of his opinions on race. His first wife was said to have been half-black, and the woman who may have been his third was actually one of his own slaves; Widmer, pp. 119-120).

There is a broadside ballad about the Battle of Lake Erie, called "Perry's Victory" or something similar. Ratigan, p. 175, reports, "Considering the ratio of population, the ballad of Perry's victory outsold any popular recording of today. It was still a prime favorite at county fairs and other festivals half a century later." But it seems to have left no hold on tradition. There are few other monuments to the campaign, either. Lake Erie was the first and only true naval battle of the War of 1812 (as opposed to single-ship combats or the combined arms battle of Plattsburg), and because it was a complete victory, there was no real need for further fighting. And, because a ship on the Upper Lakes could not be sent over Niagara Falls or otherwise reach the lower lakes, there was no other practical use for the ships, Lawrence, badly battered, was not preserved; Niagara, after Americans and British reached an agreement to disarm the lakes, was scuttled in Misery Bay (Varhola, p. 44). The cold fresh water preserved her, and she was eventually raised -- but the Niagara sailing now is a replica reassembled based on the raised ship (Varhola, pp. 45-46).

James Bird seems to have been a fairly typical American soldier of the period: Brave, but completely impervious to discipline. After joining the army, he transferred to the marines to escape the regimentation of army life. He showed great courage at the Battle of Lake Erie, but hated the tedium of garrison work, neglected his duties, and was court-martialed and executed at Erie, Pennsylvania. - RBW

Broadside LOCSinging as100590 and VonWalthour CDDLive>b>b(5) appear to be the same edition. - BS

Bibliography

- Mahon: John K. Mahon,The War of 1812, 1972 (I used the undated Da Capo paperback edition)

Last updated in version 6.0
File: LA05

James Connolly

DESCRIPTION: "Where O where is our James Connolly? Where O where is that galland man? He's gone to organize the Union." Connolly's Union and a citizen army fight for freedom, but he is wounded, imprisoned, and killed; Ireland buries and mourns him
James Connolly (1868-1916) was one of the first labor organizers in Ireland as well as one of the leaders of the 1916 Easter Rising. As such, he has had many biographers. The newest work, as of this writing, is Ruth Dudley Edwards, The Seven: The Lives and Legacies of the Founding Fathers of the Irish Republic, Oneworld Books, 2016; it covers all seven of the leaders (Thomas J. Clarke, Sean MacDiarmada, Eamonn Ceannt, Patrick Pearse, Thomas MacDonagh, Joseph Plunkett, and Connolly), but at 370 pages, it has substantial information on all of them.

Connolly was not, properly speaking, Irish; he was born in Scotland and raised in a poor Edinburgh slum (Edwards, p. 207). By the age of twelve, he was working; at fourteen, he lied about his age and joined the British army (Edwards, p. 208). He spent the years from 1882 to 1889 serving in Ireland, and it seems to have captured him -- even though he spent very little time learning to understand the Irish.

Certainly it didn't instill any loyalty in him; he deserted in 1899 (Edwards, p. 209); this may have been due to love, disloyalty, or the fact that his regiment was due to be sent to India.

Not surprisingly for someone of his background, he was interested in Marxism and believed that Ireland's political freedom was linked to the strength of her labor movement. He picked up many of his ideas from John Leslie, who was secretary of the Scottish Socialist Federation (Edwards, p. 212). He remained a very poor man, working to collect refuse in Glasgow -- and lost even that job in the winter of 1894-1895 (Edwards, p. 216). In 1896, his friends raised the money to let him move to Dublin -- where he ended up in an even poorer slum than in Scotland, and where he didn't even fit in with Irish culture (Edwards, p. 217). He was so poor that, by the time he was 28, he had suffered so badly from starvation that he could no longer work as a day laborer (Edwards, p. 220). Strident and opinionated, and outspoken in his support for the Boers against Britain, he did much to make himself unemployable in any non-manual occupation (Edwards, p. 223). In 1893, having spent seven years in Dublin, he gave up and went to the United States (Edwards, pp. 220-221). He didn't have much better luck in America; he still couldn't keep a job, and his oldest daughter died of burns (Edwards, p. 227).

In 1913, Connolly and James Larkin (1876-1947, for whom see "Jim Larkin, R.I.P.") organized a great strike against the United Tramway Company. It eventually spread to most of Ireland, but some political blundering cost them support in Britain, and the strike fizzled in 1914. Larkin fled to America, not to return until 1923, leaving Connolly as Ireland's leading labor figure.

Incidentally, the reference to a "citizen army" is probably not a reference to the 1916 rebels. According to Robert Kee, The Bold Fenian Men, being Volume II of The Green Flag, p. 199, "A so-called 'Irish Citizen Army' was officially formed on 23 November 1913 (in reaction to an army crackdown on August 21). By 1916, Connolly was leading rebels in Dublin; he commanded the assault on that city's GPO which ended with Padraic Pearse proclaiming the Irish Republic. Connolly was one of the signers of the proclamation. But less than a week later (April 29), Connolly was directing his forces to surrender to the overwhelming British forces.

(Perhaps it should be noted that the failure of the rebellion was expected, at least by Pearse and some of his associates. In a way, they didn't even want to succeed. They thought Irish independence could only be achieved by a sort of mystic sacrifice -- and set out to make it. Their timing was bad, as well; with millions of British troops fighting in France, Britain had to end the rebellion with all possible speed -- i.e. with great brutality.)

In the process of the fighting, Connolly received an ankle wound which turned gangrenous. He was executed on May 12, 1916, already so ill that he had to be strapped into a chair to be shot. He had had to be taken to the site of the execution in an ambulance (see Robert Kee, Ourselves Alone, being volume III of The Green Flag, p. 6).

Kee also notes (p. 57) that Connolly's influence lasted after his death. The Dail -- the Sinn Fein congress elected in 1918 had as one of its early acts "the unanimous adoption of a so-called Democratic Programme containing vague socialistic phrases which claimed to emanate from 'our first President, Padraic Pearse,' but were more truly an acknowledgment to the memory of Connolly." - RBW

James Ervin [Laws J15]

DESCRIPTION: The singer enlists in the British Army, but deserts because he is worked too hard. Helped by his sweetheart, he escapes, fights off his pursuers, and takes up shoemaking. Discovered and taken, he again escapes, proud of his ability to outfight the English

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1841 (broadside, Bodleian 2806 c.18(24))

KEYWORDS: soldier desertion prison escape

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

May 26, 1798 - Beginning of the Wexford rebellion
May 27, 1798 - The Wexford rebels under Father John Murphy defeat the North Cork militia
June 5, 1798 - The Wexford rebels attack the small garrison (about 1400 men, many militia) at New Ross, but are repelled
June 21, 1798 - The rebel stronghold a Vinegar Hill is taken, and the Wexford rebellion effectively ended

FOUND IN: US(MW) Canada(Mar) Ireland Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (11 citations):
Laws J15, "James Ervin"
Greig/Duncan1 82, "The Belfast Shoemaker" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 25, "The Bold Belfast Shoemaker" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 79, "The Bold Belfast Shoemaker" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 92, "James Ervin" (1 text)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 116, "On the Eighth Day of November' (1 text, 1 tune) (The first stanza of this version goes with "Saint Clair's Defeat," but the last two verses come from "James Ervin")
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 83, "Rambling Shoemaker" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 93, "Bold Irvine" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 246-247, "The Rambling Royal" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #173, p. 13, "The Bold Shoemaker" (1 reference)
DT 766, BLFSTSHO* JAMERVIN

Roud #982

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.18(24), "Belfast Shoe-maker," J. Jennings (London), 1790-1840; also 2806 c.15(252), "The Belfast Shoe-maker!"; Harding B 25(167), "Belfast Shoemaker!"; Firth c.14(130), "Bold James Irvine"

LOC Singing, sb10038a, "The Bold Shoemaker," H. De Marsan (New York), 1859-1860; also as101350, "The Bold Shoemaker"

SAME TUNE:
What You Will (per broadside Bodleian Firth c.14(130))

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Deserter

NOTES [465 words]: Daithi Sproule has a version of this ballad in which James Erwin is one of Father Murphy's Irish rebels; so also the Digital Tradition text BLFSTSHO. The latter is said to be the OLochlainn version; it's similar but not identical to Sproule's. For information about this phase of Irish history, see the notes to "Boulavogie," "Father Murphy (I)," and the references cited there. - RBW

Re the Father Murphy connection: the following is from OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 25/Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 79. O Lochlainn has it from a broadside.

I next joined Father Murphy as you will quickly hear
And many a battle did I fight with his brave Shelmaliers.
The ballad is recorded on one of the CD's issued around the time of the bicentennial of the 1798 Irish Rebellion. See:
Franke Harte and Donal Lunny, "Bold Belfast Shoemaker" (on Franke Harte and Donal Lunny,
"1798 the First Year of Liberty," Hummingbird Records HBCD0014 (1998)) - BS
The whole piece is rather peculiar in its incompleteness; one can understand an Irishman boasting of some of it, but how could someone at New Ross not admit it was a defeat, and how did the singer escape from Vinegar Hill?

Some parts make sense: There were, for instance, many Irish youths serving in the British army in 1798; with land scarce, it was hard for them to make a living otherwise. And quite a few deserted in 1798, and some did indeed serve with Father Murphy.

Lord Mountjoy was a British militia commander who had actually been popular with his Irish soldiers. But he was killed at New Ross, perhaps while trying to reason with the Irish.

New Ross itself was not a victory for the Irish, though it should have been. The rebels fought their way into town, and seemed to have the militia defeated -- but, having fought like regular soldiers to that point, their command arrangements broke down and they ended up fleeing the town. From that point, the tide of the Wexford rebellion began to ebb.

There is also the interesting problem of what "Orangemen" were doing in Wexford. The Orangemen were a well-known Belfast group who fought against the Catholic defenders, so a man from Belfast would doubtless know them -- but there were no Orangemen in the south; the handful of Protestants were Anglican landowners.

Chapelizod was the site where the English forces in Dublin kept their artillery. There were, naturally, soldiers there, many of them Irish. The United Irishmen, after their leadership was captured, hoped to grab it. The mention of the site may be a confused recollection of this -- but it definitely seems confused.

- RBW

Broadside LOCsinging sb10038a: H. De Marsan dating per Studying Nineteenth-Century Popular Song by Paul Charosh in American Music, Winter 1997, Vol 15.4, Table 1, available at FindArticles site. - BS

Last updated in version 4.2

File: LJ15

James Grant [Child 197]
DESCRIPTION: James Grant is besieged; he tells his attackers, the folk of Ballindalloch, that he has no quarrel with them. Despite this, he is forced to the hills
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1878
KEYWORDS: feud fight escape
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1628 - John Grant of Carron killed by John Grant of Ballindalloch
1630 - James Grant of Carron, the uncle of John Grant, takes revenge on Ballindalloch and turns outlaw. The authorities authorize Clan Chattan to bring him to justice, and later others, but none could catch him. In 1639 Grant made peace with the king
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Child 197, "James Grant" (1 text)
Roud #3918
NOTES [40 words]: This ballad exists only in a fragment -- so brief that it is hard to be certain that it pertains to the events described, let alone which phase of the chase is mentioned. Child’s notes say just about all there is to say about the piece. - RBW

File: C197

James Hatley [Child 244]
DESCRIPTION: (Hatley) is accused of stealing the king’s jewels, though (Fenwick) is in fact the thief. One of the king’s children convinces the king to let Hatley fight for his honor; (Hatley/the prince) kills Fenwick. Hatley is made a high official
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1859 (Chambers)
KEYWORDS: nobility royalty thief lie fight accusation help
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Child 244, "James Hatley" (3 texts)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 606-608, "James Hatley" (1 text)
James Kennedy

DESCRIPTION: James Kennedy goes to visit his sweetheart; he comes to the Moyola and, unable to swim, is swept away. None is brave enough to rescue him. His parents wonder why he was visiting Moyola on the Sabbath. His fiancee is told they will meet at his grave

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: love river drowning death

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H633, p. 147, "James Kennedy" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #189

NOTES [29 words]: Roud treats this as a variant of Laws Q33, "The Lake of Cool Finn (Willie Leonard)." But this song is explicit: Kennedy could not swim. "Cool Finn" lacks any such theme. - RBW

File: H633

James MacDonald [Laws P38]

DESCRIPTION: James promises his pregnant sweetheart Annie that he will marry her, and bids her meet him secretly. When he has her alone he attacks her and flees. She is found the next day and lives just long enough to tell what happened. James is sentenced to death

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan2); c.1867 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 19(109))

KEYWORDS: homicide execution pregnancy betrayal

FOUND IN: US(MA,NE) Canada(Mar,Newf) Ireland Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (11 citations):
Laws P38, "James MacDonald"
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #137, p. 2, "The Longford Murderer" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan2 204, "The Longford Murderer" (4 texts, 2 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 477-479, "The Longford Murder" (1 text)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H37, pp. 485-486, "[Pat O'Brien]" (1 fragment in the notes, tune referenced)
Peacock, pp. 622-623, "The Murder of Ann O'Brien" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 21, "James McDonald" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 6, "The St. Albans Murder" (1 text, 1 tune)
Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster, pp. 71-73, "James MacDonald" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-FolksongsFromMaine 15, "James MacDonald" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT 515, JIMMACD*

Roud #1412

RECORDINGS:
George Carew, "Mary Brien" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Theresa White, "The Murder of Ann O'Brien" (on NFMLeach); "Ann O'Brien" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 19(109), "James M'Donald, Who Was Executed in Longford for the Murder of Anne O'Brien," W. Birmingham (Dublin), c.1867; also 2806 c.15(230), "James M'Donald, Who Was Executed in Longford for the Murder of Anne O'Brien"; 2806 c.15(309)[some lines illegible], "James M'Donnell"

Murray, Mu23-y1:079 "James M'Donnell," James Lindsay (Glasgow), 19C
James Magee (McKee)

DESCRIPTION: The singer, sentenced to New South Wales, gives his name as James Magee. An orphan brought up by his grandmother, his aunt brings charges against him to gain his inheritance. He laments for his wife and children, and curses the aunt

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: crime accusation trial punishment transportation separation family

FOUND IN: Ireland Canada(Mar,Newf)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H136, p. 125, "James Magee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster 40, "James Magee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Morton/Maguire-ComeDayGoDayGodSendSunday 51, pp. 146-147,175, "James Magee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 212-213, "James McGee (James MaGee)" (2 texts, 1 tune)

Roud #2492

NOTES [239 words]: [The] Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster text makes this a religious conflict. The aunt "married an Orangeman"; the last verse is

Once I had a well furnished house no room could it afford,
To enter in an Orangeman, when he'd be on record,
But if a Ribbonman would call that way, well treated he would be, Ah but now there does not dwell a man where dwelt young James Magee.

Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster: "No doubt, especially since the famine, land and the possession of it has been to the Irish what cocaine must be to the drug-addict. The more he got the more he wanted. No doubt avarice got the better of many and they used the politico-religious situation for their own gain."
Zimmermann p. 19: "In some parts of Ulster, Protestant and Catholic tenants were mingled and contended for the land; the peasantry was thus divided into two camps, each having its oath-bound association. This led to a sort of religious war. At the end of the eighteenth century the Catholic "Defenders" were opposed to the Protestant "Peep o' Day Boys" or "Orangemen." The "Defenders" were succeede by the "Ribbonmen," (song [Zimmermann] 39).

One of Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports's texts is a couple of verses from a Nova Scotia version collected by Grover. - BS

Sean O’Boyle lists this as the same tune as "Henry Joy (McCracken)." The two are indeed nearly identical in meter, but I would not call them the same, though they are close. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2

File: HHH136
James Munks's Confession

DESCRIPTION: Munks tells the story of how he turned from his parents' good ways. He killed Reuben Guile, took his horse and money, hid his body, and fled. Captured and taken, he has been sentenced to die. He now reveals details of the murder.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio)
KEYWORDS: homicide execution robbery
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 113, "James Munks's Confession" (1 text)
ST E113 (Full)
Roud #4100
NOTES [8 words]: This song is item eE40 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW
File: E113

James Stephens, the Gallant Fenian Boy

DESCRIPTION: James Stephens is born in Marble City, wounded at 16 fighting in Killenaule, wounded at Ballingarry, subject of a mock funeral as he sails, in disguise, to Paris, imprisoned on testimony of "Nagle the informer," escapes and is not caught again, and dies.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)
KEYWORDS: battle rebellion betrayal prison escape disguise trick death France Ireland memorial patriotic
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
April 2, 1901 - James Stephens (1825-1901) dies in Dublin
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 3, "James Stephens, the Gallant Fenian Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Escape of James Stephens" (subject)
NOTES [795 words]: The Fenians were an organization devoted to freeing Ireland. The organization was founded in 1858 by James Stephens, who in that year began to coordinate with O'Donovan Rossa's Phoenix Society (for whom and for which see "Rossa's Farewell to Erin"). Stephens himself was quite the character: He was involved in the attempted revolution of 1848 (OxfordCompanion, p. 525), which of course was a complete fiasco. He was reported dead at the time (Golway, p. 122), and he did leave the country, but finally -- like many other Irishmen -- deciding that he couldn't stay away, returning to Ireland in 1856 (Kee, p. 7).
He seems to have been quite moody, and his return home depressed him; there seemed little hope of reviving Irish nationalism (Golway, p. 125). He set out on a walking tour to verify this for himself, and estimated that he walked three thousand miles in 1856 (Kee, p. 8).
Based on his accounts of the trip, one suspects that the real reason for his change of heart was simply the improved attitude that comes with exercise; he found little encouragement (Golway, p. 126). Despite the seemingly-poor prospects, he decided to found an independence organization. One of the groups he founded would become the Irish Republican Brotherhood (Golway, p. 128), of which much would be heard in the next half century.
Technically, the term "Fenian" should refer to the American society founded by Stephens. Stephens went to the United States in late 1858 on a fundraising tour, returning in 1859 with very little money -- but having set up an organization led by John O'Mahoney and known as the Fenians (a name given by O'Mahoney, who was more attracted to Gaelic than Stephens). Although it's O'Mahoney's term for O'Mahoney's organization, it came to be used of both the American and Irish societies (Golway, p. 129).
The Fenian Society quickly spread; and by 1865 was getting close to the point of rebellion. Unfortunately, it suffered the usual batch of informers. The British government felt the need to suppress the Irish version in 1865. Their newspaper The Irish People closed down, and many leaders arrested. Stephens managed to remain free for two months, but he too was taken eventually (OxfordCompanion, p. 526).
What followed was arguably the high point of the Fenian movement: Stephens was rescued from prison. Kee, p. 26, observes that "[s]ometimes it seems that all the bungling during these years was on the Fenian side. But the escape was a masterly achievement."
Indeed, it upset the British, who went after the leaders of the rescue with vigor. Their capture of Captain Thomas Kelly, a leader of the rescuers and later declared shadow head of the Irish Republic, led to the affair of the Manchester Martyrs, for which see "The Smashing of the Van (I)." Unfortunately, his time in prison had changed Stephens; he no longer had the nerve to take aggressive action. Plus the American version of the movement, which provided much of its money and energy had split into two halves, led by John O'Mahony and Thomas Sweeney. Stephens had closer ties to O'Mahony (they had lived together in poverty in Paris while studying politics; Golway, p. 124), but both groups disagreed with him on methods (Kee, pp. 26-28), and both would be involved in madcap invasions of Canada (see "A Fenian Song(I)"). The group had promised to rebel by the end of 1865, but Stephens managed to postpone that. In response, he was forced out of the leadership (Kee, p. 31).

His followers carried on, but that pretty well killed the group as an active set of rebels; their attempt at an Irish rebellion failed in 1867. They spent many more years trying various stunts in America; some were very showy, and others somewhat deadly; none helped the cause of Irish independence.

Stephens himself spent more than twenty years in exile before returning to Dublin in 1891, where he spent the last decade of his life generally ignoring politics (OxfordCompanion, p. 526). Kee says of Stephens (pp. 8-9) that "he lacked almost all the qualities of a great revolutionary leader, being jealous and boastful, capable of small-mindedness and untruthful at least to the point of self-deception," but credits him with "an extraordinary capacity for organization and work." (Among his organizational methods was a cell system in which hardly anyone knew anyone else, so that informers couldn't betray much; Golway, p. 129. He also avoided recruiting the upper classes, meaning he had fewer members capable of detailed planning but also fewer capable of being paralyzed by doubts.) It is probably his strength at an organizer that allowed the Fenians to survive a series of failures that would have caused any normal organization to curl up and die of embarrassment at its utter ineptitude. - RBW

Bibliography

- Golway: Terry Golway, For the Cause of Liberty, Simon & Schuster, 2000
- Kee: Robert Kee, The Bold Fenian Men, being volume II of The Green Flag (covering the period from around 1848 to the Easter Rising), Penguin, 1972

Last updated in version 2.5
File: OLCM003

James Whalen [Laws C7]

DESCRIPTION: Jim Whalen is told by his foreman to help clear a logjam. When the jam breaks, he is thrown into the rapids and drowned.

AUTHOR: John Smith (?)
EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy)
KEYWORDS: logger death drowning lumbering
FOUND IN: US(MW,NE) Canada(Mar,Ont)
REFERENCES (16 citations):
Laws C7, "James Whalen"
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 243-244, "Whalen's Fate (George Whalen)"
Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy 3, "Jim Whalen" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Rickaby/Dykstra/Leary-PineryBoys-SongsSongcatchingInLumberjackEra 3, "Jim Whalen" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 110, "James Wayland" (1 text)
Fowke/Johnston-FolkSongsOfCanada, pp. 82-83, "Jim Whalen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke-LumberingSongsFromTheNorthernWoods #31, "Jimmy Whelan" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke/MacMillan-PenguinBookOfCanadianFolkSongs 25, "Jimmy Whelan" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick, pp. 39-41, "James Whalen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario 49, "Jimmy Whelan" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 389, "James Whaland" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 53, "James Whalen" (1 text)
Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, pp. 138-139, "Jimmie Whalen" (1 text)
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 78, "Jimmie Whalen" (1 text)
DT 601, JMMYWHEL*
ADDITIONAL: Walter Havinghurst, _Upper Mississippi: A Wilderness Saga_, Farrar & Rinehart, 1937, 1944, p. 228, "(Swan Swanson)" (1 fragment, clearly this, with the source unidentified but with a character name seemingly not found elsewhere)
Roud #638
RECORDINGS:
Emerson Woodcock, "Jimmie Whelan" (on Lumber01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Lost Jimmie Whalen" [Laws C8] (subject)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
James Phalen
NOTES [186 words]: Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy reports this to be based on an actual incident, in which James Phalen (so spelled; pronounced Whalen) died at "King's Chute" on the Mississippi River. (That's the Canadian Mississippi, a tributary of the Ottawa). Rickaby's informant, Cristopher Forbes, is the source of the claim that John Smith of Lanark wrote the song. The date of the event is uncertain; Rickaby states it was in 1878, but Fowke quotes Phalen's grand-niece to the effect that the date was 1876. One of Beck's informants agreed that it was on the Matawaski (the Canadian Mississippi), but thought the date was around 1882. There is one other sidelight to this, the significance of which I do not know. The song "Mickey Free," about logging in northwestern Wisconsin, claims that the singer "held me own with Whalen." This song is believed to have been written 1878. Is it the same Whalen? There were, of course, loggers from Canada in the Wisconsin woods in that period, and "James Whalen" eventually was known in the area, but would they have been treating such a recent event as legendary? I don't know. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: LC07

Jamestown Homeward Bound, The

DESCRIPTION: Forecastle song. Verses describe voyages to the Mediterranean and wishes for home. Chorus ends "So fill out sails with the favoring gales and with shipmates all around. We'll give three cheers for our Starry flag and the Jamestown homeward bound."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen)

KEYWORDS: foc'sle sailor home travel

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, pp. 133-134, "The Jamestown Homeward Bound" (1 text, 1 tune)
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 47-48, "The Nassau Homeward Bound" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, JAMETOWN*

Roud #4700

NOTES [210 words]: [According to Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, the] vessel referred to here is "not" the Confederate gunboat Jamestown, but a sloop of war built in 1844. She was lent by the US government to a relief organization and sailed from Boston to Cork in March, 1847 loaded with food and supplies to help the victims of the famine in Ireland. - SL

That voyage to Ireland, which Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen claims is the ship's only claim to fame, is not mentioned in her version. I must admit that I am not convinced that the song is about the Jamestown; it could merely be about a ship with its homeport there. The above was written before Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang was published. The Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang version is clearly the same song (same first line, and it uses Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen's chorus as its last verse), but it never mentions Jamestown in any way; it's based in Nassau (or, perhaps, names the ship the Nassau; that seems to be Huntington's opinion). So I think we must file it as a generic song which was once particularized to Jamestown and once to Nassau. Huntington notes that a ship Nassau was destroyed by a Confederate vessel in 1865, but there is no proof that it's the same ship. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
Jamie and Jeanie

DESCRIPTION: Jeanie asks why Jamie looks so sad. He replies that she danced with three other men at the ball. She asserts it means nothing; when he remains doubtful, she gives back his ring. He offers it again, and they reconcile

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: love courting rejection dancing ring
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast "Folk-Song in Buchan," pp. 39-40, "Jeannie and Jamie"; #50, p. 2, "Jeannie and Jamie" (2 texts)
Greig/Duncan4 848, "Jeannie and Jamie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 108-109, "Jamie and Jeanie -- A Duet" (1 text)
Roud #3952

NOTES [35 words]: This has all the hallmarks of a composed piece: Ornateness, stupidity, and non-folk idiom. But Ord and Grieg both collected it, so here it is.

Last updated in version 2.6

File: Colc133

Jamie and Nancy

DESCRIPTION: Jamie and Nancy meet; she reports that her parents "had proved severe." He tells her that she is always welcome to him. She dreams Jamie is slain, and sets out to find him. When she does, they agree to marry

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: love father mother separation dream reunion
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H738, p. 478, "Jamie and Nancy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9056

NOTES [29 words]: I have to think there is something missing in this song -- presumably something which parts the two lovers. But until another version turns up, we can hardly reconstruct it. - RBW

File: HHH738

Jamie Broon

DESCRIPTION: Jeems Broon goes to the hiring fair at Turra Toon to work at the Hilton farm. Six were hired but "five o' them did leave Jeems Broon"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: farming work
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 390, "Jamie Broon" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #5923

NOTES [64 words]: Greig/Duncan3: "James Brown and his son, of the same name, farmed at Hilton of Culsh in the parish of New Deer (see map) from the 1850s to the 1890s."
Greig/Duncan3 has a map on p. xxxv, of "places mentioned in songs in volume 3" showing the song number as well as place name; Hilton of Culsh (390) is at coordinate (h4,v9) on that map [near New Deer, roughly 28 miles N of Aberdeen] - BS

Last updated in version 2.4

File: GdR390
Jamie Douglas [Child 204]

DESCRIPTION: The singer laments that her happy marriage to Lord James Douglas has been ruined by accusations made by (Blackwood). She tries to convince her husband that she is true. He will not be convinced, and sends her away.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1776 (Herd)

KEYWORDS: marriage separation lie infidelity

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (12 citations):
Child 204, "Jamie Douglas" (17 texts)
Bronson 204, "Jamie Douglas" (8 versions including "Waly, Waly")
Bronson-Singing Tradition Of Child's Popular Ballads 204, "Jamie Douglas" (2 versions: #1, #5, although #1 is "Waly, Waly")
Chambers-Scottish Ballads, pp. 133-140, "The Marchioness of Douglas" (1 text, extremely composite, partly this but with "Waly, Waly" verses and probably a good deal else)
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfordsCollection Volume1 50, "Jamie Douglas" (1 text)
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfordsCollection Volume2 113, "Jamie Douglas" (1 text)
Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 136-138, "Jamie Douglas" (1 text)
Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-BritishBalladsFromMaine pp. 469-474, "Jamie Douglas" (notes and scattered stanzas, plus a text of "Waly Waly" and a part of Child A)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 546-551, "Jamie Douglas (3 texts, but the third is "Waly Waly")"
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 101, "Jamie Douglas" (2 texts, but the second is "Waly Waly")
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 87, "Jamie Douglas" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: William Motherwell, Minstrelsy: Ancient and Modern (Glasgow, 1827 ("Digitized by Microsoft")), Appendix pp. v-ix, #III "Lord Jamie Douglas" (1 text)

Roud #87

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Waly Waly (The Water is Wide)" (lyrics)
cf. "Arthur's Seat" (lyrics: one verse)

NOTES [195 words]: Although based on actual events, the stress of this song seems rather different from the history outlined by Child. That this song is akin to "Waly, Waly" is beyond doubt, too many of the lyrics of the former show up in the latter. "Waly, Waly" has, however, achieved a life of its own (despite the near-complete loss of plot), and so is listed separately. Most scholars think this the older song, but there are those who hold out for the influence passing the other way -- i.e. that verses from "Waly Waly" have entered "Jamie Douglas." David C. Fowler, A Literary History of the Popular Ballad, Duke University Press, 1968, p. 274, suggest that "it is tempting to suppose that the 'fragment' of 'Jamie Douglas' (204M) is an effort to construct a 'heroic ballad' out of the folksong 'Waly, Waly,' which had been published earlier in Ramsay's Tea-Table Miscellany." - RBW

Lyle-Andrew-CrawfordsCollection Volume1's ending is like Child 204N: Jamie Douglas takes the children and goes to the singer's father's house after he had "hanged the Blakemoor The verey place where he told the lie." For the complete text behind Child 204N see the Motherwell reference above. - BS

Last updated in version 5.2

File: C204

Jamie Foyers

DESCRIPTION: During the Peninsular War, volunteers from Wellington's army led by militiaman Foyers storm Blucher's castle in Spain. Foyers is wounded. He asks a comrade to tell his father of his death, recalls his home life, then dies. All mourn him as he is buried.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Ford)

KEYWORDS: grief request battle violence war farewell death dying funeral mourning Spain lament father soldier Napoleon

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1812 - siege of Burgos during the Peninsular War

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (11 citations):
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 18-20, "Young Jamie Foyers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #139, pp. 1-2, "Young Jamie Foyers" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan1 106, "Jamie Foyers" (3 texts, 3 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 294-295, "Young Jamie Foyers" (1 text, 1 tune)
MacColl/Seeger-TravellersSongsFromEnglandAndScotland 84, "Jamie Foyers" (1 text, 1 tune)
MacColl/PersonalChoice, pp. 38-39, "Jamie Foyers" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Fowke/MacMillan-PenguinBookOfCanadianFolkSongs 71, "Jamie Foyer" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick, pp. 32-34, "Young Jimmy Foulger" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 103, "Jimmy Folier" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 199-201, "Young Jamie Foyers" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, JAMFOYE2 JAMEFOYR*
Roud #1941
RECORDINGS:
Sheila Stewart, "Young Jimmy Foyers" (on Voice08)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.14(7), "Jamie Foyers" ("Far distant, far distant, lies Scotia the brave"), unknown, n.d.; also 2806 c.14(195) View 4 of 5, "Young Jamie Foyers"
NLScotland, L.C.Fol.178.A.2(080), "Jamie Foyers," unknown, c. 1875
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Banks of the Nile" (tune)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Jamie Fires
NOTES [301 words]: To quote MacColl & Seeger, "The Duke of Wellington's investment of Marshal Marmont's French forces and the retreat which followed were not particularly bloody by modern standards -- a mere 10,000 or so died. Wellington gained an earldom and a Perthshire militiaman gained an epitaph which is still sung round the campfires of travelling people." Note that Blucher, an enemy of Napoleon, is here described as his ally. - PJS
That seems to be a peculiarity of the John MacDonald's version, though; neither Ford nor Ord-BothySongsAndBallads have such a reference. Ford, who reports collecting the song c. 1870, reports a newspaper item listing John MacNeill as author.
Burgos, almost due north of Madrid and about two-thirds of the way from there to the ocean, is not one of the great cities of Spain, but it lies in a gap in the mountains and thus guards the most direct path between France and Madrid. As long as Napoleon's enemies held Burgos, most of Spain (except the Ebro valley and cities such as Zaragosa and Barcelona) were safe, and as long as France held it, she could operate armies in Spain freely.
Early in the Peninsular War, Napoleon directed several campaigns toward Burgos, and later on, it became one of the chief Coalition objectives. Capture Burgos, and the French garrisons in Spain would be cut off from reinforcements.
Wellington besieged Burgos in September and October of 1812, but -- despite the indirect implication of the song -- did not capture it; he abandoned the siege as a relief army approached.
- RBW
Greig: "A man of the name of John M'Neill has been mentioned as the author of 'Young Jamie Foyers.'"
Yates, Musical Traditions site Voice of the People suite Notes - Volume 8 - 1.3.03: "Some authorities cite one James MacNeil as a possible author for the song." - BS
Last updated in version 6.1
File: McCST084

Jamie frae Dundee
DESCRIPTION: "I canno' like ye, gentle sir, although a laird ye be...." "I'se gang wi Jamie frae Dundee, To cheer the lonesome way." "The laverock mounts to hail the morn, The lint-white swell her throat, But neither are sae sweet, sae clear, As Jamie's tuneful note."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1796 (McFayden); 1866 (Whitelaw) according to Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)
KEYWORDS: love separation bird music
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jamie Raeburn (Caledonia)

DESCRIPTION: "My name is (Jamie Raeburn), in Glasgow I was born." Convicted (of a crime he did not commit), he has been sentenced to transportation. He bids farewell to family, sweetheart, and his beloved home in Caledonia. He hopes to return when free

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1866 (broadside, Bodleian 2806 c.14(19))

KEYWORDS: transportation separation farewell Scotland

FOUND IN: Australia Ireland Britain(England(Lond),Scotland(Aber,Bord)) US(MW)

REFERENCES (14 citations):
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 243-244, "Jamie Raeburn's Farewell" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan8 1535, "Jamie Raeburn" (17 texts, 12 tunes)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #36, pp. 1-2, "Jamie Raeburn" (1 text)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 357-358, "Jamie Raeburn's Farewell" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #62, "John Raeburn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 85-86, "Caledonia"; 245-246, "Caledonio" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H151, p. 124, "Jamie Raeburn's Farewell" (1 text, 1 tune)
McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen 43, "Jimmy Leeburn" (1 text, 1 tune)
McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen, pp. 47-48, 150, "Jimmy Raeburn" (1 text, 1 tune)
MacColl/Seeger-TravellersSongsFromEnglandAndScotland 94, "Jamie Raeburn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 90-91, "Farewell to Caledonia" (1 text)

DT, JIMRAEBN

Roud #600

RECORDINGS:
Daisy Chapman, "Jimmy Raeburn" (on SCDChapman01)
Tom Scott, "Jimmy Raeburn" (on Borders1)

BROADSIDES:
Murray, Mu23-y1:106, "Jamie Raeburn" James Lindsay (Glasgow), 19C
NLScotland, L.C.Fol.70(75a), "Jamie Raeburn," unknown, c.1875; also RB.m.143(121) "Jamie Raeburn," Poet's Box (Dundee), c.1890

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Plains of Waterloo" (tune, per Greig/Duncan8)

ALTERNATE-TITLES:
Farewell Ye Hills and Glens o' Caledonia
Mary Hepburn
The Convict's Farewell

NOTES [269 words]: Ford claims that this is based on an actual incident c. 1840, though the details he offers are scant. - RBW
Charters says this has been traced to "a penny broadsheet published in the 1840s," but offers no further details. - PJS
It [may be] possible to date broadside Bodleian 2806 c.14(19) from its note to the ballad shared on the broadside with "James Raeburn." Specifically, for "The Lament of Andrew Brown," there is a note that Brown "is at present lying under Sentence of Death in Forfar Jail for the Murder of Captain Greig [Creig?], on board the Nymph [illegible; perhaps "while"?] on her passage from Montrose to London"; the broadside itself dates the crime as September 6 and the execution
January 31.
[Therefore we can conclude that the date of the broadside] is January 1866 based on the note for "The Lament of Andrew Brown." Specifically, Brown was tried January 8, 1866 in Edinburgh, and sentenced January 10 to be executed January 31. ["Murder at Sea," The Times of London, Tuesday, Jan 11, 1866; pg. 12; Issue 25392; Start column: D. (Copyright 2002 The Gale Group)] - BS

On the other hand, Norman Buchan, "Folk and Protest," published in Edward J. Cowan, editor, The People's Past: Scottish Folk, Scottish History 1980 (I use the 1993 Polygon paperback edition), says on p. 160, "We know that an early nineteenth-century (approximately 1820) broadsheet ballad, 'Jamie Raeburn,' sold a hundred thousand copies!" (Buchan also adds the snide comment that "Incidentally the normal sign of a bad song is that it calls Scotland 'Caledonia.' 'Jame Raeburn' is the exception that proves the rule!" ) - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
File: MA085

Jamie Telfer of the Fair Dodhead [Child 190]

DESCRIPTION: The Captain of Bewcastle raids the Fair Dodhead. Jamie Telfer, the victim, races about the countryside in search of assistance. Some refuse, but he gathers enough friends to fight the raiders. The avengers suffer casualties, but Bewcastle is defeated

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1802 (Scott)
KEYWORDS: violence robbery revenge help
FOUND IN: Britain
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Child 190, "Jamie Telfer of the Fair Dodhead" (1 text)
McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen, pp. 65, 151, "Jamie Telfer o the Fair Dodheid" (1 text, 1 tune)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 362-365, "James Telfer of the Fair Dodhead" (1 text)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 141, "Jamie Telfer in the Fair Dodhead" (1 text)
Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 67, "Jamie Telfer of the Fair Dodhead" (1 text)
Roud #3364
NOTES [145 words]: Child lists several speculations about this song (derived mostly from Scott, who is the only source for this piece). These tie it, very tentatively, to an event of 1582, at which time Bewcastle was a well-known haunt of robbers and sundry criminals. All of this, however, must be treated as little more than speculation. Nor is there any real evidence that the piece is traditional. - RBW

McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen is a 3-verse fragment corresponding to Scott's verses 23, 26, and 27 (T.F. Henderson, editor, Sir Walter Scott's Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border (Edinburgh: William Blackwood and Sons, 1902 ("digitized by Google") vol. II, pp. 1-13, "Jamie Telfer of the Fair Dodhead"; Minstrelsy's is the only version for Child 190, but the Sargent and Kittredge one-volume edition uses another text which has no verse corresponding to Wille Scott's second. - BS

Last updated in version 3.2
File: C190

Jamie's Aye Kin'

DESCRIPTION: Jamie's always kind. Willie's sour and sullen. Liking Jamie and mocking Willie "brings muckle sorrow to oor toon for noo and ever mair"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: nonballad Jacobites
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1856, "Jamie's Aye Kin" (1 short text)
Roud #13592
NOTES [61 words]: Greig/Duncan8 quoting Bell Robertson, who was -- apparently -- not the source: "This was one of mother's but ... everyone sung it." - BS

I have, very tentatively, added the keyword Jacobite because, while there is absolutely nothing explicitly Jacobite in the song, consider what it says: The town likes Jamie (James) and mocks
Jamie's Braw Claes

DESCRIPTION: The singer's son Jamie volunteered; "it wasna for fechtin' but jist for the claes." He struts in his uniform. Grannie thinks his obsession "it's a' far past jokin'" If the French blades would cut his buttocks he would not be so proud of his clothes.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: vanity clothes humorous nonballad soldier
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 651, "Jamie's Braw Claes" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6080
File: GrD3651

Jamie's on the Stormy Sea

DESCRIPTION: "Ere the twilight bat was flitting, in the sunset at her knitting, Sang a lonely maiden... Fitful rose the tender chorus, 'Jamie's on the stormy sea.'" The singer listens to the girl praying -- and at last steps out and reveals himself as Jamie

AUTHOR: Bernard Covert
EARLIEST DATE: 1849 (Journal from the _Euphrasia_)
KEYWORDS: sailor love separation reunion
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) Ireland US
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1851, "Jamie's On the Stormy Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H78, p. 484, "Jamie's on the Stormy Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 34-36, "Jamie's on the Stormy Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Heart-Songs, p. 189, "Jamie's on the Stormy Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2067

NOTES [226 words]: At least he didn't dress up to trick her into thinking he was someone else. - RBW
The text of the surviving fragment at Greig/Duncan8 may be instructive; in its two verse entirety: "Fitful cam her tender chorus Jamie's on the stormy sea." "Weep nae mair sweet I am Jamie."
There is a similar, but not quite so "literary," song at LOCSinging, as101390, "Bonnie Jamie" ("The twilight hour is stealing, The day is dying fast... But my bonnie, bonnie Jamie Has crossed the stormy sea."). J. Andrews (New York), 1853-1859; also as200410, sb10028b, "Bonnie Jamie."
However, Jamie has not yet returned from the war by the end of this song. These broadsides, all issued by John Andrews or its successor, Henry De Marsan, include statements to the following effect: "By James Robinson. Respectfully dedicated to my friend, Sergeant Wheeler, U.S.A. This beautiful Song was composed by Mr. James Robinson, the Author of several of our most popular ballads. It is intended for a companion to Annie Laurie, and the same Air."

Broadsides Bodleian Harding B 18(311), "Jamie's On the Stormy Sea" ("E'eer the twilight bat was fletting"), H. De Marsan (New York), 1859-1860
LOCSheet, sm1850 482040, "Jamie's On the Stormy Sea," Oliver Ditson (Boston), 1850 (tune)
LOCSinging, as201800, "Jamie's On the Stormy Sea" ("E'eer the twilight bat was fletting"), H. De Marsan (New York), 1859-1860; also as201810, "Jamie's On the Stormy Sea" [still De Marsan; same first line misspelling]

Broadsides Bodleian Harding B 18(311), LOCSinging as201800 and LOCSinging as201800: J. Andrews and H. De Marsan dating per _Studying Nineteenth-Century Popular Song_ by Paul Charosh in American Music, Winter 1997, Vol 15.4, Table 1, available at FindArticles site. Broadsides LOCSinging as201800 and Bodleian Harding B 18(311) are duplicates. - BS
Jane and Louisa

DESCRIPTION: "Jane and Louisa will soon come home, darling... Out of the beautiful garden." "Then I will like you to pick a rose, darling... Out of..." "Then I will like you to waltz with me, darling... Into...."

AUTHOR: unknown

KEYWORDS: dancing nonballad playparty

FOUND IN: West Indies(Jamaica, St Vincent)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Abrahams-DeepTheWaterShallowTheShore, p. 90, "Jane and Louisa" (1 text, 1 tune)
- ADDITIONAL: Martha Warren Beckwith and Helen Roberts, _Folk-Games of Jamaica_ (Poughkeepsie: Vassar College, 1922 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")) #63 pp. 73-75, "Jane and Louisa" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [64 words]: Abrahams says "Tinnego" and "Jane and Louisa" seem to be the most popular of St. Vincent ring games among the blackfish whalers. For other examples of West Indies ring games see "There's a Brown Girl in the Ring" and "Go Down Emmanuel Road" In "Jane and Louisa," the first line of the verse is sung three times with slight variations, followed by "Out of/Into the beautiful garden." - BS

Last updated in version 4.0

File: AWIS90

Jane McCrea

DESCRIPTION: "It was in brilliant autumn time When the army of the north... and its riflemen came forth." General Burgoyne finds the Americans waiting at Bennington and elsewhere. In the fights that follow, "hapless Jane McCrea" falls an innocent victim

AUTHOR: "Frank Forrester" (William Henry Herbert, 1807-1858) (Source: Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales)

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales)

KEYWORDS: battle war death recitation

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
- 1753 - Birth of Jane McCrea

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 328-333, "(no title)" (1 text)

Roud #6600

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Fate of John Burgoyne" (subject: the Saratoga campaign) and notes there

NOTES [45 words]: Stone, pp. 128-207, has a brief biography of Jane McCrea, a civilian casualty of the Saratoga campaign, and eight different poems about her, several of them very long and mostly quite dense. I suspect she deserved better, both of fate and of authors writing about her. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.4

File: TNY328

Jane Shore

DESCRIPTION: Jane Shore, "that was beloved of a king," laments her fate. She had come to the attention of Edward IV, who loved her long but died young. Now she is at the mercy of his successor Richard III, who harries her relentlessly

AUTHOR: Thomas Deloney?

EARLIEST DATE: 1765 (Percy); reference in the Stationer's Register in 1603, but no copy recovered; a song called "Jane Shore" was in William Thackeray's broadside catalog by 1690

KEYWORDS: love royalty death prison adultery
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1461-1470 AND 1471-1483 - Reign of Edward IV
1483-1485 - Reign of Richard III
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Percy/Wheatley-ReliquesOfAncientEnglishPoetry II, pp. 263-273, "Jane Shore" (1 text)
Ritson-AncientSongsBalladsFromHenrySecondToTheRevolution, pp. 259-264, "The Lamentation of Jane Shore" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN1391, "If Rosamund that was so fair"
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN2929, "Why should we boast of Lais and his Knights"
Roud #V5428

NOTES [1155 words]: The date of this is a little obscure. The events of the song would seem to date it to the period 1483-1485, but there are certainly no surviving prints from that era. Rollins, #1272, p. 110, from December 14, 1624, is entitled "Jane Shore," but we cannot prove that it is this song. Rollins, #1273, p. 110, according to Rollins, is the "If Rosamund that was so fair" ballad, since a copy survives in the Roxburgh Ballad, but it is very late, being dated March 1, 1675. From that same day comes "The woofull lamentacon of Jane Shore," Rollins #2986, p. 256. On June 11, 1603, William White registered "Ye Lamentacon of mistres Jane Shore" (Rollins, #1452, p. 127); it is not the same as the "If Rosamund" ballad, opening "Listen, faire ladies, vnto my misery." Clearly Jane was remembered, though it's not obvious why.

Jane Shore, the wife of a London merchant, seems to have been the last great love of King Edward IV's life (though Edward IV was truly prodigal with his energies). She is said to have been charming as well as beautiful, but this simply meant that she was feared as having too much influence over the king.

Seward-Roses makes Jane Shore one of his main "viewpoint characters." According to Seward, Jane was born around 1450 (though in another of his books, Seward-Richard, p. 203, he says she "must have been in her early forties in 1483"; this, it appears to me, places her birth impossibly early). She was born "Elizabeth Lambert" (this based on recent research linking Mistress Shore with Mistress Lambert; I don't know if it is universally accepted). Williamson, p. 42, suggests that she was called "Jane" rather than "Elizabeth" or a diminutive of the latter either to avoid confusion with the Queen, Elizabeth Woodville, or as a sort of "bed name," as actresses take stage names to protect their privacy. If the latter, it clearly didn't work too well. Ashdown-Hill, p. 166, has a different explanation: since she was generally called "Mistress Shore," after her first husband's name, "by the sixteenth century her real first name seems to have been completely forgotten, and in 1609, when Beaumont and Fletcher produced their play, Knight of the Burning Pestle, they could find no record of it, so they invented Jane Shore to give the character a name on stage." The difficulty with the latter explanation is that it obviously fails to explain the 1603 Stationer's Register reference to Jane Shore.

Elizabeth Lambert's father John Lambert was a London alderman. This is about all we can derive from ordinary records. Most of the rest of what we know about Elizabeth "Jane" Lambert Shore comes from Thomas More's The History of Richard III. This is an extremely controversial source, and one containing many errors of fact, but since Shore was still alive when it was written, it may perhaps have some value here. I'm referring to the text of More printed in NortonAnth, which supplies More's description of Jane and no other part of the history (perhaps because the editors didn't want to have to deal with all the arguments about this history). Jane's surname, it is generally accepted, came from her husband William Shore, a successful mercer who was probably at least ten years older than his wife (Seward-Roses, p. 88). They were divorced in 1476 (Seward-Roses, pp. 225-231; More, in the first of the three long paragraphs of the account in NorthonAnth, says merely that "her husband dwelled not with her," adding in his second paragraph that she was "very well married, saving somewhat too soon").

Then she took up with Edward IV. Edward was an incredibly lusty liege (I know of no complete count of his bastards, but there must have been a lot of them); at one point he boasted of three mistresses at once, "one the merriest, one the wiliest, and one the holiest harlot in his realm" (paragraph 2 of More in NortonAnth). Jane Shore, according to More, was the first of these; in her "the King therefore took special pleasure. For many he had, but her he loved" (More, paragraph 2; cf. Cheetham, p. 205, which punctuates the passage rather differently).

When Edward IV died, his friend Lord Hastings seems to have become involved with Mistress Shore, but Richard III soon had Hastings executed. From that time on, Shore had no protector. (It can't have helped that Hastings apparently used Shore as a go-between to Elizabeth Woodville, the Queen of Edward IV, who was Richard's strongest enemy; see Jenkins, pp. 162-163.) The Marquess of Dorset, Elizabeth Woodville's son by her first marriage and hence Edward IV's stepson, apparently wanted her too (Seward-Roses, p. 269), but as an obvious enemy of Richard III, he had no influence.

Richard's persecution of Jane was severe and probably unfair ("he spoiled her of all that she ever had, above the value of two or three thousand marks, and sent her body to prison.... [H]e caused the Bishop of London to put her to open penance, going before the cross in procession upon a Sunday with a taper in her hand" -- so More, paragraph 1; the carrying of a taper was the standard punishment of a harlot). Rather puritanical himself, and (despite Shakespeare) seemingly devoted to Edward IV, Richard seems to have blamed Shore for much of Edward's dissipation, which resulted in Edward's death at about 40. Nonetheless, as Williamson, p. 72, points out, this was a light penalty if, as some have argued, he thought her guilty of treason by being a go-between between Hastings and the dowager Queen Elizabeth Woodville.

Jenkins, p. 166, reports that "on a Sunday, wearing nothing but her kirtle, she was led barefoot through the streets, a taper in her hand. More... says that first she was very pale but the gaze of the crowds made her blush, and 'she went so fair and lovely, her great shame won her much praise among those that were more amorous of her body than concerned for her soul.' (The cynical part of me can't help but note that More's presumed source, Bishop Morton of Ely, was a celibate Catholic. Just who was doing the lusting here?)

After the fall of Richard III, she took one Thomas Lynom (listed by Seward-Roses, p. 16, as Richard's solicitor) as her second husband. According to Williamson, p. 73, Richard actually wrote a letter approving this match, although the message expressed surprise and tried to talk Lynom out of it.

Jane Shore apparently did become a byword for beauty, although probably more for reasons of chronology than because she was in fact exceptionally good-looking; see the notes to "Robin Hood and Maid Marian" [Child 150].

It is not likely that this or any other Jane Shore ballad went into tradition, but there seem to have been enough of them that they deserve an entry here. The main reference is to the "If Rosamund that was so fair" text sometimes listed as by Thomas Deloney (who, however, gets a lot of semi-traditional material attributed to him); the cross-references are to other Jane Shore pieces. - RBW

Bibliography

- Jenkins: Elizabeth Jenkins, The Princes in the Tower, Coward McCann, & Geoghan, 1978

Last updated in version 5.3
File: Percy263

Jane, Jane

DESCRIPTION: "Hey, hey, Jane, Jane, My Lordy, Lord, Jane, Jane, I'm gonna buy, Jane, Jane, Three mocking birds, Jane, Jane, One a-for to whistle...." "I'm gonna buy... Three hunting dogs... Three muley cows... Three little blue birds...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973
KEYWORDS: bird play party nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Janet Jamieson

DESCRIPTION: Listeners are warned of the sad fate of Janet Jamieson. A rich hunter sees the beautiful girl and begs her to come with him. At last he convinces her -- but a week later casts her out. She wanders alone, then dies. He is killed in Hindustan

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan6)

KEYWORDS: courting seduction betrayal abandonment death soldier exile warning

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInTheNorthEast #116, p. 1, "Janet Jamieson" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan6 1152, "Janet Jamieson" (1 text)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 470-471, "Janet Jamieson" (1 text)

Roud #5623

NOTES [21 words]: This song has the curious characteristic of being a warning song that doesn't really warn against any particular action. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.5

File: Ord470

Janet She Cam' Doon the Gait

DESCRIPTION: "Janet she cam' doon the gait To borrow elaeven eggs fae Pate Her muckle tappit hen to set The cock was but a gawpie [Greig/Duncan8: fool]"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Greig/Duncan8)

KEYWORDS: chickens

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1881, "Janet She Cam' Doon the Gait" (1 fragment)
Roud #13574

NOTES [119 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan8 fragment. Considering the fragment we have I would have thought the cock more likely to be a capon, either literally or figuratively. - BS

Several versions of "The Baffled Knight" [Child 112], mostly Scottish in my experience, have verses about unproductive chickens. The Digital Tradition version, for instance, has one which reads
There is a cock in our father's barn, he never trod a hen
He flies about and flaps his wings, I think you're one of them.
Another one talked about a "likely hen... That clucked and clucked and clucked again But neer an egg would lay." This probably isn't related, but it would seem this was a rather common concern in Scotland. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD81881

Janie of the Moor [Laws N34]

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets Janie and proposes marriage. She says that she has promised to remain true to her love Dennis Ryan/Riley. He pulls out Dennis's ring and says he has died in battle. She faints; she revives when he reveals that he is Dennis

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1862 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3134))

KEYWORDS: courting brokentoken

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Sept 20, 1854 - Battle of Alma (Crimean War). The Anglo/French/Turkish forces win an expensive victory over the Russians

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber)) US(NE) Canada(Mar,Newf) Ireland

REFERENCES (13 citations):
Laws N34, "Janie of the Moor"
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 89, "Jennie on the Moor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 125, "Janie on the Moor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan5 1050, "Jeannie on the Moor" (1 text)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H107, p. 320, "Jennie of the Moor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople, p. 235, "Sweet Jenny of the Moor" (1 fragment)
Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, pp. 70-71, "Sweet Jinny on the Moor" (1 text)
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 61, "Janey on the Moor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 66, "Dennis Ryan" (1 text, 1 tune)
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 58, "Sweet Jenny of the Moor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2271, p. 153, "Sweet Jenny of the Moor" (1 reference)
DT 461, JANEMOOR
Roud #581

RECORDINGS:
Mrs. Peter Mushrow, "Fair Jenny on the Moor" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(3134), "Sweet Jenny of the Moor," E.M.A. Hodges (London), 1855-1861; also Firth b.25(286), "Sweet Jenny of the Moor"; Harding B 16(336a), Firth c.12(287), Harding B 11(1864), Harding B 11(1865), "Dennis Ryan" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
LOCSinging, as203560, "Sweet Jenny of the Moor," H. De Marsan (New York), 1861-1864; also sb40502a, Firth b.25(177), "Sweet Jenny of the Moor"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "John (George) Riley (I)" [Laws N36] and references there, especially N29

NOTES [172 words]: The texts seem rather uncertain as to the battle in which Dennis didn't get himself killed. The Sam Henry text mentions Alma, a battle of the Crimean War. Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia's Nova Scotia text mentions "Vendons Town"; I cannot find this in either the history or the atlas, unless it is an error for something such as Vendome. - RBW
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland has Dennis "fighting with the allied boys" while Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast has it "in a battle of Nor Amerikay." Some of the Bodleian broadsides simply mention "while in the war while fighting" but others -- as well as the America Singing copies -- do refer to "fighting at the Alma." Since I can't definitely date a "while in the war" broadside before the Crimean War I can't say which is the older version.
Broadside LOCSinging as203560: H. De Marsan dating per Studying Nineteenth-Century Popular Song by Paul Charosh in American Music, Winter 1997, Vol 15.4, Table 1, available at FindArticles site. - BS
Last updated in version 4.2
File: LN34

Janie Sharp Ballet, The

DESCRIPTION: After leaving "sin's way" at 16, Janie Sharp made friends with all she met, but at 18 "by criminal beast her journey ceased." The singer theorizes about her last hours, thinking she warned the murderer, was killed, and taken to heaven

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi)
KEYWORDS: homicide rape
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 68, pp. 194-195, "The Janie Sharp Ballet" (1 text)
Roud #4115

NOTES [109 words]: Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi reports, "Some twenty-five or thirty years ago [i.e. c. 1910] a young girl named Janie Sharp was brutally murdered in the Rural Hill neighbourhood near French Camp. Her former lover, Swinton Permenter, was charged with the murder and was prosecuted on circumstantial evidence, but was not convicted."
Hudson also comments that is was "A poor composition, perhaps, at the outset," and hardly improved by some years of garbling. I'd have to agree; the result is at once poor in style, weak in detail, and monotonous in its description of Janie's hypothesized transport to heaven.

This is item dF43 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW

File: Hud068

Jarvis the Coachman

DESCRIPTION: Jarvis the coachman is hired at night by some men to go to a gibbet where a man is hanging. They hoist Jarvis up the gibbet to release, they say, the hanging man, but steal Jarvis's horses and coach and leave him hanging. Finally Jarvis is rescued

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1820 (broadside, Bodleian 2806 c.18(158))

KEYWORDS: robbery rescue trick execution

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 258-259, "Jarvis the Coachman" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 359)
Roud #1312

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.18(158)[some words clipped], "Jarvis the Coachman's Happy Deliverance from the Gibbet" ("O my name is Jarvis, well known") , J. Pitts (London), 1802-1819; also Johnson Ballads 2590, Harding B 16(117b), "Jarvis the Coachman's Happy Deliverance from the Gibbet"

NOTES [19 words]: The last two lines of most verses: "But, had I known their design, The Devil should have drove them, not me." - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: WT258

Jawbone Song, The

DESCRIPTION: "Dance all night with a bottle in my hand/Just 'fore day give the fiddler a dram." "Jawbone walk and jawbone talk/Jawbone eat with a knife and fork" "My old Miss is mad at me, Cause I wouldn't live in Tennessee" "I laid that jawbone on the fence..."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Cecil Sharp collection)

KEYWORDS: music marriage nonballad nonsense floatingverses dancetune

FOUND IN: US(SE,So)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Randolph 259, "The Jawbone Song" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 222-223, "The Jawbone Song" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 259)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 103, (no title) (1 fragment, without the chorus); also p. 103, "Dweley" (1 text, a collection of floating verses including one from this song, one from "Crawdad," and others); also p. 104, "Lula Gal" (1 text, 1 tune, at least partly this song though the chorus appears to be something else)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 246, "Give the Fiddler a Dram" (1 text, 1 tune)
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 120, "The Jawbone Song" (2 texts, 1 tune; one verse of "B" appears to come from something else)
Roud #7728 and 3657

RECORDINGS:
Carter Bros. & Son, "Old Joe Bone," "Give the Fiddler a Dram" (both on OKeh 45289, 1929; "Old Joe Bone" on StuffDreams2)
Willie Chapman, "Jaw Bone" [instrumental] (on MMOK, MMOKCD)
Crazy Hillbillies Band, "Danced All Night with a Bottle in My Hand" (OKeh 45575, 1934)
Clayton McMichen & his Georgia Wildcats, "Give the Fiddler a Dram" (Joe Davis 3510, n.d.)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Old Joe Bone" (on NLCR13, NLCRCD2)
Pope's Arkansas Mountaineers, "Jaw Bone" (Victor 21577, 1928)
Stripling Brothers, "Dance All Night with a Bottle In My Hand" (Vocalion 5395, 1930)
Gid Tanner & Riley Puckett, "Alabama Gal Give the Fiddler a Dram" (Columbia 119-D, 1924)
Gid Tanner & his Skillet Lickers, "Dance All Night with a Bottle in your Hand" (Columbia 15108-D, 1926)
Tennessee Ramblers, "Give the Fiddlers a Dram" (Vocalion 5363, 1929)
Tweedy Brothers, "Dance All Night with a Bottle in your Hand" (Supertone 9174, 1928)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Old Yellow's Dead" (chorus format)

NOTES [127 words]: I'm including versions of "Give the Fiddler a Dram/Dance All Night With a Bottle In Your Hand" here, because many of them share the same tune and several verses. A case could be made for splitting as well, but in practice the two branches of the family are hard to distinguish. - PJS

This is an instance where, unusually, Roud does not lump; "Jawbone" is Roud #7728 and "Give the Fiddler a Dram" is #3657. But Paul has heard far more of the 78 recordings than I have. My initial description of "Jawbone" was as follows:
"My old Miss is mad at me, Cause I wouldn't live in Tennessee, Wah-jaw-bone to my jangle lang, An' a wah-jaw-bone to my jangle lang." "I laid that jawbone on the fence, An' I ain't seen that jawbone since. Wah-jaw-bone to my jangle lang...." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3
File: R259

Jay Legg

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you true brave river boys... We've lost one of our river boys, And the one we love so well." His wife shoots Jay on a Friday night. His boy asks his mother why she did it. She says it was an accident. She is imprisoned even so

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (collected from Maggie Hammons Parker, according to Cohen)

KEYWORDS: death homicide husband wife children

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Feb 10, 1904 - Shooting of Jay Legg by his wife Sarah Ann. She will be convicted of murder, but the conviction will be overturned on appeal

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Bush-FsOfCentralWestVirginiaVol2, pp. 51-54, "The Murder of Jay Legg" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 219-220, "Jay Legg" (1 text)

Roud #7030

NOTES [162 words]: The Historical Note is based on information in Cohen. Records from the 1900 U. S. census list James R. Legg as being born April 1879 in West Virginia and living at that time in the Buffalo District of Clay County, West Virginia (which is along the Elk River). His wife Sara A. Legg was born December 1880, also in West Virginia. (A record at FamilySearch.org says her married name was Sarah Ann Dickey.) The census taker estimated they were married in 1899, even though they had a daughter, Dona J. Legg, born June 1898. Records at FamilySearch.org indicate another child, John Sherren Legg, who presumably was born after the 1900 census recorded the family. FamilySearch.org concurs that Jay Legg died in 1904 but lists his birth date as 1878 (this sort of confusion occurs in a lot of census records, when the census-taker simply recorded the person's age at the time of recording, not the date of birth). FamilySearch.org says that Sarah Ann Dickey lived until 1975. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0
File: CAFS1219

Jaybird Died With the Whooping Cough

DESCRIPTION: "Jaybird died with the whoopingcough, Sparrow died with the colic, On came a frog with a fiddle on his back, Inquiring the way to the frolic." Other verses tell other stories about the lives of other birds, or perhaps predators or other animals

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: bird death disease nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE,So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 153, "The Jaybird" (4 short texts, of which "B" and "C" are this piece; "D" is "The Jaybird"; "A" mixes the two)
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 187, "Jaybird Died With the Whooping Cough" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jaybird Sitting on a Hickory Limb

DESCRIPTION: "A jaybird sitting on a hickory limb, All around over to Jordan, I upped with a rock and hit him on the shin, Oh, Jerusalem!" "Shine on, shine on, All across over to Jordan, Shine on, shine on, Oh, Jerusalem!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)

KEYWORDS: floating verses nonballad injury bird

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 182, "Jaybird Sitting on a Hickory Limb" (1 short text, 1 tune)

Roud #4618

NOTES [50 words]: Roud files this with "Jim Along Josie." It is certainly composed of elements common in other songs, but I don't see that particular link. I'm filing it separately until a clear source comes along; it's probably a couple of fragments that Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric's informant accidentally lumped. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: Brne182

Jaybird, The

DESCRIPTION: Songs about the exploits about the jaybird and how it cheekily survives, e.g. "The jaybird a-setting of a swinging limb, He winked at me and I winked at him, He laugh at me when my gun 'crack.' It kick me on the flat o' my back."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Talley)

KEYWORDS: bird humorous nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 153, "The Jaybird" (4 short texts, of which "D" is this piece; "B" and "C" are "Jaybird Died With the Whooping Cough; "A" mixes the two)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 190-191, (no title) (2 fragments, the first having the verse of "The Jaybird" and the chorus of "The Blue-Tail Fly" [Laws I19])

File: Br3153B

Jaybird's Altar, The (I've Been to the East)

DESCRIPTION: "I've been to the east, I've been to the west, I've been to the jaybird's altar, But the prettiest girl I ever seen Was Temmie Slinkard's daughter."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (JAFL 24)

KEYWORDS: courting travel

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 574, "The Jaybird's Altar" (1 text)
Roud #7664

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Sailor Laddie (I)" (lyrics)
Jaybirds Gave a Concert Free
DESCRIPTION: "Jaybirds gave a concert free, Up in the boughs of a maple tree, Ha ha ha." If there is any more, it has been lost.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: bird music
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 186, "Jaybirds Gave a Concert Free" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #11371
File: Brne186

Je Caresserai La Belle Par Amitie
DESCRIPTION: French. "J'ai fait une belle trois jours (x3), mais c'est pas longtemps." The singer found his love three days ago, and will visit her Monday. If she turns into a trout, nightingale, etc., he will become a fisherman, etc. to pursue her
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (collected from Elida Hofpauir)
KEYWORDS: love courting separation magic
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 184-187, "Je Caresserai La Belle Par Amitie" (1 French text plus English translation, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Twa Magicians" [Child 44] (theme of transformations) and references there
File: LoS184

Jealous Brother, The (The Jealous Lover)
DESCRIPTION: When Mary "dressed herself in men's attire" to meet Jimmie, he mistakes her for his brother whom, he assumed, had been "to enjoy my dear." He shoots Mary. When he realizes Mary is dying he shoots himself, saying "be ye ware of jealousy"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs)
KEYWORDS: jealousy courting homicide suicide cross-dressing
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 103, "The Jealous Lover" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2706
File: CrMa103

Jealous Husband Outwitted, The
DESCRIPTION: A (hosier) from Leicester has "a handsome witty wife," but he does not trust her, and threatens to set her aside. She disguises herself as the devil, and with the help of two boys, frightens him so much that he never dares mistreat her again
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1869
KEYWORDS: husband wife trick disguise Devil
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Logan-APedlarsPack, pp. 385-387, "The Jealous Husband Outwitted" (1 text)
DT 452, KATEHRN3*
ST Log385 (Partial)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
Jealous Lover (I), The (Florella, Floella) (Pearl Bryan II) (Nell Cropsey II) [Laws F1A, B, C]

DESCRIPTION: The jealous lover lures (Florella/Pearl Bryan) into the woods with the promise that they will discuss wedding plans. Once there, he stabs her. When captured, he is imprisoned for life.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)

KEYWORDS: homicide prison jealousy death lover

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

Feb 1, 1896 - Discovery of the headless body of Pearl Bryan, killed along with her unborn child by Scott Jackson and Alonzo Walling, near Fort Thomas, Kentucky

1901 - Murder of Ella Maude "Nellie" Cropsey, presumably by her former lover Jim Wilcox

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,NE,Ro,SE,So) Canada(Mar,Newf,Ont)

REFERENCES (48 citations):

Laws F1, "The Jealous Lover (Florella, Floella) (Pearl Bryan II) (Nell Cropsey II)"
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 324-330, "Florella (The Jealous Love)" (2 full texts plus 7 fragments which may be this piece and references to 9 others, 2 tunes)
Randolph 138, "The Jealous Lover" (7 texts plus 3 excerpts, 4 tunes)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 158-161, "The Jealous Lover" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 138A)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 104, "The Murdered Girl" (8 texts, 2 tunes; the D and E texts apparently belong here)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 21, "The Jealous Lover" (1 text plus an excerpts and mention of 2 more, 1 tune)
List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, pp. 310-313, "Florella" (1 text, 1 tune)
Neely/Sparge-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois, pp. 158-161, "Pearl Bryant" (2 texts, 1 tune, the first a "Pearl Bryan" type, the second being a general "Florella" type)
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 146, "Sweet Fair Ella" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi 67, "Fair Florella" (1 text, 1 tune)
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 287-288, "The Jealous Lover" (1 text, 1 tune)
Carey-MarylandFolkloreAndFolklife, pp. 53-54, "Pearl Bryan" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 250, "Florella (The Jealous Lover)" (5 texts plus 7 excerpts, 2 fragments, and mention of 9 more; Laws places the "A", "B", "C" (apparently), "H," and "L" texts with F1A and "U" with F1B)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 250, "Florella (The Jealous Lover)" (8 excerpts, 8 tunes)
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 64, "Nell Cropsey, IV" (1 text plus 2 fragments, 2 tunes, apparently a local adaption to the Nell Cropsey story, for which see Nell Cropsey (I); Chappell's seem to be the only known versions of this adaption)
Morris-FolksongsOfflorida, #35, "The Jealous Lover" (3 texts, 1 tune; the "A" and "B" texts appear to be "The Jealous Lover (II)"; the "C" text is the "Pearl Bryan" type of "The Jealous Lover (I) [Laws F1ABC])"
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, pp. 65-66, "Edward" (1 text, probably this although it has at least hints of the "Willow Garden" versions of "Rose Connolly")
Cambiaire-EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads, p. 109, "Pearl Bryant" (1 short text, probably this though it is not long enough to be certain)
Sulzer-TwentyFiveKentuckyMountainBallads, p. 15, "Fair Ellen" (1 text, t tune)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol1, pp. 78-79, "Floella" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 251, "Fair Ellen" (1 fragment, probably of this family though it's too short to tell)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-ted, pp. 100-102, "The Jealous Lover" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 72-73, "The Jealous Lover" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #31, "The Jealous Lover" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 46, "Florella" (3 texts plus mention of 3 more, all of the F1A type though Laws does not list them); 61, "Pearl Bryan" (3 texts plus an excerpt and mention of 3 more; 1 tune; the "C" text is this piece (of the F1B group) while "A" and "B" are Laws F2)
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 59-60, "The Fair Flo-ella" (1 text)
Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster, pp. 77-79, "Fair Florella" (1 text, 1 tune)
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 388-389, "The Jealous Lover" (1 text plus an excerpt)
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 180, "Florella" (1 text)
Peacock, pp. 632-633, "Sweet Florella" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, p. 31, "(Pearl Bryan)" (1 stanza)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 787-789, "Fair Florella or The Jealous Lover" (2 texts)
McNeil-SouthernFolkBalladsVol2, pp. 85-87, "Pearl Bryan" (1 text, 1 tune)
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 203, "The Jealous Lover" (1 text)
Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates 63D, pp. 174-175, "Pearl Bryan" (1 text)
Ritchie-SingingFamilyOfTheCumberlands, pp. 137-138, "[Fair Ellen]" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abrahams/Foss-AngloAmericanFolksongStyle, pp. 29-31, "Fair Florella/Pearl Bryan" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune)
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 43, pp. 101-102, "The Jealous Lover"; pp. 102-103, "The Weeping Willow" (2 texts, of which the first is "The Jealous Lover (II)" but the second could well be this)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 38, "The Jealous Lover" (5 texts plus mentions of three more; of these, Laws identifies D and E as this song, belonging to the Pearl Bryan group)
Cox/Hercog/Halpert/Boswell-WVirginia-B, #5A-B, pp. 130-132, "The Jealous Lover," "Blue-Eyed Ellen" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune; the "A" fragment might be this or "The Jealous Lover (II)"; the "B" text is probably the latter)
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, pp. 132-134, "Pearl Bryan" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol1, pp. 34-38, "Pearl Bryan" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Leach-HeritageBookOfBallads, pp. 145-146, "The Jealous Lover" (1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 197-198, "The Jealous Lover" (1 text)
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, W Amos Abrams, "Della Adams Bostic: Sweet Singer of Old Songs," Vol. XXI, No. 3 (Sep 1973), pp. 139-140, "Nellie Crospie" (sic.) (1 text, some of the lyrics so different that I considered filing it as a separate song, but parts appear to be this)
DT, JLSLOVR2*
ADDITIONAL: Fred W. Allsopp, Folklore of Romantic Arkansas, Volume II (1931), p. 204, "(The Jealous Lover)" (1 text)
Richard M. Dorson, _Buying the Wind: Regional Folklore in the United States_, University of Chicago Press, 1964, pp. 399-402, "Pearl Bryant" (1 text)
Roud #500
RECORDINGS:
[Richard] Burnett & Leonard Rutherford, "Pearl Bryan" (Columbia 15113-D, 1927; rec. 1926; on BurnRuth01, KMM)
Isabel Etheridge, "Nellie Crospie" (on OBank01)
Eugene Jemison, "Fair Florilla" (on Jem01)
David Miller, "Sweet Floetta" [Floella?] (Champion 15413, 1928/ Conqueror 7839, 1931)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Lily of the West"
cf. "Pearl Bryan I" [Laws F2]
cf. "Pearl Bryan II" [Laws F3]
cf. "Pearl Bryan IV"
cf. "Nell Cropsey (I)" (subject of some versions) and references there
cf. "The Jealous Lover (II)" (subject, words, tune, everything else)
SAME TUNE:
The Philadelphia Lawyer (by Woody Guthrie) (File: Grnw283)
[The Drew Murder] (Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi, no number or title, pp. 233-234)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Lone, Lone Valley
Down in a Lone Valley
The Love Valley
Notes: The antecedents and relationships of this ballad are immensely complex, and cannot be described here. There are many related pieces.

There is some debate over whether the ballad is in fact a "native American" piece. Although most of its present forms are uniquely American, Barry points to a connection with the British piece, "The Murder of Betty Smith." For this song, see e.g. the broadside NLScotland, L.C.Fol.73(126), "Murder of Betty Smith," Robert McIntosh (Glasgow), c.1850. (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety also mentions a possible connection to T. H. Bayley's "She Never Blamed Him." This seems a stretch even in the versions where the girl forgives the murderer.)

Given the number of similar songs, the reader is advised to check references under Laws F2, Laws F3, "The Jealous Lover II," etc.

Fuller details on the story of Pearl Bryan may be found in the entry on Pearl Bryan (I) [Laws F2]. Laws breaks this ballad up into three subgroups. F1A is "The Jealous Lover" (Florella, Floella, Blue-Eyed Ella, etc.); F1B is the Pearl Bryan group; F1C is the Nell Cropsey song. I decided to "lump" the songs, however, as they differ in very little except names.

The "Pearl Bryan" versions of this song (Laws F1B) are told from other Pearl Bryan songs by a first verse similar to this:

Way down in yonder valley
There the violets fade and bloom,
There lies our own Pearl Bryan
In a cold and lonesome tomb.

For background on the Pearl Bryan murder see the notes to "Pearl Bryan (I)" [Laws F2].

There are a number of "Jealous Lover" texts which Laws did NOT include with this piece, many of which are filed under "The Jealous Lover (II). The best guess I can make, based on what Laws did and didn't include, is that this song does not feature the girl forgiving her murderer" in "The Jealous Lover (II), she does. - RBW

Peacock is another who believes "this is an American ballad freely based on an English broadside and a sentimental English song by T.H. Bayly called She Never Blamed Him [sic], written in the 1820's and widely popular during the American Civil War." You can read the lyrics of "She Never Blam'd Him, Never," by Thomas Haynes Bayly (1797-1829), on the Library of Congress American Singing: Nineteenth-Century Song Sheets site, digital id as203280. Judge the likelihood for yourself.

Here's a description of "She Never Blam'd Him, Never": He visits and she receives him, vainly trying "to look the same." Though she was dying, only losing him made "her sweet voice ... faulter." She never blamed him for luring her "from the isle where she was born" into "the cold world's cruel scorn." He leaves and "she heard the bugle's sound... and strangers found her Cold and lifeless on the ground."

In any case, T.H. Bayly's name has appeared in this index in connection with other songs [sometimes as Bayley]. What kind of poet writes songs that do pass into tradition? You can find out more about him and his songs in Andrew Lang's Essays in Little - BS

Last updated in version 6.1
File: LF01

Jealous Lover (II), The

Description: The jealous lover takes his girlfriend down to the woods. (She grows weary, and asks to return home.) He (tells her she will never return home, and) stabs her. With her dying breath she forgives him

Author: unknown

Earliest date: 1925 (recording, Kelly Harrell)

Keywords: homicide jealousy

References (16 citations):
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 104, "The Jealous Lover" (8 texts, 2 tunes, but only the F, G, and H texts belong with this ballad; the others all go with the other ballads listed in the cross-references)
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 36, p. 50, "The Jealous Lover" (1 text)
List-SingingAbouttt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, pp. 313-315, "The Jealous Lover" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, pp. 179-180, "The Jealous Lover" (1 text, 1 tune) Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 62, pp. 185-187, "The Jealous Love" (2 texts plus mention of 8
Jean and Her Sailor Lad

DESCRIPTION: Jean loves a sailor but he leaves for sea without marrying. When he returns she shuns him, saying she's being courted by a tailor, a ploughman, and a farmer. The sailor ridicules those professions and said he'd go to sea again. She calls him back.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan1)

KEYWORDS: love reunion separation sailor

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan1 58, "Jean and Her Sailor Lad" (3 texts, 3 tunes)
Jean Chivas

DESCRIPTION: Jean Chivas lives at Blackton, "And a' the ill deen here aboot Jean Chivas gets the blame" "She's into a coach wi' her ain true love, And awa' to Porter Fair"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan4)

KEYWORDS: courting

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan4 729, "Jean Chivas" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

Roud #6162

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Bell Hendry (I)" (tune?, per Greig/Duncan4, and text)
cf. "Bell Hendry (II)" (tune?, per Greig/Duncan4, and text)

NOTES [58 words]: Greig/Duncan4 and Roud split "Jean Chivas" from "Bell Hendry" though its first verse is close to Greig/Duncan4 728D and its fragmentary verse is close to two lines of Greig/Duncan4 728C. The name, obviously, is changed from Bell Hendry to Jean Chivas. Locations are changed respectively from Fraserburgh and Marnin Fair to Blackton and Porter Fair.

- BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD4729

Jean Dalgarno

DESCRIPTION: "Miss Jean Dalgarno she was there A maid sae primp an' slim And fa think ye gaed hame wi' her But Arnot's shoudin sin"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: dancing

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 624, "Jean Dalgarno" (1 fragment)

Roud #6064

NOTES [51 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan3 fragment. The following songs are all one or two verses or fragments with a verse beginning "[so-and-so he/she] was there". "Mary Glennie," "Jean Dalgarno," "The Singing Class" and "The Auchnairy Ball." Should two or more be considered the same song? - BS

Last updated in version 2.4

File: GrD3624

Jean Findlater's Loon

DESCRIPTION: Jean's husband died leaving her with a son Jock who was always in trouble. At 17 he grew responsible but was thrown in jail ten days for mischief making. He joins the Life Guards, fights bravely at Waterloo, is promoted, and supports Jean handsomely.

