DESCRIPTION: "Oh the moment was sad when my love and I parted." The singer is called to fight across the ocean. The singer fights but saves his money and booty. When peace is declared he returns home to find she had died.

AUTHOR: George Coleman (1762-1836) (source: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)
EARLIEST DATE: 1791 (Coleman's play _The Surrender of Calais_, according to Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)
KEYWORDS: love war separation death soldier
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 173, "Savourneen Deelish" (1 text, 1 tune)
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 13, "Savourneen Deelish" (1 text)
Winstock-SongsAndMusicOfTheRedcoats, pp. 99-102, "Savourneen deelish" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 52, "Savourneen Delish" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2070, p. 139, "Savourneen Deelish Eileen Oge" (1 reference)
Roud #V938

BROADSIDES:
LOCSheet, sm1851 680750, "Savourneen Deelish Aileen Oh," William Hall and Son (New York), 1851; also sm1851 491570, "Savourneen Deelish" (tune)
LOCsinging, as203250, "Savourneen Deelish Eileen Oge," H. De Marsan (New York), 1861-1864
Bodleian, Harding B 18(433), "Savourneen Deelish Eileen Oge," H. De Marsan (New York), 1864-1878; also Harding B 11(3432), "Savourna Deelish" or "The Moment was Sad"; Harding B 11(2993), Firth c.14(215), "Eileen Oge!" or "Savourneen Deelish"

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Savourneen Deelish Eileen Oge
NOTES [211 words]: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815: "The song was immensely popular during the 19th century.... 'Savourneen Deelish' is an anglicization of 's a mhuirnin dilis', literally 'and my own true love', the first phrase of the chorus of several Irish language songs." Broadside Bodleian Harding B 18(433) and LOCsinging as203250: H. De Marsan dating per Studying Nineteenth-Century Popular Song by Paul Charosh in American Music, Winter 1997, Vol 15.4, Table 1, available at FindArticles site. - BS
William H. A. Williams, 'Twas Only an Irishman's Dream, University of Illinois Press, 1996, p. 35, gives a slightly different form of the source phrase, "a mhuirin dilis," "my faithful sweetheart."
The popularity of the song may well be explained by its familiar theme. In Ireland there were few jobs available, especially to Catholics, except working on their parents' farm. And a young man without property, having no prospects, could not marry. So he either waited until his father died and he inherited some land, or he could join the army. And, in those days, joining the military usually meant a long stay far in a foreign land, with no communications with home; even if both he and his love were literate (unlikely), the mail was expensive and unreliable. - RBW

Saw Ye My Savior?

DESCRIPTION: An account of the death of Jesus. The opening verse states "He died on Calvary, to atone for you and me." The song goes on to mention the darkness on the cross, the earthquake, the pain, and his forgiveness

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland)
KEYWORDS: dying Jesus religious Easter
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland, pp. 122-123, "Saw You My Saviour" (sic.) (1 text, 1 tune)
ST FO122 (Partial)
Roud #4679
Sawmill Song, The

DESCRIPTION: "Mel Clark gets the cream of the berries, Tom Melanson don't think it no fun, Little Joe Dyer, in the pit a-hollerin', Wonders why the damn' thing don't run." The singer describes the work done (perhaps not very efficiently) in the sawmill

AUTHOR: Dana Cate

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland); informant claims to have written it c. 1909

KEYWORDS: work nonballad technology

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
-Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 280-283, "The Sawmill Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
-Roud #3741
-File: Lins280

Sawna Ye My Peggy?

DESCRIPTION: Have you seen Peggy? The singer saw a woman "wi' her petticoats above her knee." They say she's pregnant but "I'm sure it nae to me" He slept with her three nights but "aye my back was tull her" until daybreak. She asked him to turn to her about daybreak.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1769 (Herd, according to Whitelaw)

KEYWORDS: sex pregnancy dialog

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (4 citations):
-Greig/Duncan7 1415, "Sawna Ye My Peggy?" (1 text, 1 tune)
-Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, pp. 158-159, ("Saw ye my Maggie") (1 text)

-James Johnson, Editor, _The Scots Musical Museum_ [1853 edition], volume I, #11, p. 12, "Saw ye mae my Peggy" (1 text, 1 tune)
-ST GrD71415 (Partial)
-Roud #7156

NOTES [99 words]: Whitelaw: "This song, though old, was not inserted in any regular collection of Scottish songs till that of David Herd in 1769."
Whitelaw's and Chambers's ("Saw ye my Maggie") are in notes to "Saw Ye My Peggy" quoting Burns in Johnson's Musical Museum, vol. I., 1787. Johnson cites ("Saw ye my Maggie") as the original source of "Saw Ye My Peggy" (which is different enough from ("Saw ye my Maggie") that I would consider them separate songs). To be clear, I lump ("Saw ye my Maggie"), which Burns says is "a song familiar from the cradle to every Scottish ear," with Greig/Duncan7 1415. - BS

-Last updated in version 3.2

File: GrD71415

Sawney Kail Cunnie

DESCRIPTION: "Sawney Kail Cunnie, the Laird o' Kail Caup' eat his brose [oatmeal] and drank his cup and spoon. He asked for more "kail-brose" when that was done.

NOTES [124 words]: "Calvary" -- this name is not used in modern English versions of the New Testament. The King James version used it in Luke 23:33 (from Latin Caluaria)
"Darkness" -- "From noon on, darkness came over the whole land until three in the afternoon" (Matt. 27:45 NRSV; cf.Mark 15:33, Luke 23:44)
"The solid rocks were rent" -- "At that moment [when Jesus died]... the earth shook, and the rocks were split" (Matt. 27:51)
"Thus behold my hands and side" -- [Jesus] said to Thomas, 'Put your finger here and see my hands. Reach out your hand and put it in my side'" (John 20:27)
"I will forgive them" -- "Father, forgive them, for they do not know what they are doing" (Luke 23:34 -- however, most of the oldest and best manuscripts omit this phrase) - RBW
Sawney Ogilvie's Duel with His Wife

DESCRIPTION: "Good people, give ear to the fatalest duel That Morpeth e'er saw since it was a town... Poor Sawney... Miscarried and married a Scottish tarpawlin." Sawney ruins his prospects with his marriage; his wife regularly abuses him

AUTHOR: Thomas Whittle
EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland); Whittle reportedly died 1736
KEYWORDS: marriage hardtimes abuse humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 124-125, "Sawney Ogilvie's Duel With His Wife" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3156
File: StoR124

Sawyer's Exit

DESCRIPTION: "How bright is the day when the Christian Receives the sweet message to come To the mansions of glory And be there forever at home." "The angels stand ready and waiting, The moment the spirit is gone...." "The saints that have gone us before us...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1859 (Sacred Harp, according to Joyner-FolkSongInSouthCarolina)
KEYWORDS: religious death nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Joyner-FolkSongInSouthCarolina, p. 77, "Sawyer's Exit" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #21330
File: Joyn077

Saxon Shilling, The

DESCRIPTION: The martial parades "dazzled village youths to-day Will crowd to take the Saxon Shilling." Fools sell themselves "to shame and death," "crush the just and brave." "Irish hearts! why should you bleed, To swell the tide of British glory"?

AUTHOR: Kevin T. Buggy (Source: Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
EARLIEST DATE: 1842 ("The song was first printed in the _Belfast Vindicator_ in 1842," according to Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
KEYWORDS: army recruiting Ireland nonballad political
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 49, "The Saxon Shilling" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V29853
BROADSIDES: Bodleian, Harding B 19(68), "The Saxion Shilling" [only misspelled in the title], unknown, n.d.; also 2806 c.15(39), "The Saxion Shilling" [only misspelled in the title]
NOTES [163 words]: Broadside Bodleian Harding B 19(68) and Bodleian 2806 c.15(39) are duplicates. The last two lines are identically mangled.
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion: "The man who enlisted as a soldier was given the 'King's shilling' by a recruiting officer."
The ballad is recorded on one of the CD's issued around the time of the bicentenial of the 1798 Irish Rebellion. See:
Franke Harte and Donal Lunny, "The Saxon's Shilling" (on Franke Harte and Donal Lunny, "My Name is Napoleon Bonaparte," Hummingbird Records HBCD0027 (2001)) - BS
One suspects that author Buggy never missed any meals, which was the main reason Irish youth enlisted in the army. Though his source of income certainly wasn't his writing; I have been unable to find anything else he wrote, and he is not mentioned in Patrick C. Power's A Literary History of Ireland.
For the typical British recruiting method of The King's Shilling and getting potential soldiers drunk, see the notes to "The Recruited Collier." - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: Zimm049

Saxpence Lace
DESCRIPTION: She put "saxpence lace" around her "goon sae gran" and went to the castle looking for a man. She puts on an apron ....
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan7)
KEYWORDS: courting clothes
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #168, p. 2, ("Wi' the saxpence lace") (1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan7 1418, "Saxpence Lace" (2 fragments, 1 tune)
Roud #7158
NOTES [66 words]: The current description is based on the Greig/Duncan7 fragments.
Greig: ".: a verse or two of what looks like a fisher song." I wonder what he means by that since the fragment has no element to suggest it to me. Greig #153, commenting on "The Bonnie Fisher Lass" says, "There are not many traditional songs dealing with the fisher folk." This looks to me to be a common leadup to a seduction. - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD71418

Say, Darling, Say
DESCRIPTION: Song starts out with two verses of "Hush, Little Baby," but veers off: "All I've got is you in mind/Wouldn't do nothing but starch and iron"; "Starch and iron will be your trade/And I can get drunk and lay in the shade" Chorus: "Say, darling, say"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (recording, Ernest V. Stoneman)
KEYWORDS: work drink dancetune nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
Roud #470
RECORDINGS:
Ernest V. Stoneman, "Say, Darling, Day" (on Stonemans01); Ernest V. Stoneman, Willie Stoneman, and the Sweet Brothers, "Say Darling Say" (Gennett 6733 [as by Justin Winfield]/Supertone 9400 [as by Uncle Ben Hawkins], 1929; rec. 1928)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Hush, Little Baby" (lyrics, tune)
NOTES [47 words]: Roud, unsurprisingly, lumps this with "Hush Little Baby," since it has common lyrics and the tunes are close (though this is usually done much faster than "Hush Little Baby"). But the different ending, and the chorus, is enough to separate them in my book and in Paul Stamler's.
- RBW
File: RcSyDaSa

Saying Nothing at All
DESCRIPTION: Pat would apparently go to Scotland to make his fortune. Moral for those who would do the same: "If you don't find it there you may just lose the bake [Greig/Duncan8: biscuit]
And to Ireland return saying nothing at all"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: travel Ireland Scotland
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1753, "Saying Nothing at All" (1 fragment)
Roud #13009

NOTES [74 words]: Does Pat go looking for a job for six months [see notes to "Hie Bonnie Lassie for feeing"]? Does he get married [as in "To Reap and Mow the Hay"]? Or not [as in "Willie Rambler" and "Peggy Bawn"]? Does he have a strange adventure [as in "The Glasgow Barber" and "That Dang Boat that First Took Me Over"]? And why "saying nothing at all" [as in "Nothing At All"]? - BS I would suspect he is embarrassed and doesn't want to tell of his adventure. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD81753

Sailors for My Money

DESCRIPTION: "Countrymen of England who live at home at ease, And little think what dangers are incident of the seas, Glive ear unto a sailor...." who tells of the danger of the job and how they turn to God. He also describes their far travels

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs); the broadside apparently was printed before 1639
KEYWORDS: sailor hardtimes money storm
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 13, "Sailors for my Money" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V12093
File: PaSe013

Says the Old Man to the Oak Tree

DESCRIPTION: "Says t'auld man t' the (old/oak) tree, Young and lusty was I when I kenn'd thee; I was young and lusty, I was fair and clear, Young and lusty was I mony a lang year, But sair fail'd am I, sair fail'd now, Sair fail'd am I sen I kenn'd thou."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1785 (Gammer Gurton's Garland)
KEYWORDS: age
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #71, p. 80, "(Says t'auld man tit oak tree)"
DT, MANOAK
Roud #20161
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sair Fyel'd, Hinny"
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Old Man and the Oak. A North Country Son (Ritson's title)
NOTES [45 words]: Several versions of "Sair Fyel'd, Hinny" include this lyric essentially intact -- and in Northumbrian dialect. But I don't know if this split off and became a Mother Goose rhyme on its own, or if that song swallowed it. My decision to split them was very tentative. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: BGMG071

SBA's Song

DESCRIPTION: "As I walked down the street the other day, A lady came up to me and she did say, 'Why aren't you in khaki or in Air Force blue?' He explains that he is not a civilian but an SBA, which he explains as "A Sailor with a Broken 'Art"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: sailor war rejection clothes derivative
FOUND IN: Britain
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 96, "SBA's Song" (1 text, tune referenced)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Broken Doll" (tune)
File: Tawn072

Scab, The
DESCRIPTION: "I've travelled o'er mountains and hills and through valleys, Where the worker is crushed by the 'Lord of the soil'," and everywhere known want -- because of the Scab. People suffer at the hands of the wealthy, because of scabs. The singer wants revenge
AUTHOR: John Brooks Hulbert
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Hulbet's "My Garden and Other Verses," according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ), referring apparently to events of 1913
KEYWORDS: worker labor-movement hardtimes revenge scab
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, pp. 78-79, "The Scab" (1 text)
File: BaRo078

Scady Rocks, The
DESCRIPTION: Three men and a girl from Cushendall are in Colonel Caufield's Maid of Youghal in a storm. The boat splits on Scady Rock near the Bridge of Toome over the River Bann. All are drowned. People mourn.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (IRRCinnamond01)
KEYWORDS: drowning ship storm wreck
FOUND IN: Ireland
ST RcScaRoc (Full)
Roud #6986
RECORDINGS:
Robert Cinnamond, "The Scady Rock" (on IRRCinnamond01)
NOTES [53 words]: The description is based on John Moulden's transcription from IRRCinnamond01 included in the Traditional Ballad Index Supplement. There seems to be a gap in the text since there is no follow-up to the lines "very soon you all will hear Of the manhood of young Squire Jones." Cushendall and Toome are in Co Antrim. - BS
File: RcScaRoc

Scandalize My Name
DESCRIPTION: "I met my preacher the other day, I gave him my right hand. And just as soon as my back was turned, He scandalized my name. Do you call that religion (x3)...." The singer continues with other examples of those who defame him
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (recording, Kitty Cheatham)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad lie accusation
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 369, "Scandalize My Name" (1 text)
RECORDINGS:
Kitty Cheatham, "Scandalize My Name" (Columbia A5224, 1910)
Dizie Jubilee Singers, "Don't You Scandalize My Name" (Cameo 914, 1926)
Golden Crown Quartet, "Scandalize My Name" (OKeh 8739, 1929; on VocalQ2)
Kentucky Jubilee Quartet, "Do You Call That Religion" (OKeh 8509, 1927)
Mitchell Christian Singers, "They Scandalized My Name" (Melotone M-13162/Conqueror 8457, 1934/Banner 33195, 1935)
Monroe Brothers, "Do You Call That Religion?" (Bluebird B-7055, 1937)
Sunset Four Quartette, "Do You Call That Religion" (Paramount 12221, 1924)

NOTES [42 words]: This is sometimes listed, e.g. in the Folksinger's Wordbook, as a religious song. It has a religious theme (since it catalogs those who do not practice religion as the singer thinks they should), but is not really a religious piece but a complaint. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.5
File: FSWB369

Scarboro Sand (The Drowned Sailor) [Laws K18]

DESCRIPTION: A Scarborough girl learns that her sailor love has been lost at sea. She asks the waters to bring her love ashore. She finds the body, kisses it, and dies. The two are buried in "Robin Hood's Churchyard."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1853 (broadside, Bodleian Johnson Ballads 1956)
KEYWORDS: sea death burial drowning
FOUND IN: US(SE) Britain(England(Lond,North,South),Scotland(Aber)) Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (16 citations):
Laws K18, "Scarboro Sand (The Drowned Sailor)"
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 151, "Scarborough Sand" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 37, "The Drowned Lover" (1 text, 1 tune)
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 31, "The Drowned Lover" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 105, "Scarboro Sand (Robin Hood Side)" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 105, "Scarboro Sand (Robin Hood Side)" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 39, "In Robin Hood's Churchyard" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #83, p. 2, "Scarborough Banks" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan1 20, "Scarborough Banks" (9 texts, 8 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 332-333, "Scarborough's Banks" (1 text)
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 112-113, "The Drowned Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #39, "The Drowned Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Purslow-TheConstantLovers, p. 24, "The Drowned Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 722-725, "Strawberry Tower" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland 44, "Arbour Town" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 561, SCARSAND
Roud #185

RECORDINGS:
Charlotte Decker, "Strawberry Tower" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
Sam Larner, "In Scarboro' Town" (on SLarner01; on Voice02 as "In Scarborough Town"); "The Drowned Lover" (on SLarner02)
Frank Verrill, "Stowborough Town" (on Voice12)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 1956, "Stow Brow," John Ross (Newcastle), 1847-1852; also Harding B 11(3208), "Stow Brow"

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Strawbello Strand
Scarberry's Shores

NOTES [71 words]: The reference to "Robin Hood's Churchyard" is almost certainly a reference to the village of Robin Hood's Bay, Yorkshire; some versions of the song set the events in that town rather than in Scarborough.
I do not know that the two Larner recordings are in fact different -- these two compilations drew from the same collection of field tapes -- but as the titles are given as different I thought it prudent
Scarborough Settler's Lament

DESCRIPTION: "Away wi' Canada's muddy creeks And Canada's fields of pine. Your land of wheat is a goodly land, but ah! it isna mine!" The Scottish settler thinks back with sadness to the home he left behind -- but awakes in Canada, "three thousand miles 'frae hame.'"

AUTHOR: Sandy Clandenning
EARLIEST DATE: 1960
KEYWORDS: emigration homesickness Canada
FOUND IN: Canada
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadianStoryInSong, pp. 94-95, "A Scarborough Settler's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke/MacMillan-PenguinBookOfCanadianFolkSongs 29, "The Scarborough Settler's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, SCARSET*
Roud #4521
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Spancil Hill" (theme)
cf. "That Dear Old Land" (theme)
cf. "The Glenshesk Waterside" (theme)
cf. "Farewell to Sweet Glenravel" (theme)
cf. "Och, Och, Eire, O!" (theme)
cf. "The Call of Home" (theme)
cf. "A Shamrock from Tiree" (theme)
cf. "Farewell to the Banks of the Roe" (theme)
cf. "Banks of the Roe" (theme)
cf. "The Shamrock Shore (The Maid of Mullaghmore)" (theme)
cf. "Maguire's Brae" (theme)
cf. "Sweet Loughgannel" (theme)
cf. "Juberlane" (theme)
cf. "Glen O'Lee" (theme)
cf. "Sweet Glenbush" (theme)
cf. "The Hills of Donegal" (theme)
cf. "O, Derry, Derry, Dearie Me" (theme)
cf. "Cloughwater/The Shamrock Shore" (theme)
cf. "The Little Old Mud Cabin on the Hill" (theme)
cf. "Norah McShane" (theme)
cf. "Bonnie Lyndale" (theme)
cf. "The Song of the Emigrant" (theme)
NOTES [35 words]: Sandy Clandenning settled in Scarborough (near Toronto) in 1840. He set these words to the first half of the tune "Of A' the Airts the Wind Can Blaw." It has also been sung to "The Irish Emigrant's Lament." - RBW

File: FMB094

Scavenger's Brigade, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer joins "The Scavengers' Brigade" sweeping Belfast streets. They parade like soldiers with brooms on their shoulders. His family and sweetheart think he's in some army brigade and expect promotion and glory. He recommends it as an occupation

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3); 19C? (broadside, Bodleian Firth c.16(409))
LONG DESCRIPTION: The singer arrives in Belfast and finally finds work sweeping streets in "The Scavengers' Brigade." "With our brooms across our shoulders, That's our only uniform ... We're always on parade." His father reads his letters to the neighbors "for he thinks that I'm a sojer, with a gun." His mother wonders "if her darling is a kitty or dragoon" and expects he'll soon be a General. His sweetheart writes "that for my sake she's not afraid to leave her native land And risk a soldier's life whenever I get command" He tells everyone to save their pennies, come to Belfast, and "come and gain promotion in the Scavenger Brigade."

KEYWORDS: work humorous family clothes

FOUND IN: Ireland Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Greig/Duncan3 490, "The Scavengers' Brigade" (1 fragment)
- Hayward-UlsterSongsAndBalladsOfTheTownAndCountry, pp. 72-73, "The Scavenger's Brigade" (1 text)
- Hammond-SongsOfBelfast, p. 45, "The Scavengers' Brigade" (1 text)

Roud #5978

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Firth c.16(409), "The Scavenger Brigade" ("It's myself a decent Irish lad, arrived from Donegal," unknown, n.d. [beginning lines illegible]

File: HayU072

Schlof Mayn Kind (Sleep My Child)

DESCRIPTION: Yiddish: The mother urges her little child to sleep. She tells the child that someday it will understand why she weeps. Father has gone to America, seeking to earn the money to let them all emigrate. Till then, baby can only sleep and mother can only wait

AUTHOR: Words: Sholom Aleichem

EARLIEST DATE: 1950

KEYWORDS: family lullaby separation emigration foreignlanguage

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 287-289, "Schlof Mayn Kind (Sleep My Child)" (2 texts (1 English, 1 Yiddish), 1 tune)

NOTES [67 words]: There seem to be two Yiddish songs by that title: this one (which is more completely titled "Schlof Mayn Kind, Mayn Treyst, Mayn Sheiner") and another that is sometimes called "Shlof Mayn Kind, Shlof Keseyder." [For which see the Folksinger's Wordbook, p. 408. - RBW] In the latter, the mother sings to the child bitterly about the differences between rich and poor; emigration is not mentioned. - PJS

File: SBoA287

Schnooglin'

DESCRIPTION: "Schnooglin"' is the process of keeping warm by necking, the singer asserts, adding the warning not to let a boy an inch above your knee.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1963

KEYWORDS: bawdy warning

FOUND IN: US(SW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 252-253, "Schnooglin"' (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #10289

File: EM252

Schomberg

DESCRIPTION: This is a memorial to "William's true and gallant knight -- Schomberg, the bold and brave!" He'd had a "bright career ... But at the Boyne, for ever famed, He fell beside the wave"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark)

KEYWORDS: battle death Ireland memorial patriotic

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
- July 1 or 12, 1690 (Old Style or New Style dates) - Battle of the Boyne. William III defeats the forces of James II to firmly establish his control of Ireland

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

School Days
DESCRIPTION: "'Tis sweet to go back in memory To days of youth so dear to me When we could find a secluded spot And gather the blue forget-me-not." The singer recalls when "life was smooth as a poet's rhyme." He fondly remembers the old schoolhouse and childhood
AUTHOR: Edgar Hamm?
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)
KEYWORDS: nonballad youth
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 251-252, "School Days" (1 text)
NOTES [18 words]: This sounds so nineteenth-century-parlor-song, it's uncanny. But I don't know of any sheet music version. - RBW
File: ThBa251A

School Days of Long Ago
DESCRIPTION: "Still sits the schoolhouse by the road Close by the old oak tree, Where many a boy has took a dose Of grim old hickory tea." The singer describes the strict methods of the old school, and laments the laziness of the students
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 872, "School Days of Long Ago" (1 text)
Roud #7538
File: R872

School Has Begun, So Come Everyone
DESCRIPTION: "School has begun, so come everyone, And come with smiling faces." The teachers are kind. Boys are advised to learn so that no one thinks them dunces; girls are advised to learn because worth and beauty are not enough
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Stout-FolkloreFromIowa)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 103, pp. 127-133, "Early Iowa School Songs" (11 texts, of which "G" is this song)
Roud #21642
File: Stou103G

School House on the Hill
DESCRIPTION: "Fond memory paints the scenes of other years"; the singer still remembers. They children swung on a swing, they gathered berries. "The school house that stands Upon the hill I
School Ma'am on the Flat

DESCRIPTION: "McClellan was a cowboy of the wild and wooly west." He courts and seduces a "school ma'am." The enter into an unhappy marriage. "If John Henry gets to raring up, he will flog him with his hat Before he goes courting another school ma'am on the flat."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1976 (collected by Logsdon from Riley Neal)
KEYWORDS: cowboy courting sex humorous
FOUND IN: US(SW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 6, pp. 53-54, "School Ma'am on the Flat" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST Logs006 (Partial)
Roud #10087
File: Logs006

Schooner Annie, The

DESCRIPTION: The cargo schooner Annie is caught in a November gale. The crew abandons her in a dory. The storm continues for days. McCarthy is washed overboard, but saved. The crew is rescued by the Monarch, under Captain Blackmore, and brought to land.

AUTHOR: Peter Leonard (source: notes to ITMA/CapeShoreNL)
EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (ITMA/CapeShoreNL)
KEYWORDS: rescue commerce sea ship shore ordeal storm wreck sailor
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Nov. 1915 - Schooner Annie lost off St. Shotts, at the southern tip of the Avalon peninsula (per Northern Shipwrecks Database). The notes at ITMA/CapeShoreNL have the Annie, bound from St. John's to Placentia Bay, lost in a gale; the crew was rescued by the Monarch (the song has that as Monaduck)
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
Roud #3227
RECORDINGS:
Caroline Brennan, "The Schooner Annie" (on ITMA/CapeShoreNL)
NOTES [98 words]: According to the notes to this song at ITMA/CapeShoreNL the original song title was "Jim McCarthy." - BS
The tune of this seems to be taken from "The Banks of Newfoundland." Peter Leonard is also credited with "The Hole in the Wall," "Soup Supper in Clattice Harbour," and "Tobias Murphy and Tom Hann," none of which seem to have been very well known. I can't find anything else about the Annie; although the attribution at the ITMA site seems likely, there were so many Newfoundland wrecks of boats named Annie (Annie Roberts, etc.) that there may have been some cross-fertilization. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.5
File: RcTSchAn

Schooner Blizzard, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer warns his comrades "not to sail in those mean packets where they put no food on board." He describes a trip that began with rotten food and no heat and ended with the steward jumping ship to get married

AUTHOR: Henry Burke and a shipmate
Schooner Fred Dunbar, The [Laws D14]
DESCRIPTION: A sailor speaks of his vessel's travels, all the while advising the girls about the pleasures and advantages of going out with sailors
AUTHOR: Amos Hanson
EARLIEST DATE: 1933
KEYWORDS: sea sailor travel
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Laws D14, "The Schooner Fred Dunbar"
DT 832, FREDDUNB*
Roud #2237
File: LD14

Schooner Helson
DESCRIPTION: "The vessel 'Schooner Helson' from Newport sailed away Arriving safe at Georgetown Without mishap that day." A storm on the way home wrecks the schooner. All three of the crew drown and only one body is found, "washed up by the waves"
AUTHOR: Charlie Howlett
EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland)
KEYWORDS: drowning sea ship storm wreck sailor
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dibblee/Dibblee-FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland, p. 46, "Schooner Helson" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12470
NOTES [20 words]: Newport and Georgetown are on the east coast of Kings, Prince Edward Island. Newport is a few miles north of Georgetown. - BS
File: Din046

Schooner Jenkins, The
DESCRIPTION: "Come, shipmates, listen to my story, I'll sing you one both sad and true, How dark one night... Sank John Brown and his crew." The ship sets out in November, and is sunk. The crewmen who died are described in rather conventional terms
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Oswego Palladium-Times)
KEYWORDS: ship death moniker
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Nov 30, 1875 - Sinking of the Isaac G. Jenkins. 8 people die
FOUND IN: Canada(Ont)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 220-221, "The Schooner Jenkins" (1 text)
Roud #19867
File: WGM220
Schooner John Bentely, The

DESCRIPTION: Derived from "The Dreadnaught," but of about a bad boat. The singer gets drunk, then joins the Bentely on the Great Lakes. The sound of the pumps makes him sick. The bedclothes are "junk." The ship is slow. The food is bad. Finally they reach Gravelly Bay.

AUTHOR: Jeremiah Cavanaugh?

EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (collected by Walton from Jeremiah Cavanaugh)

KEYWORDS: sailor hardtimes derivative

FOUND IN: Canada(Ont)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 98-100, "The Schooner John Bentely" (1 text)

Roud #19892

NOTES [27 words]: According to Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, the Benteley was built in 1873 and had the "lines of a brick." Hence, presumably, this song. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: WGM098

---

Schooner Kandahar, The

DESCRIPTION: The Kandahar's trip starts out happily, but then the vessel springs a small leak and runs into a smallpox epidemic. Despite a threat of quarantine, the ship reaches the Indies, then has a quiet trip back to Nova Scotia.

AUTHOR: Sepley Collin

EARLIEST DATE: 1931

KEYWORDS: ship sea disease

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

1896 - Voyage of the Kandahar

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 196-198, "The Schooner Kandahar" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #4085

NOTES [8 words]: This song is item dD42 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW

File: Doe196

---

Schooner Marion Rogers, The

DESCRIPTION: Marion Rogers sails for the North from St John's and is lost near Trinity in a snow storm. The crew of seven is lost in "the most awful shipwreck, the worst one of the year".

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou)

KEYWORDS: death sea ship storm wreck

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

Nov 27, 1938 - Marion Rogers stranded (total loss) at Lighthouse Rocks reef in Trinity Harbour (Northern Shipwrecks Database)

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 72, "The Schooner Marion Rogers" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #28976

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Ravenal" (tune)

SAME TUNE:

The Ravenal (file: LeBe092)

File: LeBe072

---

Schooner Oriole, The

DESCRIPTION: "Attention give both young and old... While I relate the hardships and the dangers of the sea, I'll tell you of the Illinois and of her reckless crew, How she sank the schooner Oriole...."
The ships collide, and twelve on the Oriole die; only one survives
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (Collected from Ben Peckham by Walton)
KEYWORDS: ship death disaster
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Aug 8/9, 1862 - Collision of the _Illinois_ and the _Oriole_, resulting in the destruction of the latter
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, p. 216, "The Schooner Oriole" (1 text)
Roud #19870
NOTES [160 words]: According to Julius F. Wolff, Jr., _Lake Superior Shipwrecks_, Lake Superior
Port Cities Inc., Duluth, 1990, pp. 8-9, the schooner _Oriole_ left Marquette, Michigan on August 8 with about 500 tons of iron freight and 13 people aboard, including Captain Daniel McAdams, his wife, and his mother-in-law.
The ship soon ran into a heavy fog, but the captain did not slow down. Around 3:00 a.m., the _Illinois_ rammed the _Oriole_. It was still foggy, and the _Illinois_ took damage itself, so Captain Ryder headed on to Marquette without pausing to see what had happened.
He had, however, sliced the _Oriole_ in half. Of the 13 people on board, only one survived: Cook Andrew P. Fleming managed to cling to wreckage until he made his way to the _Oriole_'s stern, then still afloat, and lower a boat. He was rescued a day and a half later.
There would not be another accident on Lake Superior with such heavy loss of life until 1875, according to Wolff, p. 23. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: WGM216

Schooner Thomas Hume, The

DESCRIPTION: "The schooner Hume is staunch and strong, She's weathered many a blow...
She's bound for Buffalo." She sails on dangerous Lake Michigan. The captain takes her out on the lake. A great storm arises. Ship and crew are lost without trace
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (Collected from William Nicolas by Walton)
KEYWORDS: ship wreck death
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
May 22, 1891 - Foundering of the _Thomas Hume_ off Holland, Michigan (Source: Bruce D.
Berman, _Encyclopedia of American Shipwrecks_, Mariner's Press, 1972, p. 245)
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 196-197, "The Schooner Thomas Hume" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #19885
RECORDINGS:
Ed Vandenberg, "The Schooner Thomas Hume" (1955; on WaltonSailors; this version, with guitar accompaniment, seems to be sung by a revival singer, not an original informant) NOTES [97 words]: Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors note several contradictions between the song and the actual fate of the _Thomas Hume_ -- notably that the boat was not full of wheat (it was in fact almost empty) and it was lost in May, not at the end of the shipping season.
I observe in addition that the name "Hume" is mentioned only twice in Walton's text, and never the "Thomas Hume." I rather suspect this was originally about some other boat, with the name of the _Thomas Hume_ zipped in without the song being fully adapted to the actual circumstances of the sinking. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.4
File: WGM196

Schwiezemann hot Heisen a, D'r (The Swiss Wears Pants)

DESCRIPTION: German round. "D'r Schweizemann hot Heisen a, (x2), Mit lauder ledene Benden dra (x2)." "The Swiss wears pants (x2), Wth all the strings of leather." "D'r Schwiezemann hot Heisen a, Mit lauder...." "The Swiss wears trouers, Wth all...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends)
KEYWORDS: nonballad clothes foreignlanguage
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, p. 109, "D'r Schwiezemann hot Heisen a (The Swiss Wears Pants)" (1 German text plus English translation, 1 tune)
File: KPL109

Scoil Bharr D'Inse

DESCRIPTION: Gaelic. Local families gather at School of Barr d'Inse for an evening of singing and dancing. At the height of the party a local priest arrives and stops the dancing.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage dancing music clergy
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 124, "Scoil Bharr D'Inse" (1 text)
NOTES [17 words]: The description follows the "English Summary" provided by OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin. - BS
Last updated in version 3.2
File: OCC124

Scolding Wife (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "I married me a scolding wife Some forty years ago And ever since I've led a life Of misery and woe." The abused husband details the various ways his wife chastises, injures, and neglects him

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan)
KEYWORDS: husband wife abuse injury shrewishness
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) US(MW,NE,So) Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Randolph 397, "The Scolding Wife" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 214, "The Scolding Wife" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 80, "My Scolding Wife" (1 text)
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 103, "My Scolding Wife" (1 text)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 179, "A Scolding Wife" (1 short text plus mention of 1 more)
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 325-327, "The Scolding Wife" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2132
RECORDINGS:
Caroline Brennan, "The Scolding Wife" (on ITMA/CapeShoreNL)
Jack Knight, "The Scolding Wife" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Margaret MacArthur, "The Scolding Wife" (on MMacArthur01)
Bill Westaway, "The Scolding Wife" (on FSBFTX19)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Scolding Wife (IV)" (subject)
NOTES [71 words]: The notes in Henry/Huntington/Herrmann observe that this has the same subject and metrical pattern as "The Scolding Wife (IV)." But there seem to be no common lyrics at all; I (hesitantly) declare them separate. The chorus of this song runs something like
For she worries (or "hurries") me, she flurries me,
It is her heart's delight
To warm me with the fire-shovel
Round the room at night (or "in the middle of the night"). - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
Scolding Wife (III), The (A Woman's Tongue Will Never Take a Rest)

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, you've often heard it asked Why a woman talks so fast Oh, she runs around with every bit of news." The singer claims "a woman's tongue will never take a rest"; she talks while he works. He advises marrying a wife who is "blind, deaf, and dumb."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: husband wife

FOUND IN: US(SE,So) Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 201, "The Scolding Wife" (1 text plus mention of 1 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 201, "The Scolding Wife (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 143, "Chinning Music" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #6585 and 11345

RECORDINGS:
Mrs. Rice, "A Woman's Tongue" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
A Woman's Tongue Will Never Take a Rest

NOTES [42 words]: I should perhaps assign this song the keyword "humorous," since it was probably intended to be funny. But it isn't; it's just a whine. It's strange to note that the Brown, Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric, and Leach versions were all collected from women. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: BrII201

Scolding Wife (IV)

DESCRIPTION: "Come all ye sprightly sporting youths, wherever you may be, You'll never know your misery till married that you'll be." The singer describes all the ways in which his wife makes his life miserable, and hopes she dies before she kills him

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1849 (broadside, Bodleian Firth c.20(109))

KEYWORDS: husband wife fight marriage courting abuse

FOUND IN: Ireland Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H145, p. 503, "The Scolding Wife" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan7 1285, "She's Aye Scaulin' Me" (1 fragment)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 151, "The Bad Wife" (1 text)

Roud #5556

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth c.20(109), "The Scolding Wife" ("When first I got married, a happy man to be"), J. Kendrew (York), 1803-1848
LOCSinging, as102540, "The Scolding Wife" ("I married with a scolding wife, full twenty years ago"), L. Deming (Boston), no date

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Scolding Wife (I)" (subject)
cf. "The Sporting Bachelors" (plot)
cf. "She's Aye Tease, Teasin'" (subject and form)

NOTES [87 words]: The notes in Henry/Huntington/Herrmann observe that this has the same subject and metrical pattern as "The Scolding Wife (I)." But there seem to be no common lyrics at all; I (hesitantly) declare them separate. The chorus of the Henry text is For she's aye, aye scowlin', an' she's aye scowlin' me, She's for everlasting scowlin' and she canna let me be. Roud lumps this with "The Sporting Bachelors," and I cannot deny the close similarity in themes. But the two appear somewhat different in both form and emphasis. - RBW
Scolding Wife (V), The

DESCRIPTION: A weaver offers his loving but scolding wife to a captain. He tricks her onto the ship. The captain pays him fifty pounds. He bids her farewell on her trip to Virginia although she begs to be taken back "and I never will offend you"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan7)

KEYWORDS: shrewishness abandonment wife sailor

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):

- Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #77, p. 1, "The Scolding Wife"; #84, p. 3, "The Scolding Wife"; #73, p. 3, ("The honest man, the honest man"); #72, p. 2, "The Scolding Wife" (1 text plus 3 fragments)
- Greig/Duncan7 1284, "The Scolding Wife" (8 texts, 4 tunes)

Roud #2576

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Sale of a Wife" (theme)
- cf. "In Praise of John Magee" (theme: sale of a wife)
- cf. "Danny Sim's Sow" (theme: sale of a wife)
- cf. "The Dowie Dens of Yarrow" (tune, per Greig/Duncan7)
- cf. "The Jolly Farmer's Son" (tune, per Greig/Duncan7)
- cf. "A Net for a Night Raven, or, A Trap for a Scold" (plot)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- The Wiver an' His Wife

NOTES [44 words]: Greig/Duncan 1284A ends with some unspecified man, perhaps the captain, wedding her "and noo they live together Wi' neither sturt nor strife." This happy ending recalls "Sale of a Wife." - BS

For background on wife-selling, see the notes to "Sale of a Wife." - RBW

_Last updated in version 4.4_

File: GrD71284

Scotch Medley

DESCRIPTION: "Was ne'er in Scotlan' heard or seen Sic dancin' an' deray As at Pattie's weddin' on the green Tae bonnie Mary Gray." The remaining seventeen verses string together people and things that are the names of songs: Maggie Lauder, Tullochgorum, ....

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: wedding dancing drink music moniker nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

- Greig/Duncan3 605, "Scotch Medley" (1 text)

Roud #6053

NOTES [89 words]: For similar works see broadsides Bodleian, Harding B 25(1742), "Scotch Medley" ("As I came in by Calder fair and yout[sic] the Tappard lee, man"), C. Croshaw (York), 1814-1850 and NLScotland, L.C.Fol.70(28b), "Scotch Medley" ("Gae bring my guid auld harp ance mair"),unknown, c.1890. There is also a broadside posing as a letter, along the same lines at NLScotland, L.C.1268), "Letter from a Friend on a Journey to the North, to an inhabitant of Auld Reekie; being a curious and entertaining medly[sic] of Scotch Songs,"unknown, 1822. - BS

_Last updated in version 2.4_

File: GrD3605

Scotch Medley (II)

DESCRIPTION: A humorous song made up of titles and lines of other songs. So, "steer me back to Erin's Isle For I'm a Scotchman born," "Oh Minnie wilt thou gang wi me?" Cries Jock o
Scotlands Burning

DESCRIPTION: "Scotland's burning, Scotland's burning, Look out, look out, Fire, fire, fire, fire, Pour on water, pour on water."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US(NE,SE) Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, p. 12, "Scotland's Burning" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 150, "Scotland's Burning" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 150, "Scotland's Burning" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, p. 283, "Scotland's Burning" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 412, "Scotland's Burning" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Helen Creighton, _A Folk Tale Journey through the Maritimes_, edited by Michael Taft and Ronald Caplan, Breton Books, 1993, p. 146, "(no title)" (1 text, with a frame story)
Roud #3752
NOTES [40 words]: No doubt some enterprising folklorist has attributed this to one or another of Scotland's various political crises (e.g. the period between the death of Alexander III and the accession of Robert the Bruce). Me, I think it's just a round. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: FSBW412D

Scots Pipers, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer says when he dies "I'll hae nane o' yer mournin' an' weepin'." "Convene me a score o' Scots pipers." When David was young he learned to play [bagpipe] while herding sheep. When Saul was possessed David sent the spirit to hell with his drone.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: death music Bible nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 699, "The Scots Pipers" (1 text)
Roud #6116
NOTES [372 words]: David's instrument was of course the "harp" (so the King James translation of 1 Samuel 16:16) -- an instrument which probably more closely resembled a lyre (and is so translated in, e.g., the New Revised Standard Version). Although we do not know the exact construction of David's instrument certainly wasn't a wind instrument such as a bagpipe; it had strings.
We should note that there are two versions of the story of David taking service with Saul, squished together in 1 Samuel 16-18; in one (16:14-23), David is hired as a musician to soothe Saul when the latter was possessed by evil spirits (1 Samuel 16:14, 23) and only later kills Goliath. In the other account (found primarily in 1 Samuel 17:12-31, 17:55-18:6, though portions of it may have been mixed with the material in 1 Samuel 17:1-11, 17:32-54), we have clearly a folktale independent of the more official account, in which David chances to be visiting Saul's army at the time of the fight with Goliath, and kills Goliath and only then enters Saul's service. Both accounts, to be sure, make David a shepherd (17:15 and 17:34), although in the version in 17:34, he had long since given up being a shepherd.

(If you want proof that the 1 Samuel story is conflate, note that the earliest substantial Greek translation of 1 Samuel, in the Codex Vaticanus, omits the folktale version. Amazingly, both the omitted text and the text Vaticanus includes tell complete stories of Saul, David, and Goliath -- extremely unlikely if some editor had simply been cutting out material. The material omitted in Vaticanus has every token of folktale -- e.g. Goliath taunts Saul's army for "forty days," as if the army could stay in place for that long. There is no question in my mind that it is a folktale added to the text of 1 Samuel at some time after the original composition.)

It is worth noting that, although David initially was successful in soothing Saul with his music, eventually Saul tried to kill David even while he was playing (1 Samuel 18:10-11). What this says about music and its effect on spirits I'm not sure. It is notable that we have other instances of prophets requiring music to summon the "spirit" of prophecy -- in particular Elisha in 2 Kings 3:15. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4

File: GrD3699

Scots Soldiers True

DESCRIPTION: "Scots soldiers true, with bonnets blue ... made the French to run" at Waterloo. Bonaparte had been "haunted" by the Scots Greys in Spain and at Waterloo. Now Napoleon is dead and "Louise-Philippe and Britain's Queen Oft have an interview"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan1)

KEYWORDS: battle France Spain Napoleon

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
June 18, 1815 - Battle of Waterloo

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan1 154, "The Battle of Waterloo" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

Roud #5825

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth c.14(284), "Scots Soldiers True" ("Scots soldiers true, with bonnets blue"), Sanderson (Edinburgh), 1830-1910

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Our Brave Scotch Lads" (shares first verse lines)

NOTES [279 words]: Greig/Duncan1 is a fragment; broadside Bodleian Firth c.14(284) is the basis for the description. - BS

The reference to the Highlanders and Scots Greys at Waterloo is accurate; David Chandler, The Campaigns of Napoleon, (Macmillan, 1966), notes that the Scots Greys were in Wellington's army. They were among the forces who opposed the first French attack, launched by d'Erlon's corps. I find myself wondering what is the purpose of this song, for it cannot have been written in the period immediately after Waterloo. After Napoleon's abdication, France was ruled by the restored Bourbons, first Louis XVIII (1814-1815 and 1815-1824) and then Charles X (1824-1830). Only after Charles X's abdication did Louis-Phillipe of the House of Orleans ascend the throne, reigning 1830-1848, when revolution forced him to abdiccate also (clearing the way for Napoleon III). The presumption, then, is that the Queen of the song is Victoria (reigned 1837-1901). So the song in its broadside form must date from the period 1837-1848.

The charge of the Scots Greys at Waterloo was long remembered, however. In addition to this poem, there is a famous painting, "Scotland for Ever," about the event. It was painted by Lady Butler in 1881. John Keegan, The Face of Battle Viking Press, 1976 (I use the 1993 Barnes & Noble edition) includes a reproduction after p. 178, and notes that Lady Butler, whose husband was a general, actually convinced her husband to stage a cavalry charge at her so she could paint it accurately -- but Keegan says the painting is inaccurate even so. But, of course, what matters is that Lady Butler still found the event inspiring 66 years after Waterloo. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4

File: GrD1154

Scots Wha Hae (Bruce Before Bannockburn)

DESCRIPTION: "Scots wha hae wi' Wallace bled, Scots, whom Bruce has aften led, Welcome to your gory bed Or to victory!" As the English army of Edward approaches, the Scots are encouraged to "do or dee" to retain their freedom

AUTHOR: Robert Burns

EARLIEST DATE: 1800 (Currie)

KEYWORDS: battle Scotland war freedom political

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

1286 - Death of Alexander III of Scotland
1290 - Death of his granddaughter Margaret "Maid of Norway"
1292 - Edward I of England declares John Balliol king of Scotland
1296 - Edward deposes John Balliol
1297 - William Wallace, the Guardian of Scotland, defeats the English at Stirling Bridge
1298 - Edward defeats Wallace at Falkirk. Wallace forced into hiding
1305 - Capture and execution of Wallace (August 23)
1306 - Robert Bruce declares himself king of Scotland
1307 - Death of Edward I
1314 - Battle of Bannockburn. Robert Bruce defeats Edward II of England and regains Scottish independence

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (8 citations):

Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, p. 268, "Bruce's Address to his Army" (1 text, 1 tune)
Heart-Songs, p. 429, "Bruce's Address" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #25, "Scots, Wha Hae wi' Wallace Bled!" (1 text)
MacColl-PersonalChoice, p. 45, "Scots wha hae" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 299, "Scots Wha Ha'e Wi' Wallace Bled" (1 text)
DT, SCOTWHAE*

Michael Brander, _Scottish and Border Battles and Ballads_, 1975 (page references to the 1993 Barnes & Noble edition), pp. 34-35, "Bruce's Address to his Army" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27546

RECORDINGS:

Henry Burr, "Scots wha hae wi' Wallace Bled" (Victor 4558/Victor 16062, 1906; rec. 1905; Victor 16062, 1919 (re-recording)

BROADSIDES:

NLScotland, RB.m.169(138), "Scots, wha hae wi Wallace bled," J. Pitts (London), 1820-1845; also L.C.Fol.70(47a), "Scots wha hae," unknown (London)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Day of Waterloo" (tune)

SAME TUNE:
The Day of Waterloo (Ord, p. 303)
Henry Shall Be Mayor a Campaign Song ("Rouse, ye freinds [sic.] of Clay") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 58)
The South ("Sons of Secessia glorious land! Sons of The South -- noble band") (Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, p. 387)
General Beauregard ("General G. T. Beauregard") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, p. 189)
A Gone Case ("Have our fathers fought in vain? Must the knee be bent again?") (anti-Bank/pro-Jackson song) (Foner, p. 31)
Our Country's Gratitude (by E. Thompson), third part ("Patriots to to fame aspire, Freemen who your rights desire") (Foner, p. 34)
"Sons whose sires for Freedom bled! Whom Washington and others led!" (Labor song by "VIndex")
(Foner, p. 156)
Crusaders -- A War Song (by Charlotte C. Eliot) ("Sons of free men, once again, Waken to a martial strain") (Colonial-Dames-AmericanWarSongs, p. 169) NOTES [493 words]: Titled, in Currie's publication, "Bruce to his Troops on the eve of the Battle of Bannock-burn."
The "Wallace" of the first line is of course William Wallace, the hero of "Gude Wallace" [Child 157], who had fought for Scottish independence after the British King Edward I had deposed John Balliol, the "Toom Tabard" (Magnusson, pp. 132-134, who however points out that many of the contemporary stories about Wallace are nonsense). Wallace's power was broken after the Battle of Falkirk (Magnusson, pp. 141-145), and Edward I eventually captured him and executed him with extreme torture (Magnusson, pp. 153-157).
Then, far too late, Robert Bruce asserted his claim to the throne -- with John Balliol considered to have abdicated, and his heirs thus disbarred, Bruce was the most logical successor. He finally made his claim in 1306. Edward I stormed north, but died in July 1307, never having caught up with the Bruce (Magnusson, p. 174). It was not until seven years late that his son Edward II took a large force north to try to regain Scotland.
By the time of Bannockburn, the Scots had been struggling against the English for twenty years, with relatively slight success overall. It was not the accession of Robert Bruce that turned the tide, b but rather the death of Edward I. (Ashley, p. 3, speculates in fact that Robert Bruce started his rebellion in 1306 because Edward I clearly couldn't last much longer and his son was not in his league.) Edward I's successor, Edward II, was much weaker. When Edward II finally was induced to fight the Scots, he did little more than throw his troops at Bruce's army, leading to a catastrophic and unnecessary defeat.
Although Bannockburn was more Edward's loss than Bruce's victory, it became the defining event in the Scottish story, and hence the inspiration for this poem of Burns's (though there is no reason to think Bruce ever said anything like this, with the single exception noted below).
According to Brander, p. 30, the line, "Now's the time and now's the hour" actually goes back to the battle. As Robert Bruce was trying to decide whether to fight, a Scottish deserter from the English camp came in and gave him that advice. Bruce fought -- and of course won Scottish independence. Obviously this has the strong feeling of folklore -- but certainly it inspired Burns.
To be sure, Burns was writing about more than just Scottish history. Norman Buchan, in the article "Folk and Protest" printed in Cowan, declares, "This was not written about Bruce and Bannockburn at all; it was written precisely and specifically about much more dangerous events, 'struggles,' in Burns'[s] words, 'not quite so ancient.' He was referring... to the trials of the Friends of the People, of Thomas Muir, Palmer, Gerraeed, Skirving and Margarot."
The tune of this piece is called "Hey Tuttie Taitie" by Burns, and Brander, p. 33, says that it was
"traditionally supposed to have been the tune of Bruce's battle march." - RBW
Bibliography

- Brander: Michael Brander, Scottish and Border Battles and Ballads, Barnes & Noble, 1993 use the 1993 Polygon paperback edition)

Last updated in version 6.1
File: FSWB299

Scottish Drinking Song
DESCRIPTION: "O! 'ister McClaggle, Sa gala gala gu rum, Sa valla liga dinctum, Tharang, thang a non e o, Tha rankg, thang a non e o."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)
KEYWORDS: nonsense nonballad drink
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scow Jean La Plante, De

DESCRIPTION: "I'll tol' of wan boat, de scow Jean La Plante, She's sail by Batteece, a Frenchman so quaint...." Her crew is captain, mate, cook, and dog. They race the Flying Cloud, and win when the latter snags a fishing line. A barrel of powder explodes the boat

AUTHOR: James J. Enright? (supposedly written 1867)

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Detroit Free Press)

KEYWORDS: humorous racing cook dog ship

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 161-162, "De Scow Jean La Plante" (1 text)
Roud #19888

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Rosie Belle Teeneau" (main character)

NOTES [84 words]: It is not clear to me that this poem/song is traditional. Walton's version is from print, and there is no mention of having heard even a portion of it from tradition. But the notes imply that the legend of Batteece and the gunpowder is traditional -- indeed, there is another poem about him, ""'The Rosie Belle Teeneau," which involves a different boat and a different voyage but has a "Captain Batteece DuChene" and ends with the boat blowing up. This probably isn't folk song. It may be folk tale. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: WGM161

Scow Look 'n' See, De

DESCRIPTION: "A scow kom sailin' down Lac Sainte Claire, Sheengle an' cordwood she's deck load ware." In a storm, the cordwood floats away. The captain worries about losing profit and his boat. He gives impossible orders to control the boat and save the cargo

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1952 (collected from Fred M. Delano by Walton)

KEYWORDS: ship humorous hardtimes

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 162-164, "De Scow Look 'n' See" (1 text)
Roud #19889

File: WGM162

Scow Nettie Fly, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, sailor, come gather and list to my ditty, To picture aright this hero I'll try. He seldom was sober... He's Captain Poulan of the scow Nellie Fly." In a storm, he drinks. He gives orders to the mate; both take a drink. When they arrive, he drinks

AUTHOR: supposedly Ralph Chene and other rivermen in the 1880s

EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (collected from Ralph Chene by Walton)

KEYWORDS: sailor ship drink humorous

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 164-165, "De Scow Nettie Fly" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 40, #2 (1995), p, 93, "The Scow Nettie Fly" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #19888

NOTES [54 words]: Walton gives no tune for this, but I strongly suspect it's "The Cumberland Crew."
The notes in Sing Out! (which transcribes Lee Murdock's version) do not say where the tune came from, either; the implication is that it's from the Walton collection, but I assume Murdock supplied it. It is not "The Cumberland Crew." - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: WGM164

Scow on the Cowden Shore, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer (expressly identified as Larry Gorman) sings of "the scow on the Cowden shore." He describes the international crew of loggers, including several of the more peculiar characters, and speaks of the quest for liquor

AUTHOR: words: Larry Gorman (1846-1917) / music & additional words: Willis Norrad

EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi)

KEYWORDS: logger drink nonballad

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 234-236, "The Scow on the Cowden Shore" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi 42, "The Scow on Cowden Shore" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong, pp. 180-182, "The Scow on Cowden's Shore" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-LarryGorman, pp. 62-64, 200, "The Scow on Cowden Shore" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #4529

NOTES [86 words]: During log drives, the boss of the drive, the cook, and other non-participants would usually follow the logs in scows. Since the boat carried their provisions, the logdrivers were often highly alert to its progress. - RBW

"Cowden Shore was part of the Cowden farm, where Scottish immigrants of that name settled in the early nineteenth century.... Cowden Shore was conveniently near the Sou'West Boom, where the logs driven down the [Southwest Miramichi River] were stored, awaiting distribution to their owners." - BS

Last updated in version 6.1
File: Doe234

Scranky Black Farmer, The

DESCRIPTION: "At the top o' the Garioch, in the lands o' Leith-hall, A cranky black farmer in Earlsfield did dwell; Wi' him I engaged a servant to be...." The singer describes the weary work and the bad company; when his time is up, he intends to return to the seaside

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: work farming hardtimes

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #89, pp. 1-2, "The Scranky Black Farmer"; "Folk-Song in Buchan," p. 21, ("Wi' him I engaged a servant to be") (1 text plus 1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan3 357, "The Scranky Black Farmer" (7 texts, 5 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 213-214, "The Scranky Black Farmer" (1 text)

Roud #2872

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Gap o' the Garioch
At The Tap o' the Garioch

NOTES [69 words]: Greig/Duncan3: "The farmer is named as William Ironside at Gm 2.23dm and as Daniel Skinner at Gm 1.80c. William Ironside farmed at Earlsfield till 1863 and Daniel Skinner from then until 1882."