AUTHOR: William Anderson (1802-1867) (source: Greig-FolkSongInBuchan- FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)

EARLIEST DATE: 1854 (_The Aberdeenshire Lintie_)
Jean o' Bannermill

DESCRIPTION: "But if ever I return again, As I do hope I will, I'll marry thee my dearest dear, Dear Jean o' Bannermill"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan7)
KEYWORDS: love parting
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1324, "Jean o' Bannermill" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #7214
NOTES [11 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan7 fragment. - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD71324

Jean o' Lona

DESCRIPTION: Jockie: Let me go; I'll be back before long to you and Lona. Jeannie: You may meet some other maid who will make you stop loving me. Jockie: "O but Jeannie wha will then Lead me doon the flowery glen"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan7)
KEYWORDS: love parting
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1325, "Jean o' Lona" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Roud #7215
File: GrD71325

Jean of Ballinagarvey

DESCRIPTION: "The first place that I saw my love was Ballymoney town..." He describes "lovely Jean's" beauty, and says that all the young men love her. He wishes he had riches to share with her. He says he will do his best to win her

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: love courting beauty
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H822, p. 239, "Jean of Ballinagarvey" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9475
File: HHH822

Jean Pirie

DESCRIPTION: The singer says it's not many days that he asked his mother "if she saw I was growin' a man." His legs and arms are too long for his breeches and coat. He stands "over sixty nine inches in hicht, And my wecht was a creelfu' o' stanes"
Jeanette and Jeannot

DESCRIPTION: "You are going far away from your poor Jeanette. There is no one left to love me now and you too may soon forget." The singer laments her lover's departure to be a soldier. She wishes she had the power to end war

AUTHOR: Words: Charles Jefferys (?) / Music: Charles William Glover (1806-1863)

EARLIEST DATE: 1847 (performance advertisements); 1849 (Journal from the Euphrasia, according to Huntington)

KEYWORDS: love separation soldier

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 245-246, "Genette and Genoe" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan1 102, "Jeannette and Jeannot" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Gl 163, "Jeanette" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1086, p. 74, "Jeannette and Jeannot" (2 references)

ST SWMS245 (Partial)
Roud #391

BROADSIDES:
LOCSheet, sm1850 481050, "Jeanette and Jeannot" or "The Conscript's Departure," A. Fiot (Philadelphia), 1850 (text and tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Henry and Mary Ann (Henry the Sailor Boy)" (tune, per broadside Bodleian Firth c.12(284))

SAME TUNE:
How Sheridan Whipped Longstreet (by John Ross Dix) ("It was just before the day break, that this famous fight began") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 62; N.B. Sheridan fought Early, not Longstreet, in the Shenandoah campaign of 1864)
The Northern Girl's Song ("You are marching to the field -- to the field of dreadful fray") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 110)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Conscript's Departure

NOTES [336 words]: Huntington's notes attribute this to Charles Glover and Charles Jeffries, and date it to the late eighteenth century. This led to a dating error in earlier versions of the Index (pointed out to me by Martin Graebe, who gave me much of the information in this entry). But it seems there is much more to say.

My sources do not agree on whether the (co-)author's last name was "Jeffreys," "Jefferys," "Jeffries," or "Jefferies." His poetry was not a great success; I have located only two other poems by him. One is a response to this, "Jeannot's Answer" (for which see Hazel Felleman The Best Loved Poems of the American People, which also contains a full text of "Jeannette and Jannot") and "We Have Lived and Loved Together" (also in Felleman). The contemporary advertisements found by Graebe spell the name "Jefferys."

Charles William Glover, the author of the tune, is easier to trace; he is also credited with the tune of "The Rose of Tralee" and possibly "Kitty Tyrrell." He seems to have been a moderately successful violinist and author of show tunes.

Graebe tells me that the 1847-1848 advertisements for this piece mention "three related songs which they grouped as 'Songs of a Conscript':"
* Jeanette's Song -- "You are going far away, far away, from poor Jeanette" (Roud #391)
* Jeannot's Song -- "Cheer up, cheer up, my own Jeannette" (Roud #13856)
* Jeanette and Jeannot, Duet -- "From the field of fight returning" (Roud #V6807), also known as The Soldier's Return
"One advert claimed 'From the Palace to the cottage, these songs will force their way everywhere; they are just the thing for a world-wide popularity.'"

There are mysterious hints that there was a "Jeanette and Jeannot" song before Glover wrote his tune, which may have been the source of Huntington's date, but I cannot point to anything concrete. - RBW, MG

Broadside Bodleian, Firth b.26(472), "Answer to Jeanette and Jeannot" ("Cheer up, cheer up my own Jeannette"), J. Wilson (Bideford), n.d. is [another version of the] sequel. - BS

Last updated in version 5.3

File: SwMS245

Jeanie with the Light Brown Hair

DESCRIPTION: "I dream of Jeanie with the light brown hair, Borne, like a vapor, on a summer's air." The singer praises her voice, her "day-dawn smile," etc., but sadly concludes, that he is "never more to find her where the bright waters flow."

AUTHOR: Stephen C. Foster

EARLIEST DATE: 1854 (sheet music by Firth, Pond & Co.)

KEYWORDS: love separation nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (5 citations):
- Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 100, "Jeanie with the Light Brown Hair" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 249, "Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair" (1 text)
- Emerson-StephenFosterAndCo, p. 53, "Jeanie with the Light Brown Hair" (1 text)
- Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, pp. 311-312, "Jeanie with the Light Brown Hair"

DT, JEANBRWN

Roud #V288

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- I Dream of Jeanie

NOTES [410 words]: Jeanie was Foster's wife, Jane McDowell Foster. Had she known the uses to which her image would be put (from hair advertisements in the 1860s to idiotic television shows a century later), I can only think she would have filed for pre-emptive divorce. (As it was, the marriage was deeply troubled.)

Legman regards "Jeanie" as an adaption (he calls it plagiarism) of "To Daunton Me," found in the Scots Musical Museum (#182). But Legman often saw kinship that others do not see; Fuld says there is "no similarity between the two songs," and I have to agree that I see no points of contact between either the text or the tune. According to Howard, p. 241, if Foster was plagiarizing anyone, it was himself; the first part of the tune of "Jeanie" is quite close to "Willie We Have Missed You," which Foster (based on his working notebook) had written slightly earlier. It appears from the notebook that Foster wrote "Jeanie" while he and his wife were separated (although Morneweck, p. 451, claims it comes from one of their reconciliations), and it seems not unlikely that he wrote it because he missed her. Howard comments that it is "one of Stephen's very few successful love songs"; otherwise, Howard suggests, Foster didn't write very well about love.

Spaeth, p. 116, says of this song, "Jeanie is the song that America discovered during those incredibly dull months when radio decided that it could get along without copyrighted music. Before that it had been considered a choice bit of rather obscure Fosteriana."

TaylorEtAl, p. 111, points out that many Foster songs have a heroine whose name was a variation on Jeanie: this song, "Little Jenny Dow," "Jenny's Coming O'er the Green," "Jenny June." Could all these be tributes to Foster's wife? It wouldn't surprise me; in "Little Jenny Dow," even the last name is reminiscent of Jane's family name McDowell.

Morneweck, pp. 451-452, says that Morrison Foster, Stephen's brother, never used the name "Jeanie" of the song, "It was always 'Jennie with the Light Brown Hair,' and Jennie you will find in Stephen Foster's original manuscript book. Jane was not called Jeanie by her family, but was often addressed by the affectionate diminutive, Jennie. It is more likely that the publishers suggested to Stephen that he change it to the more euphonious and romantic Jeanie, more appealing to public taste. But Jennie it was to Stephen, and Jennie it was to his brother Mit [i.e. Morrison]."
Jeannie and Davie

DESCRIPTION: Dialog between Davie and Jeannie. Davie: what were you thinking when you moved to my bed: "was ye tired lyin' yer lane?" Jeannie: "'Twas a' for love o' you, But I see my folly noo, It's caused me sair to rue"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Greig/Duncan7)

KEYWORDS: love sex dialog nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Greig/Duncan7 1308, "Jeannie and Davie" (1 text)

Roud #7204

File: GrD71308

---

Jeannie Johnston

DESCRIPTION: "There's a nice little girl lives down yonder lane." The singer would have Jane/Jeannie Johnston go with him.

AUTHOR: words by Harry Hunter, music by Walter Redmond (source: Greig/Duncan8)

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan8)

KEYWORDS: nonballad courting

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Greig/Duncan8 1625, "Jeannie Johnston" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

Roud #13005

File: GrD81625

---

Jeannie o' Planteenie

DESCRIPTION: Dialog. Jean, dressed as a man, asks Jamie, the shepherd, about his plans to marry. He has promised to marry someone. She encourages him to play the field. He is shocked. She reveals herself. They kiss, marry, and have "peace and plenty"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1881 (Christie)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Dialog. Stranger asks directions to Traquair. Shepherd asks what he's been about. Stranger: I've had my fill of kisses. Shepherd: I'm afraid you've left someone mourning. Stranger, changing the subject: are you married? Shepherd: No but there's one "to whom I did promise To wed her as soon as my stock I'd get free." Stranger: "Ye're foolish to bind to a woman." Shepherd: "I likit her aye since we were at ta school." Stranger: I'm in no mind to marry. I visited one girl at night when her mother was away and took her to bed. Shepherd: Curse you for that. Stranger: Why? She'd pass as a maiden with any other. Shepherd: You both deserve beating with a hazel stick. Stranger, satisfied, reveals herself as Jean. Shepherd Jamie: "Grant me a' the kisses ye have got to spare" Both: "Now we are wedded and married together"

KEYWORDS: courting love marriage cross-dressing dialog shepherd

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Jeannie's Bawbee (Your Plack and My Plack)

DESCRIPTION: "Your plack and my plack (x3), And Je(a)nnie's bawbee. "We'll put them in the pint stoup, Pint stoup, pint stoup, We'll put them in the pint stoup, And join all three." "And that was all my Jenny had... was a bawbee."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1776 (Herd)

KEYWORDS: money nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Greig/Duncan8 1873, "Jeannie's Bawbee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 67, "(Your plack and my plack)" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: David Herd, editor, Ancient and Modern Scottish Songs, Heroic Ballads, etc. (Edinburgh, 1870 (reprint of 1776)), Vol II, p. 204, "Jenny's Bawbie"

Roud #13579

NOTES [51 words]: Here's at least one case where the song surviving to be recorded in Greig/Duncan8 reaches beyond a Boswell rewrite. This is not at all [Alexander Boswell], Songs Chiefly in the Scottish Dialect (Edinburgh, 1803 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 8-10, "Jenny's Bawbee" ("I met four chaps yon birks amang") - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: MSNR067

Jeff Davis Rode a White Horse (Jeff Davis is a Gentleman)

DESCRIPTION: "Jeff Davis Rode a White Horse, Lincoln rode a mule, Jeff Davis was a gentleman, Lincoln was a fool." May be attached to floating sorts of lyrics about courting, traveling, food, etc.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Scarborough)

KEYWORDS: political Civilwar

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 387, "Jeff Davis Rode a White Horse" (1 fragment)
Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, p. 74, (no titles) (1 short text)

Roud #8813

File: Br3387

Jeff Davis's Ball

DESCRIPTION: "Far down in the South there lived Jeff Davis, He swindled his friends till they haven't a pound" and chooses secession to cure his ills. Lee invades the north and is repulsed. Many surrender rather than have to "leave their cards at Jeff Davis's ball."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales)
Jeff in Petticoats

DESCRIPTION: Jefferson Davis realizes he is in danger of capture by Union troops, and decides to dress in women's clothes to escape. The Union troops scorn him, saying, "Oh! Jeffy D. You 'flow'r of chivalree... Your empire's but a tinclad skirt...."

AUTHOR: Words: George Cooper / Music: Henry Tucker

EARLIEST DATE: 1865 (sheet music published by William Pond, according to Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar)

KEYWORDS: cross-dressing disguise escape CivilWar

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
April 2, 1865 - Robert E. Lee evacuates Richmond. The Confederate government flees
April 8, 1865 - Lee's surrender
May 10, 1865 - Capture of Jefferson Davis

REFERENCES (5 citations):
- Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 343-345, "Jeff in Petticoats" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1100, p. 75, "Jeff in Petticoats" (1 references)
- Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 151-154, "Jeff in Petticoats" (1 text)
- Gilbert-LostChords, pp. 11-12, "Jeff in Petticoats" (1 partial text)
- DT, JEFFPETT*
- Roud #V16142

NOTES [132 words]: According to Jefferson Davis's account, he was wearing a shawl his wife had given him for warmth when he was captured. Union troops claimed he was trying to disguise himself as a woman. Although Davis's account is likely true, sarcastic Unionist songwriters could hardly leave it at that.

The notes in Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar say the words to this are by Henry Tucker and the words by George Cooper, but the sheet music I have seen reverses that -- and Cooper was a lyricist and Tucker a composer, so I'm quite sure the sheet music is right.

This song was not a great success, as far as I can tell, but in 1869, Tucker and Cooper (who had started his career penning words for Stephen Foster, without writing anything any good) produced "Sweet Genevieve," which was a distinct success. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: Gil011

Jefferson and Liberty

DESCRIPTION: Campaign song for Thomas Jefferson, to the tune of a reel: "The gloomy night before us flies, The reign of terror now is o'er; Its gags, inquisitors and spies, Its hordes of harpies are no more. Rejoice, Columbia's sons... For Jefferson and liberty"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1802 (sheet music)

KEYWORDS: political nonballad

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1801-1809 - Presidency of Thomas Jefferson

REFERENCES (9 citations):
- Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster, pp. 207-209, "Jefferson and Liberty" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Grimes-StoriesFromTheAnneGrimesCollection, p. 117, "Jefferson and Liberty" (1 text)
- Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 100-101, "Jefferson and Liberty" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jefferson and Liberty

NOTES [220 words]: The Jeffersonian ideal was a nation of small, independent farmers; this is alluded to in one of the verses. The "reign of terror" refers to the Alien and Sedition Acts, two pieces of Federalist policy designed to control dissent. Both passed in 1798; the former gave the President the power to arbitrarily expel foreigners while the latter made it illegal to speak against the federal government (!). Jefferson made good on his promises after the election; all victims of the Acts were freed.

Having finally sat down to read all dozen verses of this wordy piece, I must admit that listeners would probably have wanted liberty in the form of forcing the singer to just shut up.

Although most versions of this that I've heard list it as being to a Virginia Reel (perhaps "The Gobby-O"), the sheet music described on p. 1 of Harry Dichter and Elliott Shapiro, _Early American Sheet Music: Its Lure and Its Lore, 1768-1889_, R. R. Bowker, 1941 describes the first known printing as by N. G[orien] Dufief of Philadelphia. Printed in 1802, it is described as "A new song. To the air of Jefferson's March. The words by Michael Fortune."

Also, Lawrence, in addition to a fairly normal "Jefferson and Liberty" text on p. 165, on p. 163, has a song entitled "Jefferson and Liberty" which does not appear to be the same song. - RBW

Jehovah, Hallelujah

DESCRIPTION: "Jehovah, Hallelujah, the Lord will provide (x2)." "The foxes have a hole, and the birdies have a nest, The Son of Man he dunno where to lay the weary head."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious Jesus home nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 2, "Jehovah, Hallelujah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11861

NOTES [175 words]: The phrase "The Lord will provide" is proverbial, but with an interesting twist. In Genesis 22, Abraham is commanded by God to sacrifice his only (legitimate) son Isaac. Abraham takes the boy to the land of Moriah, where Isaac asks, "Where is the lamb for the burnt offering?" Abraham answers, "God will provide." (Note the use of the word God, not Yahweh=The Lord). But as Abraham is about to murder his son, God intervenes and tells Abraham to sacrifice a ram he finds trapped instead. Abraham therefore names that place "Yahweh-Yireh," "Yahweh will provide," which in modern English versions is rendered "The Lord will provide."

The King James version, however, does not render the verse this way, reading instead, "And Abraham called the name of that place Jehovah-jireh, as it is said to this day, In the mount of the Lord it shall be seen." Thus the first verse of this song seems to be based on a mixture of the King James rendering and an accurate rendering. The second verse, about foxes having holes, derives from Matthew 8:20=Luke 9:58. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4
Jekkel Walls
DESCRIPTION: "When Jekkel walls fell down, It's no difference what I stand... Dere's someone always ready To point de finger of scorn at me." The singer says he will "soon end at home." The singer wants others to celebrate as he celebrates in heaven
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 601, "Jekkel Walls" (1 text)
Roud #11911
NOTES [31 words]: The name "Jekkel" for "Jericho" (cf. Joshua 6) is new to me -- but we find "Shorty" Love, the informant in this case, using the same pronunciation in "Christ Was a Weary Traveler." - RBW
File: Br3601

Jellon Grame [Child 90]
DESCRIPTION: (Jellon Grame) murders the woman he claims to love (because she carries his child and he fears discovery/because she loves another whose child she carries). (He/her sister) raises the boy. He later reveals the murder to the boy, who kills him.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1802 (Scott)
KEYWORDS: love pregnancy homicide revenge
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) US(SE)
REFERENCES (11 citations):
Child 90, "Jellon Grame" (4 texts)
Bronson 90, "Jellon Grame" (1 version)
Riewerts-BalladRepertoireOfAnnaGordon-MrsBrownOfFalkland, pp. 224-226, "Jellon Grame and Little Flower" (1 text)
Buchan/Moreira-TheGlenbuchatBallads, pp. 121-124, "Gil Ingram" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan2 198, "Jellon Graeme" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #1}
Davis-MoreTraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 27, pp. 207-213, "Jellon Grame" (1 text)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 284-286, "Jellon Grame" (1 text)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 196-197, "Jellon Grame" (1 text)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 49, "Jellon Grame" (1 text)
Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 55, "Jellon Grame" (1 text)
DT 90, JELGRAEM
Roud #58
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Fause Foodrage" [Child 89] (theme)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Jellon Graeme
NOTES [104 words]: Davis seems to have no doubts about the authenticity of his text, the lone representative outside Scotland of a ballad with only the weakest roots in tradition even there -- this even though, as he himself admits, it has a surprising similarity to Child A. Well, if he won't question it, I will. I'm not saying it's a fake -- but I wouldn't be surprised if it were influenced by print. David C. Fowler, A Literary History of the Popular Ballad, Duke University Press, 1968, p. 323, questions the authenticity of the whole ballad; he thinks it was made up by Anna Gordon Brown, influenced by Lady Wardlow's "Hardyknute." - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: C090

Jem of Aberdeen
DESCRIPTION: The singer loves to rove in summer with "bonnie Jem o' Aberdeen." "Wi' joy I leave my father's cot Wi' ilka sport of glen or green ... to share the jumble lot" with Jem
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1791 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 21(55))
KEYWORDS: courting nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan4 758, "Jem of Aberdeen" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #6132
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 21(55), "Jem of Aberdeen" ("The tuneful lav'rocks cheer the grove"), J. Evans (London), 1791; also Johnson Ballads fol. 8 View 1 of 2, Johnson Ballads fol. 28, "Jem of Aberdeen"
NOTES [35 words]: The second verse of the Greig/Duncan4 texts is not in the Bodleian broadsides. It is the only verse with final line different from "Wi'/Of bonnie Jem o' Aberdeen"; specifically, "Oh James is always wooing me." - BS

Jemima's Goat
DESCRIPTION: Jemima lives in Port aux Basques but roams about raiding cabbage patches. When she raids Jim Bruiser's garden, Jim sends the bill to Mr. Britten for damages. Jemima asks Britten to hide her, else Bruiser will have her put in jail.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)
KEYWORDS: rambling prison punishment food humorous animal
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
Roud #18215
RECORDINGS:
Mrs. Peter Mushrow, "Jemima's Goat" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
NOTES [27 words]: I believe the title should be "Jemima Goat," or just "Jemima," though you don't learn till almost the end of the song that Jemima is, in fact, Mr. Britten's goat. - BS

Jemmy Joneson's Whurry
DESCRIPTION: "Whei cowers biv the chimley reek, Begox! it's all a horney, For thro' the world aw wisht to keek... Aw thowt aw'd myek a voyage to Shiels lv Jemmy Joneson's whurry." The singer tells of the various sights along the trip
AUTHOR: Thomas Thompson
EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland); Thompson died 1816
KEYWORDS: ship travel
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 46-47, "Jemmy Johnson's Wherry" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST StoR046 (Partial)
Roud #3061
NOTES [29 words]: Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland calls this song by two different names: The first page labels the vessel a "wherry"; all other references are to a "whurry." - RBW

Jemmy O'Brien
DESCRIPTION: Jemmy O'Brien destroyed patriots. "With his dagger ... would he slaughter The husband, the wife, and the daughter." "The braggart he is now pulled down And all the great lawyers of the Crown Could not save poor Jemmy O'Brien!"

Jemmy O'Brien's Minuet

DESCRIPTION: "De night before Jemmy was stretch'd" "de corps of informers and spies" commiserates with him and wonder that the Major can't save such a loyalist. The hangman finds him imagining the ghosts of his victims and their wives and orphans. He is hanged.

Jenkin Jenkins

DESCRIPTION: "My name is Jenkin Jenkins, I'm a fireboss of renown, At three o'clock each morning I make my usual round." He searches the mine for gas hazards. He warns the mine bosses of problems in their areas, and tells the miners to work

Jennie P. King, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer "shipped in Tonawanda Some timber for to bring, From Toledo at a dollar a day On the barque the Jennie P. King." The singer describes the very mixed crew, Americans and Italians and Canadians and others. The voyage ends in Buffalo

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (collected from Norman Maclvor by Walton)
KEYWORDS: sailor ship travel foreigner horse
FOUND IN: Canada(Ont)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 137-139, "The Jennie P. King" (1 composite text)
Roud #19881
File: WGM137

Jennie, the Flower of Kildare

DESCRIPTION: "I am dreaming of Erin tonight and the little white cot by the sea, Where Jennie, my darling, now dwells...." The singer misses her, and is sure she is waiting for him; he hopes soon to return to Ireland to see her

AUTHOR: Words: Frank Dumont / Music: James E. Stewart
EARLIEST DATE: 1873 (sheet music)
KEYWORDS: separation reunion love Ireland
FOUND IN: US(MW,So)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Dean-FlyingCloud, p. 81, "Jennie, the Flower of Kildare" (1 text)
Hudson-FolkTunesFromMississippi 45, "Jennie, the Flower of Kildare" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1104, p. 75, "Jennie, the Flower of Kildare" (1 reference)
Roud #5767
NOTES [231 words]: Although not common in tradition, this song seems to have been popular in the 1870s; the American Memory collection at the Library of Congress has three different sheet music settings from 1873-1875, and the third one is a "transcription" -- which generally means "a stolen version rearranged a little so we can get a cut of someone else's royalties."

Frank Dumont, according to Sigmund Spaeth, A History of Popular Music in America, p. 91, reports, "Frank Dumont, originally a member of the Carncross [minstrel] company, eventually took charge of Philadelphia's Eleventh Street Opera House, which holds the record for continuous production of minstrel shows in America. Practically every star of black-face appeared there at some time in his career. Dumont himself was a versatile singer, author and compose, contributing much material to the shows of his day."

Douglas Gilbert, Lost Chords, p. 130, says of Dumont that he was "a sprightly writer of skits and lyrics. He wrote The Book Agent, a filthy vaudeville afterpiece that slopped around the dumps and slabs like stale beer. From it Charles Hoyt derived the immensely successful family farce, The Parlor Match.... Dumont wrote, too, the amazing song called "The Aesthetic Girl; or Too Utterly Utter" -- amazing not only because it is one of the extremely few satirical songs of the '80s but also because it is clever...." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.0
File: Dean071

Jenny Dang the Weaver

DESCRIPTION: "At Willie's wedding on the green ... At ilka country dance or reel," Jock the weaver insists on dancing with Jenny. Between dances he "cackled like a clockin hen," so she hits him. He proposes. She tells the fool not to annoy her and hits him (again?)

AUTHOR: Alexander Boswell (1775-1822) (source: Whitelaw)
EARLIEST DATE: 1803 (Boswell)
KEYWORDS: courting wedding rejection weaving dancing humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast "Folk-Song in Buchan," p. 15, ("Jenny dang, dang, dang") (1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan4 911, "Jenny Dang the Weaver" (1 text)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, p. 219, "Jenny Dang the Weaver" (1 text)
DT, JENNYDNG*
ADDITIONAL: [Alexander Boswell], Songs Chiefly in the Scottish Dialect (Edinburgh, 1803
Jenny Jenkins

DESCRIPTION: The young man/men try to invite Jenny to the dance by asking her what color she will wear: "Will you wear the (red), O ne'er, o ne'er, o, Will you wear the red, Jenny Jenkins?" She objects to most colors, but at last may agree to one of them

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1823

KEYWORDS: dancing questions courting rejection clothes colors

FOUND IN: US(Ap,NE,Ro,SE,So)

REFERENCES (25 citations):
- Randolph 453, "I'll Never Wear the Red Any More" (1 fragment, related to if not part of this song)
- McNeil-SouthernMountainFolksong, pp. 132-135, "Jennie Jenkins" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Arnold-FolkSongsOfAlabama, p. 85, "Jenny Jane" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 165, "Jennie Jenkins" (3 texts plus mention of 1 more, 1 tune)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 69, "Jennie Jenkins" (2 texts plus 1 excerpt and mention of 1 more)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 69, "Jennie Jenkins" (3 tunes plus text excerpts)
- Lunsford/Stringfield-30And1FolkSongsFromSouthernMountains, pp. 18-19, "Jinnie Jinkins" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Jones-MinstrelOfTheAppalachians-Bascom-Lamar-Lunsford, pp. 240-241, "Jennie Jenkins" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, p. 43, "Rover Jenny Jenkins" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #76, "Jenny Jenkins" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 129-130, "Jennie Jenkins" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 164-167, "Jennie Jenkins," "Jane Jenkins" (2 texts plus some odds and ends, 1 tune; one of the texts is from the Green Mountain Songster)
- Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 299-300, "Will You Wear the Red? or Jennie Jenkins" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 260, "Will You Wear Red?" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 39, pp. 69-71, "Jilly Jenkins" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 206-207, "Jenny Jenkins" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 118-119, "Jenny Jenkins" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Abernethy-SinginTexas, pp. 16-18, "Jennie Jenkins" (1 text, 1 tune, plus some verses from "Jeny Jones (Jennie Jo)" or some such)
- Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 15, "Jennie Jenkins" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 65, "Will You Wear Red?" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 58, p. 259, "(Jennie Jenkins)" (1 fragment)
- Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 48-49, "Jenny Jenkins" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, p. 11, "Jenny Jenkins" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 346, "Jeny Jenkins" (1 text)

DT, JJENKINS JJENKIN2

Roud #731

RECORDINGS:
- E. C. & Orna Ball, "Jennie Jenkins" (AFS 8, 1941; on LC02 [the latter listed as by Mr & Mrs. Estil C. Ball])
- Warde Ford, "Jinnie Jenkins" (AFS 4198 B4, 1938; tr.; in AMMEM/Cowell)
Jenny Jones (Jennie Jo)

DESCRIPTION: "We've come to see (Miss) (Jenny/Ginnie/Jennia) (Jones/Jan), Miss Jenny Jones, Miss Jenny Jones, We've come to see... And how is she today?" Mother answers she is busy/sick/dead. The discuss what color she shall wear

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1842 (Robert Chambers, _Popular Rhymes of Scotland_, according to Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)

KEYWORDS: playparty disease courting children colors

FOUND IN: Britain(England,Scotland(Aber)) US(MA,MW,NE,SE,So) Canada(Ont) Ireland West Indies(Jamaica) New Zealand

REFERENCES (18 citations):
- Greig/Duncan 1597, "Georgina" (1 text)
- Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 77, "Jinny Jan" (1 text)
- Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 26-30, "Jennia Jones" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong 20, "Jenny Jo" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #121, "Miss Jennie Jones" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Opie-TheSingingGame 58, "Jenny Jones" (4 texts, 1 tune)
- Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #11, "Miss Jennia Jones" (1 text plus excerpts); #174, "Miss Jenny Jones" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, pp. 132-133, "Miss Jennie O. Jones" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Carawan/Carawan-AintYouGotARight, p. 111, "Water My Flowers" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolkloré5, p. 508, "Jennie Jones" (1 short text, 1 tune)
- Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 226, "I've Been to See Miss Jenny-Mae-Jo" (1 text)
- Abernethy-SinginTexas, pp. 16-18, "Jennie Jenkins" (1 text, 1 tune, plus some verses from "Jenny Jones (Jennie Jo)" or some such)
- Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, pp. 27-28, "(We've come to see Jenny Jones, Jenny Jones)" (1 text plus variants)
- JournalOfAmericanFolklore, Jean Olive Heck, "Folk Poetry and Folk Criticism, as Illustrated by Cincinnati Children in Their Singing Games and Their Thoughts about These Games," Vol. XL, No. 155 (Jan 1927), #7 pp. 11-12 ("We come to see Miss Jennia Jones") (1 text)
- JournalOfAmericanFolklore, F.W. Waugh, "Canadian Folk-Lore from Ontario," Vol. XXXI, No. 119 (Jan 1918), #633 pp. 50-51 ("We come to see Miss Jenny Ann Jones") (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Martha Warren Beckwith and Helen Roberts, _Folk-Games of Jamaica_ (Poughkeepsie: Vassar College, 1922 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")) #36 pp. 45-46, "I Come to See Jennie" (1 text, 1 tune)

Olive Lewin, "Rock It Come Over" - _The Folk Music of Jamaica_ (Barbados: The University of the West Indies Press, 2000), pp. 67-68, "I Come to See Janie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Olive Lewin, Forty Folk Songs of Jamaica (Washington: General Secretariat of the Organization of American States, 1973), pp. 49-51, "Come to See Janie" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #1047

RECORDINGS:
Janie Hunter and her children, "Water My Flowers" (BeenStorm1)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Jinny Jan
Ginny Jones
Jenny Ann Jones
We've Come to See Miss Jennie Jones

NOTES [114 words]: Newell and Linscott both trace the name of this song to "Jennie Jo," a title which survives in Scotland. Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, whose version describes Jennia's death and is a discussion of the clothes in which she shall be buried, ends with Jennia coming to life and trying to snatch one of the audience, who then becomes her mother for the next round of the game.

Paul Stamler asks if, given the catalog of colors mentioned in the song, it might not be somehow connected with "Jenny Jenkins." I see his point, but this song feels very different somehow -- in this song, our heroine is never even seen. Sort of Jenny Jenkins meets the mother in "The Lass of Roch Royal." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
File: Lins026

Jenny Marshall's Candy O

DESCRIPTION: "When going along the Nethergate, There's naught can be so handy o As drapping in to get a stick of Jenny Marshall's candy, O." The candy is not expensive. Men and women both come to buy it

AUTHOR: Robert Leighton (1822-1869) (source: Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)

EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Martin, Dundee Worthies, according to Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)

KEYWORDS: food nonballad

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 47, "Jenny Marshall's Candy O" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: Gath047

Jenny Nettles

DESCRIPTION: Have you seen Jenny Nettles coming from the market, baggage on her back, wages in her lap, and baby under her arm? The singer meets her singing to her baby, Robin Rattle's bastard. To flee the grief and mocking, she seeks Robin to put it under his arm.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1733 (Ramsay)

KEYWORDS: grief sex nonballad bastard

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1725, "Jeanie Nettle" (2 texts, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: David Herd, editor, Ancient and Modern Scottish Songs, Heroic Ballads, etc. (Edinburgh, 1870 (reprint of 1776)), Vol II, p. 60, "Jenny Nettles"
James Johnson, Editor, _The Scots Musical Museum_ [1853 edition], volume I, #52, p. 53, "Jenny Nettles" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST GrD81725 (Partial)
Roud #2581

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.14(115), "Robin Rattle's Bastard" ("Saw ye Jenny Nettles"), William Anderson
NOTES [156 words]: The description follows Herd's version. Ramsay adds a verse shaming Robin Rattle and saying "without mair debate o't," take home your baby and make Jenny happy. The broadside form is Ramsay's. Broadsides NLScotland L.C.Fol.178.A.2(001) and Bodleian 2806 c.14(115) are duplicates.

"...in the middle of a moor near Kilgour, is the grave of Jenny Nettles, who has given name to a lively Scotch air and an old song, beginning, 'Saw ye Jennie Nettles coming through the market.' The unfortunate heroine was a native of Falkland, and famed for her great beauty. When Rob Roy took possession of Falkland after the battle of Sheriffmuir [1715], one of his soldiers courted Jenny and then deserted her, and she, in a fit of despair, hanged herself on a tree at the side of the road, about half-way between Falkland and Strathmigle." (source: The History and Scenery of Fife and Kinross (Edinburgh, 1875 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 108-109) - BS

File: GrD81725

Jenny Penny

DESCRIPTION: Insults in rhyme to those who are skinny. "Jenny penny, Stick, stenny, Cry old bobtail, Skinny old Jenny."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)

KEYWORDS: playparty

FOUND IN: New Zealand

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 130, (Jenny penny)" (1 short text)

File: SuSm130B

Jenny Saviour, The

DESCRIPTION: Francis Kenny ships on Jenny Saviour "to fish the banks of Newfoundland." Near Sable Island he is swept overboard in a gale. The crew see him drown: "it was too rough to lower a boat for his young life to save"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick)

KEYWORDS: drowning fishing sea ship storm

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 115, "The Jenny Saviour" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST CrSNB115 (Partial)

Roud #2783

NOTES [20 words]: Sable Island, Nova Scotia, about 23 miles long, is about 110 miles, at its nearest point, from the Nova Scotia coast. - BS

File: CrSNB115

Jenny Wren Bride

DESCRIPTION: "I've just come away from the wedding... I'll never forget the relations I met When I married by Jenny Wren bride." The family gives the bride gifts liberated from the dockyards where they work. Some in the pews hint at too-close relations with the bride

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)

KEYWORDS: sailor wedding marriage derivative theft

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, pp. 72-73. "Jenny Wren Bride" (1 text, tune referenced)
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 175-176, "Jenny Wren Bride" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brand-BawdySeaSong 10, "Jinny Wren Bride" (1 text)
Roud #8345
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "My Bonnie Lies over the Ocean" (tune)
File: Tawn056

Jeremiah of Bartibogue

DESCRIPTION: Jeremiah from Bartibogue gets a job at Billy Muirhead's saw-mill in Chatham. He dresses "to the tip of fashion" He takes up politics, unsuccessfully. He is "forced to leave Chatham" and falls "to this low station, Cooking for Casey on Sprigman's Hill"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi)
KEYWORDS: vanity clothes work humorous political cook
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi 24, "Jeremiah of Bartibogue" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST MaWi024 (Partial)

Roud #9190
NOTES [130 words]: Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi: "The official spelling of this river and settlement is Bartibog, but the old inhabitants spell it Bartibogue, and it is so pronounced." - BS
Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi also note that, while the author of this is unknown, it "resembled Martin Sullivan's productions." Sullivan also wrote "The Bluebird."
The song lists Jeremiah as supporting Peter Mitchell. Mitchell was a New Brunswick legislator who became a Father of Confederation, so presumably the song was written in the second half of the nineteenth century. Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi, p. 35, claims that the following jingle comes from the period 1880-1890:
Michael Adams tall and thin,
He's the man you can't put in.
Peter Mitchell short and stout,
He's the man you can't put out. - RBW

File: MaWi024

Jerry Ryan

DESCRIPTION: "Now all you young men who go chopping, ... I was working With that foreman, well known Jerry Ryan." Work is scarce, so the boys go logging in Bishop's Falls. The price is low for scrub spruce; the charge exorbitant for saw, board, and doctor fees.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (Doyle-OldTimeSongsAndPoetryOfNewfoundland, 3rd edition)
KEYWORDS: lumbering ordeal hardtimes logger
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Peacock, pp. 748-749, "Gerry Ryan" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 58, "Jerry Ryan" (1 text, 1 tune)
Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, p. 118, "The Foreman, Well-Known Jerry Ryan" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4414
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Twin Lakes" (theme)
File: Doyl3068

Jerry, Go and Ile that Car [Laws H30]

DESCRIPTION: Larry Sullivan has spent forty years maintaining the railroads; he is proud of the state of the tracks and of never having had a wreck. As he lies dying, he asks to be buried by the tracks. His last words are, "Jerry, go and ile that car."

AUTHOR: (credited by Loomis to "Riley the Bum")
EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (article by Charles F. Loomis with Arthur G. Wells)
Jerry's Account of a Junket

DESCRIPTION: "Did y'ever go to a 'Junket,' A thing very common of late.... Then the boys and the girls meet together...." The poem describes the music and the games they play, and describes how very late it runs as the young people court

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1825 (Lincoln _Intelligencer_, according to Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster)

KEYWORDS: party courting music dancing nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster pp. 265-269, "Jerry's Account of a Junket" (1 text)

ST FING265 (Partial)

File: FING265

Jersey Boy

DESCRIPTION: "Jersey Boy, 'tis you I call, Invitation free to all, The road is wide, the pathway clear, Jersey Boy, come volunteer. Apple cider, ginger beer, Christmas comes but once a year. The road is wide, the pathway clear, Jersey boy, come volunteer."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (Wolford-PlayPartyInIndiana)

KEYWORDS: playparty food drink nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Wolford-PlayPartyInIndiana, p. 61=Wolford/Richmond/Tillson-PlayPartyInIndiana, p. 230, "Jersey Boy" (1 text)

Roud #7898
Jersey-Blue Handkerchief

DESCRIPTION: Isabella, the "Maid of Cooper's Creek ... was courted by a Jerseyman -- she longed to be his bride." He leaves her for one "far prettier" She is left broken hearted at Billy Cooper's "vith a Jersey-blue handkerchief tied under her chin"

AUTHOR: S. S. Sanford (Source: Wolf)
EARLIEST DATE: before 1879 (broadside, LOCsinging sb20228b)
KEYWORDS: courting infidelity love abandonment clothes parody
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1111, p. 76, "Jersey-Blue Handkerchief" (2 references)
Roud #V7830
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 18(659), "Jersey-Blue Handkerchief" ("Come all you yifes and maidens, and attention give to me"), H. De Marsan (New York), 1864-1878
LOCsinging, sb20228b, "Jersey-Blue Handkerchief," H. De Marsan (New York), 1864-1878
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Bonny Blue Handkerchief" (basis for parody)
NOTES [82 words]: This is a parody of "The Bonny Blue Handkerchief," complete with "foreign" accent (for example, "yifes and maidens," "vith a Jersey-blue handkerchief," "'Tis ob the Maid," and so on).
Broadsides LOCsinging sb20228b and Bodleian Harding B 18(659) are duplicates. - BS

Jerusalem Morning (Sweet Turtle Dove)

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Jerusalem morning (x2) by the light, Don't you hear Gabriel's trumpet in that morning." Verses: a member took his/her seat, Wants all the members to follow." "Sweet turtle dove sings so sweet, Muddy the water, so deep."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1874 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: Bible nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, pp. 164-165, "Sweet Turtle Dove, or Jerusalem Mornin"
Roud #15227
NOTES [186 words]: In Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute's verses, every verse ends "And we had a little meeting in the morning, To hear Gabriel's trumpet sound."

While [the New Testament] says "at the last trump ... the trumpet shall sound" (1 Corinthians 15:52 (King James)), I don't know that Gabriel is blowing it. [Indeed, the Bible never says so, but the non-canonical book(s) of Enoch make much of Gabriel, and he became important in tradition; see George Arthur Buttrick et al, editor], The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible, four volumes, 1962 (a fifth supplementary volume was published later), volume II, p. 333). I don't know the source of the legend that Gabriel will sound the last trumpet, but it is widespread. - RBW]
I also don't understand the turtle dove reference in this context; maybe it is about Jeremiah's statement (8:7), foreseeing the fall of Judah: "Yea, the stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed times: and the turtle (dove) and the crane and the swallow observe the time of their coming; but my people knoweth not the judgment of the Lord" (King James). - BS

Last updated in version 5.0

File: BdJeBlHa

File: Dett164
Jerusalem, My Happy Home (Long Sought Home)

DESCRIPTION: "Jerusalem, my happy home, When shall I come to thee?" (Or "Oh how I long for thee."). The glories of the heavenly city are described, and the people to be found there listed.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Ault); version from c. 1601 in "The Song of Mary"

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain US(SE)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Morris-FolksongsOfflorida, #92, "Long Sought Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Norman Ault, _Elizabethan Lyrics From the Original Texts_, pp. 325-328, "Jerusalem, My Happy Home" (1 text)
John Julian, editor, _A Dictionary of Hymnology_, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes), pp. 580-583, "Jerusalem, my happy home" (with portions of at least six texts, notably "A Song Mad (sic.) by F: B: P. To the tune of Diana ["Hierusalem my happie home"]; excerpts from "W. Prid's hymn on The New Jerusalem [excerpt, "Psalme of Zion. 'O Mothere deare Hierusalem'"]; a Rawlinson broadside {"Jerusalem, my happy home"], a text from William Burkitt, and one from Williams & Boden)

Roud #5053

NOTES [560 words]: This is one of those pieces with a very difficult history. The printing in _A Song of Mary_ dates probably from 1601, and is anonymous; there is a different version in British Museum Add. MS. 15225, dated paleographically to around 1600. This latter is signed "F. B. P," or just possibly "J. B. P.," which perhaps refers to a presbyter, or perhaps a "pater" (father=priest, if the original is Catholic) with the initials F. B. or J. B. (see John Julian, editor, _A Dictionary of Hymnology_, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes), p. 1656, who notes that the initials J. B. have been thought to be those of one John Brereley, properly known as Lawrence Anderton, but a closer examination of the manuscript seems to confirm the reading "F. B. P."). This is probably earlier than the _Song of Mary_ text, since it has 104 lines, to 76 in the _Song of Mary_ version.

It has been claimed that the text is loosely based on St. Augustine. Since no one cites an actual "passage" in Augustine, this is hard to prove. (We should note that Augustine is one of the people listed as being found in heaven in the text, so he probably isn't responsible for that part of the poem!) It is true that the sprawling W. Prid text (176 lines), some of the added material is from Augustine, and some, according to Julian, a bad paraphrase of the Song of Songs. This does not mean that the original is Augustinian.

The images of Jerusalem itself are largely from the Apocalypse -- e.g. the buildings of precious stones (Rev. 21:19f.), the gates of pearl (Rev. 21:21), the streets of gold (also 21:21).

Most of the characters in the song (David; "Our Lady"; [Mary] Magdalen; Simeon, for whom see Luke 2:25 and following; Zachary=Zacharias, for whom see esp. Luke 1:67 and following) are Biblical, but Ambrose is Bishop Ambrose of Milan, who lived in the time of the emperor Theodosius the Great (died 395), and Augustine (who is not really someone you'd want to meet, the stuck-up predestinarian prig) slightly later.

The original poem, of eighteen or so stanzas, is really rather pedestrian, and few anthologies print it in full. But the first few verses are popular.

Popular enough, in fact, to have been heavily adapted, and from there the waters get muddy. The song appears in the Sacred Harp hymnals, in very short and adapted form, as "Long Sought Home." The Original Sacred Harp, in fact, attributes it to "Francis Baker Priest, about 1750," (note the initials F.B.P.) which tells you how much its attributions are worth! Similarly, the Primitive Baptist Hymnal credits it to Cowper. The music is credited, both in the Sacred Harp and the Christian Harmony, to William Bobo (1865). For more on the question of authorship, see Julian, pp. 580-583, who devotes four pages of small print to the question.

Julian, p. 1574, mentions a Latin translation, "O domus, Hierusalem! beata," and a rewrite with the title "Jerusalem, my glorious home."

Julian also mentions another hymn with the title "Jerusalem! My happy home," which is also of dubious authorship. But since it does not appear to have been traditional, let's not get into its history....

According to William Reynolds, _Companion to Baptist Hymnal_, Broadman Press, 1976, p. 120, the tune the Baptists use for this is "Sweet Land of Rest," which was adapted by Annabel Morris Buchanan. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1

File: NrecJMHH
Jervis Bay, The

DESCRIPTION: "It was a bleak November morning With a convoy underway, When they sighted a German raider From the tops of the Jervis Bay." The little Jervis Bay goes into action against the German. "On her decks lay dead and dying," but the convoy is saved

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1984 (Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs)

KEYWORDS: navy battle death sailor

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Nov. 5 - 1940 - The sinking of the Jervis Bay

FOUND IN: Britain(England(All))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 150, "The Jervis Bay" (1 text, 1 tune)
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy 65, "The Jervis Bay" (1 text, tune referenced)

Roud #16876

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Suvla Bay" (tune, according to Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)

NOTES [644 words]: The Jervis Bay was originally a liner of about 14,000 tons -- although not a fast one; her top speed was just 15 knots. She was built in 1922 for the Australian Commonwealth Line, running between Australia and Britain. She went through several owners over the next decade and a half (Paine, p. 273).

In 1939, she was taken over by the British government to serve as an armed merchant cruiser; she was fitted with eight 6" guns (Paine, p. 274) -- an armament that would put her at the low end of the light cruiser range, but a light cruiser would have had at least some armor and would have been at least twice as fast. Plus, according to Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 42, the guns were 40 years old, so they can't have been accurate or easy to serve. She was simply not fit to serve as a warship -- but the British were so short of escort craft in the early years of World War II that she was the sole escort of a convoy of some three dozen merchant ships with even less combat ability than Jervis Bay.

The convoy was about halfway between Newfoundland and the British Isles when the events in this song took place (there map on p. 125 of Koop/Schmolke). The Admiral Scheer had entered the North Atlantic via the Denmark Strait between Greenland and Iceland and sailed south (Koop/Schmolke, p. 124). The first enemies she met, five days later, was Convoy HX.4, escorted by the Jervis Bay.

The ship is wrong to say that the Jervis Bay encountered a battle ship. The Admiral Scheer was the second of the so-called "pocket battleships" -- ships which Germany originally called "armored ships" and later re-classified as cruisers (Worth, p. 51). But they were extremely heavy cruisers (for a description, see "The Sinking of the Graf Spee") -- their secondary armament was as heavy as the Jervis Bay's main armament, and the Admiral Scheer was about ten knots faster, as well. For the Jervis Bay to fight the Scheer was simply suicide -- but if someone didn't fight, the whole convoy would be destroyed. So Captain S. E. Fogarty Fegen ordered the Jervis Bay to attack while the convoy scattered. It was hopeless, but by going straight for the Scheer, and keeping his ship between the Scheer and the convoy, he would buy time.

A little time. The battle began around 3:00 p.m., and within fifteen minutes, the Jervis Bay had lost power. Fegen himself had had his legs blown apart in the first hit from Scheer, but reportedly kept command of the ship, and even dragged himself to one of the guns when it was no longer possible to command from the ruined bridge (von der Porten, p. 139). In the end, 190 of the Jervis Bay's 259 crew, including Fegen, were dead (Paine, p. 274; Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 44, says that there were 65 survivors). But even that little time -- von der Porten, p. 139, estimates it was 22 minutes -- helped. The Admiral Scheer managed to sink five other members of the convoy, totaling about 33,000 tons (Koop/Schmolke, p. 125), but that meant that more than thirty ships survived. Fegen was posthumously awarded the Victoria Cross (Paine, p. 274).

The survivors of the Jervis Bay were rescued by the Swedish freighter Stureholm (Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 44) The heroism of the Jervis Bay evidently became quite well-known; Tawney says he found five versions of this song, making it among the best-known songs in his collection.

This wasn't the end of the Scheer's cruise; the pocket battleships had very long range. She in fact made it all the way to Madagascar (there is a map on p. 43 of Zetterling/Tamelander), but this is the event for which the voyage is best remembered. Theodor Kranke, who commanded the Scheer (Becker, p. 204), was promoted to admiral not long after -- although he was given the unenviable assignment of being the navy's liaison to Hitler, which is not a job I would want! - RBW
Bibliography

- Becker: Cajus Becker, Hitler's Naval War, (German edition 1971; English edition 1974 from Macdonald and Jane's; I used the undated Kensington paperback edition)
- Von der Porten: Edward P. Von der Porten, The German Navy in World War II (with a Foreword by Karl Donitz), Galahad Books, 1969
- Worth: Richard Worth, Fleets of World War II, Da Capo, 2001

Last updated in version 5.1
File: PaSe150

Jesse Cole

DESCRIPTION: Fragment: "To one and all both great and small, the story I'll unfold/It makes me sad to think about the doom of Jesse Cole"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Cecil Sharp collection)
KEYWORDS: grief death
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 195, "Jesse Cole" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #3615
NOTES [49 words]: The text reprinted in the "Description" field is all that Sharp printed. - PJS
It's probably just coincidence, but it occurs to me that the maiden name of Jesse James's mother was Zerelda Cole. Could this somehow be tied in with the Jesse James legend? It's a low probability, to be sure.... - RBW
File: ShAp2195

Jesse James (I) [Laws E1]

DESCRIPTION: Jesse James's career is briefly described, with praise given to his (alleged) acts of charity. The story of James's murder is then told, focusing on the treachery of Robert Ford, "the dirty little coward that shot 'Mister Howard.'"

AUTHOR: unknown (many versions claim to be written by Billy Gashade)
EARLIEST DATE: 1887 (Comic and Sentimental Songs)
KEYWORDS: outlaw death
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Apr 4, 1882 - Shooting of Jesse James (then in semi-retirement under the name of Howard) by Robert Ford, a relative and a former member of his gang tempted by the $10,000 reward
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,So,SE)
REFERENCES (43 citations):
Laws E1, Jesse James (I)
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 97-116, "Jesse James" (2 texts, 1 tune, plus sundry excerpts from various Jesse James songs and copies of two sheet music covers)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 401-404, "Jesse James" (3 texts, of which only the first is this song)
Randolph 132, "Jesse James" (6 texts plus an excerpt, 6 tunes, but Laws refers the B version to Laws E2; the excerpt "C" may also go there)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 146-148, "Jesse James" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 132F)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 243, "Jesse James" (4 texts plus 3 excerpts and mention of 3 more; of these, the "A" and "B" texts are certainly this, and probably "G" also though it has wandered far; "I" is "Jesse James (II)"

Abrahams/Riddle - ASingerAndHerSongs, pp. 11-13, "Jesse James" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Schinhan - FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 243, "Jesse James" (2 excerpts, 2 tunes)
Chappell - FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 112, "Jesse James" (1 fragment, placed here by Laws although it's not typical of the type)
Jones - MinstrelOfTheAppalachians-Bascom-Lamar-Lunsford, pp. 218-219, "Jesse James" (1 text, 1 tune)

Hudson - FolksongsOfMississippi 99, pp. 235-237, "Jesse James" (2 texts plus a fragment and mention of 3 more; the "B" text and "C" fragment are Laws E1; the "A" text is Laws E2)
Moore/Moore - BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 167, "Jesse James" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens - TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 112-116, "Jessie James" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens - TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 78-80, "Jessie James" (1 text, 1 tune)

Finger - FrontierBallads, p. 57, "Jesse James" (a copy of a Wehman broadside); pp. 58-59, "Jesse James" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cambiare - EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads, pp. 17-18, "Jesse James" (1 text)
Bush - FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol1, pp. 58-59, "Jesse James" (1 fragment, 1 tune, probably this) Rosenbaum - FolkVisionsAndVoices, pp. 196-197, "Jesse James" (1 text, 1 tune, much removed from the common versions and with a chorus derived from "John Brown's Body")
Gardner/Chickering - BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 139, "Jesse James" (1 short text without a chorus plus mention of 1 more, 1 tune)

Stout - FolkloreFromIowa 87, pp. 109-110, "Jesse James" plus 3 fragments
Welsch - NebraskaPioneerLore, pp. 37-40, "Jesse James" (1 text, 1 tune)

Larkin - SingingCowboy, pp. 154-157, "Jesse James" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leach - TheBalladBook, pp. 753-755, "Jesse James" (3 texts)
Leach - HeritageBookOfBallads, pp. 148-149, "Jesse James" (1 text)
Friedman - Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 377, "Jesse James" (2 texts, but only the first is this ballad; Laws lists the second as Jesse James III, deE44)
Sandburg - TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 374-375, "I Went Down to the Depot" (1 text, 1 tune, heavily folk processed); 420-421, "Jesse James" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax - FolkSongUSA 80, "Jesse James" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax - FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 183, "Jesse James" (1 text, 1 tune, which Laws places here but which is noticeably different from most other texts of this type)

Lomax/Lomax - AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 128-131, "Jesse James" (2 texts, 1 tune, but only the first is this ballad; the second is Jesse James II, Laws E2)
Burt - AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 191-192, "(Jesse James)" (1 excerpt)
Fife/Fife - CowboyAndWesternSongs 93, "Jesse James" (5 texts, 2 tunes, of which the "A" and "B" texts are Laws E1 and the others are distinct)

Tinsley - HeWasSingingThisSong, pp. 168-173, "Jesse James" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pound - AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 64, pp. 145-146, "Jesse James"; p. 146, "Jesse James" (2 texts)
Cox - FolkSongsSouth 44, "Jesse James" (1 text)
Cohen - AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 370-372 "Jesse James" (1 text plus a sheet music cover of a different Jesse James song)
Shay - BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, p. 42-43, "Jesse James" (1 text, 1 tune)
Seeger - AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 36, "Jesse James" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gilbert - LostChords, pp. 190-191, "Jesse James" (1 text)
Pankake/Pankake - PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 273, "Jesse James" (1 text)
Silber/Silber - FolksingersWordbook, p. 202, "Jesse James" (1 text)

Saffel - CowboyPoetry, p. 188-189, "Jesse James" (1 text)
DT 619, JESSJAME*

Roud #2240

RECORDINGS:
Bentley Ball, "Jesse James" (Columbia A3085, 1920)
Bill Bender (The Happy Cowboy), "Jesse James" (Asch 410-2/Stinson 410-2/Varsity 5141, n.d., rec. 1939)
Fiddlin' John Carson, "Jesse James" (OKeh 45139, 1927)
Bascom Lamar Lunsford, "Jesse James" (OKeh 40155, 1924) (LOC AAFS 97/AAFS L20)
Ken Maynard, "Jesse James" (1930, unissued; on RoughWays1)
Harry McClintock, "Jesse James" (Victor 21420, 1928; on WhenIWas2)
Clayton McMichen's Georgia Wildcats, "Jesse James" (Decca 5710, 1939)
Riley Puckett, "Jesse James" (Columbia 15033-D, 1925)
George Reneau, "Jesse James" (Vocalion 14897, 1924)
Almeda Riddle, "Jesse James" [fragment] (on Lomax CD1705)
Pete Seeger, "Jesse James" (on PeteSeeger16)
Ernest Thompson, "Jesse James" (Columbia 145-D, 1924)
Marc Williams, "Jesse James" (Brunswick 269, 1928)
Fields Ward, Glen Smith & Wade Ward, "Jesse James" (on HalfCen1)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Jesse James (II)" [Laws E2]
cf. "Jesse James (III)"
cf. "The Death of Jesse James"
cf. "Jesse James (IV)"
cf. "Jesse James (VI -- 'I Wonder Where My Poor Old Jesse's Gone')"
cf. "Cooper Milton" (lyrics)
SAME TUNE:
Jesus Christ (by Woody Guthrie) (Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, pp. 301-302; DT, JESUSCHR)
Ballad of Medgar Evers (RECORDING, SNCC Freedom Singers, on VoicesCiv)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Oh, People Ain't You Sorry
NOTES [230 words]: It should probably be noted that Jesse James (1847-1882) wasn't as nice a person as this song depicts. He began his career with Quantrill's raiders (today we would say "terrorists"), and his behavior never improved much except that he eventually began to seek a more permanent residence.
"Thomas Howard" was the name used by James when he settled down in Saint Joseph, Missouri. It was not a "retirement name"; he was still committing robberies when he died. The "Billy Gashade" mentioned in some texts as the author is unknown (the name "Billy Lashade" occurs in the 1887 songster text, for which see Cohen-LongSteelRail).
This version is the "standard" Jesse James song, usually beginning "Jesse James was a lad who killed many a man, He robbed the Glendale train." The usual chorus runs, "(Poor) Jesse had a wife to mourn for his life, Three children, they were brave. But the dirty little coward who shot Mister Howard Has laid Jesse James in his grave."
For full background on Frank and Jesse James, see the notes to "Jesse James (III)," the James song which has perhaps the strongest factual basis. - RBW
In 1955 I heard a Black man in Harlem -- in his eighties I believe -- who sang the standard verses to Jesse James with this chorus: "Oh Jesse, goodbye Jesse, Farewell Jesse James, I'm going round the bend and expect to come again, To see Jesse James in his grave." - BS
Last updated in version 6.1
File: LE01

Jesse James (II) [Laws E2]
DESCRIPTION: The song starts with an account of James's robbery of the Pittsfield bank. The account of the murder is circumstantial and unflattering. James is planning a robbery; he knocks down his wife's picture; Robert Ford shoots him in the back AUTHOR: Words: Roger Lewis? Music: F. Henri Klickmann?
EARLIEST DATE: 1911
KEYWORDS: outlaw robbery death marriage
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Apr 4, 1882 - Shooting of Jesse James (then in semi-retirement under the name of Howard) by Robert Ford, a relative and a former member of his gang tempted by the $10,000 reward
FOUND IN: US(Ap,So,SE) Canada(Ont)
REFERENCES (12 citations):
Laws E2, "Jesse James II"
Randolph 132, "Jesse James" (of Randolph's 6 texts plus 1 excerpt, Laws considers only Randolph's "B" text and tune to belong to E2, though the excerpt "C" is apparently also part of it)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 243, "Jesse James" (4 texts plus 3 excerpts and mention of 3 more; of these, only "I" is this song; "A," "B," and probably "G" are "Jesse James (I)"
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 99, pp. 235-237, "Jesse James" (2 texts plus a fragment and mention of 3 more; the "A" text is Laws E2; the "B" text and "C" fragment are Laws E1)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 128-131, "Jesse James" (2 texts, 1 tune, but only the second text, to the tune of Casey Jones, is this ballad; the first text and tune is Jesse James I, Laws E1)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol1, pp. 56-58, "Jesse James" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 192-193, "(Jessey James)" (1 text)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 93, "Jesse James" (5 texts, 2 tunes; this is the "D" text)
Abrahams/Foss-AngloAmericanFolksongStyle, pp. 130-131, "Jesse James" (1 text, 1 tune)
McNeil-SouthernFolkBalladsVol1, pp. 60-65, "Jesse James" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 93, "Jesse James" (5 texts, 2 tunes, of which the "C" text is Laws E2 and the others are distinct)
DT 620. JESSJAM3*
Roud #2241
RECORDINGS:
Frank Luther, "The Death of Jesse James" (Conqueror 7377, 1929)
George Reneau [actually sung by Gene Austin], (Vocalion 14897, 1924; on RoughWays2)
The Vagabonds, "The Death of Jesse James" (Montgomery Ward M-4443, 1934)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Jesse James (I)" [Laws E1] and references there
NOTES [209 words]: Much more even-handed than the commonly-found Jesse James ballad, this song shows James as he really was: A robber whose deeds caused people in their homes to "shake with fright" when they heard of them.
Cohen and McNeil both report that this piece was copyrighted on April 3, 1911 by Klickmann and Lewis, then on May 15 by Will Rossiter. McNeil believes the Klickman/Lewis claim of authorship to be legitimate; Norm Cohen (more probably in my opinion) thinks they cashed in on an existing piece. The Klickman/Lewis words can be sung to the tune of "Casey Jones," and the text been collected with that melody, although that is not the tune indicated in the original sheet music.
McNeil gives a third melody as well.
Laws lists the characteristic opening verse/chorus of this song as:
Now people may forget a lot of famous names
But every nook and corner knows of Jesse James.
They used to read about him in their homes at night;
When the wind blew down the chimney they would shake with fright.
However, it appears that the most characteristic first line is "Way down in Missouri lived a bold bad man."
For full background on Frank and Jesse James, see the notes to "Jesse James (III)," the James song which has perhaps the strongest factual basis. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File: LE02

Jesse James (III)

DESCRIPTION: Jesse's home life is described: "His mother she was elderly; his father was a preacher." Bob Ford, described as an inept train robber, is shown in consultation with the governor. Ford kills James, but is shot by a drunken cowboy
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)
KEYWORDS: outlaw death betrayal family
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Apr 4, 1882 - Shooting of Jesse James (then in semi-retirement under the name of Howard) by Robert Ford, a relative and a former member of his gang tempted by the $10,000 reward
1892 - Robert Ford is killed in a barroom brawl in Creede, Colorado
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 401-404, "Jesse James" (3 texts, of which only the third is this song)
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 377, "Jesse James" (2 texts, but only the second is this ballad; the first is "Jesse James (I)" [Laws E1])
ADDITIONAL: William A. Settle, Jr., _Jesse James Was His Name_ (Bison Books edition, 1977), [used as a key to the Table of Contents and quoted at the head of each chapter]
ST FR379 (Partial)
Roud #7819
CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf."Jesse James (I)" [Laws E1] and references there
NOTES [7579 words]: This ballad includes several accurate details of James's life not found in most of the other Jesse James songs: The fact that his mother had her arm blown off (by Pinkertons in 1875); "Governor C"=Governor Crittenden; and the fact that Robert Ford also died by gunfire.
The amount of literature on the James Gang astonishes me; it appears that at least four allegedly serious books were published just in the period 1980-2000, with many more before that. Many of these, however, appear to be pretty bad. A few -- Settle and Yeatman -- strike me as far more reliable than the vast mass; they have been my main sources for what follows.
The James Boys certainly were not born to be criminals; Yeatman, pp. 25-27, gives a rather impressive family history. Their father, Robert Salee James (c. 1818-1850) was the son of a Virginia Baptist minister, John W. James (Brant, p. 4). John James died when Robert was nine, and he and his siblings moved in with their older sister, the newly-married Mary James Mimms (Brant, p. 5). Mary Mimms was the mother of the future wife of Jesse James.
Robert Salee James, despite being an orphan, managed an impressive education. He earned a B.A. in classics in 1843, and picked up a Masters in 1848. His library was not overly large, but in addition to theology, Latin, and Greek, it included volumes on mathematics, chemistry, astronomy, and philosophy (Settle, p. 7). In 1841, he married 16-year-old Zerelda Cole, who was blessed with a fairly substantial inheritance. (In case you're wondering -- no, the name Zerelda is "not" Biblical. It appears to be a family name in the Cole family, though I've seen no explanation of how it arose.) The young couple moved to Clay County, Missouri, in 1842. Family tradition said it was love at first sight (so Jesse James Jr. on p. 8 of Dellinger).
Their residence in Clay County is significant. It's just east of Kansas City (the county seat is Liberty), and the settlers were mostly from border slave states like Tennessee. At the time of Lincoln's election in 1860, over a quarter of the residents of the county were slaves; clearly it was an area happy with slavery (Yeatman, p. 29). Indeed, one of the James stepfathers was a slaveowner (Yeatman, pp. 27-28), as was Robert James himself (Settle, p. 7).
After arriving in Missouri, Robert James became pastor of the New Hope Baptist Church, which during his time there grew to have several hundred members. He also farmed 275 acres; according to DAB, volume V, p. 585, this was his main source of income. But, for some reason, he decided to follow the gold rush to California, leaving his family behind. He died of "fever" on August 18, 1850 at Hangtown, California.
It is curious to note that Zerelda Cole was Catholic (DAB, vol. V, p. 585). Might this explain why Robert James eventually left?
From that time on, things were traumatic for the James boys, Alexander Franklin ("Frank"), born 1843, and Jesse Woodson, born 1847. (They had a sister Susan, born just before Robert went west.) Jesse had apparently been truly bothered when his father went away (so Jesse Jr. on p. 9 of Dellinger), and his mother's second and third marriages can't have helped; in 1852, she took the elderly Benjamin Simms as a second husband, but they separated and he died soon after (Brant, pp. 14-15; Settle, p. 8). Her third husband, Dr. Reuben Samuel, whom she married in 1855 (or 1857, so DAB, volume V, p. 585), was the second slave owner among her husbands. Samuel and Zerelda would eventually have four children: Archie (of whom more below), John, Sallie, and Fannie (Brant, p. 8; Settle, p. 9).
When the Civil War came, Frank promptly joined the Confederate side, being part of the force (one hesitates, at that stage of the war, to call it an army) of General Sterling Price (1809-1867), for whom see, e.g. "Sterling Price." He was one of Price's rabble-in-arms (or, often, rabble-wishing-for-the-arms-they-didn't-have) at Wilson's Creek (for which see e.g. "The War in Missouri in '61" and "Jolly Union Boys"). Later that year, he came down with measles, was captured by Union troops, and was paroled (Yeatman, p. 32; Settle, p. 20).
It's at this point that the James story starts to get genuinely ugly. Frank apparently took an oath to the Union in 1862. But Clay County was part of the area raided by both sides. Frank, even though he had sworn to support the Union, joined Quantrill's Raiders (for whom see the notes to "Charlie Quantrell" as well as "The Call of Quantrell," "Quantrell," etc.), probably in 1863 (Yeatman, p. 35; Settle, p. 21-23, is not sure of the date though he notes that Cole Younger was in the band by the spring of 1862 and Jim Younger was acting as a guerrilla by 1864).
In May 1863, Frank managed to upgrade himself from oathbreaker to terrorist; in an ambush near Richfield, Missouri, he was part of an ambush in which a Lt. Graffenstein was killed after surrendering (Yeatman, p. 36). On August 7, Frank committed his first true robbery (Yeatman, p. 41). Meanwhile, the Federals were looking for Frank -- and they visited the James/Samuel home, with results hardly likely to endear them to the family. They beat up Jesse (who may already have been serving as a Confederate spy, and who some time during this period managed to shoot the end off one of his fingers; Settle, p. 31, suggests a date of June 1864, though accounts vary of how he lost it. According to Brant, the injury earned Jesse the nickname "Dingus," because he referred to the weapon that injured him as the "dodd-dingus pistol" he had ever used). Even more extremely, they half-hanged Dr. Samuel, perhaps as many as four times (Settle, p. 26); his voice was apparently affected for the rest of his life (Yeatman, p. 39). (Wellman, p. 54, claims it was his relatives who cut him down, but this seems highly unlikely; if the troops wanted to hang him, wouldn't they stick around for a few minutes to make sure he died?) By 1864, when Jesse joined the Quantrill Gang (Yeatman, p. 50), the band were effectively out of Confederate control, preferring bushwhacking in Kansas and Missouri to regular service in Texas (Yeatman, p. 49). Not even Quantrill controlled most of them any more. Their recruiting methods were also irregular; while Frank was properly a member of the Confederate forces, it appears Jesse joined the terrorists entirely as a freelance (Yeatman, p. 52). That's not because of his youth; by 1864, the Confederates were happy to have 17-year-olds in the military. But Jesse chose to be an irregular. He certainly was quick to get in trouble. In an early raid, Jesse was shot through the chest, apparently while stealing a saddle (Yeatman, p. 53), though the claim was later made that he was fighting the Yankees. By the end of the war, the irregulars were robbing trains; at Centralia they captured, looted, and destroyed a train of the North Missouri Railroad, killing two dozen Union soldiers who were aboard on furlough (Yeatman, p. 55). The James Boys were probably not present for this (Brant, p. 35, allows the possibility that Jesse was there, but as usual his evidence is thin), but they must have heard about it. And the James boys "were" present when a rescue party was slaughtered; many of the bodies of the rescuers were deliberately mutilated (scalped, beaten, and worse; Yeatman, p. 56).

By 1864, the entire James/Samuels clan was in exile -- Dr. Samuels evicted from his home (Yeatman, p. 62), Jesse James with ruffians under "Arch" Clement who were somewhere around Texas, having proved too rough even for Quantrill (Yeatman, pp. 73-74), and Frank James with Quantrill, who headed for Kentucky with the remainder of his force (Yeatman, p. 65). By 1865, the Federals were on Quantrill's heels; many of the guerrillas were being killed, captured, or left behind when they lost their horses Yeatman, (pp. 66-68); Quantrill himself was mortally wounded on May 10 (Yeatman, p. 71).

The Clement gang, including Jesse, was meanwhile attacking Kingsville, Missouri, burning, looting, and murdering (Yeatman, pp. 73-74). Somewhat later, with the war clearly lost, Jesse suffered another bullet wound (reportedly making a spectacular escape before passing out; Settle, pp. 30-31; Wellman, p. 66); while still on his sickbed, he was paroled May 21, 1865 (Yeatman, pp. 76-77). The wound kept him bedridden for months (Settle, p. 31); there were times when he was expected to die. The twice-injured lung apparently troubled him for the rest of his life (Yeatman, p. 95, on the basis of a statement by Cole Younger). During his recovery, he was cared for by his aunt and uncle, and became secretly engaged to their daughter Zerelda ("Zee") Mimms (Settle, p. 34; Wellman, p. 67, says that they fell in love but does not claim they became engaged).

Frank James (who had apparently acquired the nickname "Buck" during the war) was finally forced to surrender, along with other Quantrill survivors, on July 26, 1865, by which time Quantrill had been dead seven weeks. They might have come in earlier, had not some members of the band raped a woman; the authorities demanded they find the perpetrators (Yeatman, pp. 80-81). Still, Settle, p. 32, notes that neither Frank nor Jesse was considered in any way noteworthy in 1865. Yeatman speculates that the guerrilla fighting in Missouri (the most bitter in all the Civil War) left the two brothers suffering from post-traumatic stress (Yeatman, p. 104); like a number of other veterans (e.g. Tom Dula), they, or at least Jesse, seem to have come home intending to return to normal life (Yeatman, p. 91). For four years, they lived at home (Settle, p. 32), but there are hints that they occasionally vanished for a few days, and they lived in an area much affected by lawlessness. Their whereabouts in the period 1869-1874 are almost impossible to trace (Yeatman, p. 99), but they came to be famous as robbers in this period.

On February 13, 1866 occurred the robbery of the bank of Liberty, Missouri, which resulted in the loss of some $60,000 and cost a bystander his life; it was said to be the first daylight bank robbery in peacetime (O'Neal, p. 167; Settle, p. 34; Wellman, p. 69; Yeatman, pp. 85-86; Dellinger, pp. 23-
Later folklore would connect this with the James Boys, and Wellman accepts this without question (in fact, he is already calling Jesse the head of the gang, on pp. 69, 73, even though such evidence as we have of the James/Younger gang does not seem to imply that there was a head). Although the Liberty bank is close to the James home, there is no real evidence that either the Jameses or the Youngers were involved. Wellman's link to the event is that the Boys had sometimes ridden through the town shooting off pistols, as if to establish their willingness to be wild (pp. 69-71). Scaring the tellers into turning over the money sounds logical -- until you realize that the robbers never used their names during the Liberty robbery. How can men whose identities aren't known have a reputation? And, since there were reportedly ten robbers (Wellman, p. 73), it would seem as if someone in the vicinity could have identified them had they been locals and done something to make themselves identifiable.

(Note: I'm not saying the Jameses and Youngers weren't involved. I'm saying it cannot be proved, and can't even be stated as a likelihood. It is merely a possibility.)

Several other robberies took place in the same area over the next few years (Settle, pp. 34-36). Some were more successful than others; none were connected with the Jameses, though some reportedly involved ex-Quantrill men. There is a stronger connection with the March 20, 1868 robbery of the Russellville, Kentucky bank; the James friend Cole Younger was probably part of this (Yeatman, pp. 93-95), and Settle, p. 38, notes that on the day of the robbery, the James Boys were reportedly suffering from "war wounds" -- which would make a lot more sense if the wounds in fact had a recent cause.

On December 7, 1869 came the robbery of the Davies County Savings Association in Gallatin, Missouri -- one of the robberies famously tied to the Jameses (Wellman, p. 81, says without question that the James Brothers and Cole Younger did it, with circumstantial details, but these of course are unverified.) Captain John W. Sheets, one of the bank owners, was shot to death during the attack (Settle, p. 38; Wellman offers the theory that he was killed because he resembled S. P. Cox, responsible for the death of the guerilla "Bloody Bill" Anderson). At least two robbers were involved; one was said to resemble Frank James. The evidence was thin, but a posse turned up to arrest the James brothers, who would prove to have no real alibi.

Apparently not willing to risk arrest, Frank and Jesse fled the Samuels farm on horseback (Settle, pp. 39-40; Yeatman, pp. 95-97). Eventually a price of several thousand dollars would be put on their heads. Soon after, a paper published a letter allegedly from Jesse, denying any crime but saying it was impossible to get a fair trial in Missouri (Settle, p. 41). There would be many more such letters in coming years. Most, however, appeared in papers associated with John Newman Edwards, who also published articles allegedly clearing members of the gang (Settle, pp. 51-52). A later letter, signed "Jack Shepherd, Dick Turpin, Claude Duval" (after three famous English highwaymen) promised to pay the medical expenses of a girl hurt in the course of a robbery, and denied that the participants were thieves; they preferred the term "robber." This letter (Yeatman, p. 105; cf. Settle, p. 46) seems to be almost the sole foundation for the claim that the Jameses gave to the poor.

In 1873, robbers derailed and robbed a train in Adair, Iowa; the engineer was killed in the wreck. Again we cannot show that the Jameses were involved, but the method of removing rails and piling debris on the track fits their mode of operation (Yeatman, pp. 106-108). Settle, p. 47, observes that the gang did not invent this particular dirty trick, but it was to become a James/Younger signature. This particular robbery brought in about $2000. Descriptions of the robbers, on their behavior, caused Jesse to be called the head of the gang for the first time (Settle, p. 48). The robbery was considered important enough that the Pinkertons would be called in (Settle, p. 58).

1874 finally brings us back to relatively firm history, as both Jesse and Frank were married in that year (Wellman, p. 87). Jesse finally married his cousin "Zee" Mimms, nine years after they had become engaged, on April 24, 1874. The Methodist Reverend William James, uncle to both Jesse and Zee, agreed to marry them after trying and failing to talk Jesse out of his violent lifestyle (Yeatman, p. 119)

Frank married later that year, to Annie (Anna?) Ralston, who had earned a degree in science and literature in 1872. Ralston's father was a Unionist from Ireland; her parents reportedly were horrified to learn that she had eloped with such an outlaw (Yeatman, pp. 120-121). The Ralstons learned of it only indirectly (Annie's letter to her parents said only that she had eloped), and once they did so, they kept it secret from the community as much as possible (Settle, p. 42).

By the 1870s, with Missouri still feeling the after-effects of the Civil War, the various outlaws roaming the state were becoming a political issue; the legislature took various ineffectual steps to try to halt the depredations. The Pinkertons received another call (Yeatman, pp. 111-114) after another train robbery, at Gads Hill in 1874. (No, I'm not making that up; apparently Missouri has 25, gives a detailed account by T. J. Stiles). such a place as well as England; Settle, p. 49; Wellman, p. 86.) This was another robbery where the perpetrators could not absolutely be identified -- one Jim Reed confessed to it on his deathbed (Yeatman, p. 138) and denied the James Boys were there -- but it was widely credited to the brothers. And it is apparently certain that the Jameses were working with the three surviving Younger brothers (Cole, Jim, and Bob) by that time.

Unfortunately, the Pinkertons called in to deal with the problem were not up to the task; they didn't catch anyone, and a young agent named John W. Whicher was soon killed (Settle, pp. 59-60). Two other agents died trying to capture the Younger brothers, though they succeeded in killing John Younger (Settle, p. 60; Wellman, pp. 90-92, gives a dramatized version of the incident. Pp. 92-94 dramatizes the death of Whicher).

The detective agency would add another tragic page to the James story: on January 28, 1875, the Pinkertons (or someone; Yeatman, Wellman, and Brant are certain it was the detectives; Settle is not) firebombed the Samuels home, in the belief that Frank and Jesse were there. (According to Brant, p., 134, the explosion could be heard three miles away, and much of the house caught fire.
Yeatman and Settle give no hints of major pyrotechnics. Wellman, pp. 96-98, has a rather pathetic account of what occurred, but also thinks it a relatively small explosive, possibly a Civil War grenade though he thinks it an iron flare.

But the bombers did not catch their men. Instead, they killed Archie Peyton Samuel, the half-brother of Jesse and Frank (whose age is variously listed as eight [Brant, Wellman], nine [Settle] and 13 [Yeatman]). In addition, a shell fragment hit Mrs. Samuel on the right wrist, shattering it and forcing the amputation of her hand (Yeatman, pp. 134-137; Settle, p. 76. Brant, of course, says that her hand was "blown off," and Wellman says it was "torn off"). A grand jury eventually filed murder charges against Pinkerton and certain of his employees, not all named (Yeatman, p. 143). The charges were dismissed in 1877 (Settle, p. 80), mostly on the grounds that the case was not being actively pursued and the charges were stale.

The firebombing clearly disturbed the family. Dr. and Mrs. Samuels eventually tried to sell their property, but found no takers (Yeatman, pp. 149-150; Settle, pp. 86-101). And Jesse and Zee, who by this time was pregnant, moved to Nashville in early 1875. Jesse used the name "John Davis Howard" (which we will of course see again); Zee became "Josie." At the time, Mr. Howard listed his occupation as "wheat speculator," though he often vanished for weeks at a time. During this period, Jesse apparently was trying to kill Allan Pinkerton (Yeatman, p. 151) -- but the result was rather Hamlet-like: He wanted Pinkerton to know and suffer, and he never had a chance to kill Pinkerton in such circumstances. If Jesse didn't get Pinkerton, the gang may still have committed murder: Daniel Askew, a neighbor of the Samuels family who may have helped the Pinkertons, was shot to death in April 1875 (Settle, p. 85). Most attribute the murder to the Jameses, though there was speculation the Pinkertons did it to silence a potential witness against them (Settle, p.
86).

In an interesting twist, Jesse also published several letters boasting (lying) about his whereabouts and activities. What is intriguing is that they contain many more errors of grammar, spelling, and punctuation than the earlier letters he had supposedly published in the Edwards papers -- as if two different men had written them. If originals of any of these alleged letters survived, no one bothered to mention them.

In 1875, Zee gave birth to Jesse Edward James, publicly known as "Tim Howard"; he would answer to the nickname "Tim" all his life. (Yeatman, p. 161). There seems to be some dispute about the exact date; Settle, p. 129, says December 31; Yeatman, p. 161, has August 31.
At this time, the first known James associate was captured alive. Tim Webb, who had recently taken part in a robbery in Huntington, West Virginia, was taken into custody, and though there is no evidence the Jameses or Youngers took part in this robbery (Settle, p. 87), Webb probably knew where Jesse was living in hiding. So Jesse and Zee moved to Baltimore for about a year (Yeatman, p. 162); Frank also spent some time there. But in 1876, the two returned to Missouri, leaving their wives behind (Yeatman, p. 164).
In Missouri, they met the Youngers, and for some reason decided to try a raid on Minnesota. On arriving in the state, they scouted various banks, according to Cole Younger, they eventually picked the bank in Northfield in part because former Union general and Mississippi carpetbagger governor Adelbert Ames was associated with the place, and the infamous general Benjamin "Beast" Butler (for whom see, e.g., "Hold On, Abraham") apparently had money there (Yeatman, p.
171; Settle, p. 95).

For the story of the disastrous Northfield raid itself, see the notes to "Cole Younger" [Laws E3].
Frank and Jesse were said to have been injured in the fracas (Settle, p. 98; cf. Brant, p. 179, who says that Frank's hand was crushed in the vault door), but it didn't slow them down; they were the only two of the eight robbers involved to escape police. (Settle, p. 96, notes that, to this time, police still didn't have a reliable description of either brother, and indeed, Huntington, p. 50ff., describes occasions on which the pursuers actually encountered the robbers but did not recognize or succeed in capturing them.) After separating from the Youngers, Frank and Jesse managed to reach the South Dakota border about ten days after the raid (Yeatman, p. 183).

(Lyle Lofgren tells me that the town of Garretson, South Dakota, on the Minnesota border northeast of Sioux Falls, has a "Jesse James's Leap," or some such thing, which Jesse is alleged to have ridden his horse across. Lyle adds that he thinks it too wide for any horse, and what are the odds that Jesse would have tried it on an unfamiliar horse? In any case, the testimony of Dick Liddil -- reported by William H. Wallace on p. 119 of Dellinger -- was that they left Minnesota in a wagon, with one driving and the injured brother carried in the back.)

The brothers apparently decided that that was enough outlawry for a lifetime. Soon after that, they and their families found new homes and tried, at least for a while, to live quietly. Frank apparently settled in Nashville. He seems to have used the name Ben J. Woodson. He reportedly worked very hard as a sharecropper, except perhaps for a brief time when he suffered from malaria (Yeatman, p. 202).

Jesse, still using the name "John Davis Howard," chose a more rural setting, in Humphries County some distance to the west. He didn't draw much attention except for owning a very fast horse, occasionally showing great skill with a pistol, and sometimes acting a little paranoid (Yeatman, pp. 196-197). Around this time, Zee gave birth to twin boys, Gould and Montgomery, who however died soon afterward (Yeatman, p. 201; Settle, p. 132). On February 8, 1878, Frank's wife Annie bore Robert Franklin James. In one of the strangest twists of the James saga, he was apparently called "Mary" as a baby (Yeatman, p. 203). Settle, p. 132, reports that Zee nursed Robert when Annie proved unable to produce enough milk.