Greig/Duncan3 has a map on p. xxxv, of "places mentioned in songs in volume 3" showing the song number as well as place name; Earlsfield (357) is at coordinate (h3,v5-6) on that map [roughly 28 miles WNW of Aberdeen]. - BS

Last updated in version 2.6
Scratch o' a Cat, The
DESCRIPTION: "The reason o' that was the scratch o' a cat, And I canna but lauch when I tell you"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: animal
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1782, "The Scratch o' a Cat" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #12991
NOTES [34 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan8 fragment. - BS
This sounds to me like the ending of a cumulative tall tale (along the lines of "For want of a nail...."), but that's just a feeling. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD81782

Screw This Cotton (Cotton-Packing Song)
DESCRIPTION: "Screw this cotton (heh!), Screw this cotton (heh!), Screw this cotton (heh!), Screw it tight." "Screw this totton... With all your might." "Here we come... do it right." "Don't get tired...
Time ain't long." "Keep on working... Sing this song."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1919 (Curtis-Burlin-NegroFolkSongs-TheHamptonSeries)
KEYWORDS: work nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Curtis-Burlin-NegroFolkSongs-TheHamptonSeries (III), pp. 107-110, "Cott'n-Packin' Song" (1 text with variants, 1 tune with variants)
Roud #12324
File: CuBu107

Screw-Guns
DESCRIPTION: "Smokin' my pipe on the mountings, sniffin' the mornin' cool... With seventy gunners be'ind me, an' never a beggar forgets." "You can go where you please, you can skid up the trees, But you don't get away from the guns." The life of mountain artillerymen
AUTHOR: Words: Rudyard Kipling
EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead); the Kipling poem is from 1892 or earlier
KEYWORDS: soldier technology travel animal
FOUND IN: Canada
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, pp. 67-69, "Screw-Guns" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Rudyard Kipling, "Barrack-Room Ballads," first series, 1892 (available in many editions including on Project Gutenberg)
Roud #29420
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Eton Boat Song" (tune
File: Hopk067

Screwing In Song
DESCRIPTION: "Before I work for a dollar a day. Down below, wey-he, hey-hey. Grease my screws and put 'em away, Down below, wey-he, hey-hey"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia)
KEYWORDS: nonballad shanty
Scrubber Murphy

DESCRIPTION: "Scrubber Murphy was the captain of a steamer called Mohawk, And Scrubber is the scrubber about whom all sailors talk." In 1905 Murphy took command and set the sailors cleaning. The ship has a collision, but all Murphy cares about is his dog and scrubbing

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (collected by Walton from Malcolm Graham)
KEYWORDS: sailor hardtimes wreck ship
FOUND IN: Canada(Ont)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 92-95, "Scrubber Murphy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #19846
RECORDINGS:
Ivan Watson, "Scrubber Murphy" (fragment, 1938; on WaltonSailors)
NOTES [40 words]: According to the notes in Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, the recording on WaltonSailors came about because Walton was testing his recording equipment. His version seemed to be to the tune of "The Gallant Forty-Twa." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: WGM092

Scrumby Wins

DESCRIPTION: "I went ashore last night, my pockets did jingle jang," where he drinks scrumpy wine until the pub closes -- and gets sick and wets his bed. It isn't the singer's first time getting in trouble; his superiors punish him vigorously

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: sailor drink punishment derivative
FOUND IN: Britain
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 54, "Scrumby Wine" (1 text, tune referenced)
Roud #29985
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Summer Wine" (tune)
File: Tawn039

Sea Apprentice, The

DESCRIPTION: "When I first went a sea-apprentice bound, I sailed the salt seas all round and round." The singer falls in love with Anne. The captain calls him foolish; she will take another while he is at sea. But he offers her tokens, and she promises to wait

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan1)
KEYWORDS: love courting separation sailor
FOUND IN: Ireland Canada(Mar,Newf) Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #64, p. 1, "The Apprentice Sailor"; #67, p. 2, "The Apprentice Sailor" (1 text plus 1 fragment)
Sea Captain and the Squire, The [Laws Q12]

DESCRIPTION: The captain leaves his new bride to be seduced by a squire. The night the captain returns, all the women of the house give birth. The wife explains her state (the male servants had impregnated the maids); her captain forgives her (!) "for the joke's sake"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople)

KEYWORDS: seduction pregnancy separation adultery

FOUND IN: US(Ap) Britain(Scotland(Aber),England(South)) Ireland

REFERENCES (6 citations):
- Laws Q12, "The Sea Captain and the Squire"
- Greig/Duncan7 1502, "The Blanket Curant" (5 texts, 2 tunes)
- Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople 89, "The Sea Captain" (1 text)
- Graham-Joe-Holmes-SongsMusicTraditionsOfAnUlsterman 65, "The Roving Sea Captain" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates 121, pp. 138-140, "There Was a Sea Captain" (1 text)
- DT 734, SEACAPT SEACAPT2

Last updated in version 3.5

File: LQ12
Sea Crab, The

DESCRIPTION: A man stows a crab (lobster) in the chamber pot while his wife is asleep. She gets up to relieve herself; the crab grabs her "by the flue." He seeks to free her; the crab grabs his nose. Caught in this predicament, they send for a doctor to free them

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1750 (Percy Folio)

KEYWORDS: animal bawdy humorous husband injury marriage

FOUND IN: Canada (Newf, Ont) Britain (England (Lond, South), Scotland) US (Ap, MA, MW, Ro, SE, So, SW)

REFERENCES (14 citations):

- Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #104, "The Crabfish" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 1-4, "The Sea Crab" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 66-73, "The Sea Crab" (4 texts, 1 tune)
- Grimes-StoriesFromTheAnneGrimesCollection, pp. 49-50, "The Sea Crab" (1 text)
- Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 77, "The Crabfish" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 109, "The Crabfish" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 196, "The Crab-Fish" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Greig/Duncan7 1277, "The Jolly Minister" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
- Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 277-278, "Whiskey Johnny" (2 texts, version "D" of "Whiskey Johnny") [AbEd, p. 206]
- Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 52, pp. 245-248, "The Sea Crab" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, CRAYPOT, SHECRAB

- Frederick J. Furnivall, _Bishop Percy's Folio Manuscript: Loose and Humorous Songs_, printed by and for the Editor, London, 1868, pp. 99-100, "The Sea Crab" (1 text)

ST EM001 (Full)

Roud #149

RECORDINGS:

- Charlie Chettleburgh, "The Crab-Fish" (on FSBFTX19)
- Ernest Poole, "Crab Song" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
- Dan Tate, "Little Fisherman" (on OldTrad1, FarMtns1)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Cod Fish Song"

ALTERNATE TITLES:

The Crayfish
The Fishy Crab
The Lobster
The Old She-Crab

NOTES [366 words]: This is one of the oldest of English language traditional ballads. F.J. Child deliberately excluded it from his canonical ESPB, presumably because of its indelicate nature. - EC

Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland says of this piece, "...it seems likely to be either French in origin or in imitation of French balladry (at any rate this is a chance to disown it as an English composition)." Renwick notes a tremendous number of foreign equivalents, some so distant in time and space that they would almost certainly have to be independently created (unless the story originated back in the days of Homo Erectus. I agree that it's crude and primitive, but I doubt it's THAT crude and primitive!). He does note that the English versions are unusual in that the crab grabs the man by the nose rather than the sexual organs or by the lips. - RBW

Sharp's version differs from the canonical one in several ways, aside from having been cleaned up. The main theme of the song is that the woman is sick, and craves the crab, so the man goes and buys one. She goes to smell it, and it bites her, then him. Same song, very different emphasis. - PJS

In the illustrated children's booklet by John M. Feierbend, PhD (children's education?), _The Crabfish_, copyright 2005, is a brief children's poem of the ballad. Per the blurb, he is an established collector of American songs and rhymes and is prof. and chair of music education.
The brief introduction gives: "This story has delighted listeners for more than 600 years in spoken form and more than 400 years as a song. Franco Sacchetti (ca 1330-1400) of Italy is the oldest known teller of the story. Although the story is found in many countries, the song is found only in English-speaking countries (Britain, Canada, Australia, and the United States.)" - AS

The GregDuncan7 fragment is so brief ("There was a jolly minister, he had a jolly wife, He loved her, he loved her, he loved her as his life, Bawker oodle ...") that I'm not sure it belongs here. It does come close to the beginning of Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 77: ("There was a little man and he had a little wife, And he loved her as dear as he loved his life. Mash-a row ...".) - BS

Last updated in version 5.3
File: EM001

Sea Gulls and Crickets
DESCRIPTION: Famine threatens Mormon pioneers in the winter of 1849; spring brings new shoots, but crickets sweep down "like fog on a British coast." The pioneers battle them in vain, but flocks of seagulls arrive and devour the crickets; the harvest is saved
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (recording, L. M. Hilton)
KEYWORDS: rescue farming harvest disaster animal bird bug pioneer settler
FOUND IN: US(Ro)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Richard M. Dorson, _Buying the Wind: Regional Folklore in the United States_, University of Chicago Press, 1964, pp. 527-530, "The Seagulls and the Crickets" (1 text)
Roud #10833
RECORDINGS:
L. M. Hilton, "Sea Gulls and Crickets" (on Hilton01)
NOTES [32 words]: Dorson includes an account of this supposedly-historical event. But he also notes that "Extraordinary swarms of birds" is a folklore motif common enough to earn the Thompson classificatin F989.16.
Last updated in version 3.1
File: RecSgaC

Sea Martyrs, The
DESCRIPTION: "Good people do but lend an ear And a sad story you shall hear." The seamen are what guard England from France. But their families starve due to lack of pay. The seamen demand what they are owed. They are condemned to death
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (FIrth)
KEYWORDS: sailor mutiny crime execution money hardtimes battle
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 26, "The Sea-Martyrs" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V40381
File: PaSe026

Sea Song (I've Seen the Sea as Blue as Air)
DESCRIPTION: The singer has seen the sea "as blue as air," "green as grass," "black as pitch," and "white as snow" but "never feared its raving yet From Yarmouth to the Bass" or "heaving yet Let the wind blow high or low"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan1)
KEYWORDS: sea nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan1 8, "Sea Song" (1 text)
Roud #5800
Sea, The DESCRIPTION: "The sea, the sea, the open sea, The blue, the fresh, the ever-free, Without a mark, without a bound..." "I love, oh how I love to ride On the fierce foaming bursting tide...." The old seaman looks back on a tumultuous but happy life
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1847 (Journal by William Histed of the Cortes)
KEYWORDS: sailor sea nonballad age
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 63-64, "The Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2019
NOTES [30 words]: To me this looks like a professional piece which Histed copied down in his journal for some reason. But Huntington's notes left me with just enough doubt to include the song here. - RBW

Seaboard Air Line
DESCRIPTION: "Seaboard Air Line Never on time; At half past nine Your headlight shines; In all my dreams Your whistle screams; You are the idol of my heart, Seaboard Air Line."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: train love
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 238, "Seaboard Air Line" (1 short text)
Roud #15773
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sweet Adeline" (tune)

Sealer Lad, The (The Fisherman's Son to the Ice is Gone) DESCRIPTION: "The sealer lad from his home is gone, On board his ship you'll find him." The singer recalls the good old days of sealing, noting that now a load of seals "scarce pays Alfred's duty." He hopes the rich man at home will not longer profit
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Burke & Oliver)
KEYWORDS: hunting hardtimes
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, p. 69, "The Sealer Lad" (1 text); compare p. 134, "The Fisherman's Son to the Ice is Gone" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: James Murphy, editor _Songs Sung by Old-Time Sealers of Many Years Ago_, James Murphy Publishing, 1925 (PDF available from Memorial University of Newfoundland web site), p. 7, "The Fisherman's Son to the Ice Is Gone" (1 text)
Roud #V44859
NOTES [201 words]: Ryan and Small did not indicate a tune for this, but the form implies "The Minstrel Boy," and Murphy's book confirms this.
Since the first publication is in Burke and Oliver's _The People's Songster, Buyers' Guide and Gems of Poetry and Prose_, there is a good chance it's by John Burke.
The second text cited from Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, "The Fisherman's Son to the Ice is Gone," slightly changes the occupation of the hero, and is much shorter -- but the two are clearly adaptions of each other. Either they're traditional, and one song, or, more likely, they aren't traditional, and might as well be lumped.
"The Sealer Lad" has no genuine date pegs, but there is a reference to paying "Alfred's Duty." I suspect the "Alfred" involved is the insidious newspaperman/lawyer/politician A(lfred) B. Morine, commonly referred to as "Alfred," who was at various times Newfoundland's colonial secretary, minister of finance, and head of the Conservative party. (This apart from being one of the most corrupt politicians in modern history.) The most likely time for the song is around 1897, when he was finance minister. For more on him, see "The Sealer's Strike of 1902 (The Sealers Gained the Strike)." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: RySm069

Sealer's Call
DESCRIPTION: "I must go up to the ice again, To the fields of purest white." The singer, though his hair has turned white, still hears the call of the seal, and will return to the work even though the pay is small, the cold terrible, and the comforts few
AUTHOR: Solomon Samson ?
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (A Glimpse of Newfoundlad in Poetry and Pictures)
KEYWORDS: hunting ship travel work nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, p. 14, "The Sealer's Call" (1 text)
Roud #V44633
NOTES [47 words]: Not traditional that I can tell, and not a song either. Just one of those things editors inflict upon songbooks.
This seems clearly based on John Masefield's "Sea Fever" ("I must go down to the sea again, To the lonely sea and sky"), which has inspired other localizations as well. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: RySm014

Sealer's Love Letter, A
DESCRIPTION: "Dear Miss: -- I know I can't mail this; Forgive me, it's all I can do, Out here at the ice-fields in Winter... For it's Easter good wishes I'm sending." He recalls leaving her to work as a sealer, compares their lives, and sends good wishes
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff)
KEYWORDS: love separation nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, p. 91, "A Sealer's Love Letter" (1 text)
Roud #V44741
NOTES [341 words]: The Terra Nova, mentioned in this song, is almost the only dating hint in the piece, but she isn't much of a hint; she first became a sealer in 1885, and, apart from breaks taken for tasks such as Antarctic exploration, remained in that role almost until she sank in 1943. So this piece could have come from any time over a span of more than fifty years! For more about the Terra Nova, see "The Terra Nova."
The song is correct in saying that many sealers spend Easter away from home, since the sealing ships almost never returned to port during a sealing voyage. And they normally sailed March 10 or slightly after (depending on the day of the week). Thus they left port before Easter. The return date is less certain, because it depends on their success, but Levi George Chafe, Chafe's Sealing Book: A History of the Newfoundland Sealfishery from the Earliest Available Records Down To and Including the Voyage of 1923, third edition, Trade Printers and Publishers, Ltd., 1923 (PDF scan available from Memorial University of Newfoundland) has a chart of when the ships returned to port. Using the data starting on p. 63, I determined the median return date for the fifteen years from 1896 to 1910. The dates:
1896: April 18
1897: April 23
1898: April 10/11
1899: April 7
1900: April 2
1902: April 6/7
1903: April 14/15
1904: April 21
1905: April 22
1906: April 10
1907: April 18
1908: April 15
1909: April 28/29
1910: April 20

Using data from the web, I determined that the median date of Easter is April 7; the mode, according to a web source, is April 10. (These figures vary somewhat based on the range of years you use.) If we go by the median Easter date, in eleven of the fifteen years tested, the majority of ships were still in the ice on Easter Sunday; based on the mode, it's nine or ten out of fifteen. And sealers often needed a few days to get home after a seal hunt. So while some sealers made it home for Easter, in most years, especially years when Easter came early, the substantial majority did not.- RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: RySm091

Sealer's Reply to His Wife, A

DESCRIPTION: "Now that March month has come, And spring's in the air, The old seals are swimming Up North to their lair... So Maggie my darling I must leave you alone." The old sealer explains to his wife the lure of the seal hunt, and promises to stay home someday

AUTHOR: Solomon Samson?

EARLIEST DATE: 1963 (A Glimpse of Newfoundland in Poetry and Pictures)

KEYWORDS: hunting age

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, p. 153, "A Sealer's Reply to His Wife" (1 text)
Roud #V44689

NOTES [17 words]: Explained as a 60-year-old sealer's answer when his wife tried to keep him from going to the ice. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: RySm153

Sealer's Song (I)

DESCRIPTION: "The Block House Flag is up today to welcome home the stranger." The sealing fleet is returning. The ships are named, their feats recounted [how they "kill their foe"], i.e. the seals], and they go home to parties and dancing

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (Doyle-OldTimeSongsAndPoetryOfNewfoundland, 3rd edition), but written 1889-1890 (see NOTES)

KEYWORDS: bragging return hunting ship party dancing humorous

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, pp. 73-74, "The Sealer's Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, pp. 33-34, "Sealer's Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mills-FavoriteSongsOfNewfoundland, pp. 40-41, "Sealer's Song" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: John Feltham, _Sealing Steamers_, Harry Cuff Publications, 1995, pp. 77-78, "Sealer's Song" (partial text)

ST Doyl3052 (Partial)
Roud #7307

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Girl I Left Behind Me" (tune)

NOTES [1298 words]: A very widely cited song, though the author is unknown. Anna Kearney Guigné, in her article on the Doyle songsters, "Kenneth Peacock's Contribution to Gerald S.
Doyle's Old-TIme Songs of Newfoundland (1955),"(published in Newfoundland and Labrador Studies, Volume 22, No. 1, Summer 2007) attributes this to Gerald S. Doyle himself (p. 123), but the historical references make me think this very unlikely. Why would Doyle, in 1955, write a song that by its internal references dates from c. 1890?

My earlier notes on this song states, "The list of captains mentioned implies a date in the period between 1865 and 1880." I'm not sure where I found this information, but the song contains several dating hints. Just four of them allow us to set an absolute date of 1889-1890, with 1890 the better bet:

1. Verse 1, line 3 mentions "Stewart's House." According to Feltham, p. 77 n. 47, Stewart's was a sealing company that shut down in 1893. Compared to its rivals Bowring's and Job's (which lasted much longer), it was pretty small fry, with only three ships, the Walrus (for which see "First Arrival -- 'Aurora' and 'Walrus' Full"), the Proteus (which doesn't seem to have been mentioned in sealing songs), and the Ranger (for which see "First Arrival from the Sea Fishery S. S. Fogota, 1912").

2. Verse 1, line 4. There were several Captains Barbour (Alpheus Barbour, Baxter Barbour, George Barbour, Joseph Barbour, Thomas Barbour; Chafe, pp. 87-88), but because he commands the Ranger, the one in this song must be Captain Joe Barbour (also mentioned in the "Sealer's Song (II)" as captain of the Iceland), who commanded the Ranger 1882-1890 (Feltham, p. 78). Confirmation comes from the fact that J. & W. Stewart supplied (i.e. outfitted) the Ranger in those years (Chafe, p. 59).

3. Verse 3, lines 3-4; also verse 5 line 1. "Billy Knee the Jowler" (a "jowler" being a very successful captain) commanded the Kite 1889-1893 (Feltham, p. 78) as well as in 1877. Billy Knee's ship the Kite was one of the most-mentioned in sealing songs: see "The 'Kite' Abandoned in White Bay." Knee was another captain of a sealing dynasty; his brother (Kenneth) Knee is mentioned in "First Arrival from the Sea Fishery S. S. Fogota, 1912" and his son Job Knee in "The Sealer's Song (II)." William Knee certainly did take home a lot of seals; Chafe, p. 97, gives his career total as 201,493 seals over 16 years -- not record-breaking, but his yearly average of 12,593 seals appears to me to make him #27 in the list -- with very many of those who did better coming later and in better ships. Knee didn't have great success in 1890 (10,809 seals, according to Chafe, p. 59), which would make sense in light of the song's statement that they were stuck for two weeks.

Billy Knee does not seem to be mentioned explicitly in any other song, but the "Billy K." of "Uncle Bill Teller" seems like a good fit for Knee; see that song for background on Knee.

4. Captain Blandford (verse 2, line 1): There were at least four Captains Blandford (Samuel, Darius, James, and Joseph. Darius, James, and Samuel were brothers; Joe Blandford is mentioned in "Captains and Ships" and Darius Blandford in "Sealer's Song (II)"). But since (based on the combination of the first three items) we're looking at 1889-1890, it must be Captain Samuel Blandford (1840-1909), who had first gone to the ice under his father at the age of thirteen (Ryan, p. 227), and commanded the Neptune 1883-1903. In 1889, he took 28,103 seals, the second-highest total of the year. In 1890, he took 21,949 seals -- a lower total than in 1889, but in 1890, it was the best total of any ship. Support for the idea that it is Samuel comes from the fourth line of the verse, that Blandford "filled her to the hatches"; in 1884, Blandford had set a record for most seals in one trip -- which he himself broke in 1888 (Feltham, p. 94). Thus if the song was written in 1889 or 1890, Blandford was the record-holder for filling his ship. This is further confirmed by the fact that Job's supplied the Neptune in 1889-1890 (Chafe, p. 59).

Blandford would later serve in the Newfoundland House of Assembly (Chafe, p. 31; according to Ryan, p. 241, several other Newfoundland sealers would also go into politics as a result of their fame), and continued to command ships through 1906, when he retired due to illness (Ryan, p. 191). Ryan, pp. 382-383, has a copy of his obituary. See also the notes to "Neptune, Ruler of the Sea."

Unlike a lot of sealing captains, who could not navigate a ship, some of the Blandfords were actual qualified seamen; Darius Blandford would later captain the passenger liner Bruce (Hanrahan, p. 4). There is a photo of Samuel Blandford on p. 73 of Ryan/Drake and and another on p. 73 of Winsor, plus an 1899 photo of him, along with other sealing stalwarts such as Abram Kean and Arthur Jackman, on p. 25 of Winsor.

The combination of these mentions gives us a forced date of 1889-1890. Many of the other mentions accord with this date.

I'll try to take the other details of this song in order.

Verse 1, line 1: The "Block House Flag," according to Feltham, p. 77 n. 46, was raised when a sealer approached St. John's harbour, letting residents know so that they could watch the arrival.

Verse 3, line 2, "Jackman in the Howler." There were several Captains Jackman. For Captain William Jackman, see "Captain William Jackman, A Newfoundland Hero." For Arthur Jackman, probably the most noteworthy, see also "The Spring of '97," "First Arrival -- 'Aurora' and 'Walrus'
Full," and especially "The Old Polina." But neither commanded a sealer called the Howler, because, according to Feltham, p. 78 n. 48, there was no such ship. Nor did a Captain Jackman ever command the Wolf, an obvious candidate to be nicknamed the Howler. I might wildly conjecture that Vanguard might be mis-heard as "Howler," but Jackman didn't command the Vanguard. Alternately, the Aurora was sometimes known as the Roarer (England, p. 118), and I suppose Roarer could be re-nicknamed Howler. But although Arthur Jackman commanded the Aurora 1894-1897 (Chafe, p. 92), that is after this song must have been written. There was also an SS Harlaw, which could easily be mis-heard as "Howler," but she didn't come into service until 1896 and her only commanders were D. A. Scott and J. Farguhar. And the SS Hector, which served 1871-1891, never had a captain Jackman either; in 1899, she was under B. Kean, and W. Barbour commanded her in 1890 (Chafe, p. 100).

Arthur Jackman in 1889-1890 commanded the Eagle, and she was supplied by Bowring Brothers in those years (Chafe, p. 59), so presumably that is the real "Howler." Possibly the name was simply made up to give a rhyme for "Jowler." The 1899 photo on p. 25 of Winsor also shows Captain Arthur Jackman (1843-1907), along with other sealing stalwarts such as Abram Kean. Ryan/Drake, p. 74, also has a photo of Arthur Jackman, who commanded sealers every year from 1871 to 1906. He had a somewhat checkered career, losing the Resolute in 1886 and the Eagle in 1892, and was once fined for violating the laws about sealing on Sundays -- but he was so tough that, when he mangled one of his fingers, he took an axe and cut it off when one of his sailors refused to do so! (Ryan, pp. 272-273 n. 23).

As for the Eagle herself (verse 7, line 4), there were two sealers named Eagle, the first being the one commanded for a time by Arthur Jackman. For these two ships, see the notes to "The Ice-Floes."

Verse 6, line 4: whoever "Walsh and Luke McCarthy" were, they were not ship captains at this time; there were two Captains Walsh, Samuel and Nicolas (Chafe, pp. 95-96), but they last sailed in 1882 in the Merlin. I have no clue as to McCarthy. - RBW

Bibliography

- England: George Allan England, Vikings of the Ice: Being the Log of a Tenderfoot on the Great Newfoundland Seal Hunt (also published as The Greatest Hunt in the World), Doubleday, 1924
- Feltham: John Feltham, Sealing Steamers, Harry Cuff Publications, 1995

Sealer's Song (II), The

DESCRIPTION: "The Terra Nova, Captain Kean, With two hundred and three men, Went through the gap this morning To try their luck again." A total of 20 ships and captains set out for the ice. The singer hopes they all return safely and with large loads of seals

AUTHOR: Johnny Burke (1851-1930), according to Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, but see

NOTES

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)

KEYWORDS: hunting ship moniker nonballad

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, p. 79, "The Sealer's Song" (1 text)
Roud #7307
RECORDINGS:
*Morris Houlihan, "Sealer's Song" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
"cf. 'First Arrival -- 'Aurora' and 'Walrus' Full" (ships)
"cf. 'Arrival of the 'Grand Banks' and 'Virginia Lake' With Bumper Trips" (ships)
"cf. 'Arrival of 'Aurora,' Diana,' 'Virginia Lake' and 'Vanguard,' Loaded" (ships)
NOTES [3368 words]: Although this deals with the same subject, and even some of the same ships, as "The Sealer's Song (I)," and apparently are lumped by Roud, the two are clearly distinct: this deals with the departure of the ships, that with their return. The song is even closer, in terms of ships named, to "Captains and Ships" -- not surprising, since the two songs describe events separated by just three years. This song, as we shall see, is clearly from 1907.
There are two basic versions of this, one printed by Winsor ("The Ships that Sailed Today") and one by Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff ("The Sealer's Song").
Although most sources, including Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, attribute this to Johnny Burke, it is not in his most extensive collection, Johnny Burke (William J. Kirwin, editor), John White's _Collection of Johnny Burke Songs_, Harry Cuff Publications, St. John's, 1981. For a brief biography of Johnny Burke, see the notes to "The Kelligrew's Soiree." And Winsor's text is credited to James Murphy and dated to 1907. It begins "I watched when they departed, 'Twas eight o'clock the hour, I saw them steaming down the shore With Tom Rose at the Cabot Tower. The echoes of their cheering In fancy o'er me steals As our young men so daring Went forth in quest of seals." It is in eight line-line stanzas rather than four, but the second stanza begins "The Terra Nova, Captain Kean, With two hundred and three men, Went through the 'gap' this morning To try their luck again" -- in other words, the same text as that of Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff. The following verses of the two texts are not identical, but the differences are entirely what we would expect of oral tradition, with the text in Winsor in much better shape than that in Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff.
James Murphy and Johnny Burke were collaborators: is it possible that Burke wrote the original, and Murphy perhaps rewrote it? Or vice versa? And did Gerald Doyle, the source of the Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff text, learn it orally and transcribe it incorrectly? At least Winsor's date of 1907 is confirmed by the contents of the song.
I'm going to give a collation of the two, showing substantial differences. This doesn't extend to spellings and punctuation, or even to minor words, but it will show the differences. Each line is cited by stanza and line; keep in mind, again, that Winsor uses eight-line stanzas, which Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff divide into standard four-line stanzas, so Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff have almost twice as many stanzas.
R/S 3.1, "Next came the stout ship Aurora"; Winsor 3.1, "There sailed the stout Aurora"
R/S 3.3, "And Capt. Bob Winsor"; Winsor 3.3, "With Captain 'Sam-Bob' Winsor"
R/S 4.1, "She aspied (sic.) a bold-eyed stranger"; Winsor 3.5, "Chased by the bold ice Ranger"
R/S 4.3, "No notice to her danger"; Winsor 3.7, "No novice to that danger"
R/S 5.1-2, "Darius Blandford sails the Vanguard The pride of Baine Johnson's ships"; Winsor 4.1-2, "Darius leads the Vanguard Of Baine, Johnstone's ships"
R/S 6.1-3, "There is another that can find them Where e'er there to be found, That's bully young Bill Winsor"; Winsor, 4.5-7, "As good as they can find them -- I know where one is found -- 'Tis bully young Will Winsor"
R/S 7.1, "Joe Barbour sails the Iceland"; Winsor 5.1, "There's Barbour in the Iceland"
R/S 8.3-4, "You won't find one no smarter For to sail the Southern Cross"; Winsor 5.7-8, "There's not a man much smarter To sail the Southern Cross"
R/S have the two stanzas starting "George Barbour" as stanzas 9-10 (i.e. they would be stanza 6 in Winsor); Winsor has them as stanza 7 (i.e. they would be 11-12 in R/S)
R/S 9.3, "Jobie Kean commands the Eric"; Winsor 7.3, "Job Kean commands the Erik"
R/S 10.1, "That lucky ship Dianna" (sic.); Winsor 7.5, "While the lucky ship Diana"
R/S 11.3-4, "The first on charge is Harry Dawe[,] The latter by Jobie Knee"; Winsor 6-3-4, "The first in charge of Harry Dawe, The last by 'Jobey' Knee"
R/S 12.1, "John Parson in the Newfoundland"; Winsor 6.5, "The Newfoundland with Parsons"
R/S 13.3-4, "Our good friend Baird and Gordon Sent George Hand in the Labrador"; Winsor, 8.3-4, "And my friends, both Baird and Gordon, Sent George Hann in the Labrador."
R/S 14.1-3, "Jacob Kean command the Virginia Lake Makes up the twenty ships And my best wish may they all return"; Winsor 8.5-7, "While Jacob Kean in the Virginia Lake, Completes the twenty ships; And the wish of all -- may they return"

Winsor's is the better text (although even it appears defective at a few points), but scholars who are looking at this song will probably be looking at the Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff version, so I'm going to analyze its text rather than Winsor's (with reference to Winsor). Taking the ships in order: The Terra Nova is the subject of "The Terra Nova." The Captain Kean who commands her is clearly Abram Kean (the subject of "Captain Abram Kean"); he commanded the Terra Nova 1906-1908 and then, when all the steel sealers were lost in World War I, again in 1917-1926 and 1932-1933; two of his sons commanded her in 1927 and for one of two trips in 1929 (Feltham, p. 134). The song correctly states that she carried 203 men (in 1907); this is also the figure on p. 74 of Chafe.

There were two sealers named Eagle. For these two ships, see the notes to "The Ice-Floes." The second Eagle was commanded by Joseph "Joe" Kean, the oldest of Abram's eight sons, from 1907 to 1911 (Chafe, p. 99). Joseph Kean is also mentioned in "Captains and Ships"; he died in the wreck of the Florizel (for which see "The Wreck of the Steamship Florizel").

For the Aurora, see "First Arrival -- 'Aurora' and 'Walrus' Full." Her captain Dan Green is also mentioned in "Captains and Ships." He commanded the Aurora 1906-1911; she was his last command (Chafe, p. 98). The Algerine is the subject of "The Loss of the Algerine." S. R. Winsor (called "Bob Winsor" in Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff's text, but apparently the same as the "Sam Winsor" of "Captains and Ships," and given the correct nickname "Sam-Bob" in Winsor's text; for the Winsor Family, see "Captains and Ships" and "First Arrival from the Sea Fishery S. S. Fogota, 1912") commanded the Algerine 1907-1908 (Chafe, p. 98). Chafe, p. 74, confirms the song's statement that Algerine was supplied (outfitted) by Bowring Brothers.

For the Vanguard, see "Arrival of 'Aurora,' 'Diana,' 'Virginia Lake,' and 'Vanguard,' Loaded"; for the family of her skipper Darius Blandford, see "Sealer's Song (I)." Darius Blandford (1843-1917) commanded the Vanguard 1907-1909, losing her in the last of those years. Ironically, given the song's wish that he live long, his career was short -- having first served as a captain in the Iceland in 1898, he never commanded another sealer after the loss of the Vanguard, although the crew was rescued by the Algerine (Feltham, p. 151). Chafe, p. 74, confirms the song's statement that she was supplied by Baine, Johnston & Co. There is an 1899 photo of Darius Blandford, along with other sealing stalwarts such as Abram Kean and Arthur Jackman, on p. 25 of Winsor.

Despite his short sealing career, Blandford was a successful sea captain; having commanded the Dundee of the Alphabet Fleet. (For the Alphabet Fleet, see the notes to "the Wreck of the Steamship Ethie." A report at the time says that "Captain Darius Blandford is a genial host, and good humour beams from is countenance at all times. His principal aim is to make passengers enjoy the voyage" (Hannrahian, p. 4).

The original Bloodhound was, along with the slightly larger Wolf, the very first Newfoundland steamer to be used for sealing, in 1863 (Busch, p. 66; Chafe, p. 24; Feltham, pp. 70, 160; O'Neill, p. 916). She vastly exceeded the hauls of most sail-powered ships that went before her, averaging about 5900 seals per year before sinking off the coast of Labrador on April 4, 1872 (Feltham, p. 160). This was, to repeat, a higher total than the brigs that had preceded her, but a pitiful total compared to what the steamers would average over the coming decades. Nonetheless, after her loss, another Bloodhound was built in the following year (O'Neill, p. 916). The reference in this song is clearly to the second Bloodhound, which made her first sealing trip in 1873, although she spent only a few years at it until being sold abroad, returning to Newfoundland ownership in 1904 (Winsor, p. 35). O'Neill, p. 916, says that this second Bloodhound lasted until 1917 (although on p. 971 he incorrectly says that she foundeder in 1880), when she was lost off Point La Haye while carrying coal (Winsor, p. 35), so song's reference to her as "old" makes sense; even though she was the "new" Bloodhound, by the time of this song, she was one of the older sealers. The captain listed for her by Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, "Bill Windsor," is probably an error for William Winsor (no "d"), a member of a family of well-known sealing captains already mentioned above under the Algerine. Winsor's text correctly calls him "Will Winsor." William Winsor (for whom see "First Arrival from the Sea Fishery S. S. Fogota, 1912") commanded the second Bloodhound 1907-1908; Jacob Winsor commanded her 1909-1911 as his last command; Jesse Winsor (the "Jessie Winsor" of Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff; Winsor has the name right) was her skipper 1913-1914, and also ended his career after giving her up (Chafe, pp. 96, 98). There is a photo of the Bloodhound facing p. 36 of Chafe, and one on p. 26 of Ryan/Drake; Winsor, p. 35, has a photo of her alongside the Thetis from 1910.

For the Iceland see "Captains and Ships." Joseph "Joe" Barbour never commanded her (Chafe, p. 87), but James Barbour (whose only previous command had been the Diana in 1897) commanded the Iceland 1904-1907. (There are photos of both Joseph and James Barbour on p. 71 of Winsor), and Winsor's text omits the name "Joe," calling the captain simply "Barbour." The Greenland was infamous for her part in the Greenland Disaster (see "The Greenland Disaster (I);" see also "The Sealing Trip of the S. S. Greenland 1891"). The most famous Captain Bragg was Robert Bragg, who commanded the Walrus 1886-1891, 1902-1903 and the Ranger 1892-1897, but he never commanded the Greenland. Neither did Captain John Bragg, who commanded the Florence for one year but took only 2090 seals and was not employed again (Winsor, p. 102). So the captain here must be Dan Bragg, an inexperienced skipper whose only previous command was the Southern Cross in 1905-1906 (Chafe, p. 88). Bragg lost the Greenland on his 1907 trip, his first year as her captain. Bragg was given the Iceland in 1908, but never commanded again after that. Thus it was reasonable to ask Bragg to show what he could do -- but what he did was fail. For the Southern Cross see "The Southern Cross (I)." There is a photo of Peter Carter on p. 184 of Feltham, one on p. 76 of Winsor, and another on p. 80 of Ryan/Drake. His was a most unusual career for a sealing captain. Born in 1869 (Ryan/Drake, p. 80), and long associated with the cod fishery, he became a sealing captain relatively late, commanding the Southern Cross in 1907 (Chafe, p. 89). He didn't get another command until 1925, then served every year until 1931, missed 1932, and served three final seasons in 1933-1935. In 1933, he set a record for seals taken, mostly because he found a large patch of older seals. He died in 1959 (Ryan/Drake, p. 80). Although his 1933 trip set a record and made him famous, the seasons at the end of his career cannot be the subject of the song, because too many of the vessels mentioned had been lost by then.

Carter was popular with his men, though, which may explain why he is referred to as unusually smart. Jesse Codner, who sailed with him, said he "was the loveliest old man ever you see the like of, and he brought in just as many seals as the other fellows. And he looked after his men" (Ryan/Last, p. 149). Don Fowler also called him a "fine old man," and Arthur Rideout said "He was an all-right old lad" although he added that "He drank a lot" (Ryan/Last, p. 220).

The Neptune (one of two sealers of that name, but there is no doubt which one is meant) is the subject of "Neptune, Ruler of the Sea." George Barbour is discussed in "The Greenland Disaster (I)." He commanded the Neptune 1905-1908 and also 1916-1925 (Feltham, p. 93). The Eric (actually Erikas correctly spelled in Winsor's texts) was sunk by a German U-boat while hauling coal on August 25, 1918, and was captained by Job Kean from 1902 to 1913; for both, see "Captains and Ships."

For the Dianna (properly Diana; here again, Winsor has the spelling right), see "Arrival of 'Aurora,' 'Diana,' 'Virginia Lake,' and 'Vanguard,' Loaded"; that entry also explains why she was called lucky. Alpheus Barbour of the Barbour dynasty commanded her from 1898 to 1908 (Chafe, p. 88). This is the only song I know to mention him by name, but note the mention of George Barbour above; see also "The Nimrod's Song" for another Barbour, Baxter. Alpheus Barbour had his first command in the Walrus in 1896 and his last in Bloodhound in 1915 (Ryan-Ice, p. 498). He is another of the captains pictured in 1899 on p. 25 of Winsor, as is George Barbour; there is another picture of both on p. 71 of Winsor. The whole dynasty, as the song says, was from Bonavista Bay.

The Adventure is the subject of "I Am a Newfoundlander." She had a relatively short sealing career; Henry Dawe commanded her 1906-1910, and Jacob Kean 1911-1915 (Chafe, p. 98). (There were actually two Captains Henry Dawe; this is the Henry Dawe of Bay Roberts.) Dawe first commanded in the Mastiff in 1879 and ended his career with this stint in the Adventure. This Henry Dawe is also mentioned in "The Sealing Trip of the S. S. Greenland 1891," "I Am a Newfoundlander," "The Bully Crew," and "Arrival of the 'Grand Lake' and 'Virginia Lake' With Bumper Trips," as well as being mis-called "Captain Doyle" in "Captains and Ships." Chafe, p. 31, says that he was a popular captain.

For the Grand Lake, see again "Arrival of the 'Grand Lake' and 'Virginia Lake' With Bumper Trips." Job Kean (the first of two captains of that name, who first commanded the Falcon in 1889 and was still sailing in 1923; Chafe, p. 93) commanded her in 1906-1908, when he lost her. He is also mentioned in "Captains and Ships." There is a photo of one or the other Job Kean on p. 75 of Winsor.

The Newfoundland is the ship of the Newfoundland Disaster of 1914, discussed in "The Newfoundland Disaster (I)." She was the first command of John Parsons, who had charge of her from 1906-1908 before moving to other ships (Chafe, p. 94). He is also mentioned in "Captains and Ships."

The Panther is also mentioned in "Captain Bill Ryan Left Terry Behind"; Jesse Winsor (the correct spelling; he was another member of the Winsor family mentioned above) commanded her 1906-1908, when she was lost; he also held commands in 1909 and 1912-1914 (Chafe, p. 96). For Jesse Winsor, and all the Winsors, see the notes to "First Arrival from the Sea Fishery S. S."
The song is correct in saying he was from Wesleyville; Ryan/Drake, p. 78, shows William Winsor's Wesleyville home.

The Walrus, one of the very first sealing steamers, is also mentioned in "First Arrival -- 'Aurora' and 'Walrus' Full," and obviously was listed under several of the captains above. Jacob Winsor -- yes, another member of the Winsor family! -- commanded her in 1907 and 1908; she was lost in the latter year (Chafe, p. 105). Chafe, p. 74, confirms that, in 1907, she was supplied by Bowring's. The Labrador is also mentioned in "Captains and Ships" and in "Success to the Hard Sealers."

She first went to the ice under George Hann (1850-1942) in 1892, and remained his ship all the way until 1908; she then served under Baxter Barbour in 1909. Chafe, pp. 88, 101, and Winsor, p. 50, say Barbour commanded her in 1910 also, but Chafe, p. 74, says she was under George Hann in 1910. D. Martin took her over in 1911-1913; she was lost in the latter year (Chafe, p. 101; Winsor, p. 50, says she was caught in a blizzard in early March and ran aground; she was a total loss although all the crew survived). Hann (called "George Hand" in Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff but by his correct name "Hann" in Winsor's text) himself spent almost his entire career in the Labrador; his only other service was as captain of the Leopard in 1890-1891 (Chafe, p. 91); although his mention in the song seems to be an error, with Barbour the actual commander of the ship, it's noteworthy that Chafe made the same error; clearly Hann was strongly associated with the Labrador. Captain Hann is shown in the already-mentioned photo on p. 25 of Winsor, and there is another photo on p. 50 of Winsor. The latter page also has a photo of the Labrador herself.

For the Virginia Lake, see "Arrival of the 'Grand Lake' and 'Virginia Lake' With Bumper Trips."

Jacob Kean (nephew of the famous Abram Kean; Kean, p. 19) commanded her in 1907-1909, succeeding the famous Captain Samuel Blandford, under whom he had been the second-in-command (Ryan-Ice, p. 191); she was lost in 1909 (Chafe, p. 104). She was Kean's first command, although he did so well (more than 20,000 seals in his first two years) that he had no trouble getting ships despite that. Jacob Kean (1864-1939) was still going to the ice as late as 1936, but spent most of his career commanding coastal steamers (starting in 1911; Tarver, p. 229). He had also worked some of the same mail ships as Uncle Abram (Kean, p. 19). The sealers had curiously mixed opinions of him; John Crawford says "He was as knowledgeable a man as was going out there," but Paul Healey described an indecisive man who was "just about crazy" and wondered if there was "something wrong" with him. Stephen Mullins called him a "wicked, wicked man" but also a "good man" and concluded he was "one of the uneasiest men in the world." Gordon Thorne said he "wasn't much of a captain." William Way said he was "all right" (Ryan-Last, pp. 307-309). It sounds to me as if he might have struggled with depression or some such (not unlikely, given that... some sort of curious psychological problems... ran in Abram Kean's family.).

The song claims to list twenty ships, but Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff's text lists only 19 (Terra Nova, Eagle, Aurora, Algerine, Vanguard, Bloodhound, Iceland, Greenland, Southern Cross, Neptune, Eric, Diana, Adventure, Grand Lake, Newfoundland, Panther, Walrus, Labrador, Virginia Lake). It appears based on verse four (which lists a captain but not a ship) that the missing ship was commanded by "a Bishop." This must be either Noah Bishop or Edward Bishop, since they were the only Bishops to command a sealer. Noah Bishop commanded the Algerine 1909-1912 (Chafe, p. 88) -- but it can't be him, since the Algerine is accounted for. Edward Bishop commanded the Algerine in 1906, the Ranger in 1907-1908, the Terra Nova in 1909, and the Eagle every year from 1912 to 1926 (Chafe, p. 88; Feltham, p. 47). All of those ships except the Ranger are accounted for in the song. So the ship must be the Ranger (and hence the year must be 1907). This implies that the fourth verse has been corrupted; we should emend "Ranger" for either "stranger" or "danger." And, in fact, the Winsor's text as we saw in the collation above, has "Chased by the bold ice Ranger" for "She aspied a bold-eyed stranger." Thus Winsor's text has the full set of twenty ships.

The reference to the Greenland under Bragg, as well as the Southern Cross under Carter, forces us to date this song 1907, and the combination of the other dates confirm this: every ship listed went to the ice in 1907, and several were not around for the 1908 hunt, and the Havana of 1906 is not mentioned. This backs up the 1907 date found in Winsor.

There were in fact 23 ships that went to the ice in 1907, not just 20 (Chafe, p. 74); the song has the Greenland, which is not in Chafe's list (presumably because she did not return), but omits the Nimrod, the Kite, and the Viking - RBW Bibliography

- Chafe: Levi George Chafe, Chafe's Sealing Book: A History of the Newfoundland Seal Fishery
Sealer's Strike of 1902, The (The Sealers Gained the Strike)

DESCRIPTION: "Attention, all ye fishermen, and read this ballad down, And hear about the sealer's strike the other day in town." The sealers, led by "brave Colloway," unite and present their demands. A. B. Morine secures their demands

AUTHOR: Johnny Burke (1851-1930)

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Murphy, Songs Sung by the Old Time Sealers of Many Years Ago)

KEYWORDS: ship hunting strike labor-movement

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Mar 8, 1902 - Beginning of the Sealer's Strike
Mar 12, 1902 - Sealers' demands granted

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, p. 64, "The Sealer's Strike of 1902"; p. 63, "The Sealers Gained the Strike" (2 texts); also p. 66, "The Luck Went With the Sealers Since Brave Colloway Led the Strike" (1 text, a sequel to the above)

ADDITIONAL: James Murphy, editor, _Songs Sung by Old-Time Sealers of Many Years Ago_, James Murphy Publishing, 1925 (PDF available from Memorial University of Newfoundland web site), p. 20, "The Sealers Strike of 1902" (1 text)
Johnny Burke (John White, Editor), _Burke's Ballads_, no printer listed, n.d. (PDF available on Memorial University of Newfoundland web site), p. 14, "The Sealers Gained the Strike" (1 text); also p. 15, "The Luck Went With the Sealers Since Brave Colloway Led the Strike" (1 text, a sequel to the above)
Johnny Burke (William J. Kirwin, editor), _John White's Collection of Johnny Burke Songs_, Harry Cuff Publications, St. John's, 1981, #22, p. 39, "The Sealers Gained the Strike" (1 text); #23, p. 40, "The Luck Went With the Sealers Since Brave Colloway Led the Strike" (1 text)

Roud #V44591

NOTES [3053 words]: Although all sources for this are printed and literary, the divergences between the first two texts in Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff may imply oral transmission. Murphy, who published the earliest version, seemingly was unaware of the attribution to Burke, even though they worked together frequently; possibly Burke didn't want to have his name listed and be seen as pro-sealer. For a brief biography of Johnny Burke, see the notes to "The Kelligrew's Soiree."
Sealing was a seasonal industry based largely on ships, with crews of sealers going out on each ship and getting a share of the profits on the seals that were harvested. By 1902, the year of the sealer's strike, this tradition dated back for several lifetimes.

According to Cadigan, p. 170, prior to the strike, the number of sealers who were able to go out each year had been declining -- with the seal herd shrinking, and the hunt necessarily being moved from small schooners and sloops to the large steamers that could carry many men and seal pelts, there simply weren't as many berths for sealers. And the steamers were expensive, and the industry was in a recession, with some companies going out of business (Ryan-Ice, p. 183, though he points out on pp. 183-184 that the problem wasn't as bad as they claimed), so the owners used various techniques to reduce their costs (Busch, p. 76; on p. 78, he argues that the basic problem was the weakness and specialization of the Newfoundland economy, which was being hurt by loss of revenue from cod). In return for granting a man a berth on a sealer, the owners required a so-called "coaling fee," for instance (Ryan-Ice, p. 343), and forced the men to buy certain equipment at inflated prices -- a technique known as the "crop" (Candow, p. 102. At least the owners had to cover the deficit if the sealers didn't take enough seals to cover the crop). The Appendix below describes the "crop" in more detail.

An even more objectionable way of raising money was "berthing fees" -- charging sealers a fee to serve on the sealing steamer, which would be deducted from their earnings. And the owners collectively decided how much pelts would be worth in that year, so the owners had come close to creating a "company store" type situation: They set the pay, and they decided what to bill the sealers for participating. Sealers on successful steamers still earned a reasonable payment -- but if a ship had a bad year, the sealers might end up with nothing at all. And the work was hard, dirty, and dangerous (the sanitary facilities didn't deserve the name, e.g.). And the ships were excessively crowded, meaning that the men into close contact, so it was easy for them to decide on collective action.

Worse, the owners were paying the sealers a smaller fraction of the value of the seals: "The Sealers were now only getting one third [of the value] of their catch in the steamers, whereas formerly in the sailing vessels they got one half... of their voyage" (Chafe, p. 38).

England, pp. 53-54, writing two decades after the strike, declares, "I have never known a country where employers enjoyed such a sinecure as in Newfoundland. Labour, there, has hardly begun to dream that it has any rights. And the game of exploitation goes merrily on." But even Newfoundland's disorganized sealers needed to eat! And there had been some labor activism in the years around 1900, although it involved trade unions rather than the highly individualistic sealers (Busch, pp. 82-83; Ryan-Ice, pp. 329-342, has a catalog of these labor actions). As a result, in 1902, "211 sealers of the SS Ranger, a wooden-hulled steamer [for which see the notes to "First Arrival from the Sea Fishery S. S. Fogota, 1912"], left their vessel in St John's to protest their wages and sparked a wider strike by sealers from other vessels" (Cadigan, p. 170).

"Men poured out of the various vessels so quickly that presumably there was some prearrangement" (Busch, p. 83) -- but no one has offered any actual evidence for this. The two sides were far apart -- the merchants wanted to pay only $2.40 for each hundredweight (112 pounds) of seal fat, down from $3.25; the strikers privately wanted at least $4, and asked for more (Cadigan, p. 171). Both sides appealed to the government -- the owners for troops (Busch, p. 87), the sealers for support. The sealers, interestingly, went to the governor, i. e. the British representative, Sir Cavendish Boyle, rather than the head of the elected Newfoundland government, Premier Sir Robert Bond (Busch, p. 84; Ryan-Ice, pp. 363-365, thinks that was based on the support that the previous governor, Henry McCallum, had given the sealers, although Boyle did not prove as helpful. The irony is that Bond eventually came to be regarded as one of the most honest and capable of Newfoundland Prime Ministers. Perhaps the problem was that Bond and the sealers' spokesman A. B. Morine were anything but cordial -- which is actually another sign of Bond's honesty, because Morine was utterly corrupt).

Morine, who eventually represented the sealers, was born in Nova Scotia but had come to Newfoundland in 1883 to edit a newspaper (Cadigan, p. 148). He first ran for office in 1885 (DictNewfLabrador, p. 232; he lost on his first try but soon won a by-election). He was admitted to the bar in 1894, held various ministries after that, including Finance Minister 1897-1898 (DictNewfLabrador, p. 231), even serving as acting prime minister for a time while prime minister James Winter was out of the country (Harding, p. 82). During that time, he produced a government plan to sell or (mostly) give away a huge chunk of the island to Robert Reid, who was building Newfoundland Railway, and whom Morine represented (Hanrahan, pp. 11-12; for the Newfoundland Railway, and this deal, see also the notes to "The Wreck of the Steamship Ethie"). When Winter got back and found what Morine had done, he "angrily demanded that Morine resign. This earned Morine the somewhat dubious honor of being publicly disgraced twice in one year.
Winter went so far as to describe his erstwhile lieutenant as "the greatest scoundrel who ever entered the Narrows" (Harding, p. 82); Harding himself (p. 84), sums him up as "one of the most thoroughly unscrupulous opportunists to have ever disgraced a public office." I doubt anyone would disagree.

An editorial cartoon of the time (reproduced on p. 55 of Penney) shows Morine dressed as a saint with a halo -- but kneeling on a box labelled "Receiver General and Reid's Solicitor," Reid being the company which had the railroad franchise. This hints strongly that what Morine was praying for was, frankly, to receive even more graft. Similarly, a bit of political doggerel asked,

Will you let Reid's hireling lawyer
Barter homes and hearths away? [this because Morine's plan gave huge swathes of land to Reid's railroad]

Will you let him sell his country,
Sell you all for place and pay? (Hiller/Neary, p. 140).

In the election of 1901, after Morine's machinations came to light, Sir Robert Bond's party won 32 of 36 seats in the House of Assembly based on its opposition to Morine -- the most lopsided election result in Newfoundland history (Noel, pp. 30-31; the Reid company had campaigned for Winter's and Morine's conservatives, which probably made things worse; Penney, p. 70). The Reid company was forced to reorganize (it wasn't broke, but changing its structure made it easier for it to make deals; Penney, p. 70), and Morine was in disgrace. In 1906, the Reid organization would offer Morine $10,000 per year to absent himself from Newfoundland (Penney, p. 94). Morine went to Toronto for six years, then spent the remaining years of his life moving back and forth from Canada to Newfoundland (depending, I think, on where he was wanted less); toward the end, he spent much of his energy campaigning for "Confederation" -- i.e. having Newfoundland join Canada (DictNewfLabrador, pp. 232-233). But that was much later.

Morine's career was so complex that his entry in DictNewfLabrador, which is one of the longest if not the longest in the book, doesn't even mention his part in the sealer's strike. Morine came to represent the sealers even though he was "clearly part of the power structure" of Newfoundland (had the deal with the railroads worked out as intended, Morine expected to become Prime Minister; Penney, p. 66) and in fact he had a low opinion of most Newfoundlanders (Busch, p. 84). "The sealers had little choice, however, and Morine was colorful and able" (Busch, pp. 84-85). And, of course, Morine wanted the role as a way to clear his name and start rebuilding his political career.

At first, the owners wouldn't even meet with Morine, and set out to starve out the sealers (many of whom came from the outports and had no way to survive except by charity; Candow, p. 103); many ended up sleeping in the streets (in Newfoundland, in March! -- Busch, p. 85). One of the cruelest of captains, Arthur Jackman (for whom see, e.g., "The Old Polina") prepared to take the Terra Nova out to sea even so, and Sam Blandford (for whom see "Sealer's Song (I)"") prepared to follow in the Neptune (Ryan-Ice, p. 344, attributes this to a rivalry between Jackman and Blandford -- Blandford wouldn't let Jackman get away unescorted). Things weren't so easy for the Neptune; the sealers put a hawser around the ship to hold her in place. Blandford cut it and got out (Busch, pp. 85-86; Ryan-Ice, p. 344), but the sealers were mostly successful in getting their point across. What's more, many ships couldn't sail because the firemen who kept the engines running had walked out with the sealers (Ryan-Ice, p. 344).

Morine apparently managed to convince Premier Bond to accept the compromise price of $3.50 per hundredweight and an end to berthing fees (Busch, p. 86; Cadigan, p. 171; Candow, p. 104), although the "crop" remained.

Not every sealer was satisfied with this offer; there were die-hards who held out for their original demands. They tried to prevent other sealers from boarding the ships. But, by this time, the town was concerned about all the sealers who were wandering about with no place to stay and nothing to do; the police had been called out to prevent disorder (Ryan-Ice, p. 345). Fears of violence had apparently caused a judge to order the saloons closed, but there was no actual bloodshed (Busch, p. 86). There weren't enough extremists to keep things going. And so the strike ended. There had been a slight delay in the start of the season, but the ships went out just two days after their expected start -- even the Terra Nova and Neptune came back to take full crews aboard (Ryan-Ice, p. 345).

It's fascinating to note that the most significant sealing captain of them all, Abram Kean (for whom see "Captain Abram Kean") had been crossing swords with Morine for a decade and a half; as early as 1885, they had contested a parliamentary seat, although Kean (who had a rather casual attitude toward the truth) claims they were the best of friends for decades (Kean, pp. 13-15).

Not every sealer was convinced that the berthing fees were gone; Thomas Bragg in his oral history complained that "You'd get a $9 crop, but you had to pay $12. See, one time you had to pay $3 for your berth. Then they got a union and they said they took off the $3. But what they did was give you a $9 crop and you used to have to pay $12. You were still paying $3 for your berth" (Ryan-Last, p. 232). This isn't entirely fair; the extra $3 was, in a way, insurance for all the times when the sealers could not pay off the $9 crop, but it's true enough, as the appendix shows.

Interestingly, all the accounts of the strike I've seen in histories of Newfoundland mention Morine, but very little is said about Calloway/Colloway, mentioned in the song as the leader of the strike (Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff's first version spells it "Calloway," the second and third "Colloway"). According to Busch, p. 83, his name was Simon Calloway, but that's all Busch says about him. And the two other sources I checked both have different spellings. According to Ryan-Ice, p. 342, "The sealers -- under their leaders Mercer, Robert Hall from Halls Town near Clarke's Beach, Conception Bay, and Simeon Calloway from Pool's Island, Bonavista Bay -- demanded to see the governor, Sir Cavendish Boyle, to whom they spoke" (Albert Mercer of Bay Roberts was the man who had led the sealers off the Ranger). DictNewfLabrador, p. 185, has yet a third version of the name, Simeon Kelloway (while saying that others wrote it "Calloway." Interestingly, there was also a sealing captain named "Kelloway").

Perhaps the reason Colloway doesn't get much mention is that he died the year after the strike. His entry in DictNewfLabrador doesn't say much else; he lived from 1858 to 1903, was born in Pool's Island, was an early settler of Badger's Quay, and died in the latter town. His ship was the Vanguard, under George Barbour; for the Vanguard, see the notes to "Arrival of 'Aurora,' 'Diana,' 'Virginia Lake,' and 'Vanguard,' Loaded"; for George Barbour, see also "The Greenland Disaster (I)."

The positive effects of the strike may not have lasted long; according to Ryan-Ice, p. 353, "Their brief success did little to improve their situation; although their incomes improved following the strike, the failure of the cod fishery in Norway, which had created an increased demand for seal oil, was the most important reason for this." And the sealing companies found ways to hit back; in 1905, they started having annual meetings to decide on their rules (Ryan-Ice, p. 185); obviously this collusion also made it easier for them to impose conditions on the individual sealers. It doesn't appear the sealers gained much money from the strike. On the other hand, they didn't lose much, and the owners realized that the sealers needed more consideration (Ryan-Ice, p. 347). And the strike did encourage Joseph Coaker, who later became a major labor organizer in Newfoundland (Busch, p. 87; for Coaker, see "Coaker's Dream").

It appears one song about Morine (not this one) may have gone into tradition; England, p. 128 quotes a sealer singing something called "Come on Down, Morine."

This song is apparently right in regarding the strike as a big deal for the sealers. England, p. 248, tells of hearing about it from senior sealer Joe Stirge more than twenty years later. Stirge also had a version of the story about the Neptune being forced to stay in port when the sealers tied a cable to her, although Stirge didn't name the ship. Maybe he wanted to keep it secret, because the Terra Nova, on which he was embarked when he talked to England, was also one of the strikebreakers.

APPENDIX: The "Crop"

StoryKirwinWiddowson, p. 122, defines the "crop" (usually pronounced "cha(h)p") as "in sealing or fishing, the personal equipment or supplies issued against the profits of the voyage." Their first known usage is from 1854.

On pp. 122-123, they cite several derived usages: the "Crop Note," i.e. the paper form which the sealer was issued to track the spending; the "Cropping Shed," the place where the usual sealing supplies were stored by a merchant (in effect, a "store within a store" for sealers); "Cropping Time," the period before a sealing trip when sealers took their crop notes around to purchase their supplies.

Winsor, p. 113, shows an example of a Crop Note which shows how it all worked. It is from March 11, 1940, for the ship S.S. Ungava, supplied by Job Brothers. It is a standard pre-printed form, with the name of the ship and the supplier printed but the name of the sealer and the date hand-written; there is also an account number which I would guess was stamped in. Below this is a blank form for the merchants to fill in. The one in Winsor shows $3 for rubbers, $1.55 for oil jacket, $0.80 for tobacco, $2.25 for blanket, $1.05 for a fall jacket, $0.20 for a towel, $.015 for matches, grand total $9. The next line is "add 1/3," or $3, for a total of $12.00. Then $0.20 is added without explanation, for a total "tally" of $12.20. This was the amount to be taken from the sealer's payment. At the bottom is a pre-printed line, "CREDIT by share seals." This was the standard share of the sealing profit that each sailor on a particular ship got. In this case, the share was $53.83. So the final lines (although there weren't written this way) should read something like this

$ 53.83 SHARE SEALS
-$12.20 TALLY FOR CROP
----------
$ 41.63 SEALER’S TAKE HOME PAY
So it would appear the sealer was issued the note, and took it around to the merchants who wrote in what he bought, until he reached his $9 maximum. Once that was spent, the sealer was on his own for buying things. (I would guess that the $0.15 in matches at the end of this particular note was what the sealer bought to bring the total to exactly $9 -- if you didn't spend the whole $9, too bad; you didn't get any money back.)
The patent unfairness in this is that the sealer got only $9 worth of merchandise (which often was sold at inflated prices, because the merchants knew just when the sealers would come to town and could mark things up accordingly), but were charged $12 for it. The only good news is, if the ship they were on had a bad year and the sealers earned less than $12, they did not have to make up the difference; that was a loss to the outfitters. Still, it was a clear $3-per-sealer profit for the outfitters every time the ship sailed and pulled in a decent number of seals. How often did that happen? In 1940, the Ungava took 28,781 seals and the sealers earned $58.83. That means that, for the Ungava, the break-even point for sealers was around 6000 seals. (It would be different for other ships, since they would have different numbers of sealers.) In her twelve years as a sealer, the Ungava took more than 6000 seals eleven times (Feltham, p. 145). So the crop was certainly profitable to her owners -- about $6000 profitable, which was a lot in pre-war Newfoundland. To be sure, the Ungava was an unusually large, well-built sealer, with two excellent captains (William Winsor and Peter Carter), so she was unusually profitable. Other ships didn't do nearly as well. Still, the "crop" was a much better deal for the owners than the sealers. - RBW

Bibliography

- Cadigan: Sean T. Cadigan, Newfoundland and Labrador: A History, University of Toronto Press, 2009
- England: George Allan England, Vikings of the Ice: Being the Log of a Tenderfoot on the Great Newfoundland Seal Hunt (also published as The Greatest Hunt in the World), Doubleday, 1924
- Feltham: John Feltham, Sealing Steamers, Harry Cuff Publications, 1995
- Hiller/Neary: James Hiller and Peter Neary, editors, Newfoundland in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries: Essays in Interpretation, University of Toronto Press, 1980
- Kean: Abram Kean, with a foreword by Sir Wilfred Grenfell, Old and Young Ahead, 1935; I use the 2000 Flanker Press edition edited and with a new Introduction (and new photographs) by Shannon Ryan
- Noel: S. J. R. Noel, Politics in Newfoundland, University of Toronto Press, 1971
Sealers of Newfoundland, The

DESCRIPTION: "Ho! We be the Sealers of Newfoundland! We clear from a snowy shore, Out into the gale with our steam and sail...." The singer describes life on a sealing voyage, and tells how tough the sealers are -- and how they rejoice to return home.

AUTHOR: George Allan England

EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (England, Vikings of the Ice); reportedly written 1922

KEYWORDS: hunting ship nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, p. 108, "The Sealers of Newfoundland" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: George Allan England, _Vikings of the Ice: Being the Log of a Tenderfoot on the Great Newfoundland Seal Hunt_ (also published as _The Greatest Hunt in the World_), Doubleday, 1924, pp. 308-309, "The Sealers of Newfoundland" (1 excerpt)

Roud #V44687

NOTES [22 words]: Despite this having been reprinted several times, there is no evidence that it is traditional or that any actual sealer recited it. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

Sealers of Twillingate and New World Island, The

DESCRIPTION: The poet recalls the hardships faced by the sealers of 1862, then turns to the modern hunt, as SPCA planes fly overhead. He warns against actual interference with the hunt, and declares seal hunting both good commerce and a good source of food.

AUTHOR: John C. Loveridge

EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Loveridge, Story in Pictures and Poetry of the 1973 Seal Hunt....)

KEYWORDS: hunting animal political nonballad technology

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, pp. 150-151, "The Sealers of Twillingate and New World Island" (1 text)

Roud #V44688

NOTES [681 words]: Despite this song's vicious and inflated rhetoric, seal hunting has of course been restricted in the last 30 years -- in part because of opposition from animal rights' groups, but mostly because there is no longer demand for seal products, plus the sealers have destroyed the seal populations, and have been forced to cut back to preserve the herds.

Seals were indeed an important food source to the Newfoundland fishermen -- and even more to the Inuit. According to Bob Bartlett (who should know; see his biography under "Captain Bob Bartlett"), "The seal is the one indispensible animal of the Arctic. The flesh is by no means disagreeable, though it has a general flavor of fish, which constitutes the seal's chief food" (Bartlett, p. 54).

The several mentions of 1862 in the song are interesting. That was not the year Newfoundlanders started taking seals; they had been doing that for many years by then. But "In 1862 the Newfoundland seal hunt entered the steam age. That year, two Scottish steamers participated in the Newfoundland hunt as a complementary activity to the Davis Strait right-whale 'fishery'" (Candow, p. 41). One of those sealers was the Polynia, the inspiration for the song "The Old Polina." The steamer soon drove out the sailing vessels; except for a brief period around World War I when steel ships took a lead role, the wooden steamers, which also carried sail, dominated the seal hunt until the 1940s.

Brian Davies, mentioned in the song as the opponent of sealing, was a Welshman who came to Canada in 1955 and joined the New Brunswick SPCA in 1961. He turned his attention to the seal hunt in 1964, and witnessed it firsthand in 1965. The SPCA founded a Save the Seals fund, and Davies gave up his regular career to oppose it. In 1968, he led a press group from Europe to see the hunt, and the anti-sealing movement began (Candow, pp. 118-119). In 1970, he wrote a book,
Savage Luxury: The Slaughter of the Baby Seals (Bush, p. 249). He eventually appeared on David Letterman's television show to argue against sealing (Busch, p. 256). Little wonder that the sealers themselves hated him. He's referred to, with equal distaste, in "Save Our Swilers."

We might mention, incidentally, that even those who opposed sealing often disliked the methods used by Davies. Greenpeace, which in the end did much more to oppose sealing than did Davies, referred to his efforts as a "Bambi cult" because he used the cuteness of baby seals as his main argument (Wright, p. 22).

The bitterness of the Newfoundlanders is shown in the summary on p. 309 of Major: "When founder Brian Davies retired as [head of IFAW, the organization he founded] in 1997, his wage settlement was reported to be $2.5 million. Such profit on the backs of sealers is impossible for any Newfoundlander to stomach, and the anger at the unfairness of it all impossible to suppress." This although Davies was not paid by locals -- Major notes, e.g., that more than half of IFAW's funding came from Britain.

DictNewfLabrador, pp. 203-204, lists six significant Newfoundlanders named "Lundrigan," many associated with Lundrigan's lumber enterprise: Arthur Raymond (1922-), son of William James, president of Lundrigan's 1967-1983; Harold Wilson (1928-), brother of Arthur, his successor as president of Lundrigan's; James (fl. 1820), who was apparently unrelated and got in trouble for minor debts; John Howard (1939-), a teacher who became an MP for Gander/Twillingate in 1968 and served until 1974, then spent several years in the Newfoundland cabinet; Joseph Roche (1948-), an NHL player; and William James (1901-1986), founder of Lundrigan's and father of Arthur R. and Harold W.

I would assume the "Lundrigan" of the song is John Howard Lundrigan, since he was was in Ottawa in 1973. But it's pretty silly to think that one MP could stop a law! The song is supposed to commemorate the firm of E. J. Linfield. Google Books has an account of the firm of Edward J. Linfield, a general merchandiser in Twillingate, founded 1888, but I can find no references to the firm being active today. - RBW

Bibliography

- Bartlett: Robert A. Bartlett (as set down by Ralph T. Hale), The Karluk's Last Voyage (originally published 1916 as The Last Voyage of the Karluk; I used the 2001 Cooper Square expedition with a new introduction by Edward E. Leslie)
- Wright: Guy Wright, Sons & Seals: A Voyage to the Ice, ISER (Institute of Social and Economic Research, Memorial University of Newfoundland), 1984

Last updated in version 5.0
File: RySm150

Sealers, The [Laws D10]

DESCRIPTION: Four ships set out to seal. After a four day voyage, they arrive at the ice. On their very first day they take nine hundred pelts. Having filled their quota, they head for home

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE:
KEYWORDS: ship work hunting
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Laws D10, "The Sealers"
DT 613, SEALERS
Roud #2234
File: LD10
Sealers' Ball, The

DESCRIPTION: The sealers get their money at the wharf, more at the store, and "a couple of gallons" on Saturday evening. After the dance Jack Burke's girl was with Jim McGee. When their fight was over "they found the lady she'd a-gone."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)

KEYWORDS: courting fight hunting shore dancing drink party humorous

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (3 citations):

- Peacock, pp. 94-95, "The Sealers' Ball" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, pp. 123-124, "The Sealer's Ball" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Bennett/Downey-JeromeJustOneMoreSong 8, pp. 86-88, "John Park He Had Nar' One" (1 text)

ST Pea094 (Partial)
Roud #9957

RECORDINGS:
- Tom Cornelly, "Much of a Hand" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
- Jerome Downey, "John Park He Had Nar' One" (on NFJDowney01)
- Hector MaclIsaac and Jerome Downey, "Not Much of a Hand Aboard a Vessel" (on NFHMaclIsaac01)
- Tom Morry, "The Sealers' Ball" (on PeacockCDROM)

ALTERNATE TITLES:

Be Ye Much of a Hand Aboard a Vessel

NOTES [752 words]: The MUNFLA/Leach text changes the last line of the chorus from "A-pelting the puppy swiles, sir" to "A-catching the codfish wild sir." Hardly worth mentioning except that the brawl is no longer at "The Sealers' Ball." - BS

Both the codfish and the "swiler" versions, however, refer to the main economic activities of Newfoundland: fishing cod and hunting seals.