Both Frank and Jesse were gamblers, but it appears Jesse wasn't nearly as good at it; he lost a lot, and also suffered from lawsuits over his financial dealings, and at least once bounced a check (Yeatman, p. 204). In December 1878, he moved again (Yeatman, p. 205). In 1879, it was his turn to suffer malaria (Yeatman, p. 207). In July of that year, his daughter Mary was born (Yeatman, p. 211; Settle, p. 129). This was Jesse's last child; note, therefore, that (contrary to most versions of "Jesse James (I)" [Laws E1], he did "not" have three children when he died).

At about this time, Jesse seems to have decided it was time to return to outlawry. Frank, from what we can tell, just wanted to be left alone. (Reconstruction had ended with the disputed Hayes/Tildren election of 1876, and sympathy for unreconstructed rebels was less.) Frank in the years around 1880 was apparently deliberately courting friendships with pillars of the local community (Yeatman, p. 228), presumably to have character witnesses if he needed them.

Yeatman, p. 213, based on later testimony of Dick Liddil (cf. Settle, p. 148) says that Jesse's new gang consisted of his cousin Wood Hite (Robert Woodson Hite, a cousin of Jesse's whose family still lived in Kentucky), Ed Miller (the brother of Clell Miller who had been killed in the Northfield raid), Tucker Bassham, Bill Ryan, and Dick Liddil (this is the spelling of William H. Wallace, who on p. 117 of Dellinger claimed to have known him well; Settle, Yeatman, and even Brant also use this spelling; others have used "Liddell" or other forms). This gang in October 1879 robbed a train at Glendale (the one James robbery celebrated in song in which Frank played no part; Settle, pp. 133, 148). The take from this robbery, apart from non-negotiable securities, was about $6000 (Settle, p. 102).

Late in 1879, a report circulated that Jesse was dead (Settle, pp. 103-104). It was, of course, false. Somewhat later, Tucker Bassham was arrested. It appears Jesse and Ed Miller rode off (to silence him?). Miller never returned; it is speculated that Jesse killed him (Yeatman, p. 218). On September 3, 1880, Jesse robbed a stagecoach in showy fashion, apparently trying to imitate the famous English highwaymen (and incidentally picking up some loot which would be found in his home after his death); other robberies followed (Yeatman, pp. 219-220).

In early 1881, Frank and Jesse were again briefly scared out of their homes; they went briefly to Alabama (Yeatman, pp. 229-230). This was fateful, because Jesse became aware of the large crew working on the Muscle Shoals canal. In March, he took Bill Ryan and Wood Hite and robbed the man carrying the workers' pay (Yeatman, pp. 233-234). The total haul was over $5000. On March 25, Bill Ryan got drunk and turned rowdy. He was taken into custody carrying about $1400 and four firearms. Although he refused, upon being taken, to tell authorities anything, Frank, Jesse, and Dick Liddil concluded that they must again leave home. Frank would later confess to despair at "again becom[ing] a wanderer" (Yeatman, p. 240).

This is another vague period in the history of the James Boys; Jesse ended up in Kansas City using the name J. T. Jackson (Yeatman, p. 248), but witnesses disagree about where Frank was; he said he never went that far west, and stayed clean in this period (Yeatman, p. 260), but others claim he was part of the gang that, on July 16, 1881, attacked a train near Gallatin. Jesse, Dick Liddil, and Clarence and Wood Hite were very likely present. Two men including the conductor were killed; the total haul was about $700 (Yeatman, p. 249).

In the period around 1870, the press was split about outlaws. By 1880, it was more strongly against their depredations. Missouri governor Thomas T. Crittenden (1832-1909) had been elected in 1880 in part on a promise to settle the James Gang. (The Missouri Republican platform ha actually attacked the Democrats for failing to do what "a Republican state" had done, referring to Minnesota's prosecution of the Youngers; Settle, p. 106.) The law didn't permit him to set a price on their heads, but he induced the railroads and other businesses to offer a total of $50,000 for the members of the gang. For Jesse and Frank, the reward was $5000 each for their capture (if taken alive) and another $5000 upon conviction (Settle, p. 110; Yeatman, p. 252).

On September 7, 1881, a train was robbed at the "Blue Cut" curve. Along with the usual crew of Jesse, Clarence and Wood Hite, Dick Liddil, and perhaps Frank, there was a new recruit named Charlie Ford (Yeatman, pp. 253-254). Since the safe contained only about $400, the outlaws beat the express messenger, then robbed the passengers as well (Settle, pp. 111-112).

Bob Ford's first association with the gang seems to have been part of a robbery with brother Charlie, Dick Liddil, and Wood Hite; Jesse reportedly was not part of the crew (Yeatman, p. 261). About this time, former gang member Tucker Bassham, sentenced to ten years, was offered full pardon in return for cooperation. He helped convict Bill Ryan, then fled the area; no doubt the fact that his home was burned added to his desire to depart. On September 28, 1881, Ryan was sentenced to 25 years (Settle, pp. 113-114; Yeatman, pp. 257-258).

Things finally started to come apart when the gang suffered from internal dissent. A young widow named Sarah Norris Peck had married the old widower George Hite, the father of Wood and Clarence. It appears the Hite children never liked her, and vice versa; eventually, she swore out a warrant against Wood Hite. The police captured Wood, but he escaped. However, when Wood met Dick Liddil, and Charlie and Ford, Wood quarreled with Liddil (possibly over the affections of one Martha Bolton; Settle, p. 116). In the fight that followed, Liddil was hurt and Hite killed, reportedly by Bob Ford as he was shooting at Liddil (O'Neal, p. 143; Yeatman, pp. 261-262). Hite, recall, was Jesse's first cousin, so the Fords and Liddil now had reason to fear the leader of their former gang.

Liddil would surrender to authorities January 24, 1882, with promises of immunity if he could bring in the rest of the gang (Settle, p. 116) -- but the event was kept out of the papers to avoid rousing Jesse's suspicions. Clarence Hite, suffering from the tuberculosis which would kill him in 1883, and afraid of being caught, followed Liddil on February 11 (Settle, p. 116). Thus, of the post-Younger Frank-and-Jesse-James Gang, only Frank and Jesse were still free; of the gang which followed that, which was really Jesse's alone, Jesse was the only one left. Nor could he turn to Frank any more; Frank had decided to leave the west, possibly forever. In October 1881, he and his family, after visiting various spots in Virginia and North Carolina (trying to find a place that was safe, prosperous, and not troubled by disease), settled in Lynchburg, Virginia; he used the name "James Warren" (Yeatman, p. 263).

Jesse wasn't done with crime. On November 9, 1881, he went to St. Joseph, Missouri; he would settle at 1318 Lafayette Street. Jesse's companion on his first visit to the town was Charlie Ford. It was to be a short-lived but fateful partnership.

Ford family patriarch James Thomas Ford had been born in 1820 in Virginia; he moved back and forth from Missouri to Virginia several times (Yeatman, p. 264). He was in Missouri at the start of the Civil War, but moved back to Virginia in 1862; his son Bob was a newborn at the time. An older brother of Charlie and Bob, John Ford, would fight for the Confederacy with Mosby's Rangers (Yeatman, p. 265).

Around 1869, the Ford family returned to Missouri. Bob and Charlie apparently were introduced to Jesse in 1881 by Ed Miller. Charlie, as noted above, was the first to join the James Gang. But Jesse soon asked Charlie to recruit another man for his diminished gang, and Charlie recruited Bob (Yeatman, p. 267).

Bob was soon in touch with the authorities; he apparently didn't like Jesse's management (he is reported to have said that Jesse was "dead" as a gang leader; Yeatman, p. 265). Bob Ford met with Governor Crittenden on January 13, 1882 in Kansas City; he reports that he was offered $10,000 dead or alive for Jesse (and the same for Frank). Frank was out of reach, but Jesse was available.

The motivations of the Ford Brothers are rather unclear at this point. When word finally slipped out that Liddil had been taken, they may have feared that Jesse would try to get rid of them, too. Yeatman says Jesse and the Fords were tending their horses when Jesse said he was too hot and took off his coat; he apparently also took off his gun belt. He turned his back to brush off some pictures, and the Fords pulled out their pistols. Bob apparently fired first; he hit Jesse in the back of the head (Yeatman, p. 269).
Settle's account is more like the traditional one of Jesse climbing a chair to hang a picture -- a detail found in a report from the Kansas City Daily Journal printed in p. 163 of Dellinger -- and mentions only Bob drawing his gun (p. 117). The Daily Journal story also said that the Fords had stayed with Jesse for a week (hence the mention in the song that Bob Ford "slept in Jesse's bed") before catching him unarmed -- and they weren't willing to face him when armed (Dellinger, p.
165).
In a detail that seems too good to be true, Fetherling, p. 147, says that the sampler Jesse was straightening read "In God We Trust."
Brant's account (pp. 224-225) also mentions the chair, claiming that the Fords became suspicious when Jesse took off his guns, which Brant claims he never did. Whatever the exact events (for which, of course, we have only the accounts of the two brothers), Jesse was dead by gunshot.
When Zee arrived, Charlie claimed it was an accident -- but he and Bob quickly headed off to report to the authorities.
Some people were not convinced that the body was really Jesse's, but his mother and wife, and several others, attested to it -- and many relics of his robberies were found in his home (Settle, p.
1180.
Jesse's relics quickly became highly sought-after items; if eBay had existed in 1882, the Samuels would have been set for life. The owner of the house Jesse was renting did a fine business giving tours, though the visitors did much damage carving off souvenirs (Settle, p. 127). Jesse was initially buried on the family farm, apparently to protect his body; later he was moved to the family plot -- and his grave monument soon chiseled away by more relic-hunters (Settle, p. 166).
After Jesse's death, the Fords claimed that Governor Crittenden had offered the reward for Jesse dead or alive; Crittenden of course claimed he had demanded the capture of the Jameses (Yeatman, p. 271). According to Settle, it is still not known what money was paid to whom.
Crittenden's role remains ambiguous -- he encouraged the betrayal of Jesse, but ended up treating Frank with tender loving care.
The Fords ended up facing murder charges, first for Jesse, then for Wood Hite, whose body was exhumed (Yeatman, p. 272). On April 17, 1882, Bob and Charlie pled guilty to the murder of Jesse.
Sentenced to death, they were pardoned by Crittenden (Settle, p. 1189). They eventually were acquitted in the death of Hite (Yeatman, p. 275).
In October of that year, after complicated but obscure negotiations probably involving Crittenden, assorted prosecutors, and James apologist John Newman Edwards, Frank James finally turned himself in (Settle, pp. 130-131; Yeatman, p. 279). It took some time to decide on charges, since the statute of limitations had passed for many of his crimes. Eventually he was charged with a murder at Gallatin. The result was circus-like. A newspaper acerbically remarked that it wasn't clear if Frank had surrendered to the State of Missouri or Missouri to Frank (Settle, p. 134).
There were few left to testify against Frank. Clarence Hite was dead. Bill Ryan had given no testimony against Frank. The Fords had not worked with him. The charges against him were mostly for crimes committed after Northfield, so the Youngers could not testify even if they wanted to. That left only Dick Liddil, who by this time was on trial in Alabama. And he was claiming he had taken any part in Frank's crimes, which (it appears to me) would make his testimony hearsay.
Authorities tried to award him clemency to get the real truth out of him; President Chester A. Arthur refused (Settle, pp. 137-138). The main case had to be tried in an opera house to provide seats for spectators (Settle, p. 139). Liddil was the only real witness. The jury needed less than four hours to reach a not guilty verdict.
It was then decided that Liddil's testimony could not be used further, since he was a felon, and the other Missouri charges dropped (Settle, p. 150). Frank then was sent to Alabama for the Muscle Shoals robbery. Again it was just Liddil's word, and Frank had an alibi; he was again found not guilty (Settle, pp. 152-153). On February 21, 1885, the last of the charges based on Missouri crimes was dropped (Yeatman, p. 289). There was still the matter of the Northfield robbery, but no one from Minnesota was pursuing the matter. Frank was free.
It is interesting to note that Crittenden failed of renomination in 1884, partly because of the James affair (Settle, p. 154; Fetherling, p. 147).
Frank seems to have stayed straight for the rest of his life. He moved to Dallas in 1887 and became a successful salesman for a time, then turned to other odd jobs. Eventually he was turned down for a patronage job he thought he deserved as a token of his reform (Settle, p. 163; Yeatman, p. 299), after which he went into acting. In 1903, he and Cole Younger (now out of jail and given a conditional pardon) opened a Wild West show that was named after them. It was to be surrounded by controversy and quarrels among the performers; at one point even Cole and Frank were indicted, though they got off by noting that they did not own, manage, or bankroll the show; they were simply paid performers lending their names to the production. When matters grew too troublesome, the two quit the show (Yeatman, pp. 302-311).

By that time, Frank's political disillusionment was so extreme that he publicly declared himself a Republican (generally regarded as unthinkable for a Confederate veteran) on August 20, 1904 (Settle, p. 164; Yeatman, p. 311); he would in time come out in favor of women's suffrage (Yeatman, p. 318). In 1907 he bought farm in Fletcher, Oklahoma (Yeatman, p. 314). After stepfather Reuben Samuels died in 1908 in a mental hospital, suffering some sort of dementia, and Zerelda Samuels died February 10, 1911 (Yeatman, p. 317), Frank inherited the Samuels farm and turned it into a tourist attraction. It has served that function for much of the time since, though different owners have devoted different degrees of attention to it.

Frank never really told his story; once, when asked about his past, he said, "I neither affirm nor deny.... If I admitted that those stories were true, people would say, 'There's the greatest scoundrel unhung,' and if I denied 'em they'd say, 'There's the greatest liar on earth,' so I just say nothing" (Yeatman, p. 319). He died February 18, 1915, the next to last of the Northfield robbers; Cole Younger, the last, would die in 1916.

Frank was certainly the most fortunate of the gang. The Youngers served long terms in prison; Bob died there, and Jim committed suicide after his release; Cole had some modest success as a showman. The other Northfield raiders were dead. Wood Hite was dead. Clarence Hite died of tuberculosis (there were surprisingly many TB cases among the James Gang; one suspects someone carried the disease. Probably Jesse, given his lung problems. And the fact that several of them were related may have meant that they had the same genetic lack of immunity).

Charlie Ford also suffered from tuberculosis, and he apparently became addicted to morphine as a result; he killed himself on May 4, 1884 (Yeatman, p. 291; Fetherling, p. 148). One suspects that this is the main reason why the Jesse James songs mention Bob and not Charlie.

Bob Ford wandered around the west, trying a short stint as a police officer before taking to saloon-keeping. He was at his third of these, in Creede, Colorado, when a man named Ed Kelly (Ed O. Kelly? Ed O'Kelly?) shot him on June 8, 1892 (Yeatman, p. 292). Ironically, Kelly himself would be shot to death in 1904 in Oklahoma City.

Jesse's wife Zee died on November 13, 1900 (Yeatman, p. 296). There were various imposters over the years -- a fake Zee arose as early as 1885, when Zee was obviously still around. A later Zee apparently was credited with charismatic gifts! (Yeatman, p. 297). There were also an assortment of fake Jesses over the years, including one John James in 1931 (easily discredited). One J. Frank Dalton was still making a claim as late as 1950, more than a century after Jesse's birth. (Fans of science fiction will be chagrined to note that the infamous Raymond F. Palmer, responsible for Amazing Stories in its worst years, helped to promote this legend, mentioning it in a radio conversation; see Yeatman, pp. 328-333). A fake Frank arose while Frank was still alive (Settle, p. 164).

That was typical of the stories about the James Family: No lie was too outlandish to be told. The rumors that Jesse had not been assassinated were not really put to rest until the end of the twentieth century. In the 1990s, an autopsy showed that the body buried as Jesse James had bullets in the right places to be Jesse, and the mitochondrial DNA was properly matched to several of his relatives. Brant, p. 266, calls this proof that the body was Jesse's. The scientists quoted by Yeatman, pp. 371-376, in fact repeatedly denied that the matter was proved, but the evidence was "consistent" with the conclusion that it was. Under the circumstances, the probability is extremely high.

Even before tabloid journalism, the robbers seem to have been tabloid fodder. StarTribune published a famous photo of the bodies of Clell Miller and Bill Stiles after the Northfield raid. The text claims that the photographer sold 50,000 copies of the photo (which would imply he earned about $8,000 for that one photo). There were also wild stories told of what happened to Miller's body -- supposedly it ended up in the office of Dr. Henry Wheeler, who as a young man was credited with shooting Miller. This, of course, has never been proved.

Jesse Jr. eventually studied law, and at one point became involved in a divorce proceeding and custody battle with his wife; they managed to reconcile, but he had a nervous breakdown in 1924 and was never really the same afterward. He died in 1951 (Yeatman, p. 320).

Mary James Barr died March 11, 1935 (Yeatman, p. 321). Anne Ralston James died in July of 1944 (Yeatman, p. 326), seventy years after she married Frank.

Books about the James Gang were beginning to appear even in their lifetimes, though the amount of fiction included was astonishing. Yeatman, p. 223, tells of one book that described a cave carefully fitted out as a hideout, with a stove, a panelled ceiling, beds, and stalls for horses. The Youngers were subject of a book published 1875 (Settle, p. 180); this book, by Augustus P. Appier, was reprinted as late as 1955 despite being highly inaccurate. The first book to include the Jameses seems to have been Noted Guerilla by none other than John Newman Edwards; this 1877 book included many outlaws in addition to the James Brothers, but the James and Younger brothers were prominent. The James/Younger Gang was the sole subject of a book by J. A. Dacus in 1880; Settle, p. 184, notes 16 editions of this book. Even Frank Triplett's biography, which was assembled after some contact with the Samuels family, was cobbled together hastily after Jesse's death and contained a lot of false reports from the newspapers (Settle, p. 192; Yeatman, p. 275); if the family had any influence on it, it came in the form of the strong sympathy Triplett's book shows the Jameses. The various chapbooks about the Jameses were of course pure fiction. It appears that trash of this sort was still being written in the mid-twentieth century -- Dellinger, p. 40, quotes an account that seems, e.g., to invent a new Younger brother!

Settle, p. 197, says that the first relatively sober history was not published until 1926 -- and even it veered too far toward the dramatic. (This book was by Robertus Love, and an excerpt is on pp. 197-204 of Dellinger. And it is indeed pretty wild -- the excerpt in Dellinger shows him talking, e.g., about Jesse James's ghost.) To this day, there are books being published treating Jesse as an unreconstructed Confederate rather than a plain and simple robber. The fact that Jesse worked mostly in former slave states, and shot quite a few Southerners, makes no difference.

Wellman, p. 69, quotes William H. Wallace, himself a resident of the area: "The usual defence of the outlaws [that it was forced upon them by the North]... is overwhelmed by the evidence. Every bank robbed by them during the fifteen years of their career[,] with possibly two exceptions, belonged to Southern men.... The truth is, too, that the persons killed in these bank robberies were Southerners. We had as well admit the truth -- they robbed for money, not for revenge."

Compare also Wellman, p. 88, also from Wallace: "the charge [has been] made hundreds of times that the Southern people of Missouri endorsed the depredations of these outlaws and were opposed to their being overthrown. This is absolutely untrue. Especially has it been charged that the ex-Confederates of Missouri... endorsed the conduct of the James Boys. Precisely the opposite is true."

Jo Frances James (daughter of Jesse Junior) once sold a manuscript to Hollywood, which supposedly underlay the Tyrone Power/Henry Fonda film "Jesse James." But Jo Frances said of the result, "I don't know what happened to the history part of it. It seems to me the story was fiction from beginning to end.... About the only connection it had with fact was that there once was a man named James and he did ride a horse" (Yeatman, pp. 326-327). That strikes me as a pretty good last word on the whole legend.- RBW

Bibliography

- Brant: Marley Brant, Jesse James: The Man and the Myth, 1998. Despite its title, which might seem to indicate scholarly caution, this book strikes me as incredibly credulous, taking as certain many things where the sources conflict, and often relying on the less reliable sources. It also has a very clear sympathy with any Confederate Good Ol' Boys who just might be terrorists on the side. I have been cautious in using it except where it coincides with information in other books, or where it reports some third-hand absurdity which might have influenced the James legend. (Frankly, I eventually started checking the index rather than finish reading the thing).
- DAB: Dumas Malone, editor, Dictionary of American Biography, originally published in 20 volumes plus later supplementary volumes; I use the 1961 Charles Scribner's Sons edition with minor corrections which combined the original 20 volumes into 10
- Dellinger: Harold Dellinger, editor, Jesse James: The Best Writings on the Notorious Outlaw and His Gang, Globe Pequot Press, 2007 (being a collection of excerpts, usually out of context, some from scholars, some completely unscholarly, some pure fiction -- and no indication of which is which)
- Huntington: George Huntington, Robber and Hero: The Story of the Northfield Bank Raid, Christian Way Co., 1895; reissued by the Minnesota Historical Society Press in 1986 with a new introduction by John McGuigan. Although this is considered a relatively sober and accurate account of the raid, with much information from those present, the 1986 introduction detailing the later careers of the Youngers is probably the best part.
- O'Neal: Bill O'Neal, Encyclopedia of Western Gunfighters, 1979. A general work, and as with most such things it appears to have a few details wrong, but a handy source for dates and such.
- Settle: William A. Settle, Jr., Jesse James Was His Name, 1966 (I used the 1977 Bison
Jesse James (IV)
DESCRIPTION: "You've heard of heroes brave in all their glory...." These heroes are contrasted with James, who "joined the bad guerrillas," robbed banks, "invented robbing trains," avoided the Pinkertons -- and finally was shot by Robert Ford
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1966
KEYWORDS: outlaw death train betrayal
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Apr 4, 1882 - Shooting of Jesse James (then in semi-retirement under the name of Howard) by Robert Ford, a relative and a former member of his gang tempted by the $10,000 reward
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 93, "Jesse James" (5 texts, 2 tunes; this is the "E" text)
Roud #11225
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Jesse James (I)" [Laws E1] and references there
NOTES [25 words]: For full background on Frank and Jesse James, see the notes to "Jesse James (III)," the James song which has perhaps the strongest factual basis. - RBW
File: FCW093E

Jesse James (VI -- "I Wonder Where My Poor Old Jesse's Gone")
DESCRIPTION: Jesse James song recognized by the chorus, "Oh I wonder where my poor old Jesse's gone... I will meet him in that land where I've never been before." Jesse is killed by Robert Ford; his life is recalled
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1963 (The Golden Ring)
KEYWORDS: outlaw death betrayal
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Apr 4, 1882 - Shooting of Jesse James (then in semi-retirement under the name of Howard) by Robert Ford, a relative and a former member of his gang tempted by the $10,000 reward
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 187-188, "Jesse James" (1 text)
DT, JESSJAM1
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Jesse James (I)" [Laws E1] and references there
NOTES [61 words]: I don't know if this version is actually traditional; the Golden Ring text is collated, and I believe someone (Mitchell Trio?) attributed it to Paul Clayton. I've never seen a pure dyed-in-the-wool text from tradition.
For full background on Frank and Jesse James, see the notes to "Jesse James (III)," the James song which has perhaps the strongest factual basis. - RBW
File: DarNS188

Jesse James (VII - "Jesse James Was a Bandit Bold")

DESCRIPTION: Jesse and Frank James come to town with ponies for sale. While there, they attend a ball, and have great success with the girls. The local men try to attack them, but Jesse and Frank out-fight them and escape to Mexico
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (University Missourian)
KEYWORDS: outlaw dancing escape
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 401-404, "Jesse James" (3 texts, of which only the second, called "A Missouri Ballad" in the original publication, is this song)
Roud #2242
NOTES [32 words]: This is item dE44 in Laws's Appendix II.
For full background on Frank and Jesse James, see the notes to "Jesse James (III)," the James song which has perhaps the strongest factual basis. - RBW
File: Beld419b

Jesse James (VIII -- "Poor old Jesse, Ain't You Sorry?)

DESCRIPTION: "Jesse James was a man who wore a hat with a little band, There lays Jesse James in his grave. Poor old Jesse, ain't you sorry? (x3)." "Jesse James was a spy, and they shot him on the sly. How they killed Jesse James was a shame. Poor old Jesse..."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida)
KEYWORDS: outlaw death clothes
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #47, "Jesse James" (1 text)
Roud #2240
NOTES [95 words]: Roud lumps this with "Jesse James (I)" [Laws E1], probaby because the first line is somewhat similar. But that line won't scan to the same tune, and the rest of the lyrics are different. Laws does not include the Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida text with "Jesse James (I)," and I fully agree that they are separate. Morris's fragment appears unique, although it was probably inspired by, or confused with, the better-known song.
For full background on Frank and Jesse James, see the notes to "Jesse James (III)," the James song which has perhaps the strongest factual basis. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.7
File: Morr047

Jessie Munroe [Laws P40]

DESCRIPTION: Johnny is entranced by Jessie and asks her too marry, offering her houses and land. She says that his holdings are poor and he unattractive. Johnny returns to Betty, less attractive but more faithful
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Creighton-NovaScotia)
KEYWORDS: courting beauty virtue
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar,Newf)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Laws P40, "Jessie Munroe"
Peacock, pp. 291-292, "Jessie Munro" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jessie o' Dundee
DESCRIPTION: The singer returns from the war to the banks of the Tay. He courts Jessie but her father discovers them "beneath the shade." She declares she would leave Dundee with the singer. Her father takes them to be married "this night"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan5)
KEYWORDS: love marriage father
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan5 985, "Jessie o' Dundee" (1 text, 2 tunes)
Roud #6734
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Sweet Jessie o' Dundee
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD5985

Jessie of Old Rayne
DESCRIPTION: The singer is "on the main An' sailin wi' a heart deprived O' Jessie o' Old Rayne." He will miss the places "where I hae spent my youthfu' days" and Newton's woods where he used to meet Jessie. They parted "in hopes to meet again"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: love emigration farewell parting Scotland separation
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1523, "Jessie of Old Rayne" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Roud #21189
NOTES [73 words]: Greig/Duncan8: "Learnt in Rayne sixty years ago. Noted September 1906." "Rayne is a parish, which lies in Aberdeenshire Council Area, some 7 miles (12 km) northwest of Inverurie and 12 miles (19 km) south of Turriff in Aberdeenshire." (Source: Gazetteer for Scotland site).
Greig/Duncan3 has a map on p. xxxv, of "places mentioned in songs in volume 3": Newton is at coordinate (h3,v6-7) on that map [roughly 23 miles NW of Aberdeen]. - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD81523

Jessie the Flower of Dunblane
DESCRIPTION: "The sun has gone down on lofty Ben Lomond, And left the red clouds to preside o'er the scene" as the singer "muses" on "sweet Jessie the flower of Dunblane." The singer praises her beauty and modesty; he would love her even if he had high station
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1833 (Journal of the Lotos)
KEYWORDS: love courting nonballad beauty
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 266-267, "Jessie the Flower of Dunblane" (1 tune)
Jessie, the Belle at the Bar

DESCRIPTION: The singer sees Jessie working at the railroad bar. He courts her. Though warned that she is fickle, he offers to wed; she accepts -- then runs off with the costly wedding dress and marries a newspaper publisher

AUTHOR: G. Ware
EARLIEST DATE: 1884 (broadside L.C.Fol.70(121b))
KEYWORDS: courting marriage abandonment
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) US(MA,So) Canada(Mar,Newf)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Greig/Duncan4 754, "Jessie at the Railway Bar" (2 texts)
Randolph 51, "Courting Jessie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 169, "Pretty Jessie of the Railway Bar" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, pp. 70-72, "(Jessie, the Belle at the Bar)" (1 text, 1 tune) cf. Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, p. 479, "Jessie at the Railway Bar" (source notes only)
Roud #3265

BROADSIDES:
NLScotland, L.C.Fol.70(121b), "Jessie at the Railway Bar," unknown (probably Glasgow), 1884

NOTES [40 words]: The commentary for broadside NLScotland L.C.Fol.70(121b) states "the location of the railway station in 'Jessie at the Railway Bar' occasionally varies, with one version placing the events in Moorgate station rather than Brighton station." - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: R051

Jesu was Born in Bethlehem Judea

DESCRIPTION: "Jesus was born in Bethlehem (of) Jude(a), All of a maiden, thus findeth we." The steward bids Herod to come and see. The magi come. Herod orders the children of Israel slain. Jesus flees to Egypt. Herod dies and goes to hell

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: Fifteenth century (MSS. Sloane 2593, Porkington 10)
KEYWORDS: religious death travel warning MiddleEnglish
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols, #124, pp. 80-82, "(no title)" (2 texts)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #1785
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #2944
ADDITIONAL: Carleton Brown, editor, _Religious Lyrics of the XVth Century_, Oxford University Press, 1939, #87, pp. 124-125,"The Journey of the Three Kings" (1 text)
MANUSCRIPT: {MSSloane2593}, London, British Library, MS. Sloane 2593, folio 14
MANUSCRIPT: {MSPorkington10}, Aberystwyth, National Library of Wales, MS. Porkington 10, folio 198
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Saint Stephen and Herod" [Child 22] (theme of the steward telling Herod of Jesus"
NOTES [299 words]: This song is no longer found in tradition, of course, but there are several reasons to include it. First, it is found in two very important manuscripts: Sloane 2593, which is among the most important of all medieval manuscripts, and Porkington 10, which is not quite as important but is still a major source of texts. That's not quite enough, on its own, to say we should cite the piece, but the differences between the two pieces are quite noteworthy. Apart from many verbal differences, from trivial to quite significant, the two sometimes contain different stanzas:
- Only Porkington has a steward come to Herod to tell of the coming of Jesus
- Only Sloane mentions the star guiding the magi
- Only Sloane mentions the magi meeting Herod
- Only Porkington has an angel tell the Holy Family to flee Herod and guide them to Egypt
But it's the first of those points that is, to me, the clincher. There is no mention in the Bible of a Steward telling Herod of the birth of Jesus. Herod learns of it from the Magi (Matthew 2:1-11; there is no other Biblical reference to the story). The relevant part of the text in Porkington is brief but clear:
The steward was bold of that country
And bade Herod should come and see.
In other words, this version knows at least a bit of the story told in "Saint Stephen and Herod" [Child 22] -- a tale not found elsewhere. (It is perhaps a little ironic that Sloane 2593 is the source for "Saint Stephen and Herod," but it's the manuscript of this song which does not contain the incident!) if that important bit of folklore isn't enough reason to index this song, I don't know what is. For more on manuscript Sloane 2593, see the notes to "Robyn and Gandeleyn" [Child 115]. - RBW

Jesus At Thy Command
DESCRIPTION: "Jesus at Thy command I launch into the deep And leave my native land Where sin lulls all asleep." Singer trusts Christ to save him and asks for a heavenly wind to take him to a heavenly port.
AUTHOR: Augustus Montague Toplady (1740-1778)
EARLIEST DATE: 1796 (see note quoting William Allen)
KEYWORDS: religious sea ship ship nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
Roud #12925
RECORDINGS:
Frank Verrill, "Jesus At Thy Command" (on Voice02)
"["Jesus At Thy Command"] is in the Primitive Methodist Hymnal of 1889 and was written by Augustus[sic] Montague Toplady." (source: The Veteran "traditional folk music label" site). - BS Augustus Montague Toplady is most famous for writing the words to "Rock of Ages (l)"); for his history, see the notes to that song. He is credited with two volumes of religious lyrics. Nonetheless Granger's Index to Poetry lists only seven of his works which made it into their voluminous database (and it appears that two of those are actually alternate names for "Rock of Ages"). This is not one of the works they cite. - RBW

Jesus Been Here
DESCRIPTION: "Jesus been here, been here, bless my soul, and gone, Jesus been here, been here, Oh the Lord pass by"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: West Indies(Bahamas)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories 26, "Jesus Bin Hyere" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [12 words]: The description is based on the Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories text. - BS

Last updated in version 5.3
File: MSJwBIBJ

Last updated in version 5.0
File: RcJeATCo

Last updated in version 4.2
File: Edwa026
Jesus Blessed My Soul and Gone

DESCRIPTION: My Jesus has been here, Jesus blessed my soul and gone. Sister, where were you When the Lord was passing by.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE) West Indies(Bahamas)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands, p. 130, "(Oh my Jesus bin yer)" (1 text)
NOTES [84 words]: Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands's singer said the same song was called an anthem on Eleuthera in the Bahamas.
Odum and Johnson have the lines "For my Lord done been here Done bless my soul an' gone away" in "I Don't Care for Riches" (Howard W. Odum and Guy B. Johnson, The Negro and his Songs (Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1925 ("Digitized by Internet Archive"), pp. 108-109). That song has a different point to make, though the shared lines probably have a common origin. - BS

Last updated in version 4.1
File: Parp130b

Jesus Christ I Want to Find

DESCRIPTION: "Jesus Christ I want to find; Pray tell me where he is, 'Cause him alone can ease my mind And give my conscience peace." "Tell me which way my redeemer's gone." The singer describes how to recognize Jesus, and is thanked for his lecture

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 602, "Jesus Christ I Want to Find" (1 text)
Roud #11913
File: Br3602

Jesus Done Taken My Drifting Hand

DESCRIPTION: "Hush, little baby, and don't you cry; Yo' mudder an' fader is bo'n to die! Jesus done taken my driftin' han'. Good Lord, Lord, Lord! Over de hills bright shinin' lan'." "Mind out, Sister, how you step on de cross...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 580, "Hush, Little Baby" (1 text)
Roud #11896
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "All My Trials" (floating lyrics) and references there
File: Br3580

Jesus Gonna Make Up My Dyin' Bed (Tone the Bell Easy)

DESCRIPTION: "When you hear dat I'se a-dyin', I don' want nobody to mo'n... Well, well, well, tone de bell easy, Jesus gonna make up my dyin' bed. The singer recounts Jesus's death, prays that Jesus be with him, and remembers the faith of his dead mother

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Blind Willie Johnson)
KEYWORDS: Jesus death farewell religious burial nonballad
Jesus Healed the Sick

DESCRIPTION: Jesus healed the sick, blind, and crippled. He rolled the stone from his grave. He gave Lazarus and Peter, "commishun to fly"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus

FOUND IN: West Indies(Bahamas)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories 12, "Jesus Heal' the Sick" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [127 words]: The description is based on the Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories text. The line "an' he gave them commishun to fly" is sung five times and may be a response to called lines "'E roll the stone from over the grave," "Bow low," "Brother Lazarus" and "Simon Peter." - BS

I'm reminded of the story of Simon Magus and Peter in the heretical Acts of Peter (a story which has no Biblical basis at all; Simon Magus, in Acts, did deeds of power -- but repented when he was bawled out for trying to buy the Holy Spirit). Peter and Simon had a miracles contest, and one of Simon's miracles was to fly. Peter's counter-miracle was to shoot him down. I doubt anyone who knew this song would have known the "Acts of Peter," but perhaps it says something about how people think. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2

File: Edwa012

Jesus Is a Rock

DESCRIPTION: "Jesus is a rock in a wearied land, In a wearied land, in a wearied land... A shelter in a time of storm, in a time of storms." "He is whom I fix my hopes upon, A narrow way till in my view...."

AUTHOR: Probably W. E. Penn (see NOTES)

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Henry, from Hettie Twiggs)
Jesus Is the Light

DESCRIPTION: "Jesus is the light, the light of the world (x2), He shines all round us, both night and day, Jesus is the light of the world." "Har ye, say the angels, Jesus is the light of the world."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 246, "Jesus is the Light" (1 short text)
Roud #18154
NOTES [70 words]: John 1:9 reads something like "The true light [, "phos"], which enlightens [, "photizo"] everyone, was entering the world (, "kosmos")" -- referring to the Logos, but by implication to Jesus. John 8:12 has Jesus declare, "I am the light of the world. Whoever follows me will never walk in darkness but will have the light of life" (again using for "light" and for "world/cosmos/universe"). - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: KiWa246J

Jesus Isn't Coming Here to Die No More

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "He ain't coming here to die no more (x2)." Verses: "Virgin Mary had one son, The cruel Jews had him hung." "Hallelujah to the Lamb Jesus died for every man."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: Bible nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 103, "But He Ain't Comin' Here t' Die No Mo' (Jesus Ain't Comin' Here t'Die No Mo')" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 151 in the 1901 edition)
Roud #15224
NOTES [71 words]: The remaining verses in Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute follow the pattern: "He died for" x, "He died for" y, conclusion. For example, "He died for the blind, He died for the lame, He bore the pain and all
The Biblical reference is John 1:29: John the Baptist sees Jesus coming and says, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world" (King James). - BS

Last updated in version 4.0
File: Dett103

Jesus Lover of My Soul

DESCRIPTION: Original hymn: "Jesus, lover of my soul, Let me to thy bosom fly." Parody: "Jesus, lover of my soul, Set me on top of telegraph pole. When the pole begins to break, Take me down for Jesus's sake."

AUTHOR: Original words: Charles Wesley (1707-1788)
EARLIEST DATE: 1740 (Wesley _Hymns and Sacred Poems_, according to Julian); parody collected 1919
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad humorous
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE) West Indies(Bahamas,Trinidad)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit, pp. 226-227, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 347, "Jesus Lover of My Soul" (1 short text, the "telegraph pole" form)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 347, "Jesus Lover of My Soul" (1 tune plus a text excerpt, the "telegraph pole" form)
Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, p. 205, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" (1 text, 1 tune)
JournalOfAmericanFolklore, Elsie Clews Parsons, "Spirituals and Other Folklore from the Bahamas," Vol. 41, No. 162 (Oct-Dec 1928), Anthems: Rum Cay #1 p. 463, ("Jesus lover of my soul") (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Charles Johnson, One Hundred and One Famous Hymns (Hallberg, 1982), p. 41, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" (1 text, 1 tune, credited to John B. Dykes)
Roud #11737

NOTES [1099 words]: The Charles Wesley lyric seems to be very popular in churches; the Sacred Harp has it to the tune "Martin" (listed as by S[imeon] B[utler] Marsh, 1798-1875); I have seen a Baptist hymnal with both that tune (listed there as "Marsh") and the tune "Refuge" (by Joseph P. Holbrook). A Lutheran hymnal has the Marsh tune (called "Martyn"); Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills also calls his tune "Martyn." And a Methodist hymnal reveals two versions, one to "Martyn" and one called "Hollingside" by John Bacchus Dykes (1823-1876). These two also appear in the 1926 Lutheran publication The Parish School Hymnal. McKim, p. 215, lists Presbyterians as singing it to Joseph Parry's tune "Aberystwyth." My best guess is that the Dykes tune is the only one written for these lyrics.

It appears that the tunes "Martin/Martyn" and "Marsh" are the same; according to Reynolds, pp. 123, "Martyn" was written by Simeon B. Marsh in 1834 (supposedly while on horseback in New York). He used it as a tune for John Newton's "Mary at Her Savior's Tomb"; it was fitted to these words soon after and appeared in Sacred Songs for Family and Social Worship.

Marsh (according to Reynolds, p. 368) seems to have been a natural musician; having first attended a singing school in 1814, by 1817 he was teaching one. A Presbyterian layman, he lived in New York state his entire live, and became a newspaper editor in 1837.

However, I have yet to find any of these texts in tradition. The "telegraph pole" parody, by contrast, is from tradition, though it's not clear how widespread it is. - RBW

You wanted it from tradition? Uncle Dave Macon! - PJS

Charles Wesley (1707-1788) was the eighteenth child of Reverend Samuel Wesley and his mother Susanna(h) (Johnson, p. 38, spells the name "Susanna," Willson, p. 540, "Susannah"). His older brother (who was Wesley child #15) was of course John Wesley, the founder of Methodism. According to Willson, p. 540, Susannah Wesley "was a woman of deep personal religion and of inflexible will," who offered little tenderness but who drove her children to be both industrious and intellectually gifted. In John Wesley she created a rather inflexible zealot, but "Charles, the author of many famous hymns, was gentler and more poetic."
Both brothers went to Oxford (Kunitz/Haycraft, p. 557); Charles earned his B.A. in 1730 and his M.A. in 1733. Both brothers went to the American colonies in 1735, but Charles quickly returned home due to ill health. In 1749, he married Sarah Gwynne, a singer who accompanied him on his travels and helped popularize his songs. They had two surviving sons, who also proved musically gifted.

It was John Wesley, not Charles, who had a conversion experience when he encountered the Moravian Brotherhood (Charles too met with them, according to Johnson, p.38, but did not have quite the same effect on him). It was this which led John, originally a strict Anglican high churchman, to begin to change his approach (Willson, p. 540). Charles did have a major spiritual experience, and had it before John (Rudin, p. 12), but it didn't so much change his religious approach as simply make him more religiously active.

It is interesting to wonder how much difference John Wesley would have made without Charles. Kunitz/Haycraft, p. 557, declare that Charles shared with John "much of the labor, though little of the fame, of founding Methodism. Except that, as he declared, he was born to be a follower and his brother to be a leader. Charles'[s] part in the movement was as active as, and often more stable than, that of John. His greatest distinction is that he was not only the 'poet of the Revival,' but also the most prolific hymn writer of all time. He wrote over 6500 hymns."

Properly, we should say hymn texts; he rarely if ever produced an original tune, and many of his texts are in fact sung to multiple melodies. Examples of that phenomenon in the Index are filed under "Am I Born to Die? (Idumea)," "Hark! The Herald Angels Sing" (yes, really -- not everyone uses the Mendelssohn tune),"A Charge to Keep," and apparently "And Must I Be to Judgment Brought?" He may also have been responsible for the original of "You've Got To Be a Lover of the Lord."

According to Julian, p. 590, this was "1st pub[lished] in the Wesley Hy[mn]s and Sac[red] Poems, 1740, in 5 st[anzas] of 8 l[ines], and headed 'in Temptations.'" Julian adds, on p. 591, "Many charming accounts of the origin of this hymn are extant, but unfortunately some would add, they have no foundation in fact. The most that we can say is that it was written shortly after the great spiritual change which the author underwent in 1738; and that it was published within a few months of the official date (1739) which is given as the founding of Methodism. It has nothing whatsoever to do with the struggles, and dangers with lawless men, in after years. Nor with a dove driven to Wesley's bosom by a hawk, nor with a sea-bird driven to the same shelter by a pitiless storm."

The text has been heavily modified over the years -- Julian lists dozens of significant ones. Julian, p. 590, helps to explain why: "The opening stanza of this hymn has given rise to questions which have resulted in more than twenty different readings of the first four lines. The first difficulty is the term Lover as applied to our Lord. From an early date this tender expression was felt by many to be beneath the solemn dignity of a hymn addressed to the Divine Being. Attempts have been made to increase the reverence of the opening line by the sacrifice of its pathos and poetry. The result was "Jesu, Refuge of my soul," a reading which is still widely adopted; "Jesus, Savior of my soul," and "Father, Refuge of my soul." Wesley's reading, however, has high sanction. In the Wisdom of Solomon, xi.26, we read: "But Thou sparest all for they are Thine, O Lord, Thou Lover of souls." Julian also notes that "The second difficulty was in [lines] 3, 4," which originally read "While the nearer waters roll, While the tempest is still high." For some reason, this bothered enough editors that Julian lists 17 different changes. According to McKim, p. 215, despite the fact that this is regarded as perhaps the best Wesley hymn, it did not appear in the official Methodist hymnal until nine years after Wesley's death. - RBW

The Parsons text follows the first four lines of the hymn (through "While the tempest still is high") but then goes on, "leave me not alone" and "when trouble taky you, shine! When frien' forsaky you all de way, Cyas' yer eyes on Jesus. Shine, shine, shine!" - BS

Bibliography

- Johnson: Charles Johnson, One Hundred and One Famous Hymns, Hallberg, 1982
- Julian: John Julian, editor, A Dictionary of Hymnology, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes)
- Kunitz/Haycraft: Stanley J. Kunitz and Howard Haycraft, Editors, British Authors Before 1800: A Biographical Dictionary, H. W. Wilson, 1952 (I use the fourth printing of 1965)
- Rudin: Cecilia Margaret Rudin, Stories of Hymns We Love, John Rudin & Company, 1934 (I
Jesus Loves Me

DESCRIPTION: "I am so glad that my father's in heaven, Wonderful words in the book he has given. Oh, wonderful things in the Bible I see, But this is the greatest, that Jesus loves me." "I am so glad that Jesus loves me." Even if the singer "wanders away," he is loved

AUTHOR: Philip P. Bliss (1838-1876) (source: Jones-MinstrelOfTheAppalachians-Bascom-Lamar-Lunsford)
KEYWORDS: love religious nonballad Jesus

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jones-MinstrelOfTheAppalachians-Bascom-Lamar-Lunsford, p. 225, "Jesus Loves Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9135
SAME TUNE:
Chiefly Loves Me (File: Tawn014)
NOTES [14 words]: For more on Philip Paul Bliss, see the notes to "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.1
File: JoLun225

Jesus Met the Woman at the Well

DESCRIPTION: Jesus meets a (Samaritan) woman as she comes to draw water, and tells her "everything [she] has ever done." She proclaims him a prophet, and announces the news in the town

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (recorded by the Selah Jubilee Quartet)
KEYWORDS: Bible religious Jesus

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 59-60, "(Jesus Met the Woman at the Well)" (1 text plus a fragment); p. 252, "Jesus Met the Woman at the Well" (1 tune, partial text)
ADDITIONAL: Harold Courlander, _A Treasury of Afro-American Folklore_, Crown Publishers, 1976, p. 325, "(no title)" (1 text); pp. 348-349, "(When Jesus Met the Woman at the Well" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #21781
RECORDINGS:
Pilgrim Travelers, "Jesus Met the Woman at the Well" (Specialty 329, n.d.)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "See the Woman at the Well" (subject)
cf. "Lift Him Up That's All" (subject)
NOTES [11 words]: For the story of Jesus and the Woman of Samaria, see John 4:5-26 - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: CNFM059

Jesus Never Come in the Morning

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, Jesus never come in the morning, Neither in the heat of the day, But come in the cool of the evening And wash my sins away." The singer warns against riches, looks forward to the end of the war, and is willing to die for God

AUTHOR: unknown
Jesus on the Water-Side

DESCRIPTION: "Heaven bell a-ring, I know the road (x3), Jesus sitting on the water-side." "Do come along, do let us go (x3), Jesus sitting on the water-side."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, pp. 28-29, "Jesus on the Water-Side" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11978
File: AWG028

Jesus Says Go

DESCRIPTION: Singer is told that if he wants to be converted he should pray. He does, until his heart melts, then "my hands was tied, my feet was bound...." Cho: "Jesus says go -- I'll go with you/Preach the gospel and I'll preach with you...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recorded by Mississippi Jubilee Singers)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer is told that if he wants to be converted he should pray. He does, until his heart melts, then "my hands was tied, my feet was bound/The elements opened and the Lord come down/The voice I heard sounds so sweet/The love run out at the sole of my feet" Cho: "Jesus says go -- I'll go with you/Preach the gospel and I'll preach with you/Lord if I go, tell me what to say/For they won't believe on me"

KEYWORDS: ordeal religious Jesus

FOUND IN: US(SE)

Roud #6984

RECORDINGS:
Dillard Chandler, "Jesus Says Go" (on Chandler01, DarkHoll)
Heavenly Gospel Singers, "You Go and I'll Go With You" (on Bluebird B-6928, 1937)
George Herod, "Lord, When I Was a Sinner" (on MuSouth07)
Mississippi Jubilee Singers, "Jesus Said If You Go I'll Go" (on Paramount 12495, 1927)
Sparkling Four Quartette, "They Won't Believe in Me" (on OKeh 8741, 1929)
Cas Wallin, "The Preacher's Song" (on FarMtns3)

NOTES [89 words]: Cas Wallin said that this song was often sung by members of Holiness churches. Mary Sands, one of Cecil Sharp's most valuable ballad sources (and an ancestor of Wallin), claimed to have written it; the fact that it was also collected in 1954 from George Herod, an African-American from near Scott Station, Alabama, and recorded in 1927 by the Mississippi Jubilee Singers, makes this unlikely although not impossible. - PJS

One suspects that this is another instance of the informant saying "written" when we would say "written out." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: RcJeSaGo

Jesus Says, "You Goes and I Goes Wid You"

DESCRIPTION: Jesus says, "You goes and I goes wid you; Preach de gospel and I'll preach wid you." The singer asks Jesus to tell him what to say. After some back-and-forth, the singer reports, "De elements opened and de Lawd come down."
Jesus Setta Me Free

DESCRIPTION: "Let's go and tell it on the mountains (x3), Jesus setta me free." "It's come on everybody in the marvelous light, Jesus setta me free, Where the yoke is easy and the burden is light, Jesus setta me free." "Let's go and tell it on the mountains...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Forbes)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 100, "Jesus Setta Me Free" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST ChFRA100 (Full)
Roud #16941
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Go Tell It on the Mountain (I -- Christmas)" (lyrics)
cf. "Go Tell It on the Mountain (II -- Freedom)" (lyrics)
File: ChFRA100

Jesus, Hear Our Prayer

DESCRIPTION: "Jesus, hear our prayer, For thy children care, When we sleep, protect and bless us, With thy pardon now refresh us, Leave thy peace divine with us, We are thine."

AUTHOR: Words: Count Nicholas L. Zinzendorf / Music: Adam Drese (source: Salt-BuckeyeHeritage-OhioHistory)
EARLIEST DATE: 1819 (source: Hymnary.org; presumably the German is older)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Salt-BuckeyeHeritage-OhioHistory, p. 28, "Jesus, Hear Our Prayer" (1 short text, 1 tune)
NOTES [134 words]: Salt offers not the faintest evidence that this is traditional; she includes it because there were Moravians in Ohio, and they might have sung it.
John Julian, editor, A Dictionary of Hymnology, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes), [volume II], p. 1301 says Count Zinzendorf was born in Dresden in 1700, and gained a license to preach at Tübingen in 1734. He died in 1760. His biography is said to fill eight volumes.
He has been called the "second founder" of Moravianism. He supposedly wrote his first hymn at age 12, and produced more than 2000 before he died.
Of the twenty listed by Julian as being relatively widespread, I don't recognize any. This particular piece, based on the publications listed at Hymnary.org, seems to have been known only to Moravians. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: Salt028

Jesus, Won't You Come B'm-By?

DESCRIPTION: "You ride dat horse, You call him Macaroni; Jesus, won't you come b'm-by? You ride him in de mornin' And you ride him in de evenin'; Jesus, won't you come b'm-by? De Lord knows de world's gwine to end up...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious horse nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 60, "Jesus, Won't You Come By-and-bye?" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 469, "Jesus, Won't You Come B'm-By?" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 11, (no title) (1 fragment, a single stanza that might be this)
Roud #12021
File: San469

Jeune Fille Sans Amant, La (The Young Girl Without a Lover)
DESCRIPTION: French. A girl says she must have a lover. Mother says wait; go to the convent. The girl wants to go to a lover. Mother says here's money to get to the convent; the girl says with that money I will buy myself a man. You will be sorry, says the mother.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage sex warning dialog humorous lover mother
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peacock, pp. 293-294, "La Jeune Fille Sans Amant" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Whistle, Daughter, Whistle" (theme)
File: Pea293

Jeune Fille si Amoureuse, La (The Girl So In Love)
DESCRIPTION: French. A girl says she must have a lover. Her mother sends her to a convent. At the convent a Brother consoles her. A Sister says that the Father would marry them. The girl says that her lover is not here but is a slave among the barbarians.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage captivity love separation lover sailor
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peacock, pp. 525-526, "La Jeune Fille si Amoureuse" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Belfast Sailor" (theme)
File: Pea525

Jeune Militaire, Le (The Young Soldier)
DESCRIPTION: French. After years in the army a soldier stops at an inn. The hostess cries; she recognizes him as her husband. He asks why she has more children. She had reports that he had died and so remarried. He asks about her husband. She gives him gold to leave
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1983 (Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage marriage reunion children wife soldier adultery
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 59, "Le Jeune Militaire" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Anita Best, "Le Jeune Militaire" (on NFABest01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Brave Marin" (theme)
Jilson Setters's Blind Song

DESCRIPTION: "In sorrow and sadness I'm destined to roam, Distracted and forsaken I wander alone." The singer hears the birds and feels the breezes but cannot see nature or people. He prays God to take him to heaven "where the blind may all see."

AUTHOR: Jilson Setters (James W. Day)

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)

KEYWORDS: injury hardtimes music rambling

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 181-183, (no title) (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "The Blind Fiddler" (theme) and references there

Jilson Setters's C.I.O. Song

DESCRIPTION: "I am going to tell you people, Perhaps you do not know, We all should work together And protect the C.I.O." The singer urges men to "stick together And defend the union plan." He points out that laborers do all the work

AUTHOR: James W. Day ("Jilson Setters")

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)

KEYWORDS: labor-movement nonballad

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 244-245, (no title) (1 text)

Jilson Setters's Courting Song

DESCRIPTION: "It was all in the month of winter, I arrived by wagon to this place; I chanced to meet with a youthful lady...." He courts the girl and asks her to come away; her mother refuses and he is forced to depart; he hopes to meet the listeners in heaven

AUTHOR: James W. Day ("Jilson Setters")

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)

KEYWORDS: courting rambling rejection

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 184-185, (no title) (1 text)

Jilson Setters's Indian Song

DESCRIPTION: "In an early day folks crossed the sea To explore the Indians' land." The Indians befriended the Whites; "Little did the Indian think They would spoil his hunting ground." "The white man done the Indian wrong"; they go to war -- but lose for lack of guns

AUTHOR: James W. Day ("Jilson Setters")

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)

KEYWORDS: Indians(Am.) hunting exploration war technology

FOUND IN: US(Ap)
Jim Along Josie

DESCRIPTION: Originally a blackface minstrel piece, now often reduced to odd lyrics held together by the refrain, "Hey jim-along, jim-along Josie; Hey jim-along, jim along Jo." Sample verse: "Any pretty girl that wants a beau, Just fall in the arms of Jim Along Joe"

AUTHOR: Edward Harper? (see NOTES)

EARLIEST DATE: 1840 (sheet music, according to Dichter/Shapiro, p. 52)

KEYWORDS: nonsense lyric playparty

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,So)

REFERENCES (7 citations):
    Randolph 575, "Jim Along Josie" (1 text plus a fragment)
    Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 266-267, "Old Jay Bird" (1 text, 1 tune)
    Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 145-146, "Old Jay Bird" (1 text, 1 tune)
    Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 180, "Git Along Josie" (1 text, 1 tune)
    Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 105, "Jam A-long, Josey" (1 text, 1 tune); also probably p. 106 (no title), (1 text, using this chorus in some instances; the verses include the terrapin and the toad, "My ole missus promise me When she die she set me free," "You get there before I do....")
    Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty, p. 117, "Jim Along Jo" (1 text, 1 tune)
    Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, pp. 103-104, "Jim Along Josey" (1 text, 1 tune)
    Roud #4618

RECORDINGS:
    Coon Creek Girls, "Jim Along Josie" (Songs from Renfro Valley - Bell, mx. 2002, n.d., postwar)
    Lawrence Older, "Jim Along Josie" (on LOlder01)
    Pete Seeger, "Jim Along Josie" (on PeteSeeger3, PeteSeegerCD03)
    Tom Smith, "Hey, Get Along, Josie" (on USWarnerColl01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
    cf. "The Banks of the Arkansas" (lyrics)

SAME TUNE:

New Comic Song ("Come listen to me and I'll sing you a song") (Harrison campaign song) (A. B. Norton, _Songs of the People in the Log Cabin Days of Old Tippecanoe_, A. B. Norton & Co., 1888 (available on Google Books), p. 59)

NOTES [144 words]: Spaeth suggests that this is a minstrel tune, and he's probably right. He suggests that it was written by Edward Harper, who presented it in his 1838 play "The Free Nigger of New York." Jon W. Finson, _The Voices That Are Gone: Themes in Nineteenth-Century American Popular Song_, Oxford University Press, 1994 also credits it to Harper, but dates it to 1840. But it has entered oral tradition -- though perhaps in a filed-down form; Spaeth's text has a four-line verse while the traditional forms often use two-line stanzas. The choruses are the same. According to the report in Harry Dichter and Elliott Shapiro, _Early American Sheet Music: Its Lure and Its Lore, 1768-1889_, R. R. Bowker, 1941, p. 52, this is "As sung by Mr. John N. Smith. Arranged for the Piano Forte by An Eminent Professor." No composer is listed. The music was published by Firth & Hall. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: R575

Jim and Me

DESCRIPTION: Singer says that he and his old friend Jim used to be sinners, smokers and drinkers, but that God has saved them, and their money is now spent on their families. "What our God has done for us/He's done for Jim and me"

AUTHOR: unknown
Jim Blake
DESCRIPTION: "Jim Blake, your wife is dying," came over the wires tonight." Railroad engineer Blake wires back that he is coming. But his train is wrecked, "derailed by an open switch." Blake's last message to his wife says they'll meet in heaven
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Railroad Man's Magazine, according to Cohen)
KEYWORDS: train wreck disaster death husband wife FOUND IN: US(MW) Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 332-337, "Jim Blake's Message" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 209, "Jim Blake" (1 text, 1 tune)
Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, pp. 139-140, "Jim Blake" (1 text)
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 182-183, "The Midnight Express" (1 text)
cf. Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, p. 479, "Jim Blake" (source notes only)
Roud #3531
RECORDINGS:
The Carter Family, "Jim Blake's Message" (Decca 5467, 1935)
Vernon Dalhart, "Jim Blake" (Brunswick 173, 1927); "Jim Blake the Engineer" (Columbia 15192-D [as Al Craver], 1927)
Leonard Molloy, "Jim Blake" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
File: GC479b

Jim Bludsoe
DESCRIPTION: Jim Bludso(e) was foul-mouthed, keeping more than one girl (wife?), and often found near a fight. But he is a good man underneath. When the Prairie Belle catches fire, he keeps the engine running long enough that every passenger lives although he dies
AUTHOR: John Hay (1838-1905)
EARLIEST DATE: 1871 (Pike County Ballads; see NOTES)
KEYWORDS: death ship disaster fire
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 240-241, "Jim Bludsoe" (1 text)
Johnson-BawdyBalladsAndLustyLyrics, pp. 94-96, "Jim Bludso" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Martin Gardner, editor, _Famous Poems from Bygone Days_, Dover, 1995, pp. 85-87, "Jim Bludso of the Prairie Belle" (1 text)
ST Pet240 (Partial)
Roud #9087
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Grouchy Bill" (theme of a dead rescuer)
NOTES [498 words]: Some readers may have heard this sung rather than recited, perhaps by Cathy Barton and Dave Para, but all tunes are modern (e.g. Para supplied the melody for the Barton/Para recording). It is properly a poem -- probably the best-known work of John (Milton) Hay, a sort of a latter-day Chaucer in that he was both statesman and poet.
Jameson, p. 298, sums up the early part of Hay's career as follows: he was "born in 1838, was assistant secretary to President Lincoln in 1861. He served several months in the Civil War, and from 1865 to 1867 was secretary of legation to Paris, charge d'affairs at Vienna until 1868, and secretary at Madrid until 1870. He became associated with the New York Tribune, and from 1879 to 1881 was First Assistant Secretary of State. He is widely known for his dialect sketches and poems, and for Nicolay and Hay's life of Lincoln."

Nicolay is John Nicolay, Lincoln's other private secretary; it was he who convinced Lincoln to hire Hay in 1861 (CDAB, p. 415). Their joint work, published 1890, was Abraham Lincoln: A History (Boatner, p. 388); it ran to ten volumes (Hart, p. 358).

Hay's literary output was modest: "He is known for his Pike County Ballads... (1871), frontier poems in dialect, and The Breadwinners (1884), a novel published anonymously" (Benet, p. 486). CDAB, p. 416, described the latter as "a satirical novel which attacked labor unions and defended economic individualism." This poem is from Pike County Ballads, and is based on the story of an actual engineer named Oliver Fairchild (Benet, p. 560).

Julian, p. 1646, reports that Hay was "an office bearer in the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant, Washington, D.C." Julian adds that several of his poems have come into use as hymns: "From Sinai's Cloud of Darkness," "Lord, from Far-Severed Climes We Come," and "Not in Dumb Resignation." They don't sound very singable to me....

Sources cannot seem to agree on whether the original poem called the hero "Jim Bludso" or "Jim Bludsoe."

Hart, p. 358, describes Pike County Ballads as "dialect poems about the Illinois frontier"; Hay himself had been born in Indiana and headed west. His other well-known poem is "Little Breeches." According to Hofstadter, p. 164, it was Hay who described the Spanish-American conflict of 1898 as "our splendid little war," which both tells you about his imperialist tendencies and shows that he never spent much time among the troops.

In 1898, Hay was appointed Secretary of State, during the McKinley administration (CDAB, p. 416), and held the post into the Theodore Roosevelt administration (Morison, p. 818) until his death in 1905. In that post, he created the Open Door Policy with China (Morison, p. 807) and helped negotiate the treaties which allowed for the building of the Panama Canal (Boatner, p. 388; Morison, pp. 824-825) as well as promptly recognizing the independence of Panama (Morison, p. 825).

Tyler Dennett wrote a biography of Hay in the 1930s; I have not seen it. - RBW

Bibliography

- Boatner: Mark M. Boatner III, The Civil War Dictionary, 1959 (there are many editions of this very popular work; mine is a Knopf hardcover)
- Julian: John Julian, editor, A Dictionary of Hymnology, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes)

Jim Bobo's Fatal Ride

DESCRIPTION: "Jim Bobo rode a safety wheel. He rode with all his might. "The wheel was built for only one... But he had often made the run With two or sometimes three." When riding with Little Willie, he crashes. The child survives but Bobo is killed

AUTHOR: D.H.H. ? (initials found on the earliest copy)

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Nashville Banner, according to Wolfe/Boswell-
Jim Brooks

DESCRIPTION: "What became of Jim Brooks, did you ask me?" The singer doesn't know, but thinks he is in a land without logs or snow. When the child of a logger wants to see the trees being cut, a log falls toward him. Jim saves the boy but dies himself

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan)

KEYWORDS: logger rescue death children

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Jan 6, 1872 - Edward Stokes shoots Jim Fisk, "his rival for... the actress Josie Mansfield." Stokes (who, despite the song, was not rich) spent four years in prison for manslaughter

FOUND IN: US(MW,NE,Ro,So)

REFERENCES (16 citations):
Laws F18, "Jim Fisk"
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 90-96, "Jim Fisk" (2 texts, 1 tune, plus a copy of the cover of the sheet music)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 111-113, "Jim Fisk Song" (1 text plus a copy of the sheet music cover)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 415-416, "Jim Fisk" (1 text)
Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 30-31, "Jim Fisk" (1 text)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 187-188, "Stokes's Verdict" (1 text, 1 tune)
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 207, "Jim Fisk" (1 text)
Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster, pp. 213-215, "Jim Fisk" (1 text, 1 tune)
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, p. 75, "Jim Fiske" (1 fragment, linked to this mostly on the strength of the line "He never went back on the poor.")
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 49-50, "(no title)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #137, "Jim Fisk" (1 text)
NOTES [764 words]: Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety calls "Jubilee Jim" Fisk (1834-1872) "Jay Gould's fellow bandit in Wall Street." Which is quite a statement, give that Gould was "a man whose name, it was said, was spoken by decent people only after sprinkling disinfectant" (Graff, pp. 25-26).

The description is apt but incomplete. Fisk, unlike Gould, was largely a showman -- DAB, volume III, p. 414, notes that after his very brief schooling and a couple of minor jobs, he took employment as "salesman with his father's 'traveling emporium,' which he later purchased and operated himself, graciously admitting his father to his employ."

Bunting, p. 96, describes him this way: "Fisk was a preposterous figure, a kind of caricature of what he believed the world would admire and envy. Ostentatious, self-indulgent, promiscuous (he would be gunned down, many years later, by the husband of a woman he was seeing), a militia 'colonel' in the war and, by his own authority, admiral of a steamship line."

Economic conditions at the end of the Civil War hurt his business, but by 1866 he had founded the brokerage firm of Fisk & Belden.

It was after this that he started working with Gould to wrest control of the Erie Railroad from Cornelius Vanderbilt. His actions in this regard, according to Adams, pp. 218-219, were patently immoral -- although apparently technically legal because enough state legislators had been bribed that they changed the rules. In the conflict, Fisk and friends printed up ten million dollars of fake Erie stock, which they sold at discount, and started buying up real stock. Thus they ended up with both control of the company and a lot of money. They also issued what appear to have been a series of margin calls, resulting in a stock market crash.

Gould and Fisk weren't done. After the War, the goal of the Grant administration was to restore the nation to the gold standard, getting rid of greenbacks (Bunting, p. 95). Gould and Fisk realized that, if they could learn in advance how much gold the Treasury would release at its regular auctions, they could manipulate the price. So they worked to try to get this information (Bunting, pp. 95-96) -- what we would now call "insider trading."

As a matter of fact, they failed to get what they wanted, resulting in the "Black Friday" gold crash of September 24, 1869 (Bunting, pp. 97-98), with the result that "the business of the whole country was paralyzed for weeks' and the 'foundations of business morality' shaken" (Adams, p. 219). DAB, Volume III, p. 515, says that Fisk went on to repudiate many of his contracts, leaving the blame at the door of his 'responsible partner' Belden.

It's hard for me to see any real difference between Fisk's business practices and those of his contemporary robber barons, though -- and, unlike many speculators, he did try to appeal to the public (he has been called "the most opulent of the robber barons"). According to Gilbert-LostChords, he sent supplies to help the survivors of the Chicago Fire (October 8, 1871).

DAB, Volume III, p. 515, says that he kept "numerous mistresses" in addition to his wife Lucy D. Moore (whom he had married in 1855), but that Josie Mansfield was his favorite. Stokes shot Fisk partly over the woman and partly over a business quarrel. It is ironic that it is Fisk's murder, rarely mentioned in the histories, that gained him a place in oral tradition.

Fisk's assassin, Stokes, died in 1901, reportedly having spent his last years in neurotic fear of Fisk's ghost (e.g. Stokes would only sleep in lighted rooms).

There is a twentieth century biography, W. A. Swanberg, Jim Fisk: The Career of an Improbable Rascal, Scribner's, 1974. I have not read it.

Much additional information can be found in Cohen, who notes incidentally that the recorded versions of this song are generally much shorter than the original "Stokes' Verdict" text. Botkin, apparently quoting Barry, claims there are three Jim Fisk songs. This one (which exists in many variants, but is recognized by the fact that most stanzas end with the word "poor") is said to be the "most popular" -- and is, as of this writing, the only one I have encountered.

Spaeth, A History of Popular Music in America, mentions this song several times, noting on p. 217 both the fact that this song was attributed to William J. Scanlon (whom he calls a typical composer of the era) and the difficulty with this attribution: The first sheet music, published in 1874, has the initials "J. S.," rather than "W. J. S.," and Scanlon in any case was only 15 at the time. - RBW

Bibliography
Jim Greene of Tennessee

DESCRIPTION: "Jim Green was supposed to be The bravest man in Tennessee." When the circus comes to town, offering $100 to someone who leads the lion, Jim turns it down, Greene declares that he doesn't need education to determine, "I ain't gonne lead no lions around."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (collected from Dr. Edward J. Rees by Boswell; the gimmick is older)
KEYWORDS: animal humorous money
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 52, pp. 89-90, "Jim Greene of Tennessee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11026
File: BosWo052

Jim Haggerty's Story

DESCRIPTION: The speaker and his companion go down to town, where the companion will confront a man hired to kill him. They enter the bar. The hired gun's girlfriend begs him not to shoot; the other is her father. But both men draw and fire and are killed

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Lomax)
KEYWORDS: death father family homicide
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 135-136, "Jim Haggerty's Story" (1 text)
Roud #15550
NOTES [31 words]: While this may be legitimate folklore (it has rather a tall tale feel), there is no evidence that it was ever a song, or traveled in the same traditional circles as ordinary folk songs. - RBW
File: LxA135

Jim Harris

DESCRIPTION: Famous captain Jim Harris, in Ronald P out of St Kyran's, runs down the Irene anchored in Paradise Sound. "It's all right when the wheel goes up, till it turns for to come down And you might make that same mistake as Jim Harris in Paradise Sound."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou)
KEYWORDS: sea ship crash
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 60, "Jim Harris" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #26486
NOTES [41 words]: St Kyran's and Paradise Sound are in Placentia Bay, west of the Avalon Peninsula and on the south coast of Newfoundland. The song places the incident on May 31, 1934. It appears neither ship was lethally damaged and there was no loss of life. - BS
Jim Hatfield's Boy

DESCRIPTION: "You're sending me for life, judge, For killing Bill McCoy, But maybe you don't know, Judge, that I'm Jim Hatfield's boy." The singer, unnamed, describes the history of the Hatfield/McCoy feud and his need for revenge

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)

KEYWORDS: feud death mother children revenge trial judge punishment

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1880 - Beginning of the Hatfield/McCoy feud

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 13-16, (no title) (1 text, 1 tune)
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, p. 248, "(Jim Hatfield's Son)" (1 excerpt)

ST ThBdM013 (Partial)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Death of Fan McCoy" (subject) and references there

NOTES [12 words]: For details on the Hatfield/McCoy feud, see "The Death of Fan McCoy." - RBW

File: ThBdM013

Jim Jones at Botany Bay

DESCRIPTION: The singer, Jim Jones, is taken, tried, and sentenced to transportation. En route, his ship is attacked by pirates, but the crew holds them off. Arriving in Australia, Jones vows to escape, join the bushrangers, and get revenge

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Old Pioneering Days in the Sunny South)

KEYWORDS: outlaw poaching trial transportation pirate

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (10 citations):
Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 96, "Jim Jones at Botany Bay" (1 text)
Paterson/Fahey/Seal-OldBushSongs-CentenaryEdition, pp. 50-52, "Jim Jones at Botany Bay" (1 text)
Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 28-29, "Jim Jones at Botany Bay" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fahey-PintPotAndBilby, pp. 8-9, "Jim Jones at Botany Bay" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, pp. 12-13, "Jim Jones" (1 text, 1 tune)
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 11-12, "Jim Jones" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ward-PenguinBookOfAustralianBallads, pp. 46-46, "Jim Jones at Botany Bay" (1 text)
Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads, p. 3, "Jim Jones at Botany Bay" (1 text)
Bill Beatty, _A Treasury of Australian Folk Tales & Traditions_, 1960 (I use the 1969 Walkabout Paperbacks edition), pp. 264-265, "Jim Jones" (1 text)

ST PBB096 (Partial)

Roud #5478

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Bold Jack Donahoe" (tune) and references there

NOTES [116 words]: John S. Manifold, _Who Wrote the Ballads? Notes on Australian Folksong_, Australasian Book Society, 1964, p. 29, says of this song, "the tune to which 'Jim Jones' is sung is Irish, but the words carry none of the political references so common in Irish ballads, and the hero himself comes from England. Since [Jack] Donahue is mentioned as being alive and famous, we might not be far wrong in dating the 'original' of this ballad to 1829 or 1830 -- close, in fact, to the date at which one Jim Jones joined with William Swallow in seizing the colonial brig _Cyprus_ in Recherche Bay! It is just remotely possible that this Jones may have been the original individual composer of this ballad." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2
Jim Larkin, R.I.P.

DESCRIPTION: Jim Larkin fought the Peelers in 1913 and "was treated to the batons by the Forces of the Crown." "The worker is a freeman now by his persevering fight." "R.I.P"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1947 ("Sold in the streets of Dublin the day of James Larkin's funeral," according to OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)

KEYWORDS: strike violence labor-movement Ireland memorial death police

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

Jan 30, 1947 - "James Larkin died in his sleep." (source: _James Larkin_ on the Spartacus Educational site)

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):

OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 20, "Jim Larkin, R.I.P" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [1101 words]: Larkin founded the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union in 1909. "By 1913 so many Dublin workers had joined the IT&GWU that employers refused to employ unionised workers, resulting in the infamous Dublin Lock-Out when over 100,000 workers were sacked and many more refused admittance to their workplace for over eight months. After the Lock-Out the IT&GWU was firmly established."

From 1914 to 1920 he organized workers in New York, and Larkin founded the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union in 1909. "By 1913 so many Dublin workers had joined the IT&GWU that employers refused to employ unionised workers, resulting in the infamous Dublin Lock-Out when over 100,000 workers were sacked and many more refused admittance to their workplace for over eight months. After the Lock-Out the IT&GWU was firmly established."

From 1914 to 1920 he organised workers in New York and was jailed until 1923 for "criminal syndicalism." He returned to Ireland and established the Worker's Union. He was later elected to the Dublin City Council and Dail Eireann. (source: Searc's Web Guide to 20th Century Ireland - James Larkin (1876-1947)). - BS

That Dublin workers needed organization around the turn of the twentieth century is hardly to be denied. According to Golway, p. 207, prior to the activities of Larkin, "nearly half of all annual deaths [in Dublin] took place in workhouses, asylums, and prisons"; he points out that many workers were putting in seventy hour weeks to earn pay equivalent to what we would now call only about half of the "poverty line."

Similarly Kee, p. 195): "The poverty and squalor of much of Dublin in the early years of the twentieth century appalled all who encountered it. A government report issued in 1914 assessed that of a Dublin population of 304,000, some 194,000, or about sixty-three percent, could be reckoned 'working classes'. The majority of these working classes lived in tenement houses, almost half of them with no more than one room to each family. Thirty-seven per cent of the entire working class of Dublin lived at a density of more than six persons per room; fourteen per cent in houses declared 'unfit for human habitation.'"

Moody/Martin/Keogh/Kiely, pp. 262-263, report that "Dublin had one of the most underfed, worst-housed, and badly paid populations in Europe. Twenty-one thousand families lived in single-room tenements. The death-rate at birth of 27.6 per 1,000 was higher than any other city in Europe (with Moscow second to Dublin)." They report on p. 263 that Marx, Engels, and Lenin all thought Ireland a very likely place for the Communist Revolution to begin. (They were, of course, wrong -- there was a revolution, but not that kind of revolution.)

Larkin's troubles with the British police were not entirely related to his union activities, though. Born in Liverpool in 1874, he stowed away for America in 1893 and was deported back to Britain. Becoming a dockworker, he was forced to join a union in 1901 -- and soon became so pro-Union that he was fired and became an organizer (Edwards, p. 111 note). He did not settle in Ireland until 1906/1907, when James Sexton (head of the National Union of Dock Labourers) sent him to Belfast to organize the dock workers there.

Larkin was a fine choice for the role. According to O'Connor, pp. 54-55, "Larkin was a remarkable orator and journalist who could lift the people from their knees woth a brilliant phrase. He had a voice that could carry across a prairie, and a towering, crag-like presence. His quivering face... became the symbol of hope to the downtrodden and hungry masses who listened to him."

Larkin did manage to bring many of the workers into a union, leading them on strike late in 1907.
The strike turned violent, though some of the police sided with Larkin. With the union going bankrupt, Sexton settled without Larkin's agreement. Larkin therefore broke away from Sexton's group to form the IT&GWU in 1908. Socialist in principles, Larkin was associated with James Connolly (1868-1916; for more on him, see "James Connolly") in the United Tramway Company strike. This turned into a lockout as William Martin Murphy, who was responsible for management bargaining, set out to destroy Larkin (Townshend, p. 48; O'Connor, pp. 55-56).

Larkin, who had spent a few weeks in prison before the government relented (Townshend, p. 49), rose to fine heights of oratory (when the Catholic hierarchy opposed his union, he declared, "They cannot frighten me with hell. Better to be in hell with Dante and Davitt than to be in heaven with [Ulster leader Edward] Carson and Murphy"; see O'Connor, p. 57). But strikers were starving, and the government blocked all attempts to help them (O'Connor, p. 56). Larkin fled Ireland after the strike fizzled in 1914 -- while Connolly stayed, and was one of the instigators of the Easter Rising. Larkin of course went to America, where he was imprisoned during a "Red Scare" in 1916 (O'Connor, p. 55).

Larkin came back to Ireland in 1923, to find that his own Union -- which was about twenty times as big as when he left home -- had no leadership place for him. He founded a socialist political party; though he eventually joined the Labour Party, he spent most of the rest of his life feuding with his old associates. Still, he was remembered by the people as a founder of the union movement. Regarding his relations with other leaders, Kee writes (p. 198), "Subsequent dramatic events... have had the effect of making Connolly seem the major labour figure in twentieth-century Irish history.... But the fact that Connolly was to be cut off in his prime and win a martyr's crown in 1916, while Larkin, accidentally missing the heroics, was to live on to 1948 through years of Irish disillusion, political quarrelling, and personal identification with Soviet Communism, should not blind one historically to the other fact that it was Larkin who first effectively brought the old incoherent national emotions into Irish twentieth-century labour relations."

The song's description of fighting the Peelers in 1913 appears to be a reference to events of August 31, 1913. Larkin had been arrested for seditious libel on August 28, but was released on bail. He was supposed to speak in Dublin on August 31. He appeared in disguise, but it was clear it was him. Once the crowd started cheering him, the police attacked the crowd, resulting in one death and many injuries (O'Connor, p. 56).

This is not the only song about Larkin and 1913; Harte, pp. 32-33, prints a piece, "Dublin City, 1913" by Donagh McDonagh, which covers events of 1913 to 1916. - RBW

Bibliography

- Golway: Terry Golway, For the Cause of Liberty, Simon & Schuster, 2000
- Kee: Robert Kee, The Bold Fenian Men, being volume II of The Green Flag (covering the period from around 1848 to the Easter Rising), Penguin, 1972

Last updated in version 4.0
File: OLcM020

Jim O'Lynn

DESCRIPTION: Jim O'Lynn "does everything bad" and has to consider whether to change this thing or that. He is drunk and must decide on a double: that "will do." He quarrels with Charles over swapping shirts: that "won't do." Challenge the Devil? That "will do"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports)

KEYWORDS: drink clothes derivative humorous nonballad Devil
Jim Ross Song, The

DESCRIPTION: Ross, "an elderly gent" courts Mary Ann, "the pride of Dundas," offering "houses and lands" because he has little money. She agrees to marry but does not appear for the wedding. She explains why she changed her mind [the song breaks here].

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland)

KEYWORDS: age courting wedding rejection

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 112-113, "The Jim Ross Song" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #12459

NOTES [11 words]: Dundas is near the east coast of Kings, Prince Edward Island. - BS

File: Dib112

Jim Strainer Blues

DESCRIPTION: Jim Strainer tells Lula that if he catches her with Willie he'll kill her. Singer follows Lula to the burying ground. Jim Strainer has killed her, on the ballroom [barroom?] floor. Willie is sentenced to 15 years; Jim Strainer gets 99, and cries

AUTHOR: possibly Will Shade

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (recording, Memphis Jug Band)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Jim Strainer tells Lula that if he catches her with Willie he'll kill her. Singer tells the hearse driver to roll slowly, so he can see Lula one more time. He follows her to the burying ground and watches as they ease her down. Jim Strainer has killed her, on the ballroom [barroom?] floor. Willie is sentenced to 15 years; Jim Strainer gets 99, and cries

KEYWORDS: grief jealousy love warning violence crime homicide prison punishment trial burial death mourning lover

FOUND IN: US

Roud #12289

RECORDINGS:
Memphis Jug Band, "Jim Strainer Blues" (Victor 23421, 1933; rec. 1930; on StuffDreams1)

File: RcJiStBl

Jim the Roper

DESCRIPTION: "The dug him a grave at the set of the sun, His riding was over, his roping was done." The cowboys bury Jim, and return to "their cabins, deserted and lorn." "No sound save the Yellowstone dashing a-foam." Jim's ghost is seen be the rive

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Larkin-SingingCowboy)

KEYWORDS: death burial cowboy ghost

FOUND IN: US(SW)
Jim, the Carter Lad

DESCRIPTION: The carter/driver reports on his happy life: "Crack, crack, goes my whip, I whistle and I sing, I sit upon my wagon, I'm as happy as a king." He ignores bad weather, recalls being trained by his father, and tells of courting his sweetheart in the cart

AUTHOR: E. H. Harding?