The first line in Jerome Downney's version is "We got six dollars and a half When we landed at the wharf." This fits in with sealing: Hands were signed on for a share of the total catch. Each sealer got the same share, no matter how effective they were, so every sealer got the same amount. Six and a half dollars was not the total pay; the sealers might have been assessed a "berthing fee" for the right to join the sealing vessel.

Even after the berthing fees were abolished (for this, see the notes to "The Sealer's Strike of 1902 (The Sealers Gained the Strike)") before the voyage started, each man was assessed the "crop" -- an advance on his wages which he was "required" to spend with the St. John's merchants, at artificially inflated prices (he could buy $9 of goods but had $12 deducted from his pay), to buy his equipment for the voyage. (If he didn't spend it, tough luck; he didn't get the money back. For the "crop," see StoryKirwinWiddowson, pp. 122-123 and the notes to "The Sealer's Strike of 1902 (The Sealers Gained the Strike)").

Taking into account all the deductions, if a sealer was actually given $6.50, his nominal pay would have been a minimum of about $19.50 and a maximum of about $31.50. That's nowhere near a record -- in one extraordinary season in 1866, the men of the Retriever each earned $303 (Chafe, p. 36). But that truly was an extraordinary total; by the twentieth century, as ships got bigger and the seal herds declined due to over-harvesting, the figures fell dramatically. Chafe does not always have shares for every ship, but here are some samples of the average for particular years:

1892 (p. 60): average of $51.52, best ship $96.30.
1898 (p. 65): average of $27.97, best ship $47.74
1904 (p. 71): average of $38.77, best ship $81.22
1910 (p. 77): average of $59.24, best ship $148.36
1916 (p. 82): average of $107.24, best ship 233.78 (because of World War I, the sealing fleet in 1916 was only half the size of the previous average. Although the ships that sailed did very well, relatively few men shared the bounty, and much of the increase was due to a 30% increase in the price of seals)
1922 (p. 85): average of $42.40, best ship $74.90.

(Eventually things got better; Wright, p. 85, describes one of the last major sealing years, in which the sealers' share of pelts, plus odds and ends such as flippers and seal penises -- wanted by some superstitious Japanese or Chinese -- came to nearly $3000 even though it wasn't considered a great year. Of course, there had been a lot of inflation in that half a century.)

Thus the men in this song earned below the average over these years -- but not far below the average; they were at the low end of typical.
Downey's version also refers to paying the money to "Jamie Baird." Bennett/Downey has notes on James Baird (1828-1915); DictNewfLabrador has more on p. 10. Born in Saltcoats, Scotland, his family came to Newfoundland some time in the 1840s, and he served as a draper's apprentice. Started in 1853, he and his brother David worked as drapers and importers. In 1872, James founded his own business, as an importer and fishery supplier. He would later invest in Newfoundland businesses and utilities. He became a hero to Newfoundlanders for a legal case he brought against a British officer over fishing rights. In 1898, he became a member of the Legislative Council, staying there until he died in 1915. He eventually owned at least one sealing steamer, the Labrador, which he bought in 1909 (Ryan, p. 193). It's interesting to see sealers frequenting his business; at the time of the 1902 sealer's strike, he argued that there was no way that sealers could be paid more, because profits in the industry were too low (Ryan, p. 183). This would certainly be true a few decades later, but in 1902, the sealing fleet was expanding, and Ryan, p. 184, says that the market for seal oil was expanding rapidly. Given the names mentioned in the song, I suspect this is based on an actual incident, but the Downey and Peacock versions are similar enough, and non-detailed enough, that (without access to lists of ships' companies) I can't say more. - RBW

Bibliography

- Wright: Guy Wright, Sons & Seals: A Voyage to the Ice, ISER (Institute of Social and Economic Research, Memorial University of Newfoundland), 1984

Last updated in version 5.2
File: Pea094

Sealers' Song (III), The

DESCRIPTION: "It caused a great sensation ... To see those little puppy seals in Codroy River Bight." Those who go after them are not experienced sealers and have all kinds of disasters. Besides, it was out of season: "now the puppies must be spared"

AUTHOR: Hughie O'Quinn (according to Bennett/Downey-JeromeJustOneMoreSong)

EARLIEST DATE: 1980 (Bennett/Downey-JeromeJustOneMoreSong)

KEYWORDS: hunting injury ordeal law poaching river humorous animal

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bennett/Downey-JeromeJustOneMoreSong 21, pp. 129-135, "The Sealers' Song" (1 text)
Roud #24302

RECORDINGS:
Jerome Downey, "The Sealers' Song" (on NFJDowney01)
Hector MacIsaac and Jerome Downey, "The Sealers' Song" (on NFHMacIsaac01)
Hector MacIsaac, "Sealing Song" (on NFHMacIsaac02)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Wearing of the Green" (tune)

NOTES [266 words]: The song ends with a complaint against the seal hunting law, by analogy: "Why, I'm sure some day a demagogue will write up in a book The proper way to stun a cod before he takes the hook." - BS

Sealing was a Newfoundland tradition from the early days, and indeed, seal meat kept many people alive in Newfoundland springtime, and the oil and pelts were one of their few exports and sources of trade. Although not as important as cod, without seals, Newfoundland probably would not have been economically viable. But -- apart from the ethical issue of killing intelligent mammals
-- the seals were overfished, and by the 1920s, the population was a fraction of what it had been a century before. There was a prolonged and bitter fight about just what level of harvesting was sustainable -- but there is no question but that the harvest had to be limited. But the sealers didn't at all like being told that.

This is obviously a song of "landsman hunting" -- that is, of people setting out to the ice from near their homes, rather than being employed in a large sealing boat. According to James E. Candow, Of Men and Seals: A History of the Newfoundland Seal Hunt, Canadian Parks Service, Environment Canada, 1989, p. 138, "The recent history of the Newfoundland seal hunt has been characterized by the increased importance of the landsman operation." This was particularly true for the people outside St. John's, according to Candow, p. 139, although he places it more in the north and northeast of Newfoundland, rather than the Cordray Valley area on the southwest where Jerome Downey lived. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.4
File: BeDo129

Sealing Cruise of the Lone Flier, The

DESCRIPTION: The song chronicles the life of sealers traveling from Twillingate to St. John's then north to the ice fields for seals. Miscellaneous mishaps and achievements are told during the song and many names and factual information mentioned.

AUTHOR: (supposedly the whole crew in question)

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)

KEYWORDS: sea travel hunting moniker

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (4 citations):

Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 123, "The Sealing Cruise of the Lone Flier" (1 text, 1 tune)

Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, pp. 76-77, "The Sealing Cruise of the Lone Flier" (1 text, 1 tune)

Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, pp. 126-128, "The Sealing Cruise of the Lone Flier" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST Doy14 (Partial)

Roud #7308

NOTES [1178 words]: The cruise in question is reported to have taken place from March 10 to April 25, 1929.

Very formulaic introduction of the "come-all-ye" variety with the singer assuring that he will neither "offend" the listener or run too long. [This even though Doyle's version runs 16 verses! - RBW] This is a very typical humble attitude of singers from Newfoundland as shown in many songs. - SH

Starting in the 1860s, sealing had been done by large wooden steamers; in the early twentieth century, steel ships had started to join the hunt. All the latter were lost or sold by the end of World War I (the Russians bought them because they needed icebreakers; Candow, p. 45), and the wooden steamers began to fail also as the years wore them out; with demand for seals falling, and the seal population badly hit due to hunting, there wasn't much money to replace the big ships. The Fisherman's Protective Union, or FPU (for which see "Coaker's Dream"), had an answer: instead of large steamers, which were expensive, or pure sailing ships, which just didn't have enough power, they came up with small schooners with auxiliary diesels. The first of these, Young Harp, went into service in 1927. It was a tremendous success, taking 4353 seals -- far fewer than the big steamers, but the big steamers had crews of 200 or so, and the Young Harp just 27 (similar to the 28 sealers mentioned in the twelfth verse of the song); on a per-man basis, the Young Harp was astonishingly successful. In 1928, her crew of 29 took 6175 seals on a first trip, and 2381 on a second, making her an even greater success (Ryan-Last, p. 448).

There is a photo of the Young Harp on p. 82 of Winsor.

In 1929, seven auxiliary schooners went to the ice, with the Lone Flier being one of them (Candow, p. 49). It proved a very temporary boom; there were six auxiliary schooners in 1930, but just two in 1931 (Candow, p. 50). This presumably because, in 1929, "The auxiliary sealing schooners met with poor success"; even the experienced Young Harp managed only 959 seals, and the Lone Flier, under Sol. White, managed just 900 (Ryan-Last, p. 449). Thus the 1929 dating seems very likely.

According to Galgay/McCarthy, p. 110, a ship named the Lone Flier was wrecked on North Penguin Island on July 10, 1941; I assume that was this ship. I suspect the Harp, mentioned in the song, is actually the Young Harp. In any case, it's a logical name for a sealer, since the primary target of sealers was the species known as harp seals, especially the infant harp seals, known as whitecoats because of, well, their white coats. These schooners didn't last long, but they arguably foreshadowed the Motor Vessels, or MVs, for which see "A Noble Fleet of Sealers."

The Nascopee is properly the Nascopie, which was one of the last attempts to revive the steel sealers. She was built in 1911-1912 at Newcastle and was lost in 1947, running aground near Cape Dorset on Baffin Island (Feltham, p. 91); she served as a sealer 1912-1915 and 1927-1930 (Ryan/Drake, p. 41). She was built for the Hudson's Bay Company to serve their northern posts in the summer, but the icebreaking abilities that served her so well in the north were also helpful for dealing with the ice where the seals whelped (Feltham, p. 86). In her 1912-1915 period as a sealer, when she was among the most successful ships in the fleet (Winsor, p. 54), her captain was George Barbour, for whom see "The Greenland Disaster (I)"; in her second stint, she was commanded by Abram Kean (Feltham, p. 86), for whom see "Captain Abram Kean." Except for a disastrous 1915, she took more than 17,000 seals in all her years in the ice, and she three times (1913, 1927, 1930) she took more than 30,000 -- a very good number indeed. She is supposedly the only sealer -- indeed, the only ship -- to have replaced a propeller while at sea (Feltham, p. 88). She also had the unique distinction, for a sealer, of sinking a German submarine during World War I (using a gun installed for defensive purposes; Ryan/Drake, p. 41). There is a book that is sort of about the Nascopie, i.e. Wild, but it is primarily about Smellie, not his ship, and devotes only a single paragraph to her service as a sealer before Smellie took command, saying that she had had one good year and "smelt like a sealer and was full of cockroaches" (Wild, p. 84. The same page explains that the Nascopie managed to sink that sub with her stern gun because the sub had to dodge an ice floe). She served well as an Arctic steamer under Smellie until 1945 (when he retired), and then was lost two years later under another master, but she did not return to sealing. (I found Wild very hard to read; he seems to worship Smellie, even though Dennis Jordan on p. viii of the Introduction declares he was a martinet.)

Feltham, p. 176, has a photo of the Nascopie, Kean has one on p. 30, Winsor on p. 54, and Ryan/Drake on p. 41. Wild has photos facing pp. 72, 73, 104, 169, but all of them are of her post-sealing days.

The third verse refers to the "crop." Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland give an explanation of this so short as to be almost deceitful. Each sealer had to have certain equipment -- a gaff, a hauling rope, a sculping knife -- and was expected to supply this. The sealers were not given an advance to buy the equipment; they were given what amounted to a voucher in the amount of $9 with which to purchase their supplies from the merchants of St. John's, at an inflated price. For this $9 worth of credit, the sealers had $12 deducted from their wages at the end of the trip. It didn't matter if they already had all their equipment and didn't need to buy anything; the sealing companies knocked $12 off their wages. The only consolation was that if the sealing trip went badly and the men failed to earn $12, they were not required to refund the rest. (Ryan-Ice, p. 185). It was nonetheless a clear abuse of the sealers, with the profits being split between the St. John's merchants and the sealing companies. For more on the "crop," see the notes to "The Sealer's Strike of 1902 (The Sealers Gained the Strike)."

The ninth verse refers to one man getting a "cat." That is not a reference to a feline; a "cat" was a stillborn seal pup, or one that died shortly after birth. They were desirable finds; cats had finer pelts than ordinary seals. And harps, to repeat, are harp seals, not stringed instruments. "Hoods" are the other species of seals the hunters sought; hood seals were more dangerous (instead of running, they fought to defend their babies, and they were bigger than harps, so they couldn't easily be killed with a gaff) and generally less desirable, but sealers turned to hunting "hoods" if they couldn't get enough whitecoats.

The "Mr. Ashbourne" of the last verse is probably Thomas George William Ashbourne (1894-1984), who was one of those who helped negotiate Newfoundland's entry into Canada; after his father William's death in 1923, he became president of the family's fishery supply firm (DictNewfLabrador, p. 6). - RBW

Bibliography

Sealing Fifty Years Ago

DESCRIPTION: "'Four hundred sail of shipping fine Could then be seen at anchor Awaiting time to fall in line And for a sou'west spanker.' Fifty years ago, they caught 600,000 seals a year; now, they catch half as much "with hearts not half so gay."

AUTHOR: James Murphy (1868-1931)
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (The Duke of York Songster and Christmas Advertiser)
KEYWORDS: hunting nonballad hardtimes recitation

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, p. 63, "Sealing Fifty Years Ago" (1 text)

NOTES [198 words]: The "Terry" of this song is probably Captain Terrance Holleran, for whom see "Captain Bill Ryan Left Terry Behind." No steam sealer had a captain named "Holley" -- but there might well have been a sailing skipper by that name; as the song correctly notes, there had been about 400 sealing schooners around 1850, when the seals were still present in such large numbers that even small ships could collectively bring in half a million pelts a year. By 1901, when this song was published, just nineteen steamers went to the ice, and their total haul was less than 350,000 (see Levi George Chafe, Chafe's Sealing Book: A History of the Newfoundland Sealfishery from the Earliest Available Records Down To and Including the Voyage of 1923, third edition, Trade Printers and Publishers, Ltd., 1923 (PDF scan available from Memorial University of Newfoundland), p. 63), even though the steamers were much better at bringing in seals than the old sealing schooners.

It's not as clear to me that the sealers were actually less happy on the steamers than in the age of sail, but certainly there were fewer of them, making it harder to get a sealing job, which presumably led to competition. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: RySm063

Sealing Fleet, The

DESCRIPTION: "What means this hurrying to and fro -- This busy stirring scene? "This scene laid now before you Is not of war or strife But 'tis a fight of honest men... They go to catch the northern seal...". The sealers are described; the singer wishes them well

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1861 (The Newfoundland Express)
KEYWORDS: hunting nonballad orphan
Sealing Trip of the S. S. Greenland 1891, The

DESCRIPTION: "All ye who love old Newfoundland And her Sons who plow the sea... I will sing to you A song about the Greenland And her hardy sailing crew." The singer praises Captain Henry Dawe, describes the efficient steamer, and tells of a good seal hunt

AUTHOR: unknown (said to be by "one of her crew")

EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (Harbour Grace Standard)

KEYWORDS: hunting ship

NOTES [266 words]: I suspect the Van of this song is actually the Vanguard, for which see "Arrival of 'Aurora,' 'Diana,' 'Virginia Lake,' and 'Vanguard,' Loaded."

The Greenland of this song is the same as the ship of "The Greenland Disaster (I)," etc., but this is obviously a different event. For background on the ship, see "The Greenland Disaster (I)."

There were two Captains Henry Dawe, one of Bay Roberts, one of Port de Grave. The one from Bay Roberts, who went to the ice almost every year from 1879 to 1910, commanded the Greenland from 1890 to 1895. In 1891, he brought home an impressive 25,907 seals (see Levi George Chafe, Chafe's Sealing Book: A History of the Newfoundland Sealfishery from the Earliest Available Records Down To and Including the Voyage of 1923, third edition, Trade Printers and Publishers, Ltd., 1923 (PDF scan available from Memorial University of Newfoundland), p. 90) -- almost twice the total in the song and the second-highest total the Greenland ever took, although not the highest total for a ship in 1891. For more on him, see "The Sealer's Song (II)."

The claim of 14,000 seals may have been a memory of 1890, when the ship took 14,236 seals (Chafe, p. 100). Chafe, p. 60, confirms that the sealing fleet sailed on March 10 in that year. The same page indirectly supports the song's claim that the Greenland was based in Harbour Grace, since she is not on the list of ships that sailed from St. John's or environs.

For Henry Dawe, see also "Arrival of the 'Grand Lake' and 'Virginia Lake' With Bumper Trips," "I Am a Newfoundlander," and "The Bully Crew." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

Seaman and His Love, A (The Welcome Sailor) [Laws N29]

DESCRIPTION: The singer hears a girl wailing for her love, gone these seven years at sea. He offers a token from her love, saying he is dead and she should marry whoever carries it. She says she will mourn forever. The stranger reveals himself as her missing love

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1620 (Stationer's Register -- apparently)

KEYWORDS: love separation brokentoken

NOTES [11 citations]:

Laws N29, "A Seaman and His Love (The Welcome Sailor)"

Brocklebank/Kindersley-DorsetBookOfFolkSongs, p. 3, "Midst of Night" (1 text, 1 tune)
Seaman and Soldier's Last Farewell to their Dearest Jewels, The

DESCRIPTION: "Farewell, my dearest dear, now I must leave thee; Thy sight I must forbear although it grieves me," "My fortune I will try upon the ocean, and fight most gallantly to gain promotion.""My dear, do not mourn." She should be patient until they meet again

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs)

KEYWORDS: sailor wife separation battle

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 18, "The Seaman and Soldier's Last Farewell to their Dearest Jewels" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: PaSe018
Seaman of Plymouth, The
DESCRIPTION: A sailor must go to sea before he can wed Susan. When she refuses to marry a rich man, her parents send her to Holland. The sailor, now rich, accidentally meets her; they return home; she disguises herself from her parents and they are wed
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1813 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 4(91))
LONG DESCRIPTION: A sailor and beautiful Susan are to wed, but she becomes sick; he is forced to sail away. While he is gone, her parents try to wed her to a rich man; when she refuses, they send her to Holland. The sailor returns, having become rich, and is told she is dead. He sails away in grief, is shipwrecked in Holland, meets her, and they return home to wed. The girl arrives in disguise; her parents continue their play-acting. At last she reveals herself, and all ends happily
KEYWORDS: love, courting, sailor, separation, betrayal, money, disguise, reunion, marriage, trick
FOUND IN: US(MA,NE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 141-147, "The Seaman of Plymouth" (1 text, 1 tune, very long and quite clumsy; there is probably a broadside version in its very recent ancestry)
Thompson-A PioneerSongster 10, "William and Susan" (1 text)
ST FlBr141 (Partial)
Roud #2811
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 4(91), "Sweet William of Plymouth" ("A seaman of Dover, sweet William by name"), J. Evans (London), 1780-1812; also Harding B 4(96), "Sweet William of Plymouth" ("A seaman of Plymouth, sweet William by name")
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Beautiful Susan" [Laws M29] (plot, characters)
NOTES [14 words]: "Beautiful Susan" seems to me to have been derived from "The Seaman of Plymouth." - BS
Last updated in version 2.8
File: FlBr141

Seaman's Compass, The
DESCRIPTION: "As lately I travelled towards Gravesend, I heard a fair damosel a seaman commend." She praises seamen, saying that she will not marry anyone not a seaman. She describes how other trades are dependent on the work of sailors AUTHOR: Laurence Price (source: Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs)
EARLIEST DATE: 1657 (broadside printed by Francis Grove, according to Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs)
KEYWORDS: sailor, love, marriage, commerce
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 16, "The Seaman's Compass" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V32237
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 4o Rawl. 566(64), The Sea-mans Compass,, F. Coles, T. Vere, J Wright (London), 1663-1674
NOTES [105 words]: Although Palmer attributes this to Lawrence/Laurence Price, a well-known seventeenth century writer of broadside ballads, A. W. Pollard, G. R. Redgrave, et al, A Short-Title Catalogue of Books Printed in England, Scotland & Ireland And of English Books Printed Abroad 1475-1640, The Bibliographical Society [of London], 1963, p. 467, does not list it among Price's known works. And of the sixteen pieces they list as by Price, not one is printed by Francis Grove. Of course, Palmer attributes this to a period after the STC. But the Rawlinson broadside, at least, attributes it simply to "L. P.," not to Price specifically. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: PaSe016

Seaman's Lament, The
DESCRIPTION: "My seafaring comrades, attend to my lay, For death, that grim reaper, has taken away The fair Emmett Gallagher...." The Clifton leaves shore and encounters a storm. It tears open the Clifton. The singer tells of the sadness of relatives left behind

AUTHOR: Probably Frank McCauley
EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (scrapbook of Charles C. Allers, according to Walton)
KEYWORDS: ship disaster death family
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Sep 21/22, 1924 - Loss of the _Clifton_
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 180-181, "The Seaman's Lament" (1 text)
Roud #19836
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Clifton Tragedy" (subject: The Clifton Wreck) and references and notes there
File: WGM180

Seamen's Union, The
DESCRIPTION: "We are a band of seamen, A jolly, jolly crew, As ever sailed the ocean Or wore the jackets blue." "We are a band of seamen With a password and a sign (sign?)." Their banner shows shamrock, rose, and thistle. The singer offers a toast to sailors and girls
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (collected from Henry McConnell by Walton)
KEYWORDS: sailor labor-movement nonballad
FOUND IN: Canada(Ont)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, p. 114, "The Seamen's Union" (1 short text)
Roud #19841
File: WGM114

Seamen's Wives' Vindication, The
DESCRIPTION: "Why does the poets abuse us, we that are seamen's poor wives?" The singer lists all the charges made against them, and points out how difficult are their lives when their husbands are at sea. She declares that they have no reason to be ashamed
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (FIrth)
KEYWORDS: sailor wife separation
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 30, "The Seemen's Wives' Vindication; or, an Answer to the pretended Frolic which was said to be by them over a Bowl of Punch" (1 text)
Roud #V11282
File: PaSe030

Sean a Duir a'Ghleanna
DESCRIPTION: The first verse describes an unsuccessful fox hunt: "for royalty is banished" Sean meets beautiful Anna who invites him to "take compassion" He takes off his beaver hat and, answering her invitation, introduces himself as "a Galway man by extraction"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1886 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 15(149b))
KEYWORDS: courting beauty hunting
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 81, "Sean a Duir a'Ghleanna" (1 text, 1 tune)
cf. Behan-IrelandSings, #78, "Sean O'Dwyer of the Glen" (1 text, 1 tune, a translation from Gaelic by Wolfe Stephens)
BROADSIDES:
 Bodleian, Harding B 15(149b), "John Adwire Anglanna," H. Such (London), 1863-1885; also Harding B 11(4385), "John Adwire Anglanna"; 2806 b.9(41), 2806 b.11(44), Harding B 19(42),
 "John O'Dwyer-a-Glana"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "After Aughrim's Great Disaster" (form)
NOTES [205 words]: The name of the song in both OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads and the Bodleian broadside is from the last line: "I'm a Galway man by extraction, bred in Connamara, And [song title] they call me by name." It's easiest to find versions from the first line which is always close to "One morning I started From the arms of Morpheus."
The ornate descriptions and the ending with an introduction to a beautiful woman remind me of Thomas Moore's "Rich and Rare Were The Gems She Wore." Adding to my suspicion that there is more nationalism coded here than I understand is the OLochlainn note that "the late Canon Sheehan wrote a fine song "After Aughrim's great disaster" founded on this ballad.'
In this connection see the Mudcat Cafe threads re "After Aughrim's Great Disaster" and "Sean O'Duibhir A Ghleanna." The text of "Sean O Duibhir An Ghleanna" ("Sean O'Dwyer of the Glen") listed there is either the source or derivative of this song and is clearly a song of desperation; the source there is Danny Spooner and Mick Farrell 'In Limbo and Other Songs and Places' Anthology AR003. The text of "After Aughrim's Great Disaster" refers to the battle of July 12, 1691: "Ah, Sean o Duibhir an Ghleanna, we were worsted in the game." - BS
Last updated in version 3.2
File: OLoc081

Sean A'Bhriste Leathair
DESCRIPTION: Gaelic. "A comic song in which the poet recounts his amorous successes from early youth, all supposedly due to his attractive leather britches! He finally wins the heart of a wealthy young heiress and weds her."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage courting wedding bragging clothes money humorous
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 126, "Sean A'Bhriste Leathair" (2 texts)
NOTES [17 words]: The description follows the "English Summary" provided by OCroinin/Cronin-
TheSongsOfElizabethCronin. - BS
Last updated in version 3.2
File: OCC126

Sean Treacy
DESCRIPTION: "We often heard our fathers tell How in the Fenian times The noblest of Tipperary's sons Imprisoned spent their lives." The police pursue Treacy; he kills two before being slain himself. The song reports, "He died for Ireland free."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Galvin)
KEYWORDS: Ireland rebellion police death IRA
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Oct 14, 1920 - death of Sean Treacy (Tracey)
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Galvin-IrishSongsOfResistance, pp. 65-66, "Sean Treacy" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
f cf. "Tipperary Far Away" (subject: the death of Treacy)
f cf. "The Station of Knocklong" (for other activities of Treacy) NOTES [679 words]: This English-language song conclude with the ironic words, "In our Gaelic tongue we'll tell our sons How brave Sean Treacy died."
It might be more interesting to start by telling why Treacy was pursued. According to the distinctly pro-Irish historian Calton Younger, p. 85,"Two Irish policeman were shot dead at Soloheadbeg, on January 21st, 1919....
"Eight men of the south Tipperary Brigade of what was soon to be widely known as the Irish Republican Army... lay in ambush for five days waiting for a cart of gelignite [or 'blasting gelatine' -- nitroglycerine plus collodion, a shapable high explosive created by Alfred Nobel]. "The car was guarded by two unwary constables, MacDonnell and O'Connell.... [Both] were popular enough in the district. With them were two employees of the South Tipperary County Council.... [They] were shot down by Sean Treacy, second-in-command of the South Tipperary Brigade."

Kee, p. 58, says of the reaction to this incident, "The two Irish constables, both Catholics, one a widower with four children, were very popular locally and had never had any connection with political prosecutions. Their deaths aroused widespread indication and horror, and there was a poignant moment at the inquest when one of McDonnell's sons asked if they had been given any time to surrender the explosives or if they had had a dog's chance."

It may be that the two made an attempt at resistance. But there is no question: Treacy was a terrorist. Fighting for an Irish republic, but a terrorist. He certainly aimed high, trying to plan an assassination of the Lord Lieutenant (OxfordCompanion, p. 550). In fact, in Younger's view at least, he was the prototype "freedom fighter"/militant: "[Treacy and Dan Breen] were the first to steel themselves to kill, to acquire the kind of mentality that men must acquire to win freedom" (p. 87). The popular reaction was less positive. Kee p. 58 adds, "The action was condemned as a crime at the masses throughout Tipperary the following Sunday and the Archbishop of Cashel in Thurles Cathedral proclaimed it an offense against the law of God. [A]nother cleric, Monsignor Ryan, cried, 'God help poor Ireland if she follows this deed of blood.'" "Nevertheless, in spite of an offer of [a thousand pound reward], the killers were able to vanish without a trace until an even more sensational appearance three months later."

Their bloody work did have some effect. Kee, p. 59, notes, "[t]heir objects were often more successfully served by the British authorities' reaction to Volunteer exploits than by the military results of the exploits themselves." Which, of course, is exactly what happened with the Easter Rebellion, too: The Irish despised the initial rebellious act, but despised the severe British response even more.

After many months on the run for this and other incidents (see also the notes to "The Station of Knocklong" and "Tipperary Far Away"), Treacy finally died in a shoot-out with police. He was 25 years old. According to Younger, p. 121, "they had caught up with him, bringing an armoured car and two lorry loads of auxiliaries." Treacy opened fire, killing at least two of the attackers; they responded with machine gun fire, killing Treacy and two bystanders.

Younger adds that the woman "who identified his body saw that it had been impeccably laid out, and a soldier on guard gave her a lock of Treacy's hair." But Younger does not cite a single source with regard to the death of Treacy; I wonder if parts of his account, including the hair, might not be taken from this song and "Tipperary Far Away" (which mentions the hair business).

Kee, p. 116, adds that he "easily became a hero as legendary as Cuchulain." And yet, of eight histories I consulted, Kee is the only one to mention Treacy in three contexts (Knocklong, Soloheadbeg, and his death). One mentions Soloheadbeg and his death, two mention only Soloheadbeg (one of them mentioning him also in his role as part of the hit squad led by Michael Collins), one tells of Knocklong, and the rest don't mention him at all. - RBW

Bibliography

- Kee III: Robert Kee, Ourselves Alone, being volume III of The Green Flag (covering the brief but intense period from 1916 to the establishment of constitutional government in the 1920s), Penguin, 1972
- Younger: Calton Younger, Ireland's Civil War (1968, 1979; I used the 1988 Fontana edition)

Last updated in version 2.5
File: PGa065

Search and Rescue, The

DESCRIPTION: On August 14, 1955, Daniel Morris and his wife are cod fishing off Souris. The engine dies. They anchor off Cape Spry's rocks in a heavy wind. They are finally rescued by two Mounties, Leonard MacDonald, and his big engine boat.
Search of the Thomas J, The DESCRIPTION: The trading boat Thomas J. returns from a supposed trip to Channel and is met by a revenue boat and searched for contraband. The captain says "it's pork and beef... spuds" "The three worst government men that's on the western shore" find nothing.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports)
KEYWORDS: crime commerce sea ship political police
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 328-329, "The Search of the Thomas J" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #25300
NOTES [132 words]: Newfoundland songs about running rum during Prohibition include "The Brule Boys," "Young Chambers," "Kenneth Shephard" and "Captain Shepherd." Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports says "it is not clear what exactly was being smuggled on the Thomas J., but the reference to the French community of Port-au-Port [on the 'French shore' of the western coast of southern Newfoundland] in line three of stanza six suggests that alcohol was involved." I don't follow that connection unless the people in Port-au-Port maintained a connection, during Prohibition, with French St. Pierre off the south coast of Newfoundland, the source of rum in the other songs cited in this note. Channel, the supposed target port of the Thomas J., is in the western corner of Newfoundland's south coast. - BS
Last updated in version 4.2
File: Guig328

Searching for Lambs

DESCRIPTION: A young man meets a girl and asks her where she is going. She is going to feed her father's "tender lambs." He begs her to stay with him. They court for long. (He hopes that) they marry.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople)
KEYWORDS: sheep courting marriage love
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) Ireland
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 48, "Searching for Lambs" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople 90, "Searching for Lambs" (1 text, a composite of five versions)
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 49, "Searching for Lambs" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H548, p. 341, "One Morning Clear" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 474, SRCHLAMB
ADDITIONAL: Maud Karpeles, _Folk Songs of Europe_, Oak, 1956, 1964, p. 43, "Searching for Lambs" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST LO09A (Partial)
Roud #576
CROSS-REFERENCES:
NOTES [18 words]: For the rather vexed relationship of this song with "Branded Lambs" [Laws O9], Seasons in the Valley

DESCRIPTION: "Springtime in the valley, blossoms on the vine," it is time to plant, in "Oratia my valley, that's where I belong." Summer brings fruit. Autumn brings harvest, winter brings rain and houses warmed by fire. "Seasons in the valley, time goes drifting by"

AUTHOR: Rudy Sunde
EARLIEST DATE: 1980 (copyright)
KEYWORDS: nonballad farming work
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 30, "Seasons in the Valley" (1 text, 1 tune)

Seasons of the Year, The DESCRIPTION: The singer cannot sleep because "this young damsel she runs in my mind.

Instead of counting sheep he reviews the seasons' work: when sap runs they bark and saw wood; Then, in turn, comes haymaking, harvest, fall hedging and ditching, etc. until spring

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1892 (Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs)
KEYWORDS: farming harvest work drink nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, p. 143, "The Seasons of the Year" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #1, "The Green Grass" (1 text, 1 tune)
Copper-ASongForEverySeason, pp. 208-209, "The Ploughshare" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #169

Sebastopol (Old England's Gained the Day; Capture and Destruction of Sebastopol; Cheer, Boys, Cheer)

DESCRIPTION: "Cheer lads, cheer! the enemy is quaking ... our foes we did defeat, ... Sebastopol is taken." Pellisier and Simpson lead the French and English "their cannons loud did rattle ... and the flags of France and England waved on Sebastopol."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia)
KEYWORDS: army battle war England France Russia shanty
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Sep 9, 1855 - Fall of Sevastopol following an 11 month siege
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, p. 31, "Old England's Gained the Day" (1 text)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 428-429, "Sebastopol" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, pp. 322-323]
Hill-PoemsAndSongsOfTheCivilWar, p. 219, "Cheer, Boys, Cheer" (1 short text, speaking of England rather than the Civil War; I suspect it is a modified version of this song)
ST SmHa041 (Partial)
Roud #8293
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth b.26(215) , "Capture and Destruction of Sebastopol" ("Cheer lads, cheer! the enemy is quaking"), A. Ryle and Co. (London), 1855?; Firth b.25(586), "Capture and Destruction of Sebastopol"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Newfoundland and Sebastopol" (subject, theme)

NOTES [158 words]: Bodleian, Harding B 26(95), "Cheer, Boys Cheer, for the Fall of Sebastopol" ("Cheer lads cheer, for Britannia's sons none bolder"), J. Moore (Belfast), 1846-1852 [not possible] is a similar broadside.

Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia has this fragment as a capstan shanty. - BS
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas also has it as a capstan shanty, and calls it a "broken-down version of the original march, or rather of its chorus. The original march tune was known as the
'Loth-to-depart.'" - [RBW, BS]

There are quite a few other broadsides floating around called "Cheer, Boys, Cheer," celebrating other events. I haven't seen any evidence that they're traditional. Similarly, Charles Mackay wrote
"Cheer Boys! Cheer! No More of Idle Sorrow," with music set by Henry Russell, but it never seems to have escaped from the straitjacket of sheet music. (If you want to see it, it's in Scott-EnglishSongBook, pp. 86-87.) - RBW

Last updated in version 3.2

File: SmHa041

Secret Prayer, The

DESCRIPTION: Call and response. Verses are a single line, repeated. Responses alternate: "Ah-a-a" and "I've been on the secret prayer." Verse lines include "I've died once to die no more," "I've been down and viewed the cross," "I've been down to Jacob's well"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Bible

FOUND IN: West Indies(Bahamas)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories 24, "Um Died Once To Die No Mo'" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [143 words]: The description is based on the Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories text.

Jesus meets the Samaritan woman at Jacob's well (John 4). "Secret prayer" is in some hymn book hymns, though not in this context (see, for example, Starke Dupuy, Hymns and Spiritual Songs (Louisville: Morton and Griswold, 1841 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), #110 p. 362: ("Let us ask the important question"), "'Tis to hear the Holy Spirit Prompting us to secret prayer To rejoice in Jesus' merit, Yet continual sorrow bear"). King James Matthew 6:6 has, "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly."

The Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories text seems to me more in the line of a recounting of a spiritual journey as among Spiritual Baptists. - BS

Last updated in version 4.2

File: Edwa024

Section Gang Song

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, captain, captain, I'm goin' away to leave you (x3), By next payday, oh captain, next payday." The singer talks of work on the section gang, complains about not being paid, and declares that he will leave

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (T. C. I. Section Crew, according to Cohen)

KEYWORDS: worksong railroading nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Cohen-LongSteelRail, p. 647, "Section Gang Song" (1 text)

Roud #17785
RECORDINGS:
Bright Light Quartet, ("Cap'n don't you know all your crew is goin' to leave you") (on LomaxCD1708)
T. C. I. Section Crew, "Section Gang Song" (Paramount 12478, 1927)

NOTES [310 words]: According to Cohen, this is one of only two railroad Work-Songs released on a commercial 78 (the other being "Track Linin'" which appears to be a version of "Can'cha Line 'Em"). He thinks they may be the earliest worksong recordings of any sort. - RBW

Almost, but not quite; Robert Winslow Gordon was recording sea chanteys in the San Francisco Bay Area in the early 1920s" - PJS

Odum and Johnson have the following verses in a song among the set they refer to as worker and wanderer "'captain' songs": "Lawd, captain, captain, did you hear, Lawd, captain, did you hear about it? All your men gonna leave you, All your men gonna leave you on next pay day" "On next pay day, Lawd, On next pay day, Lawd. Captain, all your men gonna be gone On next pay day" (Howard W. Odum and Guy B. Johnson, Negro Workaday Songs (Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), pp. 100-101, "Captain, I'll Be Gone" (1 text)).

The T. C. I. Section Crew recording has a leader lining out at least the beginning of each verse and the crew harmonizing. This brings up the question of how the song sounded when the men were working. When was the work done -- during the singing or between lines -- or between lines? If the work was a rest-while-singing-and-pull-between-lines then it is instructive to listen to the menhaden chanteys, which are exactly like that. Further, the menhaden chanteys were harmonized, like church hymns, during the work.

The T.C.I. Section Crew recording includes the "told the high sheriff" verse of "Poor Lazarus." The menhaden chanteysmen freely mixed songs that had the same line structure, and "Poor Lazarus" was a favorite among them.

The LomaxCD1708 song is part of the "Menhaden Chanteys" track.

See the notes to "Help Me to Raise Them" for information about menhaden chanteys. - BS

Last updated in version 4.2
File: LSRai647

Sedgefield Fair

DESCRIPTION: "Owd Dickie Thompson 'e 'ad a grey mare, 'E took 'er away to Sedgefield Fair" but could not get any money for her. On the way home, she runs into a tree. They have other problems with the mare and his hens; trying to to shoot the birds, he kills the mare

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1974 (Palmer)
KEYWORDS: humorous travel horse chickens
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #112, "Sedgefield Fair" (1 text 1 tune)
Roud #294

NOTES [57 words]: Roud lists this as a version of Brian O'Lynn (Tom Boleyn), but the only similarity I can see is a series of stumbling adventures ending with the main character (in this case, Dick) making a comment. Palmer thinks it's a version of "Tom Pearce (Widdicombe Fair I)." That's closer, but the details are so different that I split the songs. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.7
File: PECS112

See a Pin and Pick It Up

DESCRIPTION: "See a pin and pick it up, All the day you'll have good luck, See a pin and let it lay, Bad luck you'll have all the day."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1842 (Halliwell)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, p. 120, "(See a pin and pick it up)" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #111 n. 86, pp. 93-95, "(See a pin and pick it up)"
See Four and Twenty Elders On Their Knees

DESCRIPTION: "See four and twenty elders on their knees (x2), And we'll all rise together and view the rising sun, O Lord have mercy if you please." "They are bowing round the altar...." "See Gideon's army bowing...." "See Daniel 'mong the lions...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)

KEYWORDS: Bible nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 71, "See Fo'an' Twenty Elders" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 105 in the 1901 edition)

Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang, pp. 270-271, "Face duh Risin' Sun" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #15219

RECORDINGS:

Starlight Gospel Singers, "Lord, Have Mercy If You Please" (on MuSouth07)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Didn't Ol' John Cross the Water on His Knees" (lyrics, form)

NOTES [491 words]: The songs "See Four and Twenty Elders On Their Knees" and "Didn't Ol' John Cross the Water on His Knees" are so close that we seriously considered lumping them, but Roud splits them, so we have kept them very tentatively separate. - BS, RBW

Each of Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute's verses continues "on their knees, And we'll all rise together and view the rising sun, O Lord have mercy if you please"

In viewing the rising sun the worshippers will see Christ returning (Matthew 24:3: "And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world." 4: "And Jesus answered and said unto them, Take heed that no man deceive you...." 26: "Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: Behold, he is in secret chambers; believe it not." 27: "For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." (King James) So, for example, the dead are buried so that when they rise they will face Jesus "when he appears in the east" (Wayland D. Hand, editor, The Frank C. Brown Collection of North Carolina Folklore (Durham: Duke University Press, 1964), Vol. VII, #5482, pp. 91-92.)

A similar chorus, for a hymn to the tune of "The Resurrection," is "We'll all rise together in the morning, In the morning children, in the morning, We'll all rise together in the morning," with floating verses like "If you get there before I do, Look out for me, I'm coming too." (W. McDonald and S. Hubbard, The Wesleyan Sacred Harp (Boston: John P. Jewett & Co, 1857 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")),p. 149, ("Although you see me").

Biblical references, all from King James version:

The "four and twenty elders" are cited on Revelation 4:2-10 ("And immediately I was in the spirit: and behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne... The four and twenty elders fall down before him that sat on the throne ....").

The selection by Gideon of his army has all candidates bowing on their knees to take the qualifying test (Judges 7:4-7). [A rather peculiar interpretation, that -- the troops were told to take a drink, and both the Jewish Tanakh edition and the New Revised Standard Version agree that some knelt and some lapped up the water, but they were drinking water and selected by an arbitrary test. - RBW]

Daniel in the lion's den is Daniel 6. Daniel 6:10 has "Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; and his window being open in his chamber toward Jerusalem, he kneeled upon his knees three times a day, and prayed, ...."

Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang verses are "We will all (sing/drink wine/eat bread/pray) together on that day (2x) And I'll fall upon my knees And face the rising sun O Lord have mercy on me" - BS

Last updated in version 5.1
See God's Ark A-Moving

DESCRIPTION: The leader sings a line such as "Let me tell you the news." "God said to Noah." "Tell him to build an ark." "You know I gonna destroy the land." The congregation sings "See God ark" Leader: "Tell me how long." Congregation: "See God ark a'moving."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (USSealIsland01)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Bible

FOUND IN: US(SE)

RECORDINGS: Benjamin Bligen and the Moving Star Hall Singers, "See God's Ark A-Moving" (on USSealIsland01)

CROSS-REFERENCES: cf. "The Old Ark's A-Moverin'" (lyrics)

NOTES [20 words]: The Biblical reference for Noah and the ark is Genesis 6-8. The current description is based on the USSealIsland01 text. - BS

Last updated in version 4.0

File: RcSGAAM

See How Anansi Tie Tiger

DESCRIPTION: "See how Anansi tie Tiger (3x), Tie him like a hog, Tiger"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1921 (Beckwith-Ballad)

KEYWORDS: trick nonballad animal

FOUND IN: West Indies(Jamaica)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

NOTES [74 words]: Beckwith: "Old Forbes ended his rehearsal of the familiar [cante fable] Tiger my fader's Riding-Horse with [this] breakdown .... Such a conclusion is an invitation to the audience to get up and dance." See Martha Warren Beckwith and Helen Roberts, _Jamaica Anansi Stories_ (New York: American Folklore Society, 1924 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")) #3, pp. 5-6, 235, "Tiger as Riding-horse," where Forbes does not sing this "breakdown." - BS

Last updated in version 3.8

File: MwBJa458

See me Here

DESCRIPTION: "See me here my (leader/Deacon/Preacher), See me here. All around the body, See me here"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang)

KEYWORDS: funeral nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang, pp. 256-257, "Sim-me Yuh Muh Leadvuh" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [40 words]: e description follows Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang but I do not repeat the dialect. According to Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang, "This spiritual is usually sung at wakes, while marching around the body." - BS

Last updated in version 5.1

File: HPR256A
See That My Grave Is Kept Clean

DESCRIPTION: Singer, dying, asks that his grave be kept clean, that his grave be dug with a silver spade, and that he be lowered with a golden chain.

AUTHOR: probably Blind Lemon Jefferson

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recording, Blind Lemon Jefferson)

KEYWORDS: death dying funeral nonballad religious floatingverses

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE,So)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
- Dunson/Raim/Asch-AnthologyOfAmericanFolkMusic, p. 92, "See That My Grave Is Kept Clean" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, pp. 114-115, "Sad and Lonesome Day" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, p. 139, "(One Kind Favor)" (1 text)
- Gilbert-LostChords, p. 81, "See That My Grave Is Kept Clean" (1 partial text)
- Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 300-301, "See That My Grave Is Kept Clean" (1 text)

Roud #7382

RECORDINGS:
- [Joe] Evans & [Arthur] McClain, "Two White Horses in a Line" (Oriole 8081/Perfect 182/Romeo 5081, 1931; on BefBlues1, as "Two White Horses" on StuffDreams2)
- Blind Lemon Jefferson, "See That My Grave Is Kept Clean" (Paramount 12608B, 1928; on AAFM3; improperly listed as "Two White Horses" on the CD reissue cover though not in the notes; also on Jefferson01, JeffersonCD01)
- Mike Seeger, "Sad and Lonesome Day" (on MSeeger01)
- Hobart Smith, "See That My Grave Is Kept Clean" (on LomaxCD1704)
- Ruby Vass, "Lonesome Day" (on Persis1)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- Two White Horses In a Line

NOTES [149 words]: In 1870, Gus Williams composed an item "See that My Grave's Kept Green"; I have no idea whether it affected this song. - RBW

I've seen the sheet music for Williams's piece, and the only thing it has in common with this song is the title phrase. The rest is a sentimentally melancholy bit of Victoriana. - PJS

For those who want to hear the Williams song itself, there are several 78 recordings, one by Bela Lam & his Greene County Singers (OKeh 45126, 1927) and a variety by the Carter Family (Victor 23835, 1933; Zonophone [South Africa] 4379, n.d.; Melotone 7-04-53/Conqueror 8735, 1937). In all cases the Williams song is recorded under the "See That My Grave Is Kept Green" title. - RBW, PJS

Some have speculated that the Jefferson song is descended from an ancestral spiritual, and that Williams wrote his song in imitation of that spiritual. There is no evidence on that question. -PJS

Last updated in version 5.2

File: ADR92

See the Woman at the Well

DESCRIPTION: "Jesus going through the land and on his way got thirsty; He stopped at the well in Canaan's land The town was called S(y)myrna." The story of Jesus and the Woman of Samaria, with chorus, "Oh, there's no one can love you like Jesus."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)

KEYWORDS: Bible religious Jesus

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 208-211, "See the Woman at the Well" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Jesus Met the Woman at the Well" (subject)
- cf. "Lift Him Up That's All" (subject)

NOTES [92 words]: Although this doubtless sounds like a version of "Jesus Met the Woman at the Well," it appears from the lyrics that they are separate.

For the story of Jesus and the Woman of Samaria, see John 4:5-26. This song follows that account fairly closely except for the name of the town. John 4:5 gives the location of Jacob's Well as "Sychar" (well, a few unimportant manuscripts read something else, but none read Smyrna, a town in Asia Minor mentioned in the first two chapters of the Revelation to John). The King James Bible in any case says "Sychar." - RBW

See-saw, Jack a Daw

DESCRIPTION: "See-saw, Jack a daw, Whit is a craw Tae dae wi her? She hasna a stockin Tae pit on her, An the craw hasna ane For tae gie her"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1842 (Halliwell, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)

KEYWORDS: poverty bird nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (2 citations): Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 335, "See-saw, Margery Daw" (1 text in footnote, p. 351)

ADDITIONAL: Robert Chambers (Edited by Norah and William Montgomerie), Traditional Scottish Nursery Rhymes (1990 selected from Popular Rhymes) #128, p. 72, ("See-saw, Jack a daw")

Roud #20216

CROSS-REFERENCES:
ct. "See-Saw, Marjorie Daw, The Old Hen Flew over the Malt House" (lyric form)
ct. "See-Saw, Margery Daw, Jacky Shall Have a New Master" (lyric form)

NOTES [13 words]: A jackdaw is a kind of crow.
The description is all of the Chambers text. - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: ChMT128

See-Saw, Margery Daw, Jacky Shall Have a New Master

DESCRIPTION: "See, saw, Margery Daw, Little Jackey shall have a new master; Little Jacky shall have but a penny a day, Because he can't work any faster." Additional verses may have sexual or other implications.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1844 (Halliwell)

KEYWORDS: work nonballad servant

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (4 citations): Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 335, "See-saw, Margery Daw" (1 text)

Greig/Duncan8 1683, "See-Saw" (1 text, 1 tune)

Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #622, #624, pp. 647-248, "(See Saw)"

Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 188, "See-Saw, Margery Daw" (1 text, probably combining versions)

Roud #13028

CROSS-REFERENCES:
ct. "See-Saw, Marjorie Daw, The Old Hen Flew over the Malt House" (lyric form)
ct. "See-Saw, Margery Daw, Sold Her Bed and Lay On Straw" (lyric form)

NOTES [28 words]: Roud lumps the various Margery Daw rhymes, which is certainly understandable, but they do not normally seem to have circulated as one piece, so I'd call them separate. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: GrD81683

See-Saw, Margery Daw, Sold Her Bed and Lay On Straw

DESCRIPTION: "See-saw, Martery Daw, Sold her bed and lay upon straw; Was not she a dirty slut, To sell her bed and lie in the dirt?" Or "...and lay upon straw. Sold her bed and lay upon hay, Piskey came and carried her away."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1765 (Mother Goose's Melody, according to Opie/Opie-
See-Saw, Marjorie Daw, The Old Hen Flew over the Malt House

DESCRIPTION: "See, saw, Margery Daw, The old hen flew over the malt house, She counted her chickens one by one, Still she missed the little white one, And this is it, this is it, this is it."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1853 (Halliwell, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)

KEYWORDS: chickens nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Byington/Goldstein-TwoPennyBallads, pp. 117-118, "See-Saw" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 337, "See-saw, Margery Daw" (1 text)
- Baring-Gould-AnnnotatedMotherGoose #578, p. 233, "(See, saw, Margery Daw)"; cf. #622, p. 247, "(See saw, Margery Daw)"
- Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 164, "See-Saw, Margery Day" (1 text)

Roud #13028

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "See-saw, Jack a Daw" (lyric form)
- cf. "See-Saw, Margery Daw, Jacky Shall Have a New Master" (lyric form)
- cf. "See-Saw, Marjorie Daw, The Old Hen Flew over the Malt House" (lyric form)

NOTES [107 words]: Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes has two other entries beginning "See-saw,Margery Daw, Jacky shall have a new master" [Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 335] and "See-saw, Margery Daw, Sold her bed and lay upon straw" [Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 336], which see also.

In 1873, T. B. Aldrich wrote a story about Marjorie Daw (who did not actually exist). I don't know if the story inspired some of the rhymes, or whether they all predate it.

Roud lumps the various Margery Daw rhymes, which is certainly understandable, but they do not normally seem to have circulated as one piece, so I'd call them separate. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5

File: BGMG578

See, See, My Playmate

DESCRIPTION: "See, see, my playmate Come out and play with me Under the apple tree." Bring your dollies, slide down the drainpipe or my rainbow, into the cellar door. We'll be friends forever more.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1980 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)

KEYWORDS: playparty friend

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North)) US(MW,SW)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, pp. 94-95, "Come Over, Playmate"; pp. 99-101, "My Jolly Playmate"; pp. 105-106, "My Enemy" (3 texts, 3 tunes)
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 148, "See, See, My Playmate" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Janet M. Cliff, "On Relationships between Folk Music and Folk Games" in Western Folklore, Vol. LI, No. 2 (Apr 1992 (available online by JSTOR)), p. 136 ("Say, say, oh playmate, come out and play with me") (1 text, 1 tune) [citing Carol Merrill-Mirsky, "Girls' Handclapping Games in Three Los Angeles Schools" in _Yearbook for Traditional Music_ 18 (1986)]
Roud #16805
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Don't Want to Play in Your Yard" (theme, lyrics)
NOTES [141 words]: Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame: "The words of this clapping game have not drifted very far from its source, the popular song 'Playmates', words and music by Saxie Dowell, 1940: Play-mate -- come out and play with me..."
Dowell's lyrics begin, "Oh, playmates, come out and play with me, And bring your dollies three. Climb up my apple tree. Look down my rain barrel, slide down my cellar door, And we'll be jolly friends forevermore (source: Rammstein UK site)." - BS
I'm also reminded of the song "I Don't Want to Play In Your Yard," reportedly written in 1894 by Philip Wingate (words) and H. W. Petrie (music), according to p. 274 of Spaeth's _A History of Popular Music in America_: the fussy singer doesn't want to holler down the rain barrel or climb the apple tree. This connection is also made by List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: OpGa148

Seeds of Love, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer "sowed the seeds of love to bloom all in the spring." She asks the gardener to choose flowers for her; she does not like his offers, but chooses the rose. This in turn brings her to the willow tree
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1689 (cited in Sharp; first full text from Campbell, 1816)
KEYWORDS: gardening seduction
FOUND IN: US(MW) Britain(England(Lond,South),Scotland(Aber)) Australia
REFERENCES (20 citations):
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 28, "Once I Had Plenty of Thyme" (2 texts, 1 tune, both texts being mixed with "In My Garden Grew Plenty of Thyme")
Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 33, "The Seeds of Love" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wells-TheBalladTree, pp. 271-272, "The Seeds of Love" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 86-87, "The Seeds of Love" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 372.1)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #84, "The Seeds of Love" (1 text, 1 tune)
Bells-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 440-441, "The Seeds of Love" (1 text)
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 37, "The Seeds of Love" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople 91, "The Seeds of Love" (6 texts)
Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, p. 59, "The Seeds of Love" (1 text, 3 tunes)
Hammer-GarnersGay, p. 14, "Seeds of Love" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #52, "The Seeds of Love" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #67, p. 2, "The Seeds of Love" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan6 1180, "The Seeds of Love" (2 texts)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 167, "The Seeds of Love" (1 text, 1 tune)
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 162-163, "The Red Rose Top" (1 text, 1 tune, linked by the authors to this tune, although it's so short it might be part of "In My Garden Grew Plenty of Thyme")
Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 55, "The Seeds of Love" (1 fragmentary text, 1 tune, with some words similar to "The Seeds of Love" though the only surviving verse looks more like a courting song)
MacColl/Seeger-TravellersSongsFromEnglandAndScotland 54, "The Seeds of Love" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, (THYMT2) (RUETHYME*)
ST K167 (Partial)
Roud #3
RECORDINGS:
George Maynard, "The Seeds of Love" (on Maynard1, Voice10, FSBFTX15)
BRÔADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(1657), "I Sowed the Seeds of Love ("I sowed the seeds of love it was all in the spring"), J. Pitts (London), 1819-1844; also Harding B 11(3855)[many lines illegible; title damaged], "I Sowed the Seeds [of love]"); Firth c.18(98), 2806 c.17(381), "Seeds of Love"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "In My Garden Grew Plenty of Thyme" (plot, lyrics)
NOTES [110 words]: In flower symbolism, the rose stood for love and the willow for weeping. For a catalog of some of the sundry flower symbols, see the notes to "The Broken-Hearted Gardener."
Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland reports that "the author of the song was Mrs. Fleetwood Habergham, of Habergham, in the county of Lancaster," but offers no date or supporting evidence.
Steve Roud lumps this with the mass of thyme songs, e.g. "Garners Gay (Rue; The Sprig of Thyme)." I understand why he doesn't want to try to split the (very similar) thyme songs, but this strikes me as truly distinct. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: K167

Seeing Nellie Home

DESCRIPTION: "In the sky the bright stars glittered; On the bank the pale moon shone. It was from Aunt Dinah's quilting party I was seeing Nellie home." The singer professes his love for Nellie on the way. Evidently they get married, because they are now old together
AUTHOR: Words: F. Kyle / Music: John Fletcher
EARLIEST DATE: 1856 (sheet music published by J. S. Paine of Portland, Maine)
KEYWORDS: love courting age party
FOUND IN: US(MW,SE)
REFERENCES (10 citations):
Dean-FlyingCloud, p. 79, "Seeing Nellie Home" (1 text)
Jackson-PopularSongsOfNineteenthCenturyAmerica, pp. 229-232, "When I Saw Sweet Nellie Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 289, "Seeing Nelly Home" (1 text)
Heart-Songs, p. 403, "The Quilting Party" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #144, "The Quilting Party" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2570, p. 174, "When I Saw Sweet Nellie Home" (2 references)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 254, "Seeing Nellie Home (Aunt Dinah's Quilting Party)" (1 text)
DT, NELLHOME
John Burke, _Burke's Christmas Songster 1920_, self-published, 1918 (PDF available on the Memorial University of Newfoundland site), p. 6, "When I Saw Sweet Nellie Home" (1 text)
ST RJ19229 (Full)
Roud #5492
RECORDINGS:
Floyd County Ramblers, "Aunt Dinah's Quilting Party" (Victor V-40331, 1930; Bluebird B-5107/Electra-Disc 2021/Sunrise S-3190, 1933)
Haydn Quartet, "Aunt Dinah's Quilting Party" (Victor 2456, 1903)
Lester McFarland & Robert Gardner, "Seeing Nellie Home" (Brunswick 199, 1928; rec. 1927)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Aunt Dinah's Quilting Party

NOTES [175 words]: The early history of this song is slightly confused. It first appeared in 1856, but evidently in an unauthorized edition perhaps taken from a minstrel troupe performance. In 1859 the composer, John Fletcher, issued an official edition (published by William A. Pond) -- complete with complaints about the previous editions. Yet in this text Nelly was not brought home from "Aunt Dinah's quilting party" but "from an august evening party." Jackson thinks this an error; it strikes me as possible that this was a deliberate change intended to differentiate the editions. Even stranger, the cover of the 1859 edition calls the girl "Nellie," but inside she is "Nelly." One can only suppose that neither she nor her swain could read too well. Even the name of the author varies; the 1856 edition calls her(?) Frances Kyle; the 1859 edition omits the name; in 1884 the name is given variously as Frances and Francis. Another early edition, listed on p. 174 of Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, says the song was "As sung by Charles Melville" but lists no author. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: RJ19229

Seeing the Elephant (When I Left the States for Gold)

DESCRIPTION: "When I left the states for gold, Everything I had I sold." The singer encounters various troubles (and Mormons) on the way west, and warns, "Leave, you miners leave... Take my advice, kill off your lice...." (To the tune of "De Boatman Dance")

AUTHOR: Words: David Robinson? John A. Stone?/Music: Daniel Decatur Emmett

EARLIEST DATE: 1912 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)

KEYWORDS: travel hardtimes gold warning

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, p. 347, "When I Left the States for Gold" (1 text)
Roud #7773

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "De Boatman Dance" (tune)

NOTES [56 words]: The history of this is a bit obscure. It was David "Doc" Robinson who founded the "Seeing the Elephant" show in San Francisco in 1850. But this song, to the tune of "De Boatman Dance," appeared in Put's Original California Songster. I can't tell whether Put worked on something Robinson wrote, or just commemorated his performances. - RBW

File: Beld347

Seek and Ye Shall Find

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Seek and ye shall find, Knock and the door shall be opened, Ask and it shall be given, And the love comes trickling down." Verse: "My brother (my sister, Elder, Deacon, Preacher, ...) the Lord has been here, And the love comes trickling down"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute); 1893 (see notes)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, pp. 20-21, "Seek and Ye Shall Find" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 101 in the 1901 edition) [for 1893 edition, see notes]
Roud #15286

NOTES [54 words]: An allusion to Matthew 7:7. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
Seek Not from Whence Love She Came

DESCRIPTION: The singer loves a colleen who's "happy in old Donegal." "Her figure is proper and tall," her voice is "sweeter by far than the songbird." Singer says "I know she's an angel, And I'm not going to tell you her name." Soon they will marry.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1980 (IRHardySons)
KEYWORDS: courting Ireland nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
Roud #17897
RECORDINGS:
Mary Anne Connelly, "Seek Not from Whence Love She Came" (on IRHardySons)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Pride of Kilkee" (motif: hiding a sweetheart's name) and references there
cf. "Tons of Bright Gold" (motif: hiding a sweetheart's name) and references there

Seemanns Trinkleid, Des

DESCRIPTION: Forebitter shanty. German. "Ein richtiger Seemansschwingt's GLas fein behend'." A "real sailor" "loves both the sea and the wine." Whatever his task at sea, he knows he'll get his grog soon. Once in port, he can drink even more freely

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1977 (Hugill-SongsOfTheSea)
KEYWORDS: sailor shanty drink foreignlanguage
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 169, "Des Seemanns Trinkleid" (2 texts, German & English, 1 tune)

Segar, The

DESCRIPTION: "The old year is gone, and a new one begun, I'll set by the fire by my wife and my son. While others are playing destruction and war, I'll set by the fire and smoke my segar." The poet enjoys life with his cigar, and will take another when it is done.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1830 (source: Flanders-ChapBook Flanders-VermontChapBook)
KEYWORDS: drugs wife husband nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Flanders-ChapBook Flanders-VermontChapBook, pp. 22-23, "The Segar" (1 text, 1 tune)

Seimidh Eoghainin Duibh (Dark-Haired Jimmy Owen)

DESCRIPTION: The singer describes the fine clothing she would place on Jimmy Owen. She says how the girls would fight over him. She wishes he had been in battle with O'Donnell. She looks back on the days of a united Ireland, and thinks that Jimmy would have been king

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage love clothes beauty royalty
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1598 - The Tyrone/O'Donnell Rebellion
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 46, "Seimidh Eoghainin Duibh (Dark-Haired Jimmy Owen)" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [88 words]: Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland describes this as "an entirely local song from west Donegal" (though the tune is known in Scotland). He is probably right; I've never seen any other versions. But the band Scartaglen (the group in which Connie Dover got her start) recorded a version, apparently derived from Kennedy, so I thought we should include the song just because people might look it up. For the background on the rebellion referred to in this song, see the notes to "O'Donnell Aboo (The Clanconnell War Song)." - RBW

File: K046

Seizure of the Cyprus Brig in Recherche Bay

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you sons of freedom, a chorus join with me, I'll sing a song of heroes and glorious liberty." Transportees who got in trouble are put on the Cyprus to be sent to a new prison. The prisoners rebel and gain their freedom

AUTHOR: "Frank the Poet" (?)