EARLIEST DATE: 1870 (Oliver Ditson & Co, The New Comic Songster)

KEYWORDS: work travel courting

FOUND IN: US(MA) Ireland Britain(England(North,South,West),Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (11 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #99, p. 1, "Jim the Carter Lad" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 457, "Jim the Carter Lad" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 96, "The Stage Coach Driver's Lad" (1 text, 1 tune)
Copper-SongsAndSouthernBreezes, pp. 244-245, "Jim the Carter Lad" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 611, "Jim the Carter Lad" (1 text)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 228, "Jim, the Carter Lad" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hamer-GarnersGay, pp. 68-69, "Jimmy the Carter's Lad" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #20, "Joe the Carrier's Lad" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H171, p. 40, "Jim, the Carman Lad" (1 text, 1 tune)
New-Comic-Songster, p. 14, "Jim the Carter Lad" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, JIMCART*
Roud #1080

RECORDINGS:
Jack Goodfellow, "Jim The Carter Lad" (on FSB3)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Lumber Camp Song" (lyrics)

File: FSC096

Jimmie Brown the Newsboy

DESCRIPTION: Singer, Jimmie Brown, the newsboy of the town, wears no hat or shoes, and is cold and hungry. [He wanders from place to place.] He tells of his drunkard father, who has abandoned the family. His mother says he will "sell the gospel news" in heaven

AUTHOR: Almost certainly Will S. Hays

EARLIEST DATE: 1875 (published by J. L. Peters)

KEYWORDS: poverty travel abandonment work drink father worker

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
DT, JIMBROWN

Roud #4996

RECORDINGS:
Carter Family, "Jimmie Brown, the Newsboy" (Victor 23554, 1931; Montgomery Ward M-5027, 1936; rec. 1929)
Lester Flatt, Earl Scruggs & the Foggy Mountain Boys, "Jimmie Brown, the Newsboy" (Columbia 20830, 1951)

NOTES [114 words]: Almost no one lists a composer for this song, but the Harry Fox Agency has two separate listings. One is for A. P. Carter, the other is for Jimmy Rodgers and George Vaughan. I'm inclined to believe the former, since I've found no evidence Rodgers ever recorded the song, but on the other hand he seems to have collaborated with Vaughan on at least one other song. - PJS

Jane Voss and Hoyle Osborne point out, however, that there is sheet music from 1875 copyrighted by Will S. Hays. And it sounds like a Hays composition. I'm all but certain that that attribution is the correct one.
For background on newsboys in New York, see the notes to "Poor Little Joe (The Dying Newsboy)." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.1
File: RcJBtNew

Jimmie Judd (The Beau Shai River) [Laws C4]
DESCRIPTION: Jimmie tries to break a logjam and is drowned. His badly cut up body is recovered the next day. He is mourned by sweetheart, family, and fellow workers
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan)
KEYWORDS: logger death drowning
FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,NE) Canada(Ont)
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Laws C4, "Jimmie Judd (The Beau Shai River)"
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 18, "Jamie Judge (or, Bonshee River)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warner-FolkSongsAndBalladsOfTheEasternSeaboard, p. 73, "Jamie Judge" (1 text)
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 55, "The Beau Shai River" (2 texts, one entitled "Jimmie Jot")
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 82, "The Beau Shai River" (2 texts)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 112, "Jimmie Judd" (1 fragmentary text)
Fowke-LumberingSongsFromTheNorthernWoods #29, "Jimmy Judge" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune)
DT 680, JIMMELORD
Roud #636
NOTES [31 words]: Fowke quotes Gravelle to the effect that James Angus Dudge was born in Quebec in 1846, but Gravelle can only speculate about the date of his death; he suspects the date was c. 1866. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: LC04

Jimmy and his Own True Love [Laws O30]
DESCRIPTION: Jimmy and Annie are out walking one fine day just before he sets sail. She bids him farewell and gives him a diamond ring as a token of her love. He promises to return to her
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1841 (broadside, Bodleian 2806 c.18(276))
KEYWORDS: courting sea farewell ring
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Laws O30, "Jimmy and his Own True Love"
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 44, "Jimmy and His Own True Love" (1 text)
DT 485, JIMMTRUE
Roud #660
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.18(276), "Sailor and his Truelove," J. Jennings (London), 1790-1840; also Firth c.12(147), Harding B 17(266b), "[The] Sailor and his Truelove"; Firth c.12(149), "Jemmy's Farewell" ("As a sailor and his true love one morning in May")
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Jimmy and Nancy (III)" (plot)
File: LO30

Jimmy and Nancy (III)
DESCRIPTION: A sailor tells his true love "It is all for your sweet sake I am bound to cross the ocean." Her mother and father are against them but she will not turn against him. He promises to be true. They kiss and part; she wishes him well.
Jimmy Bell's in Town

DESCRIPTION: "Jimmy Bell's in town, Lordy, walkin' round. He got greenbacks enough, sweet babe, to make a man a suit." Bell preaches a sermon, warning of the dangers of hell; "All them sisters sittin' in the back corner Cryin' Jimmy Bell my man."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1963
KEYWORDS: clergy nonballad Hell
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, p. 75, "Jimmy Bell's in Town" (1 text, probably partial)
File: CNFM075

Jimmy Bruisse's Pig

DESCRIPTION: Bruisse builds a sty for his new pig. One night the pig escapes. When no one can find the pig Bruisse reports it stolen to the rangers. The pig is found by a brook. If Bruisse hears the song he may send the rangers after the singer.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)
KEYWORDS: escape accusation humorous animal
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
Roud #18216
RECORDINGS:
Ernest Poole, "Jimmy Bruisse's Pig" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Jimmy Burse
DESCRIPTION: "I saw the undertakers leavin' With a casket in the hearse... The remains of Jimmy Burse." Burse goes out to transport a convict in his car, but is shot by the prisoner York. Burse is buried; the singer hopes he will find justice
AUTHOR: unknown (but very possibly by someone in the Vass family)
EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (collected by Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains from Ruby Vass, who had a manuscript dated 1937)
KEYWORDS: prison homicide escape technology burial
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1932 - Murder of taxi driver Jim Burrus. Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains prints a newspaper chronology of the saga.
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains, pp. 70-71, "Jimmy Burse" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7323
File: Sel070

Jimmy Caldwell
DESCRIPTION: "Good morning, dear daughter and sister... father, I learn you've been courted by Jimmy Caldwell, Dear daughter, dear daughter, we love you very dearly."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: love courting
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 331, "Jimmy Caldwell" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #6654
File: BrS4331

Jimmy Hughes's Feastio
DESCRIPTION: "Come, let us all to Georgetown go .. At Jimmy Hughes's feastio"; 100 are expected but only 30 show up. "The Senator arose with pride ...My son shall run the countrio. They turned him down, my darling boy, They did not know his worthio"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland)
KEYWORDS: rejection food party humorous political
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 12-13, "Jimmy Hughes's Feastio" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12484
NOTES [53 words]: Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland: "When Senator J.J. Hughes received his appointment to the Senate he wanted his son to replace him as the local Member but his son was not nominated. A Testimonial dinner was held for the Senator in Georgetown but very few people showed up. It was written circa 1930." - BS
File: Din012

Jimmy Mo Veela Sthore (Jimmy, My Thousand Treasures)
DESCRIPTION: The singer misses Jimmy, who "travels the wide world o'er" on a quest for wealth. Her parents "never do give me ease." They want her to marry someone rich. She would go to the woods where no one will tease her and stay there until Jimmy returns
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)
Jimmy Murphy

DESCRIPTION: "On the banks of Kilkenny... Is Joe Jimmy Murphy Who is lost and forsaken." "Tomorrow he will ride... through the city." "Tomorrow he will hang; But it's not for sheep-stealing But for courting a pretty girl By the name of Moll Figen"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)

KEYWORDS: death execution playparty courting

FOUND IN: US(So) Ireland

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, p. 291, "Joe Jimmy Murphy" (1 text)
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 119, "Little Jimmy Murphy" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #7951

NOTES [264 words]: Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety calls his text "possibly a game song, but certainly originally a song about a hanging, and evidently Irish." To me, his version looks like a serious song that took on a game-song chorus. - RBW

Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 has "the serious song." From the description of Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, I think the "game song" is close enough to Moylan that the songs should be kept together. [Perhaps more decisive is the fact that Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety's text seems to be nearly unique, though it has wandered far from the Irish roots. - RBW] Here is some more of Moylan

We gathered our pikes and flintlocks and green branches
And into old Wexford we soon were advancing.

Chorus: Skinny-ma-link, killy-ma-jo, whiskey, frisky too-ra-loo
Rank-a-diddle-i-doe, ding-doora-lie-o.

We fought through New Ross, Vinegar Hill and through Gorey
But it was the boys of the Cork Militia that deprived us of glory.

The ballad is recorded on one of the CD's issued around the time of the bicentenial of the 1798 Irish Rebellion. See:
Luke Cheevers, "Little Jimmy Murphy" (on "The Croppy's Complaint," Craft Recordings CRCD03 (1998); Terry Moylan notes)

Moylan: "This unusual piece appeared in the Journal of the Irish Folk Song Society in 1913. The note to the song says that it was heard by the informant being sung by a street-singer in Liverpool in 1830." - BS

For the battles of New Ross, Gorey, etc., see the notes to "Father Murphy (I)" and the various cross-references there. - RBW

File: Beld291

Jimmy My Riley

DESCRIPTION: "Jimmy-my-Riley was a grand old rascal, Jimmy-my-Riley ho (x2)." "Pick it up and shuck it up and throw it over yonder." "The cows in the old field hornin' Jimmy Riley." "The mules in the old field kickin' Jimmy Riley."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1920 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: animal nonballad food work

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 195, "Jimmy My Riley" (1 text)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 188, "Jimmie-Ma-Riley-Oh!" (1 short text); Scarborough has another stanza which she files here though it looks to me as if it might be a much-debased version of "Reuben Ranzo" or something like that

Roud #11570
Jimmy Rose

DESCRIPTION: "Jimmy Rose he went to town (x3) To 'commodate the ladies." "Fare ye well, ye ladies all (x3), God Almighty bless you."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)

KEYWORDS: courting nonballad

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 100, "Jimmy Rose" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, p. 211, "Jimmy Rose" (1 short text, 1 tune)

ST SBoA211 (Full)

Roud #11596

File: SBoA211

Jimmy Sago, Jackeroo

DESCRIPTION: "If you want a situation and you'd like to know the plan To get on a station... Pack up the old portmanteau and label it Paroo, with a name that's aristocratic -- Jimmy Sago, Jackeroo." The song details how the "aristocratic" name can bring benefits

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Paterson, _Old Bush Songs_)

KEYWORDS: Australia work animal

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 130-131, "Jimmy Sago, Jackeroo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 161-162, "The Jackaroo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ward-PenguinBookOfAustralianBallads, p. 86, "Jimmy Sago, Jackaroo" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Bill Wannan, _The Australians: Yarns, ballads and legends of the Australian tradition_, 1954 (page references are to the 1988 Penguin edition), pp. 189-190, "Jimmy Sago, Jackaroo" (1 text)

Bill Beatty, _A Treasury of Australian Folk Tales & Traditions_, 1960 (I use the 1969 Walkabout Paperbacks edition), pp. 281-282, "Jimmy Sago, Jackaroo" (1 text)

Roud #8394

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Wearing of the Green" (tune, according to Wannan)

NOTES [315 words]: According to Patterson/Fahey/Seal, a Jackaroo was a young man working on a station to gain experience -- in effect, an apprentice. Naturally he was teased and held in low esteem.

The spelling is uncertain (Jackaroo/Jackeroo), as is the origin; Learmonth, article on "Jackeroo" (their spelling) says that the "origin is uncertain, most probably a coined Aus.-owning word based on a 'Jacky Raw', but an Aboriginal origin is also claimed." It adds that a female parallel, "Jillaroo," dates from the twentieth century.

Morris, p. 215, is another who prefers "Jackaroo" (where were all you people when I first entered this song?), and defines the word as a noun, "a name for a Colonial Experience (q.v.), a young man fresh from England, learning squatting.... Compare the American 'tenderfoot...." The word is generally supposed to be a corruption (in imitation of the word Kangaroo) of the name 'Johnny Raw." The first citation is from 1880: W. Senior, "Travel and Trout," p. 19. The noun eventually became a verb, "to jackaroo," as well.

Ramson, p. 330, spells the word "Jackeroo," and says that it originally meant "A white man living beyond the bounds of close settlement," but lists this sense as obsolete and gives a second definition similar to that in Morris.

Manifold, who also spells it "Jackaroo," says on p. 86 that "jackaroos... were usually educated young men studying the art and mystery of station management; sometimes they included a 'colonial-experiencer' or 'pommy jackaroo.' On p. 87, after listing a few songs he thinks came from jackaroos, says, "The jackaroo, as you see, likes to think of himself as a full-fledged stockman or bushman; if he does a single small job of droving he fancies himself a drover; it is undignified to be a mere jackaroo."

Manifold, pp. 94-95, was told by an informant that this is derived from "Hot Ashphalt," i.e. "The Hot Ash-Pelt." - RBW

Bibliography

- Morris: Edward E. Morris, A Dictionary of Austral English, 1898 (I use the 1972 Sydney University Press with a new foreword but no new content)

Last updated in version 5.2
File: MA130

Jine 'Em

DESCRIPTION: "On Sunday mornin' I seek my Lord, Jine 'em, jine 'em oh! Oh jine 'em, believer, jine 'em so, Jine 'em, jine 'em oh." "Join, brethren, join us O... In Jesus's name we sing and pray"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 21, "Jine 'Em" (1 short text with a possible variant, 1 tune)
Roud #11972
File: AWG021A

Jingle at the Window (Tideo)

DESCRIPTION: Playparty. "Jingle at the window, (tideo/dideo)....' "Pass one window, tideo...." Pass two windows, tideo...." "You swing heads... I swing feet... Ain't dat nice... walkin' on de ice."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (JAFL 24)
KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,So)
REFERENCES (9 citations):
Wolford-ThePlayPartyInIndiana, pp. 96-97=Wolford/Richmond/Tillson-PlayPartyInIndiana, pp. 197-198, "Tideo" (1 text, 1 tune)
McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks, p. 66, "Ti-De-O" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph 525, "Jingle at the Window" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, p. 160, "Tideo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 208, "Tideo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 115-116, "Dance Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cambiaire-EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads, p. 134, "Tideo" (1 text, with two verses of "Tideo" and one probably from "Go In and Out the Window")
Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains, pp. 38-39, "Die-Lee-O" (1 text, 1 tune)
Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty, p. 118, "Jingle at the Window" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3597
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Jumbo" (lyrics)
NOTES [42 words]: For the possible relationship of this to "Sugar in My Coffee," see the notes to that song.
Scarborough's version of this has stanzas twice as long (eight lines) as Randolph's, but presumably this is just the usual story of half the tune being lost. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: R525

Jingle Bells

DESCRIPTION: In praise of sleighing in the snow. Taking his "one horse open sleigh," the singer courts Miss Fanny Bright. Even a brief detour into a snowbank does not deter his ardor. The singer urges others to get a horse and sleigh and go courting

AUTHOR: James Pierpont (1822-1893)
EARLIEST DATE: 1857
KEYWORDS: horse nonballad courting
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (9 citations):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 276-277, "Jingle Bells" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Jackson-PopularSongsOfNineteenthCenturyAmerica, pp. 93-96, "Jingle Bells Or the One horse open Sleigh" (1 text, 1 tune)
Krythe-SamplerOfAmericanSongs (16), pp. 219-220, "Jingle Bells" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 376, "Jingle Bells" (1 text)
Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 94-96, "Jingle Bells, or The One Horse Open Sleigh" (1 text)
Heart-Songs, pp. 148-149, "Jingle, Bells" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, p. 313+, "Jingle Bells" DT, JNGLBLL*
ADDITIONAL: Henry Randall Waite, _College Songs: A Collection of New and Popular Songs of the American Colleges_, new and enlarged edition, Oliver Ditson & Co., 1887, p. 70, "Jingle, Bells" (1 text, 1 tune) (pp. 18-19 of part 3 of the 1876 edition)
Roud #25804
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Pony Song" (approximate tune, theme, and some words)
cf. "Tittler's Jam" (tune)
SAME TUNE:
Jingle Bells (New Zealand parodies) (Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, pp. 298-299)
NOTES [99 words]: According to a big of folklore which I have not attempted to check, Pierpont wrote this while living in Florida. Hm.
Ken Emerson, _Doo-Dah! Stephen Foster and the Rise of American Popular Culture_, Da Capo, 1997?, p. 10, says that the phrase "bells on bob-tail ring" was condensed from the "Bet my money on de bob-tail nag" of Stephen Foster's "Camptown Races."
Jon W. Finson, _The Voices That Are Gone: Themes in Nineteenth-Century American Popular Song_, Oxford University Press, 1994, p. 47, says that James Pierpont was the son of a Unitarian minister and the uncle of J. Pierpont Morgan. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0
File: RJ19093

Jingle-Berry Tea

DESCRIPTION: "Buck-skin moccasin tow-headed Bill, Once went a-courtin' up on the hill, The first one he courted was a pretty gal to see, Set right down to Jingleberry tea."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: drink
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 416, "Jingleberry Tea" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #7613
NOTES [63 words]: Randolph informs us that "This is a fragment of a ribald song popular in the [1870s], and is said to have been brought west from Tennessee." However, he fails to give us enough additional detail to identify the song.
He also knew an informant who suggested the name be changed to "sassifras," on the grounds that "It's ag'in the law to print words like jingle-berry in a book." - RBW

File: R416

Jingo Ring (Merry-Ma-Tanzie, Around the Ring)

DESCRIPTION: "Here we go around the ring; Choose you one while we do sing; Choose the one that you love best, And she will come at your request." "Now you've got her, and I wish you much joy, You are my son and childish joy... Kiss her quick, and that will do."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1825 (John Jamieson's Scottish Dictionary, Supplement, according to Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
KEYWORDS: playparty courting nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap,NE,SE) Britain(Scotland(Aber)) New Zealand
REFERENCES (10 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1580, "The Merry Ma Tansie" (4 texts, 2 tunes)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #152, p. 2, "Jingar Ring" (1 text)
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 200, "The Tansey" (1 text)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 173, "Around the Ring" (1 text)
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 27, "Merry-ma-tansie" (5 texts)
Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #170, "Marriage" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5, p. 546, "Here We Go in a Ring" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 65, "(Here we go round the jing-a-ring)" (1 text)
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 25, "(Here we go round a jinga-ring)" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Robert Chambers, The Popular Rhymes of Scotland (Edinburgh, 1870 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 131-135, "The Merry-Ma-Tanzie" (2 texts)
ST Fus173 (Full)
Roud #12970
CROSS-REFERENCES:
ct. "Lipto" (lyrics)
ALTERNATE REFERENCES:
A Guinea Gold Ring
NOTES [57 words]: Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 200 seems to be the same game described by Chambers and Gomme1.369-373 (cf., Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 p. liii) but the "plot" is different: The "young Ladie" has a baby "belongs to Merrie man Tansey"; she wraps it in a dish towel and lays it on a nettle bush an dance a Merrie man Tansey." - BS

Last updated in version 4.4

File: Fus173

Jinkin' You, Johnnie Lad

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, ken ye my love Johnnie, he lives doon on yonder lea, and he's lookin', and he's joukin', and he's aye watchin' me." The singer describes her deep fondness for (Johnnie/Jockie), and looks forward to a happy life despite his poverty

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Ford)
KEYWORDS: love courting
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 45-47, "Jinkin' You, Jockie Lad" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan4 756, "Johnnie Lad" (1 text, 1 tune)
MacColl-PersonalChoice, p. 67, "Johnnie Lad" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, JOHNLAD
Roud #6131
RECORDINGS:
Ewan MacColl and Peggy Seeger, "Johnny Lad" (on SCMacCollSeeger01)

File: FVS045
Jinny Get Your Hoecake Done

DESCRIPTION: Fiddler's mnemonic for a moderately well-known tune: "Jinny, get your hoecake done, my love, Jinny, get your hoecake done; Jinny, get your hoecake done, my love, Jinny, get your hoecake done."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands)

KEYWORDS: dancetune nonballad food

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 158, "The Hoe-Cake" (eighth of 12 single-stanza jigs) (1 short text)
ST Fus158C (Full)

Roud #16825

NOTES [94 words]: Harry Dichter and Elliott Shapiro, Early American Sheet Music: Its Lure and Its Lore, 1768-1889, R. R. Bowker, 1941, p. 51, list among their "Illustrated Negro Minstrel Songs (Of the 'Jim Crow' Type)" a piece, "Jenny Get Your Hoe Cake Done," published by Firth & Hall in 1840. The sheet music describes it as "The Celebrated Banjo Song, As sung with Great Applause at the Broadway Circus, N. Y., by J. W. Sweeney." Presumably that was the original source for the fiddle tune, but I do not know whether either the text or the tune is the same as modern versions. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.6

File: Fus158C

Jinny Go Round and Around

DESCRIPTION: "Where did you get your whisky? Where did you get your dram?.... Down in Rockingham. Cho: Jinny go round an' around (x3) Way down in Rockingham." The remaining verses may give reasons why the singer will not marry or describe river life

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Randolph)

KEYWORDS: courting marriage drink dancing playparty floatingverses river

FOUND IN: US(MW,SE,So)

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Randolph 272, "Jinny Go Round and Around" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 233-234, "Jinny Go Round and Round" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 272)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 389, "The Privates Eat the Middlin'" (1 fragment, probably a Civil War adaption of this piece)
Botkin-TreasuryMississippiRiverFolklore, p. 589, "[Number Ninety-Nine]" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryOfSouthernFolklore, p. 711, "Where'd You Get Yo' Whisky?" (1 text, 1 tune)
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 121-122, "(Number Ninety-nine)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wheeler-SteamboatinDays, pp. 24-25, "Master Had a Bran' New Coat" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST R272 (Full)

Roud #836 (etc.)

RECORDINGS:
Earl Johnson & His Dixie Entertainers, "I Get My Whiskey From Rockingham" (Okeh 45183, 1928)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Cindy (I)" (floating lyrics)
cf. "A Railroader for Me (Soldier Boy for Me)" (plot)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Way Down in Rockingham
Rockingham Cindy

NOTES [133 words]: This is an extremely problematic piece, recognized by the "Where did you get your whiskey" stanza. The rest is no unity, but the results are too fragmentary to classify as separate songs.

Almost all of these lyrics of some versions show up in one or another version of the "Cindy/Jubilee" family, but the chorus is different, so I've separated them. The Botkin Mississippi River piece (compare Courlander's) is almost equally remote from both "Cindy" and "Jinny," but not worth another entry, so I file it here.

Paul Stamler notes another piece, "Rockingham Cindy"; I suspect that to be a variant of this one.

The chorus "Jinny go round..." does not appear in all versions; I don't know if it is an addition to the Randolph text or if it dropped out of the usual versions sung by old-time singers. - RBW

File: R272

Joan Sanderson (The Cushion Dance)

DESCRIPTION: "This dance it will no further go. 'I pray you, (Sir), Why say you so? 'Because (Joan Sanderson) will not come too.' 'She must come too, and she shall come too... whether she will or no.' 'Welcome, Joan Sanderson.' Prankum, Prankum is a fine dance."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1966 (Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall)

KEYWORDS: dancing rejection

FOUND IN: Britain(England(West))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 5, "Joan Sanderson or The Cushion Dance" (1 text, 1 tune, plus dance instructions)
Roud #19195
File: Gund005

Job, Job

DESCRIPTION: "Oh Job, Job, good Lord, Tell me how you feel, good Lord." Sundry Biblical incidents are narrated: Pilate's wife and her dream of Jesus, Joshua stopping the sun, etc. Verses are very long, with variable numbers of lines

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, collected from Vera Hall and Dock Reed)

KEYWORDS: Bible religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 14-16, "Job" (1 text, 1 tune)
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 53-56, "(Job, Job)" (1 text); pp. 225-226, "Job, Job" (1 tune, partial text)
ADDITIONAL: Harold Courlander, _A Treasury of Afro-American Folklore_, Crown Publishers, 1976, pp. 316-318, "(no title)" (1 text); pp. 344-345, "Job, Job" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10964

RECORDINGS:
Rich Amerson, "Job Job" (on NFMAla4)
Dock Reed & Vera Hall Ward, "Job Job" (on NFMAla5) (on ReedWard01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Swing Low" (a few lines)

NOTES [96 words]: The account of Joshua stopping the sun is found in Joshua 10:12-13. Pilate's wife's dream is found in Matthew 27:19 (only; the other gospels have no hint of the story, although all have Pilate being relatively favorable to Jesus). Methuselah's death at the age of 969 is in Genesis 5:27 (although the Greek translation gives different ages for the patriarchs). Allusions to the book of Job include:

* The death of Job's servants (Job 1:15-17)
* The death of Job's children (Job 1:19)
* "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord" (Job 1:21) - RBW

Last updated in version 4.4

File: CNFM225

Jock Gheddes and the Soo

DESCRIPTION: Jock's mother warned him to "Come hame sober" but Jock "as usual soon forgot." Arriving home he falls in a dung hill where a sow, liking the smell, licks his mouth. Jock wakes, "spat for near an hour," has the pig killed, and has not had whisky since.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan3)
Jock Hamilton

DESCRIPTION: Duke Hamilton bet five hundred guineas he can go through London singing but not speaking. Though thrown in jail he does not speak. The bailiff's daughter tries but only gets a gold ring. He wins the bet and the bailiff's daughter by singing.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan2)

KEYWORDS: ring prison gambling music wager

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan2 324, "Jock Hamilton" (4 texts, 3 tunes)

Roud #5869

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "A Dashing Young Lad from Buckingham" (plot)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Duke Hamilton
Lord Hamilton

NOTES [91 words]: The chorus, which is the Duke's song, is .. Tey ey addlety, Tey ey addlety tam; ... Eetify addlety, Tey ey addlety tam." Since "He's won her by singin' song, He's won her by Eetify addlety, Tey ey addlety tam" this seems a case of bawdy words replaced by nonsense sounds (as in Blind Blake's explicit "I wish someone would tell me what 'diddie wa diddie' means"; also see "The Chandler's Wife" and "Jack the Jolly Tar" [Laws K40]).

As closely as this song's plot agrees with "A Dashing Young Lad from Buckingham" the two songs share no text. - BS

Last updated in version 2.4

File: GrD2324

Jock Hawk

DESCRIPTION: "One night I into Glesga went To spend my penny fee, Twas then a girl gave consent To bear me company." They go to a tavern. A crowd of sailors comes in -- then are called away. Jock is left to pay the entire bill. He warns others of the trick.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan2)

KEYWORDS: drink money trick sailor warning

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan2 295, "Jock Hawk" (10 texts, 5 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 278-279, "Jock Hawk's Adventures in Glasgow" (1 text)

Roud #2311

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Jock Hack

One Day I Up to Glasgow Went

File: Ord278
Jock o the Side [Child 187]

DESCRIPTION: Jock o the Side has been taken prisoner in a raid. His neighbors hope to ransom him, but (Hobie Noble/The Laird's Jock) will free him with five men. They make their way to Jock's prison, break down the doors and perform other feats, and bring Jock away

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1750 (Percy Folio)

KEYWORDS: borderballad prisoner escape rescue

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North),Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (15 citations):
Child 187, "Jock o the Side" (4 texts)
Bronson 187, "Jock o the Side" (4 versions)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 187, "Jock o the Side" (2 versions: #1, #3)
Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume II, pp. 203-209, "John a Side" (1 text)
Chambers-ScottishBallads, pp. 36-41, "Jock o' the Syde" (1 text)
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 145-147, "Jock o' the Side" (1 text, 1 tune)
{Compare Bronson's #3, a variant of the same tune but with different text}
Wells-TheBalladTree, pp. 69-73, "Jock of the Side" (1 text, 1 tune) {tune is Bronson's #4; text is from a different source}
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 246, "Jock o' the Side" (1 text)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 138, "Jock o' the Side" (1 text)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 191, "Bold Dickie and Bold Archie" (1 text, 1 tune, primarily Child 188 but possibly with elements of 187)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 379-381, "Jock o' the Side" (1 text)
Whiting-TraditionalBritishBallads 25, "Jock o' the Side" (1 text)
DT (187/188), JOCKSIDE JOHNWEBB*? BOLDARCH*?

ADDITIONAL: Michael Brander, _Scottish and Border Battles and Ballads_, 1975 (page references to the 1993 Barnes & Noble edition), pp. 118-122, "Jock o' the Side" (1 text)
Roud #82
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Hobie Noble" [Child 189] (characters)
cf. "Archie o Cawfield" [Child 188] (plot)

NOTES [308 words]: Jock o' the Side (Side is a region in Liddesdale) was a well-known thief and raider of the 1560s. - SF

It is interesting to note that (apart from Jock himself), the characters in this drama are completely unfixed; in one version, Robin Hood's companion Much the miller's son is one of the raiders (and not a very bold one). Another version features Hobie Noble, from the ballad of the same name [Child 189].

It is not entirely clear whether Jock was historical or not; Child briefly notices a few mentions of him outside this song but also speculates that his story was a loose retelling of the tale of Kinmont Willie. This evidence is perhaps stronger than Child hints. James Reed, The Border Ballads, University of London/The Athlone Press, 1975, pp. 53-56, quotes a poem by Sir Richard Maitland, a sixteenth century judge, which is a list of Liddesdale outlaws. A stanza on p. 54 runs, He is weel kend, John of the Syde;

A greater thief did never ryde.
He never tyres
For to brek byris;
Ouir muir and myris
Ouir guide ane gyde.

On p. 57, Reed says, "There is some evidence for the existence of John of the Side, apart from Maitland's commemorative stanza; R. B. Armstrong prints two bonds in which John Armstrong of the Syde is a party, dated 1562 and 1563. He also appears, or at least the name appears, first about 1550 in a list of marauders against whom complaint was made to the Bishop of Carlisle 'presently after' queen Mary Stuart's departure for France. 'Syid' is marked on Blaue's map of Liddesdale of 1590."

It's a fairly convincing list, but it's at least possible that he was simply legendary -- perhaps a threat to children, the way the Black Douglas became in Britain or Jesse James in America, even after the latter two were dead. Of course, Douglas and James were real, but there are instances of such bogies who were not. - RBW
Jock o' Rhynie (The Praise o' Huntley)

DESCRIPTION: "I've been abroad, I've been at hame... But noo I've come to Huntley." The singer escapes his parents and sets out to earn his fee. His parents offer no support. After working with Mr. Stephen and Jock o' Huntley, he vows to be "mair wiser."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: work farming father mother

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #146, p. 3, "The Praise o' Huntly"; #145, p. 2, ("I stepped about at liberty, Till Jock o' Rhynie fell in wi' me") (1 text plus 1 fragment)
- Greig/Duncan3 349, "The Praise o' Huntly" (8 texts, 4 tunes)
- Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 338-339, "In Praise o' Huntley" (1 text)

NOTES [53 words]: Greig/Duncan3 has a map on p. xxxv, of "places mentioned in songs in volume 3" showing the song number as well as place name; Huntly (349) is at coordinate (h4,v5-6) on that map [roughly 34 miles WNW of Aberdeen]; Mains of Rhynie (348,349) is at coordinate (h2-3,v5) on that map [roughly 31 miles WNW of Aberdeen]. - BS

Jock Robb

DESCRIPTION: "My mailison's [curse is] on ye, Jock Robb"; you built your house next to mine and taught my children "to bob." "My blessing gae wi' ye, Jock Robb"; when you come you make us happy and "gar our blithe bottoms play bob!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1824 (Sharpe)

KEYWORDS: dancing nonballad children curse

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Greig/Duncan8 1779, "Jock Robb" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #12989

NOTES [104 words]: What is "bob"? I'm guessing "dancing." - BS

Attested Scots meanings of the verb "to bob"/"to bab," according to Alexander Warrack, The Scots Dialect Dictionary, Waverly Books, 2000, p. 25, include "to bob" (a nice circular definition, that), "to move up and down quickly," "to dance," "to pop in and out," "to cursey," and "to move quickly." Thus "to bob" probably does mean "to dance" in this case -- something the Presbyterian church certainly would not like. But the noun "bab" also means "gossip," so although Warrack does not list this as a verb sense. I would not absolutely rule out the meaning "to gossip." - RBW

Jock Scott

DESCRIPTION: Jock recalls the first time he saw Mary, whose beauty ensnared him. He takes a job with her father, and wins her heart. They plan to flee. Her father follows and drags her away. When they try again, he is accused of forgery. He hopes to win free

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan6)

KEYWORDS: love courtng servant father punishment trick

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Jock Sheep

DESCRIPTION: A lady asks a knight not to lie with her "for spoilin' o' my goun." She asks that he take her to her father's castle first. Once there she shuts the door in his face. Disguised as a lady in labor the knight lures her out and rapes her.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1827 (Kinloch)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Jock Sheep, a knight, and a lady set a tryst but she asks him not to lie with her "for spoilin' o' my goun." She asks that he take her to her father's castle where "ye shall hae your wills o' me." Once there she shuts the door in his face. Then she taunts him by comparing him to a marigold, and impotent cock and impotent stallion. He disguises himself as a lady in labor in the wood. When his lady goes to "her" aid she finds Jock. He rapes her, repeating her taunts. She asks that "sin you've taen your wills o' me You may conduct me hame." He does.

KEYWORDS: seduction escape trick knight rape disguise

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Kinloch-TheBalladBook V, pp. 17-21, "Jock Sheep" (1 text)
- Greig/Duncan2 302, "Jock Sheep" (3 texts, 3 tunes)
- DT JOCKSHEP

Roud #5862

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "The Baffled Knight [Child 112]" (plot)
- cf. "The Broomfield Hill [Child 43]" (first verse)
- cf. "Errol on the Green" (tune, according to Greig/Duncan2)
- cf. "The Three Butchers (Dixon and Johnson) [Laws L4]" (motif: "damsel in distress" as lure)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- Whistle o' Yer Thoom

NOTES [241 words]: Child notes to 112, "The Baffled Knight": "There is a Scottish ballad in which the tables are turned upon the maid in the conclusion. This being of comparatively recent, and not of popular, but of low literary origin, cannot be admitted here. It can be found in Kinloch's Ballad Book, 'Jock Sheep,' p. 16, and the Kinloch MSS, I, 229, communicated by James Beattie, Mearnsshire. Other versions are, in the Campbell MSS, 'Dernie Hughie,' I, 233; 'Jock Sheep, or, The Maiden Outwitted,' Buchan MSS, I, 155."

The first verse of Kinloch matches "The Broomfield Hill," Child 43A and Child 43C, which sets a different tone than Child 112: here Jock and the lady set the tryst; in Child 112 (as in other Child 43 versions) the meeting is not planned. What is not clear here is why the lady changes her mind; the lady's dilemma described in "The Broomfield Hill" is not stated here.

The version of Child 112 closest to "Jock Sheep" is version D.b. The taunts -- the marigold, impotent cock and shy stallion -- are only in that version of Child 112. In other versions of "Jock Sheep" references to an impotent bull and ram are added to the list (for example, Greig-Duncan). The non-fragmentary text from Greig/Duncan2 preserves the "Jock Sheep" characteristic of taking its first verse from Child 43, "The Broomfield Hill." Greig/Duncan2 notes that "Jock Sheep," as a result, had "formerly been treated in print as versions of this ballad [Child 43]." - BS

File: C112A
Jock Stewart (The Man You Don't Meet Every Day)

DESCRIPTION: (Jock Stewart) invites the company to enjoy his generosity. "So be easy and free when you're drinking with me; I'm a man you don't meet every day" The singer may talk of his well-built hut, his hunting trips, or whatever people discuss in pubs

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: drink hunting friend
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) Ireland US(So) Australia Canada(Newf,Ont)
REFERENCES (7 citations):
- Porter/Gower-Jeannie-Robertson-EmergentSingerTransformativeVoice #17, pp. 139-140, "Jock Stewart" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Randolph 476, "The Man You Don't Meet Every Day" (1 text)
- Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 161-162, 286, "A Man You Don't Meet Every Day" (2 texts, 2 tunes, heavily localized)
- Vikár/Panagapka-SongsNorthWoodsSungByOJAbbott 47, "A Man You Don't Meet Every Day" (1 text, 1 tune; the man is "Pat" and grows his "own spuds"; the changes are almost enough to make it a separate song)

DT, JSTEWART*
ADDITIONAL: Chris Wright, "'Forgotten Broadsides and the Song Tradition of the Scots Travellers" -- essay found in David Atkinson and Steve Roud, Editors, _Street Ballads in Nineteenth-Century Britain, Ireland, and North America: The Interface between Print and Oral Tradition_, Ashgate, 2014, pp. 101-102, ",(Jock Stewart)" (1 text plus a text of "The Man You Don't Meet Every Day")

Roud #975

RECORDINGS:
- Hector MacIsaac and Jerome Downey, "A Man You Don't Meet Every Day" (on NFHMacIsaac01)
- Cyril O'Brien, "I'm a Man You Don't Meet Every Day" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
- Cornelius O'Sullivan, "I'm a Man You Don't Meet Every Day" (Victor 79126, late 1920s-early 1930s)
- Belle, Sheila, and Cathie Stewart, "Jock Stewart" (on SCStewartsBlair01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
f. "Bound to Australia" (meter, floating lyrics)
f. "The First of the Emigrants" (tune, meter, chorus)
f. "The Hard Working Miner" (tune, form)

SAME TUNE:
The Hard Working Miner (File: DThrdwrk)
NOTES [125 words]: Chris Wright, in his "Forgotten Broadsides" article, observes that the chorus of this forms part of the chorus of the music hall song "The Man You Don't Meet Every Day," an undated broadside of which seems to have been printed before 1900. Wright discusses the relationship between the two; he seems to think the most likely explanation is that "Jock Stewart" borrowed the chorus and built a song around it. The minimal evidence available, however, would also suit the possibility that the music hall song borrowed two lines of "Jock Stewart." There is nothing else in common between the two.
Roud lumps the two songs. I frankly disagree, but on the other hand, I'm not sure it's worth separating them, given the problem of classifying fragments. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
File: R476

Jock Stewart the Factor

DESCRIPTION: "Jock Stewart the factor, Sae weel he did thrive, Afore he'd kiss his ain wife He'd kiss ither five"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan7)
KEYWORDS: infidelity nonballad husband wife
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Greig/Duncan7 1440, "Jock Stewart the Factor" (1 short text, 1 tune)

Roud #7271
NOTES [13 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan7 text excluding the chorus. - BS
Jock Tamson's Tripe

DESCRIPTION: On his wedding night Jock comes home drunk, goes to his tripe can in the dark, and eats one of the caps his mother had washed and put in the can. He gets sick and, to everyone's amazement, vomits a clean cap instead of tripe.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan2)
KEYWORDS: wedding clothes drink food humorous mother disease
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan2 286, "Jock Tamson's Tripe" (6 texts, 4 tunes)
Roud #5835
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Jock Tamson
File: GrD2286

Jock the Leg and the Merry Merchant [Child 282]

DESCRIPTION: A "merry merchant" comes to a tavern and finds himself in a series of contests with (a disguised) Jock the Leg. They set out together, and Jock demands the merchant's pack. The merchant fights him off, then six of his men as well; they declare friendship

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1827 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1)
KEYWORDS: robbery outlaw fight
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber,Bord))
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Child 282, "Jock the Leg and the Merry Merchant" (1 text)
Bronson 282, "Jock the Leg and the Merry Merchant" (7 versions)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 282, "Jock the Leg and the Merry Merchant" (3 versions: #2, #5, #6)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #35, p. 1, "Jock the Leg and the Merry Merchant" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan2 263, "Jock the Leg and the Merry Merchant" (6 texts, 5 tunes) {A=Bronson's #2, B=#6, C=#1, D=#5, E=#3}
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1 59, "Jock t' Leg and the Merry Merchant" (1 text)
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 94, "Jackie with the Leg" (1 text)
DT, JOCKLEG*
Roud #3856
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Bold Pedlar and Robin Hood" [Child 132] (plot)
NOTES [442 words]: Child observes that this is essentially a Robin Hood ballad with the names changed. One wonders if it might not be a Scottish redaction of "The Bold Pedlar and Robin Hood."
- RBW

Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 94 is different from the other versions I've seen, including Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1. Usually Jock blows his horn and has his men appear. Although the agreement had been that each man should blow his horn ["Give me a blast o my little wee horn, And I'll give you another"] the merchant never gets his turn [why not?]. In Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 the merchant does take his turn: "he blew louds blasts three And a hundred and fittie gude bay dogs Cam linking our the lee"; the merchant tells Jock that the dogs are for Jock's men and he himself will take on Jock. The day goes poorly for Jock's men, at least: "The bay dogs fed on human flesh It was a waeful day." Buchan, in Child's source, assumes that Jock the Leg is Little John [see Peter Buchan, Ancient Ballads and Songs of the North of Scotland (Edinburgh, 1875 (reprint of 1828 edition)), Vol II, pp. 313-314]. While in the Robin Hood contest ballads the cycle hero can be given a good battle his defeat does not take these proportions. In this case the two combatants do not end as friends and the merchant leaves defiantly: "I'll hae nane o thy free discharge But I'll travel land and sea." Is this what "Jock the Leg and the Merry Merchant" originally looked like? Or, is this a parody of the original ballad? Or should it have an entry all its own?

[It sounds to me like a variation on the Friar Tuck legend, as found in Robin Hood and the Curtal Friar [Child 123], in which Robin and Tuck both call for help -- Robin from his band, Tuck from his dogs. Possibly the Lyle-Andrew-CrawfursCollectionVolume2 text is a composite of Child 282 with Child 123, attracted by the Robin Hood parallels mentioned by Child. I'd like to see at least one other such version before splitting them, though. - RBW]

"Jock the Leg, the usual name for a pocket-knife, is a corruption of Jacques de Liege, the tradesman who supplied Scotland with cutlery in the days of the Guises" [P.C.B, "How Lord P became our Rector," in Fraser's Magazine for Town and Country, (London, 1863 ("Digitized by Google")), Vol. LXVIII, July 1863, p. 51]. [Mary of Guise was married to James V of Scotland in 1538, became regent over her daughter -Mary Queen of Scots - in 1554, and died in 1560.] - BS

Last updated in version 4.1
File: C282

Jockey and Jenny

description: "Oh, Jockey courted Jenny in the height of spring... Oh, Jockey would give anything that Jenny's heart could win." He asks a relative for advice and is told that single life is best; married life is costly. It is not clear if they marry

author: unknown
earliest date: 1906 (Gardiner collection)
keywords: love courting money
found in: Britain(England(South))
references (1 citation):
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #34, "Jockey and Jenny" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1556

Notes [39 words]: This song was collected twice, but both times from the same informant, and he remembered only three and a half verses. So we know the set-up of the song, but not the ending: Did the two marry, or did Jockey get talked out of it? - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
File: VWP034

Jockey Hat and Feather

description: "As I was walking out one day A-thinking of the weather I saw a pair of roguish eyes 'Neath a hat and feather." The girl asks how the singer likes her hat. He likes it (or her?) very much. She leaves; he misses her, and dreams of the hat author: Fred Wilson and W. H. Brockway

earliest date: 1870 (Oliver Ditson & Co, The New Comic Songster)
keywords: clothes dream loneliness separation
found in: US(So)
references (4 citations):
Randolph 490, "Jockey Hat and Feather" (1 text)
Gilbert-LostChords, p. 59, "Jockey Hat and Feather" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1120, p. 76, "The Jockey Hat and Feather" (5 references)
New-Comic-Songster, p. 15, "Jockey Hat and Feather" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7586

Notes [97 words]: Spaeth (A History of Popular Music in America, p. 173) says that this was "one of a large group of songs [in the 1860s] that discussed details of feminine attire," but mentions only this and "Tassels on Her Boots" -- both of which appear in New-Comic-Songster, though I don't know if that's significant.

According to the broadside descriptions on p. 76 of Edwin Wolf 2nd, American Song Sheets, Slip Ballads, and Political Broadsides 1850-1870, Library Company of Philadelphia, 1963, this was sung by Ben Cotton and by "W. N. Smith, the great bone-player, of Bailey's Circus." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
File: R490
Jockey to the Fair

DESCRIPTION: Jocky puts on his Sunday suit and goes to Jenny's house, wakes her by tapping at the window. Jenny says, "Everyone's asleep or out: are you going to hold to your vows?" He says yes. They run off to the Fair and get married. Returning, they bless the day

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1820 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 16(118d))

KEYWORDS: love clothes elopement marriage courting sex promise family

FOUND IN: US(Ap) Canada(Mar) Britain(England(South,West), Scotland)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 465-467, "Jockey to the Fair" (1 text)
- Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 90-92, "Jockey to the Fair" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 170-171, "Jockey to the Fair" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 94, pp. 146-147, "Jocko to the Fair" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
- Edmund Henneberry, "Jocky to the Fair" (on NovaScotia 1)

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Harding B 16(118d), "Jockey and Jennys Trip to the Fair," J. Pitts (London), 1802-1819; also Harding B 16(119a), Firth b.26(244), Harding B 11(1884), "Jocky and Jenny's Trip to the Fair";
- Firth c.19(152), Firth b.26(407), Harding B 11(1886), Firth b.26(372), Harding B 25(972), Harding B 28(64), "Jockey to the Fair";
- 2806 c.16(62), "Jockey and Jenny"; Harding B 21(13), "Trip to the Fair"

ALTERNATE TITLES:
With Jockey to the Fair

NOTES [60 words]: There's also a fiddle tune, "Jockey to the Fair", to which these words can be sung. As for the keyword "sex" -- it's not mentioned in the song, but you can believe what you like. - PJS

For another version see Robert Bell, editor, [The Project Gutenberg EBook (1996) of] Ancient Poems, Ballads and Songs of the Peasantry of England (1857), "Jockey to the Fair" - BS

Last updated in version 2.8

File: CrSe170

Jockey's Escape from Dundee

DESCRIPTION: "Where got thou the haver-meal bannock? Blind Bubby, canst thou not see?" Singer Jock has gotten the minister's daughter of Dundee pregnant; the minister demands he marry her. Jock is not interested in marriage; he asks Sandy to help him escape

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1719 (Pills to Purge Melancholy, according to Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)

KEYWORDS: sex pregnancy abandonment clergy

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 28, "Jockey's Escape from Dundee" (1 text, tune referenced)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Bonnie Dundee (II)" (opening lines)

File: Gath028

Jocky and his Owsen

DESCRIPTION: "Twa afore ane, Three afore five [the order in which oxen are yoked] ... An' Jocky at the last; Jenny and her five kye Fullin' in fast"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1881 (Gregor, Notes on the Folk-Lore of the North-East of Scotland, according to Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: farming nonballad animal

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jocky Said to Jeanie

DESCRIPTION: "Jocky said to Jeanie, wilt thou do't? Ne'er a fit, quo' Jeannie, for my tocher good."
She says her dowry is too good for such as him. He says he has gold, gear, and land. She consents: "Ye're welcomer to tak me than to let me be."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1724 (Ramsay)

KEYWORDS: love court ing dowry

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland) Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig/Duncan4 823, "Jocky's Proposal" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 22, "Jocky Said to Jinnie" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, p. 145, "Jocky Said to Jenny" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Allan Ramsay, The Tea-Table Miscellany (Edinburgh: Thomas Ruddiman, 1724 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 141-142, "For the Love of Jean" ("Jocky said to Jeany, Jeany, wilt thou do't?") (1 text)
ST CrNS022 (Full)

Roud #1792

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Jocky Said to Jeany

NOTES [112 words]: Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong: "This was an old song even in Ramsay's days, as it was marked with a Z in the first volume of his Miscellany. The title there given to it is 'For the love of Jean,' ...." The "Z, old songs" is in Ramsay's Table of Contents.
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia heard this song in Gaelic and French as well as English and always to the same tune. - BS
My feeling is that Creighton's version was a local adaption. Her tune (in 2/4 and with a range of only a fourth) bears no resemblance to that, e.g., in the Scots Musical Museum (in 3/2 and with a full octave range). My guess would be that a Gaelic drone went into French and English. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.2

File: CrNS022

Joe and Mary

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you young people, A story I will tell, About a fair young maiden." Mary goes on a morning walk and meets Joe, who asks to walk her home -- then grabs her and beats her to death. He then jumps into the river and kills himself

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol5)

KEYWORDS: courting river death homicide suicide

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol5, pp. 45-47, "Joe and Mary" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7054

File: BWV5045

Joe Bowers [Laws B14]

DESCRIPTION: Joe Bowers leaves for California to raise money to marry Sally. Returning home, he is irritated to find that she has married another, a red-haired man, and has a red-haired baby

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1856 ("Johnson's Original Comic Songs")

KEYWORDS: travel marriage infidelity settler
REFERENCES (34 citations):
Laws B14, "Joe Bowers"
Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 98-99, "Joe Bowers" (1 text)
Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois, pp. 185-187, "Joe Bowers" (1 text)
Welsch-NebraskaPioneerLore, pp. 55-57, "Joe Bowers" (1 text)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 341-343, "Joe Bowers" (1 text, apparently a collation of four versions, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia, pp. 366, "Joe Bowers" (1 text)
Randolph 187, "Joe Bowers" (3 texts plus an excerpt, 2 tunes)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 190-193, "Joe Bowers" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 187D with the tune re-transcribed)
High-OldOldFolkSongs, pp. 25-26, "Joe Bowers" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 258, "Joe Bowers" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 258, "Joe Bowers" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 431, "Joe Bowers" (1 text)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 63, "Joe Bowers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 50, "Joe Bowers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cox/Hercog/Halpert/Boswell-WVirginia-B, #24A-B, pp. 186-187, "Joe Bowers" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune)
DT 381, JOBOWERS*

RECORDINGS:
Bill Bender (The Happy Cowboy), "Joe Bowers" (Varsity 5130, n.d.; rec. 1939)
Loman D. Cansler, "Joe Bowers" (on Cansler1)
Logan English, "Joe Bowers" (on LEnglish02)
Jean Ritchie, "Joe Bowers" (on Ritchie03)
Pete Seeger, "Joe Bowers" (on PeteSeeger07, PeteSeeger07a)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Bebe Hung One On Us" (plot)

SAME TUNE:
The Ghost of the Peanut Stand (File: CrSNB070)
The 2nd N.Y. Fire-Zouaves (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 139)

NOTES [105 words]: Various suggestions have been put forward regarding the author of this song; Laws quotes Louise Pound's attribution to John A. Stone (Old Put). Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads advocates John Woodward. The Lomaxes mention the Johnson of "Johnson's Original Comic Songs." Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety alludes to Merwin's attribution to Frank Swift. I suspect the matter can no longer be settled.
Joe Bowman

DESCRIPTION: Singer and friends meet hunt-master Joe Bowman at dawn; they go out in search of game, and flush a fox. He runs swiftly and cleverly, but is killed in the end. All gather around the fire and drink.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (recorded from John Dalton)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer and friends meet hunt-master Joe Bowman at dawn; they go out in search of game, and flush a fox. He runs swiftly and cleverly, but is killed in the end. All gather around the fire and drink. Chorus: "When the fire's on the hearth and the good cheer abounds/We'll sing to Joe Bowman and the Uilswater hounds/For we ne'er shall forget how he woke us at dawn/With the crack of his whip and the sound of his horn"

KEYWORDS: death hunting drink animal worker

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 252, "Joe Bowman" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1858

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Bold Reynard ('A Good Many Gentlemen')" (theme)
cf. "Bold Reynard the Fox (Tallyho! Hark! Away!)" (theme)
cf. "The Innocent Hare" (theme)
cf. "The Echoing Horn" (theme)

NOTES [67 words]: Joe Bowman (1851-1940) was a well-known and well-liked character in the Lake District; he hunted the Uilswater foxhounds for forty years. - PJS

Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland claims there are "many" songs about Bowman -- but cites only one, which he does not quote, and cites only his own recording of "Joe Bowman." One thinks Kennedy, as so often, has been a bit on the overenthusiastic side. - RBW

File: K252

Joe Brady

DESCRIPTION: "I am a bold undaunted youth and Joe Brady is my name." Two policemen stop him as a "Fenian Blade." James Carey has betrayed him for the Phoenix Park murders. Bystanders cry out on his behalf. Many are proud of Carey's victims

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Behan-IrelandSings)

KEYWORDS: execution homicide trial Ireland political mother

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Behan-IrelandSings, #34, "Joe Brady" (1 text, 1 tune, probably modified)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Phoenix Park Tragedy" (subject: the Phoenix Park murders) and references there

NOTES [37 words]: Behan-IrelandSings calls this traditional, although I can find no other versions. Still, songs about the Phoenix Park events are numerous; this looks like a song that could have been built out of floating components. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.2
File: Beha034

Joe Brady and Dan Curley

DESCRIPTION: The singer claims that Joe Brady and Daniel Curley are innocent of Burke's murder but that the informer Carey, a confessed killer is free: "Carey is more guilty than any of the rest ... the daggers which had done the deed he broke them into bits"
Joe Brook

DESCRIPTION: The singer leaves Grey Rapids in October 1924 and takes the train for Deersdale to go logging with Coughlan on Joe Brook. The crew has men from every country. Key men in the crew are named.

AUTHOR: Frank O'Hara
EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi)
KEYWORDS: lumbering moniker
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick, pp. 77-80, "Joe Brook" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-LarryGorman, pp. 174-175, "Joe Brook" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi 25, "The Joe Brook Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST IvNB077 (Partial)
Roud #1948
NOTES [28 words]: Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi: The song "describes life at Coughlan's Camp in a lumber operation for Geo. Burchill & Sons of South Nelson" near the Miramichi River. - BS
Last updated in version 6.1
File: IvNB077

Joe Hill

DESCRIPTION: The singer "dreamed I saw Joe Hill last night, Alive as you and me." He points out that Hill is dead. Hill replies, "I never died." The singer describes the details of Hill's death; Hill answers, "What they forgot to kill Went on to organize."
AUTHOR: Words: Alfred Hayes/Music: Earl Robinson
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (music copyright; the words are older)
KEYWORDS: death dream labor-movement lastwill
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1879-1915 - Life of Joel Emmanuel Hagglund, known as "Joe Hillstrom" or "Joe Hill."
1902 - Hill emigrates to the United States
Jan 10, 1914 - The Salt Lake City robbery/murder for which Joe Hill was arrested
Nov 19, 1915 - Execution of Joe Hill for the murder
FOUND IN: Britain(England) US
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, p. 175, "Joe Hill" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, p. 95, "(Joe Hill)" (1 fragment)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 48, "Joe Hill" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, JOEHILL
ADDITIONAL: Sam Richards, "The Joe Hill Legend in Britain," essay in Archie Green, editor, _Songs about Work: Essays in Occupational Culture for Richard A. Reuss_, Folklore Institute, Indiana University, 1993, pp. 316-331 (1 full text plus excerpts and fragments, 1 tune0
Kenneth Lougee, _Pie in the Sky: How Joe Hill's Lawyers Lost His Case, Got Him Shot, and Were Disbarred_. iUniverse, 2011, pp. xi-xii, "(no title)" (1 text)
RECORDINGS:
Pete Seeger, "Joe Hill" (on PeteSeeger39) (on PeteSeeger48)
SAME TUNE:
I Dreamed I Saw Phil Ochs Last Night (by Billy Bragg)
NOTES [7036 words]: Lori Elaine Taylor wrote an essay, "Joe Hill Incorporated: We Own Our Past," which appeared in Green. It details the history of this song. According to p. 26,
* Alfred Hayes's poem was first published in New Masses and then in a Communist anthology, Proletarian Literature in the United States.
* Hayes gave a copy of the poem to Earl Robinson in 1936. Robinson set it to music to supply a song for a "Joe Hill campfire" that evening.
* The song spread across the country that summer.
* Reportedly Alfred Hayes "avoided association with the song throughout his life," but Robinson was proud of it; he recorded it in 1941, and had earlier played piano on Michael Loring's recording. The song became even more popular after Paul Robeson recorded it.
Earl Robinson, shortly before his death, counted translations of the song in twelve languages. Not all parts of the song are accurate, even if one believes Hill was falsely convicted. The line "the copper bosses killed you, Joe," for instance, is said to refer to the mine owners who opposed a Western Federation of Miners strike in Bingham, Utah in 1912. But Hill and the I. W. W. had little to do with this, and the mine owners had little reason to care about Hill (Smith, p. 117).
Taylor suggests, on p. 33 of Green, that it is this song more than anything else that accounts for the Joe Hill legend. Another part of the legend is due to Big Bill Haywood. Hill, according to Taylor, wrote to Haywood, "Don't waste any time mourning -- organize!" Haywood shortened this to the memorable "Don't Mourn -- Organize!" -- which proved a brilliant slogan.
Green's book also contains the Sam Richards essay "The Joe Hill Legend in Britain" mentioned as an "Additional" entry above. It supplies evidence that this piece has actually gone into oral tradition -- and adds on p. 320 that this song about Hill is more popular than any of Hill's own songs except perhaps "The Preacher and the Slave." Richards in fact believes (p. 326) that this may be the most popular labor song in Britain today.
Richards mentions on pp. 320-321 that Paul Robeson premiered his version of the song in 1947 in Salt Lake City itself. That must have been something to see....
The innocence of Joel Emmanuel Hägglund, "Joe Hill," is such an article of faith in the folk community that it was stated as fact in the earlier editions of this index. The I. W. W. regarded it as a frame-up from the first (Smith, p. 122). This even though the sources containing this song knew so little about the case that different sources gave different dates for Hill's execution!
An honest assessment has to admit uncertainty. Facts are sadly few -- indeed, little is known of Hill's dozen years of freedom in the United States; even before his death, he was legendary enough that he is said to have been part of far more labor actions than any man could possibly have participated in. Hill did not encourage intimacy; one man who knew Hill relatively well said that "Joe was a most reticent cuss. To drag anything biographical out of Joe was a man size job; the guy just wasn't a fluent talker" (Smith, p. 43). Nor was he universally regarded as honest;
"Haywire Mac" McClintock called him a "plain crook" and thought him willing to shoot a company man (Smith, p. 54).

And, based on the evidence, it sounds as if he did get into a lot of fights. Apparently the Utah authorities found that he had "scars on neck, face, nose, chest, shoulder, forearm, [and] hand" (Rosemont, p. 40). Many of those were acquired in Salt Lake City (we know that he suffered chest, face, and hand injuries there), but at least some wounds were probably older.

Born Joel Hägglund in 1879 in Sweden, he was a violinist from the age of eight. He lost his father in that year, leaving the family very poor. Hill seems to have been obsessed with music (Adler, p. 101), but was irreverent from an early age; his worst school subjects were religious (Adler, p. 102). When his mother died in 1902, the family sold the house, with some children staying in Sweden and some departing. Joel and a brother migrated to America, where Joel worked as a common laborer (Adler, pp. 29-30). Although his first stop in the New World was New York, he soon headed west (Adler, p. 31).

Interestingly, although skilled on violin, guitar, and piano, and with some ability on organ and accordion (Smith, p. 44), and perhaps banjo as well (Rosemont, p. 43), songwriting does not seem to have been easy for Hill (Adler, pp. 206-207), perhaps because he was working in a foreign language. Smith, pp. 38-39, prints several of his non-Union songs (one of which may have been sold commercially); they frankly are not very good. Nonetheless his superior labor songwriting skill seems to have been acknowledged instantly (Smith, p. 19).

Once in America, Hill rambled -- but probably not as much as the tales about him imply (Lefebvre, pp. 57-58; Rosemont, pp. 45-46, claims he was in New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Chicago, one of the Dakotas, Spokane, Seattle, Portland, Los Angeles, San Pedro, Fresno, Baja California, British Columbia, and probably Alaska and Hawaii. How he is supposed to have obtained transportation to the latter is left as an exercise for the reader).

Presumably he worked at least some of the time, but records of this are few. Lougee, p. 2, located him under the name Joseph Hillstrom in the 1910 US census, working at a hardware store in Saint Paul, Minnesota. (Although I note that there were two Joseph Hillstroms in the first ward of Saint Paul, Minnesota in the 1910 census, with ages ten years apart; I suspect Hill was counted twice, in two different census tracts, which hints that he might have been homeless.) All that is really certain is that he early on joined the I. W. W. (Industrial Workers of the World, a socialist union), and became their best and most important songwriter. The I. W. W. song "The Preacher and the Slave" appeared in the Little Red Songbook in 1911 (Smith, p. 20), although it did not have Hill's name attached at that time.

He is said to have been "six feet tall, slim, with dark blue eyes and dark brown hair" (Rosemont, p. 45).

If Hill's history is mysterious, the story of his trial and execution is frankly troubling.

What is known is that Hill was in Utah starting in 1913, supporting a strike against the Utah Construction Co. (Foner, pp. 16-17, although Lougee, pp. 7-8, says that the evidence for this comes from much later and doubts its validity) and staying with some friends he had earlier met in California (Adler, p. 209, etc.). He apparently worked for a while upon arrival, but lost his job due to illness (Smith, p. 63). The Utah government reacted strongly to the UCC strike, attacking the strikers and limiting their right to speak and demonstrate (Foner, pp. 17-18, although Lougee, p. 8, claims Salt Lake City showed no bias against the strikers). Little wonder that Hill wanted to play a part! -- although Smith, p. 63, and Lefebvre, p. 60, say that he was just passing through on his way to Chicago; Adler, p. 27, believes that, having just gotten out of prison in Los Angeles, he wanted a new start somewhere else.

On the evening of January 10, 1914, perhaps a little before 10:00 p.m. (Foner, p. 18; Lefebvre, pp. 59-60), a murder took place at a grocery store in Salt Lake City. John G. Morrison and his son Arling were slain. Arling, according to Morrison's surviving son Merlin (the only witness, whom Lougee, p. 3, says was twelve years old), appeared to have shot one of the attackers (although Merlin said he did not hear Arling fire; Lougee, p. 3). The killers left without actually taking anything. The police thought the case was a revenge killing -- Morrison, who had briefly been a police officer (Adler, p. 44), had fought off robbers twice in the previous dozen years (Foner, p. 19; Adler, p. 47). And Merlin Morrison reported that the killers had shouted "We've got you now" upon entering the store (Adler, p. 53).

Hill later turned up at a doctor's with a bullet hole in his chest (Lefebvre, p. 60). It was a clean injury; the bullet had entered the chest cavity and passed through (meaning that it could not be placed in evidence when the trial came -- although its absence was possibly significant). Hill offered no real explanation, saying that the fault was as much his as the other man's (Foner, p. 34). The doctor, Frank McHugh, treated and released him. Later, McHugh said that Hill had told him that he had been shot by a friend who believed Hill had insulted his wife (Smith, p. 64).
Arguments that they so propagandized the jury that the judge sometimes cut off questioning. And Hill's accidentally stacked it may have been -- and that is the fault of Hill's lawyers. Lougee, p. 78, stacked.
May well have been tainted by religion, history, and news reports, but it was not deliberately lists five members of the Hill jury who were working class, and implies there were others. The jury and very many Mormons married non-Americans and lived with them in Utah. And Lougee, p. 49, 45-46, points out that Mormonism is an international religion, with missions to foreign countries, eyes of the public (Foner, p. 27). This is very likely true, but some charges made by Hill supporters 83, and Lefebvre). Hill claimed throughout that the trial was fixed, and certainly he was guilty in the
The trial began on June 10, 1914 (according to Foner, p. 28) or June 17, 1914 (according Smith, p.
57). Nonetheless, a Mrs. Phoebe Seeley eventually convinced herself that she had seen Hill near the murder scene (Foner, p. 31). Such eyewitness testimony is generally quite weak, and Hill's lawyers allowed their testimony to influence each other.

Notably, a Mrs. Phoebe Seeley eventually convinced herself that she had seen Hill near the murder scene (Foner, p. 31). Such eyewitness testimony is generally quite weak, and Hill's lawyers allowed their testimony to influence each other.

Hill was taken into custody three days after the murder (Foner, p. 21), having been drugged by the doctor (Adler, p. 70). The problem wasn't really the arrest (although Hill was shot in the hand in the process, and later claimed police brutality; Foner, p. 22; Adler, p. 87, notes that he was still feeling the effects of his wounds when arraigned a week later); it was what followed. Lougee, p. xiii, lists several acts which would be considered violations of Hill's constitutional rights today: he "was unrepresented at arraignment and at the preliminary hearing. Today, the government would provide him with a public defender. The police questioned him at length without giving him the Miranda warnings [against self-incrimination]. His lodging place was searched without a proper warrant."

Hill was charged with first degree murder in the case of John Morrison (Foner, p. 24); the murder of Arling Morrison was attributed to an unknown accomplice (Adler, p. 4). Unfortunately, the transcript of this preliminary hearing is missing (Adler, p. 225); we can only reconstruct it from news stories (Smith, p. 79). But the only witness to the crime, Merlin Morrison, could not identify Hill (Foner, p. 23), and there were no other witnesses in position to testify (Foner, p. 30). It appears that Hill did not object to having the witnesses hear each others' testimony (Adler, p. 225), which of course allowed their testimony to influence each other.

Nonetheless, a Mrs. Phoebe Seeley eventually convinced herself that she had seen Hill near the murder scene (Foner, p. 31). Such eyewitness testimony is generally quite weak, and Hill's lawyers eventually got her to concede that she wasn't entirely sure (Smith, p. 88), but it would be important in this case.

The trial began on June 10, 1914 (according to Foner, p. 28) or June 17, 1914 (according Smith, p.
83, and Lefebvre). Hill claimed throughout that the trial was fixed, and certainly he was guilty in the eyes of the public (Foner, p. 27). This is very likely true, but some charges made by Hill supporters -- that Utah was anti-immigrant, and that the jury pool was rigged -- seem to be false. Lougee, pp. 45-46, points out that Mormonism is an international religion, with missions to foreign countries, and very many Mormons married non-Americans and lived with them in Utah. And Lougee, p. 49, lists five members of the Hill jury who were working class, and implies there were others. The jury may well have been tainted by religion, history, and news reports, but it was not deliberately stacked.

Accidentally stacked it may have been -- and that is the fault of Hill's lawyers. Lougee, p. 78, argues that they so propagandized the jury that the judge sometimes cut off questioning. And Hill's lawyers did not do a good job of examining the jurors -- and so used up their preemptory challenges and wanted more (Lougee, p. 79). And one of the men they let through was stunning (one of the first jurors seated, so they certainly could have challenged him): eventual jury foreman Joseph Smith Kimball. It's little wonder that Kimball became foreman of a jury that had eight Mormons on it; Kimball (born 1851) was the son of Heber C. Kimball, a big name in Mormonism -- "the second most important apostle in the Utah period." Prescinda Huntington Kimball, Joseph Kimball's mother, had actually been one of Joseph Smith's earliest wives before Smith was murdered and she married Kimball. The younger Kimball was about as close to the Mormon hierarchy as you could get -- and he was a wealthy man with significant corporate interests (Lougee, pp. 79-81). In other words, he was just the sort of person the IWW wanted to overthrow.

Hill was at first defended, pro bono, by an out-of-state attorney, E. C. MacDougall (Foner, p. 24; Adler, p. 228, says that he appeared at the jail and volunteered his services). But Hill dramatically and angrily fired his defense part-way through the trial (Adler p. 238; Smith, pp. 85-86, quotes the court record; Lougee, p. 101, reports that Hill said, "There are three lawyers in this courtroom, and they're all trying to convict me. That's two lawyers too many"). It was probably a mistake (Foner, p. 36). Hill felt that the lawyers had been too gentle to teenage Merlin Morrison, the key witness against Hill. The lawyers' argument, which sounds entirely reasonable to me, is that they did not want Morrison to break down, which would surely influence the jury (Adler, pp. 237-238). But their gentle questioning concealed what appear to have been significant inconsistencies in Merlin's testimony. Neither of Hill's options were good; he wasn't competent to defend himself, but Lougee agrees that his lawyers weren't doing their jobs!

Hill just didn't know how to handle his case. Lougee, p. 68, reminds us that being a defense attorney often involves understanding the local culture and working with it, and "It is impossible to find a more difficult client for Salt Lake City than Joe Hill."

Foner, p. 28, offers significant exculpatory evidence. First, no bullet could be found at the site of the robbery which could have caused Hill's injury (significant, since the bullet had passed through Hill's body; wherever Hill was shot, the bullet should have been there) and the fact that there was no blood found where Hill was alleged to have been shot. Which, of course, still leaves the question of where Hill had been on the night of the robbery.

Things went downhill fast once Hill got rid of his lawyers -- in part because the judge was clearly prejudiced against him and allowed the prosecution undue liberties (Lefebvre, p. 61). Hill, a non-lawyer, didn't know when to protest -- and when his lawyers (who had been retained by the judge to advise him) tried to help out, Hill continued to attack them (Adler, p. 242). No evidence could be presented to directly connect Hill with the murder. The whole case consisted of Merlin Morrison's testimony about the robbery, including a statement that one of the attackers was shot; Mrs. Seeley's testimony that she thought she had seen him there, and a trail of blood that could not even be shown to be human or contemporary with the shooting.

Foner, pp. 37-38, sums up Hill's defense under six heads:
* That many others fit the vague description of the murderer
* That Hill was shot with a steel bullet, and Arling Morrison's weapon fired lead bullets (a strong point if true, but the evidence is weak; according to Adler, p. 257, it was based on the testimony of one doctor long after the shooting. The judge did not allow the testimony; Smith, p. 95.)
* That it was not possible that Hill had been shot by Arling Morrison because of the nature and location of the wound
* That if Morrison had shot anyone (a point for which the only evidence was Merlin Morrison's testimony and the fact that one chamber of the gun was empty), the bullet must still be in the man's body (since it was never found; Smith, p. 97, says that six bullets were located in the investigation and none matched Morrison's gun), and the bullet used to shoot Hill had exited his body
* That the gun Hill carried could not have inflicted the wounds found on the Morrisons (a weak point, since Hill had thrown away the gun)
* That the police had tried to influence the witnesses against Hill

There was also the point that, while there was an empty chamber in Morrison's gun, the police expert who claimed it had recently been fired could not in fact have known, because it was smokeless powder; also, the Salt Lake police practice was to leave one chamber empty, so Morrison might have done the same (Adler, p. 249).

The defense also raised the point that Hill had no motive for murder (Adler, p. 250).

The first point is strong. The rest of the points are convincing if true -- but all look like attacks on the witnesses or the police, which would make them less likely to be accepted in a law-and-order state. Plus the judge suppressed some of the supporting evidence for these claims -- at least in the view of Foner (pp. 38-39). Lougee, p. xv, agrees that the judge suppressed evidence, but in the case of the argument about the steel bullet, says that the doctor did not make his determination about the wound until the time of the court case, making his testimony anything but reliable; the judge exercised appropriate discretion.

And this was a time when almost all government was anti-labor -- Lougee, p. 24, says that "There never was a strike in the era that was not met by an injunction against organization by a federal court," often backed by arrests of leaders and intimidation of workers. On p. 31, Lougee lists several instances of labor leaders sentenced to death for crimes they assuredly did not commit: "The Haymarket martyrs were guilty of nothing more than language. Ettor and Giovannitti were guilty of nothing. Tom Mooney was beyond doubt innocent." If the state could execute innocent men, why not a man who might, just possibly, have been guilty? Plus, again, this is Utah, and Hill was a radical outsider. In the circumstances, is it any surprise that Hill was convicted and sentenced to die?

Lougee, p. 98, says of the trial, "It is impossible to exaggerate how badly this case was handled at trial, but it was badly handled within the rules of trial procedure. The blame for this result rests not upon the 'copper bosses,' the Mormon Church, the judicial system, or any other conspiracy. It cannot be blame on the prosecutor or the judge. In sum, [lawyers] MacDougall and Scott sealed Joe Hill's fate, and they did it to their client and themselves."

It took the jury parts of two days to reach a verdict of first degree murder (Foner, p. 45). The verdict was announced on June 27, 1914. On July 8, Judge Ritchie sentenced him to death. Offered the choice of hanging or a firing squad, Hill chose to be shot (Foner, p. 49). The judge ordered the execution for September 4 -- but then granted a stay pending a hearing on a new trial. The decision caused a series of labor protests (Foner, p. 52), although I suspect they just made the citizens of Utah more determined. On September 1, Judge Ritchie denied the request for a new trial (Foner, p. 55), leaving few options but an appeal to Utah's Supreme Court. This failed to gain Hill any relief (Foner, p. 57; Adler, pp. 282-283; both charge the court with many errors of fact). The decision came down on July 3, 1915 (Adler, p. 282); Hill's delayed execution was rescheduled for October 1, 1915 (Foner, p. 62).

Lougee, p. 126, points out that the grounds for appeal were weak. In effect, the Hill's lawyer was arguing that the jury had accepted false testimony -- but the legal standard was that "the jury was the sole decision-maker when it comes to credibility." Lougee quotes a judge to the effect that, whenever such arguments appear in court, the judge sighs a sigh of relief because the judge can ignore whatever is said. The lawyer has no case. Hill's jury may have been wrong; Hill's jury certainly made its decision based on inadequate information, but there was no grounds for an overrule. Even though Hill's supporters were shocked, Lougee, p. 128, declares that this was the proper result based on the rules of the time, and the same thing would happen today.

Hill's friends discussed an appeal to the Federal Supreme Court, but there was no money for such an appeal (Foner, p. 62). I doubt there was much point anyway; Edward Douglas White's court had recently shown its conservative leanings in the Leo Frank case (see the notes to "Mary Phagan" [Laws F20]). The Frank case was actually mentioned in Hill's appeal for clemency, according to Foner, pp. 66-67, but not on legal grounds).

If anything, the court would have become more conservative in the months since the Frank case as the pro-business, anti-minority, anti-defendants rights Judge James Clark McReynolds (appointed 1914) strengthened the conservative alignment that eventually became "the four horsemen" (Hall, pp. 542-543). Hill's lawyer also suggested that there was no basis for the Federal court to intervene (Adler, p. 285). Hill didn't want to make the effort in any case, so his supporters instead turned to the Utah Board of Pardons.

One of those convinced that Hill should die was the governor of Utah, who was one of five members of the Board of Pardons (the others being the state attorney general and the justices of the Supreme Court who had already condemned Hill; Adler, p. 286). So the various calls for clemency and a new trial (including one from the Swedish embassy; Foner, p. 69) were denied. Even an appeal from President Wilson brought only a brief stay (Foner, p. 78); a later appeal by Wilson earned the president a harsh rejoinder from Governor Spry. The local newspapers were firm in their rejection of Wilson's request (it is perhaps worth noting that Utah was one of only two states to have cast its electoral votes for Taft in the three-way election of 1912 that put Wilson in the White House).

Perhaps more to the point, Hill continued to be stubborn. "New trial or bust," he declared (Adler, p. 287). But the only grounds for a new trial would be new evidence, and the only new evidence would be Hill telling how he got shot and who did it. And he still refused (Lougee, p. 129).

Functionally, Hill condemned himself. And so the days passed until his execution. Governor Spry received death threats and privately hired Pinkertons as guards, but publicly declared that he would not give in (Adler, p. 299). Clearly he felt no qualms about the death penalty! Hill's last messages of course became famous -- the "Last Will" that began "My will is easy to which is odd, because in his personal politics he was conservative (Lougee, p. 111). But he had been a county judge for a time) was "the most important labor lawyer of the era" (Lougee, p.

The lawyer brought in for Hill's appeal, Orin Hilton (commonly known as "Judge Hilton" because he happened. But Lougee also concludes that Scott lied about the case.

The two did not ask to be paid to defend Hill, but that also meant that they had no money to investigate evidence or dig up exculpatory information (Lougee, p. 61). With Hill unwilling to tell them what actually happened, this gave them little to work with except inconsistencies in the prosecution -- which they did not use effectively.

Lefebvre, p. 62, sums up the whole case pretty well: "Whether Hill was guilty of murder or not, he clearly did not receive a fair trial, one that might have credibly determined the truth." Lougee blames a lot of this on Hill's lawyers. On p. xix, he call's Hill's first lawyer Ernest MacDougall "sincere but incompetent and says that Frank B. Scott, who assisted him, "venal and incompetent." On p. 60, Lougee argues that MacDougall was not legally qualified to handle a capital case; a lawyer in such a case should previously have served as an assistant on a death penalty case, which MacDougall had not done. And the lawyer who took over at the end Judge Orin Hilton, "was disbarred by the Utah Supreme Court in 1916."

Lougee, p. 25, adds that MacDougall spent part of his time in court making socialist speeches, which didn't help Hill's cause. Lougee, pp. 57-59, has a summary of MacDougall's career. In appears he was born around 1879. There is no record of him going to law school, although he was admitted to the bar in Michigan in 1901. He seems to have wandered from state to state peddling his skills; the 1910 census lists him in Kansas, but as a schoolteacher, not a lawyer. In 1913, he was living in a Wyoming poor house. On p. 58, Lougee records that in 1914 he managed to free a young woman who had been wrongfully committed to an asylum, but "There is no other record of him doing significant legal work prior to the Hill case." He was based in Wyoming, not Utah, at the time of the Hill trial; he had enrolled with the Utah Supreme Court as a lawyer just six days before Hill went before the judge. He dabbled in politics, as a socialist, got nowhere, went back to Kansas, then Chicago, and had only a minor legal practice. The last record of him is from a book (not about Hill) that he published in 1936.

Assistant lawyer Scott was worse. Lougee, p. 60, says that he came from Canada. He had been in Salt Lake City since 1905, but had called himself a patent attorney."Joe Hill called him a 'shyster.' Joe Hill was right. Frank Scott had a terrible business reputation." Lougee describes what appears to be repeated criminal fraud.

The two did not ask to be paid to defend Hill, but that also meant that they had no money to investigate evidence or dig up exculpatory information (Lougee, p. 61). With Hill unwilling to tell them what actually happened, this gave them little to work with except inconsistencies in the prosecution -- which they did not use effectively.

Lougee, p. 108-109, says that MacDougall challenged Hill's sanity -- but did not present an insanity defense; Scott claimed that Hill said he would testify but changed his mind -- which is important, because Lougee thinks it means that Hill "never told his lawyers" what he was doing on the night of the murder. This is obviously quite a significant point in our attempts to determine what actually happened. But Lougee also concludes that Scott lied about the case.

The lawyer brought in for Hill's appeal, Orin Hilton (commonly known as "Judge Hilton" because he had been a county judge for a time) was "the most important labor lawyer of the era" (Lougee, p. 112) -- which is odd, because in his personal politics he was conservative (Lougee, p. 111). But he... had found a legal niche, and most of the time, he was successful in defending labor cases. The problem in the Hill case is that he came in too late. He was responsible only for the appeals, and he had never taken an appellate case before and never took one again (Lougee, p. 124). He was brilliant at working with a jury, but appeals cases were based more on a sound grasp of the law and legal procedure, and that was not one of Hilton's strengths. Plus he made enemies in the Mormon church (Lougee, pp. 124-125). He might well have been able to save Hill in the initial trial. But overturning Hill's conviction took other skills. He failed, and after failing, he started railing against the system (Lougee, p. 109), which probably made things worse.

The lawyers in labor cases, according to Lougee, pp. 34-35, were under conflicting pressures: one to defend their clients, the other to make the case for organized labor. "Successful defense could be done and was done but often at the expense of disappointing the labor movement. It is not surprising that the most successful lawyers, Darrow and Hilton, exercised independent judgment" (Lougee, p. 34). But Darrow did not represent Hill, and Hilton was not involved until too late. Lougr, p. 76, concludes that, if Hill were on trial today, it would take much longer to apply the death penalty, and a good lawyer could probably have gotten him a new trial on the bases of "a significant ineffective assistance of counsel motion, followed by federal habeas proceedings."

Lougee says that after all the appeals failed, lawyer Hilton, presumably in an attempt to improve his reputation, started blaming everything on the Mormons (Lougee, pp. 134-135). Lougee thinks this unfair, and I incline to think the same. The Latter-Day Saints were and are very conservative, and Utah an extreme law-and-order state, but there is no hint the church was involved in convicting Hill. The main result of Hilton's spouting off was that he was disbarred in Utah, although he was eventually reinstated in 1924 after he, in effect, recanted (Lougee, pp. 140-141).

Hilton wasn't the only one who doesn't seem to want to face the truth. Smith's is the only account I read that seemed to have an open mind. I visited Amazon.com in trying to find good additional sources to allow further research. The reader reviews were absolutely useless -- clearly most of them had already decided their opinions, and they reviewed the books positively or negatively based on what "they" think happened.

A mild example of this occurs in Sing Out! magazine, volume 27, number 5 (1979), p. 39, which mentions the attempt, on the hundredth anniversary of Hill's birth, to win him a pardon. It mentions the holdup, and it mention's Hill's bullet wound. It does not mention the eyewitness testimony that one of the robbers was injured, nor does it describe how feeble Hill's alibi was, nor does it describe his feeble attempts to represent himself. Thus, while it never quite says that Hill was innocent, it makes the case against him appear much weaker than it actually was.

Foner, it seems to me, is equally one-sided. (Lougee, p. xi, reminds us that Foner, although a reputable historian, made his living for a Communist press.) He gives very few details about the robbery, attacks the prosecution's case in the trial without ever explaining Hill's wound, never considers the evidence against him, and spends most of his book detailing the relatively unimportant course of the appeals. He doesn't want the truth; he wants Hill's conviction set aside. His last paragraph (p. 108) says that Salt Lake City should erect a statue to Hill and declares "We never forget!" -- hardly the statement of an unbiased reporter. As a result, while he does a good job of showing that Hill's trial was unfair, I do not think he proves Hill to be innocent.

Rosemont is even more extreme -- so much so that I hesitated to trust even his description of Hill's appearance. Lougee doesn't even admit his book's existence, and I was sore tempted to do the same.

I will admit to having a lot of trouble with Hill's defenders. They tend to be so passionately pro-Hill as to seem unreliable. Of course, that is not actual proof of anything....

The Richards essay cited above lists several books about Hill's life and trials. Richards himself thinks that Hill's conviction was on "very slender circumstantial evidence." (We should note that circumstantial evidence is now known to be generally more reliable than eyewitness evidence. The weak point in the evidence, if anything, is the eyewitness testimony to what went on during the fatal robbery.) Ralph Chaplin published an account that was largely hearsay. Wallace Stegner felt Hill to be guilty (although he admitted that Utah did not prove its case; Smith, p. 200). Foner of course was certain Hill never had a fair trial. Rosemont, p. 104, declared that "It was for the 'crime' of belonging to the IWW that Hill was tried and convicted,", ignoring the fact that a murder had been done and that Hill seemed a better candidate for the murderer than anyone else the police found. Gibbs Smith wrote a balanced book, but Lougee, p. xiii, declares that he didn't understand the law. There matters stood as of 2010. In 2011, the situation changed, as several folkies note below: - RBW

A new biography, William Adler's The Man Who Never Died: The Life, Times and Legacy of Joe Hill (Bloomsbury, 2011), reaches the conclusion that Hill was probably innocent; the author has unearthed a letter written by Hill's girlfriend Hilda Erickson, saying that Hill told her he'd been shot by the girlfriend's former fiancee. Adler concludes that the probable killer of the grocer and his son was a career criminal named Magnus Olson (who physically resembled Hill). - PJS

Stephen Reynolds reports further on this book:
"For anyone who may not yet have seen the publicity, a new book, The Man Who Never Died, by William Adler, just published by Bloomsbury, offers at last an explanation of Joe Hill's wound, the only real evidence against him. Mr Adler discovered a letter written in 1949 by Hilda Erickson, who as a young woman in 1914 had just recently broken her engagement to one Otto Appelquist because she had become enamored of Joe Hill. According to her, Appelquist had shot Joe in retaliation. And why did Joe Hill not testify when he had a good explanation for his wound? Adler suggests that he wanted to protect Hilda Erickson from scandal. It was a different age a century ago, and her prospects would certainly have been dimmed by association with the lurid publicity surrounding the trial, no matter how little her responsibility for any of the violent events.

"Who then did commit the murders? Adler believes that it was a notorious armed robber, Frank Z. Wilson, who was arrested on the night of the murders in the neighborhood where they occurred, walking outside without an overcoat (in January) and carrying a bloody handkerchief. Wilson repeatedly lied to the police when interrogated, and was the original suspect, but was soon released for reasons never explained. (He was later implicated in the Valentine's Day Massacre.)"

The Appelquist/Hill incident is fascinating, because they were living in the same house -- indeed, sharing the same cot -- as well as courting the same woman. Hilda Erickson was only 20 at the time of the fight between Hill and Appelquist (Adler, p. 74). Somehow, until the quarrel, Appelquist and Hill had stayed on decent terms (indeed, the police thought Appelquist was the other man at Morrison's grocery; Adler, pp. 82-83); afterward, when the doctor brought Hill home, they necessarily expelled Appelquist from his cot, and he soon stormed out "to look for work" in the middle of the night (Adler, p. 75).

It should be kept in mind that Erickson did not witness the shooting of Hill; she reported what Hill told her had happened. But it is noteworthy that she was one of Hill's pallbearers, and that she visited him frequently in the county jail. Why, then, did she not testify on his behalf if she had something to say? There was actually press speculation that she could provide an alibi (Smith, p. 89). Adler, having found Hill's alibi (which would at minimum have saved his life; Adler, p. 23), asks a follow-up question: Why did Hill insist on dying? Even during the trial, Hill's own lawyers found his refusal to really defend himself strange (Smith, p. 93). Adler's answer (pp. 23-24) is in effect that Hill wanted to be a martyr, to strengthen the IWW. He perhaps half-succeeded: he became a martyr to the left -- but hardly to society as a whole, or even to today's unions. And the I. W. W. he fought so hard for, although it technically still exists, was rendered almost impotent by government action in 1917 (Adler, pp. 342-347). Could Hill have done better had he lived? Who can say? (I will admit that I think Adler has missed something: Hill sounds as if he suffered from depressive episodes (which would also explain his occasional crankiness). This suggests a fair chance that he suffered from bipolar II disorder -- not a rare thing among highly creative people. An even better explanation might be that he suffered from a touch of autism. This would make him less willing to fight with all his ability, and would explain some of his fatalism -- and his desire to die with his eyes open. That, too, would explain his depression (official statistics state that least 40% of autistics are depressive, and the experts I talk to would place the rate even higher), the stubbornness, and the substantial talents that he never really managed to harness. It would also explain why lawyer MacDougall thought him deranged.

The major caution to accepting Adler's proposed alibi is Adler's attitude. He is clearly very pro-labor and pro-Hill. This does not make his evidence wrong. But his analysis will be less than perfectly balanced. The data really needs to be examined by other scholars before we permit him the final word.

The bottom line question: Was Hill guilty? It's surprisingly hard to tell. Lougee, p. ix, says that "For the past ninety years, pundits have argued guilt or innocence, a project not sustainable by either law or history" -- in other words, the facts aren't there. Reading Lefebvre's version of accounts made me think there was strong reason to think him the murderer. Foner, since he refused to take on the issue, did nothing to alleviate those suspicions. Having read Adler, I now strongly incline to think Hill was innocent. But I am not certain, and Smith's balanced book did little to resolve the matter either way. Adler's data really needs to be sifted -- and, even then, there is likely to be a slight doubt, simply because the crime investigation and the trial, which should have discovered the truth, instead did their best to conceal it from posterity.

I would say that there were sufficient grounds to investigate and arrest Hill. Adler has done what the defense failed to do and offered an alternative explanation for the known facts. If this were all we knew, we would surely have to render a "Scotch verdict" of "Not proven" and let Hill go free. But that doesn't mean he was actually innocent. We just don't know. And, after more than a century, there is no possibility that we can find out.

Although Hill had little contact with Sweden after coming to America, and does not seem to have produced Swedish songs, his native land has commemorated him much more than America has. In 1971, a movie "Joe Hill" was produced (based on what I do not know), and in 1979 Sweden issued a commemorative stamp (Rosemont, p. 76); there is also a Joe Hill museum in his home town of Gävle. - RBW

Bibliography

- Foner: Philip S. Foner, The Case of Joe Hill, 1965 (I use the 2000 International Publishers paperback)
- Green: Archie Green, editor, Songs about Work: Essays in Occupational Culture for Richard A. Reuss, Folklore Institute, Indiana University, 1993
- Smith: Gibbs M. Smith, Joe Hill, 1969 (I use the 1984 Peregrine Smith Books edition)

Joe Hill's Last Will

DESCRIPTION: "My will is easy to decide, For there is nothing to divide; My kin don't need to weep and moan...." "My body? Oh! if I could choose, I would to ashes it reduce...." "This is my last and final will, Good luck to all of you, Joe Hill."

AUTHOR: Words; Joe Hill

EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (execution of Joe Hill)

KEYWORDS: execution death lastwill nonballad

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

1879-1915 - Life of Joel Emmanuel Hagglund, known as "Joe Hillstrom" or "Joe Hill."
1902 - Hill emigrates to the United States
Jan 10, 1914 - The Salt Lake City robbery/murder for which Joe Hill was arrested
Nov 19, 1915 - Execution of Joe Hill for the murder

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (5 citations):

DT, JOHIWILL*

ADDITIONAL: (Barrie Stavis and Frank Harmon, editors), _The Songs of Joe Hill_, 1960, now reprinted in the Oak Archives series, p. 46, "My Last Will" (1 text)

Roud #30773

NOTES [155 words]: Not a traditional song (not a song at all in its original form), but sufficiently well-known that I thought it needed to be included here. The tune commonly heard was set by Ethel Raim decades after Hill's death, but according to Franklin Rosemont, _Joe Hill: The IWW & the Making of a Revolutionary Workingclass Counterculture_, Charles H. Kerr, 2002, p. 144, several other tunes have also been used.

For the life of Joe Hill, see "Joe Hill."
Photos of the sheet of paper on which Hill wrote these words are relatively easy to find on the web; I found four simply by looking at the images associated with the search terms "Joe Hill's Last Will." No two look alike; it is clear that, after a century, the paper is no longer in good shape, and different lighting techniques and such were used to try to improve the image. Most were still rather hard to read. There is a cleaned-up black-and-white facsimile on p. 132 of Rosemont. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2
File: DTJoHill

Joe Livermore

DESCRIPTION: Joe Livermore captains Columbia from Eastport. "When we got to Eastport it was on the lucky day, Each man took his chest and no longer would stay, If we can't do no better boys, we'll stay on the shore And we'll never go to sea with old Joe Livermore"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Creighton-NovaScotia)
KEYWORDS: ordeal sailor ship
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 124, "Joe Livermore" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST CrNS124 (Partial)
Roud #1826
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Derry Down" (tune) and references there
NOTES [58 words]: The tune as given by Creighton doesn't quite match any version of the Derry Down tune I know, but that is clearly the basis for the piece; looking at the lyrics, I suspect this is derived from "Red Iron Ore." The similarity is great enough that I instantly felt I had met this song before, even though (to the best of my knowledge) I haven't. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.4
File: CrNS124

Joe Magarac

DESCRIPTION: "I'll tell you about a steel man, Joe Magarac, that's the man." "He was sired in the mountains by red iron ore... Raised in a furnace...." His shoulders are huge, he can lift a half a ton, he can stir steel with his hands. Listeners are urged to see him

AUTHOR: Jacob A. Evanson (source: Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends)
EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends)
KEYWORDS: talltale technology nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, pp. 442-443, "Joe Magarac" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [15 words]: Probably not traditional, but I've indexed everything else in Korson, so here it is.... - RBW

Last updated in version 3.2
File: KPL442

Joe Stiner (Joe Slinsworth)

DESCRIPTION: The singer, (Joe Stiner), has apparently recently arrived in the West when he is induced to join the army. After various adventures under General Lyon, the army he is with is defeated and he flees back to Saint Louis, vowing not to fight again

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)
KEYWORDS: Civilwar foreigner battle
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Aug 10, 1861 - Battle of Wilson's Creek
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 362-363, "Joe Slinsworth" (1 text)
Notes on song:

Randolph 219, "Joe Stiner" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Fred W. Allsopp, Folklore of Romantic Arkansas, Volume II (1931), p. 223, "(Joe Steinberg)" (1 fragment)
Roud #3592
CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Jolly Union Boys" and references there (concerning Battle of Wilson's Creek)

NOTES [297 words]: This song describes, with fair accuracy, the campaigns of Captain (later General) Nathaniel Lyon in 1861. The action takes place in Missouri, which was the northernmost of all slave states. Although a minority favored secession, most Missourians probably wanted to stay with the Union.

Governor Jackson, however, was not one of them. Having the machinery of state government at his back, he moved to take Missouri from the Union.

The Union governor, John C. Frémont, did little to prevent him, so Lyon, with the political support of Frank Blair, Jr., set out to circumvent him. Lyon captured the Missouri arsenal, then took Camp Jackson from Confederate General Frost. He then drove the Confederates in rout from Rolla. Then Lyon made his mistake. He decided to risk his 5000 men against 10000 Confederates in a surprise attack. This might have worked (especially as Confederate generals Price and McCulloch hated each other), but Lyon's outflanking force (led by the inept Franz Sigel -- the Siegel of the song) was routed with small loss to the enemy.

The Confederates were now warned, and had a better than five-to-two numerical edge. Even so, the remnants of Lyon's little army held on all day, until their commander was killed. The senior surviving officer, Major (later General) Curtis, ordered a retreat.

Wilson's Creek was not really a costly battle by later standards; the forces involved were small, and so badly trained that they were almost unable to inflict casualties. But the campaign had been a hard one (it succeeded, all by itself, in preserving most of Missouri for the Union); it would not be surprising if a few soldiers refused ever to return to the army.

For more on events in this period of the Civil War, see the notes to "The War in Missouri in '61." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: R219

Joe Turner

DESCRIPTION: "They tell me Joe Turner he done come (or "done come and gone") (x2), Got my man and gone." "He come with forty links of chain (x2), Got my man and gone."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (copyright, W. C. Handy)
KEYWORDS: separation police
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 241, "Joe Turner" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, p. 137, (no title) (1 fragment)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 265, (no title) (1 fragment), followed by p. 266, (Joe Turner Blues) (1 text, the Handy version)
Handy/Silverman-BluesAnAnthology, p. 104-107, "Joe Turner Blues" (1 text, 1 tune, extremely heavily adapted; the original tune, with a single verse, appears on page 17)
DT, JOETURNR*
Roud #17007
RECORDINGS:
Mississippi John Hurt, "Joe Turner" (on MJHurt04)
Ed Young and Hobart Smith, "Joe Turner" (on LomaxCD1708)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Going Down the River for Long

NOTES [223 words]: Courlander reports that this was based on an incident on 1892, when a flood cost a number of people their livelihood. A storekeeper named Turner (though not Joe Turner) anonymously supplied their needs until he died, whereupon the gifts stopped.

It should be noted, however, that this does not match Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag's song at all, though it has the same lyrics as Courlander's fragment. Presumably Courlander's source adapted an older song to a local need. In support of this, we note that Handy/Silverman, though dating the song to the same time, regard Turner (actually Joe Tourney, brother of the governor of Tennessee) as the leader of a chain gang.
Scarborough tells a variant on the same story: Joe Turner was the brother of one-time Tennessee governor Pete Turner, and seems to have been an enforcer of Jim Crow laws, grabbing Blacks seemingly at random and subjecting them to prosecution in kangaroo courts.
The notes in Handy/Silverman regard this as the archetypal folk blues -- perhaps even the ancestor of the entire genre. The former statement may arguably be true; the latter I must seriously doubt. It seems more like the ancestor of the popular blues. Handy, according to Scarborough, admitted to using the traditional piece and supressing Turner the corrupt policeman and turning him into a missing lover. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: San241

Joe Williams
DESCRIPTION: "My name it is Joe Williams, my age is 21, I came out to this country a ramblin' son-of-a-gun...." "I went to town.... On Fifth Avenue I met a pretty lass, I introduced her to my elick, and I shoved it up her ass." His reward is a venereal disease
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1976 (recorded by Logsdon from Riley Neal)
KEYWORDS: derivative disease whore
FOUND IN: US(SW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 32, pp. 182-185, "Joe Williams" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10096
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Son of a Gambolier (I)" (tune) and references there.
File: Logs032

Joe's Train Journey
DESCRIPTION: "Freed from gaol Joe Pawelka came, Riding a wagon, the longest goods train." He hides beneath the wagon tarp. Bells warn of his presence. Barefoot, he jumps off the train.
"Standing, he's tall, after all, hard the fall, bounce a ball, Off the wall O!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1944 (Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry)
KEYWORDS: train prisoner escape
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1909 - Joe Pawelka marries Hannah Wilson (probably the "Harriet" of "Skip to Me") After less than half a year, they separate; Pawelka attempts suicide and refuses to leave her alone. Discovered in possession of stolen property, he escapes from prison twice (the second time on Mar 23, 1910).
Pawelka then tries again to reconcile with his wife. Other crimes follow. Captured again Apr 17,
1919, he is convicted of various crimes but soon escapes for a final time and is never seen again
(source: Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry)
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 65, "Joe's Train Journey" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Skip to Me" (subject of Joe Pawelka)
cf. "Ruahine Run" (subject of Joe Pawelka)
File: C012066

Joel Baker
DESCRIPTION: "Come all young lovers far and near, A dismal story you shall hear, A young man did in Alsted dwell," but Joel Baker's beloved prefers another man and scorns him. Baker shoots himself. The girl marries her love.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1823 (Green Mountain Songster, according to Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster)
Jog Along Till Shearing

DESCRIPTION: "The truth, it's in my song so clear Without a word of gammon: The swagmen travel all the year Waiting for the lambin'." The shearsers work when they must, drink when they can, and scratch along until the next shearing season begins

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1953 (collected from Joe Cashmere)

KEYWORDS: sheep rambling Australia

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (5 citations):
- Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 86-87, "Jog Along Till Shearing" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 181-183, "Jog Along Till Shearing" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 142-143, "Jog Along 'til Shearing" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Paterson/Fahey/Seal-OldBushSongs-CentenaryEdition, pp. 190-191, "Jog Along Till Shearing" (1 text)
- DT, JOGSHEAR*

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Bow Wow Wow" (tune) and references there
- cf. "The Big Gun Shearer" (plot)

File: MA086

Johanna Shay

DESCRIPTION: "In the Emerald Isle so far from here across the deep blue sea, There live a maid that I love dear...." He praises Johanna's beauty and fidelity. The birds' song remind him of her. He hopes she will soon become Mrs. O'Day

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Dean-FlyingCloud)

KEYWORDS: love courting separation

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 106-107, "Johanna Shay" (1 text)
- Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 124-125, "Johanna Shay" (1 text)
- Roud #9575

File: Dean106

John (George) Riley (I) [Laws N36]

DESCRIPTION: A stranger urges a girl to forget her lover; she will not. He tells her that Riley had been aboard his ship, and that Riley had been killed in battle with the French. She is distressed; he reveals that he is Riley and will never again leave her

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1845 (Shield's _Songs and Ballads in use in the Province of Ulster...1845_, according to Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815) +1818 (William Garret, _Right Choyse and Merrie Book of Garlands_)

KEYWORDS: love courting separation marriage disguise reunion

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
- Apr 12, 1782 - The Battle of Port Royal

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,Ro,SE) Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (14 citations):
Laws N36, "John (George) Riley I"
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #138, pp. 2-3, "George Rylie"; #148, p. 2, "George Rylie" (1 text plus 1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan5 1039, "George Riley" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 82, "George Reilly" (8 texts, 8 tunes)
Thompson-APIioneerSongster 15, "George Reily" (1 text)
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 215-216, "Jack Riley/George Reilly" (1 text)
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 39, "George Reilly" (1 text)
List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, pp. 187-189, "John Riley" (1 text plus a broadside print, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 37, "George Riley" (2 texts, although Laws assigns only the A text to this ballad; the B text, which is fairly short, might go with this or N37)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 95, "George Reily" (1 text plus mention of 2 more: Laws's citations are far from clear, since he cites the same page reference under both N36 and N37, but Cox's printed text is clearly this piece; presumably he thinks one of the unprinted texts to be N37)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #37, "John Riley II" (1 text, which Hubbard thinks is "The Banks of Claudy" but which features this plot and the name of Riley)
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 9, "George Reilly Who Fought at Port Royal Bay" (1 text, 1 tune)
Forget-Me-Not-Songster, pp. 150-152, "George Reily" (1 text)
DT 592, JREILLY6
Roud #267
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The New-Slain Knight" [Child 263]
cf. "The Banks of Brandywine" [Laws H28]
cf. "The Blooming Bright Star of Belle Isle" [Laws H29]
cf. "Willie and Mary (Mary and Willie; Little Mary; The Sailor's Bride)" [Laws N28]
cf. "A Seaman and His Love (The Welcome Sailor)" [Laws N29]
cf. "Lovely Nancy (II)" [Laws N33]
cf. "Janie of the Moore" [Laws N34]
cf. "The Dark-Eyed Sailor (Fair Phoebe and her Dark-Eyed Sailor)" [Laws N35]
cf. "John (George) Riley (II)" [Laws N37]
cf. "The Mantle So Green" [Laws N38]
cf. "The Banks of Claudy" [Laws N40]
cf. "The Lady of the Lake (The Banks of Clyde II)" [Laws N41]
cf. "Pretty Fair Maid (The Maiden in the Garden; The Broken Token)" [Laws N42] (one of the most common of the ballads of this sort, often known as "John Riley")
cf. "Blackbirds and Thrushes (II)"
cf. "As Broad as I was Walking"
cf. "Come All Ye False Lovers"
cf. "Skerry's Blue-Eyed Jane"
cf. "The Banks of the Clyde"
cf. "The Banks of the Dee (II)"
cf. "Lurgan Town (I)"
cf. "The Banks of the Inverness"
cf. "Cairn-o'-Mount"
cf. "Drumallachie"
cf. "Down by the Seaside" (part of plot, lyrics)
cf. "Yon Green Valley" (lyrics)
cf. "Bleacher Lassie o' Kelvinhaugh"
cf. "The Lass of Swansea Town (Swansea Barracks)"
cf. "The Soldier's Return"
cf. "Billy Ma Hone"
cf. "Mary of Sweet Belfast Town"
cf. "As I Was Walking Down In Yon Valley" (plot)
cf. "The Plains of Waterloo" (tune, per Greig/Duncan5)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
George Riley
John Riley
Johnnie Riley

NOTES [437 words]: The theme of a lover coming in disguise and testing his love is ancient; there is a version in Ovid’s Metamorphoses (VII.685 and following). Cephalus doubts Procris, and (disguised by the goddess Diana) comes to her and tries to get her to be unfaithful to him. She utterly rejects his advances.

In that case, however, the ending is not happy. Although they are reunited, and happy for a time, she eventually starts to doubt him (prompted perhaps by his earlier doubts?). She follows him as he goes hunting, and he -- hearing a rustling in the leaves -- kills her with a cast of his javelin.

Even older, of course, is the version in the Odyssey. - RBW

[See also Arthur Herman, To Rule the Waves, pp. 316-318; Herman notes that Rodney pioneered the attack from the leeward side, assuring that the French could not escape him by running; Herman also considers the battle to have re-established British naval dominance, which was not broken even in the Napoleonic Wars. - RBW]

Both Laws and Moylan make fight the battle between Rodney and De Grasse. Laws has Reiley serving on Belflew; Moylan makes it Bafflew. Moylan notes "The Formidable was Admiral Rodney's own vessel. The Bafflew was the ship which captured de Grasse's flagship, the Ville de Paris." - BS

Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana's version also mentions the Rodney/De Grasse battle; the ship in his text is the Belle Flower, though the date is April 10. Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio has the date right; the ship is the Belflew. Cox also lists the Belflew (and has the April 12 date); presumably their agreement was the basis for the name in Laws.

For more on Rodney, see the notes to "Rodney's Glory." - RBW

Thompson-APioneerSongster and Greig/Duncan5 1039B also refer to the Battle of Port Royal. Greig, who has the same text as Greig/Duncan 1039A, refers to an April Battle of Port Said against the French, with the captain's names lost, but I don't find any record of such a battle; Wikipedia has Port Said not being founded until 1859 in connection with the beginning of construction of the Suez Canal ("Port Said" according to Wikipedia, accessed August 12, 2012). - BS

Last updated in version 6.0

File: LN36

John (George) Riley (II) [Laws N37]

DESCRIPTION: A stranger urges a girl to marry him; she replies that, having lost her chance to marry Riley, she intends to live single. He tries again, asking her to come to (Pennsylvania); she refuses. At last he reveals that he is Riley, and offers to marry her

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1817 (The New American Songster)
KEYWORDS: love courting separation marriage disguise
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,NE,Ro,SE,So) Ireland Britain(England)
REFERENCES (19 citations):
Laws N37, "John (George) Riley II"
Randolph 56, "John Riley" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 93, "John Reilly" (1 text, presumably this song though Laws does not list it under any Riley ballad)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 93, "John Reiley" (2 excerpts, 2 tunes)
Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. 267-270, "Fair Phoebe and her Dark-Eyed Sailor" (3 texts; the second, "The Sailor," with tune on p. 427, is this song; the first, "Young Willie's Return, or The Token," with tune on pp. 426-427, is "The Dark-Eyed Sailor (Fair Phoebe and her Dark-Eyed Sailor)" [Laws N35]; the third, "Billy Ma Hone," with tune on p. 427, seems to be its own song)
Thomas-DevilsDitties, pp. 104-105, "The Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 135-136, "John Reilly" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wyman/Brockway-LonesomeSongs-KentuckyMountains-Vol1, p. 34, "John Riley" (1 text, 1 tune)
John Anderson, My Jo (I)

DESCRIPTION: Singer tells how, when she first saw John, he was young, handsome, and her first love; now his hair is white, but she loves him still. They've climbed the hill together and must now totter down, but they'll go hand in hand and "sleep together at the foot"

AUTHOR: Robert Burns

EARLIEST DATE: 1790

KEYWORDS: love age death hair

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (5 citations):

Heart-Songs, pp. 378-379, "John Anderson, My Jo" (1 text, 1 tune)

Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 141, "John Anderson, My Jo (I)"

DT, JOHANNAND3*

ADDITIONAL: James Kinsley, editor, Burns: Complete Poems and Songs (shorter edition, Oxford, 1969) #302, p. 419, "John Anderson My Jo" (1 text, 1 tune, from 1790)

James Johnson, Editor, _The Scots Musical Museum_ [1853 edition], volume III, #260, p. 269, "John Anderson my Jo" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #16967

RECORDINGS:

Henry Burr, "John Anderson, My Jo" (Victor 4557, 1906; rec. 1905; Victor 16213, 1909; rec. 1908)

BROADSIDES:

Bodleian, Johnson Ballads fol. 12[some words illegible], "John Anderson My Jo" ("John Anderson, my jo, John, when we were first acquent"")[2 verses], J. Catnach (London), 1829; also Firth b.25(600/601) View 1 of 2, Firth b.28(25a) View 1 of 2, Firth b.25(295), "John Anderson My Jo" [2 verses]; Firth c.14(21), "John Anderson My Jo" [6 verses]; Firth b.27(271), Johnson Ballads 528, Harding B 11(1894), "John Anderson, My Jo" [7 verses]; Harding B 11(487), "John Anderson My Joe[sic] ("John Anderson, my jo, John, when nature first began")" [5 verses] Bodleian, Harding B 45(17) View 3 of 3, "John Anderson My Joe[sic], John" ("John Anderson, my jo, John, I wonder what you mean"), unknown, no date; also Harding B 11(439), "John Anderson, my jo"

LOCSheet, sm1836 370070, "John Anderson my Jo John" ("John Anderson, my jo, John, when nature first began"), George Endicott (New York), 1836 (tune)

LOCSinging, sb20240a, "John Anderson, my Jo"("John Anderson, my jo, John, When we were first acquent"), J. Andrews (New York), 1853-1859

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "John Anderson, My Jo, John"

cf. "Johnny Bull, My Jo, John" (tune)

cf. "Cruiskeen Lawn" (tune)

cf. "John Barleycorn, My Jo" (temperance parody)

cf. "Wae Be to that Weary Drink, John Anderson, My Jo" (temperance derivative)

NOTES [348 words]: This sounds like a version of "John Anderson, My Jo, John" that's been so thoroughly bowdlerized that nothing remains but the aging motif. The overall mood of the two songs is so different that I've split them. - PJS

This is actually the Burns rewrite, published in the Scots Musical Museum (and fairly often reprinted, e.g. in Palgrave's Golden Treasury, item CXCVII). Apparently Burns didn't dare publish the bawdy original, but liked the feeling of this song.

Those who want to see an even stranger rewrite should examine "John Barleycorn, My Jo, John" (Logan, pp. 221-222), a parody in which grain is the singer's love. Another broadside parody is "My Bonnie Meg, My Jo" [NLScotland, L.C.178.A.2(105), "My Bonnie Meg, My Jo," unknown, c. 1875], which deals with a man's problems with an elderly shrew of a wife.

NLScotland L.C.Fol.60(15b), "John Anderson, My Jo (A New Reading)," Poet's Box (Dundee), c. 1890, is also a raspy dialog between husband and wife, in which they decide to go to bed and fight another day; it is probably a rewrite of the Burns version, though there might be some bawdry from the traditional version. - RBW

Broadside Bodleian Harding B 45(17) italicizes Burns's two verses among its total of eight verses; Harding B 11(439) has the same arrangement without the italics. This eight verse version, beginning "John Anderson, my jo, John, I wonder what you mean" seems the basis for the temperance song "Wae Be to That Weary Drink, John Anderson, My Jo" ("John Anderson, my jo, John, I wonder what you mean"; Digital Tradition's JOHNAND5). The first verse at least of this version seems to belong to "John Anderson, My Jo, John," viz.,

John Anderson, my jo, John, I wonder what you mean
To rise so soon in the morning, and sit up so late at e'en.
Ye'll blear out a' your e'en, John, and why should you do so,
Gang sooner to your bed at e'en, John Anderson, my jo.

Last updated in version 6.0

File: FSWB141B

John Anderson, My Jo, John

DESCRIPTION: Singer upbraids her lover for rising so early and coming to bed so late, tells him he's aging and risking being cuckolded. She describes his attributes fairly explicitly, and her own, saying "'Tis all for your conveniency/John Anderson, my jo"

AUTHOR: Attributed to Robert Burns

EARLIEST DATE: 1765 (Percy)

KEYWORDS: age marriage sex husband bawdy

FOUND IN: Britain

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Percy/Wheatley-ReliquesOfAncientEnglishPoetry II, pp. 131-133, "John Anderson My Jo" (1 text, short and probably bowdlerized; Percy's first and final editions have some differences)
John Appleby

DESCRIPTION: John Appleby drinks with the women in the alehouse; his wife Joan drinks with the men in the tavern. At home John throws a mutton shoulder at Joan; she throws a plate. To end the quarrel they open a barrel of home-brew and invite all the neighbors.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1805 (broadside, Johnson Ballads fol. 75)

KEYWORDS: fight drink husband wife

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,South))

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, pp. 132-133, "John Appleby" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 225-226, "John Appleby" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Gl 92)

Roud #1292
John Atkins (The Drunkard's Warning)

DESCRIPTION: "Poor drunkards, poor drunkards, take warning by me, The fruits of transgression behold now I see." John Atkins, when drunk, slew his "dear companion." His family and friends are left weeping. He regrets his acts and warns against drink.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Henry, from Mrs. William Franklin)

KEYWORDS: drink warning execution homicide

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 115, "John Atkins" (1 text)
Roud #4191

File: MHA0115

John B. Sails, The

DESCRIPTION: A description of a horrible journey on the "sloop John B." Refrain: "Let me go home! I want to go home; I feel so break-up, I want to go home." Among the problems on the voyage: A drunken first mate who is arrested for robbery and a cook who won't

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)

KEYWORDS: ship sailor hardtimes cook Caribbean

FOUND IN: West Indies

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 22-23, "The John B. Sails" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 280, "The John B.'s Sails" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 93, "John B. Sails" (1 text)
DT, WRKJOHNB
Roud #15634

RECORDINGS:
Rex Allen, "Wreck of the John B" (Mercury 5573, 1951)
Blind Blake Higgs, "John B Sail (Wreck of the John B.)" (on WIHIGGS01)
Cleveland Simmons Group: "Histe Up the John B. Sail" (AAFS 418 B2, 1935; on LomaxCD1822-2)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Sloop John B.
The Wreck of the John B.

NOTES [40 words]: Although I have yet to encounter a version of this song actually describing the sinking of the John B., the craft is said to lie at the bottom of Governor's Harbor in Nassau, where its remains are considered almost a historic monument. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.7

File: San022

John Barleycorn (I)

DESCRIPTION: John Barleycorn is proclaimed dead but springs to life when the rain/dew falls on him. At midsummer he grows a beard; then men with scythes cut him, bind him to a cart, wheel him to a barn, and brew him into beer. The last verse praises his merits.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1787 (Burns Commonplace Book, according to Dick); before 1787 (according to Jamieson; see notes); a probable version was registered in 2455

KEYWORDS: resurrection, death, magic, drink, derivative

FOUND IN: Britain (England (South, West), Scotland (Aber, Bord)), US (NE), Canada (Ont, Queb), Ireland

REFERENCES (29 citations):
Dixon-Ancient Poems, Ballads, Songs of the Peasantry of England, Ballad #15, pp. 120-122, "Sir John Barleycorn" (1 text)
Bell-Combined Early Ballads, Customs, Ballads, Songs of the Peasantry of England, pp. 300-301, "Sir John Barleycorn" (1 text)
Sharp-One Hundred English Folksongs, 84, "John Barleycorn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Karpeles-The Crystal Spring, 88, "John Barleycorn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Folk Songs of the Upper Thames, pp. 246-247, "John Barleycorn" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 503)
Kennedy-Folksongs of Britain and Ireland, 276, "John Barleycorn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Vaughan Williams/Lloyd-Penguin Book of English Folk Songs, pp. 56-57, "John Barleycorn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Copper-Songs and Southern Breezes, pp. 216-217, "John Barleycorn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 404, "John Barleycorn" (1 text)
Purslow-The Constant Lovers, pp. 48-49, "John Barleycorn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cologne/Morrison-Wiltshire Folk Songs, pp. 30-31, "John Barleycorn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-English Country Songbook, #116, "John Barleycorn" (1 text, 1 tune)
OShaughnessy-More Folk Songs from Lincolnshire, 9, "John Barleycorn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hamer-Garners Gay, pp. 8-9, "John Barleycorn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-New Penguin Book of English Folk Songs #97, "John Barleycorn" (1 text, 1 tune)
LOchlainn-Irish Street Ballads, 89, "The Barley Corn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hodgart-Faber Book of Ballads, p. 156, "Sir John Barleycorn" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan 3, 559, "John Barleycorn" (1 text)
MacColl/Seeger-Travellers Songs From England and Scotland, 101, "John Barleycorn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Flanders/Brown-Vermont Folk Songs and Ballads, pp. 46-48, "John Barleycorn" (1 text plus some excerpts, 1 tune)
Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-New Green Mountain Songster, pp. 259-265, "John Barleycorn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke-Traditional Singers and Songs From Ontario, 1, "The Barley Grain for Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
Vikár/Panagapka-Songs North Woods Sung By OJ Abbott, 38, "The Barley Grain for Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
Whitelaw-Book Of Scottish Ballads, pp. 284-285, "John Barleycorn" (1 text)
Behan-Ireland Sings, #89, "Three Farmers from the North" (1 text, 1 tune, modified)
Olson-Broadside Ballad Index, ZN282, "As I went through the North Country"

Roud #164

RECORDINGS:
O. J. Abbott, "The Barley Grain for Me" (on Abbott1)
Austin Flanagan, "The Barley Grain" (on Voice14)
Haxey Hood singers and customers at "The King's Arms," Haxey, Lincs. "John Barleycorn" (on FieldTrip1)
Fred Jordan, "John Barleycorn" (on Voice13)
A. L. Lloyd, "John Barleycorn" (on Lloyd3, Lloyd5, Lloyd12)
Pete Seeger & O. J. Abbott, "Barley Grain" (on Newport59/60)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Douce Ballads 3(83a), "A pleasant new ballad to sing ev'n ing and morn, of the bloody murder of sir John barley corn"; also Johnson Ballads 1408 [many illegible words], "Sir John Barleycorn" ("There was three knights came from the north"), W. Jackson and Son (Birmingham), 1842-1855: Harding B 11(1189), Harding B 15(386b), Johnson Ballads 2847 [some illegible words], "Sir John barley corn"; 2806 b.9(38), "The Barley Corn"
LOC Singing, as100660, "The Barley Corn," P. Brereton (Dublin), 19C

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "John Barleycorn's a Hero Bold" (theme)
cf. "Allan o Maut (I) (Why should not Allan Honoured Be)" (theme: the tale of brewing)
cf. "Allan o Maut (II) (How Mault Deals With Every Man)" (theme: the tale of brewing)
cf. "Allan o Maut (III)" (theme: the tale of brewing)
cf. "John Barleycorn (II) (The Little Barleycorn)" (theme: the tale of brewing)
cf. "John Barleycorn (III) (The Bloody Murder of Sir John Barleycorn)" (theme: the tale of brewing)

NOTES [1709 words]: Burns: "This is partly composed on the plan of an old song known by the same name." - BS
MacColl & Seeger speculate that "John Barleycorn" was derived from the Scots ballad "Allan-a-Maut," found in the Bannatyne manuscript, 1568; its theme is similar. - PJS
Of course, the legend of the eternal grain is old -- as is the legend of the dying-and-resurrected God. Jesus, obviously, is the prototype of this, but there is also the Greek Persephone legend and others.
Incidentally, when Prohibition was passed in the United States, John Barleycorn was given a bonus funeral, beyond the annual supply. The February 2005 issue of American History magazine showed an actual tombstone:
In Memoriam
John Barleycorn
Born B.C.
Died Jan. 16, 1920
Resurrection?
There are also broadsides commemorating his death, e.g. NLScotland, Ry.III.a.10(099), "A Hue and Cry After Sir John Barleycorn," unknown, after 1720. The notes to the broadside state that this was made in response to Robert Walpole's 1725 imposition of the malt tax -- but, in context, it seems likely that the idea was lifted from an early form of this song.
Rollins, p. 213, # 2455, lists a December 14, 1624 registration of a piece "Sir John Barleycorne," but gives no other details. - RBW
The Bodleian broadside Douce Ballads 3(83a) appears to be older than the other broadsides. Unfortunately, Bodleian has neither the printer nor date estimate. The tune is noted as "Shall I lye beyond thee."

Broadside LOCSingingas100660 appears to be the same as Bodleian 2806 b.9(38) printed by P. Brereton (Dublin).
The following comments are from the Ballad-L archives regarding Fowke's version: On 14 Aug 2007 Pete Wood noted, "I was surprised to find so few versions in North America.... Fowke ... has one called 'The Barley Grain for me' and starting 'There were three men went to Derouaghta', which is the only version I know where 3 men went instead of came, and the place they are going to sounds Irish. The title is also the tag line for one of the best known Irish versions. It was collected from OJ Abbott." John Moulden replied (16 Aug 2007), "Agreed -- Derouaghta is clearly Drogheda, Co Louth, about 30 miles north of Dublin -- Abbott sang many Irish and Irish located songs."
Burns's text is in the oral tradition. Hear, for example, Stanley Robertson's "John Barleycorn" on "Travellers' Tales - Volume 2" Kyloe 101 CD (2002).
Jamieson printed six songs about the culture, production and effect of English beer. They each have an entry in the Index: Allan o Maut (I-III) and John Barleycorn (I-III). "The first [Allan o Maut (I)] is good classical Scotch; the second [Allan o Maut (III)] is modern Scotch, and very popular in the north-east of Scotland, as is also the third [John Barleycorn (I)]; the fourth [Allan o Maut (II)] and fifth [John Barleycorn (III)] are English; and the latter, at least has been popular, as one now and then hears scraps of it among the peasants in different parts of England; but whether it was unskilfully amplified from the third, or the third happily abridged from it, does not now seem easy to be determined. The present writer is rather inclined to the latter opinion; and it is certainly very much improved in the abridgment; although both the improvement and abridgement were probably casual rather than intentional, and owing more to default of memory than to superiority of genius" (Jamieson2 pp.231-232). After having "written out" his work on the five songs "for the press" Jamieson came across Roxburghie 1.214-215 (John Barleycorn (II)). He added it "as it contains some ideas, which are found in the Scottish Sir John Barleycorn [III], and in none of the others that he has seen" (Jamieson2 pp. 258-260). Actually, Jamieson omitted part 2 of John Barleycorn (II), but those 64 lines seem not to have had an effect outside that broadside. Dick discusses the set in his discussion of Robert Burns's adaptation of "John Barleycorn (I)" but cites Jamieson's analysis without comment (Dick p. 487).
Dixon writes,"The West-country ballad of Sir John Barleycorn is very ancient, and being the only version which has ever been sung at English merry-makings and country feasts, can certainly set up a better claim to antiquity than any of the three ballads on the same subject to be found in Evans's [Evans1 and Evans4: Allan o Maut (II), John Barleycorn (III) and John Barleycorn (II)]. Our west-country version bears the greatest resemblance to [John Barleycorn (II)], but it is very dissimilar to any of the three" (p. 120).
Jamieson printed his John Barleycorn (I) "from his own recollection, as he learned it in Morayshire when he was a boy, and before the Poems of Burns were published" (Jamieson2 p. 240).
Excluding the last eight lines - which Jamieson added - his John Barleycorn (I) has 44 lines; 17 lines are shared with John Barleycorn (III) and 6 are shared with part 1 of John Barleycorn (II) (Jamieson2 pp. 240-243).
Specifically, with the line numbers from John Barleycorn (III) (Pepys 1.470) and (II) (Roxburghe 1.214-215) shown in parentheses:
.. From John Barleycorn (III)
03(023) And they have sworn a solemn oath
04(024) John Barleycorn shall die
05(029) They've ta'en a plough and plough'd him down,
06(034) Put clods upon his head;
.. 08(036) John Barleycorn was dead
.. 10(038) And showers began to fall;
.. 12(040) Which did surprise them all
.. 14(046) And he grew pale and wan;
15(044) John Barleycorn has got a beard
16(048) Like any other man
17(049) They've ta'en a hook, that was full sharp,
.. 19(064) And they've bound him intill a corn cart,
20(063) Like a thief for the gallow-tree.
21(073) They've ta'en twa sticks, that were full stout
22(074/076) And sore they beat his bones;
23(099) The miller used him worse than that,
24(100) And ground him between two stones
.. From John Barleycorn (II)
37(037) He'll gar the huntsman shoot his dog
.. 39(054) He'll gar a maiden dance stark naked
.. 41(015) He'll change a man into a boy,
42(016) A boy into an ass;
43(013) He'll change your gold into silver,
44(014) And your silver into brass.
Dixon's "west-country" John Barleycorn (I) has 52 lines; 24 lines are shared with John Barleycorn (III) and 12 are shared with part 1 of John Barleycorn (II) [Dixon #15 pp. 120-122].
Specifically, with the line numbers from John Barleycorn (III) (Pepys 1.470) and (II) (Roxburghe 1.214-215) shown in parentheses:
.. From John Barleycorn (III)
02(022) Their victory to try
03(023) And they have taken a solemn oath,
04(024) Poor Barleycorn should die
05(029) They took a plough and plough'd him in,
06(033/034) And harrowed clods o0n his head;
07(023) And then they took a solemn oath,
08(036) Poor Barleycorn was dead
09(037) There he lay sleeping in the ground,
10(038) Till rain from the sky did fall;
.. 12(040) And so amazed them all
13(041) There he remained till Midsummer,
14(046) And looked both pale and wan;
15(044) Then Barleycorn he got a beard,
And so became a man.

To cut him off at the knee

Then they sent men with pitchforks strong
To pierce him through the heart,

They bound him to a cart.

And so they fetched him out again,
And laid him on the floor.
Then they sent men with holly clubs,
To beat the flesh from his bones;
But the miller served him worse than that,
For he ground him between two stones.

That was ever sown on land;
By the turning of your hand
It will make a boy into a man,
And a man into an ass;
It will change your gold into silver,
And your silver into brass.
It will make the huntsman hunt the fox,
That never wound his horn;
It will bring the tinker to the stocks,
It will make the maids stark naked dance,
It will help them to a job by chance,-
Well done, Barleycorn!
[See the Index entry for John Barleycorn (III) regarding line numbering across versions; at this time there is only one version of John Barleycorn (II).]

Wood re-examines Jamieson's six songs and adds a seventh, indexed here as "John Barleycorn's a Hero Bold" which, he writes, "was composed in the mid nineteenth century" (Wood p. 445). Wood doesn't offer support for that date but I have no text I can date before 1859. In any case, that song was probably created after Jamieson's and Dixon's analyses. Wood writes that each of the seven family members can be parsed into at most three parts:
"Part A concerns the growth, harvesting, and processing of the plant,
Part B the brewing process, and Part C the effects of beer on people" (Wood p. 439).
Wood's Figure 3 builds a "timeline' of the ancestors of 'John Barleycorn' but it does not show "parts." Perhaps he would have shown that as follows [%: not included in Figure 3]:
Allan o Maut (I) [1568] A,C
Allan o Maut (II) [1601-c1690] C
John Barleycorn (III) [1624-1700] A,B,C
John Barleycorn (I) [1784-] A,B,C
John Barleycorn (II) [1658] C
%Allan o Maut (III) [1790?-1806] A
%John Barleycorn is a Hero Bold [1859-c1890] A,C

Wood examines Jamieson's statement, quoted above, that he cannot easily determine whether John Barleycorn (III) was created from John Barleycorn (I), or the reverse, though he was "rather inclined to the latter opinion." He concludes that there is no question but that Jamieson's inclination was correct. We need to cut Jamieson some slack here. He included the text of John Barleycorn (II) at the last minute without, apparently, looking at its own connection to the John Barleycorn (I) text. Had he taken the time, as Dixon did after him, he would have seen that the John Barleycorn (I) texts incorporated abridgments of both John Barleycorn (III) and John Barleycorn (II). At that point, I believe, he would have been as forceful as Wood about what was sender and what was receiver of text lines. (On the other hand, Wood's Figure 3 "timeline" does not show John Barleycorn II as a source for John Barleycorn III. Wood's Figures 4 and 5 show only how John Barloeycorn (I) affects early versions of John Barleycorn (I)). - BS
Bibliography

- Evans4: Thomas Evans and R.H. Evans, Old Ballads Historical and Narrative (London: R.H. Evans, 1810 ("Digitized by Microsoft")), Vol. IV.
- Ford2: Robert Ford, Vagabond Songs and Ballads of Scotland (Paisley: Alexander Gardner, 1901 ("Digitized by Google")), second series; also in Robert Ford, Vagabond Songs and Ballads of Scotland (Paisley: Alexander Gardner, 1904 ("Digitized by Google"))

Last updated in version 5.3
File: ShH84

John Barleycorn (II) (The Little Barleycorn)

DESCRIPTION: Barleycorn is the greatest of alchemists and the best medicine. It drives away fear and grief. It works wonders. "Theres life in it... Take your liquor and doe not spare.... let no man takt in scorne, That I the vertues do proclaime."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1618-1658 (Roxburgh1.214-215)

LONG DESCRIPTION: [Part 1] A cup of Barleycorn will show you the truth, evening, morning, and Christmas too. He is the best of alchemists and he can change you faster than hocus-pocus: he changes your gold to silver and silver to brass; he can change a boy into a man, and a man into an ass. The poor man that hangs Barleycorn's sign at his shop will become rich, and those who patronize his shop may become poor. He leaves the lawyer speechless, makes an old man older, makes young women dance naked with strangers. But it can make a man jealous of his wife and curse the crescent moon for making the horns sign to taunt him. But there is life in the cup: drink it. [Part 2] In moderation, ale is the best medicine to cure illness. It makes fear disappear, makes time pass, makes the weeping widow laugh and "incline to pleasure," and makes an old man put away his cane. It makes the drinker think he is as good as any man, and good enough for any woman. Young girls "fall and rise again the quicker." It has the power "to change our nature." Don't scorn the singer who proclaims its virtues.

KEYWORDS: drink

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (3 citations):

BROADSIDES:
John Barleycorn (III) (The Bloody Murder of Sir John Barleycorn)

DESCRIPTION: John Barleycorn fights and defeats two nobles. For revenge they bury him. When he is reborn the following year they cut him down, torture him, and drink his blood. His relative pays back his killers leaving them unconscious in the mire.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1646? (Roxburghe 1.343)

LONG DESCRIPTION: John Barleycorn fights and defeats two nobles. They would have him killed for revenge. They bury -- that is, plant -- him and celebrate his death. However, after the spring rains he sprouts -- which frightens them -- and, by midsommer, he becomes a man again and grows a beard. They would try to kill him again. Men cut him down with hooks and sickles, bind him into stacks, beat him with holly clubs, sift him, steep him in fat and then lay him out to dry. Then they dry him again in a kiln, crush him in a mill, apply yeast and tunn him in a barrel. Finally they set a tap to the barrel and drain every drop of his blood, and that does kill him. His relative, John Goodale, pays back his killers, leaving them bloody and unconscious in the mire, so they can not even remember what they had done. The singer blesses the good wives that brew good ale from John Barleycorn's injury but damns the eyes of those that overwater their ale.

KEYWORDS: battle nobility burial drink

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (3 citations):
William Chappell, The Roxburghe Ballads (Hertford: The Ballad Society, 1874 ("Digitized by Microsoft")), Vol.II, pp. 373-378, "A pleasant new Ballad to sing both Even and Morn, Of the bloody Murther of Sir John Barley-corne" (1 text)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Douce Ballads 3(83a), "A pleasant new ballad to sing ev’ning and morn, of The Bloody Murder of Sir John Barley corn" ("As I went through the North country"), unknown, no date, accessed 13 Nov 2013.
EngBdsdBA 30234, BritLib Roxburghie 1.343, "A Pleasant New Ballad to sing Even and morne, Of the Bloody murther of Sir John Barley-corne." ("As I went through the North Country I heard a merry meeting"), John Wright, 1602-1646?[see Notes re the dates], accessed 19 Nov 2013.
EngBdsdBA 31896, UGlasgowLib Euing 282, "A Pleasant New Ballad to sing Evening and morn,

Cross-references:
cf. "John Barleycorn (I)" (theme: the tale of brewing) and references there
cf. "Shall I Lye Beyond Thee" (tune)
NOTES [580 words]: Wood makes more sense of the battle at the beginning of the song than I can:
"[John Barleycorn (III)] has four knights, three of whom, Sir Richard Beere, Sir Thomas Good Ale, and Sir William White Wine, swear to kill the fourth, Sir John Barleycorn. This has a clear logic: all of them need 'dead' barley for their creation, assuming the wine is barley wine of course" [Peter Wood, "John Barleycorn: The Evolution of a Folk-Song Family," Folk Music Journal, Vol. 8, No. 4, 2004, pp. 450-451].

Chappell is a duplicate of Roxburgh 1.343. The imprint is, according to Evans and the EBBA citation: "London printed for John Wright and are to be sold at his shop in Guilt-spurre street at the signe of the Bible." When I look at the imprint I cannot tell whether the name is Iohn or John. You will see that that is significant.

The EBBA estimate of the date for Roxburgh 1.343 is "1602-1646?" I posted a request to the Tradsong group for information on John Wright at that address. On 20-21 November 2013, Steve Gardham replied: "There were at least 2 John Wrights, father and son printing at that address. It must be JW the elder who died in 1658. The younger goes on to 1690 at least. The spelling you have of the address I have items recorded 1624 to 27. I have notes of his printing from 1605 onwards but the first reference to that address I have is 1624. Also some printings give the J in an l format so we get Iw c1628-32. Most of my dates come from Roxburgh and Pepys and are based on political pieces which are often dated or can easily be ascribed a rough date. ...[T]o be safe I add in a few qualifiers. The 1624-7 dates don't mean that this address wasn't being used in this spelling before or after these, only that these are dates I have evidence for, likewise 1628-32." As a best bet I am using dates 1624-1628?.

There are three sets of texts.
Pepys 4.126 (1601-1640) and Roxburgh 1.343 (1624-1628?) seems to be the oldest set. The newest set is Euing 281 (1641-1700?), Euing 282 (1674-1679?), Euing 283 (1670-1700?), Douce Ballads 3(83a) and Pepys 1.470 (1684-1686).

From the its content, Evans (1634-1658) seems to have been printed between the other sets. Jamieson, who is analyzing Alan o' Maut and John Barleycorn songs notes where his source, Pepys 1.470, text varies significantly from Pepys 1.426; Jamieson seems imperfectly transcribed (for example, he his lines 9-10 and 92 seem to be from Pepys 1.426).

All of the sets are 136 lines, like the older set of Allan o Maut (II), with which this song, John Barleycorn (III) was frequently printed. However, where the variations between older and newer sets of Allan o Maut (II) often covered up to eight lines, the differences in John Barleycorn (III) were usually just one or two words in a line, or, perhaps, the sequence of words in a line.

Here are an example from John Barleycorn lines 93-94.

---

Oldest set illustrated by Pepys 4.126.
The Malt-man swore that he should die his body he would burne.

---

Newest set illustrated by Pepys 1.470.
The Mault-man likewise vows his death,
his body should be sure.

---

Evans splits the difference:
The mault-man likewise vows his death,
his body he would burn.

---

A warning regarding Evans's transcriptions, from Chappell (writing about John Barleycorn (II)):
"Evans reprinted from it [Roxburgh], but carelessly, as usual" (William Chappell, The Roxburghue Ballads (Hertford: The Ballad Society, 1874 ("Digitized by Microsoft")), Vol.II, p. 28). - BS
Last updated in version 3.5
File: BdJB3MJ
John Barleycorn, My Jo

DESCRIPTION: The singer addresses John Barleycorn. "You rob me of my money John which ought to pay my bills." You go disguised "as Mr Porter." I take my first drink in the morning "before that I get up." Preachers preach against him: "on you we'll turn our backs"

AUTHOR: George Barron (source: Greig/Duncan3)

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: drink derivative nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 601, "John Barleycorn, My Jo" (1 text)

John Barleycorn's a Hero Bold

DESCRIPTION: Singer praises Barleycorn; his robes are rich and green, his head speared with prickly beard; when stricken down, he uses his blood for England's good. Chorus: "Hey John Barleycorn/Ho John Barleycorn/Old and young thy praise has sung/John Barleycorn"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1859-1860 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 13(13)) [see Notes]

LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer praises John Barleycorn for his heroic qualities; his robes are rich and green, his head speared with prickly beard; when stricken down, he uses his blood for England's good. All, great and small, find his aid valuable -- he "makes weak men strong and old ones young and all men brave and bold". The singer praises ale, scorning all other drinks. Chorus: "Hey John Barleycorn/Ho John Barleycorn/Old and young thy praise has sung/John Barleycorn"

KEYWORDS: age drink nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 277, "John Barleycorn's a Hero Bold" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 227-229, "Hey! John Barleycorn" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #2141

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 20(81), "John Barleycorn" ("John Barleycorn [sic] is a hero bold"), J. Harkness (Preston), 1840-1866; also Harding B 13(13), Harding B 11(1509), Harding B 11(3188), Firth b.26(301), Firth b.26(302), Harding B 15(150a), "John Barleycorn"
LOC Singing, as111460, "John Barleycorn," W.S. Fortey (London), no date

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "John Barleycorn (I)" (theme: the tale of brewing) and references there

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Hey John Barleycorn

NOTES [621 words]: Although this shares subject matter and a few words with "John Barleycorn", it lacks the explicit death-and-resurrection plot of the latter, so I split them. - PJS

More interesting to me is the extreme similarity between the Ford and Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland versions. The only substantial difference might be a mishearing on Kennedy's part: He transcribes the near-nonsense "fit nigh to serve the queen" for Ford's "fit knight to serve the queen." There are other differences, but they are such as might arise simply in a singer's minor variations between sessions. I have to think there is literary dependence. - RBW

Broadside Bodleian Harding B 13(13) prints "The Great Fight Between Tom Sayers and Bob Brettle" alongside "John Barleycorn." That establishes the likely printing date within a seven month period between Sayers's fights [see the Index entry for "The Great Fight Between Tom Sayers and Bob Brettle"].

The 1840-1866 date estimate at the Bodleian site for Harkness's Harding B 20(81)) seems their standard for all Harkness broadsides.
I agree with the PJS and RBW comments.
Steve Roud's Street Literature Printers' Register for Harkness (PR79) has dates of 1841 to at least 1882 (http://www.vwml.org/search/search-street-lit?qtext=harkness&ts=1385852926917&collectionfilter=RoudBSPrinters;RoudStreetLit#accessed 30 November 2013).
To this point we have listed eight different texts: Ford, Kennedy, and six Bodleian broadsides. No two texts are identical: not even the three Such texts, Harding B 15(1509), Firth b.26(301), and Firth b.26(302). For all the similarity between Ford and Kennedy, noted by RBW, there are more differences -- as counted below -- between those two texts than any other pair. It is not surprising -- considering the dates recorded -- that the Ford text is "closer to" each broadside than is the Kennedy text. But here's the point, supporting RBW: every one of the differences among all the texts are either typographical choices or "are such as might arise simply in a singer's minor variations between sessions." Every text has four eight-line stanzas and a chorus. Across all the texts I count 30 differences, all minor:
16 substitution of one or two words (for example: "true English cheer" vs "the English cheer"; "his head is speared" vs "his head is spread")
3 added noise words (for example: "true English cheer" vs "for true English cheer")
3 collective singular vs plural predicate (for example: "that make too free" vs. "That makes too free")
2 contraction (for example: "his head is speared" vs "his head is spear'd")
2 singular vs plural noun (for example: "in potent draught of wine" vs "in potent draughts of wine")
2 possessive vs plural (for example: "gives warmth to nature's cold" and "gives warmth to natures cold")
2 mis-spelling (for example: "John Barleycorn" vs "John Berleycorn")
My point is to emphasize how minor the differences are between the printed and collected texts. As for PJS's point that few lines or phrases are shared between "John Barleycorn's a Hero Bold" and "John Barleycorn (I)" or its predecessors, I find only two shared pieces of text. The title and first line are shared with a verse added by Robert Burns to "John Barleycorn" (III):
I.50 John Barleycorn was a hero bold
I.51 Of noble enterprise
The phrase "goodly beard" [as opposed to "prickly beard"] is only at I.15 of Bodleian Harding B 15(1509) of this song and I.44 of all our examples to date of "John Barleycorn" (I) [see, for example, Pepys 1.426].
Broadsides LOC Singing as111460 and Bodleian Harding B 11(3188) are duplicates. - BS
Last updated in version 3.2
File: K277
marching on" with "Then it's hip, hip, hip, hurrah!")
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 442-443, "John Brown's Body" (1 text plus fragments of a German version, 1 tune)
Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, p. 23, "John Brown's Body"; p. 24, "The John Brown Song" (2 texts, tune referenced)
Silber-SoldierSongsAndHomeFrontBalladsOfCivilWar, p. 40, "John Brown's Body" (1 text, tune referenced) Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 158-160, "John Brown" (1 text, slightly modified by Huntington, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 37, "John Brown's Body" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 528-529, "John Brown's Body" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 214-215, "John Brown's Body" (1 text plus some variant stanzas and an early sheet music print)
Heart-Songs, p. 313, "John Brown's Body" (2 texts, tune indirectly referenced)
Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, pp. 84-85, "John Brown's Body" (1 text, 1 tune)
Seeeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 62, "John Brown's Body" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 305, "John Brown's Body" (1 text)
Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, p. 357, "John Brown" (1 text, 1 tune, a copy of an 1861 broadside)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1127, p. 77, "John Brown Song" (9 references); #1128, p. 77, "John Brown Song" (1 reference, which supposedly is sung to the Hallelujah Chorus and is by H. H. Brownell)
Greig/Duncan8 1629, "John Brown's Snapsack" (1 short text -- see note)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 220, "Battle Hymn of the Republic" (2 texts (the second being "John Brown's Body"), 1 tune)
Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, p. 40, "John Brown's Baby" ("John Brown's baby's got a pimple on his (...), The poor kid can't sit down") (1 short text)
Colonial-Dames-AmericanWarSongs, pp. 73, "Glory Hallelujah or John Brown's Body" (1 text which it credits to Charles Sprague Hall plus a rewrite by Ednah Dean Proctor)
DT, JOHNBRWN*
Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges _first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, p. 31, "John Brown's Body" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #771
RECORDINGS:
J. W. Myers, "John Brown's Body" (Victor A-824, c. 1901)
Pete Seeger, "John Brown's Body" (on PeteSeeger24) (on PeteSeeger28) (on PeteSeeger29)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" (tune & meter)
cf. "Marching On" (tune & meter)
cf. "Solidarity Forever" (tune)
cf. "Marching Song of the First Arkansas" (tune)
cf. "James Brown" (tune)
cf. "On to Washington" (tune)
cf. "Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory of the Burning of the School" (tune)
cf. "The Bulldog on the Bank" (tune)
cf. "Pass Around the Bottle (As We Go Marching Home)" (tune)
cf. "The President's Proclamation" (tune)
cf. "A Song of the Times (III)" (tune)
cf. "Flying Fortresses" (tune)
SAME TUNE:
The Battle Hymn of the Republic (File: RJ19022)
Solidarity Forever (File: SBoA282)
The Bulldog on the Bank (File: FSWB399B)
Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory of the Burning of the School (File: PHCFS100)
The President's Proclamation (File: CSWF025)
A Song of the Times (III) (File: Wels072)
We'll Set the Children Free (File: BaRo112)
They Were Only Playing Leap-Frog (File: BrPa046)
The Squatters on the Flinders (File: ScCol036)
Flying Fortresses (File: Hopk062)
He'll Never Fly Home Again (File: Hopk118)
He Ain't Gonna Jump No More (File: Hopk122)
I'd Like to Find the Sergeant (File: Hopk123)
I Was Chasing One-Elevens (File: Hopk124)
Mine Eyes Have Seen the Horror of the Ending of the Term" (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 101)
On to Washington ("We're headed straight for Washington with leaders brave and true") (Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, p. 62; Foner, p. 253)
James Brown ("James Brown's body toils along the rocky road, James Brown' body bends beneath a crushing load") (by E. R. Place) (Foner, p. 221; Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, p.p. 38-39)
My Pink Pajamas (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 34; DT, PINKPAJ)
Chicken Sandwich (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 11)
Glory, Glory, Pork Superior (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 21)
The Bulldog and the Bullfrog (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 47)
Glory, Glory, How Peculiar (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 106)
The Bugs Marched Down the Aisle (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 154)
She Waded in the Water (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 209)
Birmingham's My Home (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 245)
Oh, Ay Lif in Minneapolis (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 246)
Ellsworth's Body Lies Mouldering in the Grave (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 38)
Glory Hallelujah No. 2 (at least two of these, one beginning "Our Soldiers, now are marching to'ard the south," another, "Brave McClellan is our leader now") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 51)
Union Emotions ("'Oh! we'll hang Wendell Phillips to a sour apple-tree," by John C. Cross) (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 162)
Jubilate ("Old College rises where free winds sport her will, Dear Alma Mater, standing half way up the hill") (by Guy K. Cleveland [class of 18]50) (Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, p. 11)
Ode ("All the fullness of the summer bids us stay among the flowers") (by Albert Bryant, [class of 18]62) (Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, p. 42)
Jubilee Song ("Come, jolly classmates, raise the song of jubilee") (Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, p. 63)
Victory ("Hail! happy Juniors, let us banish care tonight") (by C. W. Brown, [class of 18]68) (Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, p. 64)
O'er Hill and Dale ("O'er hill and dale and valley, over ocean's wave-washed strands") (by S. P. Sturgis) (Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, p. 113)
The Girls of Ithaca ("I had kissed the buxom Buckeye, I had squeezed tie Esquimaux") (Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, p. 114)
("Old Joe Clark") (composite version of "Old Joe Clark" and a parody of this song, listed as "Old Joe Clark") (Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, p. 149)
The Grange Is Marching On ("In olden times the Farmer's life was filled with endless toil") (by A. P. Knapp) (Albert P. Knapp, _Grange Songster_, 1915, p. 12)
Grange Peace Song ("The farmers in their Granges have acclaimed the 'Prince of Peace'") (by Mortimer Whitehead) (Albert P. Knapp, _Grange Songster_, 1915, pp. 18-19)
What We Want ("We want to see reform go marching right along") (by B. M. Lawrence, M.D.) (Foner, p. 113)
A Centennial Wail ("I have a song to sing to you, to the tune of old John Brown") (by Robert W. Hume) (Foner, p. 122)
Down with the Money King ("The Greenback labor boys, both with speeches and with song")
Battle Hymn of the Wronged ("We have seen the reaper toiling in the heat of summer sun, We have seen his children needy when the harvesting was done") (by Hamlin Garland) (Foner, p. 310)

Battle Hymn of the Proletariat ("We are lining up for battle; we are arming for the fray; We've unsheathed the sword for action; naught can stop us, naught can stay") (by Stanislaus Cullen)

The March of the Workers ("What is this, the sound and rumor! what is this that all men hear?") (Foner, p. 323)

Once More, Ye True Republicans (Garfield and Arthur Campaign Song Book 1880, p. 9)

Rallying Song ("Once again we're ralying, our country all unite") (Garfield and Arthur Campaign Song Book 1880, p. 10)

White Ribbon Rally Song ("From the homeland to the farland [sic.], From the captive to the throng") (by Frances B. Damon) (Anna Adams Gordon, _Popular Campaign Songs_, National W.C.T.U. Publishing House, 1915, p. 22)

Help Us Win the Vote ("We have heard a song of triumph, it has rolled from shore to shore") (Anna Adams Gordon, _Popular Campaign Songs_, National W.C.T.U. Publishing House, 1915, p. 25)

The Nation's Going Dry ("We have got them out of Georgia, and we've got them out of Maine") (Anna Adams Gordon, _Popular Campaign Songs_, National W.C.T.U. Publishing House, 1915, p. 31)

NOTES [1235 words]: The well-known tune of this piece, "Say, Brothers, Will You Meet Us," is often credited to William Steffe, but I know of no absolute proof of this -- Stulken, p. 389, says that Steffe (died 1911) claimed in the 1880s to have written it in 1855 or 1856 -- but he offered no evidence. It has been suggested that the tune is derived from Stephen C. Foster's "Ellen Bayne," but the resemblance is slight and "Ellen Bayne" was not widely known (see TaylorEtAl, p. 27; according to Milligan, p. 80, Foster himself thought his tune was the inspiration for "John Brown's Body"). The "John Brown" words were composed within months of the anti-slavery crusader's death, and had spread throughout the Union by the early stages of the Civil War. (Note that Huntington has a version from 1861!) - RBW

John Uhlemann reports that the tune has been traced from a 17th century Swedish Lutheran hymnal, and that it has also entered folk tradition in Hungary, presumably independently of its American associations. - PJS

I have seen it argued that the "John Brown" of the song was not the abolitionist but an obscure American soldier (Irwin Silber describes him as "Sergeant John Brown, a Scotsman, a member of the Second Battalion, Boston Light Infantry Volunteer Militia," who later joined the Twelfth Massachusetts). I suppose this is possible -- but everyone interpreted it to mean the fanatic who captured Harper's Ferry. - RBW

Greig/Duncan8 is a fragment about John Brown's possessions -- "John Brown's snap sack number ninety nine" and "John Brown's stocking is darned in the heels" -- with the tag line "As we go marching on." Duncan is quoted: "The ordinary song, or rather the parody, supposed to refer to the queen's John Brown." Prince Albert died in 1861. This John Brown was a servant of Queen Victoria, whom she befriended in the decade after Albert's death. "The Queen's friendship with Brown caused resentment among her family and courtiers, and stories spread in society, and were published in foreign newspapers, that the Queen had secretly married Brown. References to 'Mrs Brown', meaning the Queen, were common at society dinner tables in London." (Source: Jasper Ridley, "Victoria r. 1837-1901" in _The Lives of the Kings and Queens of England_, ed. Fraser (London, 1975), p. 305). If Duncan is right, and this is a parody, this version should probably be split. - BS

I was indeed sorely tempted to split. If another version turns up with clear references to Victoria's John Brown, I certainly will.

Victoria married Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha (1819-1861) in 1840. He was not well-liked at the time, being suspected of being "on the make" (see the notes to "The Wheels of the World"). But in fact he served England well as a diplomat -- e.g. his last significant act was to prevent a possible war with the United States in 1861 over the "Trent" affair (when the captain of the U.S.S. _Trent_ had stopped a British ship and taken Confederate diplomats off of it); his exertions in this affair may have contributed to his death (Marshall, pp. 153-154). And Victoria doted upon him; when he died, she assumed mourning, and wore it for the rest of her life. She insisted on the construction of many monuments (Marshall, pp. 157-158), and had the room where he died preserved exactly as it had been at the time (Marshall, pp. 146-148). She largely withdrew from public view, as well, and was roundly criticized for her lack of involvement in public business, which lasted for about a decade;
Marshall titles the chapter about her life in 1861-1865 "The Bitter Years.

The man largely credited with breaking her out of her funk is John Brown, "who was blunt and honest but caring," according to Ashley, p. 692. She had known him before Albert's death, when he cared for her horses in the Highlands. There her life had been relatively informal, so she had known him better than most of her other servants (Marshall, p. 168). But it was not Victoria who summoned Brown to be with her in England; it was others concerned with her behavior (Marshall, p. 169). It worked: She started to come out of her funk.

Victoria had a strong tendency to lean on one particular person -- Lord Melbourne (people had also called her "Mrs. Melbourne" for a time; Marshall, p. 170), or Albert, or someone. In a sense, Brown took that role. He accompanied her everywhere, and she started quoting his advice widely, as she had done with Albert and others (Longford, p. 323), and eventually made him an esquire and more than tripled his salary in the course of just three years (Longford, p. 326). Little wonder that the family began to resent him (Marshall, p. 169).

At the time, people suspected that the relationship was more serious than it probably was; by 1866 we see the the newspapers sometimes sarcastically calling Victoria "Mrs. Brown" (Longford, p. 327) -- or accusing them of a sexual relationship without benefit of marriage (Marshall, p. 170).

As Ellis puts it, "Victoria was a woman who needed a man. Melbourne, Uncle Leopold, Wellington, Disraeli were all public figures to whom she could give her personal trust. In this time of private withdrawal she turned to Brown, one of the two ghillies who had looked after her and Albert, a handsome intelligent Scot with a blunt manner, a (well-managed) fondness for whisky, and a strong chin. He went everywhere with her, conspicuously dressed as a Highlander.... His privileged status caused resentment in her household, and wild rumors were started that she had married him." There were even proposals to abolish the monarchy, so reclusive was the Queen and so peculiar her treatment of Brown.

It all faded out in the 1870s -- Victoria, it is true, continued to depend on Brown, but she began to play a more public role again (Longford, p. 345, declares that "All the Queen's troubles went back to the same source: her seclusion), and other tragedies made her seem much more human. There was even talk of him marrying someone else, although it does not appear that a marriage actually happened (Longford, pp. 332-333).

There is absolutely no substantial evidence of a sexual relationship, let along a marriage. Indeed, Marshall, p. 199, believes that it was not just Brown who drew Victoria out of her isolation; it was also Disraeli, who knew how to flatter her (the ultimate example being his work to make her Empress of India). In any case, Brown died in 1883 (giving a rather short window for the composition of a song about him). Longford, p. 333, also declared that a marriage with a commoner was completely out of Victoria's character, and adds evidence from her private writings that she stayed faithful to Albert all her life.

Interestingly, Morris, p. 440, reports that Victoria's "attachment to her Indian clerk, the Munshi, who succeeded the ghillie John Brown in her affections, edged toward the scandalous." But it's hard to believe that really amounted to anything; Victoria was by this time in her sixties and about as wide as she was tall.