EARLIEST DATE: 1967 (Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads)

KEYWORDS: transportation prison crime mutiny escape freedom

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

1829 - the Cyprus Mutiny

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads, pp. 65-67, "Seizure of the Cyprus Brig in Recherche Bay" (1 text)

Roud #9122

NOTES [687 words]: This song is about a true event, but the details are often a little hazy. Robert Hughes, The Fatal Shore: The Epic of Australia's Founding, Knopf, 1986, pp. 214-216, has a summary of the events involving the Cyprus, and quotes several stanzas of this song. The convicts on the Cyprus had originally been sent to Van Diemen's Land, but committed additional offenses there and were to be sent to Macquarie Harbour, a harsher encampment. There were 31 of them. Contrary to the song, their crimes were not "little trifling offences"; most were capital crimes that had been commuted to secondary transportation (Hughes, p. 215). William Swallow, the key figure, is perhaps a case in point. As early as 1810, he had "hijacked" a schooner at Port Jackson, which resulted in his transportation to Tasmania. Sent there aboard the Deveron, his actions during a storm saved the ship, so the crew rescued him after he was turned over to the authorities in Hobart. He made it all the way to Rio before the British caught him again. He escaped again, but rather than flee to someplace safe, he went to London, where he was caught and once again transported. So he ended up in Tasmania, where he managed to get in even greater trouble, resulting in his transfer to the Cyprus. The officer in charge of the Cyprus was a Lieutenant Carew, who commanded not only the ship's crew but also sufficient soldiers to (it was thought) guard the convicts. Not even all the convicts wanted to rebel; 13 were not part of the plot. But, somehow, the rebellious convicts overpowered Carew, the soldiers, the crew, and the loyal convicts when they were at Recherche Bay near the southern tip of Tasmania. They then forced Carew and Co. to leave the ship. In all, they sent 45 people over the side: Carew, his wife, the soldiers, the loyal convicts, etc. Despite having a large load of supplies for Macquarie Harbour available (supposedly a year's rations for 200 people), the mutineers left minimal provisions for the loyalists, who very nearly starved. A convict named Popjoy and Mrs. Carew managed to build a 12-foot coracle out of branches and old hammocks, and they were able to get help, just in time to save the survivors (Hughes, pp. 215-216). Popjoy was given a free pardon for his heroism and allowed to return to England. The mutineers, meanwhile, had put Swallow in charge, presumably because of his sea experience. How he navigated the ship I don't know (being a sailor isn't the same as being a navigator!), but after making several island stops, they ended up in Japan in 1829. Several of the mutineers left the ship there, or even before they got there. (According to the Wikipedia article on the Cyprus mutiny, this part of the voyage, often dismissed as fiction, has now been corroborated by Japanese records.) Swallow and several others ended up in China, having abandoned or lost the ship. Swallow presented himself at Canton (the city properly known as Guangzhou) as a captain who had lost his ship, and managed to make it back to England "again". Swallow's stubbornness cost him. Astoundingly, Popjoy spotted him and his confederates in England, and they were taken into custody. Two of the remaining mutineers, George James Davis and William Watts, were hung -- but Swallow and Popjoy said that Swallow had been forced to run the ship because he was the only experienced sailor, and the court accepted it, at least enough to spare his life. So Swallow, for the third time, was transported. Sent to Hobart, he was transferred to Macquarie Harbour, then to Port Arthur when Macquarie was closed. There were no more escapes; he died there of tuberculosis (Hughes, p. 216).
"By the early 1830s [the Cyprus mutineers] had become the subject of one of the 'treason songs' or proscribed convict ballads" (Hughes, p. 214). Hughes, in the photo section following p. 194, has a contemporary woodcut showing Lieutenant Carew's party trying to build their coracle. There have also been historical novels and dramas about the event.
For background on the likely author "Frank the Poet," see the notes to "Moreton Bay (I)." - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: StKF065

Sellin' That Stuff
DESCRIPTION: "Aunt Jane had a dance and she had a crowd, She sold more whisky than the law allows. She's sellin' that stuff...." The song details her life selling it, and how Uncle Jim found himself in prison for drunkenness, and how Sister Lil sells it too
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1966 (Coffin & Cohen)
KEYWORDS: commerce drink prison
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Tristram P. Coffin and Hennig Cohen, _Folklore in America: Tales, Songs,
Superstitions, Proverbs, Riddles, Games, Folk Drama and Folk Festivals_, Doubleday, 1966, p. 89,
"Selling That Stuff" (1 text)
Roud #8901
File: CoCo89

Send for the Ladies
DESCRIPTION: "Send for the ladies, come to the ball, Don't come tonight, needn't come at all."
Send for the ladies... Hiked up her left leg and showed it to us all." Send for the ladies... Hiked up her shimmy tail and show it to us all."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: dancing clothes nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 177, "Sand for the Ladies" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11366
File: Brne177

Send Him on Down, Lord
DESCRIPTION: "Send him on down, Send him on down, Lord let the Holy Ghost come on down,
We can't pray right until you send him on down"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 2014 (USSeaIsland03)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Rosa and Joseph Murray, "Send Em on Down, Lawd" (on USSeaIsland03)
File: RcSHToDL

Send Out the Army and the Navy
DESCRIPTION: "Send out the Army and the Navy, Send out the rank and file, Send out the brave Territorials, They'll face danger with a smile (I don't think). Send out my mother, Send out my sister and my brother, But for Gawd's sake don't send me."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang)
KEYWORDS: soldier mother brother
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, p. 58, "Send Out the Army and the Navy" (1 text)
Roud #10546
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Send Out the Chryssy" (form)
File: BrPa057C

Send Out the Chryssy

DESCRIPTION: "Send out the Chryssy, The Moy, Ouse, and Issy, But for God's sake don't send me!" Reported to be a song about the Mediterranean Fleet.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: ship navy derivative
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 145, "Send out the 'Chryssy'" (1 fragment)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Send Out the Army and the Navy" (form)

NOTES [303 words]: Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy believes the ships here were from World War II, and suggests the four ships he knew were target towing vessels. Certainly there were ships known by these names.

Chryssy = Chrysanthemum. "Flower" class corvette, built Belfast; transferred in that year to the French navy as Commandant Drogou; returned to the Royal Navy 1946 (Young, p. 53). The date of her building is disputed; Young says 1942, Jane's-WWII, p. 133, and Lenton, p. 23, say 1941. Probably this is by confusion of launching and commissioning dates, or the 1942 date on which she was transferred to the French.

Moy. Mersey class trawler, built 1917 as Alexander Hills; survived the war (Young, p. 117).

Ouse. Mersey class trawler, built in 1917 as the Andrew King, mined off North Africa, February 20, 1941 (Young, p. 120).

Issy = St. Issy. Saint class tug, built 1918, lost off Benghazi December 28, 1942 (Young, p. 138). It will be observed that there is a chronological problem here: Even if the Jane's-WWII date is correct for the Chrysanthemum is correct, she would not have been in service with the British fleet and did not go into service at all until after the Ouse was lost! Thus there is no possibility of these four ships being sent out together for any purpose. Of course, it is possible that one or another name is an error -- e.g. I thought of the Oursay for the Ouse or the Islay for the (Saint) Issy. The other possibility that occurs to me is that the first ship is not the Chyssy=Chrysanthemum but the Cressy. There was no World War II ship with that name, but there was a World War I cruiser that became famous for being sunk by a submarine. That would force us to find fits for the other names, of course. Ultimately, the question cannot be settled unless we find more text. - RBW

Bibliography

- Jane's-WWII: Jane's Fighting Ships of World War II (1946; I use the 1989 Crescent Books reprint with modern foreword by Anthony Preston)
- Young: John Young, A Dictionary of Ships of the Royal Navy of the Second World War, Patrick Stephens, 1975
Seoithin-Seo (I) (Fairy Lullaby)

DESCRIPTION: Gaelic. On the first anniversary of her capture by fairies a woman is washing by a river and hushing a baby not hers. She asks a passer-by to tell her husband how to rescue her, if not the next day then never "for they'll make me Fairy Queen for ever"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)
KEYWORDS: foreign language captivity request separation abduction rescue magic ritual baby husband supernatural royalty
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 128, "Seoithin-Seo" (2 texts, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Elizabeth Cronin, "Seoithin-Seo" (on IRECronin01)
NOTES [45 words]: The description is a summary of the translation at George Sigerson, Bards of the Gael and Gall (London: T Fisher-Unwin, 1897), pp. 344-346, "Fairy Lullaby." Sigerson's version of the rescue is much briefer than but reminiscent of the rescue in Child 39, "Tam Lin." - BS
Last updated in version 3.2
File: OCC128

Seoithin-Seo (II)

DESCRIPTION: Macaronic. A mother sings her baby to sleep "free from sorrow... Bright thou'll open thine eyes tomorrow... Through the branchy trees the breeze is sweeping... And my baby dear is sweetly sleeping." "[May] I be never a sonless mother."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)
KEYWORDS: foreign language lullaby nonballad baby mother
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 129, "Seoithin-Seo" (6 texts)
RECORDINGS:
Elizabeth Cronin, "Seoithin-Seo" (on IRECronin01)
NOTES [46 words]: The description follows the English verses of the macaronic OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin text and the translation at George Sigerson, Bards of the Gael and Gall (London: T Fisher-Unwin, 1897), pp. 343-344, "Irish Lullaby." The recording is entirely in Gaelic. - BS
Last updated in version 3.2
File: OCC129

Seoladh Na Ngamhan Faoi'n Bhfasaig

DESCRIPTION: Gaelic. "[The singer] sent his daughter to fetch the calves, but she fell into bad company... [apparently] had their way with her, and the father is now seeking redress"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)
KEYWORDS: foreign language rape farming father
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 130, "Seoladh Na Ngamhan Faoi'n Bhfasaig" (2 texts)
NOTES [17 words]: The description follows the "English Summary" provided by OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin. - BS
Last updated in version 3.2
File: OCC130

Seotho-Leo A Thoil

DESCRIPTION: Gaelic. "The poet laments a lost love and the fact that his poetry is no longer respected. He would prefer food and drink rather than vain composing such as he attempts"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage love rejection drink food lover
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 131, "Seotho-Leo A Thoil" (2 texts, 1 tune)
NOTES [17 words]: The description follows the "English Summary" provided by OCroinin/Cronin-
TheSongsOfElizabethCronin. - BS
Last updated in version 3.2
File: 0CC131

Separating Line
DESCRIPTION: "O (pray/preach/sing/shout/moan) right on, Just (pray/preach/sing/shout/moan) right on, I don't need this world any more Because when I cross that separating line I'm going to leave this world behind."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang, pp. 310-311, "Siporatin' Line" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [18 words]: The description follows Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang but I do not repeat the dialect. - BS
Last updated in version 5.1
File: HPR310S

Sequel to Come Under My Plaidie
DESCRIPTION: Johnnie decides he needs someone to care for him. Merrin slights him but Maclaren accepts and marries him. They live happily. Merrin marries an old rich man and mourns,
"For the sake o' his treasure, I hae married a miser ... gweed for naething ava"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan7)
KEYWORDS: age courting marriage money rejection
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1304, "Come Under My Plaidie" (1 text)
Roud #7200
NOTES [47 words]: The Greig/Duncan7 title makes no sense based on the text since the phrase is not in the song. However, Bell Robertson [says of] this song [that] "The sequel to 'Come under my plaidie' was mother's. Mr Greig has never heard of it." The apparent prequel is "Come Under My Plaidie." - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD71304

Serafina
DESCRIPTION: Halyard shanty. "In Callyo there lives a girl named Serafina" who works very hard drinking, smoking, and robbing sailors of their money and clothes.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas)
KEYWORDS: shanty bawdy whore warning robbery trick
FOUND IN: West Indies South America
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 397-398. "Serafina" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, pp. 302-303]
DT, SERAFINA*
Sergeant Neill

DESCRIPTION: "If you want your praties sprayed, well you can call on Sergeant Neill. Oh he's the bot that'll do it well, and he'll not destroy your kale." Many of Neill's satisfied customers are named.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Morton/Maguire-ComeDayGoDayGodSendSunday)

KEYWORDS: farming moniker

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Morton/Maguire-ComeDayGoDayGodSendSunday 12, pp. 29-30,105,160, "Sergeant Neill" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #2921

NOTES [84 words]: Morton/Maguire-ComeDayGoDayGodSendSunday: In County Fermanagh [ex-police] Sergeant Neill had a spraying machine for bluestone, a potato fungicide. Everyone called on him to do their spraying. "John tells me that it was sometime in the early 1920s that Sergeant Neill began his business enterprise." - BS

For more on bluestone, see the notes to "Mary Anne McGuinan." Given the date, one wonders if Neill wasn't a former member of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. Must have been quite a change of pace. - RBW

File: MoMa12

Sergeant Small

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, I wish I were about fourteen stone And only six foot tall. I'd take the train back north, Just to beat up Sergeant Small."

AUTHOR: Robert Lane? (see NOTES)

EARLIEST DATE: 1968

KEYWORDS: train police railroading

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, p. 209, "Sergeant Small" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [119 words]: Meredith's informant, Muriel Whalan, explained that Sergeant Small made a minor career during the depression of posing as a bagman in order to catch other travellers riding the rods of trains.

According to Gwenda Beed Davey and Graham Seal, A Guide to Australian Folklore, Kangaroo Press, 2003, p. 230, Sergeant Small was an "Allegedly historical Queensland or northern New South Wales policeman notorious for ill-treatment of vagrants during the 1930s depression. 'Tex Morton' (Robert Lane) composed a song about the man and recorded it in 1938. The chorus [which is the text quoted in the description] ensured that the song passed into oral tradition and made the song a favorite of singers, young and old." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1

File: MA209

Sergeant Tally-Ho

DESCRIPTION: Singer boasts of his travels; he's courted all over America, England, France and Spain. The colonel's wife, hearing of his prowess, wishes to see "the naked truth", so he pulls out his "lusty pin," she says, "You shall be my handy man."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (recording, Warde Ford)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer boasts of his wide travels, saying he's courted all over America, England, France and Spain. The colonel's wife, having heard of his prowess, wishes to see "the naked truth", so he pulls out his "lusty pin" as she leads him to the bedroom, saying, "You shall be my handy man." And, frustratingly, there the only recorded version of the song ends.
Sergeant, He Is the Worst of All, The

DESCRIPTION: "The sergeant, the sergeant he is the worst of all; He gets us up in the morning before the early call, With squads right, and squads left, and left front into line; Then the slimy son of a gun, he gives us double time."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)

KEYWORDS: army soldier

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 435, "The Sergeant, He Is the Worst of All" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 32-33, "The Sergeant" (1 short text, tune referenced)

Roud #27871

File: San435

Sergeant's Lamentation, The

DESCRIPTION: The Sergeant of Grouse Hall answers the hackler's song. He rejects its accusations but acknowledges that the song is "the source of all my grief and shame." "This curst Grouse Hall caused my downfall" He would know the song writer before he leaves.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads)

KEYWORDS: prison drink Ireland humorous police

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 39A, "The Sergeant's Lamentation" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3070

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Hackler from Grouse Hall" (prequel to this ballad)
cf. "Moses Ritoora-li-ay" (theme)

NOTES [406 words]: "The hackler was a distiller of high quality Poitin in 19th century Ireland" (source: Hearing before Trademark Trial and Appeal Board, US Patent and Trademark Office, January 6, 2000 in re United Distillers plc "On December 16, 1996 United Distillers plc filed an intent-to-use application to register the mark HACKLER on the Principal Register for 'alcoholic beverages, namely, distilled spirits, except Scotch whisky, and liqueurs.'

Apparently the more common definition is "one that hackles [to chop up or chop off roughly]; esp: a worker who hackles hemp, flax, or broomcorn." (source: Webster's Third New International Dictionary of the English Language Unabridged, 1976); its this last definition that OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads follows.

OLochlainn notes to "The Hackler from Grouse Hall" and its answer, "The Sergeant's Lamentation," explain the Sergeant's deeds and the references to people named in both songs and happenings in County Cavan. His source for notes is the singer.
The occurrences appear to be during Arthur Balfour's tour as Chief Secretary of Ireland in the late 1880s [1887-1891; his repressive methods earned him the nickname "Bloody Balfour" - RBW]. See for example the reference to the 1888 imprisonment of Father McFadden of Donegal in Derry Prison "for an agrarian speech" (source: Chapters of Dublin History site, Letters and Leaders of my Day XXII "Parnellism and Crime" (1887-8), by T.M. Healy). I'd guess, no doubt naively, that the issue here is moonshining to defeat high alcohol taxation. - BS

The other possibility for the date is 1902-1905, when Balfour was prime minister in succession to his uncle Lord Salisbury. Gladstone's proposals for Irish Home Rule had of course failed, but the issue never entirely went away, and the Liberals were increasingly in favor of it in the early twentieth century. Supporting this dating is the fact that, during the Balfour administration, there was a movement for "tariff reform" -- i.e. lowering of duties within the British Empire, which would have made it easier for the Irish to export to England. Balfour tried to calm the controversy, but succeeded mostly in turning his party purely protectionist, thus making the Liberals even more popular with the Irish, since they were more likely to favor both Home Rule and Free Trade. So the song might well look forward to the 1906 election which shunted the Conservatives from power. - RBW

File: OLoc039A

Sergent, Le

DESCRIPTION: Canadian French: The young boy runs off to America to fight the hated British. He joins the army and is made a sergeant, but is wounded and returns home. His father, who warned him against leaving, says "I told you so!"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1961
KEYWORDS: soldier injury home Canada foreignlanguage
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1775-1776: American attack on Canada. The chief battle of the campaign was fought outside Quebec on December 31, 1775
FOUND IN: Canada
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong, pp. 60-61, "Le Sergent" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [94 words]: During the American Revolution, the Colonials made an abortive attack on Canada, thinking that the French inhabitants would rebel against the British. It didn't happen; the French generally preferred the British (who at least guaranteed their religious liberty) to the unknown quantity that was the Americans. The Colonial assault failed before Quebec. A few Canadians, however, decided they hated the British enough to return south with the Colonials and fight. As this song shows, those who stayed at home felt these soldiers to be more than a little foolish. - RBW

File: FMB060

Servant Man, The

DESCRIPTION: "My father kept a servant man." A girl loves him. Her father determines to send him to sea. She says she will be true even if she must go betting. She "saw his colours come and go." He returns, having risen from apprentice to butler, and marries her.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Butterworth Collection)
KEYWORDS: servant love separation reunion drink
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Butterworth/Dawney-PloughboysGlory, p. 42, "The Servant Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
NOTES [53 words]: This reminds me of many "Ballads of Family Opposition to Lovers," notably "The Bonny Sailor Boy" [Laws M22]. But it is short and peculiar enough that it is not obvious which song of this type it might derive from; the lyrics are often confused. Roud assigns it its own number, and I rather hesitantly do the same. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.5

File: BuDa042

Serves Them Fine

DESCRIPTION: Singer tells how back in 1920, "The mills ran good and everyone had plenty:" in 1925, mountain people came to work there. Now it's 1930, and more people are unemployed than working. Singer tells fellow mountaineers to go back home and live as they used to

AUTHOR: Dave McCarn
Service of the Lord

DESCRIPTION: Every second and fourth line in verse and chorus is "I am bound to die in the army." Chorus: "I am bound to live in the service of my Lord (x2)." "My Savior smiles and bids me come," "Sweet angels beckon me away"

AUTHOR: E. J. King (source: Original Sacred Harp)

EARLIEST DATE: 1844 (according to Original Sacred Harp)

KEYWORDS: death nonballad religious Jesus

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Benjamin Franklin White, E.J.King, et al., Original Sacred Harp (Atlanta, 1911 ("Digitized by Google"); [correction and enlargement of 1869 edition copyright J.S. James], p. 80, "Service of the Lord" ("Farewell vain world I'm going home; I'm bound to die in the army") (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
- Southeast Alabama and Florida Union Sacred Harp Singing Convention, "Service of the Lord" (on USFlorida01)

File: RcSerotL

Serving Maid's Holiday, The

DESCRIPTION: Middle English. "Al is day ic han sou t." The maid has sought this day "for ioy e at yit ys holyday"; she sets out even though her work is undone. She and Jack meet. Soon "my wombe began to swelle"; she dares not tell her mistress

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: Before 1600 (Cambridge, Gonville & Caius College MS 383)

KEYWORDS: servant sex pregnancy MiddleEnglish

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (9 citations):
- Brian Stone, translator, _Medieval English Verse_, revised edition, Penguin, 1971, #58, pp. 104-105, "The Serving Maid's Holiday" (1 text, rendered in Modern English)

MANUSCRIPT: {MSCaiusCollege383}, Cambridge, Gonville & Caius College MS. 383, page 41

NOTES [267 words]: I have no particular reason to think this is traditional -- although the subject matter hints that it was preserved by the folk rather than the clergy! But a version both modernized and cleaned up was recorded by Maddy Prior and Tim Hart, so perhaps people should have references for the original song. In addition, Richard Leighton Greene, editor, The Earliest English Carols, Oxford/Clarendon Press, 1935, p. xcv, while admitting he has no proof, thinks this one of two carols in Cambridge, Gonville & Caius College MS. 383 that, "because of their homeliness, their directness of speech, and their theme of the betrayed girl, have a strong case for consideration as authentic folk-song" -- although E. K. Chambers, English Literature at the Close of the Middle Ages, Oxford, 1945, 1947, p. 113, responds that "I see nothing in them but the work of some graceless minstrel." (Personally, I am more inclined to agree with Greene.) Greene thinks this is a Midsummer Day song, which makes sense since the couple lay down in the sand. He dates the text to the fifteenth century. Sisam/Sisam, p. 596, estimates the date as c. 1475. Despite its thoroughly secular content, the manuscript of this piece seems to have been written by a cleric, since he signs his name "Johannes." Apart from the Middle English lyrics, it contains grammatical treatises. The text is on page 41 of the manuscript. The Index of Middle English Verse lists an even dozen poems in the manuscript, most of which (based on their descriptions in the Index) are secular but few of which look likely to have come from tradition. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
File: RHRXV024

Set Down, Servant

DESCRIPTION: "'Set down, servant.' I can't set down... my soul's so happy that I can't set down." The servant describes the various things God promises: A long white robe, a starry crown, a golden waistband, etc. An angel is instructed to supply all these

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 176, "My Soul's So Happy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 105, "Set Down, Servant" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 584-585, "Set Down, Servant" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 367, "Set Down, Servant" (1 text)
Roud #10076
ALTERNATE TITLES:
I Can't Sit Down
File: LxU105

Settin' Down

DESCRIPTION: "Settin' down, settin' down, By the side of the lamb, the lamb. I'm gwine tell my Lawd, I'm gwine tell my lawd, Ay, mighty, I never heard nobody pray. Way down yonder, I never heard nobody pray, Nobody pray, I never heard nobody pray."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 39, "Settin' Down" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #16310
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray" (lyrics)
NOTES [69 words]: I thought seriously about lumping this with "I Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray"; Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama's text is short enough that it could well be a fragment of that song. But Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama's notes say that the line "I couldn't hear nobody pray" was understood to mean "I didn't have any examples of how to pray," so the intent is different. That is (just barely) enough reason for me to split them. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
File: Arno039
Settin' on a Rail

DESCRIPTION: "As I went out by the light of the moon... Thar I spies a fat raccoon A-settin' on a rail." The singer pulls the coon off a rail and fights with it. In at least one version, the singer is a slave who helps his master on toward death

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough); sheet music for a piece entitled "Settin' on a Rail" was published by G. Willig Jr. of Baltimore some time in the nineteenth century, according to Dichter/Shapiro, p. 53.

KEYWORDS: animal fight slave

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 177-179, "Settin' on a Rail" (2 texts, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Davy Crockett" (lyrics)

NOTES [41 words]: This shares a first line with a few versions of "Davy Crockett," which also involves a bare-hands fight with a coon -- but the overall form and feel is different enough that I think they're separate song which has cross-fertilized a little. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.6

File: ScNF177B

Settin' Side that Road

DESCRIPTION: "I'm settin' side that road with a ball and chain on my leg (x2), If I had my way I'd catch-a that westbound train." "That judge gave me six months because I didn't want to work (x3)."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1966

KEYWORDS: work prison

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 314-315, "Settin' Side that Road" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: SBoA314

Settler's Lament, The (The Beautiful Land of Australia)

DESCRIPTION: "Now all intent to emigrate, Come listen to the doleful fate...." The singer sailed for Australia, was wrecked, was spared by cannibals as too thin, and had his sheep die of rot. Coming home, he will sell matches before returning to Australia

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1854 (John Henderson's _Excursions and Adventures in New South Wales_); Anderson estimates his broadside is from c. 1842

KEYWORDS: emigration humorous hardtimes cannibalism return

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads, pp. 20-21, "The Settler's Lament" (1 text)
Anderson-FarewellToOldEngland, pp. 181-183, "The Settler's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The King of the Cannibal Islands" (tune)

File: PFS101

Seven Cent Cotton and Forty Cent Meat

DESCRIPTION: The cotton farmer complains about dreadful prices; with "Seven cent cotton and forty cent meat, How in the world can a poor man eat?" With everything he has wearing out, replacements are too expensive. (He sees improvements under Roosevelt)

AUTHOR: Bob Miller & Emma Dermer
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recording, Bob Ferguson)
KEYWORDS: poverty hardtimes food clothes farming political money
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, pp. 877-878, "Seven-Cent Cotton and Forty-Cent Meat" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 117, "Seven Cent Cotton And Forty Cent Meat" (1 text)
DT, SVNCE
RECORDINGS:
Loren H. Abram, "Eleven Cent Cotton -- Forty Cent Meat" (Supertone 2774, c. 1932; rec. 1931)
Vernon Dalhart, "Eleven Cent Cotton" (Victor V-40050, 1929; Bluebird B-8406, 1940) (Harmony 821-H [as Mack Allen], 1929; rec. 1928) (Edison N-20001, 1929)
Bob Ferguson, "Eleven Cent Cotton, Forty Cent Meat, pts. 1 & 2" (Columbia 15297-D, 1928)
Bob Miller, "'Leven Cent Cotton And Forty Cent Meat" (Radiex 5044, c. 1929); "Eleven Cent Cotton And Forty Cent Meat" (Okeh 45475, 1930)
Carson Robison, "'Leven Cent Cotton, Forty Cent Meat" (Champion 15746, 1929) (Pathe Actuelle 32438/Cameo 9092 [both as Carson Robison's Trio], 1929)
Pete Seeger, "Seven Cent Cotton and Forty Cent Meat" (on PeteSeeger13, AmHist1)
Hank Smith [pseud. for Al Bernard] "Eleven Cent Cotton and Forty Cent Meat" (Vocalion 5318, 1929)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Flies Are On the Tummits" (theme of poor living for farmers)
NOTES [312 words]: The 1928 recording by Bob Ferguson (recorded in August of that year) might seem to throw doubt on the authorship claim of Bob Miller. But his recording is on Radiex, part of the Grey Gull family of records, and dating those records is notoriously difficult and uncertain. For the moment, though, I've assigned the Earliest Date to the Ferguson recording, as it's the earliest for which we have unambiguous information.
Also, there's some ambiguity about Miller's 1930 OKeh recording; one source lists the title as "Four Cent Tobacco and Forty Cent Meat. Interesting that most of these recordings appeared in 1928-1929, just before the stock market crash that most urbanites see as the beginning of the Great Depression. But times had been hard on the farms for several years before then. - PJS
And, of course, demand for recordings fell dramatically after the crash, so nobody was producing new versions.
Incidentally, low cotton prices were not a new phenomenon, and neither were wild price fluctuations. According to Nevins, p. 242, cotton in 1845 sold in the American south for sixteen cents a pound. By 1848, when the total production was half again as large, the price dropped to a mere four and a half cents a pound.
It is interesting to see this song become so popular in folk circles, because Bob Miller was a Tin Pan Alley songwriter. According to Doug deNatale and Glenn Hinson, "The Southern Textile Song Tradition Reconsidered," published in Green, p. 81, his other occupation songs were generally not accepted by the folk.
I wouldn't bet on this, but Green or his source might have lifted his slogan from a similar Newfoundland political tag. In the 1908, Edward Morris took as a slogan "$2 fish and #7 flour" (the fish being the cod that the Newfoundlander caught and sold to try to buy the flour that they couldn't grow on their infertile island). - RBW
Bibliography

- Green: Archie Green, editor, Songs about Work: Essays in Occupational Culture for Richard A. Reuss, Folklore Institute, Indiana University, 1993
- Nevins: Allan Nevins, The Ordeal of the Union: Fruits of Manifest Destiny 1847-1852 [volume I ofThe Ordeal of the Union] (Scribners, 1947)
- O'Flaherty: Patrick O'Flaherty, Lost Country: The Rise and Fall of Newfoundland 1843-1933, Long Beach Press, 2005

Last updated in version 5.3
File: BAF877
Seven Devils Mine, The

DESCRIPTION: "Come all ye bold adventurers And listen to my song, About the Seven Devils mines -- I will not keep you long." The singer warns to keep snakebite on hand, urges listeners to work hard in the mine, and warns of those who grow rich and forget the past

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1895 (Johnson, Poems of Idaho, according to Cohen)

KEYWORDS: work mining hardtimes money

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp 581-582, "The Seven Devils Mine" (1 text)

File: CAFS2581

Seven Irishmen, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer warns of what happened to seven Irishmen who sailed to America. They land in New York. They are tricked into the Army. They fight the soldiers who would train them. A "gentleman from Ohio" comes to their aid

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Sing Out!)

KEYWORDS: Ireland soldier emigration fight Civilwar

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 22, #1 (1973), p, 3, "The Seven Irishmen" (1 text, 1 tune, the Joe Heaney version)
Roud #3104

NOTES [353 words]: The notes in Sing Out! say that "60% of the Union Army was Irish or of Irish descent and 30% of the Confederate Army." It is true that the Civil War army had a lot of Irishmen -- but there weren't enough Irishmen in America to supply 60% of the Union army! (This would call for roughly 1.25 million Irishmen of military age in the North alone. That's out of a total population -- men, women, children, and the elderly -- of 22 million).

I suspect there is more going on here than the Irish singer understood. Many Irishmen, it is true, were recruited "off the docks" as they came to America (see "By the Hush" for an example of this). But the song seems to describe something like taking the King's Shilling (Lincoln's Shilling?). This would not be normal -- bounties flowed freely at the end of the war, but they were cash, not drink.

My guess is that the men were recruited not by army officials but by a substitute broker -- the Union draft allowed a man who was drafted to recruit another man to take his place -- a "substitute." The substitute broker was a man who swept the streets and alleys to find someone to sell to the reluctant conscript. The substitutes so hired were notorious for their lack of suitability -- many were drunks or cripples, and the substitute brokers would bribe doctors or recruiting officers to get them in.

The "gentleman from Ohio" who seeks to get them off is also interesting. I have to think this is Clement L. Vallandigham (1820-1871), a lifelong Ohioan who became a congressman in the late 1850s and argued strenuously for States Rights. He was the foremost "Copperhead" (Democrat who favored letting the South leave the Union) -- his opinions were so strong that he was for a time imprisoned, and at another time exiled to the Confederacy. Many "Peace Democrats" simply didn't think it was proper to fight the South, but Vallandingham, by the end, seemed actively pro-Southern; it would be no surprise to find him doing whatever he could to weaken the Union armies. Adding it all up, I suspect that, somewhere behind this song, there is a political text. What, I do not know. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4

File: S0v22n1a

Seven Joys of Mary, The

DESCRIPTION: The carol relates the (five, seven, nine) joys that Mary had: bearing Jesus, raising him, seeing his success and miracles, observing his crucifixion and resurrection, etc.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1833 (Sandys)
The cult of Mary was very old in the Catholic church; Woolf, p. 115, quotes some of the early writers whose works gave rise to the notion -- e.g. Augustine of Hippo wrote, "Eve by her disobedience merited punishment; Mary by obeying obtained glory," while Jerome, translator of the Vulgate that was the Bible of the Latin church wrote, "Death by Eve, life by Mary." What's more, it appears that some aspects of the cult, such as the doctrine of the Immaculate Conception, were largely of English origin and were promoted by Englishmen (Woolf, p. 117). The notion of counting Mary's joys apparently goes back to at least the fourteenth century, and the notion of her joys to the thirteenth (although the term "joys" was not then fixed; BrownXIII, pp. 65-67, has a poem that refers to her "five blisses"). Praising Mary "through an enumeration of her five joys [was] one of the earliest of formalized meditative exercises, and probably the first to be embodied in the Middle English lyric" (Woolf, p. 134). There is a prayer on the Five Joys in the "Ancrene Wisse" -- the rules for anchorages -- of the thirteenth century (Woolf, p. 117). The topic forms a major part of Woolf's book on religious poetry; she has two chapters "On the Virgin and her Joys": pp. 114-158 cover lyrics from the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries; pp. 274-308 deal with those of the fifteenth. Woolf, p. 114, considers lyrics on the Virgin's joys to be one of three major categories of Marian poetry, and calls them "semi-liturgical." Some examples of these pieces: In the metrical tale "How the Psalter of Our Lady Was Made" (first found in MS. Digby 86, dated 1272-1283, and also in the Auchinleck manuscript of c. 1335), a monk was told to pray 150 aves a day; "The first fifty Aves were for joy at the annunciation that she should bear God-in-Man; the second fifty, that she should bear Christ; the third, that she should go to Him for bliss" (Wells, pp.
The fullest collection of poems on Mary's joys known to me is Saupe's; on pp. 137-146, she has six pieces, although many of them clearly had no place in tradition. Ironically, none seems to be linked with this piece, or even to derive from similar sources.

BrownXIV also has several, scattered through the work: #11, pp. 13-14, from MS. Harley 2253, "Ase y me rod is ender day" ("As I me rode this other day," Index of Middle English Verse #359); #31, pp. 44-46, from Göttingen MS. theol. 107 (a manuscript of the Cursor Mundi), "Haile be u, mari maiden bright!" ("Hail to you, Mary maiden bright," Index #1029).

The idea clearly penetrated into popular culture. Robert Thornton, for instance, collected romances and advice and religious works in two great fifteenth century manuscripts, and there are several Joys of Mary references interspersed with the longer works, such as a couplet, "Lady for thy lyoes Fyve, Wyssse me the ways of Rightwyse lyffe" -- "Lady, for your joys five, Teach me the ways of righteous life" (Fein/Johnston, p. 31).

As far as counting the joys goes, in the liturgical poem "Marie Moder, Wel Thee Be!" we find a reference to Mary's "joyes five" (poem known from some fifty texts. For full text see MS. Rawlinson liturgical g.2, the printing as #46 in Stevick-OneHundredMiddleEnglishLyrics, or Carleton Brown, editor, English Lyrics of the XIVth Century, Oxford University Press, 1924, #122, pp. 216-217, "A Prayer by the Five Joys"). From the same manuscript as "Judas" [Child 23] comes a piece beginning "Seinte marie, leuedi brist, Moder ov art of muchel mist" ("Saint Mary, lady bright, Mother thou art of much might") which has five joys (BrownXIII, p. 27). MS. Cotton Caligula A.ii (fifteenth century) has a "Quinque Gaudia" piece with first line "Hey! Glorius virgyne, ground of all our grace, Hey! modere of crist in pure virginite"; see Carleton Brown, editor, Religious Lyrics of the XVth Century, Oxford Press, 1939, #30, pp. 53-54.

In the fifteenth century, there is a carol, "Of a rose, a lively rose. Of a rose I syng a song," which speaks of "five branchis of that rose"; see Greene, #47, pp. 108. Again, the poem "Hail be though, Mary, maiden bright" (Göttingen University MS theol. 107r, folio 169a; cf. Sisam, #82, p. 190) lists five joys. (Saupe, p. 27, suggests this is based on the five letters of the name "MARIA." We see an explicit example of this in Brown, Religious Lyrics of the XVth Century, #30, pp. 55-56, which has sections starting M-A-R-I-A, the first opening "Myldyste of moode & mekyst of maydys alle." The five joys are found in many other places; Greene, p. 221, quotes Brown as saying "English tradition down to the end of the fourteenth century uniformly recognized Five Joys of the Virgin, viz.: the Annunciation, Nativity, Resurrection, Ascension, and [Mary's] Assumption, whereas on the Continent the number of Joys is regularly seven, through the addition of Epiphany and the Purification." (The same list is on p. 179 of BrownXIII.) Wells, p. 536 (entry on "The Five Joys of the Virgin") says that "The Joys vary in number, 5, 7, 8, 12, 15. In Middle English poetry (except in Harley 2253) they are five" (and goes on to list the same five as in Greene and Brown). He then lists eleven poems from the Middle Ages dealing with the Joys of Mary. His exceptional case, Harley 2253, still has five joys, but they are the Annunciation, the Nativity, the Epiphany, the Resurrection, and the Ascension of Mary (not of Jesus). The Harley 2253 text has significant similarities to this poem; after four stanzas of introduction, it introduces the first joy by saying, " e furst ioie of at wymman" ("The first joy of that woman") -- but displays an interesting pattern of calling Mary by different titles: " at o er ioie of at mai" ("that other joy of that may/maid"), " e ridde ioie of at leuedy" ("the third joy of that lady"), etc. Although Middle English texts fixed on five Joys, the variety in number of joys is quite large. Even in the Middle Ages, we see a number of "mentions" of seven joys (BrownXV, #32, #34-36, pp. 56-65, offer "An Orison to Our Lady by the Seven Joys" and "The Seven Joys of the Virgin in Heaven I, II, III"; it's just that the actual joys aren't listed.) Post-medieval traditional texts have numbers as high as twelve, and French Books of Hours reportedly standardized on fifteen (see WEuropeanMSS, p. 100), I suspect the original of most of these songs had about seven -- not five and certainly not more. There are two reasons for this. We know that there were mentions of seven joys at least by the fifteenth century; a stained glass window of the reign of Edward IV (1461-1470 and 1471-1483) mentioned seven joys, although the window has now been destroyed and we do not know details. Mirk's Festial (c. 1400) and Fabyan's Chronicle also have seven joys, although two pieces perhaps by Lydgate and from the fifteenth century mention fifteen (Wells, p. 538; Woolf, p. 139, says that he managed this by pulling in legendary material other English writers avoided). It would be frankly typical of Lydgate to take an old idea and puff it up badly (for Lydgate, who probably holds the world record for droning on, see the notes to "The London Lackpenny").

Another possible origin for the number seven is that there were considered to be seven woes of the Virgin Mary, to match her seven joys; these were mentioned in the Latin hymn "Summae, Deus, clementiae, Septem Dolores Virginia," and eventually even became part of a required canonical office.
The other reason I suspect the original of this song had no more than seven joys is that so many of the joys in the long texts are forced, even unbiblical. Nor do they match the somewhat abstract theological joys listed above. We can demonstrate this point by marching down the joys compiled in Brown and Cox:

One -- To think that her son Jesus Was God's eternal son: Luke 1:15

Two -- Could read the Bible through. Luke 2:46-47 shows Jesus, as a boy, discussing scripture, but it doesn't say he read it. It's likely enough that he could read, though; most Jewish children could, and Luke 4:17fff. shows him reading from Isaiah.

Three -- Could make the blind to see. Repeated references to this; the most primitive is perhaps in Mark 8:22-30.

Four -- Could turn the rich to poor. No known Biblical evidence of this. James 5:1 says "Your riches have rotted," and Jesus has warnings for the rich (e.g. the Wise Fool, Luke 12:16-21), but we don't see Jesus doing anything about it, unless it's a reference to cleansing the Temple (Mark 11:15-17, etc.)

Five -- Could make the dead alive. See, e.g., the raising of Lazarus, John 11.

Six: -- Brown (cf. Cox) "Heal the lame and sick." Numerous examples. But we also see "bear the crucifix," which is complicated. John says he bore his own cross (John 19:17), but the other gospels say Simon of Cyrene bore it (Mark 15:21, etc.)

Seven -- Carried the keys of heaven. Not biblical, and of course the issue of who will be saved is a controversial one. Peter eventually was regarded as having the keys of heaven.

Eight -- Brown: "Make the crooked straight. Cox: "Open the gates of heaven." Obviously an attempt to force an explanation.

Nine -- Turn water to wine. The wedding at Cana, John 2.

Eleven -- Could open the gates of heaven. Haven't we been here before?

Twelve -- Brown: "Came down to earth to dwell." Basic doctrine. Cox: "Done all things well." Allusion to Mark 7:37 or parallel.

It is interesting and difficult to decide how old this song is. The modern form clearly goes back at least to Sandys. That there were medieval songs of joys is also clear. What is tricky is a fifteenth century carol found in Bodleian, MS. Eng. Poet e.1 and reprinted in Greene (#51, pp. 111-112), with a similar text in the Richard Hill manuscript, Bodleian MS. 354, and at least one other.

The burden is Latin ("A, a, a, a, Gaude celi domina"), as are the tags at the ends of the verses ("Tua quinque gaudia," "Ave, plena gracia," "Enixa est puerpera," etc.). The first verse begins, "Mary for the love of the(e)." But then it goes off into a five joys format: "The fyrste joy that came to the, Was whan the aungel greted the(e) And sayd, 'Mary, ful of charyte...." Same song? Hard to tell unless we find some intermediate versions.... I eventually decided that it was significant enough to index, and since I'm not sure it's the same, I've filed it as "Mary for the Love of Thee (Ay, Ay, Ay, Ay)." - RBW

The Bell/O Conchubhair melody is not the one I know but O Conchubhair's notes make the connection. Here the seven joys are (1) That she bore Him in a lowly byre (2) That she travelled with Him along the road (3) That He'd gone by reading His book (4) When he turned the water into wine (5) When He made the dead to live (6) When He redeemed the world with his blood (7) When He raised her to heaven alive. - BS

Bibliography

- BrownXIII: Carleton Brown, editor,English Lyrics of the XIIIth Century, Oxford University Press, 1932 (I use the 1962 reprint)
- BrownXIV: Carleton Brown, editor,English Lyrics of the XIVth Century, Oxford University Press, 1924
- BrownXV: Carleton Brown, editor,Religious Lyrics of the XVth Century, Oxford University Press, 1939
- Saupe: Karen Saupe, editor,Middle English Marian Lyrics, TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, Seven Old Ladies

DESCRIPTION: Seven old ladies, to the tune of "Oh, Dear, What Can the Matter Be," encounter various difficulties in the lavatory.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE:

KEYWORDS: humorous scatological age derivative

FOUND IN: Australia, Britain (England), US (MA, SW)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 119-122, "Seven Old Ladies" (1 text, 1 tune)
- DT, SEVENOLD*

Roud #10227

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Oh, Dear, What Can the Matter Be" (tune & meter)

File: EM119

Seven Virgins, The (The Leaves of Life)

DESCRIPTION: The singer, (Thomas), meets seven virgins, including the Virgin Mary. They are seeking Jesus, who is being crucified. Mary asks Jesus why he must suffer so; Jesus tells her it is for the sake of humanity. He dies. The singer commends God's charity.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1847

KEYWORDS: Bible, Jesus, religious dialog

FOUND IN: Britain (England (West))

REFERENCES (9 citations):
- Leather-FolkLoreOfHerefordshire, pp. 187-188, "The Seven Virgin, or, Under the Leaves" (1 text plus an excerpt, 1 tune)
- Hamer-GarnersGay, p. 57, "Under the Leaves (The Seven Virgins)" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Rickert-AncientEnglishChristmasCarols, pp. 145-146, "All Under the Leaves, and the Leaves of Life" (1 text)
- Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 111, "The Seven Virgins" (1 text)
- Dearmer/VaughnWilliams/Shaw-OxfordBookOfCarols 43, "The Seven Virgins" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 4, "The Seven Virgins" (1 text)
- DT, SVNVRG SVNVRG2

ADDITIONAL: Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #479, "The Seven Virgins" (1 text)
- Roud #127

RECORDINGS:
- May Bradley, "Under the Leaves" (on Voice11)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Tam Lin" [Child 39] (tune)

NOTES [530 words]: The idea behind this song is very old, although the song may be relatively recent in the form we know it. Greene, p. 24 n. 4, observes, "Only here and there can as much as a whole line of modern traditional song be recognized as actually surviving from a medieval carol. One striking example is the second line of the couplet burden of [Greene, The Early English Carols] No. 193, a lament of Mary over her crucified son:
For to se my dere Son dye, and sones have I no mo.
Greene also notes a similar Manx text from 1924.
This line of the song is based on the legend that Mary was a perpetual version; Matthew 13:55 lists Jesus as having brothers James, Joseph, Simon, and Judas; Mark 6:3 lists brothers James, Joses, Judas, and Simon. There are repeated references in Acts to James, the Lord's brother.
InterpretersDict, volume II, p. 791, states, "The relationship between James and Jesus has been much discussed.... NT and early Christian writers refer to James as a 'brother' of Jesus, and the natural interpretation of the language of that period is the literal one, that James was a son of Joseph and Mary, younger than Jesus. Though this view was rejected by most of the ancient church, it is probably correct. Belief in the perpetual virginity of Mary led to the development of the view that Jesus and James were foster brothers," with James being the son of Joseph by a previous marriage.
The details here are generally from the Gospel of John. Only in John is Mary explicitly present at the cross, and John is the only gospel in which Thomas has a speaking role (though he was popular in the Apocryphal Gospels). Jesus's last words ("sweet mother, now I die," or similar) are perhaps closer to the fourth gospel ("it has been finished/completed/perfected," 19:30) than any of the other gospels.
In addition, Jesus's instruction to his mother to take John as her son is found only in the fourth gospel (John 19:26-27, though in fact the disciple involved is not named there; in fact, John is not even mentioned in the fourth gospel, though he is widely believed to be the "beloved disciple" referred to in chapter 19; Brown1, pp. xciii-cii).
One might note that there was a legend, based on a complicated analysis of the names of the women at the foot of the cross in the various gospels, that John and his brother James were Mary's nephews and Jesus's first cousins (Brown2, pp. 904-907; InterpretersDict, Volume II, p. 791, etc). Some versions contain a line, "Oh the rose, the gentle rose, The fennel it grows so strong...." Binney, p. 107, reports that "The seeds of fennel, dill, and caraway... all contain natural oils that help soothe spasms in the intestine.... Bitter fennel (Foeniculum vulgare), whose seeds taste rather like celery, was considered sacred by the Greeks. They believes that the Titan Prometheus had hidden fire in the hollow stalks of the fennel plant in order to steal it from the gods and bring it to humans."
Another possibly origin for the number seven is that there were considered to be seven woes of the Virgin Mary, to match her seven joys; these were mentioned in the Latin hymn "Summae, Deus, clementiae, Septem Dolores Virginia." - RBW

Bibliography

- InterpretersDict: [George Arthur Buttrick et al, editor], The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible, four volumes, 1962 (a fifth supplementary volume was published later)

Last updated in version 5.0
File: OB111

Seven Years in Dublin

DESCRIPTION: "My parents reared me tenderly I being their only heir, I lived with my grandmother, Of me she took great care, Seven years in Dublin I was taught in the academy, My learning might have served a knight Or a lord of high degree"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick)
KEYWORDS: home
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
Seven Years O'er Young

DESCRIPTION: "'Twas in between twa bonnie woods and valleys Where I and my love aye met so rare" that the man asks the singer if she will wed. She says she is "seven years o'er young to wed." But he finally lures her into his arms, then says he has another love

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1816-1818 (Alexander Campbell's _Albyn's Anthology_, according to Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #131)
KEYWORDS: courting sex abandonment
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #131, pp. 1-2, "Two Years Owre Young"; #135, p. 2, "Touch Not the Nettle" (2 texts plus 2 fragments)
Greig/Duncan6 1187, "Two Years Owre Young" (4 texts, 1 tune)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 170-171, "Seven Years O'er Young" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #380
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Pretty Little Miss" [Laws P18] (plot)
NOTES [123 words]: This is a bit of a problem song. Roud lumps it with "Pretty Little Miss" [Laws P18]. I have to wonder if MacColl and Seeger's "Too Young" might not also be this. This song has effectively the same plot as Laws P18, but no similarity in lyrics. Laws, however, admits that P18 is textually unstable.
The only additional point is that Laws does not cite this song with P18 (or anything else, e.g. P19, "Tripping o'er the Lea," which also has some contact with this song). On that basis, I split them -- but it's a very uncertain question, and readers probably need to study the matter carefully. - RBW
Greig: "As regards the age of the original song, it has to be noted that, nearly a hundred years ago, Hogg considered it to be very old." - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: 0rd170

Seventeen Come Sunday [Laws O17]

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets a pretty young girl. He gets acquainted by asking questions: "What are you doing?" "Where do you live?" "How old are you?" "May I visit you tonight?" She agrees to the meeting; they have their fun despite her mother's opposition

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1790 (Burns's "A Waukrife Minnie" in _The Scots Musical Museum_)
KEYWORDS: questions courting nightvisit
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,Ro,SE,So) Canada(Mar,Newf) Britain(England(All),Scotland) Ireland
REFERENCES (39 citations):
Laws O17, "Seventeen Come Sunday"
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 74, "My Pretty Maid" (2 texts)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 52, "Hi Rinky Dum" (1 text, 1 tune, much worn down; there is no nightvisit, and the two mutually decide against marriage)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 11, "Where Are You Going, My Pretty Maid" (2 texts, both very short)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 99, "My Pretty Little Miss" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 210-211, "My Pretty Little Miss" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #74, "One Sunday Morning" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 106, "How Old Are You, My Pretty Little Miss?" (1 text, 1 tune -- Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 128, "Where Are You Going, My Pretty Fair Maid?" (1 text, 1 tune)

Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 164-165, "I'm Scarce Sixteen Come Sunday" (1 text plus 2 fragments, 1 tune)

Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 32, "I'm Seventeen Come Sunday" (1 text, 1 tune)

Peacock, pp. 284-286, "I'll Be Seventeen Come Sunday" (2 texts, 2 tunes)

Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 127, "I'm Seventeen Come Sunday" (4 texts, 4 tunes)

Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 61, "I'm Seventeen Come Sunday" (1 text, 1 tune)

Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 52, "Seventeen Come Sunday" (1 text, 1 tune)

Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople 44, "I'm Seventeen Come Sunday" (1 text)

Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 117, "Seventeen Come Sunday" (2 texts)

Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 42, "Seventeen Come Sunday" (1 text plus a Cornish translation, 1 tune)

Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #77, "Seventeen Come Sunday" (1 text, 1 tune)

OShaughnessy/Grainger-TwentyOneLincolnshireFolkSongs 11, "I'm Seventeen Come Sunday" (1 text, 1 tune)

Hamer-GreenGroves, pp. 75-76, "Seventeen Come Sunday" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #37, "Seventeen Come Sunday" (1 text, 1 tune)

Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H152, pp. 266-267, "I'm Seventeen 'gin Sunday"; H793, pp. 267-268, "As I Gaed ower a Whinny Knowe";(2 texts, 2 tunes)

Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 181, "The Weil Payt't Dochter" (1 text)

Graham-Joe-Holmes-SongsMusicTraditionsOfAnUlsterman 68, "Seventeen Come Sunday" (1 text, 1 tune)

Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 99-102, "My Rolling Eye" (1 text, 1 tune)

Williams-Wiltshire-WVIRGINIA-A, #25, pp. 99-100, "The Modesty Answer" (1 text, 1 tune, in which the girl asks her mother if she may marry, is refused, and decides to run away to North Carolina and eat cream and honey!)

Greig/Duncan4 791, "The Soldier Lad" (14 texts, 12 tunes)

Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 181, "The Weil Payt't Dochter" (1 text)

MacColl/Seeger-TravellersSongsFromEnglandAndScotland 44, "Seventeen Come Sunday" (1 text, 1 tune)

Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 99-102, "My Rolling Eye" (1 text, 1 tune)

Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 697, "Rudam Day" (1 text)

Butterworth/Dawney-PloughboysGlory, p. 6, "As I Roamed Out" (1 text, 1 tune, listed by Dawney as "The Banks of Sweet Primroses" although the surviving text is quite close to the "As I Roved Out" versions of "Seventeen Come Sunday" [Laws O17]; Butterworth expurgated several verses which might have clarified the origin)

Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 128-129, "Seventeen Come Sunday"; "When Cockle Shells Make Silver Bells" (1 text plus a fragment)

DT 334, YONHIGH* ROCKYMT (TROOPRM2* -- apparently a cross between this piece and Child 299)

Maud Karpeles, _Folk Songs of Europe_, Oak, 1956, 1964, p. 45, "Seventeen Come Sunday" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #277

RECORDINGS:

Harry Cox, "Seventeen Come Sunday" (on HCOx01)

Mary Delaney, "New Ross Town" (on IRTravellers01)

Seamus Ennis, "As I Roved Out" (on FSB01)

Bob Hart, "Seventeen Come Sunday" (on Voice10)

Joe Heaney, "Who Are You, My Pretty Fair Maid" (on Voice01)

Howard Morry, "I'll Be Seventeen Come Sunday" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]

Ken Peacock, "I'll be Seventeen Come Sunday" (on NFKPeacock)

Jean Ritchie & Doc Watson, "Where Are You Going?" (on RitchieWatson1, RitchieWatsonCD1)

Tony Wales, "Seventeen Come Sunday" (on TWales1)
Sewing Machine, The

DESCRIPTION: A soldier visits "the Heidelberg whore." He has sex with her, that is, he sews on her "sewing machine," and ends up cursing her for giving him "the clap and the blue-balls too."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: Prob. 1940s (recording by unknown artist) but may be earlier

KEYWORDS: bawdy disease curse soldier

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 406-407, "The Sewing Machine" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10406

RECORDINGS:
Unknown artist, "The Sewing Machine" (Party Platters 332a, n.d.)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Fire Ship" (plot) and references there
cf. "Charlotte the Harlot I, II, III, IV"

NOTES [66 words]: The reference to the Heidelberg whore suggests this song or version dates from the post World War II occupation of Germany. [It was] probably inspired by "Charlotte the Harlot." - EC

I'm not sure about placing this song during the occupation of Germany. The [Party Platters] record cited above doesn't mention the Heidelberg Whore, and it may be prewar. It'd be good to have a
Sexual Life of the Camel, The

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1960

KEYWORDS: bawdy humorous animal homosexuality

FOUND IN: Australia Britain(England) US(MW,SW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 243-245, "The Sexual Life of the Camel" (2 texts, 1 tune)

Roud #10122

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Turalai" (subject of camel life)

File: EM243

Sgeir-Mhara, An (The Sea-Tangle, The Jealous Woman)

DESCRIPTION: Scots Gaelic. A woman weaves a tangle of gold to bind another by the water. The bound woman awakes to find herself in danger of drowning. She begs for pity, but finds none, for her or her babes; the other will sleep with her man that night

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Kennedy-Fraser/MacLeod-SongsOfTheHebrides)

KEYWORDS: jealousy homicide drowning children foreignlanguage

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Hebr))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 3, "A Bhean Iadach (The Jealous Woman)" (1 text+English translation, 1 tune)

Kennedy-Fraser/MacLeod-SongsOfTheHebrides II, pp. 55-63, "The Sea-Tangle, or, The Sisters (An Sgeir-Mhara)" (1 text+English translation, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Twa Sisters [Child #10]" (plot)

NOTES [98 words]: The Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland and Kennedy-Fraser/MacLeod-SongsOfTheHebrides texts between them parallel almost the entire plot of "The Twa Sisters": Kennedy's text is the exchange between the jealous sisters, while Kennedy-Fraser/MacLeod-SongsOfTheHebrides is a tale of the murder attempt. The two have only slight overlap, but it seems clear they are fragments of a longer item.

If the references in Kennedy are to be believed (and they often aren't), this must be one of the most popular songs in the Hebrides; he lists fifteen versions from as far afield as Nova Scotia. - RBW

File: K003

Sh-Ta-Ra-Dah-Dey (Snagging the Klacking)

DESCRIPTION: "Sh-ta-ra-dah-dey, sh-ta-dey, Times is mighty hard. A dollar a day is all they pay For work on the boulevard." Alternately, "Hip-fa-lad-di-dee/Graybacks/Are mighty thick/A dollar a day/Is all they pay/For snaggin'/The Klacking Creek."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)

KEYWORDS: work lullaby hardtimes lumbering nonballad logger worksong

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 36-37, "Sh-Ta-Ra-Dah-Dey" (1 short text, 1 tune)

Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 23, "Snaggin' the Klacking" (1 short text)

Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, p. 42, "Snaggin' the Klackin'" (1 short text)

Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 17, "Snaggin' the Klackin') (1 short text)
Roud #6515 and 8861
NOTES [85 words]: While Beck gives no information about the circumstances under which the song was sung, it sounds enough like a worksong that I've given it that keyword. - PJS
Whereas Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag lists his as a lullaby. I can't prove that these two are the same song -- but they're too similar to separate until fuller versions come along. Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan doesn't give a context, either, but he does describe snagging as one of the tasks of the logger, hinting that this is at least a song about work. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: San036

Shabby Genteel
DESCRIPTION: "Too proud to beg, too honest to steal, I know what it is to be wanting a meal, My tatters and rags I try to conceal, I'm one of the shabby genteel." The singer has seen better days and warns that bad fortune "may reduce one of you in the very same way"
AUTHOR: Harry Clifton (source: broadside, Bodleian Bod131779 Harding B 11(3459))
EARLIEST DATE: before 1867 (broadside, Bodleian Bod131777 Harding B 11(3459)); in tradition, 1951 (MUNFLA-Leach)
KEYWORDS: poverty virtue warning clothes food hardtimes nonballad
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
Roud #22504
RECORDINGS:
Leo Martin, "The Shabby Genteel" (on MUNFLA-Leach)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Bod13177 Harding B 11(3459), "Shabby Genteel" ("We have heard it asserted a dozen times o'er), J. Harkness (Preston), 1840-1866; also Bod18255 Firth b.27(122), Bod13176 Harding B 11(3458), "Shabby Genteel"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Poor, But a Gentleman Still" (subject)
NOTES [69 words]: There was a whole movement, in the nineteenth century, of "shabby genteel" songs. Presumably this was one of the first, if not the first; Sigmund Spaeth, A History of Popular Music in America, Random House, 1948, p. 173, says that the song belonged to "ht same school [of what Spaeth calls 'silly-ass character studies in the English manner'], with a rather individual attempt at combining a smile with a tear." - RBW
Last updated in version 4.4
File: ML3ShaGe

Shack Bully Holler
DESCRIPTION: "Raise up, boys, raise up -- Breakfas' on de table an a coffee's gittin' col'." Bits and pieces of life in a levee camp: Poor food, not enough sleep, hard work, hard-driving White bosses. Much of the piece is recited rather than sung
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934
KEYWORDS: work food hardtimes nonballad recitation
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 45-46, "Shack Bully Holler" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #15531
File: LxA045

Shad, The
DESCRIPTION: Fragment: "Bait a hook to catch a shad/The first thing he bit was my old Dad/Pulled her away with all my might/Trying for to get the old man out/Fishpole broke and I got mad/Down to the bottom went old Dad"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1918 (Cecil Sharp collection)
KEYWORDS: age fishing death drowning animal father
Shadow of the Pines

DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls walking with his love in the shadow of the pines. But "some hasty words were spoken...." and she departed in anger. Now he awakens from his dreams calling her name, and hopes that she will forgive him.

AUTHOR: Hattie Lummis (pseud. for Luvena Buchanan) & G. O. Lang

EARLIEST DATE: 1895

KEYWORDS: love separation loneliness

FIND IN: US(SE,So) Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- McNeil-SouthernFolkBalladsVol1, pp. 135-136, "Shadow of the Pines" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 694, "In the Shadow of the Pines"; 695, "In the Shadow of the Pines" (1 text plus an excerpt, 2 tunes)
- Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 99, "In the Shadow of the Pines" (2 texts plus mention of 4 more, 1 tune)
- Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 197-200, "In the Shadows of the Pines" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #4289

RECORDINGS:
- [Vernon] Archibald & [Royal] Fish, "In the Shadow of the Pines" (CYL: Edison [BA] 2073, 1913; on Protobilly)
- Gene Autry, "'In the Shadow of the Pine" (Gennett 7265/Champion 16050Supertone 9704, 1930; Melotone [Canada] 45071/Champion 45071, c. 1935; Montgomery Ward M-4933, 1936; Decca 5464, 1937; Rex [UK] 9457, 1939)
- Archibald & Fish, "In the Shadow of the Pines" (CYL: Edison [BA] 2073, n.d.)
- Carter Family, "In the Shadow of the Pines" (Decca 5539, 1938; Montgomery Ward 8003, 1939; rec. 1936)
- Texas Gladden, "In the Shadow of the Pines" (on USTGladden01)
- [Byron] Harlan & [Frank] Stanley, "In the Shadow of the Pines" (Columbia 258, 1901)
- Kelly Harrell, "In the Shadow of the Pine" (Victor 20657, 1927; on KHarrell02, Protobilly)
- Carl Harris, "In the Shadow of the Pine" (Challenge 229, 1927)
- Herb Jennings, "In the Shadow of the Pine" (Champion 15209, 1927)
- Earl Johnson & his Dixie Entertainers [or Dixie Clodhoppers], "In the Shadow of the Pine" (OKeh 45192, 1928; rec. 1927)
- Buell Kazee, "In the Shadow of the Pines" (Brunswick 216/Vocalion 5221, 1928)
- M. O. [Murray?] Keller, "In the Shadow of a Pine" (Brunswick 188, 1927)
- Mike Kent, "Shadows of the Pines" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
- Bascom Lamar Lunsford, "In the Shadow of the Pines" (on BLLunsford01)
- Fiddlin' Doc Roberts Trio, "In the Shadow of the Pines" (Silvertone 5006 [possibly as Dock Roberts, his real name]/Challenge 229 [as Carl Harris]/Champion 15209 [as Billy Jorday]/Gennett 6025, 1927; Supertone 9252, 1928; rec. 1926) (Conqueror 8208, 1933; Conqueror 8566, 1935)
- Connie Sides, "In the Shadow of the Pine" (Columbia 15009-D, rec. 1924)
- Ernest Stoneman, "In the Shadow of the Pine" (OKeh 45048, 1926) (Pathé 32380/Perfect 12459, 1928)

NOTES [78 words]: The liner notes to the Kelly Harrell album mention "somebody's happy idea of having Harrell sing the last line of the chorus out of tempo." This seems, however, to be a traditional approach to the song -- Lunsford also breaks the tempo, although in a different way. - RBW

Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports writes, "'In the Shadow of the Pines' had certainly arrived in Newfoundland by the late 1890s, likely through the availability of sheet music." - BS

Shady Brookside

DESCRIPTION: Singer recalls "a parting long ago" when his little sister died. They used to roam by "the shady brookside where the water lilies grow" Now he is leaving his parents and siblings.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)

KEYWORDS: farewell home parting separation travel death nonballad brother father mother sister

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

Roud #18237

RECORDINGS:

* Vince Ledwell, "Shady Brookside" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

Shady Grove

DESCRIPTION: The singer talks about courting (in) Shady Grove. There is no particular plot. A typical chorus runs, "Shady Grove my little love, Shady Grove I say, Shady Grove my little love, I'm bound to go away." Shady Grove may be a place or a girl's name

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (Cecil Sharp collection); +1893 (JAFL6)

KEYWORDS: courting love nonballad

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE,SW)

REFERENCES (15 citations):

- Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 57, "Betty Anne" (1 text, 1 tune -- an odd version which seems to have some foreign elements mixed in, and with the tune moved from minor to Mixolydian)
- Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 120, "Shady Grove" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 485, "Shady Grove" (2 texts, neither much like the standard version of this song, but even less like anything else); also 97, "Uncle Joe Cut Off His Toe" (3 texts plus mention of 2 more, but "B" is probably "Shady Grove"; "A" is an incredible mix with verses typical of "Raccoon," "If I Had a Scolding Wife," a "Liza Jane" song, a mule song, and "Shady Grove"); also 111, "Wish I Had a Needle and Thread" (7 text, of which only "E" is really substantial; it is certainly the "Italy" version of "Going Across the Sea." The other fragments contain verses typical of "Shady Grove," "Old Joe Clark," and others); also 286, "Fly Around, My Blue-Eyed Girl" (4 texts; "A"-"C" are "Fly Around, My Pretty Little Miss," but the "D" text is mostly "Shady Grove")
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 485, "Shady Grove" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
- Ritchie-SingingFamilyOfTheCumberlands, pp. 46-47, "Shady Grove" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Ritchie-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 37, "Shady Grove" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, pp. 5-6, "Shady Grove" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Randolph 358, "Now I Am a Big Boy" (2 texts, both fragments; the "A" text is associated with this ballad, though -- as only a single verse -- it could go anywhere)
- Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 88, "Betty Anne" (1 text, 1 tune, with lyrics from "Shady Grove," "Fly Around, My Pretty Little Miss" and "Going Across the Sea")
- Bush-FolkCentralWestVirginiaVol1, p. 10, "Shady Grove" (1 composite text, 1 tune)
- Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, p. 175, "Shady Grove" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, pp. 138-139, "Shady Grove" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 195, "Shady Grove" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 152, "Shady Grove" (1 text)
- DT, BETTYANN* SHADYGRV*
- Roud #4456

RECORDINGS:

* Garrett & Norah Arwood, "Shady Grove" (on OldTrad2, FarMtns3)
* Clarence Ashley & New River Jack Burchett, "Shady Grove" (on Ashley03, WatsonAshley01)
Rufus Crisp, "Shady Grove" (on Crisp01)
Goldie Hamilton, "Shady Grove" (AAFS 2787 A2)
Kentucky Thorobreds, "Shady Grove" (Paramount 3080, 1928; Broadway 8184 [as Old Smokey Twins], n.d.; rec. 1927)
J. M. Mullins, "Shady Grove" (AAFS 1566 A)
Dellie Norton, "Little Betty Ann" (on FarMtns4)
J. W. Russell, "Shady Grove" (AAFS 3162 B1)
Kilby Snow, "Shady Grove" (on KSnow1)
Pete Steele, "Shady Grove" (on PSTeele01)
The Virginia Dandies [alternate name for Walter "Kid" Smith & The Carolina Buddies], "Shady Grove" (Crown, unissued, 1931)
Vernie Westfall, "Shady Grove" (AAFS 4118 B1)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Black-Eyed Susie (Green Corn)" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Going Across the Sea" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Kansas Cyclone" (tune)
cf. "Don't Get Trouble in Your Mind" (floating phrase)
cf. "Pig at Home in the Pen" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Mary from Dungloe" (floating verse)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Little Betty Ann

File: SKE57

Shady Road to Clane, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer describes an idyllic spot on "the shady road from Bodenstown to Clane." He meets a beautiful maid who asks "is this the shady road to Clane?" He assures her it is. She leaves. He is dejected. He must find "the maid that stole my heart"

AUTHOR: John Ennis (see NOTES)
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Chicago IL Inter Ocean; see NOTES)
KEYWORDS: love beauty separation
FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 77, "The Shady Road to Clane" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9769

NOTES [256 words]: OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads lists this as by "John Dennis," but this appears to be an error of hearing for John Ennis. Nick Whitmer send me this newspaper excerpt which gives background on the song:
The Revival of Erin's Language and Music in Chicago.
By John Ennis.
'Ballads Written by Chieagoans
"The Irish Music club is taking a practical and effective method of reviving and popularizing the old forgotten melodies by writing words to them after the style of the old time Irish ballads. The first of the songs to be published, and which will be out in a few days is 'The Shady Road to Clane.' The words have the ring of the once popular Irish love song. The music, which is a typically rich Irish melody and a delightful waltz, was arranged by Mr. Francis Murnihan, the official scribe of the club."

Mr. Whitmer tells me that the above comes from the Chicago, IL Inter Ocean, June 11, 1905, Magazine p. 2 column 1, and that eight verses of the text follow, meaning that this version is slightly fuller than the seven stanzas in OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads.

Mr. Whitmer has compiled a short biography of Ennis; it can be found at http://livesofthepipers.com/2ennisjohn.html. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: OLCm077
Shady Woods of Trugh, The

DESCRIPTION: Before joining Owen Roe O'Neill to fight the English, M'Kenna rides from "the Shady Woods of Trugh" to bid farewell -- in case he were killed -- to Maureen McMahon at Glaslough castle. After the battle on Benburb's plains they are married.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster)
KEYWORDS: love marriage battle Ireland patriotic war reunion
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster 35, "The Shady Woods of Trugh" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2911
NOTES [124 words]: Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster: "Trugh was one of the Baronies of Monaghan.... The McMahons and the M'Kennas are two of the leading families in the area.... Major John M'Kenna, perhaps the M'Kenna of our song, lost his life in 1689; his being the first blood of the Williamite campaign."
Owen Roe O'Neill defeated the Ulster Puritan commander Munroe at Benburb in the Spring of 1646 (source: "Owen Roe O'Neill - The Cavan Connection" by Jim Hannon at the Cornafean Online site). I assume that's the battle of this ballad. - BS
I think it must be, since, first, it does not seem to have been a disaster for the Irish, and second, there were no other memorable battles there. For more on Owen Roe O'Neill, see the notes to "General Owen Roe." - RBW
File: MorU035

Shake 'Em on Down

DESCRIPTION: "Get your nightcap, mama, and your gown, Baby, 'fore day we gonna shake 'em on down." "Too much of jelly to be throwed away." "I ain't been to Georgia, but I been told, Georgia women got the best jelly roll." "I done stopped holler'n. Must I shake...."

AUTHOR: Booker T. Washington "Bukka" White
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (copyright, according to Burton-TennesseeTraditionalSingers)
KEYWORDS: sex drink nonballad floatingverses bawdy
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Burton-TennesseeTraditionalSingers, p. 173, "Shake 'Em on Down" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Bukka White, "Shake Em On Down" (Vocalion 03711, Conqueror 9072, Columbia 30139, 1937)
File: BTN173

Shake Hands with Mother Again

DESCRIPTION: "Now, if I would be a-living when Jesus comes, And know the day and the hour, I'd like to be a-standing at mother's tomb...." The singer hopes Jesus will tell him to "shake hands with mother again"; he will tell her that of his life and never again part

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (recording, Asher Sizemore & Little Jimmie)
KEYWORDS: religious death nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
Roud #5741
RECORDINGS:
Happy Valley Family, "Shake Hands With Mother Again" (Perfect 6-03-54, 1936)
J. E. Mainer's Mountaineers, "Shake Hands With Mother Again" (Bluebird B-6596, 1936)
Frank Proffitt, "Shake Hands with Mother Again" (on FProffitt01)
Asher Sizemore & Little Jimmie, "Shake Hands with Mother Again" (Bluebird B-5568, 1934)
File: RcSHWMAg

Shake Hands, Mary

DESCRIPTION: "Shake hands, Mary, dum-a-la-lum" (x2). (Chorus:) "Lum, lum, lum, lum, lum, dum-a-la-
Shake It If You Can

DESCRIPTION: "Going to Kentucky Going to the fair." "Met a senorita with flowers in her hair." "Shake it if you can" so the boys will follow. Instructions to "rhumba" and "shake it all around"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (JohnsIsland1)
KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad flowers
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Mabel Hillery, Janie Hunter and her grandchildren, "Shake It If You Can" (on JohnsIsland1)

Shaker Funeral Hymn

DESCRIPTION: "Our brother's gone, he is no more, He's quit our coast, he's left our shore, He's burst the bonds of mortal clay, The spirit's fled and soars away." All alike are told to be prepared; the righteous will triumph over death

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1822 (George DeWitt Hymnal, according to Andrews)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad death
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 38, "Shaker Funeral Hymn" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Edward Deming Andrews, _The Gift to be Simple: Songs, Dances and Rituals of the American Shakers_, 1940 (references are to the 1962 Dover reprint), p. 102, "Funeral Hymn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6670
NOTES [303 words]: The song's final reference to the sting of death and the victory of the grave is a reference to 1 Corinthians 15:55 (itself citing Hosea 13:14 as it occurs in the Greek Old Testament).
The citation exactly matches the King James Version of 1 Corinthians -- which, however, is translated from an inferior Greek text. The earliest Greek manuscripts read "Where, O death, is your victory; where, O death, is your sting"; another important group reads "Where, O death, is your sting, where, O Hades [i.e. "grave"], is your victory"; still a third has "Where, O death, is your sting; where, O death, is your victory."
If anyone actually cares about these things, the reading victory... death... sting is supported by P46 [second or third century], by the great fourth century Vatican manuscript B, by the first hand of the fourth century Sinai manuscript , by C of the fifth century, and by the first hand of the major manuscript 1739, as well as many Latin texts; the so-called "Western" manuscripts D F G, from the sixth century and after, read sting... death.... victory; several interesting manuscripts of the ninth and tenth centuries, with the symbols 0121 0243 33 and the second hand of 1739, read victory... hades... sting; the King James reading sting... hades... victory is read by probably at least 90% of all manuscripts, but the earliest appear to be the seventh century correctors of the Sinai and Alexandrian manuscripts, which are regarded as being of little value.
The Greek of Hosea reads something like Where, O death, is your punishment (Greek , dik-e; "victory" is , nik-e), Where, O Hades, is your sting. This is not too far from the Hebrew, which is very difficult (several editors emend it) but seems to mean something like Where, O Death, are your plagues, Where, O Sheol, your ravages. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: LoF038
Shall Dorr Be Freed

DESCRIPTION: "Oh say shall the victim remain in his thrall, For maintaining a post which a people has given?" The song calls for the "liberation" of [Thomas Wilson] Dorr, asking Governor Jackson and the legislature for justice.

AUTHOR: "E. H. H."

EARLIEST DATE: 1992 (DeSimone & Schofield, The Broadsides of the Dorr Rebellion); probably written 1845

KEYWORDS: political prison

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1842 - the Dorr Rebellion. Thomas Wilson Dorr leads a revolt trying to broaden the franchise in Rhode Island

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 68-70, "Shall Dorr Be Freed" (1 text plus a broadside print)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Star-Spangled Banner" (tune) and references there (including Same Tune references)

File: CAFS1068

Shall I Die?

DESCRIPTION: "Believer, O shall I die? O my army, shall I die?" "Jesus die, shall I die? Die upon the cross, shall I die?" "Die, die, die, shall I die? Jesus da coming..." "Run for to meet him... Weep like a weeper..." "Mourn like a mourner... Cry like a crier..."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)

KEYWORDS: religious Jesus death

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 41, "Shall I Die?" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #11994

File: AWG041A

Shall I Show You How the Farmer

DESCRIPTION: "Shall I show you how the farmer (x3) Sows his barley and wheat?" "It is so, so, that the farmer... Sows his barley and wheat." "Shall I show you how the farmer... Hoes his barley and wheat?" "Shall I show... Now will dance and be gay?"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1864 (Mann and Peabody)

KEYWORDS: nonballad farming playparty food

FOUND IN: US(MA,NE)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 50-51, "Shall I Show You How the Farmer" (1 text, 1 tune)

Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 70, "The Peasant" (1 text, 1 tune)

Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, pp. 96-98, "Willst du weizen? (Do You Want to Know?)" (1 German text plus non-poetic English translation, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: Mrs Horace Mann and Elizabeth P. Peabody, Moral Culture of Infancy (Boston, 1864 ("Digitized by Google")), #7 p. 4, "The Peasant" (1 text, 1 tune)

J.P. McCaskey, Franklin Square Song Collection No. 1 (New York, 1881 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 20, "The Farmer" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST Lins050 (Partial)

Roud #12865

NOTES [107 words]: The "peasant" version, which I have lumped with the "farmer" version, seems just to replace "farmer" with "peasant." For example, "Would you know how does the peasant, (3x) Sow his barley and wheat?" "Look, 'tis so, so does the peasant, (3x) Sow his barley and wheat." (Mann and Peabody) - BS

I would guess the change went the other way; "farmer" sounds like a much more high-class occupation than "peasant." But the relationship seems clear. I am not sure that Korson's Pennsylvania Dutch song is actually the same as the English song; the idea is so easy that it could well have arisen independently. But it's not worth a separate listing. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.2
File: Lins050

Shall My Soul Pass Through Ireland

DESCRIPTION: "In a dreary British prison where an Irish rebel lay, By his side a priest waits... 'Father, tell me if I die shall my soul pass through Ireland?" The rebel dies for Irish freedom; the singer asks that his prayer be granted

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (recording, The McNulty Family)

KEYWORDS: Ireland rebellion death prison

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Galvin-IrishSongsOfResistance, p. 67, "Terence McSwiney" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, SOULPASS

RECORDINGS:
Omar Blondahl, "Shall My Soul Pass Through Ireland" (on NFOBlondahl03)
The McNulty Family, "Shall My Soul Pass Through Ireland" (Decca 12154, 1938)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Kevin Barry" (tune)

NOTES [442 words]: Galvin reports this piece under the name "Terence McSwiney," connecting it with a Lord Mayor of Cork (properly Terence MacSwiney) who resisted British rule (more or less; he was found to be carrying notes for an anti-British speech), was imprisoned in London, and died after a 73-day hunger strike (1920). It should be added that the British were right about his opposition to British rule: MacSwiney was a senior officer in the Volunteers (second in command in Cork, according to Tim Pat Coogan, Michael Collins, p. 122), and that he did not win election in Cork as such. Rather, his superior Tomas MacCurtain was elected Mayor in the great Sinn Fein election of January 1920. MacSwiney was appointed his deputy, and succeeded when MacCurtain was shot. MacSwiney's slow death was part of a movement of hunger strikers, of whom McSwiney was the most notable but perhaps not the one who was making the greatest sacrifice; according to Calton Younger, Ireland's Civil War, p. 116, he also had tuberculosis -- and died in a hospital ward, not a prison, where he was treated with great care. The British had originally tried force feeding the prisoners (which at the time meant pouring milk and beaten eggs down a tube forcibly inserted into the throat via the mouth or, if the prisoner would not open his mouth, the nostrils). Even in the hands of a good doctor, this inevitably resulted in bruising of the nose, mouth, and throat, and in the hands of an incompetent, the results could be disastrous. Another hunger striker, Thomas Ashe, had died of the effects of force feeding (see Robert Kee, Ourselves Alone, being volume III of The Green Flag, pp. 33-34). This caused a commission to declare force feeding barbaric; as a result, the British stopped using it, and hunger strikers started dying of hunger instead. It is not impossible that the song is about MacSwiney, but supporting evidence is lacking. See also the notes on "The Boys from County Cork."

This is listed in at least one place as by "AE" (with no space). - RBW

Blondahl03 has no liner notes confirming that this song was collected in Newfoundland. Barring another report for Newfoundland I do not assume it has been found there. There is no entry for "Shall My Soul Pass Through Ireland" in Newfoundland Songs and Ballads in Print 1842-1974 A Title and First-Line Index by Paul Mercer. Blondahl might have learned his version from the McNulty Family recording. The McNultys were popular in Newfoundland at the time Blondahl was there, and their records were available in St. John's (see Anne Kearney Guigné, The Forgotten Songs of the Newfoundland Outports, pp. 266-268). - BS

Last updated in version 4.2
File: PGa067
Shall We Gather at the River

DESCRIPTION: "Shall we gather at the river, Where bright angel feet have trod... Yes, we'll gather at the river, the beautiful, the beautiful river... That flows by the throne of God." A description of the happy life after death in the land of God

AUTHOR: Robert Lowry

EARLIEST DATE: 1865 (Lowry & Doan, _Happy Voices_, according to Reynolds)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Jackson-PopularSongsOfNineteenthCenturyAmerica, pp. 26-29, "Beautiful River" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 297, "Shall We Gather at the River" (1 text, 1 tune)
Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 146-148, "Shall We Gather at the River" (1 text)

DT, GATHRIVR*

RECORDINGS:
Alcoa Quartet, "Shall We Gather at the River" (Columbia 15022-D, 1925)
Chuck Wagon Gang, "Shall We Gather at the River" (Columbia 20630, 1949)
Kanawha Singers, "Shall We Gather at the River" (Brunswick 328, 1929)
Uncle Dave Macon, "Shall We Gather at the River" (Vocalion 5162, 1927)
Mr. & Mrs. Douglas Swagerty, "Shall We Gather at the River?" (OKeh 40216, 1924)

NOTES [182 words]: Reverend Robert Lowry (1826-1899) wrote this piece (which he titled 'Beautiful River") on a hot day in 1864. Although it is perhaps the most popular item Lowry ever produced, it is reported that he was not fond of it. Lowry was also responsible for "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight" and "How Can I Keep from Singing"; for more on him, see the notes to the latter.

William Reynolds, _Companion to Baptist Hymnal_, Broadman Press, 1976, p. 192, describes how Lowry came to write the piece: One day in July 1864, the weather was almost unbearably hot, and Lowry was feeling exhausted by the heat. He had what sounds like a fever dream of cool, clear water. Then he thought of the call-and-response "Shall we gather?" and "Yes, we'll gather," and gradually the elements came together.

The tune is sometimes known as "Hanson Place," after Hanson Place Baptist Church, where Lowry was pastor (Reynolds, p. 193)

Aaron Copland would eventually include this in his Old American Songs.

The original arrangement was by one E. Mack, and it is perhaps responsible for much of the piece's popularity. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: RJ19026

Shallo Brown (Shallow Brown)

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Characteristic line: "Shallo, Shallo Brown." The sailor admits that he is leaving, and regrets being parted from his wife and baby. In some versions he may be a slave sold for the "Yankee Dollar"; in others, he is a whaler going about his work.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1882

KEYWORDS: shanty separation family slave

FOUND IN: US(MA,SE) Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (9 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, p. 44, "Shallo Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 61, "Shallo Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
Harlow-CharityingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 126-127, "Shallow Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 257-260, Shallow Brown (4 texts, 4 tunes) [AbEd, pp. 188-191]

Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, p. 22, "Shiloh Brown" (1 text)

Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSealslands 55, pp. 218-219, "Shilo Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)

"Shallow Brown" is in Part 3, 7/28/1917.
Roud #2621
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Hullabaloo Belay" (character)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Challo Brown
NOTES [26 words]: According to Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, the name "Challo" used in some versions is "a West Indian word of Carib extraction meaning a 'half-caste.'" - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Doe044

Shallow Brown (II)
DESCRIPTION: Has the refrain of "Shallo Brown" but the solo text is taken from "Blow, Boys, Blow (I)" and the tune is the same as "Hilo, Boys, Hilo." The meter alternates from 3/4 to 2/4 throughout.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys)
KEYWORDS: shanty sailor
FOUND IN: Britain US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 257, Shallow Brown (1 text, 1 tune - quoted from Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys) [AbEd, p. 187]
Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, XXX, p. 35, "Shallow Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Blow, Boys, Blow (I)" (text)
cf. "Hilo, Boys, Hilo" (tune)
NOTES [46 words]: Though it has the same title, this is so drastically different from "Shallo Brown" that I thought it warranted a separate entry. - SL
Entirely agreed. If it matters, this is what The Boarding Party called "Fast Shallow," to distinguish it from the more common "Slow Shallow." - RBW
File: Hugi257

Shambles Fight, The
DESCRIPTION: St Patrick's day 3000 Ribbonmen march in Downpatrick with muskets. Their flags are pulled down in the Shambles. They run from Protestant guns. "The Police done their best the poor rebels to save, As the Protestant strength roll'd on like a wave"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark)
KEYWORDS: violence Ireland patriotic political
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark 12, "The Shambles Fight" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Croppies Lie Down" (tune, according to Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark)
NOTES [210 words]: Zimmermann p. 19: "In some parts of Ulster, Protestant and Catholic tenants were mingled and contended for the land; the peasantery was thus divided into two camps, each having its oath-bound association. This led to a sort of religious war. At the end of the eighteenth century the Catholic "Defenders" were opposed to the Protestant "Peep o'Day Boys" or "Orangemen." The "Defenders were succeeded by the "Ribbonmen, (song [Zimmermann] 39). In parts of counties Tyrone and Monaghan, according to Carleton [p. 19 fn. 14: W. Carleton's Autobiography, p. 83], the whole Catholic population was affiliated to Ribbonism, and it would have been dangerous to avoid being involved in the system." Zimmermann 34, "Owen Rooney's Lamentation": "My prosecutor swore so stout I was the man he saw, That encouraged all the Ribbonmen that came from Lisbellaw."
Smyth/Bush/Long-OrangeLark: "As their outrages were recognisably sectarian, the name came to be used as a blanket term for those who attacked Protestants."
"Situated at the junction which leads to Downpatrick Head, the Shambles is one of Ballycastle's oldest landmarks... It was erected between 1830's-1840's as a Co-Op for the buying of local farm produce." (source: "The Shambles" at Ballycastle Co. Mayo site) - BS File: 0rLa012

Shamrock (II), The

DESCRIPTION: The bridegroom's father wears a shamrock. Bridegroom tells him to wear a rose:
"that flower is out of place." "The old man said with tear dimmed eye I am glad your dear old mother didn't live to see this day" when you were ashamed to wear the shamrock

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA-Leach)
KEYWORDS: wedding rejection flowers Ireland patriotic father mother
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
Roud #30144
RECORDINGS:
Ella Molloy, "Shamrock" (on MUNFLA-Leach)
File: ML3Shamr

Shamrock Boys from Kill, The

DESCRIPTION: The Boys from Kill "march down by Lavey's Strand ... with O'Connell's likeness on their breasts, for to conquer Orange Bill." None fought at Tara as well as the boys from Kill. Many Protestant girls would have liked to be with a boy from Kill.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster)
KEYWORDS: Ireland nonballad political
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster 36, "The Shamrock Boys from Kill" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2912
NOTES [151 words]: O'Connell is Daniel O'Connell. Orange Bill is William of Orange. This appears not to be about any particular battle in spite of lines like "none could chase ould Luther's race Like the Shamrock boys from Kill."
Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster: ".there is a townland of Kill on the borders of Co. Cavan.... This song seems to me more militant than pure 'O'Connellism' would allow and not militant enough for 'Young Irishers'. (Remember they bear 'O'Connell's likeness on their breasts'). It may be that the Shamrock Boys from Kill were a sort of intermediate stage between the fall of O'Connell and the accession of Mitchel and 'Young Ireland'."
"Rebels posted on Tara Hill, County Meath, were routed on May 26 [,1798]." (Zimmermann, p. 155)
- BS
I believe the reference to fighting at Tara is to the rally at that place described in "The Meeting of Tara," since that was organized by Daniel O'Connell. - RBW
File: MorU036

Shamrock Cockade, The

DESCRIPTION: "St Patrick he is Ireland's Saint And we're his Volunteers." We are ready to fight the French, if they invade. The Cork Volunteer societies are named: Union, True Blue, Boyne, Aughrim, Enniskillen and Blackpool.

AUTHOR: John Sheares? (see Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland note) EARLIEST DATE: 1780 (_The Cork Remembrancer_, according to Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)
KEYWORDS: France Ireland nonballad patriotic soldier
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 3, "The Shamrock Cockade" (1 text, 1 tune)
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 42-46, "The Shamrock Cockade" (1 text)
NOTES [236 words]: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 p. 1: "On St Patrick's Day, 1778, the first company of Belfast Volunteers was formed in response to the danger of a possible war between Britain and France. [According to Peter and Fiona Somerset Fry, A History of Ireland, p. 186, the year was 1777, though few other companies formed until 1778.] The movement spread like wildfire and soon there were companies in all parts of Ireland."
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland: "Fitzgerald thus chronicles the matter in his 'Cork Remembrancer:'--'1780, March 17. The armed societies of this city paraded on the Mall with shamrock cockades, and fired three volleys in honour of the day."
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland has the text "from a manuscript copy in the autograph of Mr John Shears [executed in Dublin for high treason in 1798]" sung at the 1780 dinner. - BS
For more on the Volunteers and their effect on Anglo-Irish relations, see the notes to "The Song of the Volunteers." The reference to Saint Patrick may seem a little strange from a pro-British force, but many of the Volunteers were Catholic though the majority were Protestants. It should be remembered that the Volunteers helped encourage the formation of the independent Irish parliament -- and, since they were granted that parliament, they were relatively pro-British. For John Sheares (the usual spelling), see the notes to "The Brothers John and Henry Sheares." - RBW

Shamrock from Glenore, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls his mother's speech as he set out walking on a Saint Patrick's Day: She plucks a shamrock and praises it. But she is old; he must cross the sea. Still he cherishes the token of mother and home
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: emigration separation homesickness mother
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H34, p. 213, "The Pretty Three-Leafed Shamrock from Glenore" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Richard Hayward, Ireland Calling (Glasgow,n.d.), p. 2, "The Three-leafed Shamrock from Glenore" (text, music and reference to Decca F-3283 recorded Aug 12, 1932)
Roud #8126
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Four-Leafed Shamrock from Glenore
My Little Four-Leaf Shamrock from Glenore
NOTES [24 words]: The date and master id (GB-4738-1/2) for Hayward's record is provided by Bill Dean-Myatt, MPhil. compiler of the Scottish National Discography. - BS
File: HHH034

Shamrock from Tiree, A

DESCRIPTION: The singer, who will "see [Erin] no more," recalls the green fields, the red roses, the birds' songs. He dreams of home and its history -- the feasts in the halls of the O'Cahans, the playing of Rory Dall. All this was called back by receipt of a shamrock
AUTHOR: James O'Kane
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: homesickness flowers bird emigration
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H716, pp. 218-219, "A Shamrock from Tiree" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Richard Hayward, Ireland Calling (Glasgow,n.d.), p. 2, "The Three-leafed Shamrock from Glenore" (text, music and reference to Decca F-3283 recorded Aug 12, 1932)
Roud #8126
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Four-Leafed Shamrock from Glenore
My Little Four-Leaf Shamrock from Glenore
NOTES [24 words]: The date and master id (GB-4738-1/2) for Hayward's record is provided by Bill Dean-Myatt, MPhil. compiler of the Scottish National Discography. - BS
File: HHH176
Shamrock Shore (I), The

DESCRIPTION: Hard times and high taxes force the singer to leave Ireland for America. He and his friends spend six weeks in the woods, and the other three all die. He warns against coming to America. He hopes to return to Ireland.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: emigration hardtimes death

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H69, p. 201, "The Happy Shamrock Shore" (1 text, 1 tune)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Irishman's Farewell to His Country

NOTES [40 words]: This is truly a curious song; how did the singer and friends get in trouble so quickly? Unless something has been lost, I have to suspect this was composed by someone who had never been to America, and thought it all a vast wilderness. - RBW

File: HHH069

Shamrock Shore, The (The Maid of Mullaghmore)

DESCRIPTION: The singer calls on the muses to help him express his grief over leaving home. Having left Ireland for (Scotland), he says that (Glasgow) girls are pretty but they aren't the girl he left behind. He warns others against leaving their loves behind.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1886 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(494))

KEYWORDS: love separation homesickness

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H20a, p. 216, "The Maid of Mullaghmore" (1 text, 1 tune)
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 74, "The Shamrock Shore" (1 text)
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 88A, "The Shamrock Shore" (1 text)

Roud #2287

RECORDINGS:
Paddy Tunney, "The Shamrock Shore" (on IRPTunney01)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(494), "The Shamrock Shore" ("In a musing mind with me combine"), H. Such (London), 1863-1885; also 2806 b.9(258), 2806 b.11(168)[Misprint in title--The Shamrore.coShk--and text], Harding B 26(598), "The Shamrock Shore" ("You muses nine, with me combine"); 2806 c.8(285), "The Shamrock Shore," printed at Cork between 1800 and 1899, shelfmark Harding B.26(598).

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Scarborough Settler's Lament" (theme) and references there

NOTES [50 words]: O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland includes "In the blooming spring, when the small birds sing, and the lambs did sport and play, My way I took, and friends forsook, till I came to Dublin Quay." - BS

Paddy Tunney's version on IRPTunney01 has the singer going to New York rather than to Glasgow. - BS

File: HHH20a

Shamus O'Brien

DESCRIPTION: "Oh Shamus O'Brien, I'm loving you yet, And my heart is still trusting and kind... Oh why did I let you get out of my arms Like a bird that was caged and is free." The singer promises extreme devotion and asks Shamus to return to her.

AUTHOR: Will S. Hays

EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (sheet music)

KEYWORDS: love separation betrayal request
Shan Van Voght (1828), The

DESCRIPTION: "O'Connell gained the day," "Catholic victory is shouted." Vesey Fitzgerald and parson Fleury are vexed. "The Bible saints are routed" "Lord Tyrone, we will crack his collar bone, The County Clare will be our own, says the Shan Van Vught"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)

KEYWORDS: pride Ireland nonballad political

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
July 1828 - Daniel O'Connell defeats Vessey Fitzgerald as Westminster MP from County Clare.

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 7B, "A New Song Called the Shan Van Vught" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: John Moulden, "Ballads and Ballad Singers: Samuel Lover's Tour of Dublin in 1830," -- essay found in David Atkinson and Steve Roud, Editors, _Street Ballads in Nineteenth-Century Britain, Ireland, and North America: The Interface between Print and Oral Tradition_, Ashgate, 2014, p. 137, "Shan Van Vogh!" (partial text with discussion; on p. 138 Moulden says Lover's text is not found elsewhere, but it's clearly an 1828 Shan Van Voght)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
ct. "The Shan Van Voght" (1848) for Shan Van Voght song on another subject.
ct. "The Battle of Ballycohy" (1828) for Shan Van Voght song on another subject.
ct. "The Shan Van Voght" and references there, including Shan Van Voght broadsides on other subjects.
ct. "Daniel O'Connell (I)" (subject: Daniel O'Connell) and references there

NOTES [83 words]: "In a symbolic protest against the anti-Catholic oath MPs had to take on entering parliament, O'Connell stands for election in Co. Clare and defeats the liberal protestant incumbent, Vessey Fitzgerald" (source: The McClintock Bunbury Family History and other stories 1800 to 1899 on the Lisnavagh site). - BS

For the career of Daniel O'Connell (1775-1847), see e.g. "Daniel O'Connell (I)" and "Daniel O'Connell (II)"; also, for some context on the period, "Fergus O'Connor and Independence." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.4

File: Zimm007B

Shan Van Voght (1848), The

DESCRIPTION: We'll defeat the Tories in this year of 1848. Pitt and Castlereagh "stole our Parliament away." The French drove out the royalists. Smith O'Brien and John O'Connell will do that here. The French are on the sea "to be here the 10th of May"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1848 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)

KEYWORDS: rebellion France Ireland nonballad patriotic

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1848 - The Young Ireland uprising fails

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 7C, "A New Song Called the Shan Van Vocht" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "John Mitchel" and references there for the 1848 Irish uprising

cf. "Lament of John O Mahony" and references there for the 1848 Irish uprising

cf. "Skibbereen" and references there for the 1848 Irish uprising

cf. "The Wee Duck" and references there for the 1848 Irish uprising

cf. "The Shan Van Voght" (1828) for Shan Van Voght song on another subject.

cf. "The Battle of Ballycohy" (1828) for Shan Van Voght song on another subject.

cf. "The Shan Van Voght" and references there, including Shan Van Voght broadsides on other subjects.

cf. "The Game of Cards" (II) for references to the "stealing" of Grattan's Parliament

cf. "The Wheels of the World" for Pitt and Castlereigh

NOTES [1066 words]: Among the European revolutions of 1848 was the French revolt driving Louis Philippe from Paris in February. Once again the United Irishmen looked to France as their model. The Irish famine persisted. When the government suspended Habeus Corpus in July the leaders of Young Ireland -- William Smith O'Brien, John Blake Dillon and Francis Meagher -- planned an uprising that failed. (source: The 1848 Uprising by Donagh MacDonagh at the Waterford City History site, copyright Waterford City History).

The reference "Billy Pitt and Castlereagh ... They stole our Parliament away ... The people's curse, I give my oath, caused Castelreagh to cut his throat" is to the 1801 "Act of Union" -- supported by Pitt and Robert Stewart (Lord Castlereagh) -- that formed the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and abolished the Dublin Parliament. [For the brief life of Grattan's Parliament, see the notes to "Ireland's Glory." Pitt and Castlereigh are explicitly linked in "The Wheels of the World" also. - RBW]

Castlereagh [1769-1822] committed suicide in 1822 by cutting his throat. (sources: Britain and Ireland by Marjie Bloy on the Victorian Web site; Robert Stewart, Lord Castlereagh on the Dukes of Buckingham and Chandos site). [The fault may have been genetic; his nephew Robert Fitzroy, one-time captain of the Beagle who would oppose evolution tooth and nail, would commit suicide in 1845; Herman, p. 437. - RBW]

John O'Connell is Daniel O'Connell's son and led the Repeal Association which differed in tactics but not objective from William Smith O'Brien's Young Ireland but both groups supported Irish independence. "Smith O'Brien led a delegation to Paris. Though rebuffed by Lamartine's new government, the delegates were intoxicated by the revolutionary atmosphere in France. On their return caution was thrown to the winds." O'Brien was one of the organizers of the 1848 uprising. (source: Young Ireland by Richard Davis on the Ohio University site) - BS

As so often, of course, when Ireland looked to other nations for help, they found none. 1848 -- "The Year of Revolution" -- did overthrow kings, but not nations. The Habsburg monarchy replaced the feeble-minded Ferdinand I (reigned 1835-1848) with the less addled by hardly more effective Franz Joseph. France got rid of Louis Philippe and eventually replaced him with Louis Napoleon (Napoleon III) -- a man who liked independence movements but didn't like democracy at all. And so it went.

The revolution in France (February 24, 1848) did inspire the Young Ireland leaders, but they could do very little. Young Ireland leaders such as Thomas Francis Meagher (for whom see "The Escape of Meagher") and John Mitchel (for whom see the song by that name) urged revolt, and eventually brought in the more peaceful William Smith O'Brien (1803-1864). (Golway, pp. 115-116).

According to Kee, p. 276, even the beginning of the rebellion was an accident. On July 23, 1848, Smith O'Brien was visiting a friend in Wexford, when Meagher and John Blake Dillon arrived with word that habeas corpus had been suspended; there may also have been a warrant for Smith O'Brien's arrest. He had little choice but to scrape up what strength he could and fight to survive. But there was no organization and no plan; truly Smith O'Brien had been forced into violence. The "rebellion" followed.

Or, rather, collapsed. There was no help from France (presumably the reference is a hangover from one of the earlier Shan Van Voght songs). A few half-armed bands wandered around Ireland, and a few leaders tried to scrape up troops, but no one actually set out to fight the British. Smith O'Brien gave a lot of speeches, but was so cautious that he ended up visiting the same places several times rather than seek new recruits (Kee, p. 280). As Fry/Fry, p. 238 put it, "in July 1848 the 'revolt' collapsed in an inglorious scuffle in a widow's back garden patch at Ballingarry. O'Brien, Meagher and others surrendered, and mercifully were not put to death but transported to join Mitchel in Australia."

According to Golway, p. 121, "The Battle of Widow McCormack's Cabbage Patch" resulted in two people being killed, though they may not have been rebels." And that was it for armed conflict. Laxton, p. 85, says that "On the last Saturday of July the remnants of O'Brien's force gathered in a field at Ballingarry, in Country Tipperary; there were not more than 40 men, only half with firearms. The rest were armed with home-made pikes or farmers' pitchforks, while others, possibly 80, were prepared to throw stones." Against such a rabble, the available police should have been more than adequate, but they decided to take shelter in the Widow McCormack's home (the widow herself was out, but her six children, from ages ten on down, were there). The rebels apparently prepared to burn the place down -- but, to read Laxton's account, the widow herself told them off upon returning from her shopping expedition, and the rebellion ended with just a few shots fired (Laxton, p. 86).

To give you an idea of how trivial the whole rising was, Foster mentions the Battle of Ballingary -- the site of the siege on Widow McCormack's house -- only in its chronology (p. 607), not in its text. Even its leader Smith O'Brien said that it was an "escapade" and that it "does not deserve the name of insurrection" (Kee, p. 286). OxfordCompanion doesn't even give it an entry, or mention it in its article on Smith O'Brien, though it does include a brief description in the article regarding the Revolution of 1848. Still, it's clear that the whole thing is remembered mostly because Young Ireland was first and foremost a literary movement. Odds are there were more Irishmen writing about the revolt in 1848 than actually participated.

Smith O'Brien's erratic behavior continued at his trial. He was, naturally, found guilty of rebellion, which meant that he was subject to the death penalty. The jury strongly urged mercy -- but Smith O'Brien refused to petition for clemency; it took a special act of parliament to allow him to be transported (Kee, p. 287). Even in Tasmania, he long refused to apply for a ticket-of-leave (parole). He was fully pardoned in 1854, and returned to Ireland in 1856. He generally stayed out of politics after that; people seemed to understand that he was a gifted speaker who somehow couldn't come up with much to say. - RBW

Bibliography

- Fry/Fry: Peter and Fiona Somerset Fry, A History of Ireland, 1988 (I use the 1993 Barnes & Noble edition)
- Golway: Terry Golway, For the Cause of Liberty, Simon & Schuster, 2000
- Kee: Robert Kee, The Most Distressful Country, being volume I of The Green Flag (covering the period prior to 1848), Penguin, 1972

Last updated in version 2.5
File: Zimm07C

Shan Van Voght, The

DESCRIPTION: The Shan Van Vogt declares that the French are at hand, and will rescue Ireland. The troops are called together; they will wear green; they will free Ireland and proclaim liberty

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1797 (Sparling)

KEYWORDS: Ireland freedom rebellion

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

1796 - A French fleet (carrying, among others, Wolfe Tone) sets out for Ireland. At Christmas, one of the ships is in Bantry Bay. Bad weather and incompetent French seamanship, however, keeps the fleet at sea, and the French (distracted by their ongoing revolution) do not pursue the matter 1798 - main Irish rebellion. Wolfe Tone tries again

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (12 citations):
O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladsOfIreland, p. 32, "Shan Van Vogh" (1 text)
Galvin-IrishSongsOfResistance, p. 27, "The Shan Van Vocht" (1 text, 1 tune)
OLochlann-MoreIrishStreetBallads 60, "The Shan Van Vocht" (1 text, 1 tune)
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 7A, "The Shan Van Vocht" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 28, "The Shan Van Vocht" (1 text, 1 tune)
Tunney-StoneFiddle, p. 23, "Sean-Bhean Bhocht" (1 fragment)
Behan-IrelandSings, #80, "The Sean Bean Boct" (1 text, 1 tune, heavily modified) Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, pp. 102-104, "The Shan Van Vogh" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 322, "Shan Van Voght" (1 text)
Roud #6529
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Escape of James Stephens" (tune)
cf. "Lord Wathe'ford" (tune and repeated lines)
cf. "The Shan Van Voght" (1828) for Shan Van Voght song on another subject
cf. "The Shan Van Voght" (1848) for Shan Van Voght song on another subject
cf. "General Wonder" (subject of Hoche's expedition)
cf. "Poor Old Man (II)" (tune, theme)
SAME TUNE:
The Bird Is Left His Nest (Healy-MercierBookOfOldIrishStreetBalladsVol2, pp.122-124)
Up for the Land (Healy-MercierBookOfOldIrishStreetBalladsVol2, pp. 151-152, apparently to this tune)
The Escape of James Stephens (File: OLCM003A)
(Larry Gorman's) The Shan Van Vogh ("I am getting very gaunt, said the Shan Van Vogh) (Ives-LarryGorman, pp. 14-16, 200)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Shan Van Vocht
NOTES [1222 words]: Sparling dates his text 1797 and says it is "the first song I can find with this refrain."
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion p.56: "The name Shan Van Vocht (Seanbhean Bhocht: Poor Old Woman), Gaelic as it sounds, seems to have had a political meaning almost exclusively in songs written in English, and constantly adapted to new events. [Cf. "The Shan Van Voght" (1828), "The Shan Van Voght" (1848), "The Battle of Ballycohy"]
The most famous variant is said to date from 1797, though no text was printed before the 1840s. According to Donal O'Sullivan this name was borrowed from a non-political song; prior to the 1790's, 'there is no trace in Irish or Anglo-Irish literature of any such allegorical conceptions'. [D. O'Sullivan _Songs of the Irish pp. 130-131]."
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 notes "Bunting collected a (non-political) song called "An tSeanbhean Bhocht" in 1792. By the end of the 18th century the air had become the bearer of political verses, this one the most famous. It did not see print, however, until the mid-19th century, when it was published in The Nation."
The ballad is recorded on one of the CD's issued around the time of the bicentenial of the 1798 Irish Rebellion. See:
Franke Harte and Donal Lunny, "Shan Van Vocht" (on Franke Harte and Donal Lunny, "1798 the First Year of Liberty," Hummingbird Records HBCD0014 (1998)) - BS
Although the Irish often looked to the French for help (as in the case of the United Irish rebellion of 1798), the French supplied it for their own reasons. In this case, it was to distract Britain (as a result of the French Revolution, France was at war with most of Europe) and found a base at their back.
When the 1796 expedition under Hoche failed (due mostly to incompetent seamanship; France had purged most of its experienced naval officers), the French simply gave it up and went on to other
It was one of those things that had people talking about a "Protestant Wind," as in 1688. Hoche was one of the best, if not the best, young French general. But the wind that let the French fleet get out of Brest also scattered it. (David Davies, A Brief History of Fighting Ships: Ships of the Line and Napoleonic sea battle 1793-1815, Carroll & Graf, 1996, 2002, pp. 76-77, attributes much of this to the action of Sir Edward Pellew in the frigate Indefatigable, which during the night flitted in and out of the French fleet spreading confusion with spurious signals, but bad French seamanship and confused instructions from the admiral are generally considered more important).

Most of the fleet made it to Bantry Bay, but the ship with Hoche aboard was blown off-course. The fleet waited a day, hoping for its general -- and its admiral, who might have a better idea how to land on the rough coasts of the bay. Then the winds came and scattered the fleet. End of landing. Later French expeditions would be made with small raiding forces rather than true armies of invasion.

"Shan Van Voght" is the anglicized form of "Sean Bhean Bhocht," "poor old woman," a title for the oppressed Irish people. Toward the end of the nineteenth century, a Belfast literary journal would arise with the title Shan Van Vocht devoted to promoting an independent Irish culture.

Theobald Wolfe Tone was, interestingly, a Protestant (the whole 1798 rebellion was basically a Protestant idea), but wanted a free Ireland with equal rights for both religions. After a (much too brief) period of resistance with the pen, he turned to the sword.

After the fiasco of Bantry Bay, Tone would make two more attempts to invade Ireland. The first, in a Dutch fleet, was destroyed by the British at the Battle of Camperdown (October 11, 1797) -- by which time Tone had given up anyway: the army he and the Hoche had assembled had to be disbanded. Hoche died soon after, and he was the one committed Frenchman.

Tone had, by then, already set off to appeal to Napoleon. But Napoleon turned him down; an Irish expedition, even if it succeeded, would not be practical (read: cost-effective; there was no treasure to be collected in impoverished Ireland). Napoleon went to Egypt instead, and did not send a force to Ireland until after the 1798 rebellion had been crushed.

Still, three small French forces sailed in 1798: Three ships under General Humbert (see "The Men of the West"), one ship with Napper Tandy aboard (see "The Wearing of the Green"), and a large force -- ten ships and nearly 3000 men -- with Tone aboard.

Tone's force was caught by a superior British fleet off Donegal on October 12, 1798. Tone himself was taken and condemned to death by hanging (as a traitor). He requested that he instead be shot as a soldier. When this was denied, he cut his own throat. He was 35.

The sad irony is that the British government in Ireland, under Lord Grattan, was sincerely trying to improve conditions in Ireland at the time of the 1798 rising. As recently as 1782, Ireland had received the right to an independent parliament. (Prior to that, it had had a parliament, but it was under the thumb of the British parliament. For details on this, see the notes to "Ireland's Glory.")

But, of course, this was the era of George III, with all the Crown high-handedness that implied; a few local officials could hardly make up for the stupidity at the top. And the military under General Lake made things worse with a policy of pure brutality.

The rebellion generally put an end to that. (Nor was this the only time a rebellion slowed liberalization.) Indeed, the British decided that the problems had gone on long enough, and for the first time united Ireland with Britain.

The "Lord Edward" of some texts is Lord Edward Fitzgerald (1763-1798), one of the leaders of the United Irishmen and the last one to retain his liberty after the government cracked down (March 12). He doesn't seem to have been particularly smart, and was eventually wounded and captured (May 19); he died in prison of the effects of his wound. For more about him, see the notes to "Edward (III) (Edward Fitzgerald)." - RBW

Bodleian Library site Ballads Catalogue does not have broadsides for this song but has a number of songs modelled on it. For example,

Bodleian, Harding B 18(151), "The Escape of Stephens, the Fenian Chief," H. De Marsan (New York), 1864-1878

Bodleian, Harding B 19(87), "The Shan Van Vouch" ("Oh, the time is coming on ... News of battles won and lost ... The tax that's still to come..."), unknown, n.d.

Bodleian, 2806 c.8(54), "The Shan Van Vought ("I am sure you heard of Warner, says the Shan Van Vought"), unknown, handwritten: "A Fenian Ballad 1866"

Bodleian, Harding B 11(3483), "The Shan Van Vought on Garibaldi" ("I've a story to relate, says the Shan Van Vought"), T. Pearson (Manchester), 1850-1899

Bodleian, 2806 c.8(49), "Shan Van Vought's Farewell to Ireland" ("My sons are going away says the shan van vought"), unknown, n.d.

Another Bodleian broadside version to "remember '98": 2806 b.9(68), "A new song call'd the Gay Old Hag" ("Will you come a boating my gay old hag"), P. Brereton (Dublin), c.1867; also Johnson Ballads 2191c, "A new song call'd the Gay Old Hag"
Last updated in version 6.1
File: PGa027

Shanadar (I)
DESCRIPTION: Fragment only. "Shanadar is a rolling river, E-O... I-O... E-O... I-O..." May be a variant of "Shenandoah" but the meter is quite different, alternating between 2/2 and 3/2.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys)
KEYWORDS: shanty river derivative
FOUND IN: Britain
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 178, "Shanadar" (1 text, 1 tune - quoted from Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys)
Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, LIII, p. 58, "Shanadar (Second version)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #324
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Shenandoah" (text)
NOTES [59 words]: Not too surprisingly, Roud lumps this with "Shenandoah," and I don't think there is much doubt that the two are related. But this does appear distinct enough (barely) to deserve its own listing. Note that there are "Shenandoah" texts with a "Shanadar" refrain -- but they're from Cecil Sharp, who may well have put "Shenandoah" verses to this chorus. - RBW
File: Hugi178

Shanahan's Ould Shebeen (The Mornin's Mornin')
DESCRIPTION: "This is the tale that Cassidy told, In his halls a-sheen with purple and gold"; he has become rich, and has the best, or at least most expensive, of everything. But still he wishes "For the taste o' a morning's mornin' in Shanahan's ould shebeen!"
AUTHOR: Probably Gerald Brennan (see NOTES)
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Journal of the Switchmen's Union and the Plumbers's Trade Journal)
KEYWORDS: money drink
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 205-206, "Shanahan's Ould Shebeen" (1 text)
Hazel Felleman, Best Loved Poems of the American People, pp. 250-252, "The Mornin's Mornin'" (1 text)
Roud #9605
NOTES [90 words]: There is dispute about the author of this. _The Mixer and Server_, which doesn't strike me as very reliable, credits Thomas Burke, Springfield, Ill., "in U. M. W. Journal." Felleman, whom I know to be unreliable, lists Gerald Brennan; so does the _Journal of the Switchmen's Union_ and _The Plumber's Trade Journal_, as well as Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions. So that is probably the correct attribution. Whether it is a song, as opposed to a poem, is altogether another matter. As for why Shay printed it... got me. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: SBar205
Shandrum Boggoon
DESCRIPTION: There are no songs about Shandrum boggoon. "The reason is plain -- no praise did it need." The singer would trade Midas's touch for a touch for Shandrum boggoon. If the Devil tastes it a host of clergy will be needed to banish him.
AUTHOR: Edward Quin (source: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
EARLIEST DATE: 1839 (Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
KEYWORDS: food humorous nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 287-289, "Shandrum Boggoon" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Black Joke" (tune, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
cf. "The Black Thing" ("Black Joke" tune) and references there NOTES [28 words]: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland: "Boggoon is the Irish for bacon.... Shandrum ... in the county of Cork ... [remarkable] for the excellence of the bacon produced there."
- BS
_Last updated in version 4.4_
File: CrPS287

Shane Crossagh
DESCRIPTION: Squire Staples sets out to take Shane Crossagh, once a plowboy but now an outlaw "for the wearin' o' the green." Crossagh -- helped by his hound, who destroys the pursuing dogs -- escapes across the Roe. (Shane later is able to take revenge on Staples.)
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: outlaw manhunt escape dog
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H97, pp. 130-131, "Shane Crossagh" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13373
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Charlie Is My Darling" (floating lyrics)
File: HHH097

Shanghai Rooster (Shanghai Chicken)
DESCRIPTION: "I had a farm out west, of farms it was the best, Had a cross-eyed mule... And one old Shanghai rooster with a wart on his left ear." But the rooster is dead. The singer recalls the bird, which fell in battle; all he has left is a feather
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: chickens farming death
FOUND IN: US(MW,So)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 271, "The Shanghai Rooster" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 195, "Shanghai Chicken" (1 short text, 1 tune, probably this although it's too short to be sure)
ADDITIONAL: David C. Peterson, "Wisconsin Folksongs," chapter in _Badger History: Wisconsin Folklore_, State Historical Society of Wisconsin (Volume XXV, Number 2, November 1973), pp. 52-53, "The Shanghai Rooster" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5247
NOTES [24 words]: Roud includes several items under this number that I'm not convinced are related, but it does appear that this is a rather disjointed song. - RBW
_Last updated in version 4.5_
File: ScaNF195
Shankill Boozers, The
DESCRIPTION: "If you feel like getting full boys, the Shankill is your bet, Have a pint in ev'ry pub and see how far you get" "We'll start us off in North Street at the Elephant Bar ... [until] the Woodvale Arms, all things to an end must come."
AUTHOR: Bernard Keenan (source: Hammond-SongsOfBelfast)
EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (Hammond-SongsOfBelfast)
KEYWORDS: drink nonballad travel
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hammond-SongsOfBelfast, pp. 48-49, "The Shankill Boozers" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [22 words]: Hammond-SongsOfBelfast: Written in 1966: "an accurate account of an alcoholic odyssey from North Street to Woodvale [Belfast]." - BS
File: Hamm048

Shannon and Chesapeake (IV), The (She Comes in Glorious Style)
DESCRIPTION: Captain Broke encourages H.M.S. Shannon's sailors against U.S.S. Chesapeake: "success shall soon reward our toil" Lawrence encourages Chesapeake's sailors. Chesapeake is boarded, Broke is injured, Lawrence killed, but Chesapeake is defeated.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1839 (Erskine-TwentyYearsBeforeTheMast); before 1839 (broadside, Bodleian Bod2315 Harding B 11(3474))
KEYWORDS: war navy ship battle death patriotic
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
June 1, 1813 - Battle between the Chesapeake and the Shannon
FOUND IN: Britain
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Erskine-TwentyYearsBeforeTheMast, pp. 33-34, "(She comes, she comes, in glorious style)" (1 text)
Roud #V9697
BROADSIDES:
NLScotland, Crawford.EB.3088, "The Shannon and Chesapeake" ("She comes, she comes, in glorious style"), Walker (Durham), c.1850?
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Chesapeake and the Shannon (I) (II), (III), and (V)" (plot)
NOTES [59 words]: For the background on the Chesapeake/Shannon fight, see the notes on "The Chesapeake and the Shannon (I)" [Laws J20]. - RBW
Erskine writes that at Rio de Janeiro he was part of the U.S. Navy expedition. He heard the crew of the English line-of-battle Thunderer sing this every night at eight bells, "which was very aggravating to American patriotism." - BS
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Ersk033

Shannon and Chesapeake (V), The (At Boston One Day)
DESCRIPTION: U.S.S. Chesapeake's captain plans to "take Commodore Broke, And add to our navy the Shannon," a "tight little frigate." After being boarded, the Chesapeake "struck to the Shannon." "Let America know The respect she should show" the British flag and cannon
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1839 (Erskine-TwentyYearsBeforeTheMast)
KEYWORDS: war navy ship battle warning patriotic
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
June 1, 1813 - Battle between the Chesapeake and the Shannon
Shannon Scheme, The

DESCRIPTION: The Shannon Scheme will "light our houses," "stitch our blouses," "milk our cows," "churn the cream," "reap and mow," "spin and sew," provide "more employment and more enjoyment and happier homes." A toast to the scheme and its promoters

AUTHOR: Sylvester Boland (source: notes to IRClare01)

EARLIEST DATE: 1992 (IRClare01)

KEYWORDS: river technology humorous nonballad

FOUND IN: Ireland

Roud #18468

RECORDINGS:
Nonie Lynch, "The Shannon Scheme" (on IRClare01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Straightened Banks of Erne" (theme: Ireland's hydro-electrification)

NOTES [150 words]: Notes to IRClare01: "The Shannon Scheme for the Electrification of the Irish Free State, by harnessing the fall in the River Shannon between Killaloe and Limerick, was commenced in 1925 and completed in 1929 and, within six years, was supplying 85% of Ireland's electricity requirements. The song was written in 1927...." - BS

According to John A. Murphy, Ireland in the Twentieth Century(Gill and MacMillan, 1975, 1989), p. 65, [T]he most far-sighted step in the development of natural resources by the state was the Shannon Scheme -- the beginning of the national supply of electricity -- and the establishment of the Electricity Supply Board in 1927, destined to be perhaps the most successful of those semi-state bodies which in future years became characteristic and indispensible features of the Irish economy."

For a later song about Ireland's electrification, see "The ESB in Coolea." - RBW

File: RcShaSch

Shannon Side, The

DESCRIPTION: "'Twas in the month of April... I met a comely damsel Upon the Shannon side." He tries to seduce her, and fails; he throws her down against her will. He departs; six months later, pregnant, she begs him to marry; he says he is pledged to another

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan7)

KEYWORDS: courting sex rape pregnancy betrayal rejection

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,South),Scotland) Ireland

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan7 1409, "Shannon Side" (4 texts, 2 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 200-202, "The Shannon Side" (1 text)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 467, "Shannon Side" (1 text)
Roud #1453

RECORDINGS:
Mary Delaney, "Peter Thunderbolt" (on IRTravellers01)
Phoebe Smith, "Captain Thunderball" (on Voice10)

BROADSIDES:

CROSS-REFERENCES:

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Captain Thunderbolt

NOTES [85 words]: This not only shares much of the plot of "Reynardine," the lyrics also overlap to a degree. I have to think there has been some sort of cross-fertilization. Still, they are clearly distinct songs. - RBW
In Broadside Murray Mu23-y4:028, [the Mary Delaney recording,] and Phoebe Smith's version on Voice10... the man gives his name as Captain, or Peter, Thunderbolt... "that's when my baby is born as that may be the same." I assume it is an integral part of the ballad when the text is well enough remembered. - BS

Last updated in version 2.6
File: Ord202

Shannon's Flowery Banks

DESCRIPTION: Teddy and Patty, the singer, exchange vows of "eternal truth." He is impressed "just when we named next morning fair To be our wedding day." At war's end he does not return: "my Teddy's false and I forlorn"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1839 (Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)

KEYWORDS: infidelity promise war separation pressgang

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 289-292, "Shannon's Flowery Banks" (1 text)

Roud #17000

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 22(361), "The Banks of Shannon" ("In summer when the leaves were green"), J. Evans (London), 1780-1812; also 2806 c.18(13), Harding B 28(163), Harding B 28(62), Harding B 25(106)[some illegible words], "[The] Banks of Shannon"

NOTES [33 words]: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland: "The music of this song was by Mr Carter, a member of the choir of Cloyne, who also composed the beautiful and well-known melody of 'O, Nannie, wilt thou gang with me?'" - BS

File: CrPS289

Shanty Boy on the Big Eau Claire, The [Laws C11]

DESCRIPTION: A girl loves a shanty boy. Her (father/mother) sends her away to keep them apart. She dies of disease and grief; her lover kills himself. They haunt her (father), whose business goes bankrupt. The moral: Don't fall in love with a shanty boy (?!)

AUTHOR: William T. Allen (Shan T. Boy)

EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy)

KEYWORDS: separation suicide ghost love father mother family humorous

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Laws C11, "The Shanty Boy on the Big Eau Claire"
Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy 11, "The Shanty-boy on the Big Eau Claire" (2 texts plus a fragment, 2 tunes)
Rickaby/Dykstra/Leary-PineryBoys-SongcatchingInLumberjackEra 11, "The Shanty-boy on the Big Eau Claire" (2 texts plus a fragment, 2 tunes)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 132-133, "The Shanty-Boy on the Big Eau Claire" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, pp. 207-212, "The Big Eau Claire" (1 text)

DT 819, EUCLAIR

ADDITIONAL: David C. Peterson, "Wisconsin Folksongs," chapter in _Badger History: Wisconsin Folklore_, State Historical Society of Wisconsin (Volume XXV, Number 2, November 1973), pp. 56-57, "The Shanty Boy on the Big Eau Claire" (1 text, 1 tune)
Shanty Boy's Ill Fate
DESCRIPTION: "Gather round me, you lumberjacks, And listen to my tale. I'll tell you of a shanty boy Whose name was Jimmy Hale." Jimmy leaves home to become a logger, and quickly learns the trade, but is killed by a branch. His body is taken to his mother
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps)
KEYWORDS: logger death mother
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, pp. 136-137, "Shanty Boy's Ill Fate" (1 text)
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 85, "Shanty Boy's Ill Fate" (1 text)
Roud #4071
NOTES [8 words]: This song is item dC50 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: BBun136

Shanty Boy's Reveille
DESCRIPTION: "Beans are on the table/Daylight's in the swamp/You lazy lumberjack/Ain't you ever gettin' up?"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks)
KEYWORDS: lumbering work logger nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 17, "Shanty Boy's Reveille" (1 short text)
Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, p. 121, "Reveille in the Woods" (1 short text)
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 2, "Shanty-Boy's Reveille" (1 text)
Roud #8864
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Wake Up Jacob" (theme)
File: Be017

Shanty by the Way, The
DESCRIPTION: "It's in a first-rate business section Where four bush-roads cross and meet." The shanty features many sorts of drink, plus company and games. The landlord will happily take a customer's money. The customers spend their entire check and must seek another
AUTHOR: Words: based on "The 'Public' by the Way" by E. J. Overbury
EARLIEST DATE: 1865 (publication of the Overbury poem); song collected 1940
KEYWORDS: work drink travel
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, pp. 63-64, "The Shanty by the Way" (1 text, 1 tune)
Shanty Teamster's Marseillaise

DESCRIPTION: "Come all ye gay teamsters, attention I pray, I'll sing you a ditty composed, by the way." The listeners are urged to cheer up in "this wretched country, the Opeongo." The new-hired crew, oppressed by the boss and Jerry Welch, walk out of their jobs

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy)

KEYWORDS: work logger hardtimes boss Indians(Am.) strike recitation

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy 28, "Shanty Teamster's Marseillaise" (1 text)
Rickaby/Dykstra/Leary-PineryBoys-SongsSongcatchingInLumberjackEra 28, "Shanty Teamster's Marseillaise" (1 text)
Roud #5091

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Buffalo Skinners" (Laws B10a) (plot)
cf. "Boggy Creek or The Hills of Mexico" [Laws B10b]

NOTES [29 words]: This is item cC31 in Laws's Appendix II. Laws does not so identify it, but I wouldn't be surprised if it derives from the Canaday-I-O or Buffalo Skinners family of songs. - RBW

Shantyman's Life (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "The shantyman's life is a wearisome one, Though some say it's free from care; It's the ringing of the axe from morning until night in the middle of the forest drear." The singer lists the hazards of his life; he plans to go home, marry, and settle down

AUTHOR: George W. Stace?