There are also the various parodies, "John Brown's baby had a cold upon his chest... And they rubbed it with mentholated oil" or the Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang version, "John Brown's baby's got a pimple on his -- shush!... The poor kid can't sit down." These are clearly derivative, but they are so often sung alongside the regular verses that I don't think they can really be considered separate songs. - RBW

Bibliography

- Ashley: Mike Ashley, British Kings and Queens, Barnes & Noble, 2000 (originally published as The Mammoth Book of British Kings and Queens, 1998)
- Longford: Elizabeth Longford, Queen Victoria: Born to Succeed, Harper & Row, 1964
- Milligan: Harold Vincent Milligan, Stephen Collins Foster: A Biography of America's Folk-Song Composer, 1920 (I use the 2004 University of Hawaii reprint)
John Bruce o the Forenit

DESCRIPTION: "At Martinmas term I gaed to the fair... I feed wi' a mannie to ca' his third pair, They ca' him John Bruse o' the (Fornit/Corner)." The song starts with a recitation of the poor conditions, then lists the folk found there -- including the pretty daughter

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: farming work moniker hardtimes
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #133, p. 1, "John Bruce" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 372, "John Bruce o the Fornet" (5 texts, 1 tune)
Buchan-ABookOfScottishBallads 67, "John Bruce o the Forenit" (1 text, 1 tune in appendix)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 229-230, "John Bruce o the Corner" (1 text)
Roud #3937

ALTERNATE TITLES:
John Bruce o' the Fornit
Jockey Bruce o' the Fornet
John Bruce

NOTES [36 words]: Greig/Duncan3 has a map on p. xxxv, of "places mentioned in songs in volume 3" showing the song number as well as place name; South Fornet (372) is at coordinate (h1,v8) on that map [roughly 11 miles W of Aberdeen]. - BS

Last updated in version 2.4
File: DBuch67

John Buchan, Blacksmith

DESCRIPTION: "Dear John, my plough is come to hand" begins a letter to the blacksmith praising his work. "Her every joint is so exact ..." It makes the ox-team so fast "neighbors swear they are grown fat." Love to your family and "kind wishes to my Will"

AUTHOR: William Lillie (source: Greig/Duncan3)
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: work nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 462, "John Buchan, Blacksmith" (1 text)
Roud #5965
File: GrD3462

John Bull Lives In England

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. "John Bull lives in England, Taffy lives in Wales. Sandy lives in Scotland where there is all the girls. Paddy lives in Ireland as ev'rebody knows. There never was a coward where the little shamrock grows."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (Sternvall, _Sang under Segel_)
KEYWORDS: shanty worksong home
FOUND IN: Sweden Britain
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 453-454, "John Bull" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13694

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Paddy Magee's Dream" (theme of national comparison)
NOTES [67 words]: The Swedish shanty book Sang under Segel had the only previous printed version of this, but Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas seems to think that it originated in England and migrated to Sweden. - SL
I think this is true at least of the words (though I don't know if they migrated to Sweden). Steve Roud collected a version of the text, and there are rather similar nursery rhymes floating about. - RBW
File: Hugi452

John Burke
DESCRIPTION: "Bad luck attend you Percy wherever you may be. You would not assist my Johnny for he's drown'd ... in the flurry off Kerry Bay." His true love comes to the funeral "dressed in her rich robes" and they bid "adieu to Johnny as we all marched away"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: death funeral disaster lament lover mother sister clothes
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Peacock, pp. 467-468, "John Burke" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: George Allan England, _Vikings of the Ice: Being the Log of a Tenderfoot on the Great Newfoundland Seal Hunt_ (also published as _The Greatest Hunt in the World_), Doubleday, 1924, pp. 131-132, "Johnny Burke" (1 text)
ST Pea467 (Partial)
Roud #9791
RECORDINGS:
Joshua Osborne, "John Burke" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
NOTES [245 words]: Peacock notes "I was unable to find any reference to this lament in the Irish collections at my disposal." Burke's name and "Bad luck attend you" seem Irish enough, but maybe it's not Irish. There's a Kerry Bay near Gairloch in northwest Scotland across the Minch from the Outer Hebrides. The ballad mentions a "far field of glory on the leeward shore"; what war is this about? - BS
The prevailing winds in Britain are generally from the west (northwest in summer, southwest in winter). So the windward shore is Britain, the leeward the Hebrides, or Ireland -- or, just possibly, North America. It's hard to imagine a battle in the Hebrides that would be commemorated in an English song. And Kerry is on the southwest coast of Ireland. So "Kerry Bay" might be Dingle Bay, or just possibly Bantry Bay (which is just south of modern County Kerry, but in the same general area).
The most noteworthy battle in County Kerry proper was probably Callan (1261), but that is surely too early. So my guess (and it's just a guess) is that this refers to 1796 and the Bantry Bay landing, for which see "The Shan Van Voght." This fits on other grounds, since Hoche's Bantry Bay fleet had suffered badly from a storm (December 1796) and did not attempt to land.
But someone who wants to figure out this song really needs to look at England's version as well as Peacock's. It's not so clearly Irish, and the place is "Courage Bay." I can't find a Courage Bay on Google Maps, though. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.3
File: Pea4467

John Carter (John Cutter)
DESCRIPTION: On the Caroline, bound from Queenstown (Cobh, Ireland?) to Boston, first mate John Cutter murders four, including captain John Dwyer. Cutter, subdued by the crew and "mad raving," dies from his wounds. "May the Lord have mercy... for their poor souls"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA-Leach)
KEYWORDS: homicide death sea ship sailor
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
Roud #30133
RECORDINGS:
Pat Curtis, "John Carter" (on MUNFLA-Leach)
Frank Knox, "John Cutter" (on MUNFLA-Leach)
File: ML3JohCa
John Cherokee

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1917
KEYWORDS: shanty slave escape Indians(Am.) ghost
FOUND IN: West Indies
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 103, "John Cherokee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 439, "Alabama" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd,p. 330]
Roud #4693
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Alabama John Cherokee
NOTES [29 words]: Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen and Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas both state this is definitely of Negro origin, probably introduced to seaman by slaves stowing cotton. - SL
File: Hugi439

John Dameray

DESCRIPTION: Shanty, with chorus, "John come down the backstay... John Dameray." The singer's mother urges him to come home; he decides to do so, for he has "no money and no clothes." He vows, "From sea I will keep clear, and live by selling beer"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1893
KEYWORDS: shanty drink poverty homesickness
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 8-9, "John Dameray" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 272-273, "John Dameray," "Johnny, Come Down the Backstay" (2 texts, 1 tune) [AbEd, pp. 201-202]
ST Doe008 (Partial)
Roud #9439
ALTERNATE TITLES:
John Damaray
File: Doe008

John Dolan

DESCRIPTION: Fiddler's mnemonic. "John Dolan he dreamt that Jon Durgan was dead, And John Durgan he dreamt that John Dolan was dead." (repeat). "Ti iddle di iddle de umpty do" (x4)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1976 (Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol5)
KEYWORDS: nonballad death
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol5, pp. 10-11, "John Dolan" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #7050
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "McTavish Is Dead" (theme of two people both being dead)
NOTES [39 words]: Like "McTavish Is Dead," with which it shares a concept, this is apparently primarily a fiddler's mnemonic. I strongly suspect one was suggested by the other, with "McTavish" being the more likely source since it's better-known. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File: BWV5010
John Done Saw that Number

DESCRIPTION: "John done saw that number, Way in the middle of the air." John the Baptist's preaching is summarized, and his baptism of Jesus described. The descent of the spirit on Jesus concludes the song.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recording, Rev. Moses Mason)

KEYWORDS: religious Bible Jesus

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 16-21, "John Done Saw That Number" (1 text, 1 tune)

Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 61-64, (no title) (1 text)

Roud #11843

RECORDINGS:

Rev. Moses Mason, "John the Baptist" (Paramount 12702A, 1928; on AAFM2)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Ezekiel Saw the Wheel"

cf. "John Saw the Holy Number" (floating lyrics)

cf. "Wasn't That a Wonder" (some shared themes)

NOTES [239 words]: The feel of this is much like "Ezekiel Saw the Wheel," but the plot is purely New Testament (and the form argues that it is not the same as "John Saw the Holy Number," despite the similarity in first lines). The allusions include (where possible, I quote the text of Mark as the most primitive):

"John the baptizer appeared in the wilderness, preaching a baptism of repentance..." Mark 1:4; compare Matt. 3:1, Luke 3:2

"As it is written in the prophet Isaiah ["Esaias" in the song and the King James Bible]..." - Mark 1:2-3; cf. Matt. 3:3, Luke 3:4, John 1:23

"Now John was clothed with camel's hair, with a leather girdle about his waist." - Mark 1:6; cf. Matt. 3:4

"In those days Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee and was baptized by John in the Jordan." - Mark 1:9; cf. Matt. 3:13, (Luke 3:21)

"John would have prevented him, saying, 'I need to be baptized by you, and do you come to me? But Jesus answered him, 'Let it be so now; for it is proper for us in this way to fulfill all righteousness.'" - Matt. 3:14-15

"And just as [Jesus] was coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens torn open and the Spirit descending like a dove on him." - Mark 1:10; cf. Matt. 3:16, Luke 3:22, (John 1:32)

"The Jesus was led up by the Spirit into the Wilderness... [the Temptation]" - Matt. 4:1-11; cf. (Mark 1:12-13), Luke 4:1-13. - RBW

_Last updated in version 4.1_

File: CNFM061C

John Dory [Child 284]

DESCRIPTION: John Dory gets a horse and sets out for Paris. There he meets King John. He offers to bring King John "all the churles in merie England" in return for a pardon. Dory is overtaken by one Nicholl of Cornwall, who takes him prisoner after a sharp battle

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1609 (Ravenscroft, Deuteromelia)

KEYWORDS: ship royalty pardon battle foreigner

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

1350-1364 - Reign of John II of France (the only French king named John who lived during the Hundred Years' War)

FOUND IN: Britain(England)

REFERENCES (9 citations):

Child 284, "John Dory" (1 text)

Bronson 284, "John Dory" (7 versions)

Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 284, "John Dory" (4 versions: #1a, #1b, #1e, #2)
John Fergusson's Crew

DESCRIPTION: "There once was a man In Howland did dwell; His name was John Fergusson...." His lumber camp is small. The food is so bad the loggers claimed the butter moved. Tthe cooks are no good. Several men are lost. The camp is known by "the pork rind on the door"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks)

KEYWORDS: logger hardtimes food cook moniker

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks, pp. 28-29, "John Fergusson's Crew" (1 text)

File: Gr029

John Fox

DESCRIPTION: John Fox is caught stealing a hen. Expecting death, he makes his confession: his father was a thief; he steals to support his wife's appetite; he stole lambs before being caught. If you marry such a wife "train her wi' the rod. Use her to nae delicacies"

AUTHOR: Sawney Riddell (source: Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)

EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: warning theft humorous animal chickens sheep father wife abuse

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #103, p. 1, "John Fox" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 498, "John Fox" (1 text)

Roud #5984

NOTES [59 words]: Greig notes that the author, who is also the man who owned the stolen lambs in the song, must have written it "in the earlier part of last [19th] century, when the depredations of the fox had to be reckoned with. The song begins "There lives a man into this place, John Fox it is his name, And o' a' the ill deen hereabout John Fox he gets the blame." - BS

Last updated in version 2.4

File: GrD3498
John Funston [Laws F23]

DESCRIPTION: Young, handsome John Funston robs and murders William Cartmell. Although an innocent man is first held, Funston spends money too freely; he is captured and condemned to die. His family claims his body from two doctors who want it.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Gordon collection)
KEYWORDS: homicide robbery execution corpse
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Sept 9, 1825 - John Funston murders William Cartmell
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Laws F23, "John Funston"
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 119, "John Funston" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Gitmrd pp. 89-90, "John Funston" (1 text)
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, p. 81-82, (no title) (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 401-402, "John Funston" (1 text)
DT 756, JONFUNST
Roud #2261
File: LF23

John Garner's Cattle Herd

DESCRIPTION: "Come, all you old-timers, and listen to my song... When we with old Joe Garner drove a beef herd up the trail." They had 2000 cattle and good cowboys, but the cows stampede and they are told they must bear the loss. The singer calls Garner a cattle thief.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1921 (Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys)
KEYWORDS: cowboy theft hardtimes trick
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys, pp. 84-86, "John Garner's Cattle Herd" (1 text)
Roud #4036
NOTES [7 words]: This is item dB29 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: ThLo084

John Gilbert

DESCRIPTION: "John Gilbert was a bushranger of terrible renown, For sticking lots of people up and shooting others down." He concludes he should be trying for bigger things, and holds up the town of Canowindra. Little is done to stop his degradations.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (AndersonStory)
KEYWORDS: robbery Australia outlaw
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1866 - Death of John Gilbert
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 128-129, "John Gilbert" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9120
NOTES [25 words]: For brief background on John Gilbert, a member of the famous Gardiner/Hall gang of bushrangers, see the notes to "Frank Gardiner" and "Ben Hall." - RBW
Last updated in version 4.0
File: AnSt128

John Gilbert is de Boat

DESCRIPTION: "John Gilbert is de boat, di-de-o... Runnin' in the Cincinnati trade." Description of the boat's travels, her cargo, the crew. "You see dat boat a-comin', she's comin' round de bend, An' when she gits in, She'll be loaded down again"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939
KEYWORDS: ship travel commerce nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 276, "John Gilbert is de Boat" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wheeler-SteamboatinDays, p. 43-46, "John Gilbert" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryMississippiRiverFolklore, p. 574, "John Gilbert" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10012
NOTES [46 words]: Botkin reports (following Wheeler), "The John Gilbert ran from Cincinnati to Florence, Alabama. She was built in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania in 1881, and was named for Captain John Gilbert, of Evansville, Indiana, president of the Ohio and Tennessee River Packet Company."
- RBW
File: LoF276

John Gunn

DESCRIPTION: John Gun, the singer, says his men have robbed many a purse of gold. They stole merchant goods in a market near Inverurie. He names those who gave him trouble and have been or will be repaid. He has been set free from jail and "must go abroad"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan2)
KEYWORDS: prison robbery exile
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan2 256, Greig/Duncan8 Addenda, "John Gunn" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan2 256, "John Gunn" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #5849
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "For A' That and A' That" (tune, according to Greig/Duncan2)
NOTES [60 words]: Greig/Duncan2: "[The singer] states that John Gunn was a well known robber in the north." "[Another singer] got it about '51 or '52 from a man who had been in the Turruff [sic] district." Maybe Turriff is meant. Greig/Duncan3 has a map of "places mentioned in songs in volume 3"; Turriff is at coordinate (v5,h8) on that map [roughly 31 miles NNW of Aberdeen]. - BS
Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD2256

John Hardy [Laws I2]

DESCRIPTION: John Hardy, a "desperate boy... who carried a (gun) every day," threatens to kill any man who wins his money. Finally he does lose his money and shoots the other. Hardy flees, but before he can leave the state he is taken, tried, and hanged

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (Cecil Sharp collection); +1909 (JAFL22)
KEYWORDS: homicide gambling execution
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Jan 19, 1894 - Execution (in Welch, WV) of one John Hardy, convicted for committing murder during a gambling fight
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE,So,SW)
REFERENCES (27 citations):
Laws I2, "John Hardy"
Randolph 163, "John Hardy" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 244, "John Hardy" (3 texts)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 244, "John Hardy" (1 excerpt, 1 tune) Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 103, "John Henry" (1 short text, which despite the title appears to have two "John Hardy" verses and only one of "John Henry") Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #42, "John Hardie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 759-761, "John Hardy" (2 texts)
NOTES [619 words]: Cox prints a copy of the execution notice for John Hardy, who was convicted of first degree murder. He follows this with assorted personal reminiscences about Hardy. Unfortunately, the texts he quotes are very confused (most include John Henry verses among the stanzas about John Hardy), and one has to suspect that the reminiscences are also confused.

We also note that Sharp was finding North Carolina texts of the song only 20 years after the murder -- a surprisingly quick diffusion. I was initially tempted to wonder if Cox's John Hardy is indeed THE John Hardy.

I think these doubts can now be set aside. John Garst, who has done so much for John Henry scholarship, has also turned his attention to John Hardy, as has Norm Cohen.

Garst found the following:

"Census records report a John Hardy who was born in Virginia and who was 13 years old in 1880, when he lived in Glade Springs, Washington County, Virginia, with his parents, Miles and Malinda Hardy. If this is the John Hardy who was hanged in 1894, then he would have been about 27 years old, an age that fits some eyewitness descriptions.

According to the Wheeling Daily Register of January 20, 1894, the trouble over the craps game was a pretext for Hardy to kill Thomas Drews. 'Both were enamoured of the same woman, and the latter proving the more favored lover, incurred Hardy's envy.' There was testimony to the effect that Hardy enlisted a confederate, Webb Gudger, who was also tried in connection with the crime. Cohen and Garst both examined the data in Richard Ramella, "John Hardy: The Man and the Song," (Goldenseal 18, Spring 1992). Garst notes the following from that source: "Hardy's cohort Webb Gudger was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter. After serving four years in the state penitentiary, he returned to McDowell County and later died in a railroad work accident near Elkhorn. Gudger hid behind a rock during the game of craps and had agreed to shoot Drews if Hardy failed to do so.

"Hardy and Gudger were captured at the same time, a few days after the killing." Ramella also states, "...Hardy's mother attempted to pay bail, but bail was not allowed for persons accused of capital offenses. There were possibly two other women connected with Hardy, his wife and a woman friend."

Garst has now established with high probability the existence of the wife, quoting the following news clip:

"Shot From Ambush.
"HUNTINGTON, W. Va., April 16.--
'Mrs. Mary Hardy was shot from ambush fifty miles south of this city last Saturday night while on her way home, by an unknown assassin. Her husband, John Hardy, was hanged in McDowell county several months ago. She was a desperate character."

Garst also found data on Gudger from the 1880 census:

Name: Webb Gudger
Home in 1880: Old Fort, McDowell, North Carolina
Age: 19
Estimated birth year: abt 1861
Birthplace: North Carolina
Occupation: Prisoner - Raleigh
Marital Status: Single Race: Mulatto
Gender: Male

Garst observes that "his 'occupation' as a prisoner, at age 19, makes him a pretty good candidate" for Hardy's co-conspirator.

It all adds up to a pretty convincing case.

Other details: The shooting took place in Elkhorn, which at some time in the past was known as Shawnee Camp (see Richard Polenberg: Hear My Sad Story: The True Tales That Inspired Stagolee, John Henry, and Other Traditional American Folk Songs, Cornell University Press, 2015, p. 122); some versions say that Hardy killed a man "in Shawnee town" or similar. Both Hardy and his victim were Black. The trial records, although not the execution order, are missing. But the execution certainly happened; Polenberg, p. 126, has a photo of Hardy on the gallows shortly before he was hung. - RBW

John He Baptized Jesus

DESCRIPTION: "John he baptized Jesus; 'Twas all through his command. The Holy Bible tells us That John was a righteous man. Little children, our lodging's here tonight (x3), I know you by your little garments. Our lodging's here tonight."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: Jesus religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 604, "John He Baptized Jesus" (1 fragment)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 604, "John, He Baptized Jesus" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)

Roud #11914

NOTES [9 words]: Unquestionably a composite. But of what elements? - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1

File: Br3604
John Henry [Laws I1]

DESCRIPTION: The boss of a railroad crew has brought in a steam drill. John Henry, the best driver in the gang, vows he will never be outclassed by the machine. In a contest between the two, Henry is victorious (in most versions), but dies of the exertion.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (JAFL)

KEYWORDS: train work death technology railroading worker

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,SE,So)

REFERENCES (43 citations):

- Laws I1, "John Henry"
- Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 61-89, "John Henry" (2 texts plus many excerpts and a copy of the Blankenship broadside, 2 tunes)
- Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 327-328, "John Henry Blues" (1 text)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 270, "John Henry" (2 texts plus 5 fragments, 1 excerpt, and mention of 1 more, but only the "A" text, plus probably the "C" fragment, is this song; the fragments are of "Take This Hammer," "Swannanoah Tunnel," etc.)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 270, "John Henry" (7 excerpts, 7 tunes, of which "A," "A(1)," and perhaps "C" appear to be "John Henry"; "E," "G," and "J" appear to be "Take This Hammer," and "H" appears to be "Swannanoa Tunnel")
- Lunsford/Stringfield-30And1FolkSongsFromSouthernMountains, pp. 32-33, "John Henry" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 103, "John Henry" (1 short text, which despite the title appears to have two "John Hardy" verses and only one of "John Henry")
- Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #99, "John Henry" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, pp. 188-189, "John Henry" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 756-759, "John Henry" (2 texts)
- Leach-HeritageBookOfBallads, pp. 168-169, "John Henry" (1 text)
- Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 383, "John Henry" (6 texts, but only three are true versions of "John Henry"); the rest appear to be variants of "Take this Hammer"
- Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 109, "John Henry" (1 text)
- McNeil-SouthernFolkBalladsVol1, pp. 150-153, "John Henry" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 24-25, "John Henry" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates 81, pp. 164-165, "John Henry (The Steel-Driving Man)" (1 text)
- Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 74, "John Henry" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 258-261, "John Henry" (1 text plus an excerpt, 1 tune)
- Lomax-FolksongsOfNorthAmerica 298, "John Henry-I"; 299, "John Henry-II" (2 texts, 2 tunes, the first containing a large portion of "Hang Me, Oh Hang Me/Been All Around This World" or a relative)
- Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 3-10, "John Henry" (2 texts, 1 tune)
- Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 233-237, "John Henry" (2 texts plus an excerpt, 1 tune)
- Ritchie-SingingFamilyOfTheCumberlands, pp. 240-241, "[John Henry]" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Dunson/Raim/Asch-AnthologyOfAmericanFolkMusic, p. 52 "Gonna Die With My Hammer In My Hand (John Henry)" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Hodgart-FaberBookOfBallads, p. 243, "John Henry" (1 text)
- Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, p. 111, "John Henry" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Botkin-TreasuryOfSouthernFolklore, p. 748, "The Death of John Henry" (1 text, 1 tune -- a strange version, sung, and partly spoken, by Dave Macon. It starts with the death and funeral, then goes back to the familiar story)
- Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 111-115, "(John Henry)" (1 text); pp. 280-285, "John Henry" (3 tunes, partial texts); also pp. 137-138, "(John Henry)" (1 text, with a fragment of the plot of "John Henry" but many lyrics from "Take This Hammer")
- Cox-FolkSongsSouth 35, "John Hardy" (9 text, some of John Henry, some of John Hardy, some mixed: A is John Hardy with a John Henry second verse, B, C, and G are John Hardy with a John Henry opening verse, D, F, and I are pure John Hardy, E is John Hardy with material from John Henry and a "Pretty Little Foot" song, H is John Henry)
- Bush-FSoCentralWestVirginiaVol1, pp. 53-55, "John Henry" (1 composite text, 1 tune)
- Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, pp. 112-113, "John Henry" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, pp. 55-56, "John Henry" (1 text, 1 tune, plus a folktale version)
- Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol1, pp. 48-49, "John Henry" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, pp. 27-28, "John Henry" (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 230-234, "John Henry" (3 texts plus a text of "Take This Hammer")
Seeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 82, "John Henry" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, p. 107, "John Henry" (1 text)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 170, "John Henry" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 123, "John Henry" (1 text)
DT 317, JHNHENRY* JOHNHENR
Moses Asch and Alan Lomax, Editors, _The Leadbelly Songbook_, Oak, 1962., p. 31, "John Henry" (1 text, 1 tune, adaptedy by Lead Belly)
Roud #790
RECORDINGS:
Rich Amerson, "John Henry" (on NFMAla3)
DeFord Bailey, "John Henry" (Victor 23336, 1932/Victor 23831, 1933; rec. 1928)
Dock Boggs, "John Henry" (on Boggs2, BoggsCD1)
Big Bill Broonzy, "John Henry" (on Broonzy01)
Callahan Brothers, "John Henry" (Decca 5998, 1941; Decca 46104, 1947)
Fiddlin' John Carson, "John Henry Blues" (OKeh 7004, 1924)
Bill Cincinnati, "John Henry" (on MMOKCD)
Bill & Jean Davis, "John Henry" (on CloseHomeMS)
(Joe) Evans & (Arthur) McClain, "John Henry Blues" (Oriole 8080/Perfect 181/Romeo 5080/Conqueror 7876, all 1931; on BefBlues3)
Fruit Jar Guzzlers, "Steel Driving Man" (Paramount 3121/Broadway 8199, 1928; on TimesAint03)
G. B. Grayson and Henry Whitter, "John Henry the Steel Driving Man" (Gennett, unissued, 1927)
Woody Guthrie, "John Henry" (Stinson 628, mid-1940s)
Woody Guthrie & Cisco Houston, "John Henry" (onWoodyFolk, ClassRR)
Willie Hamilton, "John Henry" (on HandMeDown1)
Vera Hall, "John Henry" (AFS 1320 A2, 1937) [Note: Dixon/Godrich/Rye also identifies this AFS number with a Vera Hall recording of "Po' Laz'us"; one of them is clearly in error, but I don't know which - PJS]
Sid Harkreader, "John Henry" (Broadway 8114, c. 1930)
Sid Hemphill, "John Henry" (on LomaxCD1700)
Doc Hopkins, "John Henry" (Radio 1411, n.d.)
Furry Lewis, "John Henry" (on FLewis01, DownHome)
Earl Johnson & his Dixie Entertainers, "John Henry Blues" (OKeh 45101, 1927; on TimesAint02, Constitutions1, StuffDreams2)
Buell Kazee, "John Henry" (on Kazee01)
Ed Lewis, "John Henry" (on LomaxCD1705)
Furry Lewis, "John Henry (The Steel Driving Man), parts 1 & 2" (Vocalion 1474, 1930; rec. 1929; part 1 on USChartersHeroes)
Uncle Dave Macon, "The Death of John Henry" (Vocalion 5096=Vocalion 15320, 1926) (Brunswick 112, 1927; Brunswick 80091, n.d., Coral MH-174; probably the same recording as the preceding)
J. E. Mainer's Mountainaires, "John Henry was a Little Boy" (Bluebird B-6629, 1936); "John Henry"
(King 550, 1946)
Earl McCoy, Alfred Meng & Clem Garner, "John Henry" (Columbia 15622-D, 1930)
J. J. Neece, Cleve & V. L. Sutphin, "John Henry" (on CloseHomeMS)
New Lost City Ramblers, "John Henry" (on NLCR05)
George Pegram, "John Henry" (on ClassOT)
Virgil Perkins & Jack Sims, "John Henry" (on FMUSA, AmSkBa)
Leslie Riddle, "John Henry" (on CloseHomeMS)
Mike Seeger, "The Death of John Henry" (on MSeeger02)
Pete Seeger, "John Henry" (on PeteSeeger05) (on PeteSeeger16) (on PeteSeeger47) (on PeteSeeger23)
Ernest V. Stoneman, "John Henry" (Edison 51869, 1926) (CYL: Edison [BA] 5194, 1926)
Glenn Stoneman, George Stoneman & James Lindsay, "John Henry" [instrumental] (on LomaxCD1702)
Gid Tanner & Riley Puckett, "John Henry" (Columbia 15019-D, 1924; Silvertone 3262, 1926 [as Gibbs & Watson])
Gid Tanner & his Skillet Lickers, "John Henry" (Columbia 15142-D, 1927)
Sonny Terry & Brownie McGhee, "John Henry" (on ClassAfrAm)
Henry Thomas, "John Henry" (Vocalion 1094, 1927)
Welby Toomey, "Death of John Henry" (Champion 15198/Silvertone 5002, 1927)
Willie Turner, "John Henry" (on NFMAla6)
Doc Watson, Gaither Carlton & Arnold Watson, "John Henry" (on WatsonAshley01)
Williamson Bros. & Curry, "Gonna Die With My Hammer In My Hand" (OKeh 45127, 1927; on AAFM1, TimesAin't3)
Martin Young & Corbett Grigsby, "John Henry" [instrumental] (on MMOOKCD)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Take This Hammer" (lyrics)
SAME TUNE:
Shelton Brothers, "New John Henry Blues" (Decca 5173, 1936)

NOTES [1167 words]: The popularity of this song is shown by its influence on other songs: Not only is John Henry's hammer mentioned in "Take this Hammer" and relatives, but it also inspired W. C. Handy's "John Henry Blues." Quite a record for a song which came into existence only well into the railroad age.

The bibliography of this song is huge, and no attempt is made to reproduce it here. In 1983, when Brett Williams published John Henry: A Bio-Bibliography (Greenwood Press), the bibliography was 13 pages long (though some of the books in the "Background" section are pretty irrelevant). But it lists 13 films about John Henry, and a page and a half of printed works inspired by him -- how many folk songs have such a legacy?

And, of course, more has been published since.

The first two major scholarly books on the topic were Guy B. Johnson, John Henry: Tracking Down a Negro Legend, 1929, and Louis Chappell, John Henry: A Folk-Lore Study, 1933. Both were attempts to find "the real John Henry." And both eventually turned to West Virginia's Big Bend Tunnel, on the Chesapeake and Ohio (C & O) line -- by far the most common location cited in versions of the ballad. In that case, the contest took place in the early 1870s.

More recently, Scott Nelson's book 2006 book Steel Drivin' Man offered the suggestion that John Henry was John William Henry, a prisoner in the Virginia State Penitentiary, leased to C & O to work at Lewis Tunnel. His body was returned to Pen for burial near the white workhouse there. The most detailed detective work, however, has been done by John Garst, who has compared the versions of the song with local traditions about John and such external testimony of witnesses as he can find. (He also looked over this note to make sure I didn't misrepresent him, and made extremely valuable suggestions. And I do mean "extremely" valuable; this is not a perfunctory thanks. He corrected several errors, and amplified points which I had missed. Any remaining errors are of course mine.) He has published an initial version of his findings in "Chasing John Henry in Alabama and Mississippi," Tributaries: Journal of the Alabama Folklife Association, Issue No. 5, 2002, 92-129, and an updated (but necessarily short and minimally documented) version in the Old Time Herald, Volume 11, #10 (April-May 2009), pp. 14-23.

His conclusions are in stark contrast to what has gone before. He argues that

* The John Henry story took place near Leeds, Alabama, in the Dunnavant Valley, near Oak Tunnel, in the vicinity of Coosa and Oak Mountains (which are two miles apart).
* That the "Captain" of the song is Fred Dabney (born 1835), who was entitled to be called Captain; he had served at that rank in the Confederate Army. He worked for the C & W railroad -- he was the chief engineer and responsible for building the line through the Dunnavant Valley
* That John Henry was perhaps (John) Henry Dabney, born c. 1850 -- possibly a slave on the Dabney family plantation, or possibly Henry, slave to Captain Dabney's father, Augustine "Gus" Dabney, a lawyer in Raymond, Mississippi. John Garst tells me that the plantation was owned by Captain Dabney's uncle, Thomas Dabney. In 1860, Thomas owned 154 slaves, while Gus owned eight, one of whom we know by name, Henry. Gus's Henry was a teenager during the Civil War, "just the right age to have been John Henry."
* That the wife in the song may have been Margaret Foston, whom he married in 1869. According to John Garst, "This depends on the assumption that the Henry Dabney of Copiah County in the 1870 and 1880 censuses was John Henry. The data suggest that the census Henry and the slave Henry could be the same person, and that makes a tidy story, but that is conjecture. What we have are three separate items that we can interpret as overlapping: (1) Spencer's testimony that he was John Henry Dabney, (2) Letitia Dabney's testimony about the slave boy Henry in her (and Captain Dabney's) family, (3) census and marriage records for Henry Dabney of Copiah County, Mississippi (1870 and 1880).

* That the most likely date for the contest is Tuesday, September 20, 1887
* That John Henry may be one of the first people buried (in an unmarked grave) at Sand Ridge cemetery, about two miles from the C & W line.

What we unfortunately still lack is, obviously, John Henry's grave -- and also external evidence of a contest with a steam drill (though even here, Dunnavant has a better case, since steam drills apparently were not used on the Big Bend Tunnel. John Garst tells me that "We know that Coosa Tunnel was bored using Ingersoll steam drills. The case for Big Bend rests on the possibility, for which there is testimony, that a steam drill was tried out there against John Henry. The use of steam drills in boring Big Bend is therefore not required for the Big Bend theory."]. These are the sorts of things that, of course, do not show up in census records or the like.

The Old-Time Herald article by itself is not entirely convincing -- too much of the evidence has to be offered in extremely condensed form. John Garst has said himself that it is too short to document the material he has -- and his postings to the Ballad-L mailing list demonstrate this conclusively: He has more than is in the OTH article. We can only hope that he will someday be able to publish in full form -- including not only his conclusions but his source data. (Most notably, I think he needs a textual analysis of the versions of the song "John Henry," attempting to isolate what is original and what a later accretion.)

(Since the above was written, Garst has published one more article, "John Henry and the Reverend Bayes," Missouri Folklife Society Journal, Volume 27-28 (cover date 2005-200, but published 2015), pp. 98-123. In this article, he begins to take on the issue of how the song was transmitted. In this, he attempts to re-create the two key tools of textual criticism, "transcriptional probability" and "intrinsic probability." For someone attempting to create a discipline from scratch, he does fairly well, but unfortunately, there has been much work done in the field that he is not aware of and that would have made his presentation -- and his foray into Bayesian probabilities -- more complete and relevant.)

With all that scholarly caution, however, I must add that I think John Garst has by now presented a very compelling case. I was never persuaded by earlier arguments about John Henry's existence. I now incline to think he was real. I look forward to John's full-length publication of his data.

John Henry's career which ends with him dying "with his hammer in his hand" may have been partly inspired by real people. Robert Napier, a key figure in the history of Scottish steamships, came from a family of blacksmiths and liked to declare that he was BORN with a hammer in his hand; see Stephen Fox, Transatlantic: Samuel Cunard, Isumbard Brunel, and the Great Atlantic Steamships, Harper Collins, 2003, p. 33. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1

File: LI01

John J. Curtis [Laws G29]

DESCRIPTION: John J. Curtis, a coal miner, is trapped in an avalanche of coal after setting a dynamite explosion. When he succeeds in lighting a match, he discovers he is blind. He asks his listeners for kindness

AUTHOR: Joseph Gallagher

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends)

KEYWORDS: mining begging injury

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

1888 - John Curtis, age 28, is blinded in a mine in Schuylkill County, Pennsylvania. He made his living thereafter by singing and selling broadsides of this song, made for him by Joseph Gallagher

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Laws G29, "John J. Curtis"
Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, pp. 391-393, "John J. Curtis" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 711, JJCURTIS JOHN CURT

Roud #7724

File: LG29
John Jacob Jingleheimer Schmidt

DESCRIPTION: "John Jacob Jingleheimer Schmidt His name is my name too. Wherever we go out, The people always shout, John Jacob Jingleheimer Schmidt. Da da da da da da da."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (recording, Pete Seeger)

KEYWORDS: nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 240, "John Jacob Jingleheimer Schmidt" (1 text)
- Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 199, "John Jacob Jingleheimer Schmidt" (1 text)
- DT, JJJSCHM*

RECORDINGS:
- Pete Seeger, "John Jacob Jinglehaimer Schmitt" (on PeteSeeger11)

File: FSWB240B

---

John James O'Hara

DESCRIPTION: John James O'Hara from Tara and Mickey McNamara from Mayo "are famous Irishmen no matter where they go." Now "we're returning back to dear old Erin's Isle"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Tunney-StoneFiddle)

KEYWORDS: return Ireland nonballad

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Tunney-StoneFiddle, p. 54, "John James O'Hara" (1 text)

Roud #19472

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- O'Hara From Tara, McNamara From Mayo

NOTES [60 words]: This sounds to me as if O'Hara and McNamara were musical performers who went to the United States. There was a John O'Hara responsible for a 1941 musical, "Pal Joey" (see Gilbert, LostChords, p. 353); with so little background from Tunney's song, I doubt we can tell if they are the same. It doesn't seem very likely. I can't find any candidates for McNamara. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: TSF054

---

John Jasper

DESCRIPTION: "John Jasper was a man, as you all do understand. And he preach-ed to de people with a vengeance... And he preache'ed to de people dat de sun do move." Concerning the power of the preaching of Jasper

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1919 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: religious clergy

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
- 1812-1901 - LIfe of John Jasper, originally a slave, who became a preacher in 1839 after a conversion experience and often preached a sermon, "De Sun Do Move"

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 605, "John Jasper" (1 text plus a fragment)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 605, "John Jasper" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)

Roud #11915

File: Br3605
John Kanaka

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Characteristic line: "John Kanaka-naka, too-li-ay." The sailors describe how they will "work tomorrow but no work today!" Some details of their trip around the horn on a Yankee ship are given

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1977

KEYWORDS: sailor shanty work

FOUND IN: West Indies (Barbados)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 288-289, "John Kanaka" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, p.212]
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 94-95, "John Kanaka" (1 tet, 1 tune)
Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 50-51, "John Kanaka" (1 text, 1 tune)
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, p. 219, "(No title)" (1 short text, which lacks the chorus but has the same first line as the Maine version of this song; it is too short to classify otherwise)
Heart-Songs, pp. 72-73, "A Yankee Ship, and a Yankee Crew" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, JONKANAK*

Roud #8238

NOTES [173 words]: "Kanaka" was a term applied to Hawaiian men. Whether this song is referring to that or to "Canucks" (French-Canadians) is obscure. - PJS
The term is used in Australia for Polynesians in general, especially those who worked in the Queensland sugar plantations. (It is said to mean simply "man." ) I have to suspect that the song originally referred to the Polynesians, though of course northern sailors might have thought it meant Canucks.
Edward E. Morris, A Dictionary of Austral English, 1898 (I use the 1972 Sydney University Press with a new foreword but no new content), p. 229, defines it as "n. and adj. a labourer from the South Sea Islands, working in Queensland sugar-plantations. The word is Hawaaian (Sandwich Islands)." The first use of the word in Hawaii is dated to 1794.
The version in Heart-Songs, "A Yankee Ship, and a Yankee Crew," is implicitly lumped here by Roud. I'm far from sure I agree -- "John Kanaka" is not mentioned, and the chorus form is different -- but I'll file it here to let you think about it. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: FaE050

John Ladner

DESCRIPTION: John Ladner leaves PEI to find work in Saint John. Failing that, he goes to Maine and works six years in Madison. Thanksgiving morning he is crushed by logs he is rolling to a stream to be floated to the mill. Doctors cannot save him. He dies at 23.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi)

KEYWORDS: death lumbering memorial

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Nov 29, 1900 - probable date of the death of John Ladner (see NOTE)

FOUND IN: Canada (Mar)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 40-41, "John Ladner" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 60-61, 248, "John Ladner" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-21FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 13-17, 80, "John Ladner" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi 26, "John Ladner" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST Din040 (Partial)

Roud #4061

CROSS-REFERENCES:

NOTES [81 words]: This song is item dC40 in Laws's Appendix II.
Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland have a report that the grave "is in the Victoria West, P.E.I. Cemetery and it was dated circa 1895."
Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland: "John Ladner, 33, of Victoria West was killed in a logging accident in Madison, Maine, on Thanksgiving Day, November 29, 1900." - BS
Manny and Wilson note a version which dates the accident to 1884. One must suspect confusion
John Lovie

DESCRIPTION: A man loves his maid servant. His mother is opposed. She becomes pregnant. He poisons her. Her mother asks for an examination and the doctors find arsenic. The man is tried but guilt was not proven. "We'll leave him to Heaven's just judgement at last"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan2)
KEYWORDS: homicide trial pregnancy poison mother servant
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan2 206, "John Lovie" (1 text)
Roud #5836
NOTES [131 words]: Greig/Duncan2 quotes an account of the trial from Bruce, The Black Kalendar of Aberdeen (Aberdeen, 1854). Margaret Mackessar died August 14, 1827. John Lovie was tried and a "Not Proven" verdict returned. - BS
Emily Lyle, Fairies and Folk: Approaches to the Scottish Ballad Tradition, Wissenschaftlicher Verlag Trier, 2007, p. 106, comments briefly on two "arsenic ballads" in the Greig/Duncan collection, "John Lovie" and "The Wife o' Gateside." She points out that Scots juries were allowed three verdicts, Guilty, Not Guilty, and Not Proven -- the latter of these allowing the accused to go free but saying that there was a significant probability of guilt. In both cases, apparently, the use of arsenic was demonstrated but it could not be shown who poisoned the dead person. - RBW

John MacAnanty's Courtship (The Fairy King)

DESCRIPTION: The singer sees MacAnanty courting a pretty girl, promising to make her his queen. She says she is too poor, and her parents and friends would be angry. He says they can sail around the world and return in a night, and that he has found no other like her

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1873 (Joyce)
KEYWORDS: love courting magic beauty rejection
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H56, p. 354, "John MacAnanty's Courtship" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6875
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Fairy King's Courtship

File: HHH056

John Malone

DESCRIPTION: "I'm going with Captain Murphy ... There's nothing to be had by us in this neglected Isle ... The Irishman that stays at home must wear the Union brand ... I'm sailing for Columbia's shore; may God send fair the wind ... pray for John Malone"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast)
KEYWORDS: emigration farewell sea ship America patriotic Ireland
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast, p. 81, "John Malone" (1 text)
Roud #20549
File: Ran081
John Marshall

DESCRIPTION: "We're glad to see you, John Marshall, my boy, So fresh from the chisel of Rogers. Go take your stand on the monument there Along with the other old codgers." The singer tells Marshall of all that has gone wrong since his death.

AUTHOR: Innes Randolph?
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: America judge political
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1801-1835 - John Marshall serves as Chief Justice of the United States
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 236, "John Marshall" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7709
NOTES [167 words]: This song came out of the post-Civil War reconstruction of Virginia, when the southern states were still treated as occupied territory. The song portrays a state held in subjection, against what the singer views as the requirements of the constitution.

In defense of the Radical Republicans -- who put Virginia in this suppressed condition -- it should be pointed out that their view was that the Confederate states, by withdrawing from the Union, had committed governmental suicide and had therefore to be recreated.

John Marshall (1755-1835), of Virginia, was not the first Chief Justice of the United States, but he was the first great head of the judiciary. At the very beginning of his term (1803, in the case "Marbury vs. Madison") he established the principle of "judicial review," i.e. that the Supreme Court was the ultimate guardian and interpreter of the Constitution. Although not explicit in the Constitution, this capacity is one of the chief regulators of the U.S. balance of power. - RBW

File: R236

John Martin, The

DESCRIPTION: "Come all ye jolly fishermen a-going to the ice, Beware of the John Martin and don't go in her twice." Skipper Nick Ash is cruel; he throws the singer's teapot overboard and makes the crew work ever harder. They still gather many seal.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Murphy, Songs Sung by Old Time Sealers of Many Years Ago)
KEYWORDS: hunting ship hardtimes work
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, pp. 20-21, "The Song of the John Martin (1)," "The John Martin (2)" (2 texts)
ADDITIONAL: James Murphy, editor, _Songs Sung by Old-Time Sealers of Many Years Ago_, James Murphy Publishing, 1925 (PDF available from Memorial University of Newfoundland website), p. 6, "Song of the 'John Martin'" (1 text)
ST RySm020 (Partial)
Roud #12524

NOTES [277 words]: Doyle, who published this song in his 1927 edition, claims it was written by "in 1845 by Stephen Reardon of Perry's Cove," but the earlier publication by Murphy does not list an author. Doyle also says the John Martin was captained by John Bransfield, who is not mentioned in the song. The sources claim the song was written in the 1840s. I have no information about skipper Nick Ash, but Francis Ash commanded the sealing steamer Lion 1872-1880, then the Bear in 1881-1882 and the Kite in 1886-1888 (Levi George Chafe, Chafe's Sealing Book: A History of the Newfoundland Seafishery from the Earliest Available Records Down To and Including the Voyage of 1923, third edition, Trade Printers and Publishers, Ltd., 1923 (PDF scan available from Memorial University of Newfoundland), p. 87). I would assume he was Nick Ash's son; Newfoundland sealing captains tended toward dynasties.

Shannon Ryan, _The Ice Hunters: A History of Newfoundland Sealing to 1914_, Breakwater Books, 1994, p. 280 n. 193, says that a ship John Martin sailed from Carbonear or Harbour Grace to the seal hunt on several occasions in the 1850s, most often commanded by a Captain Taylor, and notes that (contrary to Doyle), Captain Bransfield commanded several sealing ships in the 1840s, but not the John Martin. On the other hand, this does not preclude the possibility that he commanded the John Martin during the months when she was not sealing. The John Martin was credited with helping rescue the crew of the Mary Francis when she was wrecked in 1849 (Ryan, pp. 293-294).

I have a note, the origin of which I cannot trace, that the John Martin was lost in 1859. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.4

File: RySm020

John McBride's Brigade

DESCRIPTION: "In far-off Africa to-day the English fly dismayed Before the flag of green and gold born by McBride's Brigade." The Irish Brigade fights with Kruger against the English in Transvaal. "Remember '98". The flag will fly with McBride on Ireland's soil.

AUTHOR: (published by Arthur Griffith)

EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (_United Irishman_, April 7 edition)

KEYWORDS: army war Africa Ireland patriotic

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 92, "John McBride's Brigade" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Wearing of the Green (I)" (tune) and references there

NOTES [812 words]: Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion: The _United Irishman_ claimed the ballad "is being sung throughout Mayo" in 1900. "John McBride had become a major in the Boer army after forming an Irish Brigade in South Africa. He stood as a candidate for Mayo in the election of 1900, but was not elected. He was sentenced to death and shot after the rising of 1916."

For more information about McBride's Brigade and the Irish support for the Boers see the book review of MacBride's Brigade by Donald McCracken at the Republican Sinn Fein site. - BS

The reference is evidently to the second Boer War (the 1899-1902 conflict usually think of when one mentions the Boer War). The first war (1880-1881) was almost more of a demonstration, in which the Transvaal and Orange Free State won something approximating what the Irish would have called Home Rule: they ran their internal affairs but let Britain handle foreign policy. The second war was very complicated: The Boers had discovered gold, which the British wanted; on the other hand, the Boers were treating the Black natives even worse than the British. But there was a lot more to it. The Boers of course wanted independence -- and, after the disastrous stunt known as the Jameson Raid (a private attempt in 1895 to control the Boers, but widely viewed as inspired by the British government), Kaiser Wilhelm II sent a telegram of support to Paul Kruger (1825-1904), the most important Boer leader. What should have been a colonial affair became an international incident.

The Boers were initially very successful, forcing the British to bring in a real army to suppress them. Many of these troops, ironically, were Irish; see "South Down Militia" for one of their songs. But, since the Boers were fighting the British, naturally a lot of Irish radicals supported the Boers. It should be noted, however, that the two "Irish Brigades" which fought with the Boers were not from Ireland; they were locals. There was a pro-Boer movement in Ireland, but few men enlisted. One of the Irish Brigades was insignificant; organized by a "Colonel" Lynch, it existed for only a few months, did not fight, and had few even of South African Irishmen (Kee, p. 148.)

The other Irish force was more significant. It even had an Irish-born Irishman: John MacBride (1865-1916). Upon his arrival, he was commissioned major, making him the second-in-command behind "Colonel" John Blake (an American emigrant to Africa who did at least have West Point training; Belfield, p. 23); MacBride did command for a time when Blake was wounded.

Kee, p. 149, notes that MacBride's brigade "played, by comparison with those Irishmen in the British army, a totally insignificant part in the war. It existed only for one year, from September 1899 to September 1900, when it was disbanded by the Boers and the men gave themselves up to the Portuguese frontier post at Kamati."

Townshend, p. 10, observes that the "aid of a few hundred Irish miners was probably less valuable as military than as moral support to the Afrikaners."

MacBride would estimate that his unit suffered 30% casualties -- yet, according to Kee, it lost only about 80 men, of whom 17 were killed. This implies that the "brigade" had an actual strength of 300-350 men, making it not a brigade but an understrength battalion. Presumably it was called a brigade because, well, there were lots of Irish Brigades. At least it makes it less unreasonable to have a major in command.

MacBride continued to find trouble even after coming home. In early 1900, he was nominated for parliament in a South Mayo by-election -- but was crushed by 2401 votes to 427 (Kee, p. 149).

This song may have been written in connection with that election, though it wasn't published until some weeks too late. Kee, who cites it on page 149, isn't clear on whether future Irish president Arthur Griffith -- at that time considered to be a rather militant nationalist, though he would come to be much more conservative -- wrote the piece or just published it.

MacBride in 1903 married the famous nationalist Maud Gonne; their son Sean was a major force in the IRA and in Irish politics after the Civil War.

MacBride did not participate in the planning of the 1916 rebellion (according to Foy/Barton, p. 89, the leaders "did not trust him to keep a secret"), but he joined the fighting "at the last moment" (Golway, p. 240), and was executed on May 5, 1916. It will tell you something about Maud Gonne that she divorced MacBride after their son was born, then adopted his name only after his execution. To be sure, Golway, p. 204, calls him "a boor, often drunk and menacing"; Yeats would call him "a drunken, vainglorious lout" (Foy/Barton, p. 89).

If this song was indeed published in 1900, it was written at a time when the Boers seemed to be well on their way to expelling the British. The tide would soon turn. - RBW

Bibliography

- Belfield: Eversley Belfield, The Boer War, 1975 (I use the 1993 Leo Cooper/Barnes & Noble reprint)
- Foy/Barton: Michael Foy and Brian Barton, The Easter Rising, 1999 (I use the 2000 Sutton edition)
- Golway: Terry Golway, For the Cause of Liberty, Simon & Schuster, 2000
- Kee: Robert Kee, The Bold Fenian Men, being volume II of The Green Flag (covering the period from around 1848 to the Easter Rising), Penguin, 1972

Last updated in version 2.5
File: Zimm092

John McGoldrick and the Quaker's Daughter

DESCRIPTION: John McGoldrick loves a Quaker's daughter. Her father opposes McGoldrick and frames him to hang as a radical. The girl gets the jailer and turnkey drunk. The couple escape and are captured. They are freed on the friendly testimony and marry

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1826 (Sparling)
KEYWORDS: love marriage manhunt prison escape freedom father
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 98, "John McGoldrick and the Quaker's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3047
File: OLoc098

John McKeown and Margaret Deans

DESCRIPTION: "John McKeown and Margaret Deans, they were a matchless pair." As they sneak out, shortly before their wedding, she asks him to pick flowers. He trips and nearly falls off a cliff. She comes to his aid, falls over herself, and dies

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: love courting flowers death
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H129, pp. 141-142, "John McKeown and Margaret Deans" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9447
NOTES [42 words]: This really sounds like it ought to have a moral at the end (though "don't sneak out to pick flowers on a clifftop" sounds a little strong). It's just that sort of banal-tragic song. There is no hint of such a conclusion in the Henry text, though. - RBW

John Mitchel

DESCRIPTION: "I am a true-born Irishman, John Mitchell is my name... I laboured hard both day and night to free my native land." He is taken, claiming he committed no crime except loving Ireland. He is transported to Bermuda, but hopes a free Ireland will remember him

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1848 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)

KEYWORDS: Ireland rebellion punishment transportation

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
May 27, 1848 - John Mitchel is "kidnapped, and carried off from Dublin, in chains, as a convicted 'Felon',." (source: Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion, quoting Jon Mitchel's _Jail Journal_)

FOUND IN: Ireland Canada(Mar) US(MW) Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Galvin-IrishSongsOfResistance, p. 45, "John Mitchel" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H179a, pp. 125-126, "John Mitchel's Farewell to His Countrymen" (1 text, 1 tune); H179b, pp. 126-127, "John Mitchell (b)" (1 text, tune referenced)
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 27, "John Mitchel" (1 text, 1 tune)
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 59, "Mitchel's Address" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 92-93, "John Mitchell" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dean-FlyingCloud, p. 36, "John Mitchell" (1 text)
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 217-220, "John Mitchell (Mitchell's Address)" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #5163

RECORDINGS:
"Pops" Johnny Connors, "John Mitchel" (on IRTravellers01)
The McNulty Family, "John Mitchel" (on IRMcNulty-Night1)
Jim Rice, "John Mitchel" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(2467), "Mitchells Address," E.M.A. Hodges (London), 1846-1854; also Harding B 11(1908), 2806 b.10(55), Harding B 15(205a), "John Mitchell's Address"
LOCSinging, as108900, "Mitchell's Address," Taylor (Bethnal Green), 19C

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Granua's Lament for the Loss of her Blackbird Mitchel the Irish Patriot" (subject: John Mitchel)
cf. "The Wee Duck (The Duck from Drummuck)" (subject: John Mitchel)

NOTES [820 words]: John Mitchel (1815-1875) was one of the leading literary lights of the Young Ireland movement of the early-to-mid nineteenth century -- a movement which at the start was generally peaceful and liberal, but earnest in its appeal for better conditions. Mitchel came to prominence in 1847 when he founded the journal _The United Irishman_. This came in the aftermath of the potato famines. (For the background on the Rebellion and the Blight, see the notes on "Skibbereen.") Until that time, Irish nationalism, led by Daniel O'Connell (for whom see "Daniel O'Connell (I)"), had been relatively cautious and had worked in a constitutional framework. There were disagreements -- the Young Ireland party, which published _The Nation_, was a little more radical than O'Connell. The famines changed that. O'Connell, the pure constitutionalist, was unable to get help from Britain, and then died. Some Irish stayed true to his memory, but the crisis was so severe that many took a harder line. _The Nation_ was one such, but they didn't really have a coherent strategy. That left room for a true radical: Mitchel.

Not only did he found a publication, he also founded United Irish Society. And he used is paper to publish tactical articles on how to fight oppressors. It is interesting to note that many later leaders were inspired by Mitchel, but they viewed him very differently; some regarded him as a peaceful reformer, others as a fighter for Irish rights at any cost. (In the song, he campaigns for "Repeal," i.e. repeal of the Union with Great Britain; this was the slogan of O'Connell, and supporters of Repeal were generally peaceful.) According to Robert Kee ( _The Most Distressful Country_, being Volume I of _The Green Flag_, p. 262), though, even such militants as Meagher (for whom see "The Escape of Meagher") tried to talk him into more peaceful methods.
Kee's comment on the situation (p. 263) seems to me to sum up the disastrous situation pretty well: Young Ireland and Mitchel "can be seen doing the wrong thing when no right thing was discernable. Cautious and sensible as was the main group, audacious as was Mitchel, both were utterly ineffectual. Mitchel was anxious to provoke a climax as quickly as possible. The others... continued to 'bide their time.' What they were really waiting for was a miracle." What they got was a fizzle.

In 1848, almost all of Europe was afire, with revolts in Italy, the Habsburg Empire, France. Few of the revolts were very successful; the Habsburgs, e.g. changed Emperors but not policies, and France got rid of Louis Philippe but soon replaced him with Napoleon III. And, unfortunately for the Irish, Britain was one of the few countries not so afflicted; she had the leisure to crush the abortive rising easily.

Not that it was a serious revolt; a more moderate man, William Smith O'Brien, eventually was pushed to try to raise a mob, but the whole thing ended with a scuffle in a cabbage patch; see the notes to "The Shan Van Voght (1848)."

Mitchel by then was out of circulation. He, Meagher, and Smith O'Brien had all been arrested early in 1848. Meagher and Smith O'Brien were released when the juries in their cases deadlocked (Kee, p. 268). But Mitchel, the most extreme, was convicted May 26 of "treason-felony," and sentenced the next day to fourteen years' transportation.

Despite the song, Mitchel and most of the other leaders of the rebellion ended up in Australia, not Bermuda.

[John Mitchel was indeed exiled to Bermuda in 1848 and subsequently moved to Cape Colony and finally to Van Dieman's Land (source: "John Mitchel of Newry" by John McCullagh (2003) on The Newry Journal site). - BS]

We should note, though, that he suffered far less in Bermuda than most. Although he was taken from Dublin in chains, from the time he went aboard ship he was in "minimum security" -- no shackles, no beating, and, when he arrived in Bermuda, no work ashore; he was allowed to stay aboard the convict hulk. (According to Kee, p. 269, the House of Commons actually inquired into why he was treated so well.)

Ironically, Mitchel was from a Protestant family, as was Smith O'Brien.

Lest someone claim that Mitchel was a man of true liberal principles, it should be noted that, after transportation to Van Dieman's Land, he escaped to the United States, where he edited various journals. And used those journals to advocate slavery -- in fact, according to Allan Nevins, The Emergence of Lincoln: Douglas, Buchanan, and Party Chaos 1857-1859 (Scribner's, 1950), p. 438, Mitchel in fact produced something called the "honest human flesh program," His plan was to re-open the African slave trade, so as to drive the price of slaves so low that everyone could afford one.

Kee, p. 269, also reports that Mitchel approved of flogging prisoners I'd love to hear him explain how he would reconcile that with the Golden Rule -- or even with his own relatively kind treatment.

- RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
File: PGa045

John Morgan

DESCRIPTION: "The Baptists think they're a mighty big bug, But behind the door you'll find a jug. John Morgan! Till I die, I'll feed my niggers on chicken pie!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Randolph)

KEYWORDS: drink humorous

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 432, "John Morgan" (1 fragmentary text, 1 tune)
Roud #7609

File: R432

John Morgan, Where You Been?

DESCRIPTION: "Says I, 'John Morgan, where you been?' (x2) 'Down on the Ohio a-tryin' to swim.' Says I, 'John Morgan, where's your hoss?' Says he, 'I lost it swimmin' across.'"
John o' Arnha's Adventures

DESCRIPTION: John, the singer, compares his honest self to Robin Hood and Rob Roy, who pilfered and destroyed. He describes his daring feats since leaving "the botching trade." "Not only men, but monsters too ... scampered off when I cried 'Boo! I'm John o' Arnha'!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c.1824 (Bowick)

LONG DESCRIPTION: John, the singer, compares his honest self to Robin Hood and Rob Roy, who pilfered and destroyed. He describes his daring feats since leaving "the botching trade" [mending clothes]. He broiled potatoes in Etna's flames, boiled whale blubber in Davis Straits, rode dragons and "chased red meteors round the moon. He slew ten thousand scores of crocodiles and snakes, "held a griffin by the mane, and galloped through the air" Finally he defeated warlocks, witches, ghosts, and "the Kelpie" at "the Pon'age Pool" "Not only men, but monsters too ... scampered off when I cried 'Boo! I'm John o' Arnha'!"

KEYWORDS: bragging fight travel supernatural talltale monster ghost

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1702, "Jock o' Arnha" (1 text fragment, 1 tune fragment)
ADDITIONAL: James Bowick, John Lee, and Others, Montrose Characters: Past and Present (Montrose, 1880 ('Digitized by Google')), pp. 115-117, "John o' Arnha's Adventures" Roud #13522

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Should Auld Acquaintance be Forgot" (tune, per Bowick)

NOTES [450 words]: "John O' Arnha" is a long poem by George Beattie (1786-1823). See George Beattie, John O’ Arna’: A Tale to Which are Added The Murdrit Mynstrell and Other Poems (1857, London, 9th Edition digitized by Google) pp. 7-51. According to Bowick [p. 113] the first version was published in Montrose Review in 1815 and expanded by Beattie after that. "Subsequent to the publication of the poem of "John o' Arnha," the following song - which is a good summary of John's stories -- also appeared in the columns of the [Montrose] Review, and was a long favourite at the convivial companies of the period" (source: Bowick, p. 115). While we don't have an author for the song it was apparently among a collection from the Montrose Review published by the Montrose Review editor, John Bowick, in 1824. Bowick, pp. 113-114: "The hero of the tale was John Finlay, one of the Burgh Officers, who, coming from Arnhall, a locality near Edzell, received the sobriquet of 'John o' Arnha.' John had a wonderful opinion of his own importance, and, when speaking of himself, was in the custom of seriously relating extraordinary tales of his own prowess and hair-breadth escapes in foreign lands, though it was known that he rarely, if ever, crossed the boundaries of Forfarshire. John's eccentricity and unbelievable tales suggested to Mr Beattie the composition of his racy and comical story."
Beattie, in his preface -- pp. xiv-xv -- gives some background information: "The Hero himself is drawn from a living original in this neighborhood, already well known to fame. As to the second personage, the Water Kelpie, whose only ambition is, and has been, for centuries past, to wollow in the Ponage Pool, and take the benighted and well-worn traveller off the hands of the treacherous Spunkie, to plunge him in a watery grave, -- good breeding, or court etiquette, could not be expected to emanet from such a quarter. As to the 'grewsome' appearance of the Ghosts, poor fellows, no blame attaches to them -- it was none of their doings.... the Ponage Pool, on the Northesk ... [is] the well-known rendezvous of the Water Kelpie ... [an object] of terror to the superstitious, and of more than ordinary interest to those who may at times take delight in amusing their minds with the traditioinary legends of this part of the country."

The Greig/Duncan8 four-word fragment - "Brave Jock o' Arnhā!" - compares to the last line of the fourth verse of Bowick. Greig/Duncan's six-note tune fragment are at least close to the last line of the tune of "Should Auld Acquaintance be Forgot."

Greig/Duncan8: "Remembered by Archibald Knowles as a song of his father's and very old. It was a story of impossible feats." - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD81702

John o' Badenyon (II)

DESCRIPTION: "Where now the trees are budding green and flowers bloom on the lea" the singer used to meet her false lover and later met John o' Badenyon. John taught her to sing "to soothe my heart" and play the pipe he gave her before he died. She often returns.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan4)

KEYWORDS: love bequest rejection death music

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Greig/Duncan4 763a, "John o' Badenyon" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Robert Ford, editor, Vagabond Songs and Ballads of Scotland [first series] (Paisley,1899), pp. 52-54, "John o' Badenyon"

Roud #13169

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "John of Badenyon (I)" (theme) and notes there

NOTES [75 words]: In his 1899 edition Ford includes both "John o' Badenyon (I)" and "John o' Badenyon (II)." Ford writes, "Whether [these verses] are older or later than Skinner's time, no one living may be able to tell." Skinner is the author of "John o' Badenyon" (I) in which the singer "tuned his pipe to John o' Badenyon" after having left a girl "cold as stone," and, again, after disappointments in politics, philosophy, and vain "hope for happiness below." - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD4763A

John o' Badenyon (III)

DESCRIPTION: "... frae an honest canty sang by canty honest John We've named this handsome residence the town o' Badenyon." Here, "nane are better served than he wha serves himsel'". For example, the best gown is one you spin yourself.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan4)

KEYWORDS: nonballad clothes

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Greig/Duncan4 763b, "John o' Badenyon" (1 text)

Roud #2592

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "John of Badenyon (I)" (theme) and notes there

NOTES [53 words]: This song counts on the hearer's knowledge of either "John of Badenyon (I)" or "John o' Badenyon" (II) to draw the moral. Ford, referring to the first song says "what suits best with the moral of the song is a simple, solitary amusement, such as playing a tune on the pipes, which John O'Neil

DESCRIPTION: April 15, 1904, John O'Neil and John Butler "left their homes a-shooting for to go," They don't return and there is a search. Their dogs and guns are found. "The dreadful truth was known they're in the ocean drowned" "God's ways they are mysterious"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA-Leach)
KEYWORDS: death drowning hunting sea family youth dog
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
Roud #30134
RECORDINGS:
Mrs. Coombs, "John O'Neil" (on MUNFLA-Leach)
File: ML3Jo0Ne

John of Badenyon (I)

DESCRIPTION: "When first I came to be a man, of twenty years or so, I thought myself a handsome youth, and fain the world would know." The young man wanders, meeting girls and getting in trouble; after each disappointment, he "tuned my pipe to John o' Badenyon"

AUTHOR: John Skinner (1721-1807)
EARLIEST DATE: 1806 (Scots Musical Museum)
KEYWORDS: rambling youth courting hardtimes
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 51-55, "John o' Badenyon" (1 text, 1 tune)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, pp. 75-76, "John o' Badenyon" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: John Skinner, Songs and Poems (Peterhead, 1859), pp. 63-66, "John o' Badenyon"
Roud #2592
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Thomas Nicholson" (theme) and references there
cf. "John o' Badenyon" (II) (theme) and notes there
ALTERNATE TITLES:
John o Badenyond
NOTES [95 words]: Ford is unable to explain "John of Badenyon," suggesting such possibilities as a mournful tune or a relative of the author. Personally, I suspect a figure of folklore who had a sad and difficult life.

John Wilkes (1725-1797) and John Horne Tooke (1736-1812), whom the singer professes to have followed, were radicals who fought for liberal causes. Both were arrested and imprisoned at one time or another, as were some of their followers. Wilkes was, in fact, elected to Parliament from Middlesex (producing the slogan "Wilkes and Liberty") but barred from serving. - RBW

John of Hazelgreen [Child 293]

DESCRIPTION: A lady is weeping for John of Hazelgreen, whom she is not permitted to marry. She is offered marriage to another; this is little to her liking. By some means or other she meets Hazelgreen, and they are married

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1827 (Kinloch)
KEYWORDS: elopement love marriage separation
FOUND IN: Britain(England,Scotland(Aber,Bord)) US(MW,NE,SE,So) Canada(Mar,Newf)
REFERENCES (24 citations):
Child 293, "John of Hazelgreen" (5 texts)
Bronson 293, "John of Hazelgreen" (29 versions)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 293, "John of Hazelgreen" (3 versions: #1, #12, #16)
Chambers-ScottishBallads, pp. 284-287, "Jock of Hazelgreen" (1 text)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, p. 22, "Jock o' Hazeldean" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan5 1029, "Jock o' Hazel Green" (3 fragments, two of them on p. 624)
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 117, "Johnie of Hazelgreen" (1 text)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 43, "John of Hazelgreen" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #5a}
Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-BritishBalladsFromMaine pp. 369-371, "Willie of Hazel Green" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #27}
Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland, pp. 237-238, "Young Johnny of Hazelgreen" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #25}
Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland4, pp. 281-284, "John of Hazelgreen" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #25}
Davis-TraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 49, "John of Hazelgreen" (7 texts plus 2 fragments; the J text appears to have print influence; 3 tunes entitled "John o' the Hazelgreen," "John of Hazelgreen"; 1 more version mentioned in Appendix A) {Bronson's #3, #26, #2}
Davis-MoreTraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 45, pp. 350-355, "John of Hazelgreen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 333, "Jock O' Hazeldean" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #176, "John of Hazelgreen" (1 fragment, which is properly "Jock o' Hazeldean")
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 58A, "Jock o' Hazeldean"; 58B, "John of Hazelgreen" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. 225-227, "John of Hazelgreen" (2 short texts, with local titles "John over the Hazel Green"; 2 tunes on pp. 415-416) {Bronson's #8, #7}
Peacock, pp. 537-538, "Johnny from Hazelgreen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 674-678, "John of Hazelgreen" (3 texts)
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 143, "John of Hazelgreen" (1 text)
McNeil-SouthernFolkBalladsVol1, pp. 91-92, "John of Hazelgreen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Niles-BalladBookOfJohnJacobNiles 63, "John of Hazelgreen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abrahams/Foss-AngloAmericanFolksongStyle, pp. 95-96, "John of Hazelgreen" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #9}
DT 293, JOCKHZLD* JOCKHZL2*
Roud #250
RECORDINGS:
Henry Burr, "Jock o' Hazeldean" (Victor 5519, 1908; Victor 16220, 1909; Victor 16041, 1916)
BROADSIDES:
Firth b.26(534), "Hazel Green" ("As I walked one evening all for to take the air"), Webb and Millington (Leeds), n.d.
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Nancy Dawson" (plot)
cf. "Lady Jean" (plot)
cf. "Parody on Jock o' Hazeldean" (parody)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Jock o Hazeldean
John over the Hazel Green
Jock o Hazledean
NOTES [166 words]: Rewritten by Sir Walter Scott as "Jock o' Hazeldean" -- a poem which has become perhaps more popular than the original ballad, and which is included in many poetic works (e.g. it is item CCXXVII in Palgrave's Golden Treasury). Scholars since Child have debated the extent to which the Scott text (said to take only a single stanza from the traditional song) is influenced or has influenced tradition. One thing appears certain: The Scott text and some of the traditional versions are related (e.g. Davis's "J" is about 85% identical to the corresponding stanzas of Scott's text). Either the Scott text used more than the single stanza claimed, or his text has influenced tradition. - RBW
Broadside Bodleian Firth b.26(534) is a shortened version of the story. There are broadsides of Scott's text. For example, Bodleian, Johnson Ballads fol. 30, "Jock o' Hazel Dean" ("Why weep ye by the tide lady?") , J. Catnach (London), 1813-1838; also Harding B 26(290), 2806 c.14(45), "Jock o' Hazel Dean"n. - BS
John on the Island, I Hear Him Groan

DESCRIPTION: "John on the island, I hear him groan." John says, "Eli, I can't stand. Eli ee ee ay Lord." "John went to heaven and I am glad"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands)

KEYWORDS: ordeal Bible nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands 11, pp. 74-79, "Eli Ah Can't Stan'" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:

Lawrence McKiver and the McIntosh County Shouters, "John on the Island, I Hear Him Groan" (on McIntosh1)

Willis Proctor and the Georgia Sea Island Singers, "Eli, You Can't Stand" (on LomaxCD1712, recorded 1959)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Oh, They Put John on the Island" (theme) and references there

NOTES [72 words]: There are no details about John's tribulations on the island of Patmos at Revelation 1:9, or elsewhere, in the Bible. What stories about that were current in the Sea Islands?

- BS

Nonetheless John was in exile. The usual legend is that he had been working in Ephesus and was forced to go to Patmos because of the persecution of Domitian. So he need not have been suffering torture; he might simply have been lonely or homesick. - RBW

John Prott and His Man (I)

DESCRIPTION: John Prott and his man go to the market. John buys and sells until he comes to his last coin. "If ye be an honest man, Stan' to that"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1886 (Gregor)

KEYWORDS: commerce money nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #21, p. 3, ("John Prott and his man") (1 text)

Greig/Duncan8 1639, "John Prott" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Walter Gregor, "Children's Amusements" in The Folk-Lore Journal, Vol. IV, No. 2 (1886 (available online by JSTOR Public Library Collection)), #3 pp. 140-142 "John Prott and his Man" (10 texts)

Roud #13065

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "John Prott Your Wedders is Fat" (character?)

cf. "John Prott and His Man (II)" (character?)

John Prott and His Man (II)

DESCRIPTION: "John Prott and his man Streve aboot the parritch pan; Ere the parritch pan was gotten Johnnie Callum's heid was broken"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)

KEYWORDS: violence nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #23, p. 2, ("John Pratt and his man") (1 short
John Prott Your Wedders is Fat

DESCRIPTION: "John Prott, your wedders is fat, And we hae you to thank for that; For their heads and their horns Ye'll get them doon amo' the thorns; And for the 'oo that wis on their skin, We gae't oor wives to spin"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)
KEYWORDS: farming nonballad sheep
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #23, p. 2, ("John Prott, your wedders is fat") (1 short text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "John Proott and His Man (I)" (character?)
cf. "John Prott and His Man (II)" (character?)
NOTES [9 words]: The current description is all of the Greig text. - BS
Last updated in version 5.0
File: Grg023b

John Reilly (II)

DESCRIPTION: "John Reilly's always dry." His mother warned him that "all the other Reilly boys Had died of whisky drouth" so now he spends his money on Bass's ale "by the pail" and Dublin stout, whisky, gin and wine. As soon as he wakes "he slips out for a bucket."
AUTHOR: (based on a song by Edward Harrigan, but heavily rewritten)
EARLIEST DATE: 1881 (The Mulligan Guards' Nominee)
KEYWORDS: warning drink wine humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen, pp. 102-103, 153, "John Reilly" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #21750
NOTES [285 words]: For background on Harrigan and Braham, see the notes to "The Babies on Our Block."
According to Franceschina, p. 134, "The Mulligan Guards' Silver Wedding" opened on February 21, 1881. It was the eighth and last in the saga of Mulligan Guard plays. Cordelia Mulligan, wife of series hero Dan Mulligan, rents out apartments to a wide, and wild, variety of tenants. I don't really understand Franceschina's plot summaries, but it features one of the most beloved of the Mulligan scenes, in which Cordelia Mulligan, about to celebrate twenty-five years of marriage to Dan, instead discovers what she thinks is a love letter to him, and prepares a melodramatic suicide by drinking rat poison. Or, at least, she thinks it's rat poison, but is actually strong brandy that Dan has relabeled to keep people from drinking it. So Cordelia sobs out her will while getting drunker. It was a favorite scene of all Harrigan's dramas -- although Harrigan got the bones of it from Annie Yeamans, who played Cordelia (Moody, pp. 104-106).
The gimmick also occurs in "Cordelia's Aspirations"; see the notes to "My Dad's Dinner Pail."
The song "John Riley's Always Dry" is sung by Dan Mulligan, and is "a bright drinking song -- part stately gavotte, part Irish jig -- trading on easily digestible ascending scales" (Franceschina, p. 135).
Harrigan was fond of the stereotype of the heavy-drinking Irishman; in the play "Reilly and the Four Hundred," a character named McGuinness drinks so much that, "when he turns on the gas, he is blown back out of town" (Williams, p. 150). This might be based on Harrigan's own experience; in his early years, he had toured with several performers who were excessively fond of the bottle. - RBW

Bibliography

- Williams: William H. A. Williams, 'Twas Only an Irishman's Dream, University of Illinois Press, 1996

Last updated in version 5.2
File: McSc102

John Robertson

DESCRIPTION: When Joe comes to the camp to seek work to help his sick mother, John Robertson trains the boy to be a talented lumberjack. But one day Joe chops a tree with a bad core; Robertson is mortally hurt saving Joe.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks)

LONG DESCRIPTION: John Robertson is an experienced lumberjack. When a greenhorn comes to camp, seeking work to help his sick mother, Robertson persuades the foreman to take him on, then takes the greenhorn under his wing. The young man, Joe, becomes a talented lumberjack, but one day he chops a tree with a rotten core. The tree falls on him; Robertson pushes him out of the way, but is fatally injured. Dying, he tells Joe that he's "glad 'twas me, not you" because of the sick mother (who recovers)

KEYWORDS: lumbering logger work friend family mother death dying disease apprentice

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 57, "John Robertson" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, pp. 168-172, "John Robertson" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 72, "John Robertson" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lewis-FavoriteMichiganFolkSongs, p. 13, "John Robertson" (1 text, 1 tune, probably shortened to eliminate the unhappy ending)

Roud #4062

NOTES [8 words]: This song is item dC41 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2
File: Be057

John Saw the Holy Number

DESCRIPTION: "John saw the holy number, Sitting on the golden altar." "Fishman Peter, fish no more, fish no more, fish no more, Fishman Peter, fish no more, Sitting on the golden altar." "Weeping Mary, weep no more...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)

KEYWORDS: Bible religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 538, "John Saw the Holy Number" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 538, "John Saw the Holy Number" (notes only)
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, pp. 16-17, "John, John, of the Holy Order" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune); p. 77, "The Golden Altar" (1 text, tune)
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 63, "John Saw" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 196 in the 1874 edition)
Roud #11843
CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "John Done Saw that Number" (floating lyrics)
NOTES [153 words]: The notes in Brown explain, "The chorus apparently refers to John 7:4: 'And I heard the number of them that were sealed; and there were sealed an hundred and forty and four thousand."
This is a mess. First, this isn't John 7:4; it's Revelation 7:4. And there is no hint that they were sitting on a golden altar -- though in 8:3 they apparently worship before it. But in that case, the holy number is probably seven for the seven angels. Or so it appears to me.
Of course, the whole thing may be moot; the first Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates text, which is probably the oldest, of course makes it a Holy ORDER, and John a member, and that makes perfect sense. But note that Brown's text and Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates's "Golden Altar" version both make it a "Holy Number."
It may appear, from the title line, that this is the same as "John Done Saw that Number," but the form is distinct. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Br3538

John Singleton [Laws C15]
DESCRIPTION: Singleton, chief sawyer in a lumber mill, is killed by the sawmill's machinery. His body is sent home to be buried.
AUTHOR: John Morrison?
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks)
KEYWORDS: logger death technology lumbering
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
  Laws C15, "John Singleton"
  Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 62, "John Singleton" (1 text)
  Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 73, "John Singgleton" (1 text)
  DT 837, JONSINGL
Roud #2223
NOTES [62 words]: Laws quotes Beck to the effect that the song was by "John Morrison," but Paul Stamler observes that Beck spells the name "Morison." Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps, however, spells it "Morrison." Chances are that Dave D. Smith, who made the attribution, did not spell out the name, and Back and Laws used different spellings. Either that, or it's a typo in Beck's 1941 book. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: LC15

John Smith A. B.
DESCRIPTION: "When the southern gale is blowing hard, And the watch are all on the topsail yard, When five come down where six went up," John Smith is missing, "drowned in latitude fifty-three." "They steal his rags and his bags and bed" as they try to reach home
AUTHOR: Words: D. H. Rogers? (source: Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry) EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Sydney Bulletin, according to Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry); supposedly field collected 1969
KEYWORDS: sailor death storm
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 12, "John Smith A. B." (1 text, 1 modern tune) (p. 6 in the 1972 edition) Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, pp. 44-45, "(John Smith A. B." (1 partial text)
RECORDINGS:
  Neal Conquhoun, "John Smith A. B." (on NZSongYngCntry)
File: Colq006
John Smith My Fellow Fine

DESCRIPTION: "John Smith, fellow fine, Can you shoe this horse of mine? Ay, sir, and that I can, As well as any man. There's a nail upon the tae, To make the pony climb the brae; There's a nail upon the heel... There's a horsie well shod."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Greig/Duncan8); c. 1843 (Only True Mother Goose Melodies, according to the Opies)
KEYWORDS: horse nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (5 citations):
  Greig/Duncan8 1965, "John Smith" (2 texts)
  Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #121, p. 2, ("John Smith, a fallow fine") (1 text)
  Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 445, "Robert Barnes Fellow Fine" (1 text)
  Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose, p. 33, note 31, "(Robert Barnes Fellow Fine)"
  Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 26, "(John Smith, fellow fine)" (1 text)
Roud #12964
File: SNR026

John Styles and Susan Cutter

DESCRIPTION: John and Susan are popping corn. At last "said she, 'John Styles, it's three o'clock, I'm dying of digestion; Instead of always popping that old corn, Why don't you pop the question?"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1982
KEYWORDS: humorous food courting
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 155, "John Styles and Susan Cutter" (1 text+additional composed verses; tune referenced)
ST FSC155 (Partial)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Old Gray Goose (Lookit Yonder)" (tune)
NOTES [27 words]: Cazden et al note that this piece is sung to the tune of "The Old Gray Goose (Lookit Yonder)," and was sung continuously with it; the two might form one ballad. - RBW
File: FSC155

John Sullivan (The Moncton Tragedy)

DESCRIPTION: Sullivan kills a widow and her son, takes her cash, and sets the house afire. A daughter survives and blames Sullivan. He flees to Calais, is caught, brought back, tried, convicted and condemned to hang on Friday, March 12.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi)
KEYWORDS: execution homicide robbery trial gallows-confession
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 57-58, "John Sullivan" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi 35, "The Moncton Tragedy" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST Dib057 (Partial)
Roud #9267
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Sullivan Murder
The Meadow Brook Tragedy
The Dutcher Murder
NOTES [47 words]: Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi: "This sordid crime took place in mid-September, 1896, at Meadow Brook, eight miles from Moncton, New Brunswick."
Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi note to "The Moncton Tragedy" has more details about the murder and trial, including further references. - BS
John T. Scopes Trial, The

DESCRIPTION: "All the folks in Tennessee are faithful as can be, And they know the Bible teaches what is right," and they gloat over Mr. Scopes, "who found only grief." The conclusion: "The old religion's better after all."

AUTHOR: Carson J. Robison

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (recording, Vernon Dalhart)

KEYWORDS: religious trial punishment

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1925 - The Scopes Trial. Rather than get inflammatory, I'll let you look this one up on your own.

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol1, pp. 70-71, "The Scopes Trial" (1 short text, in which "Scopes" becomes "Cope"; 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 278-279, "The John T. Scopes Trial" (1 text)

Roud #7126

RECORDINGS:
Vernon Dalhart, "The John T. Scopes Trial" (Columbia 15037-D, rec. Jul 10, 1925)
Charlie Oaks, "The John T. Scopes Trial" (Vocalion 15094)

NOTES [50 words]: It's times like this we need keyword "illogic" and "pandering." Cohen notes the interesting fact that Carson J. Robison wrote this and Vernon Dalhart recorded it BEFORE the trial ended!
In a fascinating footnote, the "B" side of the Charlie Oaks recording was "The Death of William Jennings Bryan." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.1

File: CAFS1278

John T. Williams

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you jolly soldiers, I'll sing to you a song... Concerning my troubles... And how I got around them," "With a bottle of good whiskey I put the guard to sleep." The escaped rebel flees south, apparently making it back to Confederate lines

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)

KEYWORDS: prisoner escape Civilwar

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 74-78, (no title) (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
cf. "James MacDonald" [Laws P38]

NOTES [52 words]: Though perhaps based on a historical incident, this of course is built around older materials. Thomas's informant, "Rebel Jack," claimed John T. Williams was his captain, but while he offered many details about Confederate army life, I failed to notice any documentation of the regiment in which Jack served. - RBW

File: ThBa074

John Tamson

DESCRIPTION: One night John Tamson "had an amour wi' Boatie Jamie's servant lass which raised an unco clamour." "Johnnie's deeds are ill, he likes but little licht"; that's why he courts at night.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan4)

KEYWORDS: courting nightvisit rake servant

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
John the Revelator

DESCRIPTION: "My Lord called John while he was a-writing... Oh, John, John" "Who's that writing? John the Revelator." The song describes what and how John wrote: The book of "Revelations," "The book of Seven Seals," etc.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (recording, Blind Willie Johnson)

KEYWORDS: Bible religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(So,SE)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
- Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 22-23, "John Was A-Writin'" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 252, "John the Revelator" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Dunson/Raim/Asch-AnthologyOfAmericanFolkMusic, p. 72, "John the Revelator" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, p. 66, "(John the Revelator)" (partial text)

ADDITIONAL: Harold Courlander, _A Treasury of Afro-American Folklore_, Crown Publishers, 1976, pp. 331-332, "(John the Revelator)" (1 text)

RECORDINGS:
- Belleville A Cappella Choir, "John the Revelator" (on LomaxCD1708)
- Golden Gate Jubilee Quartet, "John, the Revelator" (Bluebird B-7631, 1938; Montgomery Ward M-7912, 1939; Victor 20-2073, 1946; rec. 1938)
- Blind Willie Johnson, "John the Revelator" (Columbia 14530D, 1930; on AAFM2, BWJ03)
- Spiritual Four Quartet, "John the Revelator" (AFS 5160 B1, 5163 A1, 1941; on in AMMEM/FortValley)
- Trumpeteers, "John de Revelator" (Score 5012, n.d.)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Adam in the Garden Pinning Leaves" (theme)
- cf. "It's Getting Late in the Evening" (theme)

NOTES [333 words]: For the record, it is the "Book of Revelation," or properly the "Revelation to John" (Greek π, Apokalypsis Ioannou), not the "Book of Revelations."

The book does not say which John wrote it. Tradition has it that John the Apostle wrote the Apocalypse. However, it is patently obvious that the same man cannot have written on the one hand the Gospel and Letters of John and on the other the Apocalypse. The Gospel is in simple but clear and even, in a way, highly stylized Greek, easy to translate. The Apocalypse is in poor Greek, by someone whose native language was pretty definitely Aramaic -- but it clearly uses all the big words it can muster.

Of course, there is no direct evidence that the Apostle John wrote either the Gospel or the Letters of John. So it's possible that he wrote the Apocalypse.

In recent decades, J. Massyngberde Ford, _Revelation_, being volume 38 of the Anchor Bible, Doubleday, 1975, pp. 26-33, 55, etc.) has suggested that the Apocalypse is in fact a Jewish production with a few Christian additions, consisting of the first three chapters, a few verses at the end, and one or two internal assertions. In this case, he suggests that the work was by, or from the school of, John the Baptist. His case that the Apocalypse is a non-Christian work, while not absolutely decisive, is very strong (there are very few explicitly Christian references in chapters 4-21 of the Apocalypse). I'm less convinced that we can really attribute it to John the Baptist.