EARLIEST DATE: 1858 (broadside)

KEYWORDS: logger nonballad lumbering

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar) US(MA,MW,NE,NW,Ro) Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (21 citations):
Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 87-88, "The Shanty Man's Life" (1 text)
Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy 9, "The Shanty-man's Life" (2 texts plus a fragment, 3 tunes)
Rickaby/Dykstra/Leary-PineryBoys-SongsSongcatchingInLumberjackEra 9, "The Shanty-man's Life" (2 texts plus a fragment, 3 tunes)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 81, "The Shantyman's Life (I)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 103, "The Shantyman's Life" (1 text plus an excerpt, 1 tune)
Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks, pp. 53-57, "The Lumberman's Life" (2 texts)
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 211-213, "A Shantyman's Life" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Fowke/Johnston-FolkSongsOfCanada, pp. 66-67, "The Shantyman's Life" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 274, "Shantyman's Life" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 150, "The Lumberman's Life" (1 text)
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 1, "A Shantyman's Life" (1 text, 1 tune)
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 256-257, "(no title)" (1 text)
Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, p. 348, "The Shantyman" (1 text, a slightly modified version which opens with the words "The shanty man is the man I do love best," which causes Roud to number it as #7756, but too much of it is the same as this song to really justify separation) Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 34, "The Shanty Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 390-391, "The Shanty-Man's Life" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryOfNewEnglandFolklore, pp. 567-568, "The Lumberman's Life" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 6, "A Shantyman's Life" (1 text)
Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, pp. 103-105, "A Shanty Man's Life" (1 text)
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 11, "A Shantyman's Life" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2085, p. 140, "A Shantyman's Life" (1 reference)
DT, SHNLI

RECORDINGS:
Pierre La Dieu, "The Shanty Man's Life" (Columbia 15278-D, 1928)
Pete Seeger, "The Shantyman's Life" (on PeteSeeger29)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "Barbara Allen" (tune) (the usual tune for this piece is what Charles Seeger called the "type 1" Barbara Allen tune and Bronson labelled the "Group D" tune)
 cf. "A Cowboy's Life" (tune & meter; lyrics)

NOTES [83 words]: Some versions of this song refer to a lack of liquor; Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman reports that strong drink was banned in most logging camps in the years after 1860. The only recourse was a "visit to the dentist" or the like -- an excuse that obviously could only be tried so many times.
The broadside version of this is credited to George W. Stace [or Stage] of "La Crosse Valley, Wis[consin]." For what it's worth, La Crosse is in the heart of what used to be the Big Woods country.- RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: Doe211

Share 'Em

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, I din' ka' how you share (shear?) 'em So you share 'em eben; Share yo' sheep and blankets -- Share 'em, share 'em, share 'em! If you want er see dem pretty gals, Look on Mon'lyn's Baniel."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: sheep
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 510, "Share 'Em" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 510, "Share 'Em" (1 tune, with no text; Schinhan observes that it does not fit the text)
Roud #5005
NOTES [28 words]: Roud lumps this with Morris's "Shear Um," probably because they both seem to be fragments about shearing, but I can't see much actual similarity, so I split them. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Br3510

Shaver, The

DESCRIPTION: Capstan shanty. Tells of going to sea "when I was just a hairless boy," getting kicked around, enduring bad weather, and jumping ship at the first chance. Cho: "When I was just a shaver, a shaver. Oh, I was fed up with sea, when I was just a shaver."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas)
KEYWORDS: shanty sailor homosexuality youth desertion abuse sex
FOUND IN: Britain
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 338-339, "The Shaver" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9534
CROSS-REFERENCES:
Shawneetown

DESCRIPTION: "Some rows up, but we floats down, Way down the Ohio to Shawneetown. And it's hard on the beech oar; she moves too slow, Way down to Shawneetown on the Ohio." The singer tells of life on an Ohio River keelboat: they sell drink for salt. It's hard to see

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1992 (Salt-BuckeyeHeritage-Ohio'sHistory)

KEYWORDS: river travel drink

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Salt-BuckeyeHeritage-Ohio'sHistory, p. 47, "Shawneetown" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [25 words]: Because Salt does not list her source for this song, and I have not seen it elsewhere, I do not list it as being found in Ohio or anywhere else. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: Salt047

Shawneetown Flood

DESCRIPTION: "In the town of Shawneetown, When the evening shades came down, On a quiet sabbath evening cold and gray," the bells ring to warn of a flood. Various people try to help, but many are killed. The song appeals for help for the victims

AUTHOR: probably G. B. Fields (see NOTES)

EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois); probably published 1898

KEYWORDS: river flood death disaster

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Apr 3, 1898 - A levee failure causes Shawneetown, Illinois, to be flooded. 25 people are said to have been drowned, 200 homes destroyed, and communication with the outside world was cut off, meaning that relief was slow in coming

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois, pp. 264-265, "Shawneetown Flood" (1 text)
McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesOfIllinoisOzarks, pp. 13-14, "Flood of Shawneetown" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 449-450, "Shawneetown Flood" (1 text)
Roud #4343

NOTES [95 words]: Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois's notes say that this song commemorates a flood which took place in 1913. However, Cohen found a broadside dating from an 1898 flood, and McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesOfIllinoisOzarks says that the song "Flood of Shawneetown," or "Broken Hearts and Homes," was written by G. B. Fields (of Fairfield, Illinois), and published by the author in 1898. I incline to believe this account. It is possible, however, that the 1913 flood kept the song in circulation until Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois collected it. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: CAFS449B

Shawneetown Is Burnin' Down

DESCRIPTION: "Shawneetown is burnin' down, Who tole you so? (x2)." "Cythie, my darlin' gal...."
"How the hell d'ye expect me to hold her, Way down below, I've got no skin on either shoulder...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1924
She Came Rollin' Down the Mountain

DESCRIPTION: A young woman takes a succession of men up the hills of West Virginny to engage in an act of prostitution, after which she comes rollin' down the mountain.

AUTHOR: Buddy DeSylva, Brown and Henderson
EARLIEST DATE: 1932
KEYWORDS: sex whore bawdy
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms II, p. 604, "She Came Rollin' Down the Mountain" (1 partial text)
RECORDINGS:
Blue Ridge Mountain Girls, "She Came Rollin' Down the Mountain" ((Champion 16743, 1934; Champion 45094/Melotone [Canada] 45094, 1935; Montgomery Ward M-4934, 1936; rec. 1933)
NOTES [53 words]: There is an allusion to the onset of the Depression, dating the song to approximately 1930. This formerly popular song is of questionable oral currency. - EC There's a commercial version, presumably cleaned-up (or the original from which the bawdy version is derived). See the Blue Ridge Mountain Girls' recording. - PJS
Last updated in version 3.6
File: RL604

She Don't Wear No

DESCRIPTION: "She don't wear no -- yes she do, She don't wear no -- yes she do. She don't wear no -- yes she do. She don't wear no chim nor shoe." "She don't wear no -- yes she do (x3), Yes, she wears them drawers like you." Also a chorus: "I'm satisfied with my gal."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: clothes humorous love
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 164, "She Don't Wear No" (1 short text, lacking the chorus of the Bill Boyd version, 1 tune)
Roud #11358
RECORDINGS:
Bill Boyd & His Cowboy Ramblers, "Oh, No She Don't" (Bluebird 6323, 1936; Montgomery Ward 4795)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
I'm Satisfied With My Gal
File: Brne164

She Done Got Ugly

DESCRIPTION: "Says huh Julie, Hullo gal. Says early in the mornin' baby... I come to your window baby.... Says get away from my window baby... Says got another man baby, don't want you no more... You done got ugly... Hey rock that baby...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (recording, Archie Lee Hill)
KEYWORDS: love abandonment
FOUND IN: US(SE)
She Gets There Just the Same (Jim Crow Car)

DESCRIPTION: "The white gal smells like Castile soap, The yeller gal try to do the same, The poor black gal smell like little billy goat, But she gets there just the same." Verses comparing the methods and results of several groups

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: discrimination train clothes travel drink food money

FOUND IN: US(SE,Ap) West Indies(Jamaica)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 477, "White Gal, Yaller Gal, Black Gal" (5 texts plus 3 fragments; 3 of the texts have the chorus of "Coming Round the Mountain (II -- Charming Betsey)"); also 483, "Rich Man Ride on a Pullman Car" (1 fragment)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 477, "White Gal, Yaller Gal, Black Gal" (3 tunes plus text excerpts)
Bush-FSoCWestVirginiaVol5, pp. 27-28, "My Gal" (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, p. 355, "[no title]" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Olive Lewin, "Rock It Come Over" - The Folk Music of Jamaica (Barbados: The University of the West Indies Press, 2000), p. 175, "(I'm a white man, and I drive mi motor car)" (1 text)

Roud #7052

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Coming Round the Mountain (II -- Charming Betsey)" (floating lyrics)
NOTES [187 words]: I've heard this sung by Sixties folk groups in a form which contrasts city and country girls. This may be the original form -- but I suspect it's a clean-up. The version in Darling is only a fragment, but describes the fate of Blacks forced to ride "Jim Crow cars" on trains (poor-quality cars, often used to ship animals and, quite possibly, not cleaned out after being used for such a purpose).

Brown's verses are much more diverse: The White women ride cars, yellow women ride trains; Blacks are stuck in carts. Whites use cold cream, Blacks lard. Clothing, beds, alcoholic beverages -- in all cases, the Blacks have it worst, but they look good, sleep, get drunk just the same. What appears to be a rewrite by Decie Smith appears on pp. 94-95 of Doug deNatale and Glenn Hinson, in their article, "The Southern Textile Song Tradition Reconsidered," published in Archie Green, editor, Songs about Work: Essays in Occupational Culture for Richard A. Reuss, Folklore Institute, Indiana University, 1993. It is a piece written in commemoration of Smith's half century in the mills, and is an ironic praise of the boss. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: DarNS355

She Hirpled But, She Hirpled Ben

DESCRIPTION: The lazy "bride o' Toddlichlie" limps around and will not rise. Someone (her mother?) tells her "mak' yer claes clean For the morn is yer marriage-day And we'll be quit o' ane"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan7)

KEYWORDS: wedding nonballad clothes

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1371, "She Hirpled But, She Hirpled Ben" (1 text)

Roud #7242

File: GrD71371
She is Far From the Land

DESCRIPTION: "She is far from the land where her young hero sleeps." She rejects other lovers. She sings wild songs he loved about home. "He had lived for his country, for his country he died." She will join him soon.

AUTHOR: Thomas Moore (1779-1852)

EARLIEST DATE: 1846 (Irish Melodies by Thomas Moore, according to Zimmermann)

KEYWORDS: grief love death nonballad patriotic

MOORE-IrishMelodies-1846, p. 80, "She Is Far from the Land" (1 text)

Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 157, "She Is Far From the Land" (1 text, 1 tune)

HYLANDS-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 50, "She Is Far from the Land" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Edward Hayes, The Ballads of Ireland (Boston, 1859), Vol I, pp. 332-333, "She Is Far From the Land"

NOTES [276 words]: Zimmermann p. 77 fn. 11 uses "She is far from the land" as an example of "songs [that] evoke prudently Robert Emmet's fate." - BS

If so, that gives an interesting possible dual meaning to this one. One part would refer to the many Irish exiles around the world. The other might refer to Sarah Curran, Emmet's sweetheart, who was disowned by her father for her closeness to the condemned rebel.

Moore, we should add, knew Emmet; according to Kee, p. 168, Moore was "Emmet's old friend and fellow student at Trinity." On p. 169 he reports that Emmet's girlfriend was Sarah Curran, daughter of the lawyer John Philpot Curran (1750-1817). Curran had defended the 1798 conspirators at their trials, and opposed the Act of Union -- but his daughter had gone farther, writing letters to Emmet which supported rebellion. Her father disowned her.

Boylan says of her, "CURRAN, SARAH (died c. 1808), youngest daughter of John Philpot Curran. Secretly engaged to Robert Emmet. When her father discovered this after the rising of 1803, he behaved so harshly to her that she was obliged to take refuge with friends in Cork. Here she met and married in 1805 a Captain Sturgeon. She died in England three years late. Moore's song 'She is Far From the Land' was inspired by her story."

Kee regards Moore as having "set the tone" for Emmet's legend.

For another song pertaining to Curran, see "Emmet's Farewell to His Sweetheart."

- RBW

Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815: "The subject of this song is Sarah Curran, Emmet's fiancée and daughter of John Philpot Curran, the lawyer who had defended Wolfe Tone." Hayes's notes are along the same line, but with more details. - BS

Bibliography

- Kee: Robert Kee, The Most Distressful Country, being volume I of The Green Flag (covering the period prior to 1848), Penguin, 1972

Last updated in version 6.1

File: BrdSHFfL
She Is More to Be Pitied than Censured

DESCRIPTION: A pack of boys jeer at "a girl who had fallen to shame." An old woman declares "She is more to be pitied than censured," and points out that "a man was the cause of it all." A clergyman, too, hopes she will find God's pity

AUTHOR: William B. Gray (died 1932)

EARLIEST DATE: 1898 (sheet music published by W. B. Gray & Co.)

KEYWORDS: infidelity help

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Spaeth-ReadEmAndWeep, pp. 190-191, "She Is More to Be Pitied than Censured" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 267, "She Is More To Be Pitied Than Censured" (1 text)
DT, PITYCENS*

ADDITIONAL: Robert A. Fremont, editor, _Favorite Songs of the Nineties_, Dover Publications, 1973, pp. 247-250, "She Is More to Be Pitied than Censured" (1 text, the 1898 sheet music)
Margaret Bradford Boni, editor, _Songs of the Gilded Age_ , with piano arrangements by Norman Lloyd and illustrations by Lucille Corcos, Golden Press, 1960, pp. 92-95, "SHe Is More To Be Pitied, Than Censured" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
Richard Brooks & Reuben Puckett, "She's More To Be Pitied Than Censured" (Brunswick 281, 1928; Supertone S-2075, 1930)
Four Aces, "She's More to be Pitied" (Bluebird B-7765/Montgomery Ward M-7724, 1938)
Lester McFarland & Robert Gardner, "She's More to be Pitied than Censured" (Melotone 12241 [may have been issued as by Bob Lester & Bud Green], 1931; Conqueror 8004 [as Mac and Bob], 1932; rec. 1930)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Let Old Nellie Stay" (theme)

NOTES [147 words]: According to Jon W. Finson, _The Voices That Are Gone: Themes in Nineteenth-Century American Popular Song_, Oxford University Press, 1994, p. 79, author William B. Gray's first career was as a professional boxer. An interesting career change. Other songs in the Index by Gray include "Jack and Joe" and "The Volunteer Organist."

David A. Jasen, _Tin Pan Alley: The Composers, the Songs, the Performers and their Times: The Golden Age of American Popular Music from 1886 to 1956_, Primus, 1988, p. 28, says that "[Gray] published it with this note on the cover: 'The theme of this song is indeed a delicate one to handle, and is offered in sympathy, and not defense, for the unfortunate erring creatures, the life of one of whom suggested its construction.' It became the epitome of the tear-jerker. Today it has come down as a parody of itself. The Gay Nineties! Think again." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: SRW190

She Lives With Her Own Granny Dear (She Lives With Her Own Grenadier)

DESCRIPTION: William returns from sea and asks if Annette is true. He is told she lives with "her own grannie dear." He hears that as "her own grenadier" When Annette greets him he confronts her. She admits that "my granny is old, So I live with my own granny dear"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1839 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 15(282b))

KEYWORDS: courting accusation humorous wordplay family

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan7 1511, "Grannie Dear" (1 text)
Henderson-VictoriansStreetBallads, p. 67, "She lives with her own Granny, dear" (1 text)

Roud #7172

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 15(282b), "She Lives With Her Own Granny Dear" ("Cri'd william, when just come from sea"), J. Catnach (London), 1813-1838; also Harding B 11(4290), Johnson Ballads 1834, Johnson Ballads 273, Harding B 15(283a), Harding B 15(283b), Harding B 15(284a), Harding B 15(284b), Harding B 40(26a), Harding B 40(26a), Harding B 11(1393), Firth b.26(332), Harding B 16(248a), Firth b.25(227), Harding B 11(3491), "She Lives With Her Own Granny[,] Dear"; Firth b.25(303), Harding B 11(2579), "My Own Granny Dear"; Harding B 15(129b), "Her
Own Granny Dear

NOTES [71 words]: There are two (e.g., Firth b.26(332)) and three (e.g., Harding B 15(282b)) stanza broadside versions. Though it is missing some lines, Greig/Duncan7 follows the three stanza version. Some, e.g., Harding B 11(2579), have a chorus: "Grenadier! did you say? did you say Grenadier, Yes, yes, the old gossip replied, She lives with her old Granny Dear."

If it isn't clear from the description, the misunderstanding is not resolved. - BS

Last updated in version 4.4

File: GrD71511

---

She Loves Coffee and I Love Tea

DESCRIPTION: "I love coffee, I love tea, I love the boys and the boys love me, Wish my mama would hold her tongue, She loved the boys when she was young." "I wish my papa would do the same, For he caused a girl to change her name."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: courting nonballad playparty

FOUND IN: US(SE) New Zealand

REFERENCES (3 citations):

* Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 91, "She Loves Coffee and I Love Tea" (2 text plus 1 excerpt and mention of 2 more)
* Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 91, "She Loves Coffee and I Love Tea" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
* Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, pp. 107-109, "(I like coffee, I like tea)" (1 text)

Roud #740

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Grandma's Advice" (theme)

cf. "Sailor Laddie (II)" (four lines)

NOTES [363 words]: This looks like it might be a fragment of "Grandma's Advice" or something similar. Since, however, the Brown texts all seem to survive in similar form, I've given it a separate listing. - RBW

I concede that it is a stretch to make a connection with Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 386. "One, two, three": "One, two, three, I love coffee, And Billy loves tea, How good you be, One, two, three, I love coffee, And Billy loves tea" (earliest date in Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes is 1842). - BS

Whatever the origin of the Opie item, it is also found in Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #629, p. 249-250. - RBW

There are lots of reports of skipping rope rhymes beginning "I love coffee, I love tea, I love the boys and the boys love me" (see, for example, E.C. Perrow, "Songs and Rhymes from the South" in The Journal of American Folklore, Vol. XXVIII, No. 108 (Apr 1915 (available online by JSTOR)), #58 p. 186 "I Love Coffee" (1 text); Robert Craig Maclagan, The Games and Diversions of Argyleshire (London, 1901 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 254, ("March, march, two by two, my little sister lost her shoe, I love coffee, I love tea, I love the boys and the boys love me" (1 text)), but I have only seen "I wish my mother ... when she was young" with "x loves coffee, etc.," in "Sailor Laddie."

On the other hand, the "hold your tongue" lines exist independent of "x loves coffee." For example, "Tell your mother to hold her tongue. She had a fellow when she was young. Tell your father to do the same. He was the one to change her name" (source: Ed Cray, "Jump-Rope Rhymes from Los Angeles" in Western Folklore, Vol. XXIX, No. 2 (Apr 1970 (available online by JSTOR)), p. 126, ("Tell your mother to hold her tongue") (1 text)). Another game has a mother refuse to allow her daughter to "go down to the corner to meet her beau"; her father says, "Yes my daughter, you may go Down to the corner to meet your beau. Tell your Mother to hold her tongue She had a beau when she was young!" (source: Loman D. Cansler, "Midwestern and British Children's Lore Compared" in Western Folklore, Vol. XXVII, No. 1 (Jan 1968 (available online by JSTOR)), p. 14). - BS

Last updated in version 4.4

File: Br3091
She May Have Seen Better Days

DESCRIPTION: "While strolling along 'midst the city's vast throng, On a night that was bitterly cold," the singer sees a crowd teasing a woman in tears. She has clearly fallen on hard times, but someone notes "she might have seen better days." The crowd is silenced

AUTHOR: James Thornton

EARLIEST DATE: 1895 (sheet music published by Francis, Day & Hunter)

KEYWORDS: drink poverty hardtimes

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 123-124, "She May Have Seen Better Days" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Robert A. Fremont, editor, _Favorite Songs of the Nineties_, Dover Publications, 1973, pp. 251-254, "She May Have Seen Better Days" (1 text, 1 tune, the 1895 sheet music)

Roud #9582

NOTES [80 words]: According to Sigmund Spaeth, _A History of Popular Music in America_, pp. 255-256, James Thornton was a very popular songwriter from about 1892 to 1898, producing such songs as "My Sweetheart's the Man in the Moon," "Don't Give Up the Old Love for the New," "Going for a Pardon," and (especially) "When You Were Sweet Sixteen." Spaeth, p. 256, notes that this song is "usually paired with William B. Gray's She Is More to Be Pitied than Censured" as the acme of the maudlin." - RBW

Last updated in version 3.2

File: Dean123

She Moved Through the Fair (Our Wedding Day)

DESCRIPTION: Singer meets his love, who tells him it will not be long until their wedding day, then leaves and "moves through the fair." (Later, her ghost repeats that it will not be long until their wedding. Alternately, she deserts him and he enlists in the army)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Hughes)/1926 (Sam Henry)

KEYWORDS: love wedding death ghost nightvisit supernatural abandonment army

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 165, "Our Wedding Day" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H141, pp. 395-396, "Out of the Window" (1 text, 1 tune): H534, p. 454, "Our Wedding Day" (1 text, 1 tune)
Tunney-StoneFiddle, pp. 153-154, "My Young Love Said to Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, MOVEFAIR

Roud #861

RECORDINGS:
Margaret Barry, "She Moved Through the Fair" (on Lomax42, LomaxCD1742, Voice10); "She Moved Through the Fair (Our Wedding Day)"and "She Moved Through the Fair" [long version] (both on IRMBarry-Fairs; one of these is the same as the preceding); "She Moves Through the Fair" (on Pubs1)
Robert Cinnamond, "She Moves Through the Fair" (on IRRCinnamond02); "Our Wedding Day" (on FSBFTX15)
Francis McPeake, "Our Wedding Day" (on FSB01)
Pete Seeger, "She Moved Through the Fair" (on PeteSeeger14)
Paddy Tunney, "Our Wedding Day" (on IRPTunney01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Once Had a True Love" (floating lyrics)

NOTES [391 words]: [The well-known version "She Moved Through the Fair" is credited to Padraic Colum (lyrics) and Herbert Hughes (arrangement of traditional tune). This was published in 1909 in volume I of Hughes's _Irish Country Songs_. - RBW]

Colum and Hughes apparently pieced this together from traditional fragments. The Margaret Barry version has become canonical in the folk revival -- but she learned it from a John McCormack 78! - PJS

Proving exactly what happened here is a difficult task, because the first actual publication of the song was of the Colum/Hughes text in 1909. But it's noteworthy that traditional versions, such as Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland's and the Sam Henry "Out of the Window," are much longer than the Cõlum/Hughes text.
It would appear that Cõlum and Hughes did more cutting-down than actual reworking. If we compare the "standard" text of "She Moved Through the Fair" with, say, the Kennedy text, we find that Cõlum's first two stanzas are straight out of tradition. The final stanza, about the dead love, is largely from traditional sources -- but doesn't mention the dead love! And we see parallels to that verse in one of the Sam Henry texts (H534), though the latter may have been inspired by the published text.
Margaret Barry's version omits the third stanza of the Cõlum text. I observe that this verse doesn't scan very well to the tune; you can make it fit, but it sounds a bit unnatural.
Kennedy actually refers five texts in the Henry collection to this piece, but only the two above are properly this song; the others are of the "If I Were A Blackbird/Courting Too Slow" type (and filed on that basis); they may have influenced Cõlum's final verse (since there are lyric similarities), but they are assuredly not the same song.
I thought about listing "She Moved Through the Fair" and "Our Wedding Day" as two separate songs, but this would obscure the clear relationship between the two. I decided on the title "She Moved Through the Fair," even though it's not properly traditional, because it is so much more familiar. - RBW
Tunney-StoneFiddle: The first verse is identical to Padraic Collum's "She Moved Through the Fair." Tunney refers also to a Sam Henry version "but my mother's tune and indeed some of the words are quite different." The reference seems to be to H534, p. 454, "Our Wedding Day." - BS
Last updated in version 4.3
File: K165

She Said She Was Only Flirting

DESCRIPTION: "They stood on the beach at evening, Under the sunset so fair." He says he loves her; she says, "Oh sir, I was only flirting...." She says she is engaged to another, and goes her way. She is "a cold and elegant woman"; he is "Too soon grown worn and old."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: love courting lie betrayal parting
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Randolph 764, "She Said She Was Only Flirting" (1 text plus mention of 1 more, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 166-167, "Flirtation" (1 text, 1 tune)
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 5, "Flirting" (1 text)
Roud #3759
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Willie Down by the Pond (Sinful to Flirt)" [Laws G19]
cf. "Juanita" (theme)
NOTES [34 words]: The middle stanzas of this piece are almost identical in meaning (except with genders reversed) to "Juanita," though the wording is somewhat different. The endings, however, are completely different. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: R764

She Sleeps Beneath the Norris Dam

DESCRIPTION: "Way down in sunny Tennessee, Beneath blue Dixie's skies, In the silvery lake of Norris, Where my poor darling lies." The singer helped build the Norris Dam, and went boating on it with his love; she is thrown from the boat and loat. He wishes to die also

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1982 (recording, Cope Brothers; reportedly written before 1940)
KEYWORDS: love technology death separation
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsAREgionalEncyclopedia1, p. 283, "She Sleeps Beneath the Norris Dam" (1 text)
Roud #4911
She Tickled Me

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets Molly in Kent. Seeing her home they stop under a tree to avoid the rain. "She tickled me and I tickled her." After twelve months they marry. After dinner "we had a few games of card dice and chess and we both toddled off into bed"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1988 (McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen)
KEYWORDS: courting marriage humorous
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen 63, "She Tickled Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Tickled Nancy" (floating lyrics)

She Was a Rum One

DESCRIPTION: Singer falls in with a girl and asks why she walks in such an inhibited way. He says he can solve her problem; she says the problem lies between her thighs. He lays her down and provides a plaster, and says she's given him "a stable for my stallion"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan7)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer, in the moonlight, falls in with a young girl walking and asks why she walks in such an inhibited way; she tells him to go away. He says he can solve her problem; she says the problem lies between her thighs, and its tickling keeps her from her striding. He lays her down and provides a plaster, whereby she can walk freely again. He says she's given him his winter's beef and fuel, but, better than that, "a stable for my stallion." Chorus: "She was a rum one, fol-the-diddle-di-do-day/But a bonny one, fol-the-diddle-di-do"

KEYWORDS: sex bawdy
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan7 1445, "She Was a Rum One" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 190, "She Was a Rum One" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, RUMONE*
Roud #2128
RECORDINGS:
Jeannie Robertson, "She is a Rum One" (on FSB2CD)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Seventeen Come Sunday" (general situation)

She Was Bred in Old Kentucky

DESCRIPTION: "As a lad I sat one day in a cottage far away... For my Sue with blushes red had just promised we would wed... She was bred in old Kentucky, where the meadow grass is blue." Her mother tells the singer he's lucky; many years later, he still agrees

AUTHOR: Harry Braisted and Stanley Carter (source: Spaeth, A History of Popular Music in America)
EARLIEST DATE: 1898 (source: Spaeth)
KEYWORDS: love courting mother
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 91, "She Was Bred in Old Kentucky" (1 text plus an excerpt and mention of 2 more, 2 tunes)
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #115, "She Was Bred in Old Kentucky" (1 text)
Roud #4973
NOTES [69 words]: Spaeth, who gives a short history of this song (A History of Popular Music in America, p. 293), notes that it was popular with parodists, who paired the line "She was bre(a)d in old Kentucky" with lines such as "She was cake in New Orleans." This is hardly surprising; although the plot of the song is not any worse than any other wasn't-I-lucky-to-marry-her-song, the lyrics are little better than doggerel. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0
File: Brne091

She Was Happy Till She Met You

DESCRIPTION: A young wife leaves her abusive husband and goes home to her mother. Eventually he shows up at the mother's door, asking her forgiveness. The mother sends him away, saying, "She was happy till she met you, and the fault is all your own...."

AUTHOR: Charles Graham and Monroe H. Rosenfeld
EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (copyright)
KEYWORDS: separation abuse abandonment husband wife
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  Randolph 827, "She Was Happy Till She Met You" (2 texts)
  Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 164, "She Was Happy till She Met You" (1 text)
Roud #6565
NOTES [16 words]: For background on Monroe H. Rosenfeld, see the notes to "Those Wedding Bells Shall Not Ring Out!"
Last updated in version 4.2
File: R827

She Was Poor But She Was Honest (I)

DESCRIPTION: A mock lament in which the village maid seduced goes to London to become a prostitute. While her customers prosper, she becomes a pox-ridden streetwalker burdened with piles. The moral: the rich takes their pleasures while the poor get the blame.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923
KEYWORDS: bawdy humorous sex children poverty hardtimes disease
FOUND IN: Australia Canada Britain(England) US(SW)
REFERENCES (10 citations):
  Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 128-132, "She Was Poor But She Was Honest I" (3 texts, 1 tune)
  Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, pp. 69-70, "She was Poor, but She was Honest" (1 text)
  Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, pp. 162-163, "It's the Syme the Whole World Over" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 108, "She Was Poor, But She Was Honest" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 200-201, "It's The Syme the Whole World Over" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Johnson-BawdyBalladsAndLustyLyrics, pp. 15-16, "She Was Poor But She Was Honest" (1 text)
  Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 27, "It's The Syme The Whole World Over" (1 text)
  Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 56-58, "It's the Sime the 'Ole World Over" (2 texts, 1 tune; the first a fairly normal version, the second an adaption in which Joe Johnson murders Sally Carter)
DT, SYMEOVR5*
ADDITIONAL: Aline Waites & Robin Hunter, _The Illustrated Victorian Songbook_, Michael Joseph Ltd., 1984, pp. 62-63, "She Was Poor But She Was Honest" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9621
CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "She Was Poor But She Was Honest (II)" (tune & meter)
  cf. "It's the Sime the 'Ole World Over (II)" (tune)
NOTES [130 words]: The Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag text is described as "fortified in part by H.L Mencken and a contributor to The American Mercury.
Waites & Hunter say, "This is probably one of the most successful anonymous songs in the world. The tune repeats throughout the verses and the chorus, and is therefore exceptionally easy to pick Jon Roche points out to me that Maurice Disher wrote (on p. 46 of "Victorian Song") that he first heard an "unprintable" song with the "She was poor but she was honest" line before any of the collections cited here. "My memories of it belong to the Grey Brigade of London volunteers after the South African War." But I can't use that as a date, partly because Disher is imprecise as to date and partly because I can't prove it's the same song. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: EM128

She Was Poor But She Was Honest (II)
DESCRIPTION: An adaptation of the English original, this is a lampoon of a former governor of Alabama, "Kissing Jim" Folsom, who sired a child out of wedlock.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1955
KEYWORDS: bawdy humorous political seduction
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 132-133, "She Was Poor But She Was Honest II" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 286-288, "She Was Poor But She Was Honest" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, SYMEOVER* SYMEOVR4
Roud #9621
RECORDINGS:
Anonymous singer, "Big Jim Folsom" (on Unexp1)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "She Was Poor But She Was Honest (I)" (tune & meter)
File: EM132

She Was So Good
DESCRIPTION: "She was so good and so kind to me, Just like one of the family, I shall never forget The first time we met, She was -- She was -- She...." (And then repeat the entire thing ad nauseum)
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, p. 38, "She Was So Good" (1 text)
Roud #10560
File: BrPa038B

She Washes the Dishes Three Times a Day
DESCRIPTION: Three verses: she washes dishes, bakes the bread, and washes the chairs three times a day.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2)
KEYWORDS: nonballad playparty food
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 165, "She Washes the Dishes Three Times a Day" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Robert Chambers, The Popular Rhymes of Scotland (Edinburgh, 1870 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 135, ("She synes the dishes three times a day") (1 text)
Roud #15117
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "This Is the Way We Wash Our Clothes" (form)
She Wears Red Feathers
DESCRIPTION: "She wears red feathers and a hooley hooley skirt ... lives on fresh coconuts and fish ... love in her heart for me"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1977 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
KEYWORDS: clothes derivative playparty
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North,West),Scotland(Bord))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 124, "She Wears Red Feathers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #18994
NOTES [107 words]: Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame: "The origin of even the most modern-sounding singing game can rarely be discovered to enable one to see the changes wrought by oral tradition. 'She Wears Red Feathers' was written and composed by Bob Merrill in 1952 (copyright Oxford Music Corporation, New York), but as the chorus possesses all the qualifications for a successful children's dance-song, and as the song has been heard frequently on the radio and published in song albums, changes over the past thirty years have been few." (you can find the lyrics to the Guy Mitchell March 1953 hit at -- for example -- "Gary and Mary's U.K. No 1 Lyrics Site"). - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: OpGa124

She Wore a Wreath of Roses
DESCRIPTION: "She wore a wreath of roses The night that first we met, Her lovely face was smiling Beneath her curls of jet." Next he sees her with orange blossoms, and someone by her "to soothe her." Now he sees her in "a widow's somber cap"
AUTHOR: Joseph Philip Knight (Source: Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd)
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd)
KEYWORDS: flowers love wife death
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #71, "She Wore a Wreath of Roses" (1 text)
Roud #13895
File: SoSWAWR

She'll Be Coming Round the Mountain
DESCRIPTION: "She'll coming round the mountain when she comes." The unidentified "she" arrives with great pomp and ceremony, and is greeted with celebration (e.g. the killing and cooking of the old red rooster). The song often is supplemented by summer camp nonsense
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (recording, Henry Whitter)
KEYWORDS: travel nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE) Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (10 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 460, "She'll Be Coming 'Round the Mountain" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 460, "She'll Be Coming Round the Mountain" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 372-373, "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune plus a spiritual Sandburg describes as the source of the song)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 214 "She'll Be Comin' Around the Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 276, "She'll Be Comin' 'Round the Mountain" (1 text)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 156, "She'll Be Coming 'Round the Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Messeri-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 26-27, "Coming 'Round the Mountain" (1 text)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, pp. 496-497, "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain" DT, COMRND2*
cf. Cox-FolkMusicInANewfoundlandOutport, p. 190, "She'll Be Coming Round the Mountain" (reference only)
Roud #4204
RECORDINGS:
H. M. Barnes & his Blue Ridge Ramblers, "She'll Be Comin' 'Round the Mountain When She Comes" (Brunswick 310, 1929/Supertone S-2052, 1930)
Vernon Dalhart, "She's Comin' Round the Mountain" (Montgomery Ward M-8148, 1939)
Vernon Dalhart & Co., "She's Comin' 'Round the Mountain" (Edison 51608, 1925)
Al Hopkins & his Buckle Busters, "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain" (Brunswick 181/Vocalion 5240 [as the Hill Billies], 1927)
Uncle Dave Macon & John McGhee, "Comin' Round the Mountain" (Brunswick 263, 1928; Brunswick 425, 1930)
John D. Mounce et al, "She'll Be Comin' 'Round the Mountain" (on MusOzarks01)
Elmo Newcomer, "She'll Be Comin' 'Round the Mountain" CroMart 100, n.d. but prob. late 1940s - early 1950s
Parman and Snyder, "She'll Be Coming Around the Mountain" (OKeh 45302, 1929; rec. 1928)
Pickard Family, "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain" (Oriole 1502/Conqueror 7251/Microphone [Canada] 22388, 1929; Challenge 992, n.d.; Broadway 8148 [as Pleasant Family], n.d.)
Red River Dave, "She'll Be Coming Round the Mountain" (Musicraft 287, 1944)
Rhythm Wreckers, "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain" (Vocalion 3341, 1936)
Carson Robison [Trio], "She'll Be Comin' 'Round the Mountain" (Crown 3027, c. 1930)
Roe Bros. & Morrell, "She'll Be Coming Round the Mountain" (Columbia 15156-D, 1927)
Pete Seeger, "She'll Be Coming Round the Mountain" (on PeteSeeger03, PeteSeegerCD03) (on PeteSeeger21)
Gid Tanner & his Skillet Lickers, "She'll Be Comin' 'Round the Mountain" (Columbia 15200-D, 1927; rec. 1926)
Henry Whitter, "She'll Be Comin' 'Round the Mountain" (OKeh 40063, 1924)
Jimmie Wilson & his Catfish String Band, "She's Comin' Round the Mountain" (Victor V-40163, 1929)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Old Ship of Zion (I)" (form, tune, lyrics)
cf. "I Am Growing Old and Gray" (tune)
cf. "Drive It On" (tune)
cf. "Ye Cannae Shove Yer Granny" (tune)
cf. "Ding Dong Dollar" (tune)
cf. "Ballymurphy" (tune)
cf. "The Ten Virgins" (structure, tune)
SAME TUNE:
Ye Cannae Shove Yer Granny Aff a Bus (File: DTgranbu)
I'm Going to Ship on the Mike Davis (Wheeler, p. 115)
Skidding Down the Runway (File: Hopk121)
Bill Cox, "She'll Be Comin' 'Round the Mountain - No. 2" (Gennett 6974/Supertone 9556 [as Charley Blake], 1929)
Fiddlin' John Carson, "The New 'Comin' Round the Mountain" (Bluebird B-5401, 1934)
Mickey Katz, "She'll Be Coming 'Round the Katzkills" (Capitol 1718, 1951)
Anonymous singer, "There's a Skeeter" (on Unexp1)
Ding Dong Dollår (Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 250-252; Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 309, where it is incorrectly attributed to Hamish Henderson rather than John Mack)

NOTES [171 words]: Fuld reports that "substantially this melody" was in print in 1899 in "Old Plantation Hymns," but the text was "When the Chariot Comes." Fuld assumes the "Round the Mountain" lyrics are more recent (he knows of no printing before Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag). The notes in Brown list it as a "parody or secularization of 'The Old Ship of Zion'" (included in the index as "The Old Ship of Zion (I), but note that the phrase is not found in Sandburg's spiritual version); Roud goes so far as to lump them. The Brown text does mention Mary, though it's not clear that this is the mother of Jesus. - RBW

The pattern and tune of "I'm Going To Walk With Jesus By Myself" and "When the Chariot Comes" are close to "She'll Be Coming Around the Mountain." - BS

The anonymous singer on Unexp1 sings "There's a 'skeeter on my peter, sweet Marie." Folk process. - PJS

Reginald Nettel, Seven Centuries of Popular Song, Phoenix House, 1956, p. 232, reports a verse, "They'll be coming in formation when they come." Again, folk process. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: San372

She'll Be Right

DESCRIPTION: "When you're hunting in the mountains and your dog puts up a chase" and a boar attacks, you'll eventually get pork. When you learn you dropped your socks in the beer you were brewing, there's a fix. And so forth. "So don't worry, mate, she'll be right."

AUTHOR: Peter Cape (source: Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ)

EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (source: Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ)

KEYWORDS: humorous disaster drink dog hunting technology

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, pp. 225-227, "She'll Be Right" (1 text)

NOTES [207 words]: According to Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, this song is an "unofficial national anthem." I'm including it in the Index on that basis, though I know of no field collections. There is a 1979 recording by the Canterbury Bush Orchestra (a group which included Phil Garland) which implies the song has been folk processed a little. Garland does print several verses written by people other than original author Peter Cape. The phrase "She'll Be Right" is certainly a folk phrase; Ell, p. 232 says that it "Epitomises the laid-back Kiwi attitude to problems or challenges. At best it reflects the positivism of the American expression 'No worries' or 'Don't worry.' At worst, and more frequently, it reflects a less-than-perfectionist attitude to getting things right."

The use of "she" for "it" is a common New Zealandism; NewZealandDictionary, p. 244, entry on "she," item 1, says the word is "Applied to things (both material and immaterial) to which femaleness is not conventionally attributed, often replacing the impersonal pronoun it." This leads to "the use of she'll be and she's with complements to introduce common idiomatic phrases expressing confidence or reassurance in an outcome," of which "she'll be right" is an example. - RBW

Bibliography

Last updated in version 5.2
File: Garl225

She's a Flower from the Fields of Alabama

DESCRIPTION: "It was one evening long ago" when the singer went to ask the hand of the girl. Her mother gladly consents. He looks back happily. Chorus: "She's a flower from the fields of Alabam, Take her for she loves you, yes I know...."
She's a Flower from the Fields of Alabama

DESCRIPTION: Every couplet is followed by "You's/he's/she's a fool, You/he/she ain't got no sense." Some couplets rhyme on color like "See that woman all dressed in red Going with a man will kill you dead" (see notes)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (recording, Ed Bell)

KEYWORDS: courting colors nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

RECORDINGS:
Ed Bell, "She's a Fool Gal" (Columbia 14595-D, 1930)
Emmett Murray, "She's a Fool, She Ain't Got No Sense" (on USFlorida01)

NOTES [74 words]: Couplets on color include "You may think because you're black I'm going to beg you to take me back"; "You may think cause I look green I never been down in New Orleans"; "See that woman all dressed in white Bet you five dollars she won't treat you right." Other verses include "Any time I go to town Meet my gal hanging 'round" and "I went down the smoky road Like to brought me back on a cooling board. I'm a fool but I ain't going no more." - BS

Last updated in version 4.2

File: RcSaFSAG

She's a Tiddley Ship

DESCRIPTION: "She's a tiddley ship, through the ocean she'll flip, She's sailing by night and by day. And when she's in motion, she's the pride of the ocean... And 'Jimmy' looks on her with pride," but "This four-funnelled bastard is getting me down."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)

KEYWORDS: navy sailor work travel hardtimes

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) Canada

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, pp. 23-24, "She's a Tiddley Ship" (1 text, with tune on p. 148)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Little Ships" (mentions of HMS Nelson, Rodney, and Hood)

SAME TUNE:
Prince Henry Song (File: Hopk044)
A Band of Banshee Airmen (File: Hopk060)

NOTES [614 words]: Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy's version of this refers to the ship Ariadne. The Royal Navy in World War II had a ship Ariadne but she was a minelayer built in the 1940s (Worth, p. 121); I doubt she was so much into spit and polish. There was also a World War I Ariadne, a cruiser of the Diadem class, built 1898-1900 (Wragg, p. 187), which made them almost obsolete by 1914 (indeed, the Ariadne was made into a minelayer, and the rest of the class mostly She's A Wrang for the Richtin ot

DESCRIPTION: "She's a wrang for the richtin o't" (x2).

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1873 (Harris manuscript)

KEYWORDS: nonballad
She's At The Bar Selling Soap Soda and Blue

DESCRIPTION: "She's at the bar, selling soap, soda and blue, And things too superfluous to mention to you"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)

KEYWORDS: commerce

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 135, "She's At The Bar Selling Soap Soda and Blue" (1 short text)
Roud #16238

NOTES [16 words]: The current description is based on the OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin fragment. - BS

Last updated in version 3.2

File: OCC135

She's Aye Tease, Teasin'

DESCRIPTION: "I bocht my wife a steen [stone] o' lint [flax] As good e'er did grow, She carded it ... And let it in lowe [set it on fire]. She's aye tease, teasin', She's aye teasin me; This wicked wife she'll en' my life She winna lat me be"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Greig/Duncan7)

KEYWORDS: shrewishness fire husband wife

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan7 1338, "She's Aye Tease, Teasin'" (1 fragment)
Roud #7221

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "The Spinnin o't" (theme: the wife who won't spin, but sets the flax on fire)
- cf. "The Wee Pickle Tow" (theme: the wife who won't spin, but sets the flax on fire)
- cf. "The Pound of Tow" (theme: the wife who won't spin)
- cf. "The Weary Pound o' Tow" (theme: the wife who won't spin)
- cf. "Scolding Wife" (IV) (structure and subject)

NOTES [101 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan7 fragment; the [glosses are] from Greig/Duncan7.

Though the Greig/Duncan7 fragment shares a narrow theme with the listed cross-references neither its structure nor words are close enough that I can lump it with any of those songs. The closest is the Burns and Chambers text of "The Weary Pund o' Tow" that shares the first two lines of the Greig/Duncan7 text.

The structure of the Greig/Duncan7 text fits "Scolding Wife" (IV). If I could find a hint of the "She's Aye Tease, Teasin'" verse in any "Scolding Wife" texts I would consider them the same song. - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD71338
She's But My Auld Sheen When You've Gotten Her

DESCRIPTION: "She's but my auld sheen when you've gotten her."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)

KEYWORDS: courting

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #88, p. 2, ("She's but my auld sheen when you've gotten her") (1 fragment)

NOTES [337 words]: The current description is all of the Greig fragment.

"... the same parish of Keith Hall disputes Galston, in Ayrshire, the honour of having given birth to the "Lass of Patie's [or Peaty's] Mill" [about 1550]. In the Statistical Account of this parish, it is said that her maiden name was Anderson. A great-grandson of her's [sic], aged eighty-nine, [born in 1703, and living in 1791] and a number of her descendants, reside in this district, and its parishes of Kinnellar and Dyce. Her father was prior of Patie's Mill in Keith Hall, of Tulliekinie in try, and Standing Stones in the parish of Dyce. In ... her beauty or fortune, or from both causes, she had many admirers, and she was an only child. One Sangster, of Boddo, in New Machar parish, wished to carry her off, but was interrupted by a dog, and very roughly handled by her father, who was called Black John Anderson. In revenge, he wrote an ill-natured song, of which her great-grandson remembers these words, "Ye'll tell the gowk that gets her, He gets but my auld sheen" (source: The Beauties of Scotland (Edinburgh, 1806 ("Digitized by Google")), Vol. IV, p. 422; inserted notes are from John Glen, Early Scottish Melodies (Edinburgh, 1900 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 65).

In eight versions of "The False Bride," Greig/Duncan 1198, the jilted suitor "went up to the bridegroom, says I'll tell ye a guise I've lien wi' your bonnie bride aftener than thrice And she daurna deny in the bed where she lies, And she's but my auld sheen when ye've gotten her."
The old shoe metaphor is given a slightly different twist in "The Days Are Awa That I Have Seen," Greig/Duncan 1136A ("But if she think's she's deen me muckle ill, she is fair misteen, For she is only dancin' in my auld sheen") and 1136B ("... begone bonnie laddie for I carena. Ye think that I'm carin' but I'm nae nane, For ye're only wearnin' my auld sheen").

While Greig's fragment could easily just be folded into "The False Bride," Greig's story leads me to give it its own entry. - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: Grg088a

She's Gone to be a Mormonite

DESCRIPTION: "I'll tell you what I'm going to do And that without delay, I'll pack my trunk and I'll be off, I'll go this very day." The singer tells of a girl who's "Gone to be a Mormonite In the new Jerusalem." (He?) knows not where she is, except that she's Mormon

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Randolph)

KEYWORDS: separation travel marriage religious

FOUND IN: US(Ro,So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Randolph 501, "She's Gone to be a Mormonite" (1 text)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #221, "My Wife Has Become a Mormonite" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7640

NOTES [158 words]: Although I have no direct evidence of it, I suspect -- both for psychological reasons (why would a "girl" want to be a Mormon?) and the strange constructions in Randolph's text of the song -- that it was a man who was originally referred to in it. (In Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah's version, the singer misses his wife, who has vanished, probably to become a Mormon, and has taken his furniture.) How it came to refer to a woman I do not know. To be fair, there was a legend that said that Mormon men were particularly sexually proficient (see the notes to "The Mormon Cowboy" in Logdson's The Whorehouse Bells Were Ringing), and Fawn M. Brodie's biography of Joseph Smith, No Man Knows My History (1945, 1971; I use the 1995 Vintage Books edition), p. xii, notes that Smith had some fifty wives in his life, most of them voluntary -- and that over 200 wives "married" him after his death. (Of course, they were safe from him when dead.) - RBW

Last updated in version 3.8
She's Like the Swallow

DESCRIPTION: "She's like a swallow that flies so high, She's like a river that never runs dry, She's like the sunshine on the lee shore, I love my love and love is no more." A lament for a lost girl: "She laid her down, no word she spoke, until [her] heart was broke"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland)

KEYWORDS: death, separation, loneliness

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf,Ont)

REFERENCES (9 citations):
- Peacock, pp. 711-714, "She's Like the Swallow" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Fowke/Johnston-FolkSongsOfCanada, pp. 140-141, "She's Like the Swallow" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Fowke/MacMillan-PenguinBookOfCanadianFolkSongs 63, "She's Like the Swallow" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland 83, "She's Like the Swallow" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario 57, "She's Like a Swallow" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, p. 120, "She's Like the Swallow" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 150, "She's Like The Swallow" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: Neil V. Rosenberg, "'She's Like the Swallow': Folksong as Cultural Icon" (article printed in _Newfoundland and Labrador Studies_, Volume 22, No. 1, pp. 75-114; includes every known traditional text and tune)

Roud #2306

RECORDED:
- Anita Best and Pamela Morgan, "She's Like the Swallow" (on NFABestPMorgan01)
- Omar Blondahl, "She's Like the Swallow" (on NFOBlondahl05)

NOTES [100 words]: Fowke observes, "The lines suggest an English origin, and probably they formed part of a longer song [perhaps similar to "The Butcher Boy"?], but the years have polished the fragment that survives until it approaches perfection."

The Rosenberg article cited above includes all traditional versions known (e.g. those collected by Karpeles, Peacock, and Fowke), and discusses how both Karpeles and Peacock fiddled with the texts of the versions they collected in their printed versions. Thus the famous recordings of this song are in fact modified versions. For details, see the Rosenberg article. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.4

File: FJ140

Shear Um

DESCRIPTION: "Makes no difference How you shear um; Makes no difference How or when; Makes no difference How you shear um Just so you shear um clean."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida)

KEYWORDS: sheep

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #99, "Shear Um" (1 short text)

Roud #5005

NOTES [28 words]: Roud lumps this with Brown's "Share 'Em," probably because they both seem to be fragments about shearing, but I can't see much actual similarity, so I split them. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.7

File: Morr099

Shearer and the Swaggie, The DESCRIPTION: A gun shearer finishes his work, collects his pay, and takes to the road. He meets a swaggie; they camp. In the night, afraid for his pay, he flees at a noise. The swaggie also runs, afraid of the shearer. They meet again and wonder why they are running

AUTHOR: unknown
Shearer's Dream, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, I dreamt I shored in a shearin'-shed, and it was a dream of joy, For every one of the rouseabouts was a girl dressed up as a boy." He dreams of clean sheep, of a cool, comfortable shed, of happy dances with the girls... and wakes to find it a dream

AUTHOR: attributed to Henry Lawson (1867-1922)
EARLIEST DATE: 1902 (Lawson’s _Children of the Bush_)
KEYWORDS: dream work sheep Australia
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 116-117, "The Shearer's Dream" (1 text, 1 tune)
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 235-236, "The Shearer's Dream" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, pp. 164-165, "The Shearer's Dream" (1 text, 1 tune)
Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads, pp. 155-156, "The Shearer's Dream" (1 text)
NOTES [242 words]: Henry Lawson published this, but it is not clear from the extant records whether he actually wrote it or just touched it up. Paterson/Fahey/Seal-OldBushSongs-CentenaryEdition mention an informant who claim to have learned it in 1884. It is worth noting that two different tunes are known.

John S. Manifold, _Who Wrote the Ballads? Notes on Australian Folksong_, Australasian Book Society, 1964, p. 138, has this to say of the matter: "'The Shearer's Dream' has grown two tunes also: one in the major mode, one in the minor. Once more we find a certain confusion about Lawson's degree of authorship. He quotes the words in the course of a story in _Send Round The Hat_, as a song sung by travelers camped in a creek-bed outside Bourke, while 'Mitchell and I listened.' The same words, slightly cut down, occur again in the McKee Wright edition of _Lawson's Poetical Works_. In the first case there is an attempt to 'describe' the tune; in the seond no tune is mentioned. Is the poem really just something that Lawson heard and polished up. Stewart and Keesing seem to believe that this is what he did with 'The Bunk in the Humpy.' I am inclined to think 'The Shearer's Dream' is all Lawson, and that he was trying to show in the first instnce that he too could write a 'genuine' bush song.
"If that is so, then we may congratulate him on having succeeded. 'The Shearer's Dream' goes over with bush audiences as 'Freedom on the Wallaby' does not." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2
File: MA116

Shearer's Song

DESCRIPTION: "We all are jolly shearers, and we like it very well." Health to our master, prosperity to his flock, and the shearers, and the man that winds the yarn. "We kiss the girls wherever we go and our wives at other times"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames)
KEYWORDS: farming drink nonballad sheep
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 39, "Shearer's Song" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 468)
Roud #1226
Shearin's Nae for You, The

DESCRIPTION: The girl is urged to "tak the ribbons fae yer hair" or the "flounces frae yer gown," because her "belly's roarin' fu'". She blames the young man (soldier?) for seducing her. He urges her to mind her baby. Other mutual accusations may follow

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Grieg collection)
KEYWORDS: sex seduction childbirth soldier dialog accusation abandonment clothes
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
  Greig/Duncan7 1486, "The Shearin's Nae for You" (3 texts, 1 tune)
  Porter/Gower-Jeannie-Robertson-EmergentSingerTransformativeVoice #37, pp. 179, "Tak' the Buckles Frae You Sheen" (1 text, 1 tune)
  DT, SHEARNAE* SHEARNA2*
  Roud #4845
CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "Alford Vale" (tune)
  cf. "Kelvingrove" (tune)
  cf. "O Tell Me Will Ye Go" (tune)
  cf. "Dearest Lassie O!" (tune)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Bonnie Lassie O
NOTES [255 words]: This song supplies the melody for a poem by Thomas Lyle, "Kelvingrove" or "Kelvin Grove," which apparently is sung in the Scottish schools despite being utterly disdained by folksingers. (According to Jon W. Finson, The Voices That Are Gone: Themes in Nineteenth-Century American Popular Song, Oxford University Press, 1994, p. 281, there are also Kelvingrove variants by John Sims and by Charles Edward Horn). Lest we be too nasty about Kelvin Grove, we note that the Kelvin Stream (a small river near Glasgow) lent its name to William Thomson, who would in time become Baron Kelvin of Largs (commonly called Lord Kelvin). The Kelvin temperature scale of course is named after him. And well deserved, because -- while Kelvin did not invent thermodynamics (depending on how you look at things, either Sadi Carnot or James Joule did that), he expanded on Joule's work and made it a part of the standard physics. Which is extremely important, since thermodynamics is pretty much the basis of all of physics (e.g. the inverse square law governing gravity and electromagnetism follows from the first law of thermodynamics -- think of a source giving off a pulse of gravity waves, which expand along the surface of the sphere. Since the total energy must be constant, and the surface area of a sphere increases according to the square of the radius, the potential must decrease with the square of the radius.) So, anyway, though Kelvingrove the poem is unmemorable, Kelvin the place has a noble niche in the history of science. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: RcShNaYo

Shearing

DESCRIPTION: "All aboard! All aboard is the cry, There's a rippin' lot of shearers in the shed." Various shearers can be expected to set records. Big Mick and Barcoo Ben compete closely. The shearers are all happy at and clever in their work

AUTHOR: Words: David McKee Wright
EARLIEST DATE: 1897 (Wright, "Station Ballads," according to Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry)
KEYWORDS: worker sheep
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 87, "Shearing" (1 text, 1 tune) (p. 49 in the 1972 edition)
  Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, pp. 148-149, "(Shearing)" (1 text)

File: Colq049
Shearing at the Castlereigh

DESCRIPTION: "The bells are set a-ringing and the engine gives a toot, There are five-and-thirty shearers here a-shearing for the loot." The shearers are reminded that London depends on Castlereigh wool. The boss complains that the shearers were "born to swing a pick"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1968 (Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia)
KEYWORDS: work boss sheep Australia
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, p. 275, "Shearing at the Castlereigh" (1 text, 1 tune)
Meredith/Tritton-DukeOfTheOutback, p. 88, "Shearing at Castlereach" (1 short text, 1 tune)
SAME TUNE:
The Irishman's Song (TrMe090)
File: MA275

Shearing in a Bar

DESCRIPTION: "My shearing days are over, though I never was a gun, I could always count my twenty at the end of every run." Despite his lack of success while actually working as a shearer, the singer never has trouble "when I'm shearing in a bar."