Of course, that cannot have been known to the author of this song. On the evidence, he did not even know the widespread Christian tradition that John dictated the gospel to Prochorus (known in the Bible only from Acts 6:5, but there is a biography of John, written in the fifth century according to the Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible, which claims to be by Prochorus, and very many Byzantine copies of the Gospel contain illustrations showing John the Apostle dictating to Prochorus). - RBW

_Last updated in version 5.0_
John Thomson and the Turk [Child 266]

DESCRIPTION: John Thomson is fighting the Turks when his wife appears. She then sets off and willingly joins the household of Violentrie. When Thomson learns she is missing, he finds her in the Turk's home. He attacks the Turk, burns his castle, and hangs his wife.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1801

KEYWORDS: love separation war fight foreigner punishment disguise trick

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) US(NE)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Child 266, "John Thomson and the Turk" (2 texts)
Bronson 266, "John Thomson and the Turk" (1 version)
Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland, pp. 91-95, "The Trooper and the Turk" (1 text)
Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland4, pp. 45-49, "John Thomson and the Turk" (1 text)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 149-151, "John Thomson and the Turk" (1 text)
DT 266, TROOPTRK

Roud #110

NOTES [39 words]: According to Mary Ellen Brown, Child's Unfinished Masterpiece: The English and Scottish Popular Ballads, University of Illinois Press, 2011, p. 137, Child once referred to this as "an extremely curious (though very bad) ballad. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.2

File: C266

John Whipple's Mill

DESCRIPTION: The singer, goes to work in (John Whipple's) mill and finds himself in a race. He vows to "keep up if I did myself kill." After work, he goes out, fills his pipe, and relaxes. (Probably there is more of a story here, but it has been lost)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1958

KEYWORDS: work contest

FOUND IN: US(MA) Canada(Ont)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 171, "John Whipple's Mill" (4 fragments, 1 tune)
Fowke-LumberingSongsFromTheNorthernWoods #50, "Shanelly's Mill" (1 text, tune referenced)
Ives-FolksongsFromMaine 4, "John Thompson's Hill" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST FSC171 (Partial)

Roud #3675

ALTERNATE TITLES:
John Harper's Hill
Trickeyside Hill

NOTES [39 words]: Roud equates this song with item dC54, "Shanel's Mill," in Laws's Appendix II. But he does not cite the one reference in Laws (NYFQ 11); I cannot verify the connection. Fowke, however, accepts the equation, so here we lump them. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.6

File: FSC171

John Yetman

DESCRIPTION: "... a hero brave from St. Mary's Bay, John Yetman was his name" who spent many years fishing alone in his dory. A Yankee captain shoots Yetman but is taken by Newfoundlanders, tried, convicted and sentenced to 15 years at hard labor.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports; J)MUNFLA/Leach)

KEYWORDS: homicide trial punishment fishing sea ship memorial

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Doyle-OldTimeSongsAndPoetryOfNewfoundland, "John Yetman" (1 text, 1 tune): p. 34 in the 3rd
John, Come Kiss Me Now

DESCRIPTION: "John, come kiss me now (x3) And make no more ado." Alternate form: "John, come kis me now, now, now, O John come kiss me now! John come kiss me by and bye, And make nae mair ado."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: tune said to date to 1609 (Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic)

KEYWORDS: courting nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic I, pp. 268-269, "John, Come Kiss Me Now" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
- DT, JOHNKISS* (the Burns version)

Roud #5521

NOTES [148 words]: Roud links this with Randolph's "Come and Kiss Me, Robin." Possible, but I need a lot more evidence. Which may be hard to come by. Chappell/Woodridge states that only the first stanza survived. This is probably because it was indelicate. Burns had two additional stanzas, but how much of that is Burns and how much is traditional I do not know. Although the song has survived poorly (apart from the Burns version, the only references seem to be in Herd and Chappell), it was apparently popular in its time. According to Edward J. Cowan, "Calvinism and the Survival of Folk," printed in Cowan: Edward J. Cowan, editor, The People's Past: Scottish Folk, Scottish History 1980 (I use the 1993 Polygon paperback edition), p. 37, this was transformed into a "godly" version which began:

The Lord thy God, I am,
That John dois (sic.) thee call,
Johne representit man
Be grace celestiall. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.5

File: ChW2269

---

John, John

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Talk about John but you will see John, Aye John (x2)." Verses: "When I get to Heaven going to walk around, Angel in Heaven can't order me down." "When I get to Heaven going to sit and tell Argue with the Father and chatter with the Son"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands)

KEYWORDS: floatingverses nonballad religious Jesus

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands 31, pp. 145-147, "John, John" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [119 words]: The current description is based on the Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands text. In Parrish's text each verse line is followed by "Aye John."

Parrish's "Argue with the Father and chatter with the Son" is in Odum's "Dar's No One Lak' Jesus" (Howard W. Odum, Religious Folk-Songs of the Southern Negroes, (reprint from American Journal of Religious Psychology and Education, July 1909, Vol.3 pp. 265-365 "Digitized by Internet Archive")), pp. 60-61), Redfearn's "Better Live Humble," and Barton's "I'll Be There" (Barton-OldPlantationHymns, p. 19). Barton writes, '"Argue,' as here employed, does not mean dispute, but only to converse learnedly; and 'chatter' does not imply frivolity, but only familiarity." - BS

John, John Crow

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1945 (Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips)

KEYWORDS: shanty worksong courting

FOUND IN: US West Indies (Barbados)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 199-200, "John, John Crow" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [18 words]: Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips's brief notes say this is a Barbadian negro shanty for unloading cargo. - SL

John, John, the Water Man

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "John, John, de water man, The fire man below, boy" repeated. The shantyman sings "I went down to Gila Point To hear master Sheila blow." "Break oar, break oar, Me master can' buy more."

AUTHOR: unknown

KEYWORDS: work sea shanty

FOUND IN: West Indies (Nevis)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Abrahams-DeepTheWaterShallowTheShore, pp. 49-50, "John, John, the Water Man" (1 text, 1 tune)

Johnie Armstrong [Child 169]

DESCRIPTION: Johnie Armstrong "had nither lands nor rents," but "kept eight score men in his hall" by raiding. The king summons Armstrong to court. Armstrong comes; the king orders his execution. Armstrong instead dies fighting. His young son vows revenge

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1658; a song with this name was in William Thackeray's broadside catalog by 1690

KEYWORDS: outlaw royalty punishment execution battle death

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1530 - James V of Scotland puts down the Armstrongs

FOUND IN: Britain (England, Scotland (Aber, Hebr))

REFERENCES (18 citations):
Child 169, "Johnie Armstrong" (3 texts, 2 tunes) {Bronson's #6, #7}
Bronson 169, "Johnie Armstrong" (10 versions)

 Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 169, "Johnie Armstrong" (2 versions: #3, #7)
Chambers-ScottishBallads, pp. 31-36, "Johnie Armstrang" (1 text)
Ritson-AncientSongsBalladsFromHenrySecondToTheRevolution, pp. 331-334, "John Armstrong’s Last Good-night" (1 text)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 475-477, "Johnie Armstrong" (1 text)
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 240, "Johnie Armstrong" (2 texts)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 89, "Johnie Armstrong" (1 text)
Gummere-OldEnglishBallads, pp. 127-129+329, "Johnie Armstrong" (1 text)
Hodgart-FaberBookOfBallads, p. 106, "Johnie Armstrong" (1 text)
Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland3, pp. 153-158, "Johnie Armstrong" (1 text, from "The Charms of Melody" rather than tradition)
Whiting-TraditionalBritishBallads 22, "Johnie Armstrong" (1 text)
HarvardClassics-EnglishPoetryChaucerToGray, pp. 101-103, "Johnie Armstrong" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN1503, "Is there never a man in all Scotland"
DT 169, JARMSTR1 JARMSTR2
ADDITIONAL: Michael Brander, _Scottish and Border Battles and Ballads_, 1975 (page references to the 1993 Barnes & Noble edition), pp. 74-78 "Johnnie Armstrong" (1 text, 1 tune) {the text is Child's C, which goes with Bronson's #3, but the tune looks more like Bronson's #2}
Roud #76
BROADSIDES:
NLScotland, S.302.b.2(064), "John Armstrong's Last Farewell," unknown, after 1700
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Parting Glass" (lyrics)
SAME TUNE:
Fare Thou Well Bonny Gilt Knock Hall (per broadside NLScotland, S.302.b.2(064))
NOTES [168 words]: Several English texts claim that Armstrong lived in Westmoreland, and raided the Scots. This is, of course, not true; he was a Scot. But neither side had much use for such an outlaw.
Izaak Walton's _Compeat Angler_ refers to this tune (Chapter II), although in a strange list mixing folk songs ("Johnny Armstrong," "Chevy Chase") and art songs ("As at Noon Dulcina Rested," "Phyllida Flouts Me"). According Chambers, p. 181, the _Complaynt of Scotland_ mentions a "Ihonne ermalstrangis dance," which might well refer to the same Johnie Armstrong but probably is not the same song. For the _Complaynt of Scotland_ citation, Complaynt, p. lxxxix.
Rollins, p. 113, has two seventeenth century citations, the first of which might be and the second of which almost certainly is this: #1300, "John Armstronngs last good night, &c.," March 26, 1658, Francis Grove; and #1301, "John Armsestrongs last good night," March 1, 1675, no printer listed, but linked to this song because it's in Roxburghe Ballads VI, 604. - RBW
Bibliography

- Complaynt: James A. H. Murray, editor, _The Complaynt of Scotland_, volume I (Introduction plus Chapters I-XIII), Early English Text Society, 1872 (I use the 1906 reprint; the Complaynt was published in 1549)
- Rollins: Hyder E. Rollins, _An Analytical Index to the Ballad-Entries (1557-1709)_ In the Register of the Company of Stationers of London, 1924 (I use the 1967 Tradition Press reprint with a new Foreword by Leslie Shepard)

Last updated in version 5.3
File: C169

Johnie Cock [Child 114]

DESCRIPTION: Johnie, despite his mother's advice, goes out to hunt the king's deer. He brings the deer down, but is betrayed by a passer-by. Seven foresters attack him; he kills all but one (and wounds that one), but is himself mortally wounded

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1780 (Percy)

KEYWORDS: hunting fight death

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North),Scotland(Aber,Bord,High)) US(MA,SE,So) Ireland Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (27 citations):
- Child 114, "Johnie Cock" (13 texts, 1 tune) {Bronson's #4}
- Bronson 114, "Johnie Cock" (16 versions)
- Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 114, "Johnie Cock" (4 versions: #1, #3a, #4, #9)
- Chambers-ScottishBallads, pp. 161-166, "Johnie of Braidislee" (1 text)
- Dixon-ScottishTraditionalVersionsOfAncientBallads XVI, pp. 77-81, "Johnnie o'Cocklesmuir" (1
NOTES [730 words]: The motif of one man fighting and defeating seven adversaries is almost a commonplace (see "Earl Brand," Child #7, and "Erlinton," Child #8, as examples). But this one has an interesting parallel to the French Song of Roland (especially in Motherwell's long text, Child's F): Like Roland, Johnie sets out freely, despite cautions; like Roland, he is defeated and mortally wounded but defeats his attackers, whose few survivors flee; like Roland, he sends a message of his need only when it is too late; like Roland, he is given great honor after his death.

I do not mean to imply literary dependence; I doubt there is any. The actual plots are extremely different. But there is that same feeling: Just as Roland, even when he does something really stupid, is so heroic about it that his enemies cannot touch him (Roland's actual cause of death was blowing his horn so hard that he bursts several blood vessels), so too Johnny -- the poacher -- goes out against his mother's warning and fights off a vastly superior enemy, leaving all dead, wounded, or in flight. But he dies because he has fought too hard.

The flip side is, Johnny -- assuming he hunted in a royal forest, which is the obvious assumption here -- violates no fewer than three major provisions of the forest laws. (For this information, I am working from Charles R. Young, The Royal Forests of Medieval England, University of Pennsylvania Press, 1979):

1. He hunted the "dun deer." Forest law protected the red deer, fallow deer, roe deer, and boar (Young, p. 4).
2. He carried a bow in the forest, The use of bow and arrows was banned in the forest (Young, p. 28).
3. He hunted with dogs. Dogs were allowed in the forest only if they were "lawed" -- that is, had their foretoes clipped, which made it impossible for them to hunt deer (Young, p. 41).

Although Young does not cite an instance exactly parallel to this song, it is generally believable; according to Young, p. 81, "The routine work of protecting the forest and dealing with violators fell to these foresters, and the job could be dangerous when the violator of the forest law was an illegal hunter armed with bow and arrows for taking venison. Foresters were sometimes killed or wounded under these circumstances while attempting to make arrests."

What is more, after 1293 foresters were entitled to use deadly force against those put up armed resistance too them, and were not required to answer to royal justices for homicide (Young, p. 106). Thus the action of this song was legal, assuming Johnie resisted -- as it appears he did. On the other hand, it also sounds as if the foresters were not going to give him a chance to submit to arrest. And, with no witnesses, how could he protect himself except by fighting?

This might also explain the old man who betrays Johnny. One of the problems with the forest law was that a man who discovered a dead deer was often treated as its killer and punished. As Young points out on p. 107, this generated a "climate of fear." If the witness did not turn in Johnny, then he himself might become the victim. A difficult situation at best.

The number of foresters in this song seems high (Young, p. 84, notes that even in the large forest of Sherwood the local bailiwicks had at most "a riding forester, two foot foresters, and some boys"), but as Young notes on p. 83, "Some foresters found it profitable to burden their bailiwicks with an unnecessary number of subordinates who paid for the privilege and then attempted to collect additional money from their victims." Thus it may be that there is significant fault on both sides of this conflict: On the one hand, a poacher; on the other, a bunch of bounty hunters.

Chid himself, while musing on where to put this ballad in his collection, observed that this is "One of the prettiest of all ballads"; see Mary Ellen Brown, Child's Unfinished Masterpiece: The English and Scottish Popular Ballads, University of Illinois Press, 2011, p. 120. - RBW

Three and seven are common "folk" numbers -- seven often simply standing for "many" or "too many." Historically, the "old man's" plight (squeal or die) is certainly pertinent -- but just as pertinent is the role of "betrayal": on the one hand underlining Johnie's lawlessness, while on the other hand also underlining the dirty-dealing of the authorities through the "too-many-against-one" metaphor. - DGE

Last updated in version 5.3
File: C114

Johnie Miller of Glenlee

DESCRIPTION: The singer, Johnnie Miller, says his belly is his god. He can eat rams as if they were rabbits. His belly's so big he can't kiss girls and he is "unfit for the pleasure of Venous" When he dies they'll say he died a glutton and drunkard, which he is.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1)

KEYWORDS: greed drink food nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1 70, "Johnie Miller of Glenlee" (1 text)

Roud #3866

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Banks of the Dee" (tune, per Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1)

NOTES [35 words]: Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1, p. ix: Authorship ascribed to James Boswell and Isabel Pagan, or Robert Trotter. For a text attributed to Isabel Pagan (c.1741-1821) see "The Songs of Isabel Pagan" site. - BS

Last updated in version 2.6
File: LyCr170

Johnie Scot [Child 99]

DESCRIPTION: Johnny, serving at the English court, gets the king's daughter with child. He goes back to Scotland and sends for her; she sends word she is imprisoned. He comes with 500 men, fights the king's champion, and gains his lady.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIER DATE: 1783/1799 (Riewerts-BalladRepertoireOfAnnaGordon-MrsBrownOfFalkland)

KEYWORDS: royalty pregnancy prison rescue battle love

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber,Bord)) US(Ap,NE,SE,So) Canada(Mar) Ireland

REFERENCES (16 citations):

Child 99, "Johnie Scot" (20 texts, 2 tunes) {Bronson's #10, #11}
Johnnie Cooper

DESCRIPTION: John Cooper comes home to find his wife's lover, a brewer, hidden as a pig. When John threatens to slaughter and eat the "pig" the brewer emerges and offers John enough gold and silver to retire if he were spared. He wishes his wife and her lover well.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1733 (broadside, Bodleian Douce Ballads 2(267b))

LONG DESCRIPTION: John Cooper was offered a day's work by the brewer, who ran to bed John's wife. Having forgotten his tools John returned home to find his wife had hidden the brewer as a pig in a vat. When John threatened to take an arm or leg off the "pig" the brewer, who "thought he should die by the Cooper," emerged and offered John "the keys of my silver and gold" to spare him. John wished his wife and the brewer well "for they've made a rich man o' John Cooper" so that he could retire from working.

KEYWORDS: adultery bargaining hiding gold husband lover wife

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1433, "Johnnie Cooper" (4 texts, 3 tunes)
Roud #7357

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Douce Ballads 2(267b), ("Attend my masters, and listen well"), Norris, T. (London), 1711-
1732; also Harding B 1(43), "The Cooper of Norfolk" or "A Jest of a Brewer and a Cooper's Wife"

NOTES [180 words]: "The Cooper of Norfolk" broadside preserves sheath and knife symbolism as in "Leesome Brand" [Child 15] and "Sheath and Knife" [Child 16] ("But she had a Trick which in some Wives are rife, She still kept a Sheath to another Man's Knife."

Child's view (Vol. V, p. 486) has "sheath and knife for mother and child" [[T579.1, "Sheath and knife as analogy for mother and unborn child"], Motif-Index of Folk-Literature revised and enlarged by Stith Thompson, (Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1955)]. Child 16B is a clearer case for the sense of "The Cooper of Norfolk" but regarding a dead lover: "'It's I hae broken my little pen-knife That I loed dearer than my life.' ... 'It's no for the knife that my tears doun run, But it's a' for the case that my knife was kept in.'"

Wurzbach and Salz, in their rework of Thompson's analysis of Child, mention both ballads but do not consider a 'sheath and knife' motif, or T579.1, at all (Natascha Wurzbach and Simone M Salz, translator Gayna Walls, Motif Index of the Child Corpus: the Englsih and Scottish Popular Ballad (1995)). - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD71433

Johnnie Cope

DESCRIPTION: "Cope sent a letter frae Dunbar, Said, 'Charlie, meet me, an ye daur, And I'll learn ye the art o' war.' Prince Charles accepts the challenge; Cope makes sure his horse is ready to fly. Quickly defeated, Cope is the first to escape to (Dunbar/Berwick)

AUTHOR: Adam Skirving?

EARLIEST DATE: 1803 (_Scots Musical Museum_ #234)

KEYWORDS: Jacobites battle abandonment humorous royalty

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

Sept 21, 1745 - Battle of Prestonpans. Bonnie Prince Charlie's Highland army routs the first real Hannoverian force it encounters

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland) Canada(Ont)

REFERENCES (11 citations):

Hogg-JacobiteRelicsOfScotlandVol2 58, "Johnny Cope"; Hogg-JacobiteRelicsOfScotlandVol2 59, "Johnny Cope" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, p. 129, "Johnnie Cope" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan1 125, "Johnny Cope" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario 24, "Johnny Cope" (1 text, 1 tune)
Winstock-SongsAndMusicOfTheRedcoats, pp. 47-49, "Johnny Cope" (1 tune)
DT, JOHNCOPE JOHNCOPE2*

ADDITIONAL: James Kinsley, Burns: editor, Complete Poems and Songs (shorter edition, Oxford, 1969) #297, pp. 413-415, "Johnnie Cope" (1 text, 1 tune, from 1790)

James Johnson, Editor, _The Scots Musical Museum_ [1853 edition], volume III, #234, pp. 242-243, "Johnnie Cope" (1 text, 1 tune)

Reginald Nettel, _Seven Centuries of Popular Song_, Phoenix House, 1956, p. 135, "(no title)" (1 text, probably incomplete)

Michael Brander, _Scottish and Border Battles and Ballads_, 1975 (page references to the 1993 Barnes & Noble edition), pp. 207-208, "Johnnie Cope" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #2315

BROADSIDES:

Bodleian, Harding B 11(139), "Johnny Cope" ("Cope sent a letter frae Dunbar"), W. and T. Fordyce (Newcastle), 1832-1842; also Harding B 11(138), 2806 c.16(120), Johnson Ballads 3189, 2806 d.31(7), Firth b.28(26b), Harding B 20(82), "Johnny Cope"

Murray, Mu23-y1:119, "Johnny Cope," unknown, unknown

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Tranent Muir" (subject: the Battle of Prestonpans) and references there

cf. "The Barns o' Beneuchies" (tune)

cf. "The Frostit Corn" (tune)

cf. "The Buchan Turnpike" (tune)

cf. "Riel Sits In His Chamber o' State (The Marching Song; Capture of For Garry, or Riel's Retreat)" (tune)
SAME TUNE:
The Barns o’ Beneuchies (File: Ord231)
The Frostit Corn (File: GrD3436)
The Buchan Turnpike (File: GrD3460)
Riel Sits In His Chamber o’ State (The Marching Song; Capture of Fort Garry, or Riel’s Retreat)
(File: Maci07)
The Roon-Moo'ed Spade (File: Gath008)

Jemmie Forrest (broadside NLScotland, L.C.Fol.178.A.2(106), "Jemmie Forrest," unknown, 1842?; same broadside as L.C.Fol.74(219a), ABS.10.203.01(151))

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Hey Johnnie Cope

NOTES [607 words]: This song, with its slanging lyrics and sprightly tune, is extremely well known (the first two histories of the Forty-Five Rebellion I checked both title their chapters on Prestonpans "Hey Johnnie Cope"), but traditional collections are few and far between. It seems to have survived mostly in texts that borrow the tune. (Were people afraid to sing it?)
The song is not as accurate as might be desired. The two armies, although both desired battle, almost blundered into each other. Tactics were minimal; the Jacobites -- having made the one sound strategic move of the battle by making a night march through a swamp into the loyalist rear -- took the field, charged, and routed the army of Lieutenant-General John Cope.
This is not as surprising as it sounds. Cope's army was in most respects inferior. Although theoretically composed of "regulars," in fact the troops were mostly raw. Nor were the units cohesive; it was a company from here and a battalion from there; officers and units had not worked together.
And the army was small. Reid, p. 32, offers evidence implying that the Hannoverian army was only about 2000 strong. It had a few artillery pieces, mostly in rather bad state -- but with no one except two officers to man them, and no ammunition, they played little part in the battle.
Nor is there evidence that Cope (1688-1760) was a coward; his courageous conduct at Dettingen (1743) had earned him a knighthood. If he had a problem, it was lack of brains, not of courage. He assuredly tried to stem the rout. But the disaster was too complete.
The versions I've heard of the song can't seem to agree whether he fled to Berwick or Dunbar. Magnusson, p. 594, reports that "Cope and his aide-de-camp could do nothing but gallop of southwards to Lauder and Coldstream and on to the safety of Berwick-upon-Tweed next day. Here, it is alleged (incorrectly), he had the humiliation of being the first general ever to bring to his superiors the news of his own defeat."
Cope was "examined" by a board -- in effect, a court martial. But Magnusson, p. 594, notes that their verdict on Prestonpans was that Cope "did his Duty as an Officer, both before, at, and after the Action: and that his personal Behavior was without Reproach."
The image in the song of Charles drawing his sword to lead his men in battle is almost true. According to McLynn, p. 151, Charles wanted to lead from the front at Prestonpans (a rather Charles-ish thing to do really; he was a far better man-on-horseback than actual general). And he did address his army -- his speech supposedly ended, "Gentlemen, I have thrown away the scabbard; with God's help I will make you a free and happy people." But his officers forced him to stay in the rear.
I can't help but note one great irony. In the British army, according to Baynes/Laffin, p. 105, "Johnnie Cope" is used to sound reveille for a number of Scottish regiments. Among them: The Black Watch, which had soldiers on the losing side at Prestonpans.
For another song on Prestonpans, with a similar take but some different details, see "Tranent Muir." Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario, p. 174, attributes both Prestonpans songs to one Adam Skirving (1718-1803), but offers no evidence that I can see. Of course, it might be that Skirving wanted his composition kept quiet in order to stay out of trouble. - RBW
The Burns version is Hogg-JacobiteRelicsOfScotlandVol2 58. The Bodleian and Murray broadsides are Hogg-JacobiteRelicsOfScotlandVol2 59. Hogg-JacobiteRelicsOfScotlandVol2: "Both sets of 'Johnie Cope' are taken from Gilchrist's collection -- a work in two volumes, published lately...." - BS

Bibliography

Johnnie Sangster

DESCRIPTION: A harvest song about binding sheaves and Johnnie Sangster the bandster. The first part of the song is apparently sung by Johnnie or one of his companions; the end is sung by a girl who wants to marry Johnnie.

AUTHOR: possibly William Scott of Fetterangus (1785-?) (source: Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)

EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: farming work harvest

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #3, p. 2, "Johnny Sangster"; "Folk-Song in Buchan," p. 46, "Johnnie Sangster" (1 text plus 1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan3 407, "Johnny Sangster" (6 texts, 3 tunes)
Buchan-ABookOfScottishBallads 69, "Johnnie Sangster" (1 text, 1 tune in appendix)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 265-266, "Johnnie Sangster" (1 text)

ST DBuch69 (Full)

Roud #2164

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Johnny Lad" (tune, per Greig/Duncan3)

NOTES [49 words]: Ewan MacColl's version of this is sung to a Lydian melody -- the only such I can recall in traditional Scottish music. This is not universal; Ord-BothySongsAndBallads's melody is generally quite close to MacColl's, but with that Lydian (sharpened) fourth reduced to an ordinary Ionian fourth. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.6

File: DBuch69

Johnnie Shears a Hairst

DESCRIPTION: The singer says she and Johhny cut the harvest together. "Johnnie hisna a wife An' I'll win hame to guide him"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan7)

KEYWORDS: courting harvest nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1346, "Johnnie Shears a Hairst" (1 short text, 1 tune)

Roud #7227

NOTES [21 words]: The current description is based on the single Greig/Duncan7 verse. - BS
Possibly related to Burns's "Robin Shure in Hairst"? - RBW

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD71346

Johnnie's Gray Breeks

DESCRIPTION: When the singer was 17 she loved handsome Johnny and made him fine grey breeches. Now she would make him breeches of patches "for a' the ill he's done me." Though he's left her with a baby she hopes he'll come back.

AUTHOR: William Tytler (?) (source: Greig/Duncan7)

EARLIEST DATE: 1829 (Chambers)

KEYWORDS: clothes nonballad baby rake

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Johnny and Jane

Description: "Johnny and Jane had a falling out; Johnny run Jane right outta sight." She promises to come; he beats and runs her naked around town. She's sentenced to Moundsville (VA) jail. She escapes. Refrain: "Johnny don't allow no lowdown hanging around."

Author: Frank Hutchison

Earliest Date: 1933 (recording, Martin & Roberts)

Keywords: fight, abuse, prison, escape, humorous, lover

Found In: Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 59, "Johnny and Jane" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, JOHNJANE*

Recordings:

Cross-references:

cf. ""Mama Don't 'Low" (lyrics)

cf. "Salty Dog" (tune)

File: CSW059

Johnny and Mary

Description: "Down the burn and thro' the mead, His golden locks wav'd o'er his brow, Johnnie, liltin', tuned his reed, And Mary wiped her bonnie mou'." The poor but handsome couple find happiness and treasure in each other's company

Author: unknown

Earliest Date: 1869 (Herd)

Keywords: love, courting, nonballad

Found In: Britain(Scotland)

References (1 citation):

Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 272-273, "Johnnie and Mary" (1 text)

Roud #8498

Notes [74 words]: This is either incredibly bawdy or incredibly dumb. I'm betting on the latter. Ford reports that it is from Bickerstaffe's 1762 opera "Love in a Village." The obscurity of this work is shown by the fact that I checked eight different reference works (six devoted solely to classical music) without finding a single reference to opera or composer. For more on the very confusing story of Bickerstaffe, see the notes to "The Miller of Dee." - RBW

Last updated in version 2.5

File: FVS272
Johnny and Molly (I)

DESCRIPTION: Johnny invites Molly to go to a grove for "serious talk" and "a sweet commodious walk." She won't be seduced. He says he had no such idea and asks her to marry: he'll plow and she'll milk the cows.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1820 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 16(337b))

KEYWORDS: courting marriage seduction farming dialog

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 55-57, "Through the Grove" (1 text, 1 tune)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 16(337b), "Johnny and Molly" ("As thro' the groves young Johnny did pass"), J. Pitts (London), 1802-1819; also Johnson Ballads 2599, "Johnny and Molly"

File: KiTu055

Johnny Appleseed's Song

DESCRIPTION: "I love to plant a little seed Whose fruit I never see; Some hungry strange it will feed, When it becomes a tree." "I love to sing a little song... And round me see the children throng." "So I can never lonely be." "The tree will tell my deed"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Allsopp)

KEYWORDS: food nonballad travel children

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Fred W. Allsopp, Folklore of Romantic Arkansas, Volume II (1931), p. 272, (no title) (1 text)

NOTES [89 words]: Checking Granger's Index to Poetry, I find half a dozen "Johnny Appleseed" songs, none of which are this piece. The way Allsopp presents the poem, it might be traditional, so I've indexed it -- though I suspect it's just Allsopp not documenting sources. Whether the poem actually goes back to John Chapman (c. 1775-1847) is obviously open to doubt. It's ironic to note that Johnny Appleseed, though his work brought him fame and praise, in fact was introducing non-native species in many areas, and hence damaging the environment. - RBW

File: FOra272

Johnny Boker (I)

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Characteristic line: " Do, my Johnny Boker (Booker/Poker), do!" Often with lyrics about the sailor's girl (Sally) or about the abuse inflicted by the Captain.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Robinson)

KEYWORDS: shanty nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MA) Canada(Mar,Newf) West Indies

REFERENCES (16 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, p. 9, "Johnny Boker" (1 text, 1 tune)
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 44, "Johnny Boker" (1 text, 1 tune)
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 97-98, "Johnny Boker" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 289-290, "Johnny Bowker" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, XL, p. 45, "Johnny Bowker" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, p. 106, "Johnny Boker" (1 text, 1 tune)
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, p. 141, "Johnny Boker" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 168, "Jolly Poker" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Cox-FolkMusicInANewfoundlandOutport, p. 54, "Jolly Poker' and 'Haul on the Bowline'" (1 short text, 1 tune, with one verse of each of the two songs)
Terry-TheShantyBook-Part1, #27, "Johnny Boker" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abrahams-DeepTheWaterShallowTheShore, pp. 4-6, "Do My Jolly Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Shay-AmericanSeaSongsAndChanteys, p. 28, "Johnny Boker" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 86, "Johnny Boker" (1 text)
Johnny Booker (Mister Booger)

DESCRIPTION: About the troubles experienced by a teamster/sailor along the way: A broken yoke, a stalled cart, etc. Chorus something like "Do, Johnny Booker, oh do, do me do, Do, Johnny Booker, oh do" or "So walk a Johnny Booger to help that nigger...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (recording, Bill Chitwood & Bud Landress)

KEYWORDS: work travel

FOUND IN: US(Ap,So) Britain(England(North,South))

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Randolph 268, "Mister Booger" (1 text plus a fragment, 2 tunes)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 100, "(Johnny Booker)" (1 fragment, 1 tune, probably this although it's short enough that it might be "Johnny Boker (I)"
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 258, "Knock John Booker" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 194, "Johnny Booker" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #91, "Do Johnny Booger" (1 text, 1 tune, an incredible mess with the chorus and some words from "Johnny Booker (Mister Booger)"), an ending which is from "Run, Nigger, Run," and a number of verses perhaps from "Old Dan Tucker")
DT, JNBOOKER

Roud #3441

RECORDINGS:
Gus Cannon, "Old John Booker, You Call That Gone" (on AmSkBa, DownHome)
Bill Chitwood & Bud Landress, "Johnny, Get Your Gun" (Brunswick 2883, 1925)
Cousin Emmy [Cynthia May Carver], "Johnny Booker" (Decca 24214, 1947; on CrowTold01)
Jack Elliott, "Old Johnnie Booker" (on Elliotts01)
Earl Johnson & his Clodhoppers, "Johnnie Get Your Gun" (OKeh 45171, 1927)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Old Johnny Booker Won't Do" (on NLCR17, NLCRCD2)
Walter "Kid Smith, "Old Johnny Bucker Wouldn't Do" (Gennett 6825/Supertone 9407 [as Jerry Jordon, "Old Johnny Bucker Won't Do"], 1929)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Poor Old Man (Poor Old Horse; The Dead Horse)" (lyrics)
cf. "Went to the River (I)" (floating lyrics)

NOTES [113 words]: "Johnny Booker" includes key verses from "Poor Old Man": "Said an old man come riding by/Said, young man, your mule's gonna die/If he dies I'll tan his skin/If he lives I'll ride him again." This probably entered minstrel tradition via African-American sailors -- or entered the shanty tradition from minstrel shows.

The Chitwood-Landress recording is a bit of a conundrum: it doesn't include most of the canonical
Johnny Bull, My Jo, John

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, Johnny Bull, my jo John, I wonder what you mean, Are you on foreign conquest bent, or what ambitious scheme?" The Americans warn their "brother" (England) that their invasions have failed. John is advised to "remain on your fast-anchored isle."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1966

KEYWORDS: war patriotic political derivative

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

Sept 10, 1813 - Battle of Lake Erie. The Americans under Perry defeat the British.

Aug 24, 1814 - A British force under Robert Ross captures Washington, D.C. after brushing aside the incompetent defenders. (Madison's administration had already fled). Two days later the British leave for Baltimore.

Jan 8, 1815 - Battle of New Orleans. Although a peace had already been signed, word had not yet reached Louisiana, which British General Pakenham sought to invade. Andrew Jackson's backwoodsmen easily repulse Pakenham.

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 118-120, "Johnny Bull, My Jo, John" (1 text, 1 tune)

Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 291, "Johnny Bull, My Jo, John" (1 text)

DT, JOHNAND4*

Roud #V35010

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "John Anderson, My Jo, John" (tune)

NOTES [92 words]: A broadside from the War of 1812, based on Burns's "John Anderson My Jo, John." This tune seems to have been very popular for political songs at the time; Huntington (pp. 172-174) has another such song, "John Bull's Epistle" (which we might subtitle "Colly Strong"). Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, p. 112, has another piece, "Ode to John Bull, Esq.," which begins, "John Bull, Esq., my jo John," which obviously is built on the same idea, but it's listed as by William McMenaman of the 29th Pennsylvania Volunteers, so it's a completely separate item. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: SBoA118

Johnny Carroll's Camp

DESCRIPTION: Singer describes details of life in a lumber camp.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (recording, Bill McBride)

KEYWORDS: lumbering work logger nonballad

FOUND IN: US (MW)

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 13, "Johnny Carroll's Camp" (1 text)

Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, "Johnny Carroll's Camp" (1 text)

Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 20, "Johnny Carroll's Camp" (1 text)

Roud #6516

RECORDINGS:

Bill McBride, "Johnny Carroll's Camp" (AFS, 1938; on LC56)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Lumber Camp Song" and references there

NOTES [23 words]: There is an entire genre of songs describing life in a lumber camp and the characters to be found there; check the cross-references. - PJS

Last updated in version 5.2

File: Be013
Johnny Come a Long Time

DESCRIPTION: Alternate lines are "Johnny come a long time." Verse lines are "Run along my Lulu," "Run home my Lulu," and "Johnny is your master"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands)

KEYWORDS: nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands 23, pp. 124-125, "Johnny Come a Long Time" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [79 words]: The current description is based on the Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands text. This looks to me like a distant relative of "Tommy's Gone to Hilo," though Parrish knows shanties -- having a section of them in her book -- but doesn't call this one of them. In fact, she includes no information about the use of this song. Another argument against mine is that Parrish's tune is quick while Hugill says "Tommy's Gone to Hilo" was sung in a "slow and lethargic way." - BS

Last updated in version 4.1

File: Parr023

Johnny Cuckoo

DESCRIPTION: "Here comes old Johnny Cuckoo ... What did you come for ... I come for be a soldier ... You look too black and dirty ... I'm just as clean as you are On a dark and stormy night."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Bessie Jones, et al)

KEYWORDS: storm dialog nonballad playparty soldier

FOUND IN: US(SE)

Roud #21730

RECORDINGS:
Janie Hunter and her children, "Johnny Cuckoo" (on BeenStorm1)

NOTES [95 words]: The Bessie Jones, et al, recording verses follow the pattern: "Here comes old Johnny Cuckoo / Cuckoo, cuckoo, / Here comes old Johnny Cuckoo / On a cold and stormy night." The current description is based on this text.
The BeenStorm1 song has a different form ("Is one Johnny Cuckoo / On a rainy day my darling / Is one Johnny Cuckoo / On a bright and starry night") and different tune.
Both Sea Island versions start slowly, pick up speed and end with syncopated clapping. The tempo speed-up and syncopated clapping is like what you hear on many Sea Island hymns.- BS

Last updated in version 4.0

File: RcBJoJCu

Johnny Doyle [Laws M2]

DESCRIPTION: Johnny and his sweetheart plan to elope, but the girl's servant reveals the plan. The girl is taken and forced to wed another. She becomes sick to death. The mother relents and offers to send for Johnny, but it is too late; the girl bids farewell and dies

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1857 (broadside, Bodleian Firth c.18(85))

KEYWORDS: elopement love marriage death

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,NE,Ro,SE,So) Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber)) Ireland Canada(Mar,Newf)

REFERENCES (29 citations):
Laws M2. "Johnny Doyle"
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #102, p. 1, "Johnny Doyle" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan5 1020, "Johnny Doyle" (4 texts, 3 tunes)
Randolph 87, "Johnny Doyle" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 80-81, Johnny Doyle"" (1 text, 1 tune --
Randolph's 87A)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 83, "Johnny Doyle" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 44, pp. 159-160, "Johnny Doyle" (1 text)
Hudson-FolkTunesFromMississippi 9, "Johnny Doyle" (1 text, 1 tune) Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. 248-250, "Johnny Doyle" (1 text, locally titled "Johnny Dile"); tune on pp. 421-422)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, pp. 46-47, "Johnny Doyle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 73, "Johnny Doyle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 15, "The Lost Johnny Doyle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills, "Johnny Doyle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland3, pp. 279-285, "Johnny Doyle" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster, pp. 248-250, "Johnny Doyle" (1 text, 1 tune) Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 81, "Young Johnnie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H137, pp. 431-432, "Johnny Doyle"
(1 text, 1 tune)
Graham-Joe-Holmes-SongsMusicTraditionsOfAnUlsterman 35, "Johnny Doyle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 129, "Johnny Doyle" (1 text)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #178, "Johnny Doyle" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #24, "Johnny Doyle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 687-690, "Johnny Doyle" (2 texts, 3 tunes)
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 16, "Johnny Doyle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Karpeles-FolksSongsFromNewfoundland 67, "Johnny Doyle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-21FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 17-19, 80, "Johnny Doyle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 34, "Johnny Doyle" (1 text)
O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladsOfIreland, p. 16, "Johnny Doyle" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1138, p. 78, "Johnny Doyle" (2 references)
DT 430, JONDOYLE*
Roud #455

RECORDINGS:
Jim Bennett, "Johnny Doyle" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
Raymond Noseworthy, "Johnny Doyle" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Burzilla Wallin, "Johnny Doyle" (on OldLove [as "Johnny Dial (Doyle)"]], DarkHoll)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth c.18(85), "Johnny Doyle" ("There's one thing that grieves me and that I must confess"), The Poet's Box (Glasgow), 1857; also Firth c.18(84), Firth b.25(291), Harding B 11(1911), "Johnny Doyle" ("I am a fair maiden what's crossed in love"); Harding B 18(324),
"Johnny Doyle!" [same as LOCSinging as201890]
LOCSinging, as201890, "Johnny Doyle!," H. De Marsan (New York), 1861-1864 [same as Bodleian
Harding B 18(324)]

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Lord Saltoun and Auchanachie" [Child 239] (plot)

SAME TUNE:
The Heart That Can Feel for a Suffering Maiden (per broadside Bodleian Firth c.18(85))

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Johnny Dial
Johnny Dye
It's of a Tender Maiden

NOTES [96 words]: Not to be confused with "Johnny Doyle II," a variant of Laws C5, "The Wild Mustard River (Johnny Stile)." Flanders, in Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland3, included this song based on the thematic similarity to "Lord Saltoun and Auchanachie" -- but Coffin's notes confess "Certainiy 'Johnny Doyle' has little but its basic motif in common with Child 239." - RBW

Broadside LOCSinging as201890: H. De Marsan dating per Studying Nineteenth-Century Popular Song by Paul Charosh in American Music, Winter 1997, Vol 15.4, Table 1, available at FindArticles site. - BS

Last updated in version 5.1
File: LM02
Johnny Dunlay

DESCRIPTION: Johnny Dunlay meets the singer "by the side of Aymer's haunted hall." They part and he rides to battle. The "fair Saxon soldiers" ambush him. He kills the Saxon leader. She curses the traitor who shot Johnny by Aymer's hall. He dies in her arms.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: courting battle betrayal death lover soldier
FOUND IN: Canada (Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peacock, pp. 471-472, "Johnny Dunlay" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST Pea471 (Partial)
Roud #6457
File: Pea471

Johnny Fell Down in the Bucket

DESCRIPTION: "Johnny fell down the bucket, The bucket fell down the well, His wife cut the rope... And Johnny fell down into -- (nonsense chorus)." "Johnny was walking in Hades, As meek and calm as a lamb, She stepped on a red-hot poker, And said, Well, I'll be --"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: humorous Hell wordplay
FOUND IN: US (So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 420, "Johnny Fell Down the Bucket" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7631
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Hallelujah"
NOTES [40 words]: Like "Hallelujah" or "Hopalong Peter," this is one of those "hidden word" songs -- the verse leads you to expect the last word, which is usually not fit for polite company. But instead of saying the word, it breaks off into the chorus. - RBW
File: R420

Johnny Fill Up the Bowl (In Eighteen Hundred and Sixty-One)

DESCRIPTION: "In Eighteen Hundred and Sixty One, Hurrah, Hurrah (or "Skiball" or "Football" or some such)... The great rebellion is begun, and we'll all drink stone blind, Johnny, fill up the bowl." A catalog of the events of the Civil War

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1864 (Sheet music "For Bales" published by Blackmar & Co, New Orleans)
KEYWORDS: Civil war fight army rebellion war death freedom slavery
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Apr 12, 1861 - Confederate forces fire on Fort Sumter, opening the Civil War
Sept 23, 1862 - Preliminary Emancipation Proclamation published (to be formalized Jan. 1, 1863)
Apr 9, 1865 - Robert E. Lee's Army of Northern Virginia surrenders
May 13, 1865 - General Edmund Kirby Smith surrenders all remaining Confederate forces
FOUND IN: US (Ap, MA, SE, So)
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Randolph 227, "In Eighteen Hundred and Sixty-One" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-Frank CBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 222, "In Eighteen Hundred and Sixty-One" (1 text)
Davis-TraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 10, "The Three Ravens" (the two texts in the appendix are this song)
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, p. 54, (no title) (1 text, though the chorus line is "When Johnny Comes Marching Home")
Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, p. 213, "Abe Lincoln Went to Washington" (1 text, tune referenced); also p. 214, "For Bales" (1 text, which appears to be a parody of a parody)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1139, p. 78, "Johnny, Fill Up the Bowl" (14 references); also #1140, p. 78, "Johnny, Fill Up the Bowl!" ("Jeff. Davis is a stupid Fool") (3 references); #1141, p. 78,
Johnny Gallagher (Pat Reilly)

DESCRIPTION: Johnny takes the bounty to join the army and a shilling to buy ribbons for his sweetheart or cockade. He complains of his cruel stepmother, his uncle "the ruin and downfall of me," and his father -- or recruiting sergeant -- who never "learnt me a trade"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1863 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(1912))
KEYWORDS: farewell father mother stepmother soldier recruiting
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf,Ont) Ireland Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Greig/Duncan1 80, "Johnnie Gallacher" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 469-470, "Johnny Coughlin" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario 17, "Johnny Gallagher" (1 text, 1 tune)
Vikár/Panagapka-SongsNorthWoodsSungByOJAbbott 5, "Johnny Gallagher" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H574, p. 80, "Pat Reilly" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST Pea469 (Partial)
Roud #920
RECORDINGS:
William Stevens, "Johnny Coughlin" (on PeacockCDROM)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(1912), "Johnny Golicher" ("As I was walking through Newry one day"), H. Such (London), 1849-1862; also Firth c.14(119), Firth b.25(358), Firth c.14(120), "Johnny Golicher"; 2806 c.15(312), "Johnnie Galloccher"; 2806 c.15(263), "Johnny Gallacher"; Harding B 17(147b), "Johnny Gallocher"; 2806 c.15(242), Firth c.14(121), Firth c.26(208)[some lines illegible], 2806 c.15(311), "Johnny Gallagher"; 2806 c.15(312), "Johnnie Gallocher"
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Johnnie Glacher
NOTES [16 words]: Also see Planxty, "Pat Reilly" (on Planxty, "The Well Below the Valley," Shanachie 79010 (1979)) - BS
Last updated in version 5.1
File: Pea469

Johnny German [Laws N43]

DESCRIPTION: A sailor meets a girl who tells him she is sad because of her lover's long absence.
When he hears that Johnny is her lover, he tells her Johnny died months before. She takes to her bed; he reveals himself as Johnny

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1856 (Thompson-APioneerSongster)
KEYWORDS: sailor separation reunion
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,SE,So) Ireland Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (15 citations):

Laws N43, "Johnny German"
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 155-156, "Johnny German" (1 text)
Thompson-ApioneerSongster 16, "Johnny German" (1 text)
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 23, "The Rainbow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H156, p. 315, "Johnny Jarmin/The Rainbow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 97, "Johnny Germany" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 94, "Johnny German" (2 texts)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 94, "Johnny German" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 81, "Johnny German" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 181, "Johnny German" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 55, "Johnny German" (1 text plus mention of 1 more, 1 tune)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 65, "Johnny German" (1 text)
Chase-AmericanFolkTalesAndSongs, pp. 179-181, "Johnny Jarmanie" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 467, JONGERMN
ADDITIONAL: Harold Nestler, "Songs from the Hudson Valley" (article in _New York Folklore Quarterly_, Volume V, #2, Summer 1949), pp. 79-80, "Johnny German" (1 text)
Roud #557
File: LN43

Johnny Get Your Gun (I)

DESCRIPTION: "One evenin' in de month of May, Johnny get your gun, get your gun, I met old Peter on the way... Moses wept and Abram cried... Satan's coming don't you hide." Johnny is advised to get his gun and fight Satan "to get to Heaven in de good ole way"

AUTHOR: F. Belasco (Monroe H. Rosenfeld)
KEYWORDS: Devil nonballad fight religious
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Jackson-PopularSongsOfNineteenthCenturyAmerica, pp. 97-101, "Johnny Get Your Gun" (1 text, 1 tune)
Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, pp. 113-114, "Johnny, Get Your Gun" (1 text, 1 tune)
Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 200-202, "Johnny Get Your Gun" (1 text)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, p. 313, "Johnny Get Your Gun"
Roud #V7520
CROSS-REFERENCES:
ct. "Johnny Get Your Gun (II)" (chorus, tune)
NOTES [83 words]: This piece does not really belong in a folk song catalog; the song in its original form does not seem to have gone into oral tradition. Rather, pieces of the complex whole survived. There is a nonsense version ("Johnny Get Your Gun (II)"), and the "dance" which concluded the piece provided the tune for George M. Cohan's "Over There" (published in 1917, and very popular in the World War I era).
For background on Monroe H. Rosenfeld, see the notes to "Those Wedding Bells Shall Not Ring Out!" - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: RJ19097

Johnny Get Your Gun (II)

DESCRIPTION: Floating verses, mostly to do with guns and animals: "Johnny got his gun, the gun was loaded/Johnny pulled the trigger and the gun exploded." Chorus: "Johnny get your gun, get your gun, get your gun/Johnny get your gun, I say."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (recording, Bill Chitwood & Bud Landress)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Floating verses, mostly having to do with guns and animals: "Johnny got his gun, the gun was loaded/Johnny pulled the trigger and the gun exploded"; "Johnny got his gun, says turn me loose/Shot a crow and hit an old goose/Crow went caw, the duck went quack/Ought to seen the goose balling the jack." Plus the perennial "My ol' Johnny was a great ol' man/Washed his face in a frying pan/Combed his hair in a wagon wheel/Died with a toothache in his heel."

Chorus: "Johnny get your gun, get your gun, get your gun/Johnny get your gun, I say."

KEYWORDS: humorous nonballad nonsense floating verses

FOUND IN: US(SE,So,SW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 198, "Johnny, Get Your Gun" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11610

RECORDINGS:
Bill Chitwood & Bud Landress, "Johnny, Get Your Gun" (Brunswick 2883, 1925)
Earl Johnson & his Dixie Entertainers, "Johnnie Get Your Gun" (OKeh 45171, 1927)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Johnny, Get Your Gun" (on NLCR10)
Fate Norris & his Playboys "Johnnie Get Your Gun" (Columbia 15435-D, 1929)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Johnny, Get Your Gun (I)" (chorus, tune, structure)
cf. "Old Dan Tucker" (floating lyrics)

File: CS198

Johnny Grey

DESCRIPTION: A bailiff and soldiers arrive at Johnny's door, announcing, 'Johnny, the court has a warrant for you." He is to be transported, but takes up his gun and fights. Johnny is killed, but he slays bailiff and captain first. Listeners are urged to fight also

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1962

KEYWORDS: soldier death rebellion transportation

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Galvin-IrishSongsOfResistance, pp. 37-38, "Johnny Grey" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: PGa037

Johnny Harte

DESCRIPTION: A rich farmer's daughter falls in love with Harte, a poor soldier. Her parents complain to his colonel, who threatens to send Harte away. He answers boldly. The colonel is impressed and offers him promotion. The parents consent to the marriage

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Sam Henry collection); c.1867 (broadside, Bodleian Firth c.14(207))

KEYWORDS: love soldier courting father mother

FOUND IN: Ireland Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H106, pp. 443-444, "Johnnie Hart" (1 text, 1 tune)
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 88, "Johnny Harte" (1 text, 1 tune)
Morton/Maguire-ComeDayGoDayGodSendSunday 32, pp. 84-85,119,169, "Johnny Harte" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #2929

RECORDINGS:
James Halpin, "Johnny Harte" (on Voice15, IRHardySons)
Jack Kehoe, "The Old Colonel" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth c.14(207), "Johnny Hart," W. Birmingham (Dublin), c.1867; also Harding B 26(298),
NOTES [62 words]: At the time this song probably originated, it was still possible for soldiers to gain commissions in the British army by purchase (the practice was not abolished until 1871). An ambitious soldier might marry to gain the money to earn a commission, which would make him socially acceptable (more so, anyway). One wonders if that might not be related to what happened here. - RBW

Johnny Holmes

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you jolly lumbermen, Wherever you may be.... It's of a jolly barber Which I am going to tell." The barber has worked for many lumber camps. The man somehow becomes rich enough to build two houses. The singer describes his looks and bad behavior

AUTHOR: probably at least partly the work of Jack McGinnis

EARLIEST DATE: 1902 (Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks)

KEYWORDS: logger hair

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks, pp. 44-48, "Johnny Holmes" (1 text)

Johnny Is Mad

DESCRIPTION: "Johnny is mad and I am glad, And I know what will please him, A (bottle of wine to make him shine/bottle of ink to make him stink/drink), and (Mary Jones) to squeeze him."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore)

KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad drink love

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, p. 119, "(Johnny's mad and I am glad)" (2 texts)
Roud #7777

NOTES [29 words]: Roud lumps this with "The Devil Is Mad" family, and I'll allow that it might come from the same roots, but this feels sufficiently different to me that I have split them. - RBW

Johnny Is My Darling

DESCRIPTION: "Johnny is my darling, my darling, my darling, Johnny is my darling, the Union Volunteer." The girl extols the virtues of Johnny, who marched through town to save the Union. She hopes he will return as "Cupid's volunteer." Tune: "Charlie Is My Darling."

AUTHOR: Words: Father Reed

EARLIEST DATE: 1863 (broadside, according to Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar)

KEYWORDS: Civilwar courting soldier

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 209-210, "Johnny Is My Darling" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber-SoldierSongsAndHomeFrontBalladsOfCivilWar, p. 11, "Johnny Is My Darling" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Charlie Is My Darling" (tune)

Johnny Jump Up

DESCRIPTION: Beer is sold out; the singer tries cider. Never again. Falling-down drunk after a quart, he fights a policeman. A man on crutches dances and a friend goes to the mad house after cider. A corpse at a wake asks to take a quart for admission to Heaven.

NOTES [a few illegible words], "Johnny Hart"
Johnny Kiss Yer Auntie

DESCRIPTION: Aunt Bell doted on Jock Macfarlan -- only she could call him Johnny -- and comforted him when, as a boy, a gander stole his bannock and, later, when Biddy Cameron rejected his proposal. She wisely told him his proposal would be accepted eventually.

AUTHOR: George Bruce Thompson (source: Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: courting rejection humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #138, p. 2, "Johnny Kiss Yer Auntie" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan4 905, "Johnny Kiss Yer Auntie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6257
File: GrD4905

Johnny Lad (I)

DESCRIPTION: Sundry verses about Johnny, biblical themes, King Arthur, and Scottish politics, with refrain "And wi you, and wi you, And wi you, Johnny lad, I'd drink the buckles o my sheen Wi you, Johnny lad."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1827 (quoted in Kinloch)
KEYWORDS: wife commerce Bible talltale royalty food humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Bronson 279, "The Jolly Beggar" (37 versions, but #21 is a fragment of "Johnny Lad")
Logan-APedlarsPack, pp. 443-445, "Johnny Lad" (1 text)
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 45-47, "Jinkin' You, Jockie Lad" (a fragment of this song is quoted in the notes to that)
Greig/Duncan4 755, "Johnnie's Nae a Gentleman" (6 texts, 5 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 168-169, "Johnnie Lad" (1 text)
MacColl-PersonalChoice, pp. 62-63, "Johnnie Lad" (1 text)
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 48, "Good King Arthur" (1 short text, a floating fragment sometimes found with "Johnny Lad (I)" and sometimes with "In Good Old Colony Times")
ST Log443 (Full)
Roud #2587
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "There Was a Man of Thessaly" (lyrics)
NOTES [591 words]: The account of Samson fighting with "cuddie's jaws" is in Judges 15:15-16. There is, of course, no Biblical basis for the statement that he "focht a score of battles wearing crimson flannel drawers." While Samson spent most of his life battling the Philistines (mostly by accident), the clothing hardly fits an Israelite of the time. The story of the Queen playing "fitba' with the lads on Glesga green" is unhistorical; by the time football/soccer became a major sport, Scotland's queen was a German lady living in England -- who, in any case, had no power to order an arbitrary arrest. The story of King Arthur buying/stealing barley-meal to make pudding seems to have been imported from a nursery rhyme (known to Halliwell; see Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #207, p. 144, "(When good King Arthur ruled this land)." Roud seems to lump these verses with "In Good Old Colony Times"; this strikes me as an extreme stretch. The man of Ninevah (Thessaly, Babylony) who scratched out his eyes is unbiblical. But it may be the oldest part of the song, and may have originated independently. The lines appear, in rather different form, in Tom Thumb's Pretty Song Book Volume II (c. 1744); others appear in the second edition of Gammer Gurton's Garland or The Nursery Parnassus (c. 1799). These verses can be found in Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #28, p. 40, ["There was a Man so Wise"]).
These verses seem to have provoked a great deal of discussion. Katherine Elwes Thomas, who never met a tall tale she didn't blow all out of proportion, connects this to the career of Dr. Henry Sacherevell (died 1724), who for a time was forbidden from preaching, then restored to favour.
It has also been argued that this verse was known to Shakespeare; in Twelfth Night, act II, scene
III, line 79 (Riverside lineation), Sir Toby sings "There dwelt a man in Babylon, lady, lady." But this is more likely from a broadside known as "The Ballad of Constant Susanna" (Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex ZN2467), which is of course from the deuterocanonical additions to the Book of Daniel (Daniel chapter 13 in Catholic Bibles; it even begins "There was a man living in Babylon").
At least one version known to Rimbaud (according to the Opies) made it King Stephen, not King Arthur, who was the thieving king. This is an interesting variant, because Stephen (reigned 1135-1154) had arguably stolen the kingdom from his cousin Matilda/Maud, the only surviving legitimate child of King Henry I. Henry had made his barons swear to support Matilda, but the barons preferred a king to a queen, and chose Stephen. The result was a reign marked by civil war and unrest. Not all sources consider Stephen to have stolen the kingdom -- but many did. - RBW
See Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 11 for the King Arthur lines cited above by RBW. Opie also mentions "There was a man of Nineveh" or Thessaly, etc (Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 497) as being "similarly embodied" in "Johnny Lad" (!).
Also see Robin Hall and Jimmie MacGregor, "Johnny Lad" (on Robin Hall and Jimmie MacGregor,
"Two Heids are Better than Yin!," Monitor MF 365 LP (1962)). From the liner notes: "A few years ago, this was probably the most popular song of the folk revival in Scotland. Since then, endless dozens of verses have been added on themes historical, political, satirical, and nonsensical."
- BS (E.g. it includes the verse about the king being in the counting-house from "Sing a Song of Sixpence," although the verse has been dated as early as the sixteenth century.)
Last updated in version 6.1
File: Log443

Johnny Lowre

DESCRIPTION: "Of a' the lads in Tinwald toun... There never was sae droll a loon As bonnie Johnnie Lowrie." The singer describes the ways she visits Johnnie (e.g. "I took the flax unto the mill, My jewel follow'd after still"). They marry and are happy though poor

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Ford)

KEYWORDS: courting marriage

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 193-196, "Bonnie Johnnie Lowrie" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #13112

File: FVS193

Johnny McEldoo

DESCRIPTION: McEldoo and friends are on a drinking spree. They stop at Swann's for food and McEldoo eats everything in sight. McEldoo thinks the bill too high and starts a fight. The police arrive and march the boys away. The boys pay the bill and go home

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario)

KEYWORDS: fight drink food humorous police

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) Ireland Canada(Ont)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario 33, "The Spree" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #3390

RECORDINGS:

Tom Brandon, "The Spree" (on ONEFowke01)

The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem, "Johnny McEldoo" (on IRClancyMakem01)

Jimmie McBeath, "Johnny McIndoe" (on Voice14)
Johnny My Honey

DESCRIPTION: "O Johnny my honey he’s gotten some money." The singer says "he's bonnie and braw he's the flow'r o them a" She's been in France, Spain, England, and Ireland "but there's nae ane sae bonnie." Besides, "his hair has a nat'ral curl an a"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: courting hair nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Greig/Duncan4 757, "Johnny My Honey" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Roud #6177
NOTES [8 words]: cf. "The Lass o' Glenshee" (tune, per Greig/Duncan4)
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD4757

Johnny O Dutchman

DESCRIPTION: Johnny goes to plow and falls off the horse. He tells his wife he will sell the horse. She would give the horse another chance. They go fishing, the wagon turns over and horse and fish are lost. "Next time I ride you I'll ride the gray mare"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest)
KEYWORDS: farming fishing humorous horse wife
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 161, "Johnny O Dutchman" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Roud #21115
NOTES [20 words]: Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest song has a few "old Dutchman" dialog words: "ven he fell off" and "vagon". - BS
Last updated in version 3.3
File: MooSW161

Johnny on the Ocean

DESCRIPTION: Singing game. "Johnny on the ocean, Johnny on the sea, Johnny broke a milk bottle, And blamed it on me, I told Ma, Ma told Pa, Johnny got a whipping, Ha, ha, ha, How many whippings d he get?"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Dorson)
KEYWORDS: playparty punishment
FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,SE)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
  Mcintosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks, p. 100, "(Johnny over the ocean)" (1 text)
  Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, p. 224, "Johnny over the Ocean" (1 text)
  Carey-MarylandFolkloreAndFolklife, pp. 77-78, "(no title)" (1 text)
  ADDITIONAL: Richard M. Dorson, _Buying the Wind: Regional Folklore in the United States_, University of Chicago Press, 1964, p. 385, "(no title)" (1 short text)
  Roud #19067
File: DoDW385
Johnny Sands [Laws Q3]

DESCRIPTION: Johnny says he is tired of life and asks his wife to help him drown. She is to tie his hands and push him into the river. As she comes running down the slope, he steps aside and falls in. When she calls for help, he points out that she has tied his hands.

AUTHOR: unknown (claimed by John Sinclair in an 1842 broadside)

EARLIEST DATE: 1842

KEYWORDS: suicide trick death river drowning

FOUND IN: US (Ap, MW, NE, Ro, SE, So) Ireland Britain (England (South, West), Scotland) Canada (West)

REFERENCES (30 citations):

Laws Q3, "Johnny Sands"

Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 237-239, "Johnny Sands" (2 texts, but only the first text, "A", is this piece; there are references to 4 more, probably this but some might be "Marrowbones")

Randolph 754, "Johnny Sands" (2 texts, 2 tunes, but the "B" text goes with "Marrowbones" [Laws Q2])

Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 181, "Johnny Sands" (1 text plus excerpts from 2 more and mention of 1 more)

Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 181, "Johnny Sands" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)

Morris-FolksongsOfflorida, #197, "Johnny Sands" (2 texts, 1 tune)

Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 71, pp. 198-199, "Johnny Sands" (1 text plus mention of 2 more)

Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 51, "Johnny Sands" (1 text plus an excerpt and mention of 1 more; 1 tune)

Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 49, pp. 65-68, "Johnny Sands" (1 text, 1 tune)

Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois, pp. 175-176, "Johnny Sands" (1 text, 1 tune)

Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland, pp. 13-14, "The Drowning Lady (The Witch Song)"

(1 fragment, 1 tune, which might be either "Marrowbones" or "Johnnie Sands")

Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 29, "Johnnie Sands" (1 text)

Grimes-StoriesFromTheAnneGrimesCollection, p. 26, "Johnny Sands" (1 text)

Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 54, "Johnny Sands" (1 text, 1 tune)

Greig/Duncan2 319, "Johnnie Sands" (2 texts, 2 tunes)

Ord-BothySongsAndBallads. p. 93, "Johnny Sands" (1 text)

Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin, pp. 204-205, "Jonnie Sands" (1 text)

Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 451, "Johnny Sands" (1 text)

Hamer-GreenGrovers, p. 39, "Johnny Sands" (1 text, 1 tune)

Copper-SongsAndSouthernBreezes, pp. 222-223, "Johnny Sands" (1 text, 1 tune)

Williams-Witshire-WSRO GI 99, "Johnny Sands" (1 text)

Bozich-TreasuryOfNewEnglandFolklore, pp. 575-576, "Johnny Sands" (1 text, 1 tune)

Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #120, "Johnny Sands" (1 text, 1 tune)

Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 158-160, "Johnny Sands" (1 text, 1 tune)

New-Comic-Songster, p. 57, "Johnny Sands" (1 text, 1 tune)

Heart-Songs, pp. 42-43, "Johnny Sands" (1 text, 1 tune)

cf. Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, p. 480, "Johnny Sands" (source notes only)

NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, Joseph S. Hufham, "The End of Patty Haig," Vol. XXIX, No. 2 (Fall/Winter 1981), p. 109-111, "(There was a man named Johnny Sands)" (1 short text, coupled with a folktale on how the two quarreled over a treasure in the river)

DT 344, MARBONE 4

Roud #184

RECORDINGS:

Grace Carr, "Johnny Sands" (on Saskatch01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Marrowbones" [Laws Q2]

ALTERNATE TITLES:

Johnny Vands

NOTES [43 words]: A number of editors confuse "Johnny Sands" [Laws Q3] and "Marrowbones"
Johnny Shaw's a Decent Chap

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, Johnny Shaw's a decent chap, an' he wants tae marry me, An' tho' he's only a cairter chiel, he's fourteen bob you see." Mother warns, "Ye'll never be a lady aff his fourteen bob." Still, the girl expects to be happy "when he's in a steady job"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)

KEYWORDS: love, mother, warning, money

FOUND IN: Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 43, "Johnny Shaw's a Decent Chap" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #22213

Johnny the Sailor (Green Beds) [Laws K36]

DESCRIPTION: Johnny comes from sea and asks the innkeeper for a bed and the chance to see her daughter (Molly). Neither is granted. He reveals that his last trip made him rich; the innkeeper offers him all he asked. He ignores the offer; he will go where he is wanted

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1830 (broadside, Bodleian, Harding B 25(1124))

KEYWORDS: sea, money, courting, greed, landlord, sailor

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond, South), Scotland(Aber)) US(Ap, MW, NE, SE, So) Canada(Mar, Ont) Ireland

REFERENCES (34 citations):
Laws K36, "Johnny the Sailor (Green Beds)"
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 160-162, "Green Beds" (2 texts plus reference to 1 more)
Randolph 53, "Johnny the Sailor" (3 texts plus 2 excerpts, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 70-72, "Johnny the Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 53A)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 32, "The Green Bed" (1 text)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 24, "The Green Beds" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 49, "Captain John" (1 text, 1 tune)
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 211-213, "(The Down Bed)" (1 text plus an excerpt of an older version)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 108, "Green Beds" (2 texts plus 2 excerpts and mention of 1 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 108, "Green Beds" (5 excerpts, 5 tunes)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 42, pp. 156-158, "Young Johnny" (1 text)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 93, "Young Johnny" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 85-86, "Young Johnnie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 62-64, "Young Johnnie" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 31, "Young Johnny" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 430-431, "Jackson" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 58, "The Green Bed" (4 texts, 4 tunes)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #115, p. 2, "The Brisk Young Sailor Lad" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan1 48, "Johnny and the Landlady" (6 texts, 3 tunes)
VaughanWilliams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs, pp. 48-49, "The Green Bed" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #13, "The Green Bed" (1 text, 1 tune)
Butterworth/Dawney-PloughboysGlory, pp. 40-41, "A Story, A Story" (1 text, 1 tune)
Johnny Todd

DESCRIPTION: Johnny Todd ships out, leaving his sweetheart in Liverpool. She meets another sailor, who offers to marry her. She accepts; Todd returns to find his love married. The moral: "Do not leave your love like Johnny/Marry her before you go"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1886 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)

KEYWORDS: infidelity marriage warning travel return sailor

FOUND IN: US(NE) Ireland Britain(England(North),Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Greig/Duncan 1583, "Johnny Johnstone" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Hammond-SongsOfBelfast, p. 9, "Johnny Todd" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 103-104, "Johnny Todd" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 23, "Johnny the Sailor Boy" (5 texts, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 174, "Johnny Todd" (1 text)
Johnny Troy [Laws L21]

DESCRIPTION: Irishman Troy, a convicted robber, is sent to Australia. He and his fellow convicts escape as they are being taken ashore. Troy turns robber, but steals only from the rich, giving to the poor and transportees. At last he is taken and hanged

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan)

KEYWORDS: robbery transportation prison execution

FOUND IN: US(MW,SE)

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Laws L21, "Johnny Troy"
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 134, "Johnny Troy" (1 text)
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 88, "Johnnie Troy" (1 text)
Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, pp. 246-249, "Johnnie Troy" (1 text)
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 96, "Johnnie Troy" (1 text)
Ward-PenguinBookOfAustralianBallads, pp. 47-49, "Johnny Troy" (1 text)

DT 574, JOHNTROY

Roud #3703

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Johnny Try

File: LL21

Johnny Walk Along to Hilo

DESCRIPTION: Shanty, with chorus, "Johnny walk along to Hilo, Oh, poor old man, Oh, wake her, oh, shake, her, Oh, wake that gal with the blue dress on!" The verses usually consist of a scattering of lines from assorted Black and minstrel songs

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys)

KEYWORDS: shanty nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MA,SE) West Indies

REFERENCES (12 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, p. 72, "Johnny Walk Along to Hilo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 102, "Johnny Come Down to Hilo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 266-268, "Johnny Come Down to Hilo," "The Gal With the Blue Dress" (3 texts, 3 tunes) [AbEd, pp. 196-197]
Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, XVI, p. 19, "O Johnny Come to Hilo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 60-61, "Johnny Come Down to Hilo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 483-485, "Johnny Come Down to Hilo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #24, "O Johnny Come to Hilo" (1 text, which appears to mix the chorus of "Johnny Walk Along to Hilo" with words from "Poor Old Man (Poor Old Horse; The Dead
Johnny Was a Baptist

DESCRIPTION: "Johnny was a Baptist, O yes, Johnny was a Baptist, O yes, Johnny was a Baptist, Baptist, Baptist, Johnny was a Baptist, O yes," "He baptized Jesus, O yes." "Crying, Lord have mercy, O yes." "Sign J on your ticket, O yes."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 540, "Johnny Was a Baptist" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 540, "Johnny Was a Baptist" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)

Roud #11876

File: Br3540

Johnny Will You Marry Me

DESCRIPTION: "Johnny will you marry me and take me out a danger?" "I won't marry you because you are a stranger." "Why didn't you tell me that before you told O'Farrell?"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (for USBallinsloeFair, according to site irishtune.info, Irish Traditional Music Tune Index: Alan Ng's Tunography, ref. Ng #2618)

KEYWORDS: courting rejection dialog nonballad

FOUND IN:

RECORDINGS:
Murty Rabbet and Dan Sullivan, "Johnny Will You Marry Me" (on USBallinsloeFair)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Standard on the Braes o' Mar" (tune)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Johnny Won't You Marry Me
Love Will You Marry Me
Love Won't You Marry Me

File: RcJWYMM
Johnny, Come-A-Long

DESCRIPTION: "Oh Johnny, Johnny, John, come a-long, come a-long (2X)" Nonsensical verses, with Johnny playing with his gun and playing hide n' seek with the ladies. Long chorus begins: "Down by the sea where the watermelons grow, back to my home I shall not go."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas)

KEYWORDS: shanty nonsense

FOUND IN: Britain Germany US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 285-286, "Johnny Come-A-Long"

NOTES [52 words]: Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas called this a "runaway chorus," possibly referring to the fast pace of the tune and words, and says that it was a popular sea shore song in America. It is in fact, so quick and full of syllables that I think it would be difficult to sing while doing anything but sitting down. - SL

File: Hugi285

Johnny, I Hardly Knew Ye

DESCRIPTION: The girl meets her Johnny returned from the wars. She can barely recognize him; he has lost arms, legs, and eyes. She tells him "With your drums and guns and guns and drum, the enemy nearly slew ye... O, Johnny, I hardly knew ye."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1886 (broadside, Bodleian 2806 b.10(218))

KEYWORDS: soldier disability injury war

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (11 citations):
Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 94, "Johnny, I Hardly Knew Ye" (1 text)
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 329-330, "Johnny, I Hardly Knew You" (1 text, tune referenced) Hodgart-FaberBookOfBallads, p. 212, "Johnny, I hardly knew ye" (1 text)
O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, pp. 92-93, "Johnny, I Hardly Knew Ye" (1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 388-389, "Johnny, I Hardly Knew Ye" (1 text)
Behan-IrelandSings, #35, "Johnny, I Hardly Knew Ye" (1 text, 1 tune, modified)
Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 109-111, "Johnny I Hardly Knew You" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1142, p. 78, "Johnny, I Hardly Knew Ye" (1 reference)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, pp. 278-279, "Johnny I Hardly Knew Ye" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Kathleen Hoagland, editor, One Thousand Years of Irish Poetry (New York, 1947), pp. 271-274, "Johnny, I Hardly Knew Ye" (1 text plus excerpts from 3 parodies)
Charles Sullivan, ed., Ireland in Poetry, p. 90, "Johnny, I Hardly Knew Ye" (1 text)
Roud #3137

RECORDINGS:
The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem, "Johnny I Hardly Knew You" (on IRClancyMakem02)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 b.10(218), "Johnny, I Hardly Knew Ye" ("While going the road to sweet Athy"), H. Such (London), 1863-1885; also 2806 c.8(265), Firth c.26(233), "Johnny, I Hardly Knew Ye"; Harding B 26(297), 2806 b.9(118)[some illegible words],"Johney I hardly knew ye"[inconsistent spelling throughout]

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" (tune) and references there
cf. "The Wars of America" (plot)

NOTES [130 words]: Scholars continue to argue whether "Johnny, I Hardly Knew Ye" or the cheerful "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" is the original. "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," by Patrick S. Gilmore, can be firmly dated to the beginning of the Civil War, while "Johnny, I Hardly Knew Ye" does not appear until slightly later (reportedly 1869, though the earliest date I've been able to verify is 1885).

There is also a very early print, "Johnny, I Hardly Knew Ye," beginning "When on the road to Switarthy, ahooh! ahooh!" for which see Edwin Wolf 2nd, American Song Sheets, Slip Ballads, and Political Broadsides 1850-1870, Library Company of Philadelphia, 1963, p. 78. The date for this does not appear to be known.

For further details, see the entry on "When Johnny Comes Marching Home." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
Johnny, Lovely Johnny

DESCRIPTION: Annie complains that Johnny had promised to marry her when they courted in her father's garden in County Tyrone. Johnny says "it was all but a jest ... I never intended for to make you my wife." She says she will kiss him if he ever returns

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (IRPTunney01)

KEYWORDS: courting seduction sex lie promise separation nonballad lover rake infidelity abandonment

FOUND IN: Ireland Britain(England(Lond))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster 14, "Lovely Johnny" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5168

RECORDINGS:
Mary Ann Haynes, "Lovely Johnny" (on Voice01)
Paddy Tunney, "Johnny, Lovely Johnny" (on IRPTunney01) (on Voice15)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The High Walls of Derry

File: RcJoLoJo

Johnny, Oh Johnny

DESCRIPTION: "Johnny, oh Johnny, you are my darling, Like a rose that grows in the garden...." The girl's father offers her wealth to marry another; he mother scorns her for wanting Johnny. She intends to follow Johnny anyway, and bids her family farewell

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)

KEYWORDS: love separation father mother money

FOUND IN: US(SE,So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 14, "Willie, Oh, Willie" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 277-278, "Johnny, Oh, Johnny" (1 text)
Roud #5715 and 11382

RECORDINGS:
Pete Steele, "Johnny O Johnny" (AFS, 1938; on KMM)

NOTES [14 words]: A commonplace theme, but this doesn't look quite like any of the other versions. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: DarNS277

Johnny, Won't You Ramble

DESCRIPTION: "Well, I went down to Helltown To see the Devil chain down. Johnny, won't you ramble, Hoe, hoe, hoe!" The singer tells how the masters plan to make the slaves work harder. The slave offers money to avoid a whipping; master would "rather hear you holler"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (collected from "Lightning," David Tippen, and others by Lomax; first printed 1941 in Our Singing Country; Tippen may also have recorded it for the Lomaxes in 1933)

KEYWORDS: slave work prison hardtimes abuse

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 400-402, "Johnny, Won't You Ramble" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 275, "Johnny, Won't You Ramble" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 128-130, "Jolly" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, p. 96, "Johnnie, Wontcha Ramble" (1 text)
Roud #6708

File: LoF275
Johnny's Gone to Hilo

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. "If I should die and be buried at sea, A mermaid's sweetheart I would be. Johnny's gone to Hilo! Heelo! Hilo! My Johnny's gone, what shall I do? Johnny's gone to Hilo."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1956
KEYWORDS: shanty mermaid/man sailor death separation
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Chase-AmericanFolkTalesAndSongs, p. 157, "Johnny's Gone to Hilo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #481
NOTES [34 words]: Possibly a fragment of another Hilo shanty, though the form is unusual -- but the text is so short that I can't identify the original. It is not (based on its form) a version of "Tommy's Gone to Hilo." - RBW
File: Cha157

Johnson Boys

DESCRIPTION: "I hear the Johnson boys a-coming, Singing and a-hollering and shooting off their guns." A list of exploits of the minimally civilized Johnson Boys, who shoot, court, wash, farm, and fiddle in extravagant ways (but don't know how to court)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: talltale family humorous
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 338, "Johnson Boys" (2 text plus mention of 2 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 338, "Johnson Boys" (2 tunes plus text excerpts)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 129, "Johnson Boys" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warner-FolkSongsAndBalladsOfTheEasternSeaboard, p. 5, "Johnson Boys" (1 text)
Lunsford/Stringfield-30And1FolkSongsFromSouthernMountains, p. 56, "Johnson Boys" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 115, "Johnson Boys" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 170, "The Johnson Boys" (1 text)
DT, JHNSNBOY* JHNSNBY2*
Roud #6676
RECORDINGS:
Grant Brothers, "Johnson Boys" (Columbia 15460, 1929; rec. 1928)
Al Hopkins & his Buckle Busters [or John Hopkins], "Johnson Boys" (Brunswick 179, 1927)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Johnson Boys" (on NLCR03)
Frank Proffitt, "Johnson Boys" (on Proffitt03, ClassBanj) (on USWarnerColl01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Aunt Sal's Song (The Man Who Didn't Know How to Court)" (theme)
File: Wa129

Johnson Boys (II)

DESCRIPTION: Description of the Johnson boys, who were boys of honor and DID know how to court; song describes their heroic service to the Confederacy as scouts: "When the Yankees saw them coming, They throw down their guns and hide."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964
KEYWORDS: Civilwar family soldier
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 155, "Johnson Boys" (1 text, 1 tune)
Johnson's Motor Car

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets another Irish rebel, with orders to go to Dunbar. They decide to requisition the car driven by Doctor Johnson. They send a message urgently calling for his services, then ambush him. They promise to return the car when Ireland is free.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1973

KEYWORDS: IRA rebellion technology travel

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 320, "Johnson's Motor Car" (1 text)
- DT, JHNMTFR

Roud #4833

NOTES [81 words]: It probably says something about the state of Anglo-Irish relations that a tale of deception, intrigue, and highway robbery, all in support of terrorism, is regarded as humorous. It is certainly true that cars were highly valued in the period of the Irish quest for independence. Calton Younger, in Ireland's Civil War, tells a story on page 376 of a doctor who had a car -- and deliberately disabled it to prevent theft, before recommissioning it briefly to help Free State leaders.

- RBW

File: FSB320A

Johnsons Had a Baby, The

DESCRIPTION: "Johnsons had a baby, They called him Tiny Tim, They put him in a bath tub To see if he could swim." He eats a bar of soap. A doctor and nurse are called and a lady with an alligator purse or a big black hearse.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks)

KEYWORDS: playparty baby doctor

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) US(MW) New Zealand

REFERENCES (7 citations):
- Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 147, "The Johnsons Had a Baby" (1 text)
- Carey-MarylandFolkloreAndFolklife, pp. 79, "(no title)" (1 text)
- McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks, pp. 102-103, "(I had a little monkey)," "(Mother, mother, I am ill)" (2 texts)
- Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, pp. 224-225, "Mother, Mother" (1 text)
- Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 110, "(Mother, Mother, I feel ill)," "(Granny, Granny, I am ill)" (2 texts)
- Abernethy-SinginTexas, p. 14, "(Mother, mother, I feel ill)" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Peter and Iona Opie, _I Saw Esau: Traditional Rhymes of Youth_, #77, "(Mother, Mother, I am Ill)" (1 text, with the first few lines of this song although the ending is different)

Roud #13502

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "I Am a Pretty Little Dutch Girl" (tune, per Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
- cf. "Oh Dear Mother" (some lines: "Doctor, doctor will I die?")

NOTES [126 words]: See Sandburg, American Songbag pp .378-379 and the other "Bang Away, Lulu (I)" songs, Roud #8349. I think this is too much a game song to be lumped with bawdy #8349 (even so innocent a version as Sandburg's). - BS

And I agree, and have filed accordingly. Roud also files some of the lyrics in McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks with Roud #4835. The whole thing is a mess. Although the "Johnsons had a baby" text often includes the "Mother, mother, I am ill" bit (Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore gie this as:"Mother, mother, I am ill, Call the doctor from over the hill. In comes the doctor, In comes the nurse, In comes the lady With the alligator purse"), it also Johnston's Hotel

DESCRIPTION: Singer describes conditions at "Johnston's Hotel," which smells like corn-flakes; one is sent there by the magistrate Langley. Policemen who scout for boarders are described; all boarders are required to clean up the park and do other odd jobs all day.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE:

LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer sarcastically describes conditions at "Johnston's Hotel," which smells like corn-flakes; one is sent there by the magistrate Langley. The furnishings and carpets are praised, while the beefsteak must be cut with a sword. Some policemen who are scouting for boarders are described; all boarders are required to clean up the park and do other odd jobs all day.

KEYWORDS: prison punishment drink humorous moniker nonballad prisoner food

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

1920s-1950: Dalton Johnston serves as governor
Late 1940s: Langley retires as magistrate

FOUND IN: Canada(Ont)

Roud #4819

RECORDINGS:

Mrs. Tom Sullivan, "Johnston's Hotel" (on Ontario1)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Vilikens and his Dinah (William and Dinah) [Laws M31A/B]" (tune & meter) and references there

cf. "The Mountjoy Hotel" (subject, tune)

cf. "The Banks of the Don" (subject, lyrics)

NOTES [90 words]: "Johnston's Hotel" is actually the Peterborough County Jail on the banks of the Otonabee River, just across from the Quaker Oats plant. While the resemblance to "The Banks of the Don" is patent, it's a separate song. Edith Fowke met the self-declared author, who said he wrote it in the 1930s (although he clearly derived its tune from "The Mountjoy Hotel" and some lyrics from "The Banks of the Don"). As the author had been an inmate of the establishment at the time of composition, she thought it prudent not to reveal his identity. - PJS

Johnstown Flood (I), The [Laws G14]

DESCRIPTION: A distraught father tells a stranger about his share of the Johnstown tragedy. He, his wife, and his children had sought shelter from the flood in the upper part of the house, but the waters tore them from his grasp. He was rescued, but his family died.

AUTHOR: Joseph Flynn (source: 1889 broadside by Wehman)

EARLIEST DATE: 1889 (copyright on Wehman broadside)

KEYWORDS: flood death family

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

May 31, 1889 - The Great Flood in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, kills about 2500 people

FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,NE)

REFERENCES (4 citations):

Laws G14, "The Johnstown Flood"
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 61, pp. 135-138, "The Jamestown Flood" (1 text)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 153-155, "The Johnstown Flood" (1 text plus a broadside print)
DT 825, JAMESFLD

Roud #3254

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Johnstown Flood (II)" (subject)

NOTES [3908 words]: There have been many histories of the Johnstown Flood. One of the more recent is McCullough, one of the first works of this noteworthy historian, which provided the outline of what follows. I have since augmented it where possible, especially from O'Connor.
Johnstown is about sixty miles from Pittsburg, almost due east, on the line of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Interestingly, it is not on one of Pennsylvania's major rivers; the stream which caused the flood was the Little Conemaugh River, which joins Stony Creek (or "the Stony Creek," as the locals called it) at Johnstown to become the Conemaugh River, which eventually becomes part of the Kiskiminetas River, which flows into the Allegheny. McCullough, p. 24, describes both the Little Conemaugh and Stony Creek as fast but not particularly large. Stony Creek, because it was deeper, was considered the more dangerous at the time.

Johnstown was a fast-growing town; according to McCullough, p. 23, it had tripled in size in less than three decades. The reason was industrialization; Johnstown made steel and steel products such as plows and rails. It was a logical site for industry, with coal, iron, and limestone (O'Connor, p. 15). It reportedly was home to the nation's first Bessemer steel mill (O'Connor, p. 16). It can't have been a very comfortable place to live, with all the pollution and the noise and the cheap company houses, but it was doing well. At least for the company bosses.

Even in normal years, Johnstown was prone to flooding; about one spring in four saw water in the streets (O'Connor, p. 14). It probably didn't help that the local industries had narrowed the two rivers above their confluence, and even more below (O'Connor, p. 67).

What turned flooding to catastrophe was a man-made lake. A few miles above Johnstown on the Little Conemaugh was the hamlet of South Fork, where South Fork Creek joined the Little Conemaugh. A bit more than a mile above the town on South Fork Creek was a great dam, built some forty years before to create a lake variously called the Western Reservoir or the Old Reservoir or Lake Conemaugh.

The dam itself, made of earth, was sometimes called Three Mile Dam -- which was not very accurate (it apparently was a reference to the size of the lake behind it, but exaggerated). Still, it was an impressive structure, some 72 feet high and more than 900 wide. It was about 279 feet thick at the base. O'Connor, p. 29, says that it was the world's largest earthenwork dam. It had some stone at the base, and an outer casing of rip-rap, but based on O'Connor' numbers, it appears it was about 90% dirt. And the water usually was within six or seven feet of the top (McCullough, pp. 39-41). The total area of the lake was about 450 acres. The surface level was some 450 feet above Johnstown (so McCullough; O'Connor, p. 30, says 404 feet).

The building of the reservoir was one of those things that give government projects a bad name. The Pennsylvania legislature in 1836 had approved $30,000 to build a reservoir, according to McCullough; O'Connor, p. 32, says $10,000. The final cost, though, was $240,000. Worse, according to McCullough, p. 50, "two years after it was finished the whole thing would be obsolete and of no use whatsoever."

The whole thing was a boondoggle. Pennsylvania was jealous of New York's Erie Canal and wanted its own water transport system, even though that meant running a canal across the mountains! The idea was to haul barges over the passes using railroads. According to O'Connor, p. 31, the canal boats were actually assembled and disassembled as they went from canal to being carried on the train. It all worked, more or less, but it needed more water than was reliably available. So the Conemaugh was dammed to supply a steady flow of water in the summer (McCullough, p. 52).

Unfortunately, the whole project was a money pit, and construction was halted at times because the state of Pennsylvania couldn't come up with the cash. And this even though the South Fork dam was built of earth rather than rock because it was cheap to hire people to move dirt. The thing was finally completed in 1852 (O'Connor, p. 32).

Then the Pennsylvania Railroad finished laying track across the state. The big fancy canal system, which couldn't possibly compete on price with the railroads, instantly lost any purpose, and within two years, Pennsylvania was trying to sell it -- and found no buyers. Finally the Pennsylvania Railroad itself bought the canal -- not for the canal itself but for the land it rested on. They paid a low price -- and, naturally, stopped doing any work on the canals and on the useless (to them) dam maintaining the Western Reservoir (McCullough, p. 54); they had acquired the dam only because it was part of a package deal (O'Connor, p. 31).

Not long after, on June 10, 1862, the dam failed for the first time (McCullough, p. 54). The surviving records aren't really good enough to indicate why (O'Connor, p. 33, thinks the culvert under the dam collapsed). The result was a 200-foot-wide, 50-foot-deep gap in the dam.

The break was finally repaired in 1879. The repairs were, however, rather casual; it appears that little work was done on the dam's foundations (which had been undermined by the first break), and the pipes which relieved pressure, which had failed, were not replaced. The goal, after all, was not to control water flow; it was simply to built a country club for rich men who wanted to fish and breath clear air (McCullough, pp. 56-57). They may not even have wanted to replace the pipes -- that would allow the fish to escape (O'Connor, p. 43).
The club got the dam for almost nothing -- $2000, according to O'Connor, pp. 33-34 -- and fixed it with anything that came to hand, including leaves, sand, and tree stumps (O'Connor, p. 37). This flotsam apparently was not even rammed down (O'Connor, p. 42).

The locals were somewhat worried -- the regular spring floods, which had been a problem from the start, were growing worse each year as the rivers were more tightly channeled and deforestation increased runoff (McCullough, pp. 64-65). But there were enough people who thought the town was safe to make it impossible for the worriers to do anything about a reservoir outside their jurisdiction. A manager of the local ironworks at one point sent an engineer to look things over, and he sent a dire report -- but the club owners refused to pay any attention (McCullough, pp. 73-74; O'Connor, p. 39) even though the ironworks offered to help pay the costs (McCullough, p. 75).

The dam, in fact, had been rendered even more vulnerable than the engineer had noticed: The top had been lowered to allow a two-lane road across the top, meaning that the spillway to relieve pressure on the dam were barely below the dam's new crest (and the great danger to an earth dam was that water would go over the top and erode the soil). The spillway itself had had bars installed to keep fish from escaping -- but which also meant that the spillway could easily be blocked by rubbish. It is also likely (though not certain), that the vulnerable center of the dam sagged below the edges. McCullough, p. 76, concludes that, at the center, the top of the dam was only four feet higher than the spillway.

Conclusion: Any serious rise in the water level, unless water was released in an orderly way, would result in the overtopping and destruction of the dam. And, because the pipes at the bottom had been removed, there was no possible way to release water. Not only was the dam a disaster waiting to happen, it was a disaster that couldn't even be repaired, because the lake could not be lowered! (McCullough, p. 77).

McCullough, p. 41, estimates the weight of the water at 20 million tons. That's 18 million cubic meters, or 18 thousand million litres, or 5 thousand million gallons. (O'Connor, p. 43, agrees with the figure of 20,000,000 tons but computes this as 4.5 thousand million gallons.)

The flood was the result of a very major storm, first observed in Kansas and Nebraska on May 28, 1889 (O'Connor, p. 11). The next day, it dumped rain from Kansas to Michigan and Indiana. Then it arrived in Pennsylvania on May 30 (O'Connor, p. 12).

To make matters worse, it had been a wet spring, and most wetlands were saturated (O'Connor, p. 12). There was no place for additional water to go except straight into the rivers. And the storm was described as the worst storm ever recorded in the western parts of that state. In the Johnstown area, rainfall totals were usually in the six to eight inch range, though Pittsburg suffered only an inch and a half of rain (McCullough, pp. 21-22).

Johnstown was already starting to fill with water before the dam went out (McCullough, p. 79); by the second day of the downpour, the flood was higher than even the previous 1887 record (McCullough, p. 82). At least one landslide had been reported in the town (O'Connor, p. 50); others had affected the railroad in the area. The ironworks closed down due to flooding. Some people left town, but others, with strong houses or on slightly higher ground, stayed behind.

It appears that, at some point, a message was telegraphed to the townspeople saying the dam was in danger, but the text has been lost and it is not clear just what it said; in any case, it does not appear to have changed people's behavior much, perhaps because similar messages had been sent in the past (McCullough, p. 87; O'Connor, p. 63). A rider also took a message (O'Connor, p. 80), and there were attempts to telephone Johnstown, but many of the lines were down (McCullough, p. 93). Plus the Western Union telegraph office was flooding (O'Connor, p. 61).

The dam was now so full that it could not be ignored; workers were reportedly trying to cut a new spillway and to raise the central weak point (McCullough, p. 90). But the second spillway would have to be cut through rocky ground (O'Connor, p. 77), and there were only so many workmen; it was too late. An attempt to clear the original spillway, now largely blocked by debris, also failed (O'Connor, p. 76). By about noon, water started going over the top of the dam, and there were leaks lower down as well (McCullough, p. 95; O'Connor, p. 51, implies that leaks had begun some days earlier).

At 1:52 on May 31, a message went out that water was going over the top of the dam. Word that the dam was in the process of failing reached Johnstown around 2:45 (McCullough, pp. 96-97). It appears that, by 3:00, workmen were refusing to do any more work on the dam itself and were simply trying to clear the spillways. Then, at 3:10, the whole thing crumbled (McCullough, p. 100).

Estimates of how long it took the lake to drain ranged from about half an hour to forty-five minutes (O'Connor, pp. 80-81). Taking even the longest estimate and the lowest estimate for the content of the lake, that means roughly one hundred million gallons of water per minutes, or a million and a half gallons per second! This makes the total amount of water flowing at any given moment roughly equal to Niagara Falls (McCullough, p. 102; Internet sources give Niagara Falls a flow rate of about 750,000 gallons per second but peaking higher). The crest was said to be forty feet high (O'Connor, p. 83).

The first place to be affected by the flood was the town of South Fork, where the first casualties occurred (McCullough, p. 105). But the town was mostly on hillsides above the valley of South Fork Creek. The deluge wrecked a bridge and a low-lying mill, but most of the town survived. Johnstown, nine miles away in a straight line but thirteen along the course of the river, would not fare so well, nor would the hamlets in between.

Unfortunately, there was a great bend in the Little Conemaugh a couple of miles below South Fork, and a great railroad viaduct cutting across it. The wreck of this viaduct, plus the miscellaneous refuse picked up along the way, seem to have temporarily blocked the flow of the flood, allowing it to build up another big pressure head (McCullough, pp. 107-109). The village of Mineral Point was next to feel the flood; it was nearly destroyed, though only 16 people were reported killed (McCullough, p. 111; O'Connor, p. 84). There was quite a tangle as trains in the area had to be halted or re-routed (and places had to be found to put them and the lines were repaired and trains diverted). McCullough, p. 122, says that at least 23 train occupants died, in part because the train's crews did little to warn the passengers that they might need to flee.

Then it was the turn of the towns of East Conemaugh and Franklin, which were largely flooded and saw at least 28 people killed. Then the flood reached Woodvale, a relatively new town of about 1000 people. It had no warning at all, and was almost completely submerged. 250 houses were destroyed, and 314 people listed as killed (McCullough, p. 127). Supposedly only a few walls were left standing of the whole town (O'Connor, p. 93). It was still only about an hour since the dam had broken.

Finally the flood reached Johnstown -- by now carrying much heavy debris as well as water. The best guess is that the crest arrived in the town at 4:07 p.m., and took ten minutes to pass through the town (McCullough, p. 147; O'Connor, p. 95, says it came at 4:10 p.m.). Slowed slightly by the wash up the valley of Stony Creek, the flood built another dam of debris at a bridge below the town, which later caught fire (McCullough, p. 149). The bridge stood firm -- indeed, it was still in service carrying rail traffic when O'Connor wrote his book (O'Connor, p. 123). As a result, most of the wreckage of Johnstown and the other villages piled up there.

Hundreds of people were trapped in the debris pile, many of them still alive; it is estimated that only about 80 died in the debris prior to the fire (McCullough, p. 173). Reportedly some 300 bodies were burned (O'Connor, p. 124), meaning that only about a quarter were dead when the fire started. The debris would eventually have to be dynamited to clear the river (McCullough, pp. 227-228). But even once the fires died down and the waters ran downstream, the ordeal was not over. Probably in excess of 5000 people huddled on the hills above Johnstown (McCullough, p. 184; O'Connor's estimates are higher), many of them ill or injured, with their homes destroyed in the valley below. And the weather at the time was bitterly cold (McCullough, p. 197). Plus the gas and power were out -- there was fear of a gas explosion (O'Connor, p. 146).

To make things even harder, at a time when many desperately needed medical help, six of Johnstown's 35 doctors were dead (O'Connor, p. 146). Even those who survived had seen their offices and supplies washed away.

The locals eventually decided to hold a town meeting to appoint a "dictator" to try to manage emergency operations (McCullough, p. 189). At first, there wasn't even enough paper to take notes about the descriptions and properties of the dead bodies (McCullough, p. 192). There were so many curiosity seekers that eventually a system of passes had to be set up so that the militia could keep out those who did not belong (O'Connor, p. 197).

Lurid initial newspaper reports claimed ten thousand dead (McCullough, p. 203); one went so far as to claim 15,000 dead (O'Connor, p. 166).

McCullough, p. 193, notes that there was never an exact count of the dead; he lists 2209 as the "official" total (and gives this full catalog in an appendix) -- though he notes (p. 196) that two bodies were not recovered until 1906; it was obviously impossible to come up with an absolutely correct count. O'Connor, p. 200, cites 2205 as the "lowest official estimate" and 2287 as the highest. Of the bodies recovered, 663 would never be identified (McCullough, p. 194), in some cases because of decapitation by debris or burns so severe that features could not be made out. Plus many bodies were not discovered until they decomposed beyond recognition.

The total population of the Conemaugh valley was believed to be about 23,000, so a tenth of the population was killed. The rate for Johnstown itself was higher, though only slightly. Nearly 400 children under age ten were killed, and 98 lost both parents. Hundreds more lost one parent (McCullough, p. 195).

The song's account of a family literally torn apart by the flood, with most of them dying, seems to be artificial, but many such things did happen. The largest part of O'Connor's chapter "The Flood “Strikes” consists of such tales -- for example, the account on pp. 110-111 of the Fenn family. Mrs. Fenn saw her husband killed in the street. She and her seven children ended up on the roof when their home was destroyed. One by one the children were lost; only Mrs. Fenn survived.

Newspaper coverage of the event was constant -- O'Connor, p. 163, declares, "The editors of the nation's daily newspapers quickly seized upon the Johnstown flood as the biggest news break since Appomattox." (Ironic, given that most modern histories don't even mention it!) Coverage however was poor, simply because communications were so bad. O'Connor, p. 176, notes instances of newspapers lifting descriptions of the flood from George Elliot's The Mill on the Floss and even a book by the reforming novelist Charles Reade. It wasn't until June 3 that Western Union had enough wire strung to carry all the traffic (O'Connor, p. 177).

A number of stories accused foreigners of looting or even worse crimes; curiously, a number of these stories were reported from places that did not even exist (O'Connor, p. 188). However, O'Connor in p. 193 concludes that most of the instances of crime were committed by those who came from outside to take advantage of, or just to see, the chaos.

Relief efforts began quickly, naturally enough, and often raised quite a bit of money (McCullough, p. 199; on p. 225, he notes contributions totalling over $3,700,000, and that's in 1889 dollars! O'Connor's figure, on p. 247, is 17 million. Many relief supplies were sent as well, although some of them were of extremely poor quality, according to O'Connor, p. 212. The flip side is, Benet, p. 566, lists the damage at ten million dollars). And there was flooding in many areas beyond Johnstown (O'Connor, p. 200), so it was hard to bring in supplies. There was at the time no organization really devoted to emergency relief -- no FEMA, and while the Red Cross existed, it was still fairly new and didn't have standard procedures yet; Clara Barton -- although by now 68 years old -- herself would lead the trek to Johnstown (O'Connor, p. 205). It would be the largest operation in Red Cross history to this time (McCullough, p. 231).

It would be several days before the Pennsylvania militia showed up (McCullough, p. 202). O'Connor, p. 204, says that a full regiment of 600 men arrived on June 5. That's a big force at a time when the army numbered in the tens of thousands -- but they needed time to set up, and in the interim, there was a lot of crime and mismanagement. Often volunteers would just wander into the Conemaugh valley and, having no idea what to do, simply added to the burdens of those who were doing their best. Still others showed up to work -- but got drunk and caused trouble at night (O'Connor, p. 194), resulting in the establishment of a temporary nail (O'Connor, p. 195).

Fears of epidemics were felt as far away as Pittsburg (after all, the waters of the flood flowed into the Allegheny river); eventually men were assigned to try to clean up the river (McCullough, p. 209). They hauled, sawed, chopped, and eventually dynamited the great heap of flotsam trapped at the bridge (O'Connor, pp. 218-219) -- a process which caused secondary damage (O'Connor, p. 220). It was not until August 22 that the rivers were entirely clear.

In a small stroke of luck, the weather was cold and wet for more than a week after the disaster. It made everyone miserable, but it also helped prevent disease and decay (McCullough, p. 229). There was only one relatively minor outbreak of typhoid, which killed 40 and sickened 421 others (O'Connor, p. 224).

In the aftermath, attention naturally turned to the South Fork Fishing and Hunting Club, the maintainers of the dam. There were of course engineers who had publicly stated their concerns about its construction. The newspapers had a field day with this, though often exaggerating the engineers' reports (McCullough, pp. 242-249). Some members of the club did contribute to the relief funds -- the Carnegie Company gave $10,000, e.g. (McCullough, p. 255), but many club members did not give, and the club as a whole offered nothing. Nor were their officers making public statements (O'Connor, p. 226).

Lawsuits eventually began to be filed, but there was a limit on what this could yield -- after deducting a mortgage, the club had assets of only about $15,000 (McCullough, p. 257). The members had more, of course, but the whole principle of a corporation is limited stockholder liability.

There are few records of the actual trials, since transcripts were not kept (McCullough, p. 258), but in the end the club was not held liable. McCullough speculates that the great wealth and power of the club's members helped them.

Plus the great downpour was clearly natural. The only real fault was in the construction of the dam, and only a few officers would have known about that.

McCullough seems to consider the officers guilty, and I would too, but they too got off. The people of Johnstown were apparently bitter (McCullough, p. 264), but they were helpless. Perhaps they derived some small consolation from the fact that the flood, while it didn't destroy the club (except for the dam and the lake), did cause it to shut down (McCullough, p. 264); there wasn't much point in a fishing club with nowhere to fish!
Johnstown would begin rebuilt, and the iron mills came back; there were soon jobs for all the remaining workers. But its prosperity seems to have been damaged; the town has only about 30,000 residents now (more than in 1889, but not as much as its pre-flood population growth would suggest). The steelworks would again be flooded as early as 1891 (O'Connor, p. 244), and a major flood took place in 1936. The fact that there was no single great release of water was a great help in 1936 (O'Connor, p. 246). Still, power and telephones went out, and a third of area residents lost their homes, although only two dozen died. This finally promoted a real flood control project (O'Connor, p. 282), but there was another fairly major flood in 1977, according to Merriam Webster's Geographical Dictionary, though none to compare with 1889.

It is little surprise that the event produced songs; it was the biggest news of the day, and McCullough, p. 204, notes that a Pittsburg newspaper actually had to reduce the size of its pages to have enough paper to meet the demand. (Ironically, much of what they published was fiction, such as accounts of a messenger named Peyton who tried to warn people of the flood.) Laws believes this song to be too literary to be a purely folk composition; he suspects it of having been originally printed in a newspaper. This even though several papers loudly proclaimed that no such poems should be written! (O'Connor, p. 240). McCullough, p. 221, mentions poems written about the event. A popular piece of 1889 was "The Johnstown Flood" of Joe Flynn; I haven't seen a copy to compare. - RBW

Bibliography

Last updated in version 3.2
File: LG14

Johnstown Flood (II), The

DESCRIPTION: "On a balmy day in May, When nature held full sway." "Now the cry of distress rings from east to west." "Like Paul Revere of old Came a rider brave and bold," but the hearers ignored him. Many drowned, and many bodies were burned in the resulting fire

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends)

KEYWORDS: flood death fire warning

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

May 31, 1889 - The Great Flood in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, kills about 2500 people

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, pp. 456-459, "The Johnstown Flood" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

NOTES [35 words]: Roud lumps this song with the better-known "The Johnstown Flood (I)" (which see for historical references). But Laws does not list Korson's text with his #G14, and they appear to be different songs to me. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.2
File: KPL456

Join the Angel Band

DESCRIPTION: "If you look up the road you see father Mosey, join the angel band" (x2). "Do, father Mosey, gader your army." "O do mo' soul gader together." "O do join 'em, join 'em for Jesus." "Sister Mary, stan' up for Jesus." "Daddy Peter set out for Jesus"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
Joking Henry

DESCRIPTION: Joke and Henry are asleep on the railroad track when Joke gets hit by a brickbat. Joke says he'll henceforth sleep with a pistol, and with one eye open, and threatens the man who hit him; he thinks he may have seen the perpetrator going over a fence.

AUTHOR: Credited to G. B. Grayson

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recording, Grayson & Whitter)

KEYWORDS: violence

FOUND IN: US(SE)

RECORDINGS:

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "If I Lose, I Don't Care" (tune)
cf. "Battleship of Maine" (tune)
cf. "White House Blues (II)" (tune)
cf. "The Cannonball" (tune)

NOTES [43 words]: About as minimal a plot as you can get, but here it is. Clearly the record people misheard the title; it should be, "Joke and Henry". - PJS

Just speculation, but -- could "Joke" be Grayson, the alleged composer, and Henry be Henry Whitter, his accompanist? - RBW

File: RcJokHen

---

Jolie Blonde

DESCRIPTION: Cajun French. "Jolie Blonde, 'gardez donc, quoi t'as fait...." The singer accuses his "pretty blonde" of running off with someone else, and asks what future he can have. He declares that he will find another pretty blonde -- then asks her to come back.

AUTHOR: Amadee and/or Cleoma Breaux

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (recording, Amadee Breaux et al)

KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage love separation

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, p. 351, "Ma Blonde Est Partie (Jolie Blonde)" (1 text)

File: CAFS1351

---

Jolie Fleur de Rosier (Lovely Flower of the Rose-Tree)

DESCRIPTION: French. Singer's father's golden keys have fallen into the sea; she'll marry whoever retrieves them. A "galant" dives in, but the keys begin to ring out; on his second dive, he drowns. Someone (her father?) curses all young women, for the galant is dead.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes)

KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage grief promise death drowning tasks sea

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes, p. 72, "Jolie fleur de rosier (O Lovely Budding Rose-Tree)" (1 text + translation, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Isabeau S'y Promene (Isabel)" (plot)

NOTES [46 words]: While the plot is clearly related to "Isabeau S'y Promene", the protagonists are different enough that I split them. You should check that out, though. - PJS
And also "The Lady of Carlisle" [Laws O25] and its variants -- essentially the same plot, but with a happy ending. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.5

File: BerV072

Jolly Baker, The

DESCRIPTION: "I am a jolly baker, and I bake my bread brown...I've got the biggest rolling pin of any man in the town." A girl asks him to buy her a gown. She arrives with her "chemise up before." The baker lays her in many places, then boasts of other conquests

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1976 (collected by Logsdon from Riley Neal)
KEYWORDS: cook sex bawdy wordplay
FOUND IN: US(SW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
   Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 57, pp. 261-264, "The Jolly Baker" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10107
NOTES [53 words]: Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging notes a curious shift in this song: The first part is a double-entendre song, the end merely a series of sexual boasts. The strong impression is that the result is composite. But the first half seems to be unique, an the second too generic to identify, so I file it as one piece. - RBW

File: Logso57

Jolly Barber Lad, The

DESCRIPTION: A lady sends for a barber to come and curl her hair. He comes to the door; the lady says to send him up, for "My husband he's a yeoman, and I might as well have no man." She pays the barber; now he goes to shave her, but never takes his razor

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1969 (collected from John MacDonald)
LONG DESCRIPTION: A young lady sends for a jolly barber lad to come and curl her hair; he goes to "shave the lady, don't you know what I mean?" He comes to the door; the maidservant answers, and the lady says to send him up, for "My husband he's a yeoman, and I might as well have no man/He's just like a lady when he goes to bed with me." After the job is finished, she gives the young barber a sovereign and a crown; now he always goes to shave her, but he never takes his razor

KEYWORDS: infidelity sex wife husband work worker
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
   MacColl/Seeger-TravellersSongsFromEnglandAndScotland 37, "The Jolly Barber Lad" (1 tune, 1 text)
Roud #2515
CROSS-REFERENCES:
   cf. "The Chandler's Wife" (theme)
   cf. "The Coachman's Whip" (theme)
   cf. "The Farm Servant (Rap-Tap-Tap" (theme)
   cf. "My Husband's Got No Courage in Him" (theme)
   cf. "Fogan MacAleer" (see notes)
NOTES [52 words]: Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland re "Fogan MacAleer" makes "The Jolly Barber Lad" Lawrence Doyle's "model" for "Fogan MacAleer." Was "The Jolly Barber Lad" ever current in the Canadian Maritimes? Roud #2515 refers to a tape-recording from Ontario of "There Was a Jolly Barber and He Lived in Aberdeen." - BS

File: CcCST037

Jolly Beggar, The [Child 279]

DESCRIPTION: A beggar asks lodging. He is admitted to the house, but wants more than his beggar's fare. Receiving much of what he asks, he at last receives the daughter of the house into his cloak. He then reveals that he is a nobleman; (perhaps he marries the girl)
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1769 [Herd]
KEYWORDS: begging courting escape money sex nobility mother children
FOUND IN: Britain(England(West),Scotland(Aber,Bord)) Ireland US(NE,So)
REFERENCES (19 citations):
Child 279, "The Jolly Beggar" (3 texts)
Bronson 279, "The Jolly Beggar" (37 versions, but #21 is a fragment of "Johnny Lad" and #28 is "Davy Faa (Remember the Barley Straw)"); it is likely that several of the other texts also belong with other songs.)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 279, "The Jolly Beggar" (6 versions: #1, #6, #13, #15, #17, #36)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #30, p. 2, "The Jolly Beggar" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan2 274, "The Jolly Beggar" (10 texts, 7 tunes) {A=Bronson's #8, B=#20, C=#18, D=#14, E or G=#7}
Porter/Gower-Jeannie-Robertson-EmergentSingerTransformativeVoice #21, pp. 147-149, "The Beggar Laddie" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #6}
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 108, "The Ragged Beggar Man" (1 text)
Flanders/AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland1, pp. 223-225, "Hind Horn" (1 short text, properly titled "The Jolly Beggar," which might be "Hind Horn" [Shild #17] or "The Jolly Beggar" [Child #279] or a mix; 1 tune) {Bronson's #18}
Flanders/MigrantInNewEngland, pp. 47-48, "Hind Horn" (1 short text, properly titled "The Jolly Beggar," which might be "Hind Horn" [Shild #17] or "The Jolly Beggar" [Child #279] or a mix; 1 tune) {Bronson's #18}
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 108, "The Ragged Beggar Man" (1 text)
Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland, pp. 475-476, "The Jolly Beggar" (1 songster text)
Greig/Duncan2 274, "The Jolly Beggar" (10 texts, 7 tunes) {A=Bronson's #8, B=#20, C=#18, D=#14, E or G=#7}
Porter/Gower-Jeannie-Robertson-EmergentSingerTransformativeVoice #21, pp. 147-149, "The Beggar Laddie" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #6}
Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland1, pp. 223-225, "Hind Horn" (1 short text, properly titled "The Jolly Beggar," which might be "Hind Horn" [Shild #17] or "The Jolly Beggar" [Child #279] or a mix; 1 tune) {Bronson's #18}
Flanders/MigrantInNewEngland, pp. 47-48, "Hind Horn" (1 short text, properly titled "The Jolly Beggar," which might be "Hind Horn" [Shild #17] or "The Jolly Beggar" [Child #279] or a mix; 1 tune) {Bronson's #18}
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 9-12, "The Jolly Beggar" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #1}
Randolph 37, "The Jolly Beggar" (1 short text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #9}
Henry/Huntingdon-Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H183, p. 268, "The Rambling Suiler" (1 text, 1 tune, in which the visitor is not a nobleman but the colonel of a visiting headquarters; there might be a bit of "Pretty Peggy-O" mixed in)
MacColl/Seeger-TravellersSongsFromEnglandAndScotland 18, "The Jolly Beggar" (1 text, 1 tune)
Davis-MoreTraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 41, pp. 328-332, "The Jolly Beggar" (1 fragment, which Davis believes to be this song but which in fact could be almost anything)
Cox/Hercog/Halpert/Boswell-WVirginia-A, #14, pp. 61-63, "The Jolly Beggar" (1 text, but not from West Virginia) {Bronson's #1}
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN2500, "There was a jovial Begger-man"
DT 279, BEGGAR1* BEGGAR2 BEGGAR3* BEGGR4* BEGGAR5* BEGGAR6
ADDITIONAL: ADDITIONAL: James Johnson, Editor, _The Scots Musical Museum_ [1853 edition], volume III, #266, pp. 274-275, "The Jolly Beggar" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #118
RECORDINGS:
Jeannie Robertson, "The Jolly Beggar" (on FSB5, FSBBAL2) {Bronson's #6}
Lucy Stewart, "The Beggar King" (on LStewart1)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.13(1), "The Jolly Beggar" ("There was a jolly beggar and a begging he had been"), unknown, n.d.; also Firth c.26[57][some lines illegible], Firth c.26[57], "Was a Jolly Beggerman"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Gaberlunzie Man" [Child 279A]
cf. "The Beggar-Laddie" [Child 260]
ALTERNATE TITLES:
He Wadna Lie in Barn
The Beggar Man
NOTES [592 words]: Although this ballad is associated in tradition with James V of Scotland, there is no evidence that he ever courted in a manner such as this. James V in fact married a noble foreign lady, Mary of Guise-Lorraine. The basis for the song may be the fact that he was a fairly lusty liege; according to Stanley B. R. Poole, _Royal Mysteries and Pretenders_, Barnes & Noble, 1993, p. 36, he was thought to have had as many as nine illegitimate children.
There actually is a sort-of-similar situation in British history; when the future King George II, in seeking a wife, "raised the possibility of marrying Caroline [of Ansbach], his father insisted his son should meet her first, and suggested that he do so in disguise, so that he could make an honest assessment of her person and character. In 1705, George obediently travelled to Ansbach, where he was presented to an unsuspecting Caroline as a Hanoverian nobleman. He was smitten at their very first meeting. As intemperate in passion as in so much else, George insisted for the rest of his life that he had fallen in love with Caroline the moment he saw her" (Janice Hadlow, A Royal Experiment: The Private Life of King George III, Henry Holt, 2014 (published in Britain by William Collins as The Strangest Family), p. 30). However, the ending is somewhat different: "Without declaring himself, [George] hurried back to Hanover, and urged his father to open negotiations for her hand." The two soon married and had eight children.

However, it is hard to believe that that was the inspiration for this song, since the earliest versions of "The Gaberlunzie Man" date from no later than 1724, before George II even came to the throne. Child draws a distinction between this and "The Gaberlunzie Man" (which he calls "The Gaberlunyie-Man" -- and, indeed, his texts are metrically distinct ("Gaberlunzie Man" uses eight-line stanzas with four feet per line; "The Jolly Beggar" typically has the standard four-line 4-3-4-3 stanza). In addition, his "Gaberlunyie-Man" lacks the ending. However, both songs occur in tradition and have so heavily cross-fertilized that it is often not possible to distinguish.

If there is a distinction to be drawn, it is probably in the form of the ending. In "The Jolly Beggar," the beggar sleeps with the girl and then reveals his status the next morning (perhaps abandoning her); in "The Gaberlunzie Man," he lures the girl away (as opposed to sleeping with her on the spot), and only later returns and reveals his wealth.

Due to the degree of cross-fertilization of these ballads, one should be sure to check both songs to find all versions. - RBW

See the Bruce Olson note at "The Juggler"; Bruce sees "The Juggler" as a sequel to "The Jolly Beggar."

Of the Bodleian broadsides listed, "Was a Jolly Beggerman" lacks the usual ending. - BS

William Bernard McCarthy, in the article "Barbara Allen" and 'The Gypsy Laddie': Single-Rhyme Ballads in the Child Corpus," printed on pp. 143-154 of Thomas A. McKean, editor, The Flowering Thorn: International Ballad Studies, Utah State University Press, 2003, makes the interesting observation that there are only two ballads in the Child collection -- "The Jolly Beggar" [Child 279]/"The Gaberlunzie Man" [Child 279A] and "The Beggar-Laddie" [Child 280], which are known to cross-fertilize, which normally use the rhyme scheme aaab, with the same b rhyme in all the verses. This is an extremely common form in medieval carols (there are hundreds of such in R. L. Greene's collection); I have no idea if this is significant. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: C279

Jolly Cowboy (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "My lover, he is a cowboy, he's brave and kind and true"; when he comes home, the two meet joyfully and the boy talks about his life on the trail. She says they will marry when he returns; he is quoted as promising to quit herding when he marries

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Lomax)

KEYWORDS: love cowboy work separation reunion promise marriage

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys, pp. 86-88, "The Jolly Cowboy" (1 text)

Saffel-CowboyPoetry, p. 209-210, "The Jolly Cowboy" (1 text)

DT, JOLLCWBY*

Roud #4482

NOTES [46 words]: In print, with quotation marks to indicate who is saying what, this song makes sense, though even in print, the transitions seem abrupt. In song, without such helps, it strikes me as hard to comprehend. I wonder if it isn't composite -- after all, it was published by Lomax. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: Saffe209
Jolly Drover

DESCRIPTION: "In olden times before the war, There came a jolly drover," who visits the Black Horse Tavern and asks the "Bound-out girl" who attends him if she will marry him. He has lands and wealth, but she loves him in any case. They wed. That was long ago

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Maher, Historic Dover, according to Nestler); supposedly written c. 1840

KEYWORDS: love courting money marriage

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Harold Nestler, "Songs from the Hudson Valley" (article in _New York Folklore Quarterly_, Volume V, #2, Summer 1949), pp. 89-90 "The Jolly Drover" (1 text)

File: Nset089

Jolly Farmer (I), The

DESCRIPTION: The farmer sings about the joys of farming, even as a renter, and drinking with friends. "Here I am king so I'll dance, drink and sing, Let no man appear as a stranger, But show me the ass That refuses his glass And I'll order him hay in a manger"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1831 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 16(88a))

KEYWORDS: farming drink flowers food nonballad

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 30, "The Jolly Farmer" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1603

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 16(88a), "The Farmer" ("Come each jolly fellow"), R. Walker (Norwich), 1780-1830; also 2806 c.8(171), Harding B 25(622), Harding B 11(1150), Johnson Ballads 822 [illegible lines], "The Farmer[!]"

File: OLoc030

Jolly Fisherman (I)

DESCRIPTION: With a storm coming up, Captain Williams of Veronia sends a dory after halibut. Oars are lost and a buoy line parts. To save the dory, they cast halibut oil on the water and bale with their sou'westers until they are picked up next morning by Veronia.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Creighton-NovaScotia)

KEYWORDS: rescue fishing sea ship storm sailor

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 125, "Jolly Fisherman" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST CrNS125 (Partial)
Roud #1827

NOTES [8 words]: This song is item dD47 in Laws's Appendix II. - BS

File: CrNS125

Jolly Fisherman (II), The

DESCRIPTION: The singer says he is a fisherman, and "Fish just like men I've often caught -- crabs, gudgeon, poor John Codfish." He compares various sorts of people to various fish --- e.g. "false friends to eels" and the lawyer like a pike striking

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: work fishing nonballad

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H639, p. 59, "The Jolly Fisherman"
Jolly Fishermen

DESCRIPTION: "There come two (or three) jolly fishermen, Who've just come from the sea. "They cast their nets into the sea, And a jolly old fish caught they."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Wollaston and Crampton)
KEYWORDS: fishing playparty
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North,West))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  - Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 108, "Three Jolly Fishermen" (2 texts, 1 tune)
  - Mary A. Wollaston and C. Ward Crampton, The Song Play Book (New York, 1922 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 20, "Three Jolly Fishermen" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [12 words]: Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame refers to a close version from before 1850. - BS

Jolly Good Ale and Old (Back and Sides Go Bare)

DESCRIPTION: With chorus, "Back and sides go bare, go bare, Both hand and feet go cold...." The singer laments his sad state: "I cannot eat but little meat, My stomach is not good." He discusses his lack of clothing. But he, and his wife, revive for ale.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1575 (Gammer Gurton's Needle)
KEYWORDS: drink clothes hardtimes MiddleEnglish
FOUND IN: Britain
REFERENCES (10 citations):
  - Sidgwick/Chambers-EarlyEnglishLyrics CXXXIII, pp, 229-231, "(no title)" (1 text)
  - Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 43-44, "Back and Side Go Bare, Go Bare!" (1 text)
  - HarvardClassics-EnglishPoetryChaucerToGray, pp. 190-192, "Jolly Good Ale and Old" (1 text)
  - Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #554.5
  - DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #907
  - DT BACK&SID
ADDITIONAL: Norman Ault, _Elizabethan Lyrics From the Original Texts_, pp. 41-42, "Of Jolly Good Ale and Old" (1 text)
  - John Gassner, editor, _Medieval and Tudor Drama_, 1963, 1987 (references are to the undated Applause Books paperback), has Gammer Gurton's Needle on pp. 346-402; this song, which opens Act II, is on pp. 356-357.
  - Reginald Nettel, _Seven Centuries of Popular Song_, Phoenix House, 1956, pp. 49-50, "(no title)" (1 text)
Roud #V7039
CROSS-REFERENCES: cf. "Let the Back and Sides Go Bare" (chorus)
NOTES [181 words]: This has a literary look, and has been attributed to William Stevenson. But there appear to be variant forms. In the 1575 version in Gammer Gurton's Needle (found in Ault), there are only four stanzas, and the singer's wife is Tib. (Tib, based on the version in Gassner, was also the name in Gammer Gurton's Needle.) Nettel also has this type of text. The version in the Harvard Classics has eight stanzas and gives the wife's name as Kit. Unfortunately, though the Harvard version occurs in a number of anthologies in my library, none of them state their source! (Maybe they stole it from each other.) The Gammer Gurton version, if I read Ault correctly, was also found in a play, "Diccon of Bedlam." A play of this name was registered 1562-1563 -- though, if it was printed (not all things registered went to the press), no copies seem to have survived. The "back and sides go bare" chorus seems to have been quite popular; in this index, see also "Let the Back and Sides Go Bare." Granger's Index to Poetry, if I read this right, cites six different poems with this first line. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
File: DTbcksid

Jolly Good Song

DESCRIPTION: "A jolly good song and jolly well sung, And jolly good company everyone; And if you can beat it you're welcome to try, But always remember the singer is dry." "Give the old bounder some beer." "O half a pint of Burton, Wouldn't hurt 'un, I'm certain."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Simpson)
KEYWORDS: drink nonballad humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Jacqueline Simpson, _The Folklore of Sussex_, B. T. Batsford, 1973, p. 121, "(A jolly good song and jolly well sung)" (1 text)
Roud #1224
File: Sim121

Jolly Grinder, The

DESCRIPTION: "There was a jolly grinder Once lived by the river Don. He worked and sang from morn till night, And sometimes he worked none." The grinder rails against teetotalers, informing them, "Attend to your work if you've ought to do And don't interfere with me."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (Raven)
KEYWORDS: drink work
FOUND IN: Britain
REFERENCES (2 citations):
DT, JOLLGRND*
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Miller of Dee" (tune)
cf. "These Temperance Folks" (theme)
SAME TUNE:
The Miller of Dee (File: K229A)
NOTES [28 words]: This is quite obviously an answer to, and parody of, "The Miller of Dee," providing a somewhat sarcastic response to the (really rather tame) moralizing of that song. - RBW
File: DTjollgr

Jolly Highwayman, The

DESCRIPTION: "It's of a jolly highwayman, likewise a noted rover, I drove my parents almost wild when first I went a-roving." The first man he robs yields two hundred guineas. But when he robs his second man, in Covent Garden, he is captured and will soon be hanged

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Purslow-TheConstantLovers)
KEYWORDS: robbery prison execution
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Purslow-TheConstantLovers, p. 50, "The Jolly Highwayman" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1553
File: PCL050
Jolly Irishman, The

DESCRIPTION: "O Mother, O Mother, I'll tell you if I can, I rambled this world over with my jolly Irishman. I rambled and I jangled, and I rambled over town, No one could I find but my jolly Irishman." "He hugged her and he kissed her" and tells her to tell her mother

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1944 (Southern Folklore Quarterly 8)
KEYWORDS: love courting mother travel
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #237, "The Jolly Irishman" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #5046
NOTES [41 words]: This is probably a version of something or other -- perhaps "True-Born Irish Man (With My Swag All on My Shoulder; The True-Born Native Man)" -- but it's short enough that it's hard to be sure, so both Roud and I list it as a separate song. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.7
File: Morr0237

Jolly Jack the Sailor

DESCRIPTION: "It's Jolly Jack the sailor on board of a man-o'war" returns after seven years and takes the train to Lincolnshire to see his sweetheart. "Won't she jump for joy when she hears the news Jack has come home from sea" "We will set the bells a-ringing"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (recording, George Ling)
KEYWORDS: love wedding war return reunion sailor
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
Roud #1785
RECORDINGS:
George Ling, "Jolly Jack the Sailor" (on Voice12)
File: RcJoJaSa

Jolly Joe the Collier's Son

DESCRIPTION: "I am Jolly Joe the poor collier's son, Near Chester town I dwell." Joe courted several girls but loves Rachel. He sees Rachel with Jack. He fights Jack and is winning when Rachel begs him to stop and says she will marry him -- but he finds no happiness

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (collected from Henry Lee, according to Raven)
KEYWORDS: mining courting love rejection fight marriage
FOUND IN: Britain(England(West))
REFERENCES (4 citations):
ADDITIONAL: Jon Raven, _Vlctoria's Inferno: Songs of the Old Mills, Mines, Manufacturies, Canals, and Railways_, Roadside Press, 1978, pp. 66-67, "Jolly Joe the Collier's Son" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jon Raven, _The Urban and Industrial Songs of the Black Country and Birmingham_, Broadside, 1977, pp. 29-30, "Jolly Joe the Collier's Son" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jon Raven, _The Folklore and Songs of the Black Country Colliers_, Broadside, 1990, pp. 17-18, "Jolly Joe the Collier's Son" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roy Palmer, "'Birmingham Broadsides and Oral Tradition" -- essay found in David Atkinson and Steve Roud, Editors, _Street Ballads in Nineteenth-Century Britain, Ireland, and North America: The Interface between Print and Oral Tradition_, Ashgate, 2014, pp. 505`, "Jolly Joe the Collier's Son" (1 text)
Roud #1129
File: JRVI066

Jolly Miller (I), The

DESCRIPTION: Singer, a miller, says "I care for nobody, no not I, and nobody cares for me." His back is bent with work; his mill has strange new machinery, but he's content with a drop of whisky. He has engaged with Dr. Ramsey, the landlord, and does his bidding

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: work drink nonballad miller worker technology
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber),England(North,Lond)) US(NE,So)
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #41, p. 1, "The Miller o' Straloch"; "Folk-Song in Buchan," pp. 28-29, "The Miller of Straloch" (2 texts)
Greig/Duncan3 452, "The Miller o' Straloch" (6 texts, 4 tunes)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, p. 271, "The Jolly Miller" (1 text)
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 220-221, "The Jolly Miller" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 229, "The Jolly Miller" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 352, "There was a jolly miller once" (1 text fragment)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #124, p. 103, "(There was a jolly miller once)"
DT, JOLMILLR
Roud #503
RECORDINGS:
John Strachan, "The Jolly Miller" (on FSB3)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(449), "Their [sic] was a jolly miller" [error in title, not in text], J.O.
Bebbington (Manchester), c.1850; also Harding B 11(450), "Their [sic] was a jolly miller" [error in title, not in text]
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Miller of Dee" (refrain, subject)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Wee Millar
Willie Stroth
NOTES [76 words]: The Baring-Goulds report that this song, "a favorite of Sir Walter Scott's," was included in Bickerstaffe's 1762 opera "Love in a Village." They also say that it may have been based on the owner of the Dee Mill in Chester, which dated back to around the Conquest but burned down in 1895.
All of these references, however, may be to "The Miller of Dee"; the Baring-Gould fragment is only a single stanza. See Ben Schwartz's note on "The Miller of Dee." - RBW
Last updated in version 2.6
File: K229M

Jolly Neighbor
DESCRIPTION: "A man who has some good peanuts, And giveth his neighbor none" will in turn be given no peanuts when his own run out. "Oh, won't it be joyful... when his good peanuts are gone."
Similarly, he will have no joy when he is out of soda crackers or shortcake
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama)
KEYWORDS: food nonballad revenge
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 71, "Jolly Neighbor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5116
NOTES [27 words]: I would guess that this was a playground song intended to encourage sharing, but Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama's notes say nothing about the history of the song. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: Arno071

Jolly Old Hawk
DESCRIPTION: "Jolly (old hawk/goshawk) and his wings were grey." Cumulative song: The singer asks who will win his love, and recites the animals he gave as gifts: One hawk, two birds, three cocks (or a three-thistle cock), four pigs (or a four-hoofed pig), etc.
Jolly Old Jim

DESCRIPTION: "No man is no neater and trim Like a prince at the wheel Wit a heart full o' steel Tis the driver they call Uncle Jim." Jolly Jim is 75 and from Trepassey. "All the friends of the crowd they all feel proud He'll ne'er make his journey alone"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA-Leach)
KEYWORDS: nonballad friend
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
Roud #30135
RECORDINGS:
Leo Martin, "Jolly Old Jim" (on MUNFLA-Leach)
File: ML3JoOJi

Jolly Old Roger

DESCRIPTION: "Oh there never was yet a boy or man Who better could mend a kettle or pan, A bucket, a dipper, a skillet or can, Than jolly old Roger the tinker man." Roger lives in New Amsterdam; the song describes the funny old man

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Flanders and Brown)
KEYWORDS: tinker work
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,NE,So)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Randolph 496, "Roger the Tinker Man" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 74, "Johnnie O'Rogers" (1 text)
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 171-173, "Jolly Old Roger" (1 text, 1 tune)
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 222-224, "Jolly Old Roger" (1 text, 1 tune)
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, p. 111, "Tinker Man" (1 short text, 1 tune) cf. Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, p. 480, "Jolly Old Roger" (source notes only)
ST R496 (Partial)
Roud #3733
File: R496

Jolly Pedlar, The

DESCRIPTION: A pedlar meers a beggar wife and asks if she had a man. She suggests he get a job, or try "lasses on Cheapside." He says he had fine tools which she might try. She does. If you meet him "your maidenhead will go"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: sex bragging bawdy
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jolly Pilote, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, I am a jolly pilote, I land like a galloping goose, My motor barks like a Ki-yo-te," Soldiiers in the trenches face dange, but "the jolly pilote has to die." The Fokkers will kill him. He wishes he were a Kiwi (ground officer). Mama warned him

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe)
KEYWORDS: technology war death mother
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 177-180, "The Jolly Pilote" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27890
File: NiMo177

Jolly Pinder of Wakefield, The [Child 124]

DESCRIPTION: "Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John" trespass on the fields guarded by the Jolly Pinder. The Pinder challenges them; they fight. The Pinder holds off all three. Robin offers the Pinder a place in his band. The Pinder agrees to come once his present job is done

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1663 (garland; there is a Stationer's Register entry for "Robin Hood and the Pinder of Wakefield" from 1558)
KEYWORDS: Robinhood fight
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (11 citations):
Child 124, "The Jolly Pinder of Wakefield" (2 texts)
Bronson 124, "The Jolly Pinder of Wakefield" (2 versions)
Ritson-RobinHood, pp. 117-119, "The Jolly Pinder of Wakefield, with Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John" (1 text)
Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume I, pp. 32-36, "Robin Hood and the Pindar of Wakefield" (1 fragment)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 365-366, "The Jolly Pinder of Wakefield" (1 text)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, RZN16, "In Wakefield there lives a jolly pinder"
ADDITIONAL: Stephen Knight, editor (with a manuscript description by Hilton Kelliher), _Robin Hood: The Forsters Manuscript_ (British Library Additional MS 71158), D. S. Brewer, 1998, pp. 63-67, "Robin Hood and the Pinder of Wakefield 1"; pp. 68-70, "Robin Hood and the Pinder of Wakefield 2" (2 texts, the first being much longer than the garland text and probably edited; the second is close to the garlands)
Stephen Knight and Thomas Ohlgren, editors, _Robin Hood and Other Outlaw Tales_, TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2000, pp. 469-475, "The Jolly Pinder of Wakefield" (1 text, conflated from the Garland and Percy versions)
MANUSCRIPT: {MSForresters}, London, British Library MS. Additional 71158, the "Foresters Manuscript," items 10A and 10B
Roud #3981
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Wood 402(42), "The Jolly Pinder of Wakefield," F. Coles (London), 1658-1664; also Douce Ballads 3(118a), "Robin Hood and the jolly pinder of Wakefield"; Wood 401(61), "The Jolly Pinder of Wakefield: with Robin Hood, Scarlet, and John"
NOTES [776 words]: A pinder was an official charged with preventing trespassing and gathering strayed/lost/stolen livestock. This was a particularly significant task in towns which had open rather than enclosed fields. The pinder would also be responsible for caring for the livestock while ownership was determined, so the job could become fairly complicated.

For background on the Robin Hood legend, see the notes on "A Gest of Robyn Hode" [Child 117]. Although Child has only one ballad of the Pinder, the content of the Forresters manuscript implies that there were two (Knight, p. 62). The two ballads have the same plot, but the texts are of dramatically different lengths; the Forresters text preserves both, with Child's version corresponding to the shorter. The two Forresters texts are so close in plot that they must derive from the same material, but it is clear that there was substantial rewriting involved; the longer Forresters text is probably a rewrite, almost from scratch, of the shorter.

There is also a play, "George-a-Greene the Pinner of Wakefield," about this incident; it was published in 1599, according to Kunitz/Haycraft, p. 236. Knight, p. 62, seems convinced that it was written by Robert Green(e) (1558-1592), but Kunitz/Haycraft, p. 236, says that several plays were falsely printed under Green's name and allow only a possibility that this is one of his works. Child, who mentions the play in his headnotes, does not even refer to an author. NewCentury, p. 514, says, "ascribed to Green but without much evidence [is] George-a-Greene, the Pinner of Wakefield." Benet does not mention the "Pinner" at all in its entry on Greene.

STC has several "George á Greene" references, one of which is surely to the play:
#12212, p. 269, "A pleasant conceyted comedie of George a Greene, the pinner of Wakefield," printed by S. Stafford for C. Burby, 1599 and registered April 1, 1595. A note on p. 271, under Greene, says that this piece is sometimes attributed to Robert Greene, but the STC itself does not so attribute it.

To be sure, it hardly matters who wrote the play; the key point is that the play -- and hence, presumably, this story -- was in existence before 1600, as was some ballad on the subject, as shown by the Stationer's Register entry, although we do not know whether it is this ballad or another. Rollins, p. 113, #1308 is an entry from March 1, 1675 for "The jolly Pinder of Wakefeild" (sic.); no printer is listed. Rollins, p. 182, #2089 is "The Pinder of Wakefeld being the mad merry history of George Green the lusty Pinder of the North &c." printed February 4, 1632 by Edward Blackmore; Rollins thinks this actually a book although registered as a ballad. Rollins, p. 244, #2829, has "A ballet of Wakefyld and agreene", printed 1557-1558 by "Jno Wally, Mrs. Toy"; Rollins speculates that this is another edition of this piece.

At minimum, this entry proves that the connection of Robin Hood and a Pinder of Wakefield is early.

It is interesting to observe that the longer Forresters text of the "Pinder" calls the pinder "George a Green," as in the play (Knight, p. 63).

There actually was a George Green who was a Wakefield Pindar, according to Weinreb/Hibbert, p. 599. Having moved to London, he built in 1517 a building at 328 Gray's Inn Road. This came to be called the "Pindar of Wakefield," and in the time of Weinreb/Hibbert, it hosted "a regular 'Old Time Music-Hall'."

Fully half the Robin Hood ballads in the Child collection (numbers (121 -- the earliest and most basic example of the type), 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 130, 131, 132, (133), (134), (135), (136), (137), (150)) share all or part of the theme of a stranger meeting and defeating Robin, and being invited to join his band. Most of these are late, but it makes one wonder if Robin ever won a battle. Bronson notes that his two tunes for this song are both associated with Rimbault, whose handling of other Robin Hood melodies was, at best, cavalier.

There are other mysteries associated with the piece, which survives only in very defective forms. Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #816, p. 304, notes a stanza which does not seem to appear in the canonical texts:

The hart he loves the high wood,
The hare she loves the hill; - RBW
The knight he loves his bright sword,
The lady loves her will. - RBW

Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 206, "The hart he loves the high wood" (1 text) dates the song quoted above in Baring-Gould-Mother Goose to "a late-fifteenth century commonplace book from Broome Hall, Norfolk." - BS

Bibliography

Jolly Ploughboy (I), The

DESCRIPTION: There are "two brethren whose trades we still keep; The one was a ploughman ... The other a tender of sheep." The ploughman's year is reviewed: "we must labour from summer to spring" harvest to ploughing and sowing.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1888 (Sumner)

KEYWORDS: farming nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, pp. 152-153, "The Jolly Ploughboy" (1 text, 2 tunes)
OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart1 25, "The Jolly Ploughboy" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #202

NOTES [31 words]: It seems to me that I have heard a version of this with a religious sort of message, with the tender of sheep being Cain and the ploughman being Abel. But I can't remember details. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.0

File: BrMa152

Jolly Ploughboy, The (The Merry Plowboy, The Scarlet and the Blue)

DESCRIPTION: "I (am/was) a jolly ploughboy and I plowed the fields all day," but one day the singer has had enough and sets out to join the (British Army/IRA/other). He will not miss the farm. He will miss his girl but hopes to marry her. The army will conquer or die

AUTHOR: supposedly John J. Blockley (source: Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs)

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (recording by the Watersons)

KEYWORDS: farming soldier rambling love separation IRA

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North)) Ireland

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Gardham-EastRidingSongster 32, pp. 40-41, "The Jolly Ploughboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 16-18, "The Merry Ploughboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Behan-IrelandSings, #51, "The Merry Ploughboy" (1 text, 1 tune, heavily modified)
DT, JOLLPL03 DUBLNGRN DBLGRN (the Behan version)

Roud #163

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Warwickshire R. H. A.

Off to Dublin in the Green (localized version claimed by Dominic Behan)

NOTES [51 words]: Steve Gardham cites A. L. Lloyd to the effect that this was written by John J. Blockley in the 1870s and popularized by Harrigan and Hart. Dallas-TheCruelWars-
Jolly Ploughman Lad, The

DESCRIPTION: "The jolly jolly ploughman lad goes whistling o'er the lea." He "whistles a' the day ... And he trysts his bonnie lassie Jean." They marry. He still whistles and "bairnies play at hide and seek." When old they live happily among their grown children

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: age love marriage farming children
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 414, "The Jolly Ploughman Lad" (1 text)
Roud #5936
File: GrD3414

Jolly Plowboy, The (Little Plowing Boy; The Simple Plowboy) [Laws M24]

DESCRIPTION: A plowboy and a rich girl fall in love. When the girl's father finds out, he sends a press gang for the boy. The girl dresses in men's clothes and rows out to her lover's ship. She bribes the captain to return her lover

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1808 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 12(155))
KEYWORDS: love pressgang cross-dressing reprieve
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE) Canada(Mar,Newf) Britain(Scotland,England(Lond,South,West)) Ireland
REFERENCES (25 citations):
Laws M24, "The Jolly Plowboy (Little Plowing Boy; The Simple Plowboy)"
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 284-286, "The Jolly Plowbow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #117, pp. 1-2, "The Jolly Ploughboy" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan1 170, "The Jolly Ploughboy" (14 texts, 13 tunes)
Leather-FolkLoreOfHerefordshire, pp. 208-209, "The Pretty Ploughboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO GI 49, "Bonny Labouring Boy" (1 text)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Bk 5, "Pretty Ploughing Boy" (1 text)
OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart2 38, "The Pretty Ploughboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #94, "The Pretty Ploughboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #102, "The Pretty Ploughboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #73, "The Pretty Ploughboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 103, "Little Plowing Boy" (1 text plus a fragment)
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 71, "The Little Plowing Boy" (1 text)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 59, "The Simple Ploughboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 140, "The Pretty Ploughboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 233-234, "The Jolly Plowboy" (1 text)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H105, pp. 331-332, "The Jolly Plowboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 176-178, "The Jolly Ploughboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 224-225, "The Pretty Ploughboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland 46, "The Simple Ploughboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 45, "The Jolly Ploughboy" (1 text)
Finger-FrontierBallads, pp. 2-3, "(O, Jock the jolly plow boy" (1 fragment, 1 tune, possibly this)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 167, "The Simple Ploughboy" (1 text)
DT 584, JOLLPLOW (BRSKLIVE -- listed as Laws A15, but this is impossible; it appears to be this song with some odd verses about the boy being wounded)
Cow," and "Canadian Boat Song")
Roud #186
RECORDINGS:
Daisy Chapman, "The Jolly Ploughboy" (on SCDChapman01)
Harry Cox, "The Pretty Ploughboy" (on Voice02)
Mrs. Mary Ann Galpin, "The Pretty Ploughboy" (on PeacockCDROM)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 12(155), "The Pretty Plough Boy," Burbage and Stretton (Nottingham), 1797-1807, also Harding B 11(3164), Firth c.12(288), Harding B 11(1400), 2806 c.17(335)[some words illegible], Firth b.25(108), Harding B 12(135), "The Pretty Plough Boy"; Harding B 25(1506)[almost entirely illegible], "Plough Boy"; Johnson Ballads 1403, Johnson Ballads 1450, "[The] Pretty Ploughboy"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Cawsand Bay" (plot)
cf. "Disguised Sailor (The Sailor's Misfortune and Happy Marriage; The Old Miser)" [Laws N6]
cf. "Jack Monroe (Jackie Frazer; The Wars of Germany)" [Laws N7]
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Poor Ploughboy
The Hills o' Traquair
NOTES [36 words]: Bunting (Edward Bunting, The Ancient Music of Ireland (Mineola, 2000 (reprint of 1840 Dublin edition)), #23, "The Jolly Ploughman") only prints a first verse; it shares three lines with many versions of this song. - BS
Last updated in version 5.0
File: LM24

Jolly Puddlers, The
DESCRIPTION: "They want to stop our puddling, as many of you know, Contractors say that of our slush there is an overflow," but this would cause trouble in Bendigo. The singers claim that digging in the stream banks is all that keeps the local economy going AUTHOR: Charles R. Thatcher (1831-1878)?
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Anderson-ColonialMinstrel)
KEYWORDS: mining river hardtimes
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 39-40, "The Jolly Puddlers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Anderson-GoldrushSongster, pp. 32-33, "The Jolly Puddlers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Anderson-ColonialMinstrel, pp. 48-49, "The Jolly Puddlers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Anderson/Thatcher-GoldDiggersSongbook, pp. 35-36, "The Jolly Puddlers" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Jolly Waggoner" (tune)
NOTES [105 words]: Anderson-ColonialMinstrel, pp. 47-49, explains that puddling was a method for extracting gold based on placing large amounts of dirt in a special puddling tub and running a lot of water through it. The gold would settle out; the sludge, from which the gold had been extracted, was washed away -- and polluted the area around the puddling machinery. This led to demands for a solution, and attempts to collect a fee for puddling. Hence Thatcher's song. For brief background on Charles Thatcher's career, see the notes to "Where's Your License?" For an extensive collection of his songs, see Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: AnSo039

Jolly Raftsman O, The
DESCRIPTION: "I am sixteen, I do confess, I'm sure I am no older O, I place my mind, it never shall move, It's on a jolly raftsman, O." She praises his work and calls him "brave as Alexander," though someone (her mother?) wants her to marry a freeholder
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Fowke)
KEYWORDS: love logger courting mother
FOUND IN: Canada(Ont)
Jolly Ranger, The

DESCRIPTION: "I am a jovial/jolly ranger, I fear no kind of danger, To sorrow I'm a stranger, And so let mirth abound." The singer recalls leaving home and going to London, where he was treated as a bumpkin. He visited other towns. Now he is home and intends to stay

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Broadwood)
KEYWORDS: home travel rambling rejection
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Broadwood-EnglishTraditionalSongsAndCarols, pp. 100-101, "Travel the Country Round" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1067
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Jovial Ranger
File: LEBC100

Jolly Roving Tar [Laws O27]

DESCRIPTION: Susan fondly recalls her sailor love. She sets out to ensure that her father's ships are well equipped for his sake. Finally she bids farewell to the local ladies and sets out to follow her "jolly roving tar."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1839 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 16(119c))
KEYWORDS: sailor parting rambling reunion
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar) Ireland
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Laws O27, "Jolly Roving Tar"
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H670, p. 293, "The Jolly Roving Tar" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, p. 178, "Jolly Roving Tar" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 12, "Jolly Roving Tar" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 744, JOLROVTR
Roud #913
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 16(119c), "The Jolly Roving Tar," J. Catnach (London), 1813-1838; also Firth c.13(77), 2806 c.16(242), Harding B 11(859), Harding B 11(860), Harding B 26(302), Harding B 11(3444), Firth c.13(78), "The Jolly Roving Tar"
NOTES [100 words]: Broadside Bodleian Harding B 26(302), "The Jolly Roving Tar ("As I roved out one evening in the pleasant month of May"), Haly (Cork), 19C, while undated, dates itself by its last add-on verse: "So now these lines are at an end the truth I will unfold Young Susan she got married to her young sailor bold With him she faced the Russians and feared no wound or scar, But now she lives contented with her jolly roving tar." - BS
[To clarify, the above verse probably implies a Crimean War date. But it could well be a late add-on -- note that there were few battles between British and Russian navies. - RBW]
Jolly Sailor (I), The
DESCRIPTION: "A lady born of birth and fame, To Greenwich town for pleasure came," where she sees a handsome sailor. She asks him why he remains single. He is too poor to marry. She says she will provide for him. He agrees to marry her; they settle in Kent
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (Ashton-RealSailorSongs)
KEYWORDS: sailor love poverty marriage
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ashton-RealSailorSongs, #59, "The Jolly Sailor; or, The Lady of Greenwich" (1 text)
Roud #952
BROADSIDES:
File: AshS059i

Jolly Sailor's True Description of a Man-of-War, The DESCRIPTION: "When first on board of a man of war We go, whether by press or enter," the new sailors are teased by the ship's old hands. The singer details life on the ship, describes going to sea, waxes sarcastic about some aboard, and toasts his friends
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Firth)
KEYWORDS: sailor ship pressgang hardtimes drink
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 49, "The Jolly Sailor's True Description of a Man-of-War" (1 text)
Roud #V30565
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth c.12(450), "The Jolly Sailor's True Description of a Man-of-War,," unknown, n.d.
File: PaSe049

Jolly Sailor's Wedding, The
DESCRIPTION: "Give me service to the young man That lives in the town below"; the girl promises to go with Jamie whether her mother agrees or not. Her mother says that he might die in the wars. When the mother sees the girl is determined, she gives her 500 pounds
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (Ashton-RealSailorSongs)
KEYWORDS: love courting sailor mother money
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ashton-RealSailorSongs, #72 insert, "The Jolly Sailor's Wedding" (1 text)
Roud #23088
File: AshS072i

Jolly Sailors
DESCRIPTION: "I am a jolly rover [or sailor boy(s)], Just lately come on shore. I spent my time in jubilee [or money on a moonlight night] as I have done before" "... march all round ... Until I come to a pretty, pretty girl, And I'll kiss her kneeling down"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1609 (Ravenscroft's _Deuteromelia_, according to _Sea Songs and Ballads_)
KEYWORDS: courting playparty sailor
FOUND IN: Britain(England(West)) Canada(Ont) US(MW)
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 39, "Jolly Sailors" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Jolly Sailors Bold (I)

DESCRIPTION: The singer ridicules farmers on land and compares their easy life with the dangers faced by sailors. But "we'll sail into all parts of the world ... And we'll bring home all prizes ... We spend our money freely, And go to sea for more"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia)

KEYWORDS: bragging farming sea ship ordeal nonballad sailor

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar) Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 95, "Jolly Sailors Bold" (1 text)
Purslow-TheConstantLovers, p. 70, "Poor Jolly Sailor Lads" (1 composite text, 1 tune)

Roud #3289 and 1664

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Maids of Simcoe (Ontario)" (theme)

NOTES [187 words]: Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia: "The source of this song, and of a great many similar ones, is the famous broadside 'Ye Gentlemen of England, or When the Stormy Winds Do Blow,' composed by Martin Parker, and first issued about 1635."

This is a sailor's version of "Maids of Simcoe" (it has the same Roud number). It is also "Ye Gentlemen of England (I)" [Laws K2], but without a disaster of any kind.

Roud splits the British and Canadian versions of this song (the English "Poor Jolly Sailor Lads" being #1664 and the Canadian "Jolly Sailors Bold" #3289), but I think that he simply didn't note the similarities; both often open with a call to read what is written rather than hearing what is sung; both compare farmers and sailors, to the detriment of the former; both end with the sailors spending their money and going back to sea. I call that the same song. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2

File: Mack995

Jolly Shanty Boy, The

DESCRIPTION: Singer boasts of being a jolly (and jauntily dressed, if ragged) shanty boy, to whom women are always attracted. He sings, "For I don't care for rich or poor/I'm not for strife and grief/I'm ragged, fat and lousy, and/As tough as Spanish beef."
Jolly Sportsman, The

DESCRIPTION: A girl seduced by a sportsman names her baby Maidenhead. She puts the baby and some cherries in a hamper. She meets another sportsman who offers to buy her hamper and her maidenhead. She refuses to return his money when all he gets is the hamper.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1828 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 28(206))
KEYWORDS: sex bargaining trick humorous baby wordplay rake
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan2 306, "The Sportsboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5863
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 28(206), "The Jolly Sportsman" ("It's of a jolly sportsman was hunting o'er the lawn"), W. Wright (Birmingham), 1820-1827; also Harding B 11(4150), Harding B 25(1003), "The Jolly Sportsman"

File: Gr2306

Jolly Thresher, The (Poor Man, Poor Man)

DESCRIPTION: The rich man asks the poor man how he can support such a large family with so many young children. The poor man answers, "I make my living by the sweat of my brow." In some texts the rich man gives him some sort of reward for all his hard work

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1685 (broadside); 1792 (Scots Musical Museum)
KEYWORDS: dialog work poverty
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,NE,SE,So) Britain(England(All),Scotland(Aber)) Ireland
REFERENCES (22 citations):
Randolph 127, "Poor Man, Poor Man" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 58, "The Thresherman" (1 text)
Cox/Hercog/Halpert/Boswell-WVirginia-A, #21A-B, pp. 85-88, "Poor Man, O Poor Man," "There Was a Rich Englishman" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol2, p. 32, "Jolly Reapers" (1 fragment, 1 tune; possibly this although it's too short to really tell)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 253, "The Jolly Thresher" (1 text, 1 tune)
Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, pp. 68-69, "The Thresher and the Squire" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 138, "The Nobleman and the Thresher" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 336)
Copper-ASongForEverySeason, pp. 274-275, "The Labourer" (1 text, 1 tune)
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 118-119, "The Nobleman and Thrasher" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #23, "The Jolly Thresherman" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 146, "The Jolly Thresher" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jolly Tinker (I), The

DESCRIPTION: The tinker comes to town to mend the pots. He observes that "A tinker never marries, has a girl in every town...." "I've never stored much gold, but I have a lot to spend." "My life is wild and free, and I do not seek renown. I'm just a jolly tinker..."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl)

KEYWORDS: work sex rambling

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 72, "The Jolly Tinker" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, JOLITNK2

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Tinker"

NOTES [65 words]: Tinkers had a reputation for wantonness, and a large bawdy repertoire built up around them. It is often difficult to decide if the songs are related or not. Since this song is "clean" and "The Tinker" is dirty, I decided to separate them. But I'm not confident about it. Warner for some reason links this with Laws F24, "The Peddlar and His Wife" -- but that is a song about a murder! - RBW

File: Wa072

Jolly Tinker (III), The

DESCRIPTION: A London lady tells a tinker she has kettles to mend. He asks if there are holes that need blocking; they fall to work. She bangs a pan "to let the servants know that he was hard at work." Refrain: "And I'll be bound she had (he could, they did, etc.)"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (recorded from Billy Dickeson)

A London lady, desiring the company of a tinker, writes and tells him she has kettles to mend. He comes, asking if there are any rusty holes that need blocking; she leads him to the bedroom and they fall to work on the feather-bed. She picks up a pan and he bangs it "to let the servants know that he was hard at work"; she pays him, saying they'll have another round.

Refrain: "And I'll be bound she had (he could, they did, etc.)"

KEYWORDS: sex work, bawdy, tinker

FOUND IN: Britain (England, South, Scotland), Ireland (South)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Kennedy - Folksongs Of Britain And Ireland 177, "The Jolly Tinker" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, JOLLTNK4* JOLLTNK3

Roud #863
RECORDINGS:
Thomas Moran, "The Jolly Tinker" (on FSB02)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Tinker" (plot)
File: K177

Jolly Union Boys, The

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you jolly Union boys. To you the truth I'll tell, Concerning Governor Jackson Who I know very well." A curious and compressed account of events in Missouri from the beginning of the Civil War to the Battle of Pea Ridge

AUTHOR: B. Locke?
EARLIEST DATE: 1934

KEYWORDS: Civil war, political

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Aug 10, 1861 - Battle of Wilson's Creek
Mar 7-8, 1862 - Battle of Pea Ridge/Elkhorn Tavern

FOUND IN: US (So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 242, "The Jolly Union Boys" (1 text)

Roud #3598

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Joe Stiner" (concerning Battle of Wilson's Creek)
cf. "Root, Hog, or Die (Confederate Version)" (concerning Battle of Wilson's Creek)
cf. "Sterling Price" (concerning Battle of Wilson's Creek)
cf. "The War in Missouri in '61" (concerning Battle of Wilson's Creek)

NOTES [579 words]: Trying to describe the complex events in Missouri at the beginning of the Civil War is almost impossible; for an inadequate summary, see the notes to "The War in Missouri in '61."

Suffice it here to say that both Union and Confederacy sought to control Missouri (though Unionists were probably the majority in the state), but that the Union efforts were somewhat more efficient and succeeded in the end.

The key players mentioned in the song are:
Governor (Claiborne) Jackson -- The governor of Missouri in 1861, he tried to seize the Federal arsenal to bring the state into the Confederacy. He was thwarted primarily by the efforts of Captain (later General) Nathaniel Lyon. Jackson did, as noted, manage to walk off with a large part of the state's cash reserves.

Thomas Price -- A Missouri congressman and Unionist, one of those who helped organize against Jackson.

Harney -- William S. Harney. A regular army Brigadier, he was the Federal officer in charge in St. Louis when the war broke out. Rather sympathetic to the Confederacy, his behavior was so lethargic that Congressman Frank Blair maneuvered his ouster and gave most of his powers to General Lyon.

"Billy" Frost -- Daniel M. Frost. Appointed by Governor Jackson to seize the Federal arsenal, he instead fell into Lyon's hands. He was later exchanged and served in the Confederate armies, but his failure in 1861 badly hurt the Confederate cause in Missouri.
"A lion" -- Obviously a reference to General Lyon, the bulwark of the Federal forces until his death at Wilson's Creek.
"McCulla brought up artillry" -- refers to General Benjamin McCulloch, who was Confederate commander at Wilson's Creek (sort of; he led the Arkansas troops. The Missouri troops were under Sterling Price. Price actually had a higher rank -- he was a Major General, McCulloch only a Brigadier -- but McCulloch had a commission from Jefferson Davis, whereas Price's was a local rank, and finally Price decided to accept his orders rather than leave their armies to be defeated in detail. But the two never worked together well).
At Wilson's Creek, Lyon (outnumbered two to one) tried an enveloping attack, with Sigel's brigade arriving from a different direction. Sigel's troops fell apart after coming briefly under fire, and Lyon's remaining troops had to face a heavy assault from the Confederates. The Federals held on all morning -- the southerners had almost no training as soldiers -- but retreated when Lyon was killed. Sigel -- Franz Sigel, who kept getting commands because German immigrants respected him, but who never did much with his troops. At Carthage (July 5, 1861) he fled without a fight; at Wilson's Creek his troops fell apart. Only at Pea Ridge was his performance respectable.
"a little old Creek bottom" -- the battlefield at Wilson's Creek. Each side lost about 1200 men (of some 5500 Federals and 11,500 Confederates engaged).
Price #2 -- Sterling Price, Confederate commander of Missouri troops. Leader of half the troops at Wilson's Creek (see under McCulloch).
"It done for old Ben" -- Ben McCulloch was killed at Pea Ridge (Arkansas) in 1862. At this battle, a strong Confederate force under Earl Van Dorn was unable to dislodge a weaker Union force. This finally dashed Confederate hopes in Missouri.
For more on the Battle of Pea Ridge (one of the more important battles of the war, though it doesn't get much ink), see the notes to "The Battle of Elkhorn Tavern or The Pea Ridge Battle" [Laws A12].
- RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: R242

Jolly Waggoner, The
DESCRIPTION: "When first I went a-wagonin', a-wagonin' I did go, I filled my parents' hearts full of sorrow, grief and woe." The singer recalls being rained on, seeing birds in summer, driving hard roads in the winter. He rejoices to reach home and wife
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1847 (Dixon)
KEYWORDS: home travel wife hardtimes
FOUND IN: Britain(England(All))
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 428-4229, "The Jolly Waggoner" (1 text)
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 157, "The Jolly Waggoner" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 454)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 230, "The Jolly Waggoner" (1 text, 1 tune)
OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart1 27, "The Jolly Waggoner" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pamer-ECS, #16, "The Jolly Waggoner" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #98, "The Jolly Waggoner" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1088
NOTES [118 words]: Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland lists a number of earlier versions of this song -- but much of his text is floating-type material, and he is known to lump completely unrelated songs. So I have not listed any of the versions in his bibliography; most are probably this piece, but chances are that at least a few are not. And I don't know which. - RBW
The Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames text is, with very minor changes, the same as Bell's text.
Kennedy reports this in both James Henry Dixon, Ancient Poems, Ballads, and Songs of the Peasantry of England (London, 1846) and Bell (1857). I don't find it in Dixon; if I'm right rather than just sloppy, Bell found this and did not crib it from Dixon. - BS
Last updated in version 4.1
File: K230
Jolly Wat

DESCRIPTION: Jolly Wat, a shepherd, sits on a hill and plays his pipes. He is awakened by an angel announcing the birth of Jesus. He finds the baby and offers him all he has. Mary and Joseph send him back to his flocks with their blessing

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1537 (Richard Hill MS., Balliol Coll. Oxf. 354)

KEYWORDS: Jesus religious MiddleEnglish

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (10 citations):
- Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols, #78, p. 49, "(The sheperd upon a hill he satt)" (1 text)
- Rickert-AncientEnglishChristmasCarols, pp. 99-102, "The Jolly Shepherd Wat" (1 text)
- Sidgwick/Chambers-EarlyEnglishLyrics LXVII, p. 127-129, "(no title)" (1 text)
- Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 103, "Jolly Wat" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Roman Dyboski, _Songs, Carols, and Other Miscellaneous Poems from the Balliol Ms. 354, Richard Hill's Commonplace Book_, Kegan Paul, 1907 (there are now multiple print-on-demand reprints), #30, pp. 16-18, "[The Jolly Shepherd Wat]" (1 text)

Given the age and place of origin of the piece, we should not automatically assume that

"Joly"="Jolly" means "happy" or "cheerful"; there is a good chance that it means "active" or "energetic."

David R. Parker, _The Commonplace Book in Tudor London: An Examination of BL MSS Egerton 1995, Harley 2252, Lansdowne 762, and Oxford Balliol College MS354_, University Press of America, 1998, on p. 76 says that this is one of three shepherd carols in this part of Richard Hill's manuscript, adding:

"Of the three... 'Joly Wat' most closely follows the image of the rustic. In the same way that the Second Shepherd's Pageant uses homely imagery to make Christ's nativity more accessible and affecting, 'Joly Wat' uses a convincingly realistic portrayal of Wat's appearance and life to draw the medieval listener (for this was almost certainly a song) into the story. Wat is introduced lying upon his hill, his tabard and pipe by his side, and his dog tied to his belt. When he sees the Star of Bethlehem (which here is 'rede as blod'), he makes his farewell to man and beast alike ('Dog, kepe well my shep fro e corn') and runs to Bethlehem so quickly that 'he swe: he had gon faster than a pace.' He offers his gifts to the Christ Child: 'my skrype, my tarbox, & my skyrte,' homely gifts not unlike the tennis balls offered by the shepherds in the Second Shepherd's Pageant. This method of tying the common man to a significant religious event is completely appealing to Richard Hill, much of whose book is devoted to finding texts that help him make sense of his faith." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: 0BB103

Jolly Young Ploughman Lad, The

DESCRIPTION: "The jolly young ploughman lad Goes whistlin' o'er the lea; There's nane in a' the country roon Has a heart sae blythe and free." He loves "bonnie lassie Jean" and "Jeanie lo'es the winsome laddie That ca's the cairt and ploo"

AUTHOR: unknown
Jolly Young Sailor and the Beautiful Queen, The [Laws O13]

DESCRIPTION: A rich girl has turned down many suitors, but becomes entranced when a (sailor) wanders by. She urges him to stay (ashore) and marry a rich girl. He doesn't want to give up his rambling ways, but finally consents when she offers him her hand and wealth

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland)
KEYWORDS: courting marriage rambling money sailor
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar,Newf) US(MA,NW,So) Ireland
REFERENCES (14 citations):
Laws O13, "The Jolly Young Sailor and the Beautiful Queen"
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 298-299, "The Jolly Young Sailor and the Beautiful Queen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 30, "The Jolly Stage Driver" (1 text, 1 tune)
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 188-189, "The Journeyman Tailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H620, p. 476, "The Journeyman Tailor" (1 text, 1 tune [text incorrectly states that this is Laws B6, but the notes give the correct Laws number!])
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 66, "William the Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 90, "The Journeyman Tailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 179-183, "Jovial Young Sailor" (5 texts, 3 tunes)
Peacock, pp. 582-583, "The Sailor and the Lady" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 33, "The Jolly Young Sailor and His Beautiful Queen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland 73, "Bound Down to Derry" (1 text, 1 tune)