AUTHOR: Duke Tritton (source: Meredith/Tritton-DukeOfTheOutback)
EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (field recording of Duke Tritton)
KEYWORDS: humorous sheep worker drink
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Meredith/Tritton-DukeOfTheOutback, pp. 69-70, "Shearing in a Bar" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Matthew Richardson, _Once a Jolly Swagman: The Ballad of Waltzing Matilda_, Melbourne University Press, 2006, p. 54, "Shearing in a Bar" (1 excerpt)
Roud #24811
NOTES [27 words]: Although quite recently composed, I'm sure I've heard this somewhere, so it seems to have gotten passed around at least a little bit. I index it on that basis. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: TrMe069

Shearing's Coming Round, The

DESCRIPTION: "There's a sound of many voices in the camp and on the track... For the shearing's coming round, boys, the shearing's coming round, And the stations... have begun to hear the sound." It's the talk of the entire region

AUTHOR: David McKeel Wright (source: Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)
EARLIEST DATE: 1896 (Dunedin "Otago Witness," according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)
KEYWORDS: sheep worker nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, p. 131, "Shearing's Coming" (1 text)
Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, p. 19, "(no title)" (1 fragment, probably this); p. 150, "The Shearing's Coming Round" (1 text)
File: BaRo131

Sheath and Knife [Child 16]

DESCRIPTION: The princess (Jeannie) is pregnant by her brother. Rather than reveal the truth, the two leave for the greenwood, where he shoots her and buries her "with their bairn at her feet." He returns home, but even the joys of royalty cannot console him.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1796 (Scots Musical Museum)
KEYWORDS: homicide incest pregnancy burial mourning royalty
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Child 16, "Sheath and Knife" (6 texts)
Bronson 16, "Sheath and Knife" (2 versions)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildrensPopularBallads 16, "Sheath and Knife" (1 version: #1)
DT 16, SHEATHKF* STHKNF2 STHKNF3
ADDITIONAL: Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #64, "Sheath and Knife" (1 text)
Roud #3960
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Leesome Brand" [Child 15] (lyrics about the "sheathe and knife")
cf. "The Bonnie Hind" [Child 50] (plot, lyrics)
NOTES [250 words]: On the scientific evidence that brothers and sisters raised apart are particularly likely to fall in love, and some further speculation as to why, see the notes to "Babylon, or, The Bonnie Banks o Fordie [Child 14]."
Child in his notes to "Robin Hood's Death" [Child 120] suggests that the penultimate scene here once followed the same course as in that ballad -- that is, presumably, instead of the girl choosing a spot and asking her brother to shoot and bury her there, that she once shot the arrow herself to choose her grave site. This is perhaps possible -- in each case, she chooses where she is buried -- but I doubt it. The effect is the same, but the symbolism is different. In "Robin Hood's Death," the bow itself is called upon to choose the burial place -- a strong symbol of Robin's career with the bow. In "Sheathe and Knife," the girl chooses the exact spot -- and then the boy shoots a silver arrow as the last gift, or tribute, he can give her. The emphasis is very different.
Some versions soften the plot so that she merely dies in childbirth rather than him killing her. But this, I think, loses the point of the song.
The symbol of a knife so fine that no smith can replace it occurs in at least two ballads, "Sheath and Knife" [Child 16] and "Leesome Brand" [Child 15], also in the Percy Folio version of "The Squire of Low Degree," lines 121-126; for this, see William Edward Mead, _The Squyr of Lowe Degree: A Middle English Metrical Romance_, Ginn & Company, 1904, p. 34. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: C016

Sheelicks

DESCRIPTION: About a riotous wedding, attended by all whether invited or not, at McGinty's. A tailor with a wooden leg loses it in mid-dance; a cyclist is carried home in a wheelbarrow; a man comes with a hundred pounds, goes home with nothing. Plus the food is bad.
AUTHOR: George Bruce Thomson
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan3)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer tells of a riotous wedding, attended by all whether invited or not, at McGinty's Meal and Ale. Mrs. McGinty trips over a pig; a tailor with a wooden leg loses it in mid-dance; a bicyclist is carried home in a wheelbarrow; another man comes with a hundred pounds, goes home with nothing. The food is bad, besides. Chorus: "Hi, hi, went the drum! Diddle, diddle, went the fiddle/.../And the jing-a-ring went round about like sheelicks in a riddle"
KEYWORDS: disability wedding dancing drink food party humorous animal
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast 134, pp. 2-3, "Sheelicks" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 614, "Sheelicks" (1 text, 1 tune)
MacColl/Seeger-TravellersSongsFromEnglandAndScotland 109, "Sheelicks" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, MEALNAL2*
Roud #2518
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Blythesome Bridal" (theme) and references there
cf. "The Deil Amon' the Tailors" (tune, per Greig)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
McGinty's Wedding
NOTES [61 words]: [MacColl & Seeger's] informant, Maggie McPhee, has evidently transplanted bits of another Thompson piece, "McGinty's Meal and Ale", into "Sheelicks." His compositions evidently entered tradition around the turn of the 19th-20th centuries, as Greig collected them from informants over a wide area. "Sheelicks", by the way, are husked grain; a riddle is a sieve. - PJS

Sheep Knows His Shepherd's Voice

DESCRIPTION: "Sheep know his shepherd's voice, Yes Lord I know the way... You know the way an' you wouldn't come home Yes Lord I know the way." The pace quickens "Make a jump, jump for joy""Sheep jump, jump for joy."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands)
KEYWORDS: work nonballad religious animal
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands, pp. 226-227, ("Sheep know his shepher's voice") (1 text)

NOTES [140 words]: The current description is based on the Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaIslands text. Parrish writes that this was sung by rice thrashers "for the rice dance." From Parrish's description the song seems to progress like a "shout." - BS

John 10:1-5 King James Version: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber. [2] But he that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep. [3] To him the porter openeth; and the sheep hear his voice: and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out. [4] And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him: for they know his voice. [5] And a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him: for they know not the voice of strangers." - RBW

Sheep Shearing (I)

DESCRIPTION: Wool "clothes the beggar and the King" and "infant babe"; "the last garments we shall have A shroud when we go to the grave." The singer prefers wool to silks and satins. The wool trade has increased "since Joshua [sic; Jason] stole the golden fleece"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople)
KEYWORDS: commerce nonballad sheep
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople, p. 241, "Sheep Shearing" (1 text)
Roud #4743
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Sheep-Shearing" (theme: praise of sheep and wool) and references there

Sheep Shearing (II)

DESCRIPTION: "How delightful to see in the evenings of spring, When the sheep are a-going to the fold." The sheep are shorn in the heat of June. The sheep are a blessing; the meat is good and wool is warm. The singer toasts the master and flock.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Sharp collection)
KEYWORDS: shepherd work nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 91, "Sheep Shearing" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1582
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Sheep-Shearing" (theme: praise of sheep and wool) and references there
Sheep Shell Corn by the Rattle of His Horn

DESCRIPTION: "Sheep shell corn by the rattle of his horn, blow, horn, blow, Send to the mill by the whippoorwill." "O! blow your horn, blow, horn, blow" (x2) Verses about life at corn-shucking time and a desire to have done for the day.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: work food animal
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 196, "Sheep Shell Corn by the Rattle of His Horn" (1 text plus 1 fragment and a mention of 1 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 196, "Sheep Shell Corn by the Rattle of His Horn" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, Celia M. Benton, "Corn Shucking in Sampson County," Vol. XXII, No. 4 (Nov 1974), p. 137, "(Sheep a-shuckin' corn by the sound of his horn" (1 short text, 1 tune))
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, Bill Phillips, "The Hollerers from Spivey's Corner," Vol. XXIV, No. 3 (Nov 1976), p. 87, (Cows in the old field, don't you hear the bell)"" (1 text, possibly this and certainly a corn-shucking song)

Sheep Stealer

DESCRIPTION: Will Marpass stole a sheep in the marsh Saturday night. He and some friends kill and skin it, distribute the parts and have a fine dinner Sunday.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople)
KEYWORDS: theft food sheep
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople 93, "Sheep Stealer" (1 text)

Sheep Stealer, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer goes out in "the night when the moon do shine bright, There's a number of work to be done ... on another man's ground." He steals sheep and takes them home to be butchered by his children while he stands guard against the constable.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (ENMacCollSeeger02)
KEYWORDS: sheep children thief theft
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Palmer-ThePainfulPlow, #12, "The sheepstealer" (1 text, 1 tune)
Purslow-TheConstantLovers, p. 89, "The Sheep-stealer" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, SHPSTEAL
Roud #1667
RECORDINGS:
Ewan MacColl and Peggy Seeger, "The Sheep Stealer" (on ENMacCollSeeger02)
NOTES [21 words]: From ENMacCollSeeger02 album cover notes: "H.E.D. Hammond recorded two Dorset sets of this curious song in 1905 and 1906." - BS

Last updated in version 2.6
Sheep-Nanny
DESCRIPTION: "Sheep-nanny! She-e-ep-nanny" "Baaa!" Game, in which a leader tries to pull a flock of sheep out of a circle and those inside try to pull them in.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains)
KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad animal
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains, p. 28, "Sheep-Nanny" (1 short text)
File: Skean028

Sheep-Shearing Song, The
DESCRIPTION: "Our sheep-shear is over, and supper is past ... Here's a health to our Misteress"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs)
KEYWORDS: farming drink nonballad sheep
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, p. 149, "The Sheep-Shearing Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1385
File: BrMa149

Sheep-Shearing, The
DESCRIPTION: Singer praises sheep and shearing. The singer laments that the sheep must be sheared in the June heat. In some versions, the singer tells of the master's demands for more wool. The song ends "when all our work is done" and the crew goes celebrating
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1760
KEYWORDS: work nonballad sheep drink
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 95, "The Sheep Shearing" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 267, "The Black Ram" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-ThePainfulPlow, #20, "The Sheep Shearing" (1 text, 1 tune)
Copper-ASongForEverySeason, pp. 256-257, "Sheep-Shearing Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, SHEEPSHR SHEEPSH2*
Roud #879
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Sweet Nightingale" (tune)
cf. "Sheep Shearing (I)" (theme: praise of sheep and wool)
cf. "Sheep Shearing (II)" (theme: praise of sheep and wool)
NOTES [19 words]: "The Sweet Nightingale", with which this song shares a tune, is not to be confused with "One Morning in May". -PJS
Last updated in version 5.0
File: ShH95

Sheep, Sheep, Come Home
DESCRIPTION: "Sheep, sheep, come home." "I'm afraid." Of what? "The wholf." "The wolf has gone (somewhere), so sheep, sheep, come home."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)
KEYWORDS: playparty animal shepherd home
FOUND IN: Britain New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, pp. 92-93, "(Sheep, sheep,
Sheepcrook and Black Dog

DESCRIPTION: The singer asks the girl to marry him. She says she is too young; she will work for a fine lady for a time. Later she writes to him that she is happy where she is and does not wish to wed a shepherd. He abandons his work and its tools.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1775 (broadside, "The Constant Shepherd and the Unconstant Shepherdess")
KEYWORDS: love betrayal work servant shepherd youth
FOUND IN: Ireland Britain(England(South)) Canada(Mar,Newf,Ont) US(Ap)
REFERENCES (9 citations):
Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, pp. 128-129, "Sheepcrook and Black Dog" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H30a, p. 390, "My Flora and I" (1 text, 1 tune)
MacColl/Seeger-TravellersSongsFromEnglandAndScotland 70, "Sheep-Crook and Black Dog" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Gl 98, "Sheep Crook and Black Dog" ; Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Ox 303, "Sheep Crook and Black Dog" (2 texts)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #83, "Sheepcrook and Black Dog" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 480-481, "My Flora and Me" (1 text plus an excerpt, 2 tunes)
Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland 58, "Floreo" (1 text, 3 tunes)
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 82, "The Young Shepherd" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 76, pp. 123-124, "My Pretty Flora" (1 text, 1 tune, with this plot although no references to black dogs or sheepcrooks)
Roud #948
RECORDINGS:
Nick Davis, "Young Flora" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Ewan MacColl and Peggy Seeger, "Sheepcrook and Black Dog" (on ENMacCollSeeger02)
Mike Kent, "Nightingale" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Fine Laurel
The Unkind Shepherdess

Sheepfold, The

DESCRIPTION: "Whilst tyrants grasp with greedy aim ... As Friends of Freedom we aspire The Rights of Man for to require." Holy scripture tells "that all men shall be one sheepfold and under one great master." That time is coming and "we will strive to haste it faster"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1798 (_Paddy's Resource_ (New York), according to Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)
KEYWORDS: nonballad political
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 16, "The Sheepfold" (1 text)
NOTES [21 words]: The discussion of Jesus as Shepherd occupies most of John 10, with the reference to one flock and one shepherd in John 10:16. - RBW
File: Moyl016
Sheepwasher, The

DESCRIPTION: "When first I took the Western track, 'twas many years ago, No master then stood up so high, no servant stood so low." The singer recalls how he used to have a much better life. He urges ordinary Queenslanders to unite against tyranny

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook)

KEYWORDS: Australia hardtimes poverty work

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, p. 138, "The Sheepwasher" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [98 words]: John S. Manifold, Who Wrote the Ballads? Notes on Australian Folksong, Australasian Book Society, 1964, says that "The vanished trade of sheepwashing has left us one ballad, 'The Sheepwasher's Lamen.' I am pretty certain that it was by reason of its unusually strong political feeling that this one stayed alive. The sheepwashing trade disappeared, but the shearers took up the ballad that suited the temper of the strikers of the '90s." But there seem to be two sheepwashing songs, "The Sheepwasher's Lament" and "The Sheepwasher" -- and the one Manifold prints is "The Sheepwasher." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: PASB138

Sheepwasher's Lament, The

DESCRIPTION: "Come now, ye sighing washers all, Join in my doleful lay, Mourn for the times none can recall." The singer remembers good days: "The master was a worker then, The servant was a man." But since the sixties, conditions have grown much worse

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Paterson's _Old Bush Songs_)

KEYWORDS: hardtimes sheep work

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Paterson/Fahey/Seal-OldBushSongs-CentenaryEdition, pp. 204-207, "The Sheepwasher's Lament" (1 text)
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 154-156, "The Sheepwasher's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Bill Beatty, _A Treasury of Australian Folk Tales & Traditions_, 1960 (I use the 1969 Walkabout Paperbacks edition), pp. 295-296, "The Sheep Washer's Lament" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Bonnie Irish Boy" (tune, according to Beatty)

NOTES [98 words]: John S. Manifold, Who Wrote the Ballads? Notes on Australian Folksong, Australasian Book Society, 1964, says that "The vanished trade of sheepwashing has left us one ballad, 'The Sheepwasher's Lamen.' I am pretty certain that it was by reason of its unusually strong political feeling that this one stayed alive. The sheepwashing trade disappeared, but the shearers took up the ballad that suited the temper of the strikers of the '90s." But there seem to be two sheepwashing songs, "The Sheepwasher's Lament" and "The Sheepwasher" -- and the one Manifold prints is "The Sheepwasher." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: PFS204

Sheet Mill Man

DESCRIPTION: "Go away, go away, you sheet mill man, There's a better job in a distant land." The singer plans to head for Knoxville, but arrives home "condemned to die." People cheat him of his pay. He asks to be buried with with "an old flat sheet"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Henry)

KEYWORDS: technology death burial hardtimes drink

FOUND IN: US(Ap)
Sheffield Apprentice, The [Laws O39]

DESCRIPTION: The singer abandons his work in London to go to Holland. His new mistress proposes marriage. He refuses her; he is already engaged. His mistress plants evidence on him and has him condemned as a thief. He bids his Polly farewell and is hanged

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1804
KEYWORDS: travel courting farewell trick lie execution apprentice
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,NE,SE,So) Canada(Mar,Newf) Britain(England(Lond),Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (30 citations):
Laws O39, "The Sheffield Apprentice"
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 131-132, "The Sheffield Apprentice" (1 text)
Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks, pp. 90-93, "The Prentice Boy's Love for Mary" (1 text)
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 94-96, "In the Town of Oxford" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 55, "The Holland Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 80, "Way Up in Sofield (or, The Sheffield Apprentice)"; 152, "The Sheffield 'Prentice" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 83, "The Sheffield Apprentice" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 120, "The Sheffield Apprentice" (1 text plus 1 excerpt and mention of 1 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 120, "The Sheffield Apprentice" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 70, "The Sheffield Apprentice" (1 text, 1 tune)
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 80, "The Sheffield Prentice" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 57, "The Sheffield Apprentice" (1 text)
Cambiaire-EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads, pp. 80-81, "Farewell, Lovely Polly" (1 text)
Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 18-19. "The Apprentice Boy" (1 text)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 16, "The Sherfield (sic.) Apprentice" (1 text plus mention of 1 more)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 97, "The Sheffield Apprentice" (5 texts, 5 tunes)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, pp. 56-57, "Soefield" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H31, p. 411, "The 'Prentice Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 192-194, "The Sheffield 'Prentice Boy" (1 text)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchanan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #45, p. 2, "The Sheffield Apprentice" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan5 998, "The Sheffield Apprentice" (18 texts, 12 tunes)
Ora-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 421-422, "The Sheffield Apprentice" (1 text, 1 tune)
OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart2 45, "The Sheffield Apprentice" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #141, "The Sheffield Apprentice" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 203-206, "The Sheffield Prentice" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 17, "The Sheffield Prentice" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sheila Nee Iyer

DESCRIPTION: Singer meets Sheila Nee Iyer. She tells him to leave off flattering and go away. He claims he would never prove false. "O had I the wealth of the Orient ... I would robe you in splendour"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1788 (broadside, British Library chapbook "Hush the Mouse Off the Hob ...); 1965 (IRPTunney03)

LONG DESCRIPTION: From the chapsbooks cited below as BROADSIDES. The singer, out for a walk, meets Sheela na Guire "on a rosy green bower in rural attire." He is smitten but is afraid to approach her for fear of suffering Actaeon's fate (changed to a stag by Artemis and killed by his own hounds). He takes the risk and asks who or what she is, and she gives him her name. He fears rejection but tells her she outshines "fair Helen, sweet Venus, or fam'd Queen Demira." She is not fooled by his "admirable fine speeches": referring to ore "with fire refined," she says, "true love is the pleasure of a virtuous mind. Your love's like the dross that remains behind." She challenges him to improve his line. He risks "Priamus's" fate (Priapus's rejection by Hestia?) and tells her he will die without her and may he die like Hercules, frantic in the fire, if he is ever false to her. She is convinced and accepts him but warns that "the snowy white fleece if once stained, its purity can never be regained." They kiss. He doesn't need further riches: "No state nor ambition nor title require I've more than them all in my Sheela na Guira."

KEYWORDS: courting rejection money

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Tunney-StoneFiddle, p. 117, "Sheila Nee Iyer" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #3108

RECORDINGS:

Paddy Tunney, "Sheila Nee Eyre" (on IRPTunney03)

BROADSIDES:

BritishLibrary, UIN BLL01002569577, "Hush the Mouse off the Hob, to which are added 2. The Lake of Kilarney 3. Sheela Na Guira 4. The Elegy of Sir J. Colthurst," W. Jones (Dublin), 1790?. Citation at https://tinyurl.com/yad3mk7w

BritishLibrary, UIN BLL001000608378, "The Carlow Lass, to which is added, Patrick's Day, Sheela Na Guira," W. Groggin (Limerick), 1790. Citation at https://tinyurl.com/y99y9vqm

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Eileen McMahon" (aisling format)
cf. "Granuaile" (aisling format) and references there

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Sheela na Guira
Sile Ni Ghadhra

NOTES [559 words]: As in "Lough Erne Shore" and "The Colleen Rue," there is no resolution for the Tunney-StoneFiddle version.

Tunney-StoneFiddle, in a chapter titled "Gael meets Greek," writes "In the whole corpus of traditional song couched in the borrowed Bearla [English], there are none to compare with the high-minded effusions of our hedge-school-master poets. These songs are readily recognisable by the plenitude of classical allusions they contain and by the adaptation of the Gaelic assonantal rhyme, used extensively by the Gaelic Aisling poets of the eighteenth century." The songs in that chapter, illustrating his point, are "Lough Erne Shore," "Sheila Nee Iyer," "Colleen Rue" and "The Flower of Gortadei"; the most extreme example among those is "Sheila Nee Iyer."

For discussion of aislings, see the notes to "Eileen McMahon" and "Granuaile." For a list of songs in the Index meeting the definition of the Aisling, see "Granuaile."

Tunney's "Sheila Nee Iyer" boils the 96-line chapbook version down to 20 lines, sharing 8 lines with the chapbooks and filling the gaps with lines in the spirit of hedge schoolmaster writing. In the shared lines Tunney sometimes has the classical reference right where the chapbook version is mangled. Here are the shared lines, with spelling preserved:

Chapbooks -
16. And in great confusion I asked her name
17. Were she Arora/Aurora, or fam'd Queen Demira
18. She answered I'm neither I am Sheela na Guira
75. May the sufferings of Assifal/Ashcal fall to my share
76. Or I the torment of Tantalus/Tartulu's bear
79. If e'er I prove false to you Sheela na Guira
93. Despising the wealth of the African shore
94. No Sion Peruval nor Mexican oar/ore

Tunney -
03. And in great confusion I did ask her name
04. Are you Flora or Aurora or the famed Queen of Tyre
05. She answered I'm neither I'm Sheila Nee Iyer
11. May sufferings of Sisyphus fall to my share
12. And may I the torments of Tantalus bear
15. If ever I prove false to you Sheila Nee Iyer
16. O had I the wealth of the Orient store
17. All the gems of Peru or the Mexican ore

Did Tunney correct the reference or was his source from a text that had bypassed the chapbooks?

Thanks to Steve Roud for the broadside texts and John Moulden for leads for this note. John Moulden has a possible earlier chapbook: "Hush the mouse off the Hob. To which are added The Lake of Killarney, Sheela na Guira, The Police Guards Dublin by W Jones [c 1780?] [The catalogue notes ñ 'Only four verses of Sheela na Guira.'] Dublin City Library Gilbert Collection Songs 768/2/7a 17."

Steve Roud has the chapbooks in his Broadside index. "Hush the Mouse ..." is Roud #V31451 with a British Library reference 11622.df.34.(22); "The Carlow Lass ..." has British Library reference 11622.df.34(19). - BS

Ben, or his source, suggest that the reference to "Priamus's fate" is to Priapus's rejection by Hestia. I wonder if it isn't just a reference to Priam (Priamos) King of Troy, who suffered years of war, and the loss of almost all his children, before the city was sacked and he was killed. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.4
File: TSF117

Shells of the Ocean (I)

DESCRIPTION: "One summer eve, with pensive thought. I wandered on the sea-beat shore, Where oft in heedless infant thought" he had gathered shells. He dreams again of being young.
Back then, he had thrown all his toys away; thus "we leave them... like a child"

AUTHOR: J. W. Cherry (source: Heart-Songs)
EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Heart-Songs)
KEYWORDS: dream children nonballad

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Heart-Songs, pp. 254-255, "I Wandered by the Sea-Beat Shore" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13817

BROADSIDES:

File: HeSo254

Shenandoah

DESCRIPTION: Usually has chorus "Away, you rolling river... Away, we're bound away, across the wide Missouri (world of Misery, etc.)" The basic text seems to have told of the white man who "loved the Indian maiden" but came from a different world and now is returning

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1894 (Alfred M. Williams, _Studies in Folk-Song and Popular Poetry_, p. 7)
KEYWORDS: shanty courting separation Indians(Am.)
FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,NE) Canada(Mar) West Indies(St Vincent)
REFERENCES (30 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, p. 77, "Shenandoah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 36-37, "Shenandore" (1 text, 1 tune)
Bone-CapstanBars, pp. 104-105, "Shenandoah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 83, "Shenandoah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 112-114, "Shenandoah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 173-178, "Shenandoah" (4 texts, 1 tune) [AbEd, pp. 140-143]
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 29, "Shenandoah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, XI, p. 13, "Shanadar (First version)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 148-149, "Shenandoah or The Wide Missouri" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Shay-AmericanSeaSongsAndChanteys, pp. 66-67, "Shenandoah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 72-73, "Shenandoah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia, p. 24, "Shanadore" (1 text)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 105, "Rolling River" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 408, "The Wide Mizzoura" (1 text, 1 tune)
Terry-Shanty!, "Shenandoah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abrahams-DeepTheWaterShallowTheShore, pp. 73-75, "Oh, My Rolling River" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Lomax-Lomax-FolkSongUSA 41, "Shenandoah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 25, "Shenandoah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 543-546, "The Wild Miz-zou-rye" (1 text, 1 tune); p. 546, "Shenandoah" (1 text)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 1, "Shenandoah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 314-315, "Shenandoah" (1 text)
Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, p. 44, "Shenandoah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Seeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 17, "Shenandoah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 49-51, "Shenandoah" (1 text)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 136, "Shenandoah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 85, "Shenandoah" (1 text)
DT, SHENDOAH*

Maud Karpeles, _Folk Songs of Europe_, Oak, 1956, 1964, p. 48, "Shanadar" (1 text, 1 tune, from Sharp; I suspect it may be composite; see the notes to "Shanadar (I)"
Frederick Pease Harlow, _The Making of a Sailor, or Sea Life Aboard a Yankee Square-Rigger_, 1928; republished by Dover, 1988, pp. 322-323, "Shenandoah" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST Doe077 (Full)
Roud #324

RECORDINGS:
Minster Singers, "Shenandoah" (Victor 61147, n.d., prob. c. 1903)
Paul Robeson, "Shenandoah" (Victor 27430, 1941)
Pete Seeger, "Shenandoah" (on PeteSeeger18)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Shanadar" (lyrics)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
World of Misery
Across the Wide Missouri
The Rolling River

NOTES [160 words]: Bone-CapstanBars reports, "I have never heard this song sung at other duty than weighing anchor.... The very beauty of the air has even curbed the license of wild singers in the text. No bawdy lines, no plaint of mistreatment, no blasphemous exhortations were ranted in the singing of it." - RBW

The St Vincent shanty has some of the usual, if transported, lines -- "Salambo, I love your daughter ... Salambo, this white mulatta" and "Seven long years we toiled the ocean ... Seven long years I never wrote her" -- but a good deal about catching whales and the danger and hard times of the blackfish whaler's life. - BS

Edward Harrigan, _The Mulligans_, G. W. Dillingham, 1901, p. 428, quotes a verse of this:
Oh, Shenandoah! I love your daughter!
Hooray, you rolling river!
I love to plow the deep salt water
Ha! Ha! We're bound away on the wide Missouri!
He calls this a sailor's shanty but has it sung by people going on the Mulligan picnic in New York. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: Doe077

Shenandoah (II)

DESCRIPTION: Capstan shanty. "Oh, Shenandoh, my bully boy, I long to hear you holler, Way-ay, ay ay ay, Shenandoh. I lub ter bring er tot er tum en see ye make a swoller, Way-ay..."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (F.T. Bullen & W.F. Arnold, _Songs of Sea Labor_)

KEYWORDS: shanty worksong

FOUND IN: South America

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 177, "Shenandoah" (1 text, 1 tune-quoted from Bullen)
[AbEd, p. 144]

Roud #324

NOTES [35 words]: According to Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, this was a Negro shanty, but not used so much as sea as when heaving at the winches when working cargo. Bullen collected it in Georgetown, Demerara, South Africa. - SL

File: Hugi177
Shepherd Adonis, The

DESCRIPTION: "Shepherd Adonis, being weary of his sport," lies down to rest; "He wanted no riches nor wealth from the crown." Neither has he ever wanted a girl -- until he sees Betsy. He concludes that he must be in love. He proposes; they quickly marry

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1971 (Copper-ASongForEverySeason)
KEYWORDS: shepherd courting marriage
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Copper-ASongForEverySeason, pp. 258-259, "Shepherd of the Downs" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1215
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 39(189), "The contented lovers: or A pleasant courtship, between a shepherd and a nymph," L. How (London), 18th century?
NOTES [39 words]: This clearly originated as a broadside, "The Shepherd Adonis." Of course, no shepherd was ever named Adonis; this was obviously composed by a poet with more classical training than brains. But, for some reason, the folk adopted it. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.0
File: CopSe258

Shepherd and the Maiden, The DESCRIPTION: A shepherd gives up courting his "shepherdess among the swains" but encounters a lost maiden "wandering on the plain." He falls in love and offers her a drink. She grants him a wish and agrees to wed: "Receive me here ... [then] to my father's court"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames)
KEYWORDS: love marriage sex dialog shepherd
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 170-171, "The Shepherd and the Maiden" (1 text)
(also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 366, "Maid and the Shepherd")
Roud #1272
NOTES [39 words]: Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames: "This is a crude rustic play, rather than a song. It was acted at 'Bark Harvest,' the summer festival of the tanyard workers, at Cricklade, and at Christmas-time by players at the farm-houses." - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: WT170

Shepherd Boy, The (David and Goliath)

DESCRIPTION: The singer dreams and sees a shepherd boy. The boy, David, is leaving his flock to go to the camp of Israel as they fight the Philistines. David kills Goliath with his sling. The singer drinks the health of the shepherd boy

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c.1895 (Graham-TheOrangeSongster)
KEYWORDS: Bible fight soldier
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H803, p. 79, "The Shepherd Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Graham-TheOrangeSongster, p. 6, "The Shepherd's Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5667
NOTES [66 words]: The story of David and Goliath (actually two stories, carefully blended together, in one of which David is Saul's aide/court musician and in another he is a shepherd visiting the battle) is found in 1 Samuel 17.
This is reported to have originated as a Masonic song, but Moulden reports it is now sung by Orangemen, doubtless because of its theme of the small holding off the big and powerful. - RBW
File: HHH803
Shepherd Lad o' Rhynie, The

DESCRIPTION: "Come ye, oh come, my bonnie lass, We'll both join hands and marry." The girl wishes she could, but her father "keeps me under guard." Unable to win the girl, he jumps off a cliff in Rhynie. She dies for love

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: love courting suicide death father
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan6 1194, "The Shepherd Lad o' Rhynie" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #61, p. 1, "The Shepherd Lad of Rhynie" (1 text)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 466-467, "The Shepherd Lad o' Rhynie" (1 text)
Roud #5152
File: 0rd466

Shepherd on the Hill, The DESCRIPTION: "Whaur Gairn's bonnie mountain strea Fa's into winding Dee, Aft 'mang the shady birks we've met, My shepherd lad and me." He sets out to meet her on a cold winter's night, but never appears. At last his frozen body is found.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Ford)
KEYWORDS: love courting death
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 293-294, "The Shepherd on the Hill" (1 text)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #61, p. 1, "The Shepherd on the Hill" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan6 1258, "The Shepherd on the Hill" (7 texts, 2 tunes)
Roud #5646
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Young Charlotte (Fair Charlotte)" [Laws G17] (theme)
File: FVS293

Shepherd's Lament, The

DESCRIPTION: A (shepherd) and a young girl meet on a May morning. He wishes to marry, but she is too young and wishes to work as a servant. After she has left to go into the lady's service, he writes to ask her intent. She says that she never intended to marry him

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1767 (Journal from the Vaughn)
KEYWORDS: love courting separation apprentice servant youth floatingverses
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 227-228, "The Shepherd's Lament" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Green Bushes [Laws P2]" (theme, floating lyrics)
NOTES [61 words]: This song consists almost entirely of floating material, with "The Green Bushes" being perhaps the largest single source (they also have some thematic similarities). But the result, in Huntington's opinion and my own, is a distinct song. I don't know of any other pure versions, but it has so many traditional elements that I decided to include it in the Index. - RBW
File: SwMS227

Shepherd's Song (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a shepherd and I rise ere the sun is in the skies." The singer describes the hard work caring for, feeding, and selling sheep. If his girl will name the day they'll marry. He warns other shepherds against "fiery liquor" at show or fair.

Author: unknown
Earliest date: 1967 (recording, Willie Scott); c.1906 (according to Yates)
Keywords: commerce work drink nonballad sheep shepherd
Found in: Britain(Scotland(Bord))
References (1 citation):
McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen, pp. 85-87, 152, "The Shepherd's Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5124
Recordings:
Willie Scott, "The Shepherd's Song" (on Voice20)
Notes [28 words]: Yates, Musical Traditions site Voice of the People suite "Notes - Volume 20" - 15.1.04: "Willie (born 1897) learnt this sometime around 1906 from his brother Tom...." - BS
Last updated in version 3.2
File: RcTSheSo

Shepherd's Song (III), The

Description: "There was a young shepherd a-tending of his sheep when a girl comes by. He play his pipes; she "turned her head then so modestly away." But she consents to marry, and he reveals that he is wealthy; they live a happy and wealthy life
Author: unknown
Earliest date: 1971 (Copper-ASongForEverySeason)
Keywords: courting escape money marriage children
Found in: Britain(England(South))
References (1 citation):
Copper-ASongForEverySeason, p. 216, "The Shepherd's Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1208
Cross-references:
cf. cf. "The Jolly Beggar" [Child 279] (theme) and references there
File: CoSea216

Shepherd's Virtuous Daughter, The

Description: The singer, fishing, is so taken by a girl he sees that he loses his line and hook in the brook. She is a shepherd's daughter come to bathe in the Boyne. He proposes. She suggest he have his parents find a more suitable bride
Author: unknown
Earliest date: 1970 (Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster)
Keywords: courting rejection fishing
Found in: Ireland
References (1 citation):
Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster 20, "The Shepherd's Virtuous Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2879
File: MorU020

Shepherding

Description: "Oh, the days when we went shepherding a long time ago...." The singer started digging at nine, and lived a carefree life when not working, harassing the Chinese laundrymen and being irresponsible. The days ended at four.
Author: Charles R. Thatcher (1831-1878)
Earliest date: 1869 (Thatcher)
Keywords: work mining
Found in:
References (4 citations):
Thatcher-ColonialMinstrel-Songsters, pp. 103-105, "Shepherding" (1 text, from "Thatcher's Colonial Songster")
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 41-43, "Shepherding" (1 text, 1 tune)
Anderson-GoldrushSongster, pp. 30-31, "Shepherding" (1 text, 1 tune)
Shepherds Arise

DESCRIPTION: "Shepherds arise, be not afraid, with hasty steps prepare [repair?] To David's city, sin on earth, With our blest infant...." The savior has come to save us from eternal death. "Sing... to our redeemer and our heavenly king."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1971 (Copper-ASongForEverySeason)

KEYWORDS: religious shepherd travel

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Copper-ASongForEverySeason, pp. 212-213, "Shepherds Arise" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1207

File: CopSe212

Sheriff's Sale, The

DESCRIPTION:
"Tis misfortune o'ertook us, and a tale soon did tell; The Sheriff came in our old home for to sell." Mother and sister "prepare to depart from their old cottage door" but are spared: the purchaser of the auctioned home turns out to be a family member.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland)

KEYWORDS: poverty hardtimes help family home police

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 138-140, 255, "The Sheriff's Sale" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4983

File: IvDC038

Sherman Cyclone, The [Laws G31]

DESCRIPTION: A great storm sweeps unexpectedly through Sherman, causing extensive damage and some loss of life

AUTHOR: Mattie Carter East

EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed)

KEYWORDS: storm disaster death

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
May 15, 1896 - The Sherman tornado

FOUND IN: US(So,SW)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Laws G31, "The Sherman Cyclone"
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 163, "The Sherman Cyclone" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 128-131, "The Sherman Cyclone" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 795, SHERCYCL*
Roud #3260

NOTES [23 words]: 1896 was apparently a bad year for tornadoes; on May 27 of that year a storm hit Saint Louis, killing 400 and leaving 5000 homeless. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.5

File: LG31
Sherman's March to the Sea

DESCRIPTION: "Our campfires shone bright on those mountains That frowned on the river below... When a rider came out of the darkness... And shouted... 'Sherman will march to the sea.'"

The Atlanta campaign and the March to the Sea are briefly retold.

AUTHOR: Words: Samuel H. M. Byers (1838–1933)? (See NOTES)

EARLIEST DATE: 1865 (Sheet music published by Lee & Walker, according to Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar)

KEYWORDS: Civilwar patriotic derivative

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

May 13-16, 1864 - William T. Sherman attacks J. E. Johnston's army at Resaca on the way from Tennessee to Atlanta. Sherman failed to move Johnston's army, but forced the Confederates to fall back by threatening their supply line.

June 27, 1864 - Battle of Kennesaw Mountain. For the first (and only) time in the Atlanta campaign, Sherman tried a direct assault on Johnston's lines. It failed bloodily. Sherman then once again levered Johnston out of his lines by maneuver.

(July 17, 1864 - Jefferson Davis relieves Johnston and replaces him with the more aggressive but less competent John Bell Hood. Hood's attacking strategy cost his army severely and by July 25 left him besieged in Atlanta).

Sept 1, 1864 - Hood evacuates Atlanta.

Nov 15, 1864 - Sherman splits his army into two parts. One, under Thomas, was to defend Atlanta, while Sherman took nearly 60,000 men on the "March to the Sea"

Dec 10, 1864 - Sherman’s forces reach Savannah.

Dec 21, 1864 - Sherman captures Savannah.

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (9 citations):

Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 236-237, "When Sherman Marched Down to the Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)

Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 305-306, "The Marching Song of Sherman’s Army on the Way to the Sea" (1 text)

Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 131, "When Sherman Marched Down to the Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)

Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 261-263, "When Sherman Marched Down to the Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)

Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 248-250, "Sherman's March to the Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)

Colonial-Dames-AmericanWarSongs, pp. 97-98, When Sherman Marched Down to the Sea" (1 text)

Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2103, p. 141, "Sherman's March to the Sea" (17 references)

Hill-PoemsAndSongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 206-207, "Sherman's March to the Sea" (1 text)

DT, SHERMSEA*

Roud #17738

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Rosin the Beau" (tune) and references there

ALTERNATE TITLES:

When Sherman Marched Down to the Sea

NOTES [152 words]: Silber lists this as having words by "S. B. M. Meyers" and music by W. Mack; the first source I saw (Cohen?) listed "Lt. Samuel Hawkins Marshall Byers." Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, p. 141, describes a copy written by "Adjt. Boyers, of the 5th Iowa, while confined in the Rebel Prison Camp, Columbia, S.C."

It would appear one of these is an error of hearing for the others. Since the existence of Byers can be verified (one sheet music copy calls him adjutant of the Fifth Iowa Regiment), I decided to list the song by him despite Silber's claim to have seen the original sheet music. Colonial-Dames-AmericanWarSongs attributes it to Henry Clay Work, but I would assume this is by confusion with "Marching Through Georgia."

The song was popular enough that it actually had a new tune set to it by David A. Warden; this is Wolf's "c" text. Certainly there were a lot of copies printed; Wolf lists 17 copies in all. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1

File: SBoA248
Shilling or Twa (I), A

DESCRIPTION: Describing the blessings of having "a shilling or twa" in the pocket. One can settle troubles, avoid bankruptcy, fool creditors, and also stay happy: "Oh! what a grand thing is a shilling or twa... It's a round ready passport, a shilling or twa."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1877 (Poet's Box broadside, according to Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: money commerce nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast 140, p. 3, "A Shilling or Twa" (1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan3 669, "A Shillin' or Twa" (2 fragments)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 388-389, "A Shilling or Twa" (1 text)
Roud #2177
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "A Shilling or Twa (II)"
File: 0rd388

Shilling or Twa (II), A

DESCRIPTION: Probably derived from "A Shilling or Twa (I)." The singer declares "Awa' wi' your dearies and juice o' the vine... gie me the glint o' a shillin' or twa." He rejects honor and fame; all he wants is "A bonnie, bright siller white shillin' or twa."

AUTHOR: Words: William Fleming
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Ord-BothySongsAndBallads)
KEYWORDS: money commerce nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 389-390, "A Shilling or Twa" (1 text)
Roud #2178
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "A Shilling or Twa (I)"
File: 0rd389

Shinbone Alley (Stay a Little Longer, Long Time Ago)

DESCRIPTION: "You ought to see my blue-eyed Sally, She lives way down in shinbone alley, No number on the gate, no number on the door, Folks around here are gettin' mighty poor." Unrelated verses about southern life, disasters, prison, rising creeks, etc.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: home hardtimes poverty prison flood
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 422, "Shinbone Alley" (1 fragment)
Sources for "Stay All Night," the Bob Wills song:
ADDITIONAL: Sing Out magazine, Volume 23, #2 (1974), p. 1, "Stay All Night" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11769
RECORDINGS:
cf. Bob Wills & his Texas Playboys, "Stay a Little Longer" (Columbia 37097, 1946)
NOTES [117 words]: The notes in Brown describe this as common, but cite only one possibly-traditional version (in Odum and Johnson).
The problem in fact is very complex: What is the relationship of this traditional song to Bob Wills's "Stay a Little Longer"? The one verifiable traditional collection is Brown's, which came a few years after the Wills recording, but is significantly different -- some lyrics Wills didn't use, added chorus, etc.
Paul Stamler thinks they're the same. I waver, since there are are few printed fragments which seem to predate Wills by many decades. For the moment, I'm still listing this under Brown's title, but listing the Wills version as a likely by-blow or perhaps even a source. - RBW
Shine and the Titanic (Titanic #14)

DESCRIPTION: Recitation. Shine is aboard the Titanic when the ship hits an iceberg. The captain's daughter asks Shine's help; he says, "Pussy's good... but this is one time I'm gonna save Shine's ass." The captain receives the same reply. Shine survives the wreck

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (recording by anonymous artist)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Recitation. Shine, a black man, is in the hold of the Titanic stacking sacks when the ship hits an iceberg. The captain's daughter asks Shine to save her; he says, "Pussy's good, while it lasts, but this is one time I'm gonna save Shine's ass." The captain offers him money; he gives the same reply. "The last time I seen Shine, he was dead drunk upon a airline"

KEYWORDS: sex request rejection help rescue ship wreck Black(s)

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
April 14/15, 1912 - Shortly before midnight, ship's time, the Titanic strikes an iceberg and begins to sink. Only 711 survivors are found of 2224 people believed to have been aboard.

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 213-214, "Shine Reel" (1 fragment, 1 tune, mentioning being "Alabama Bound" but also mentioning some being on a boat that sank, so it might be part of this. Shine -- a name Scarborough connects with [shoe]shine -- is not mentioned by name)

RECORDINGS:
Unidentified reciter, "Shine and the Titanic" (on Unexp1)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Titanic Toast

NOTES [298 words]: Paul Stamler suggests that the Shine of this song is the same as that of "Po' Shine," "Ain't No More Cane on this Brazos," and "Travelin' Man." If so, he had more lives than a cat.

For the record, while Captain Smith of the Titanic did have a daughter, she was born in 1902 (see Stephanie Barczewski, Titanic: A Night Remembered (Hambledon Continuum, 2004, p. 163), so Shine would have had a significant problem had he touched her. But she wasn't aboard the Titanic anyway.

Nor could Shine have survived the wreck by swimming, as is found in some versions; the water at the time the ship sank was at a temperature of 28 degrees Farenheit, and exposure to it was fatal within minutes.

In any case, although historians have tried hard to find a Black aboard the Titanic, it appears that there were none on the ship. Zero. Quite certainly no American Blacks. (See, e.g., Steven Biel, Down with the Old Canoe: A Cultural History of the Titanic Disaster, Norton, 1997, p. 112).

According to Wyn Craig Wade, The Titanic: End of a Dream (revised edition, Penguin, 1986), pp. 318-319, this recitation was collected at least 15 times; he cites Sandburg to the effect that Black soldiers knew and recited it in World War I. It appears the name "Shine" was well-known at this time (presumably for shoe shiners or the like); according to Jon W. Finson, The Voices That Are Gone: Themes in Nineteenth-Century American Popular Song, Oxford University Press, 1994, there had been a popular 1910 song, "That's Why They Call Me Shine" by Cecil Mack and Ford Dabney.

For an extensive history of the Titanic, with detailed examination of the truth (or lack thereof) of quotes in the Titanic songs, see the notes to "The Titanic (XV)" ("On the tenth day of April 1912") (Titanic #15) - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1

File: RcShinTi

---

Shine Like a Star in the Morning

DESCRIPTION: John hears a voice, "I am Alpha Omega, the first and last/To conquer death in Hell did cast." Terrified, he sees Jesus crucified, falling into Hell, rising again. Chorus: "Shine, shine, shine like a star in the morning... All around the throne of God"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (recording, Joe Lee)
LONG DESCRIPTION: John is standing alone when a voice tells him, "I am Alpha Omega, the first and last/To conquer death in Hell did cast." Terrified, he has a vision of Jesus crucified, falling into Hell, then rising up again; he says, "God gonna take me from that earthly 'bode." Chorus: "Shine, shine, shine like a star in the morning...All around the throne of God"
KEYWORDS: resurrection death Hell Bible religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Joe Lee, "Shine Like a Star in the Morning" (AFS 745 B4, 1936; on LC10)
NOTES [107 words]: Most of this is, of course, taken from the Revelation to John (e.g. the reference to the Alpha and Omega, the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet, occurs several times in that book, starting with 1:8).
An exception is the concept of the descent into Hell. Though firmly rooted in Catholic tradition, and mentioned in the traditional form of the Apostles' Creed (which is not Apostolic), there is no scriptural reference to such an event (unless you count Ephesians 4:9-11, which I would regard as a reference to the Incarnation, or other passages such as 1 Pet. 3:19, which may refer to proclamations of salvation to the damned). - RBW
File: RcSLaSiM

Shine on Me
DESCRIPTION: "Shine on me, oh shine on me/Let the light from the lighthouse shine on me." Jesus calls the hearers to rest. The singer may call for help in reaching God.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1921 ("Songs and Spirituals", Chicago, Overton-Hygienic Co.)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE,So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Dunson/Raim/Asch-AnthologyOfAmericanFolkMusic, p. 76 "Shine On Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
Grimes-StoriesFromTheAnneGrimesCollection, p. 119, "Shine On Me" (1 text)
Roud #10622
RECORDINGS:
Rev. Johnnie Blakey, "Let the Light Shine on Me" (OKeh 8758, 1930; rec. 1928)
Famous Garland Jubilee Singers, "Shine on Me" (Romeo 5135, 1932)
Blind Willie Johnson, "Let Your Light Shine on Me" (Columbia 14490-D, 1930; rec. 1929; on BWJ01, BWJ03)
Ernest Phipps & his Holiness Singers, "Shine on Me" (Bluebird 5540A, 1928; on AAFM2)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Let It Shine On Me
Let the Light From Your Lighthouse Shine On Me
NOTES [9 words]: Found in both Anglo- and Afro-American tradition. - PJS
Last updated in version 2.8
File: ADR76

Shine On, Harvest Moon
DESCRIPTION: "The night was mighty dark so you could hardly see... Couple sitting underneath a willow tree... Boy... Told the moon... Shine on, shine on, harvest moon up in the sky. I ain't had no lovin' since April, January, June or July." He hopes she'll say Yes.
AUTHOR: Words: Jack Norworth (1879-1959) / Music: Nora Bayes-Norworth (1880-1928)
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (source: Fuld)
KEYWORDS: love courting
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, p. 497, "Shine On, Harvest Moon"
DT, HRVSTMN*
Roud #22317
NOTES [217 words]: According to David A. Jasen, Tin Pan Alley: The Composers, the Songs, the Performers and their Times: The Golden Age of American Popular Music from 1886 to 1956, Primus, 1988, p. 62, "Nora Bayes... was christened Dora Goldberg. Her big break in vaudeville came in 1902, when she was asked to perform Harry von Tilzer's 'Down Where the Wurzburger Floes' at the Orpheum Theatre in Brooklyn." She forgot the words, but he was there and sung them to her and the stunt made it a hit and her a star; "Bayes was known for years after as 'The Wurzburger Girl.'"

"She and her husband Jack Norworth wrote 'Shine On, Harvest Moon' and featured it in Ziegfield's Follies of 1908. It was their biggest song success. Later that year, Norworth wrote the lyrics for Albert von Tilzer's "Take Me Out to the Ball-Game," and Bayes helped make it the standard it has become by singing it in her act for the next two years.: Sigmund Spaeth, A History of Popular Music in America, Random House, 1948, p. 358, says that this song "eventually [became] the title of a motion picture purportedly portraying their fantastic life together" (referring to Norworth and Bayes-Norworth); he adds that Ruth Etting later made the song a hit again. Spaeth adds that, in his later years, Norworth ran a novelty shop in California. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3
File: Fuld497A

Shiner, The

DESCRIPTION: "Uncrowned king of the knights of the banjo, Star of the great southern trail, With his blanket of blue, The Shiner fought through...." The Shiner takes all things in stride. He uses tricks and wits to survive. Now he "can bank on a well-deserved rest"

AUTHOR: Words: George Meek

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Meek, Station Days in Maoriland and Other Verses, according to Cleveland-NZ-GreatNewZealandSongbook)

KEYWORDS: hobo travel trick

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
c. 1840-1927 - Life of Edmund Slattery, known as "The Shiner"

FOUND IN:
- Cleveland-NZ-GreatNewZealandSongbook, pp. 44-45, "The Shiner" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [631 words]: Although Edmund "Ned" Slattery seems to have been a bum (in the technical sense of a rambling man who did not seek regular work), he was sufficiently clever that apparently he became a figure of folklore. There are at least three songs about him, this one, Phil Garland's "The Good Old Way," and the better-known "The Swag and the Shiner" by Paul Metsers, recorded by Graham Wilson and Gordon Bok among others. Apparently there is a deep desire among New Zealand folk poets to live by cheating others rather than by working.

Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ has a whole chapter, entitled "Swags to Riches," about swagmen of this sort. Slattery gets the lion's share of it, pp. 118-127. Ell, p. 232, has a much shorter but, I suspect, more accurate account. In the entry "The Shiner," he writes: "'Shiner' Ned Slattery was more than 50 years on the road avoiding work. John A. Lee [the other rambled in "The Swag and the Shiner"] recorded the folklore in two books about 'the champion of 'anti-sweat.' When Lee was a runaway from a boy's home, he met the Shiner, then an old man, and ever after collected yarns about him. Edmond Slatter was born in 1840 and reached New Zealand in time to become a figure on the road during the Otago gold rush of the 1860s; he died aged 87 with a reputation throughout the land, but largely earned in Otago and Southland. Slattery was a 'professional' tramp who bludged his meals and drink whenever he could, usually targeting publicans and others whom he thought above themselves. He would set up elaborate tricks to get a drink, for example pretending to survey a road through a bar and consenting to change direction only when appropriately bought off.... John A. Lee published the tales in Shining with the Shiner (N. V. Douglas, Auckland, 1950 [NewZealandEncyclopedia, p. 505, says 1944]) and later expanded on the theme with Shiner Slattery (Collins, Auckland, 1964)."

Another one of Slattery's pranks is described on p. 238 of Ell, in which he offered to pay for a drink with stamps, was taken up on it, and proceeded to "stamp" with his foot. All I can say is, if most of his tricks worked, New Zealand has the stupidest bartenders in the known universe.

NewZealandEncyclopedia, pp. 504-505, also has an article about The Shiner: "SLATTER, Edmond (1840-1927) was the historical figure behind the legendary swagman known as 'The Shiner'. He was born in County Clare, Ireland, worked there as a ploughman and farmhand, emigrated with his family to Australian in 1869 and on to NZ in 1873. He was a tall, well-made, charming man who chose to live for more than 40 yrs as a swagger, mostly on the roads of South Canterbury, Otago and Southland, working only when he had to at seasonal toks on farms. He was a clown, practical joker and a charming rascal, a familiar figure at fairs and carnivals on his beat. He is buried at Andersons Bay Cemetery in Dunedin."

NewZealandEncyclopedia has a portrait of him on p. 505. NewZealandEncyclopedia, pp. 312-313, also has an entry on Lee, who made The Shiner truly famous: "LEE, John Alfred Alexander (1891-1982) was one of the most remarkable New Zealanders of his time, spending time in prison as a young man, serving with distinction as a soldier in World War One, becoming an outstanding politician between the wars and, over nearly 50 years, writing fiction and political and social commentaries." Born in Dunedin, he was an ordinary laborer before the Great War, in which he won a Distinguished Conduct Medal and lost his left arm. He was an MP for most of the period 1922-1943 (although he was kicked out of the Labour Party in 1940). He began writing in the 1930s; his last book was published in 1981. The entry notes that "The Shiner stories are generally fictionalised tales about swaggerers." - RBW

Bibliography

Last updated in version 5.2
File: Clev044

Shining Shore, The

DESCRIPTION: "My days are gliding swiftly by, And I, a pilgrim stranger, Would not detain them as they fly," because the singer is "on Jordan's strand" and sees "the shining shore" where friends are passing over. So take courage even in hard times

AUTHOR: Words: David Nelson / Music: George F. Root (source: Root-StoryOfAMusicalLife-GeorgeFRoot)

EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (Root-StoryOfAMusicalLife-GeorgeFRoot)

KEYWORDS: religious river nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):

- Root-StoryOfAMusicalLife-GeorgeFRoot, p. 256, "The Shining Shore" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Heart-Songs, p. 505, "Shining Shore" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Roud #28859

NOTES [284 words]: Root, p. 99, reports that one day, when he was working on material for his singing classes, his "mother, passing through the room, laid a slip from one of her religious newspapers before me, saying, 'George, I think that would be good for music.' I looked, and the poem began, 'My days are gliding swiftly by.' A simple melody sang itself along in my mind as I read, and I jotted it down, and went on with my work. That was the origin of 'The Shining Shore.' Later, when I took up the melody to harmonize it, it seemed so very simple and commonplace that I hesitated about setting other parts to it. But I finally decided that it might be useful to somebody, and completed it, thought it was not printed until some months afterward.... [When it became widely popular], I tried to see why it should be so, but in vain.... "The newspaper slip containing this hymn which my mother handed me had no author's name attached. It was some years later before I learned that it was the Rev. David Nelson who wrote it." Root then supplies a brief biography of Nelson (1793-1844) which was sent to him. He was a minister and, after owning a plantation in Missouri, later came out against slavery, and was driven out of Missouri as a result, settling in Illinois.

Root's melody, although the one that became widely known, is not the melody intended for the lyric. According to Julian, p. 794, "[Nelson's] hymn, 'My days are gliding swiftly by' (Death Anticipated), was written in 1835, to be sung to the tune of 'Lord Ullin's Daughter.' It is exceedingly popular." (Popular it may have been, but I find no mention of it in any of my modern hymn references. And Julian doesn't mention any other texts by Nelson.) - RBW

Bibliography

- Julian: John Julian, editor, A Dictionary of Hymnology, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes)
- Root: George F. Root, The Story of a Musical Life, 1891; I use the 1970(?) Da Capo reprint Ship A-Sailing, A

DESCRIPTION: "I saw a ship a-sailing, A-sailing on the sea, And it was deeply laden with pretty things for me. There were comfits in the cabin and almonds in the hold." The sails are satin; the mast, gold; the sailors, white mice; the captain, a duck.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1815 (Family album, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)

KEYWORDS: talltale playparty nonballad ship animal

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- "I saw a ship a-sailing" in Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes
- "I saw a ship a-sailing" in Baring-Gould-AnnotationMotherGoose #271

ST Lins284 (Partial)

Roud #3742

NOTES: This seems to go back to Halliwell (1852), though Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland connects it with a game called the "Duck Dance." Katherine Elwes Thomas evolved the theory that the duck-Captain was Sir Francis Drake, while the "four-and-twenty white mice with chains about their necks" were slaves. I'd be more inclined to believe it if Thomas could bridge the more than two century gap between the actual song and the events it allegedly describes. - RBW

File: Lins284

Ship Euphrasia, The

DESCRIPTION: "Come all Christian people who do intend To know God's laws and his rights defend...." The singer tells of setting sail on a whaler, describes the horrid, rotten food, and complains of the isolation of the captain

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1849 (Journal from the Euphrasia)

KEYWORDS: whaler ship food hardtimes

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- "The Ship Euphrasia" in Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 47-49

Roud #2013

File: SWMS047

Ship in Distress, The

DESCRIPTION: Sailors on a becalmed ship suffer starvation. They cast lots to determine which of them shall die to feed the rest. The one who is chosen asks that a sentry climb the topmast to search for aid while he prays. A ship is sighted and they are rescued.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Butterworth) plus 19th century broadsheets

KEYWORDS: ship disaster cannibalism reprieve rescue starvation sailor

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (8 citations):
- "Seamen Bold" in Copper-ASongForEverySeason, pp. 210-211
- "The Ship in Distress" in Browne-FolkSongsOfOldHampshire, pp. 93-96
- "The Ship in Distress" in Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs
- "The Ship in Distress" in VaughanWilliams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs
- "The Ship in Distress" in Hugill-SongsOfTheSea
- "The Ship in Distress" in Ashton-RealSailorSongs
- "The Ship in Distress" in Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs Ship Is All Laden, The

DESCRIPTION: "The ship is all laden and ready for sea, The foy boy is coming, away let us be." The skipper is confused. The men are groggy. The owner is upset. But presumably they get to sea, since the song ends with the ship happily back in port

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1789 (according to Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs)
KEYWORDS: ship travel
FOUND IN: REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 66, "The Ship Is All Laden" (1 text)
File: PaSe066

Ship Lord Wolseley, The

DESCRIPTION: The ship leaves Belfast for Philadelphia on the 18th of January under Cap'n James Dunn. Song describes several ports and storms and constantly makes references to the bravery and steadfastness of the crew and officers.

AUTHOR: Wm. R.B. Dawson
EARLIEST DATE: 1945 (Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips)
KEYWORDS: ship foc's'le sailor
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 181-183, "The Ship Lord Wolseley" (1 text, sung to "Yankee Man-of-War")
Roud #9149
CROSS-REFERENCES:
ct. "Yankee Man-of-War" [probably the song indexed as "The British Man-of-War"] (tune)
NOTES [319 words]: Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips says that the author Dawson was bo'sun on the Lord Wolseley when he wrote this.
Lord Wolseley was a four masted ship built in 1883 by Harland & Wolff, Belfast. She was sold and renamed several times, as Columbia, Everett G. Griggs, Wolseley (again) before being broken up and used for parts in 1928. - SL
I have to admit I find the name of the ship pretty ironic. Garnet Wolseley (1833-1913) was not a navy man but a soldier all his life, fighting in the Crimean War and thirty years of colonial wars before becoming army Commander in Chief in 1895. He was made a viscount in 1883 after winning the battle of Tel-el-Kebir in Egypt (1882). His most famous moment, perhaps, came two years later, when he tried and failed to rescue Gordon from Khartoum -- a rescue that might have succeeded had he understood river transport better.
Odds are, however, that if you have met Wolseley, it was in another guise. He was the model for Major General Stanley (the Modern Major General) in Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Pirates of Penzance." At least, in the first British production, the character playing Stanley was costumed to look like Wolseley. Of course, the creation was very unlike the model for the Model -- they were almost inverses, with Wolseley's competence being almost solely military. Nonetheless, Wolseley supposedly enjoyed singing the Modern Major General's patter song (see Ian Bradley, editor, The Ship of Zion (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "What is this ship you're going on board, oh, glory hallelujah (x2)? 'Tis the Old Ship Zion, hallelujah (x4) What colors does she hoist in time of war? oh, glory hallelujah (x2)? 'Tis the bloody robe of Jesus, hallelujah (x4)"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MA,SE)
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, pp. 102-103, "The Old Ship of Zion" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 81, "'Tis the Ole Ship of Zion (Ole Ship of Zion)" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 85 in the 1901 edition) [for 1893 edition, see notes]; Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, pp. 220-221, "Don't You View Dat Ship a-Come a-Sailin'?" (1 text, 1 tune; pp. 226-227 in the 1874 edition)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 623, "The Old Ship of Zion" (3 texts, of which "A" is clearly "The Old Ship of Zion (I)" but B is an unidentifiable fragment; C, with references to India and the Ganges, may be a separate piece)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 623, "The Old Ship of Zion" (5 tunes plus text excerpts, several of which go here although at least one is "The Old Ship of Zion (I)"
Barton-OldPlantationHymns, p. 23, "The Old Ship of Zion" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 83, "The Ship of Zion" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 366, "Old Ship of Zion" (1 text)
ST FSC083 (Partial)
Roud #4204
RECORDINGS:
McFadden Gospel Singers, "Old Ship of Zion" (Coleman 5976, n.d.)
Southeast Alabama and Florida Union Sacred Harp Singing Convention, "The Old Ship of Zion" (on USFlorida01)
NOTES [93 words]: In the Sacred Harp, the tune to this is said tentatively to be by Thomas W. Carter.
White reports a whole class of "Ship of Zion" songs, not all of which can easily be distinguished. I've split off some with clear personalities, but some just have to be lumped here. - RBW
The index to the 1893 edition [of Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute] has "Ole Ship of Zion" on page 85 (Thomas P. Fenner and Frederic G. Rathbun, Cabin and Plantation Songs (New York: G.P. Putnam's Sons, 1893)). I have not seen page 85. - BS

Ship That Is Passing By, The

DESCRIPTION: "I once had a father but now I have none, He's gone to that beautiful home. O Lord, let me sail on that beautiful ship, The ship that is passing by. The days seem so sad and the night seems so long And I am so lonely here." Similarly mother, brother, etc.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1967
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad family
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates 316, p. 191, "The Ship That Is Passing By" (1 text)
Roud #4303
Ship That Never Returned, The [Laws D27]

DESCRIPTION: A ship is preparing to sail. The lives of several of the passengers, their reasons for leaving, and their farewells to family and/or sweethearts are briefly described. But the ship disappears at sea, apparently with all hands.

AUTHOR: Henry Clay Work

EARLIEST DATE: 1865 (sheet music published by S. Brainard's Sons)

KEYWORDS: sea farewell wreck disaster

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,NE,Ro,SE,So)

REFERENCES (17 citations):
- Laws D27, "The Ship that Never Returned"
- Work-SongsOf-Henry-Clay-Work, pp. 91-94, "The Ship that Never Return'd" (1 text, 1 tune, a copy of the original sheet music)
- Randolph 690, "The Ship that Never Returned" (2 texts)
- High-OldOldFolkSongs, p. 45, "The Ship that Never Returned" (1 text plus mention of 10 more as well as a pair of offshoots)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 215, "The Ship That Never Returned" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
- Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 106, "The Ship That Never Returned" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 146-147, "The Ship That Never Returned" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #111, "The Ship That Never Returned" (1 text)
- Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, pp. 92-93, "The Ship That Never Returned" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, p. 138, "The Ship that Never Returned" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Gilbert-LostChords, pp. 142-143, "The Ship That Never Returned" (1 text)
- Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 186-187, "The Ship That Never Returned" (1 text)
- Silber-Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 268, "The Ship That Never Returned" (1 text)
- Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 197-226, "The Wreck of the Old 97" (6 texts plus excerpts, 1 tune, plus a sheet music cover and sundry excerpts from related songs including a text of "The Ship That Never Returned")
- cf. Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, p. 482, "The Ship That Never Returned" (source notes only)
- DT 618, NVRETURN* NVRETUR2*

RECORDINGS:
- Omar Blondahl, "The Ship That Never Returned" (on NFOBlondahl03)
- Vernon Dalhart, "The Ship That Never Returned" (Gennett 3311, 1926)
- Connie Foley, "The Ship That Never Returned" (Copley 9-179-B, n.d.)
- Bradley Kincaid, "The Ship That Never Returned" (Bluebird 5569, 1934)
- Asa Martin, "The Ship That Never Returned" (Oriole 8163/Conqueror 8068 [as Martin & Roberts], 1932)
- Gene McNulty, "The Ship That Never Returned" (Decca 12202)
- Roe Bros. & Morrell, "The Ship That Never Returned" (Columbia 15156-D, 1927)
- Charles Lewis Stine, "The Ship That Never Returned" (Columbia 15027-D, 1925)

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 1518, "The Ship That Never Returned," T. Brooks (Bristol), n.d.
- LOCShelf, sm1885 21919, "The Ship That Never Returned," S. Brainard's. Sons (Cleveland), 1885 (tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "The Train that Never Returned" (tune & meter)
- cf. "The Wreck of Old 97" (tune & meter)
- cf. "The Rarden Wreck of 1893" (tune & metre)
- cf. "The Flying Colonel" (tune)
- cf. "M.T.A." (tune)
- cf. "Lovers Parted" (tune, lyrics)

SAME TUNE:
- The Train That Never Returned (File: R694)
- The Wreck of Old 97 [Laws G2] (File: LG02)
The Rarden Wreck of 1893 (File: DarNS215)
The Flying Colonel (File: EM404)
Lovers Parted (File: Brll215A)
Did the Maine Go Down? (File: List329)
Vernon Dalhart, "The Airship That Never Returned" (Columbia 15162-D, 1927)
Ernest Stoneman, "The Face That Never Returned" (OKeh, unissued, 1924) (OKeh 40288, 1925)
[probably this tune, though we haven't been able to check]
NOTES [105 words]: This may be the best-selling tune of all time in terms of fraction of the population which experienced it; "The Ship that Never Returned" was a hit in sheet music, and "The Wreck of Old 97" and "M.T.A." (which also uses the tune) were hits on record. Sadly, Work made only a little money off the piece. - RBW
Blondahl03 has no liner notes confirming that this song was collected in Newfoundland. Barring another report for Newfoundland I do not assume it has been found there. There is no entry for "The Ship That Never Returned" in Newfoundland Songs and Ballads in Print 1842-1974 A Title and First-Line Index by Paul Mercer. - BS

Last updated in version 5.3
File: LD27

Ship to Old England Came, A
DESCRIPTION: With 50 guns and 500 men an English warship meets five French men-of-war. Aloft, the cabin boy sees three English ships -- Oak, Sloe, and Unity -- that join the battle and "quickly made those French dogs flee"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1974 (recording, Walter Pardon)
KEYWORDS: battle navy England France
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
Roud #1424
RECORDINGS:
Walter Pardon, "A Ship to Old England Came" (on Voice02)
File: RcasTOEC

Ship Was Becalmed in a Tropical Sea, A
DESCRIPTION: "A ship was becalmed in a tropical sea, Away, away, blow the man down." "For three weeks no wind had she." The captain "prayed to King Neptune" for a breeze. Fish taunt the sailors; finally, a flying fish seems to promise help; the wind finally starts
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin)
KEYWORDS: ship talltale animal gods
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 111-112, "A Ship Was Becalmed in a Tropical Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #15664
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Blow the Man Down" (tune and form)
NOTES [14 words]: This appears to be a sailor's tall tale based on the form of "Blow the Man Down." - RBW

Last updated in version 2.6
File: Pet111

Shipping Agents, The
DESCRIPTION: "A shipping agent seems to me A kind of hungry shark... They crimp the sailors when they can And make them pay a fee." The sailors don't even know their destination. The food is awful and insufficient. There is no gold in the diggings they reach anyway
AUTHOR: Words: Charles R. Thatcher (1831-1878)
EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Anderson, Goldrush Songster, but found in a nineteenth century
Shipwreck

DESCRIPTION: "From Queenstown we set sail with merry hearts." The captain soon exects a great storm. The storm causes the ship turns over and breaks a mast. Several people die. Henry Wales manages to save Jane Gibson but dies himself.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah)

KEYWORDS: ship death wreck storm

FOUND IN: US(Ro)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #112, "Shipwreck" (1 text)

NOTES [28 words]: This sounds like it is probably about a real event, but Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah has not identified the event, and with few real details, I can't identify it.

- RBW

Last updated in version 3.8

File: Hubb112

Shipwreck Near Gay Head, January 14, 1782

DESCRIPTION: "On the fourteenth day of January last, Be sure it was a dismal sight, The famous ship away was cast, It was somewhere before "twas light." The captain is ill when a storm comes up. They are wrecked on the rocks. Only ten men survive

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 2014 (Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang)

KEYWORDS: wreck storm disaster death

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 87-90,"Shipwreck Near Gay Head, January 14, 1782" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #27521

File: H6m087

Shipwreck on Long Island Shore

DESCRIPTION: "Ho, Mr. Editor, stay your pen, I've sorry news to tell." The Ocean Belle was sunk in a fierce storm along Long Island Shore. The poet found the body of sailor Walter Brown along the shore and is writing to tell of his fate

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1879 (Journal of the Andrew Hicks)

KEYWORDS: death sailor wreck storm

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Shipwreck on the Lagan Canal, The DESCRIPTION: Captain McFall's ship sails "up the Lagan Canal," "bound for foreign countries," "with a cargo of Indian meal." In "a dreadful gale" they strike "a coral reef" and sink "to the shin." A coastguard rescues the crew "as none of us could swim"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c.1890-1918 (J Nicholson ballad sheet, according to Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong)

KEYWORDS: canal humorous storm wreck

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong 38, "The Shipwreck on the Lagan Canal" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The E-ri-e" (theme) and references there

File: Leyd038

Shirt and the Apron, The [Laws K42]

DESCRIPTION: The sailor comes to shore and meets a girl who takes him to a dance, then to supper, then to bed. He awakens in the morning to find both his money and his clothes gone. He is forced to return to his ship in women's clothing -- to the amusement of the crew

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c.1890-1918 (J Nicholson ballad sheet, according to Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong); 1929 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)

KEYWORDS: sex robbery dancing clothes whore

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar,Newf)

REFERENCES (8 citations):
Laws K42, "The Shirt and the Apron"
Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong 31, "The Sailor's Hornpipe in Caxon Street" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 112, "The Shirt and the Apron" (1 text)
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 105, "Barrack Street" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 376-377, "Jack-All-Along" (1 text) [AbEd, pp. 283-285 as "The New York Gals"]
Palmer 137, "A Great Favorite Song, entitled The Sailor's Hornpipe in Jackson Street" (1 text, 1 tune)
Johnson-BawdyBalladsAndLustyLyrics, pp. 70-71, "The Shirt and the Apron" (1 text)
DT 418, PETERST
Roud #1902

RECORDINGS:
Jacob Noseworthy, "Peter Street" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Aiden Sullivan, "Dance in Peter Street" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Gold Watch" [Laws K41] (plot) and references there

cf. "The Beggar Wench"

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Jack-All-Along
Peter Street
The Shirt and the Apron
Patrick Street

File: LK42

Shirt I Left Behind, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer quits Dan McCann's lodgings but leaves his shirt. McCann's daughter tells him to retrieve it. That night, drunk, he sees the shirt coming down the street, hit it with a brick, and kills McCann's daughter who was in it. He is fined ten quid.

Shivering in the Cold

DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls his parents, his wife, his children, his money -- all lost because of drink. He yearns to be free of his burden. Chorus: "Yes alone, all alone, And I feel I'm growing old, Yet I wander, oh how lonely, And I'm shivering in the cold."

AUTHOR: Mrs. Knowles Shaw

Shoals of Herring

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, it was a fine and a pleasant day, Out of Yarmouth harbour I was faring" on a ship seeking herring. The young sailor learns that it is hard work and a hard life: "Just to earn your daily bread you're daring." He earns his pay in his years of fishing
This is one of the best-known, if not the best-known of the Radio Ballad songs, but MacColl had a lot of trouble with it. His autobiography, p. 312, says, "The writing of the songs [for "Singing the Fishing"] took me about a month, or maybe a little longer.... I wrestled with the ideas for 'Shoals of Herring' for over two weeks. Nothing came right. Every time I sat down to write, the economy and simplicity of the form I had chosen would elude me. When, finally, I hit the right note I completed the song in fifteen minutes." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: PaSe154

Shock Along, John

DESCRIPTION: Described as "A corn-song, of which only the burden is remembered": "Shock along, John, shock along; Shock along, John, shock along."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, "Slave Songs of the United States")

KEYWORDS: work

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 67, "Shock Along, John" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, p. 906, "Shock Along, John" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #12024

NOTES [19 words]: I wonder if this might not have started out as a "Walk Along, John" song. But with only five words, who can tell? - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4
File: BAF906

Shoe and Her Ankle Too

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets a girl and sees "shoe and ankle too likewise her lily white calf Oh! I could tell you a great deal more but I'd only make you laugh." Each verse ends with a bawdy hidden rhyme.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart2)

KEYWORDS: sex bawdy wordplay

FOUND IN: US(SW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart2 70, "Shoe and Her Ankle Too" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: BrE2070

Shoe My Love (Shoo My Love)

DESCRIPTION: "Leila that's shoo my love (x2). Turn me in a hurry now. Shoo Dolly, shoo my love, Turn me in a hurry now. Shoo Dolly, shoo my love."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)

KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5, p. 549, "Shoe My Love" (1 short text, 1 tune)

File: BrS5549A

Shoe Old Horsie

DESCRIPTION: "Shoe old horsie, Shoe old mare, Let the little coltie Go bare, bare, bare."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore)

KEYWORDS: horse nonballad
Shoemaker (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "Make my Kate a pair of shoes, Make 'em out of the best of leather, I'll peg 'em well and stitch 'em tight (or: "Draw 'em around the firey side") And then they'll last forever." The singer seeks, by the making of shoes, to bind Kate to him (?)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle)
KEYWORDS: work courting clothes
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) US(Ap,MA,SE,So) Ireland
REFERENCES (7 citations):
- Randolph 566, "The Shoemaker" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune)
- Cox-FolkSongsSouth 171, "The Cobbler's Boy" (1 text)
- Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 100, "The Shoemaker" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
- Carey-MarylandFolkLegendsAndFolkSongs, p. 100, "The Shoemaker" (1 text)
- Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H551, p. 40, "The Cobbler" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 21, "The Cobbler" (2 texts)
- DT, COBBLR*

Roud #837
CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "The Shoemaker's Kiss"

NOTES [53 words]: This may be a byblow of "The Shoemaker's Kiss"; there are common elements. But if so, the degree of sanitizing is so extreme that they can be counted as separate songs. - RBW

The entry in Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians is fragmentary and almost devoid of plot, but it mentions Kate, so I put it here. - PJS

Last updated in version 3.8

File: R566

Shoemaker (III), The

DESCRIPTION: "My mother sent me to the school To learn to be a stocking-knitter, But I went wrang and played the fool And married with a shoemaker." She complains of his looks, his tools, his stink, and the miserable life she leads: "Who would have a shoemaker?"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland)
KEYWORDS: work marriage warning
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North),Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 114-115, "The Shoemakker" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Greig/Duncan3 479, "The Shoemaker" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
- ST StoR114 (Partial)

Roud #3152

NOTES [38 words]: In a number of versions of this song, including Stokoe's, the man's occupation is "shoemakker" (double k). This appears to be an attempt to show that the "a" is pronounced short -- he "maks" shoes, rather than "makes" them. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4

File: StoR114

Shoemaker's Kiss, The

DESCRIPTION: The girl comes to the shoemaker and requests a pair of shoes. He thereupon "fits" the girl. (Forty) weeks later she brings forth a son. When mother asks where the boy came from, she says "the shoemaker's kiss."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1827 (Kinloch)
KEYWORDS: sex clothes pregnancy childbirth children
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland,England(South))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Kinloch-TheBalladBook XV, pp. 55-57, "The Shoemaker" (1 text)
- Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 118, "The Shoemaker's Kiss" (1 text)
- DT, SHOEKISS*

Roud #3807

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "The Trooper Watering His Nag" (chorus lyrics)
- cf. "The Shoemaker (I)"

NOTES [59 words]: The "other" shoemaker song ("The Shoemaker (I)"") has some elements in common with this song, and may be distantly related. But if so, there has been an extreme degree of sanitization in between.

Roud lumps this with "A Kiss in the Morning Early," which is also about relations between a girl and a shoemaker -- but the latter does not involve pregnancy. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.7

File: KinBB15

---

Shoemaker's Son, The

DESCRIPTION: "Young Jimmy was a shoemaker's son, And through this country his bread he won. Her father was of high degree, He was captain over some ships on the sea."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1968
KEYWORDS: love courting father
FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, p. 193, "The Shoemaker's Son" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [31 words]: This is clearly a fragment of a longer ballad (probably telling of the father's opposition to the young people's marriage), but without a longer version, we can't tell much about it. - RBW

File: MA193

---

Shoemaker's Song

DESCRIPTION: "Married me a wife and I settled here for live. She had no shoes; I had no time to make them." "I didn't have but one old hen..., She sot for a week on a dozen eggs, and didn't hatch but one chicken." The singer also struggles with steers, cows, etc.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1953 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: wife clothes hardtimes chickens
FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 66, "Shoemaker's Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Roud #11324

File: Brne066

---

Shon M'Nab

DESCRIPTION: Shon M'Nab fails at herding, fishing, and running a still. He goes to Glasgow and is overcome by the wonders he sees. He sees fire used all around and is convinced the people in Glasgow must be in league with the Devil. He prefers the old ways.

AUTHOR: Alexander Rodger (1784-1846)
EARLIEST DATE: 1838 (Rodger)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Shon M'Nab is 45 and has seen the world turned upside down: gentlemen become poor and beggars become rich, and Whig turn Tory, Tory turn Whig. He began by herding cows, then fishing in a herring boat. He tried fishing cod off Newfoundland until his boat overturned and he decided he'd fish for cod no more. Back home he had a whisky still until a revenuer had him sent to jail. Once out he went to Glasgow where he saw a thousand wonders: he saw a man, rather than a horse, pulling a cart; he saw a black man music grinder turning his "mill" about, putting nothing in but taking music out. He wondered that so many people had spoons "to sup teir pick o' meat" when, where he came from, a whole house might have only one or two spoons. What sin made the women ashamed to show their face that they covered it with "plack"?

He found it strange to be able to draw water "and ne'er rin dry" and to see lamps in long rows with no wick or lack of oil. The Glasgow folk must have dealings with the Devil for all their use of fire for every purpose "and some o' tem will eat ta fire, And no him's pelly purrn [belly burn]"; they use fire to make a coach run on the railroad (M'Nab himself would rather have a horse); they use fire to make vessels run (at the Broomielaw he sees a ship "wi' twa mill-wheels [to] grund ta water sma'"").

In Glasgow the houses stretch "mile and mair, Wi' names 'poon ilka toor." He wonders what the people do with all the things he saw; he'd prefer the old ways: brose [oatmeal and boiling water], kilt and hose, and barley brew.

KEYWORDS: clothes commerce farming fishing technology humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1764, "John MacNab" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
ADDITIONAL: Whistle-Binkie [, First Series] (Glasgow, 1846), pp. 29-32, "Shon M'Nab"
Alexander Rodger, Poems and Songs (Glasgow, 1838), pp. 53-59, "Shon M'Nab"
Roud #13012
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 17(147a), "John M'Nab's Opinion of the March of Intellect" ("Nainsel pe maister Shon M'Nab, pe auld as forty-five, man"),Sanderson (Edinburgh), 1830-1910
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "For A' That An' A' That" (tune, per Roger)
cf. "Paddy Backwards" (country man visits city theme) and references there
File: GrD81764

Shoo Fly

DESCRIPTION: "I think I hear the angels sing (x3), The angels now are on the wing. I feel, I feel, I feel like a morning star (x2)." "Shoo fly, don't bother me (x3), For I just been on a merry spree." (or "belong to Company G," or the like).
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1886 (Buckley)
KEYWORDS: nonballad nonsense playparty religious
FOUND IN: US(So,SW)
REFERENCES (11 citations):
Randolph 273, "Shoo Fly" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty, pp. 170-171, "Shoo Fly" (1 text, 1 tune)
List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, pp. 174-176, "Shoo Flies, Don't Bother Me" (1 text, 1 tune, with the chorus of "Shoo Fly" and the verses of "I Wouldn't Have an Old Man")
Jackson-PopularSongsOfNineteenthCenturyAmerica, pp. 190-193, "Shew! Fly, Don't Bother Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
Spaeth-ReadEmAndWeep, pp. 55-56, "Shoo, Fly, Don't Bother Me" (1 fragmentary text, 1 tune)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 200, (no title) (1 fragmentary text, the "Company G" version)
Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #80, "Shoo Fly" (1 short text, 1 tune, lumped with "Shoo Fly" by Roud because it has the single chorus line "Shoo fly, don't you bother me" but which is otherwise "Don't Get Weary Children (Massa Had a Yellow Gal")"
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 132, "Shoo Fly" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Messerei-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 164-165, "Shew Fly Don't Bother Me" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 388, "Shoo Fly, Don't Bother Me" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: M.B. Buckley, Diary of a Tour in America (Dublin, 1886 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 224, "Shoo Fly" (1 text)
ST R273 (Full)
Roud #3433
RECORDINGS:
Crockett's Kenucky Mountaineers (Crown 3159/Homestead 23041/Varsity 3049/Joe Davis 3505 [both as Crockett Mountaineers]/Montgomery Ward M-3022 [as Harlan Miners Fiddlers])
Uncle Dave Macon, "Sho' Fly Don't Bother Me" (Vocalion 5010, 1926)
Pete Seeger, "Shoo Fly" (on PeteSeeger33, PeteSeegerCD03)
Jimmy Yates' Boll Weevis, "Shoo Fly!" (Victor 21753, 1928)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf., "The Blue-Tail Fly" [Laws I19] (chorus lyrics)

NOTES [77 words]: Variously attributed. The 1869 sheet credits the words to Billy Reeves and the music to Frank Campbell. Another 1869 publication gives the author as Thomas Brigham Bishop. The latter, published by Bishop himself, claims that the piece comes from "the negro farce the 'Cook.'" The corroborative evidence for the claims is thin. - RBW
Buckley (1886): ". . . a song which was in the mouths of everyone on the whole continent of America, it is called 'Shoo fly.'" - BS
Last updated in version 5.3
File: R273

Shoofly, The
DESCRIPTION: The singer sees an old woman lamenting, "Ochone! sure I'm nearly distracted! For it's down by the Shoofly they cut a bad vein...." With all the local mines closed, she and her family are in debt and out of work. She can only hope conditions improve
AUTHOR: Felix O'Hare
EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends); reportedly written 1871
KEYWORDS: hardtimes mining
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1871 - Closing of the mine at Valley Furnace (in the Schuylkill Valley). The Shoofly colliery closed at about the same time.
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, pp. 380-382, "The Shoofly" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 276-278, "The Shoofly" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7720
File: SBoA276

Shoot the Buffalo
DESCRIPTION: Playparty/dance tune: "And it's ladies to the center and it's gents around the row, And we'll rally round the canebrake and shoot the buffalo." Tales of courting and spitting tobacco
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (JAFL 24)
KEYWORDS: playparty dancing animal nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) US(Ap,MW,So)
REFERENCES (18 citations):
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 334, "We'll Chase the Buffalo" (1 text)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #27, "The Buffalo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph 523, "Shoot the Buffalo" (2 texts plus 4 excerpts, 1 tune)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 149, pp. 297-298, "Shoot the Buffalo" (1 text)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 165, "Chase the Buffalo" (1 text)
Cambiaire-EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads, p. 143, "Hunting Ballad (We'll Shoot the Buffalo)" (1 text)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 149-150, "Shoot the Buffalo" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty, p. 172, "Shoot the Buffalo"; p. 194, "Up Jumped the Crow" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 262, "Chase the Buffalo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol4, pp. 14-15, "Chase the Buffalo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 129, "Rise, My True Love" (1 short text, 1 tune, with some unusual lyrics about "Where Jim Hawkins shot Jim Buzzard, and Jim Buzzard shot Jim Crow"; these may come from some other lost song)
Wolford-ThePlayPartyInIndiana, pp. 29--30=Wolford/Richmond/Tillson-PlayPartyInIndiana, p. 225, "Chase the Buffalo" (3 texts)
Shoot Your Dice and Have Your Fun

DESCRIPTION: "Shoot your dice and have your fun, I'll have mine when the police come. Police come, I didn't want to go; I knocked him in the head wid a forty-fo'."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: gambling police
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 51, "Shoot Your Dice and Have Your Fun" (1 short text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore551, "Shoot Your Dice and Have Your Fun" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #7853
File: Br3051

Shooting of Bailey the Alleged Informer, The DESCRIPTION: Bailey informs in December about concealed arms. Those he informed on are now in jail. "On Saturday night he met his fate All by a pistol volley, By some one unknown, who did him hate, Down in Skipper's Alley." "Mind what you say." Don't be an informer.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1882 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
KEYWORDS: warning betrayal homicide prison revenge
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Feb 25, 1882 - Bernard Bailey shot dead in Dublin (source: Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 82, "A New Song on the Shooting of Bailey the Alleged Informer" (1 text)
Roud #V41216
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 19(148), "A New Song on the Shooting of Bailey the 'Alleged informer'," unknown, n.d.
NOTES [99 words]: Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion: No arrest was made. The Irish Republican Brotherhood is assumed behind the killing. - BS
One of the reasons for British success in Ireland was that the Irish never had any weapons. In the 1798, the British often found one or two pieces of artillery sufficient to disperse a force of rebels, who would have only a few muskets and little ammunition for what they had. As late as 1916 and the Casemate Affair, Irish nationalists were still trying to smuggle in guns. Naturally they were not too happy with people who cost them any part of their small collections. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: Zimm082

Shooting of the Bawks, The DESCRIPTION: The narrator protests a law against killing bawks during the summer when they are most plentiful. He wonders how he is going to feed his family and sarcastically conjectures that the authorities will now provide the people with meat.
AUTHOR: Arthur R. Scammell (1913-1995)
EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (Doyle-OldTimeSongsAndPoetryOfNewfoundland, 2nd edition)
KEYWORDS: recitation law bird hunting
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Doyle-OldTimeSongsAndPoetryOfNewfoundland, "The Shooting of the Bawks" (1 text): p. 79 in the 2nd edition, p. 69 in the 4th, p. 62 in the 5th
Roud #7309
NOTES [295 words]: The author, Arthur Reginald Scammell, has written many poems, songs and even stories with Newfoundland themes. One of his more famous songs is "The Squid-Jiggin' Ground." Some collections of his works include: My Newfoundland: Stories, Poems, Songs (St.
John's: Harry Cuff Publications, 1988) and Newfoundland Echoes (St. John's: Harry Cuff Although I haven't been able to find the exact equivalent for the "bawk" it can be gathered from the song that it is a seabird present only in summer. Other birds mentioned are the "tur" which is related to the auk, "noddy" which is a kind of tern or small gull and tickleace which is another kind of gull. The poem gives instructions to sing it to the tune of "The Wearin' o' the Green." - SH
The Canadian Oxford Dictionary lists "bawk" as a Newfoundlander term, of unknown origin, for the Greater Shearwater. The Greater Shearwater is a fairly large bird which often occurs in flocks and frequently follows ships; they are therefore tempting targets. They breed in November-January in the Tristan da Cunha islands (far down in the south Atlantic, at about the latitude of Buenos Aires but roughly half way between Africa and South America), then spend the North American summer months off the American east coast. - PJS, RBW
I do not know the reason for the Canadian ban on shooting bawks (also known as the "hagdown, also in "Western Boat (Let Me Fish Off Cape St. Mary's"), but as their breeding grounds are small and under threat by man, and their summer feeding grounds are being heavily fished, I suspect it is to protect the species.
For background on Arthur R. Scammell, see the notes to "The Squid-Jiggin' Ground." - RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File: Doy079

Shooting Star, The
DESCRIPTION: A Halifax policeman is murdered on board of the Shooting Star. He has a summons for the captain but sailor Burdell stabs him. The captain and ship get away but "they cought Burdel at Boston and gave him fourteen years"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1883 (Smith/Hatt/Fowke-SeaSongsBalladFromNineteenthCenturyNovaScotia)
KEYWORDS: homicide prison ship police sailor
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
Shopkeeper, The (There was a Rich Merchant)

DESCRIPTION: "There was a rich merchant in London did dwell" with a beautiful daughter who lives with her uncle for a year. Her love writes to her to ask her to come to him; she sets out. She dies on the road. When he find out, he says they will be buried in one grave

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1898 (Hill, Wiltshire Folk Songs and Carols)
KEYWORDS: love courting separation death burial
FOUND IN: Britain(England(West))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cologne/Morrison-WiltshireFolkSongs, pp. 16-17, "There Was a Rich Merchant" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1651
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Beautiful Damsel
File: CoMo016

Shore Navy, The

DESCRIPTION: "When I was a boy it seemed likely to me That the logical place for the navy was to be at sea," so the singer went to sea -- and didn't like it. So "I went for a cruise on land" and is now a staff member, enjoying being part of the shore navy

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe)
KEYWORDS: navy humorous nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 98-105, "The Shore Navy" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: NiM098

Shore Sailor

DESCRIPTION: "Shore sailor, shore sailor, Pull for the shore. Pull like a son-of-a-bitch but don't break the oar. Safe in the lifeboat, clinging to sin more. Leave the dreary sinking wreck and pull for the shore."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1985 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: sailor sin ship wreck nonballad derivative
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 145, "Shore Sailor" (1 fragment)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Pull for the Shore" (tune)
NOTES [36 words]: This is just close enough to "Pull For the Shore" that it might possibly be a much-coarsened descendant rather than a deliberate parody. But I think the latter more likely, and so have filed it as a separate song. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.1
File: Tawn113
Shores of Botany Bay, The
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, I'm on my way down to the quay, Where a big ship now does lay...." When the singer's boss tells him he will have to work harder to keep his job, Pat gives it up and heads for Australia. He rejoices to get away from brickwork.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (Meredith/Tritton-DukeOfTheOutback)
KEYWORDS: work Australia emigration
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 271-272, "The Shores of Botany Bay" (1 text, 1 tune)
Meredith/Tritton-DukeOfTheOutback, p. 84, "The Shores of Botany Bay" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: MA271

Shores of Coolough Bay, The
DESCRIPTION: The singer "was one of the Urhan football team." "Now we are scattered far and wide from the shores of Coolough Bay". He has worked at many jobs in Ireland, Canada and, now, in the US. Best of all is the Shores of Coolough Bay. He is saving to return.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (OCanainn-SongsOfCork)
KEYWORDS: home return travel sports America Canada Ireland emigration
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCanainn-SongsOfCork, pp. 100-101, "The Shores of Coolough Bay" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [79 words]: OCanainn-SongsOfCork: "This is a song about the Urban football teams of 1927, 28 and 29, who won the Cork County Intermediate Championships. Joe Murphy sang the song and thought it had been composed in New York by Maurice Power. Coolough Bay is an inlet off Kenmare Bay."
The singer lists some of his many activities since ending his football days: fishing with a seine-boat crew and enjoying dances at Coolough Bay; then mining, cowboying and working in a lumber shop.
- BS
File: OCan100

Shores of Sweet Kenbane, The
DESCRIPTION: The singer rambles out and sits down to look at Kenbane. He will set his slight skills to the task of praising it. He describes the birds, fish, shores, castle, etc. In one cottage dwells a beautiful girl; he blesses the day he found her and Kenbane
AUTHOR: Dan White?
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: love home rambling
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H648, p. 167, "The Shores of Sweet Kenbane" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13479
File: HHH648

Short Life of Trouble
DESCRIPTION: "Short life of trouble, A few more words apart, A short life of trouble, dear girl, For a boy with a broken heart." The singer reminds the girl that she promised to marry him. He takes the train out of town and/or hopes the grave will be his home
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (recording, Burnett & Rutherford)
KEYWORDS: love betrayal death
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 127, "Pass the Drunkard By" (1 text, with a first verse in which the girl describes Mama's advice against drunkards but otherwise like the usual versions)
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee, 32, pp. 58-59, "The First Thing I Owned Was a Pistol" (1 text, 1 tune, with the "short life" chorus used as the second verse and several other verses which might have floated in)
Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #57, "Short Life of Trouble" (1 text, 1 tune, opening with a "Moonshiner" verse but the rest is "Short Life of Trouble")

ST RcSLOT (Full)
Roud #3418

RECORDINGS:
Emry Arthur, "Short Life of Trouble" (Paramount 3290, 1931)
[Clarence "Tom"] Ashley & [Clarence] Greene, "Short Life of Trouble" (Perfect 12800/Banner 32427/Romeo 5129/Oriole 8129 [all as Ashley & Green]/Conqueror 8149 [as Ashley & Greene], 1932; rec. Nov. 30, 1931; on Ashley04 as by the Blue Ridge Mountain Entertainers)
Blue Sky Boys, "Short Life of Trouble" (Bluebird B-8829/Montgomery Ward M-8849, 1941; rec. 1940)
Burnett & Rutherford, "A Short Life of Trouble" (Columbia 15133-D, 1927; rec. 1926; on BurnRuth01)
Haywood County Ramblers (probably Clarence Ashley, Gwen Foster, Dock Walsh, ? Medford), "Short Life in Trouble" (Victor, unissued, recorded May 28, 1931)
Buell Kazee, "Short Life of Trouble" (Brunswick 214, 1928; on KMM)
J. E. Mainer's Mountaineers (or Wade Mainer), "Short Life and It's Trouble" (Bluebird B-6936, 1937)
Riley Puckett, "Short Life of Trouble" (Decca 5442, 1937)
Doc Watson & Arnold Watson, "A Short Life of Trouble" (on WatsonAshley01)

File: RcSLOT

Shortenin' Bread

DESCRIPTION: The mother will make shortening bread. Its benefits, and the extent to which children like it, may be described. (The singer steals the skillet and the bread, and winds up in jail and faced with a fine.) Often in dialect, with assorted floating verses

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (JAFL 28)
KEYWORDS: food prison robbery
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE,So)
REFERENCES (13 citations):
Randolph 255, "Shortenin' Bread" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Arnold-FolkSongsOfAlabama, p. 156, "Shortnin' Bread" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 461, "Short'nin' Bread" (2 texts plus 7 fragments and 1 excerpt; some of the fragments, especially "I," may be associated with some other song)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 461, "Short'nin Bread" (3 tunes plus text excerpts)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 149-153, "Short'nin Bread," "Short'nin' Bread," (no title), "Put on the Skillet" (4 texts plus some odds and ends, 3 tunes; it's possible that some of the fragments are something else)
Lunsford/Stringfield-30And1FolkSongsFromSouthernMountains, p. 55, "Wild Horse (Short'nin' Bread)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Richardson/Spaeth-AmericanMountainSongs, p. 81, "Shortenin' Bread" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 267, "Shortenin' Bread" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 234-236, "Shortenin' Bread" (1 text, 1 tune)
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, p. 160, "(Shortnin' Bread)" (1 text)
Messier-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 52-53, "Short'nin' Bread" (1 text)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, pp. 497-498+, "Short'nin' Bread"
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, John Allen Davidson, Jr., "The Songs of Caleb Mashburn," Vol. XX, No. 1 (Feb 1972), p. 57, "Three little chill'rd lyin' in bed" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #4209

RECORDINGS:
Cherokee Ramblers, "Short'nin' Bread" (Decca 5162, 1935)
Emma Jane Davis, "Shortenin' Bread" (AFS 6644 A1, 1942)
Dykes' Magic City Trio, "Shortening Bread" (Brunswick 125, 1927)
Ora Dell Graham, "Shortenin' Bread" (AFS, 1940; on LTreas)
Mississippi John Hurt, "Shortenin' Bread" (on MJHurt04; on MJHurt05)
Earl Johnson & his Dixie Entertainers, "Shortenin' Bread" (OKeh 45112, 1927)
Bobby Leecan's Need-More Band, "Shortnin' Bread" (Victor 20853, 1927)
Reaves White County Ramblers, "Shortening Bread" (Vocalion 5218, 1928; on TimesAint05)
Gid Tanner & His Skillet Lickers, "Shortening Bread" (Columbia 15123-D, 1927; rec. 1926)
Conrad Thibaud, "Shortnin' Bread" (Victor 24404, 1933)
Sonny Terry [pseud., Saunders Terrell], "Shortnin' Bread" (on Terry 01)
Tweedy Brothers, "Shortenin' Bread" (Supertone 9174, 1928)
Henry Whitter, "Hop Light Ladies and Shortenin' Bread" (OKeh 40064, 1924)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Run, Nigger, Run" (tune)
NOTES [38 words]: Fuld reports that this tune appeared in 1915 (E. C. Perrow in the April-June 1915 JournalOfAmericanFolklore) under the title "Shortened Bread." Words and music first appear together in Scarborough, 1925, but are probably older. - RBW

File: R255

Shorty George

DESCRIPTION: "Shorty George, he ain't no friend of mine... Taken all de women an' leave de men behind." (The singer goes bad as an orphan child. He finds a girl, but they go separate ways.) He learns his girl/mother is sick and arrives for her sad funeral
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (recording, James "Iron Head" Baker)
KEYWORDS: orphan love death burial mother prison prisoner train
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 118-123, "Shorty George" (4 texts, 2 tunes)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 23, "Shorty George" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 199-201, "Shorty George" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 79, "Shorty George" (1 text)
DT, SHORTGEO SHORTGE2*
ADDITIONAL: Moses Asch and Alan Lomax, Editors, _The Leadbelly Songbook_, Oak, 1962, p. 69, "Shorty George" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10055
RECORDINGS:
James "Iron Head" Baker, "Shorty George" (AFS 210B, 1933) (AFS 202 A2, 1934; on LC53)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "He Was a Friend of Mine"
NOTES [75 words]: "Shorty George" is reported to be the name of the train that carried convicts' wives and sweethearts to and from the penitentiary for conjugal visits. - PJS, (RBW)
This legend, derives from the Lomax collections of this song. It is interesting to note that Jackson's informants knew of the train they called "Shorty George," but it did not come to the prison; it was merely a very small train (typically three cars) which passed precisely at 3:35. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.1
File: LxU023

Shot My Pistol in de Heart of Town

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, Lawd, Shot my pistol In de heart of town. Lawd, de big chief hollered, 'Doncha blow me down.'" The singer (?) looks for his girls who 'lef' here runnin'." He describes his love of cards. The story is not coherent
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Odum & Johnson)
Shotley Stew

DESCRIPTION: "There's a half a pound of bully-beef left from the month before" and other unsavory items, all mixed together, "And when they finished boiling it, it tasted just like glue, They gave it to the Ganges boys And called it Shotley Stew"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: food cook navy hardtimes derivative
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 48, "Shotley Stew" (1 text, tune referenced)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "A Little Bit of Heaven" (tune)
NOTES [91 words]: Although this song refers to the Ganges, you'll look in vain for a British Navy ship by that name. HMS Ganges was a shore establishment, founded near the beginning of the twentieth century and lasting until 1976, where new sailors were given their initial training. It was near Shotley in East Anglia (hence the song name), close to the naval base at Harwich, where the Orwell and the Stour join close to the sea; the nearest major town is Ipswich, a few miles up the Orwell.
The Ganges is now memorialized by the HMS Ganges Museum at Shotley.

Should A Been on the River in 1910

DESCRIPTION: (After an opening from "Ain't No More Cane on this Brazos" or "Go Down, Old Hannah," about driving women like men), the singer recalls a partner doing 99 years, recalls that his girl promised to visit but did not, and promises to "be around some day."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (recorded from Arthur "Lightning" Sherrod by Jackson)
KEYWORDS: prison hardtimes floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 77-75, "Should A Been on the River in 1910" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: JDM073

Shout Along and Pray Along

DESCRIPTION: "Shout along and pray along, ye Heaven-bound soldiers! Shout along and pray along, I'm on my way! Pray on, (sisters/fathers/mothers/children", and don't get weary; Never get tired of serving the Lord. Shout along and pray along...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 633, "Shout Along and Pray Along" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 633, "Shout Along and Pray Along" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #11932
Shout Josephine Shout
DESCRIPTION: Chorus dialog: "Josephine?" "Ma'am?" "Want t' shout?" "Yes ma'am." "What time?" "Right now." "Shout Josephine Shout!" Verses: "Pain in the head (back, neck, hip, toe,...), Shout, shout, Shout Josephine, shout"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslunds)
KEYWORDS: nonballad dialog playparty
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslunds, pp. 106-107, "Shout Josephine Shout" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES: cf. "Yes Ma'am" (form) and references there
NOTES [15 words]: The current description is based on the Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslunds text. - BS
Last updated in version 4.2
File: Parrp106

Shout Jubilee
DESCRIPTION: Verse format: one line, repeated, followed by "Some going to be buried in the graveyard, Some going to be buried in the sea, Get up in the morning before day, I'm going to shout about Jubilee." See notes for verse lines.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang)
KEYWORDS: death burial nonballad religious Devil
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang, pp. 306-307, "Shout Jubleee" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [49 words]: The description follows Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang but I do not repeat the dialect.
Verse lines include "My Lord calls me, I must go," "Satan's got iron shoes," "My Lord calls me I'm going to church," "My Lord calls me on my knees," "Fire in the east, fire in the west." - BS
Last updated in version 5.1
File: HPR306S

Shout Lula
DESCRIPTION: Dance tune "Shout Lulu, shout shout/What in the world you shoutin' about?" "How many nickels does it take/To see little Lulu's body shake?/It takes a nickel and it takes a dime/To see little Lulu cut her shine"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (recording, Samantha Bumgarner & Eva Davis)
KEYWORDS: sex money dancing bawdy dancetune nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, p. 140, "Shout, Lulu" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 201, "Lulie" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #4202
RECORDINGS:
Roy Acuff & his Smoky Mountain Boys, "Shout, Oh Lulu" (Vocalion 04867/OKeh 04867, 1939; rec. 1938)
Clarence Ashley & Tex Isley, "Shout Little Lulu" (on Ashley01)
Clarence Ashley & Jack Burchett, "Shout Lulu" (on WatsonAshley01)
Homer Brierhopper, "Little Lulie" (Decca 5615, c. 1938)
W. Guy Bruce, "Shout Lulu" (on FolkVisions1)
Samantha Bumgarner. "Shout Lou" (Columbia 146-D, 1924; Harmony 5094-H [as Luella Gardner], n.d.)
Carver Boys, "Sleeping Lula" (Paramount 3199, 1930; rec. 1929)
Elizabeth Cotten, "Oh Miss Lulie Gal" (on Cotten02)
Rufus Crisp, "Shout, Little Lulie" (on Crisp01)
Louise Foreacre, "Shout Little Lulu" (on CloseHomeMS)
Dick Justice, "Little Lulie" (Brunswick 336, 1929)

File: RcsLulu

Shout On, Children
DESCRIPTION: "Shout on, children, you never die; Glory hallelujah! You in the Lord and the Lord in you; Glory hallelujah." "Shout and pray both night and day, How can you die, you in the Lord?" "Come on, children, let's go home; Oh I'm so glad you're in the Lord."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 60, "Shout On, Children" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12020
File: AWG060A

Shout, A (Hod' Me, Sister Betsy)
DESCRIPTION: A "shout," spoken rather than sung: "Hol' me, sister Betsy, hol' me (x2), Hol' mah reticule, hol' mah shawl, But pray don't techa [touch] waterfall. Three miles to walk, three cows to milk. Hol' me, sister Betsy, hol' me."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama)
KEYWORDS: recitation animal hair
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 91, "A Shout" (1 text, 1 tune included to imply vocal inflection)
Roud #16314
File: Arn091

Shout, Shout, We're Gaining Ground
DESCRIPTION: "Shout, shout, we're gaining ground, Oh glory hallelujah, For the gospel ship is sailing by, Oh glory hallelujah!" "Shout, shout... For the grace of God is coming down" "It has come down and it will come down" "The Devil's mad and I am glad"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 633, "Shout, Shout, We're Gaining Ground" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #7561
CROSS-REFERENCES:
File: R633

Shove Around the Grog
DESCRIPTION: Brief stories of bringing lumber downriver. Chorus: "Shove [or "Shore"] around the grog, boys, Chorus around the room; We are the boys that fear no noise, Although we're far from..."
home." The singer may tell of his girl in Lewiston Falls or elsewhere
AUTHOR: Boney Quillan
EARLIEST DATE: 1934
KEYWORDS: logger river love
FOUND IN: US(MA,NE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 175, "Shore Around the Grog" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warner-FolkSongsAndBalladsOfTheEasternSeaboard, p. 74, "Lewiston Falls" (1 text)
ST FSC175 (Partial)
File: FSC175

Shoving Corduroy
DESCRIPTION: The singer, a "swamper," is building corduroy roads. He describes his work, the pay, and an incident where a workmate falls into a boghole. Finally, he expresses a desire for a pretty woman, and says he'll do anything to please her -- even shove corduroy.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks)
KEYWORDS: lumbering work courting
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 25, "Shoving Corduroy" (1 text)
Roud #8859
NOTES [64 words]: A corduroy road was built by laying logs parallel to one another to make a roadway across a swamp. [There is some dispute about whether the roads or the fabric were named first, although the fabric is more likely. - RBW] According to Beck, the swamper usually "cleared the underbrush and other obstructions for the teamster, or so that logs could be skidded to their destination." - PJS
File: Be025

Show Me The Lady That Never Would Roam
DESCRIPTION: "I am just (forty-five), with a dear little wife, who is just ten years younger than me."
The singer wishes his wife "never would roam." His wife "causes me a lot of grief... oft from her home"; she goes out for fun while he "rocks the dear baby to sleep"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah)
KEYWORDS: marriage infidelity nonballad children wife FOUND IN: Ireland US(Ro)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 137, "Show Me The Lady That Never Would Roam"
(1 text)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #125, "When I Rock the Deer Snookums to Sleep" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #4378
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rocking the Cradle (and the Child Not His Own)" (theme) and references there
File: OCC137

Show Me the Way to Go Home, Babe
DESCRIPTION: A lament on the effects of drinking and or rambling, perhaps with a request for forgiveness and/or floating blues lyrics. The whole is held together (if it is) by the chorus "Show me way to go home." The singer may have been drunk for many months
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1913 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: drink home floating verses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Show Pity, Lord (Supplication)
DESCRIPTION: "Show pity, Lord! Oh Lord, forgive! Let a repentant sinner live!" The singer abjectly confesses fault: "My crimes are great but can't surpass The power and glory of thy grace." The singer confidently expects salvation
AUTHOR: Words: Watts? (to the tune "Windham?")
EARLIEST DATE: 1860 (Harmona Sacra)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 631, "Show Pity, Lord" (1 short text plus an excerpt, 1 tune)
Roud #7559
SAME TUNE:
Broad is the Road That Leads to Death (Windham) (Darling-NewAmericanSongster, p. 263)
File: R631

Showing the Flag
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, a torpedo boat is the best thing afloat to take for a fair weather sail," but although they had calm seas while hunting Pancho Villa, conditions are much harder in World War I. Don't even think about life on a destroyed in bad weather
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe)
KEYWORDS: navy ship hardtimes storm
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 92-96, "Showing the Flag" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27877
NOTES [12 words]: For the difficulties of being a destroyer sailor, see "Destroyer Life." - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: NiM092

Shrove Tuesday Song
DESCRIPTION: "Pat, pat the pan hot, I become a-shroving. A bit of bread, a bit of cheese, That's better than nothing. Eggs and lard and flour's dear, That makes me come shroving here."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook)
KEYWORDS: food nonballad request
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-WCS, #131, "Shrove Tuesday Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1516
NOTES [26 words]: Roud's #1516 includes quite a few Shrove Tuesday/alms songs. It seems to me that this number includes several songs, but it is often hard to separate them. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.7
File: PECS131
Shrowsbury For Me

DESCRIPTION: The singer praises Shrowsbury. He praises the churches and ministers, the "twice a week market," "gallant young men and maids," the trades-men and their wives, the fishing and fowling, shooting and bowling. "Who would not gladly live in this brave town?"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1675 (broadside, Bodleian 4o Rawl. 566(26))

LONG DESCRIPTION: The singer praises Shrowsbury. He praises the churches and ministers, the "twice a week market," "gallant young men and maids," the trades-men and their wives, the fishing and fowling, shooting and bowling. Even the sailors who have gone to the noble city of London freely return to Shrowsbury. There's no poverty in Shrowsbury: "all things are plenty and nothing is scant" "Who would not gladly live in this brave town ... The like of it is not in England to see" "Cast up your caps bravely for all men to see, And still cry with one accord, Shrowsbury for me"

KEYWORDS: pride commerce hunting river nonballad

FOUND IN:
Roud #V21423

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 4o Rawl. 566(26), "Shrowsbury For Me" ("Come listen young gallants of Shrowsbury fair town"), R. Burton (London), 1641-1674; also Wood E 25(44), Douce Ballads 2(206a), "Shrowsbury For Me"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Bonny Paisley" (some lines) and references there

cf. "Bonny Udny" (some lines)

NOTES [111 words]: Lines of "Shrowsbury For Me" have drifted to or from other songs. The title is from the last two lines of every verse except the last: "Then every man to his mind, Shrowsbury for me"; Bonny Paisley includes the line "of all the towns in --, -- is for me." One line, "the young men of Shrowsbury are jovial blades," appears in a different context in "The Poor Stranger"; you can see more about that line in the discussion of "The Poor Stranger." Here the line introduces a compliment to Shrowsbury: "The young men of Shrowsbury are jovial blades, When they are in company with pretty maids. They court them completely with complements free, Then every man ...." - BS

Last updated in version 5.0

File: BdShrFoM

Shu Lady

DESCRIPTION: Incoherent account, with many floating insertions, of an attack on Chandler's fishdyke. The people who did the damage are brought to trial and forced to sell their cows to pay the fines. The song objects to the Freemason jury

AUTHOR: Ms. (?) Lawless?

EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: fishing trial punishment

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 311, "Shu Lady" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 311, "Shu Lady" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)

Roud #6646

File: BrII311

Shub Her Down

DESCRIPTION: The first phrase of the shantyman's call is repeated as chorus. "Shub her down, shub her down, young man" ["Shub her down"] "Wheel away...." "Shub her out...." "Long and strong...." "We can do it...."

AUTHOR: unknown

KEYWORDS: work shanty

FOUND IN: West Indies(Nevis)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Abrahams-DeepTheWaterShallowTheShore, pp. 43-44, "Shub Her Down" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [28 words]: Abrahams has this as a Nevis shanty "for the purpose of pushing and lifting either a boat or a house [and it] describes the operation, with the usual encouragements." - BS
Last updated in version 4.0
File: AWIS043

Shuck Corn, Shell Corn
DESCRIPTION: "Shuck corn, shell corn, Carry corn to mill. Grind de meal, gimme de husk, (Bake/break) de bread, gimme de crust, Fry de meat, gimme de skin -- And dat's de way to bring 'em in. Won't you git up, old horse, I'm on de road to Brighton."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: work food nonballad horse
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 200, "Shuck Corn, Shell Corn" (1 text plus mention of 1 more)
Foner-AmericanLaborSongsOfTheNineteenthCentury, p. 89, "(We raise de wheat, Dey gib us de corn)" (1 text)
File: Br3200

Shule Agra (Shool Aroon[n], Buttermilk Hill, Johnny's Gone for a Soldier)
DESCRIPTION: The girl laments for her love, sent (to France) as a soldier. She says she will cry till "every tear would turn a mill." She will sell her spinning wheel to arm him. She will dye her clothes red and "round the world... beg for bread" till he returns
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1876 (Waite) (but five broadside prints are listed in Edwin Wolf 2nd, _American Song Sheets, Slip Ballads, and Political Broadside_ 1850-1870 __, Library Company of Philadelphia, 1963, p. 78); a partial text is reported from 1823
KEYWORDS: loneliness separation foreignlanguage
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,Ro,SE,So) Britain(England,Scotland) Ireland Canada(Mar,Newf)
REFERENCES (33 citations):
Greig/Duncan6 1107, "Shule Agra" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 281-282, "Shule Aroon" (1 text)
Randolph 107, "Shule, Shule" (3 texts, 1 tune, though "A" is mixed with "Ease that Trouble in the Mind" or "The Swapping Boy" or some such, "B" is a nonsense fragment, and "C" is largely floating material); also probably the "A" fragment of 455, "When I Get on Yonder Hill" (2 texts)
Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart2 38, "Buttermilk Hill" (1 text, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 40, "Putnam's Hill" (3 texts plus a fragment, 2 tunes)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 296, "I'll Sell My Hat, I'll Sell My Coat" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 127, "Shule Aroon" (1 fragment, so short that it might just be nonsense though it is probably this song)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 130, pp. 275-276, "Shule Aron" (1 text, short and even more damaged than usual, to which is prefixed the rhyme "Snail, snail, come out of your hole, Or else I'll beat you as black as a coal", elsewhere filed as "Snail, Snail (I)"
HudsonTune 32, "Snail, Snail" (1 text, 1 tune, the version with the verse about the snail)
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 172, "My Sweetheart's Gone to the Fair" (1 short text, 1 tune; the first verse metions the sweetheart going to the fair and is unique or nearly so, but the rest is this)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 93, "Putman's Hill" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
OCrinion/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 139, "Siul A Ruin" (4 texts, 1 tune)
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 110, "Shule Aroon" (1 text)
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 96, "Siul a Ghra" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 347, "Shule Agra" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 131, "I Dyed My Petticoat Red" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, pp. 24-25, "I Dyed My Petticoat Red" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 32-35, "Siubhal a Gradh (Come, My Love, Johnny Has Gone for a Soldier)" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 35, "Johnny Has Gone far a Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 20, "Johnny Has Gone for a Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 298-299, "Shoo, Shoo, Shoo-lye" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 12-13, "Shule Agra" (1 text, 1 tune)
Salt-BuckeyeHeritage-Ohio'sHistory, pp. 41-42, "Johnny Has Gone for a Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN199 "As from Newcastle I did pass" (listed as "Traditional? Ancestor of Scots 'Dicky Macphalion' and Irish 'Shule Aroon'")
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1143, p. 78, "Johnny Is Gone for a Soldier" (5 references)
Behan-IrelandSings, #94, "Walk My Love" (1 text, 1 tune, claiming to be an independent translation of the Gaelic)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 68, "Johnny Has Gone for a Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 79, "Shule Agra" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 280, "Buttermilk Hill" (1 text)
DT, SHULARN1* (SHULARN2*) SHULARN3 SHULARN4
ADDITIONAL: Diarmaid O Muirithe, An t-Amhran Macaronach (Baile Atha Cliath: An Clochomhar, 1980) #4, pp.40,196, "Siul, Siul, Siul a Ruin" ("Siul, Siul, Siul a Ruin") (1 text)
James P. Leary, Compiler and Annotator, _Wisconsin Folklore_ University of Wisconsin Press, 2009, article "Kentucky Folksong in Northern Wisconsin" by Asher E. Treat, p. 235, "I'll Sell My Hat, I'll Sell My Coat" (1 text, 1 tune, sung by Mrs. M. G. Jacobs)
ADDITIONAL: Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, pp. 32-34, "Shool" (a fragment which appears to have several added verses but which retains the second verse about the girl's lover being gone for a soldier); pp. 64-65, "Shule Aroon" (1 text, this the true song)
Roud #911
RECORDINGS:
Anita Best and Pamela Morgan, "Suil a Gra" (on NFABestPMorgan01)
Pearl Jacobs Borusky, "I'll Sell My Hat, I'll Sell My Coat" (AFS, 1940; on LC55)
Porter Brigley, "I Died My Petticoat Red" (on MRHCreighton)
Robert Cinnamond, "Shule Agra" (on IRRCinnamond03)
Elizabeth Cronin, "Shule Aroon" (on FSB01);" Siul A Ruin" (on IRECronin01)
Chubby Parker, "Bib-A-Lollie-Boo" (Gennett 6077/Silvertone 5012, 1927; Supertone 9188, 1928) (Conqueror 7891, 1931)
Ellen Emma Power, "Siul A Ghra" (on ITMA/CapeShoreNL)
Pete Seeger, "Johnny Has Gone for a Soldier" (on PeteSeeger31)
Art Thieme, "Bibble-a-la-doo" (on Thieme04)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Song of the Pinewoods" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Hey Bonnie Laddie, Mount and Go" ("I'll sell my rod, I'd sell my reel" lyrics)
cf. "My Mary of the Curling Hair" (lyrics)
SAME TUNE:
Mickey's Gone for a Laborer ("Being out of work it was no fun") (words by John C. Cross) (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 97)
NOTES [468 words]: In its earliest forms this song seems to have been simply a girl's lament for her departed lover. In many American versions (Randolph's 107 A and C, Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio's D) we find unrelated stanzas about the girl's "very cross" father. Scott (following Joyce) theorizes that the song arises out of the Glorious Revolution of 1688. The Irish supported James II, and were defeated at the Boyne. William III, who defeated James, offered forgiveness to the rebels who would swear loyalty to him, but many preferred exile. The only evidence for this theory, at least in English versions, seems to be the lines "But now my love has gone to France, To try his fortune to advance...." It's hard to tell how much of this song was originally Gaelic. Although there are Gaelic choruses (e.g. from Barry, in JAFL XXII 15; Connie Dover's modern recording is as close to this as makes no difference), I've never heard a truly traditional Gaelic verse, and even the chorus is usually only a mangled imitation of Gaelic. (Of course, it doesn't help that Gaelic spelling is far from standardized.)
Jonathan Lighter notes that Bruce Olson found two verses that seem to be this in some 1823 correspondence by Sir Walter Scott:
I went to the mill, but the miller was gone
I sat me down and cried o'one!
To think of the days that are past and gone,
Of Dickie Macphalion that's slain.
Shoo, shoo shoolaroon
To think on the days that are past and gone,
Of Dickie Macphalion that's slain.
I sold my rock, I sold my reel,
And sae hae I my spinning wheel
And 'a to buy a cap of steel
For Dickie Macphalion that's slain.
Lighter notes that these were published the following year in Sharpe's Ballad Book.
Lighter also notes "he phonological similarity between 'For Dickie McPhallion that's slain' and P. W. Joyce's phonetic rendering, for English speakers, of the Irish refrain as 'Is go dee tu mavourneen slaun.'"
I agree that they appear likely to be related.
Jonathan also notes that Thomas Moore set his poem "I Wish I was by That Dim Lake" to the tune
"Shule Aroon" in 1824, and that this tune is similar to one of the tunes for this song. - RBW
The Thieme recording retains only the tune, chorus and two verses of "Shule Agra"; otherwise, it's humorous floaters. - PJS
Like another Newfoundland text, Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 96, the ITMA/CapeShoreNL text is 3 verses in English except for the last line -- which is Irish -- and the chorus is Irish.
One of two broadsides for this ballad as "Shule Agra"/"Johnny Is Gone for a Soldier" at Bodleian Library site Ballads Catalogue is printed in New York c.1860, shelfmark Harding B.18(326).
See three "Shule Agra"/"Johnny Is Gone for a Soldier" broadsides [America Singing: digital id sb40500a/as201910/cw103140] at the Library of Congress American Memory site. - BS

Shulls Mills
DESCRIPTION: The singer prepares to return to Shulls Mills. He talks of his relations with the girls, carried out largely on the basis of cash up front, because "the girls... think I'm purty damn mean."
He concludes, "When I gets my pay, Hain't gonna work a-tall."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl)
KEYWORDS: logger whore
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 134, "Shulls Mills" (1 text, 1 tune; the text is composite though all verses come from Frank Proffitt)
ST Wa134 (Partial)
Roud #5735
File: Wa134

Shut Up in the Mines of Coal Creek
DESCRIPTION: (Eleven) miners, trapped in the mines of Coal Creek, resign themselves to death but place their trust in Jesus. Their lamps are flickering, their food is almost gone; they say farewell to their wives and children, saying they will meet them in heaven
AUTHOR: Probably Green Bailey, though Darling lists it as by Norman Gilford EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recording, Green Bailey under the pseudonym Dick Bell)
KEYWORDS: mining death farewell
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Dec 9, 1911 - The Coal Creek explosion
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 272-274, "Shut Up in Coal Creek Mine"
(1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 367-368, "Shut Up in the Mines of Coal Creek" (1 text)
Roud #844
RECORDINGS:
Dick Bell [pseud. for Green Bailey], "Shut Up in the Mines of Coal Creek" (Challenge 425, 1928; on
New Lost City Ramblers, "Shut Up in the Mines of Coal Creek" (on NLCR15, NLCRCD2)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Cross Mountain Explosion (Coal Creek Disaster)" [Laws G9] (subject)

NOTES [59 words]: The Coal Creek explosion of 1911 actually involved more than 100 miners; I am not entirely certain that it is the event described here (there was another disaster in 1902). But, of course, this song could be about certain of the trapped miners rather than the whole gang. Roud seemingly lumps this with Laws G9, but it is patently a different song. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.7

Shut Up, Brenda

DESCRIPTION: "Shut up, (Brenda), Shut up, (Brenda), Keep your big fat trap shut"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana)

KEYWORDS: nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, p. 87, "Shut Up, Brenda" (1 short text, 1 tune)

NOTES [672 words]: Broadside Bodleian Harding B 26(603) is the basis for the description. The erroneous reference to [16]58 in the second verse is corrected to [16]88 in the last. - BS

The Siege of Londonderry was one of those defining moments in Irish history, though it didn't seem like a particularly big deal at the time. It was defining for the way it was remembered.
The context is the Glorious Revolution of 1688 (for which see, e.g., "What's the Rhyme to Porringer?" and "The Vicar of Bray"). The Catholic James II had been driven off the English throne, replaced by his Protestant daughter Mary and her Protestant husband (and first cousin) William III of Orange. But this was just a small part of the war between France and most of the rest of Europe; the French were supporting James in order to distract the British.

And James decided to take advantage of his support in Ireland, still mostly Catholic. He would not himself arrive until March 1689, but his followers were active. According to Fry/Fry, pp. 159-160, "Londonderry had shown its Protestant colours as early as September 1688, when the apprentices, the working lads of the city, had closed the gates against the Catholic earl of Antrim and his men; later, when Tyrconnell [James's Lord Deputy of Ireland, for whom see 'Lilliburlero'] had most unwisely withdrawn whole regiments from the north, the Protestant gentry had raised levies in support of William. Tyrconnell had defeated them in a confused engagement known as the 'break of Dromore,' whereupon those who could not get sea passage away from the country had crowded as refugees into the garrison town of Enniskillen, in Fermanagh, and into Londonderry. James, beneath the city walls, called repeatedly upon the citizens to surrender, promising them a free pardon for their rebellion."

"The city's thirty thouand civiliiians were reduced to eating rats, but when the city's commander, Robert Lundy, seemed ready to surrender, the populace turned on him. The cry of the besieged city was 'No Surrender!' It would become a Protestant motto" (Golway, pp. 30-31).

Fry/Fry, p. 160: "The besiegers had no chance of taking the city by assault. James'[s] troops were untried and ill-equipped; they had no spades and shovels for mining the city walls, and no guns heavy enough to breach them. They could only wait until the defenders were starved into submission. Refugees had swelled the population to 30,000 and food supplies soon began to run out; people were dying of starvation and the garrison was too weak to fight.... Then, in the middle of June, six weeks after the siege had begun, an English fleet arrived in Lough Foyle to relieve the city."

The lough, however, had been blocked by James's troops, so it was six weeks before the ships were able to reach the city. Once they did, though, that was the end of the fifteen-week siege (Wallace, p. 56); with food now available, the Catholic army saw no point in continuing the siege.

According to Bardon, pp. 157-158, "Derry was the last walled city to be built in western europe. The siege of 105 days was the last great siege in British history, and the most renowned. 'Oh! to her the loud acclamations o the garrison soldiers round the Walls when the ships came to the Quay,' Ash wrote in his diary.'...The Lord, who has preserved this city from the Enemy, I hope will always keep it to the Protestants.' For the Protestants of Ulster this epic defence gave inspiration for more than three centuries to come."

You can generally tell the perspective of a commentator by whether he refers to the city as Derry (the Catholic title) or Londonderry (Protestant). I've called it Londonderry because, at this particular time, the Protestants were defending it. Though the area is in fact mostly Catholic. For more background on the siege, see "Derry Walls Away." - RBW

Bibliography

- Fry/Fry: Peter and Fiona Somerset Fry,A History of Ireland, 1988 (I use the 1993 Barnes & Noble edition)
- Golway: Terry Golway,For the Cause of Liberty, Simon & Schuster, 2000

Last updated in version 5.1
File: BrdSGD

Si Hubbard (Hey Rube)

DESCRIPTION: Two farm boys decide to visit the circus. They raise the money and go in to see the sights. After volunteering to take part in various escapades, they end up being carried off by a balloon. When at last they land, they wind up in jail

AUTHOR: unknown
Si j'avais le Bateau (If I had the Boat)
DESCRIPTION: French. If I had the boat which my father had given me I could cross the water and the sea without boat. If I had children who would not call me mom I would often ask God that they would die suddenly. To the proprietor's honor, let's pop the cork.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage drink humorous nonballad nonsense
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peacock, pp. 96-97, "Si J'Avais le Bateau" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Mme. Josephine Costard, "Si J'Avais le Bateau" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
File: Pea096

Si J'Etais Petite Alouette Grise (If I Were Small Gray Lark)
DESCRIPTION: French. A young drummer/sailor returns from war. He asks a king's daughter to be his girl. She says he must convince the king he is very rich, which he does. The king agrees. The drummer/sailor thanks the king but leaves: he has prettier girls at home.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage greed courting rejection gold father sailor royalty
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peacock, p. 889, "Si J'Etais Petite Alouette Grise" (1 text, 1 tune)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Trois Jeunes Tambours (Three Young Drummers)
Une Jeune Tambour (A Young Drummer)
Belle Alouette Grise (Beautiful Grey Lark)
NOTES [94 words]: This ballad is common on the internet as "Trois Jeunes Tambours" -- for example at the site of "La Caverne de Cat."
The discussion of wealth is about three ships owned by the drummer/sailor:I have three ships on the sea: one has a cargo of gold, one has a cargo of pearls [or jewels], and the third is for my girl friend. The conversation about the ships may be between the drummer/sailor and the king's daughter.
The endings spoken to the king by the protagonist vary between: (1) Your daughter is something special (2) In my country there are prettier girls. - BS
File: Pea889

Sic 'Em Dogs On
DESCRIPTION: "Yes, I'm goin' downtown and the the chief police you siccin' your dogs on me."
The woman apologizes, but the singer says she has his money and is loosing the dogs. He begs her to take him back. She says, "Don't you drive me round."
AUTHOR: Booker T. Washington "Bukka" White
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (recorded by Bukka White for the Lomaxes)
KEYWORDS: police courting rejection dog
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Burton-TennesseeTraditionalSingers, p. 175, "Sic 'Em Dogs On" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #18751

RECORDINGS:
Bukka White, "Sic 'Em Dogs On" (Herwin 92400, 1939)

File: BTN175

Sic a Wife as Willie Had (Willie Wastle)

DESCRIPTION: "Willie Wastle dwalt on Tweed." I "wadna gie a button" for his wife. "Tinker Maggie was her mither." One eye, few teeth, limping leg, hump on back and breast. Her actions are as crude as her looks. "Sic a wife as Willie had."

AUTHOR: Robert Burns

EARLIEST DATE: 1792 (Scots Musical Museum)

KEYWORDS: humorous nonballad wife

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, p. 132, "Sic a Wife As Willie Had" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, WASTLE

Roud #2702

BROADSIDES:

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "King of the Castle" (lyrics)

NOTES [54 words]: Somewhere in the depths of my memory, there is a vague memory of a children's rhyme about Wullie Wastle, King of the Castle. The Opies print a different version as a form of Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes, #287, "I'm the king of the castle." Whether there is a relationship between that and this I do not know. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.3

File: CrMa132

Sick Parade (Bugle Call Lyric)

DESCRIPTION: "Sixty-four, ninety-four! He'll never go sick no more; The poor bugger's dead."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang)

KEYWORDS: soldier death

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, p. 234, "(no title)" (1 short text)

File: BrPa234D

Sidewalks of New York

DESCRIPTION: Known by its chorus: "East side, west side, all around the town, The tots sang Ring-a-Rosie, London Bridge is falling down...." The verses describe courting in New York, and wax nostalgic for the days when the singer was one of those doing the courting

AUTHOR: Words: James W. Blake (1862-1935) / Music: Charles B. Lawlor (1852-1925)

EARLIEST DATE: 1894 (sheet music published by Howley, Haviland & Co)

KEYWORDS: courting game children

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 48, "Sidewalks of New York" (1 text)
Gilbert-LostChords, p. 257, "The Sidewalks of New York" (1 text)
Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 211-213, "The Sidewalks of New York" (1 text)
Fuld, pp. 499-500, "The Sidewalks of New York"

DT, SIDWLKNY

ADDITIONAL: Robert A. Fremont, editor, _Favorite Songs of the Nineties_, Dover Publications, 1973, pp. 259-262, "The Sidewalks of New York" (1 text, 1 tune, the 1899 sheet music)
Roud #22680
RECORDINGS:
Abner Burkhardt, "The Sidewalks of New York" (Champion 15279, 1927)
Vernon Dalhart, "The Sidewalks of New York" (Columbia 437-D, 1925; Columbia 15256-D, 1928 [as Al Craver])
George Gaskin, "Sidewalks of New York" (Berliner 0959, 1895)
Andrew Jenkins & Carson Robison, "Sidewalks of New York" (OKehe 45232, 1928)
Billy Jones, "The Sidewalks of New York" (Edison 51340, 1924)
SAME TUNE:
East Side, West Side (Harvesting Song) (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 105)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
East Side, West Side
NOTES [550 words]: For some inexplicable reason, this was Al Smith's 1928 presidential campaign song. - RBW
Well, Smith was the governor of New York. Of course, rubbing that in didn't endear him to the rest of the country, and anti-Catholic bigotry helped do him in. - PJS
Kahn, p. 73, has an explanation: "At the Democratic National Convention of 1920, held in San Francisco, Alfred E. Smith first became linked with the song, 'The Sidewalks of New York.' This association was the result of a bandleader's mistake. [Prohibition] had gone into effect few months earlier, and the convention, which ultimately selected James M. Cox as its candidate for the Presidency, was the scene of some sharp infighting between wet and dry forces.... Representative W. Bourke Cockram of New York... put into nomination the name of a resolute wet, Al Smith. the usual ovation followed, and the band prepared to strike up a tune appropriate to the Smith cause. The bandleader knew two things about Smith: he was governor of New York, and he was a notorious devotee of the songs that had been sung by Harrigan and Hart and written by Harrigan and Braham. Fortwith, the bandleader instructed his men to play what he thought was an eminently fitting Harrigan-Braham song, 'The Sidewalks of New York.' Smith was stuck with it for the rest of his life." (The song, after all, wasn't by Harrigan and Braham.)
Moody, p. 2, says that the song Smith had actually requested in 1920 was a genuine Harrigan and Braham song, "Maggie Murphy's Home" (see the entry on that song), and that the band had been supplied with a variety of Harrigan and Braham tunes, but that "Sidewalks" got into the pile also, and when Bourke Cockran, who announce Smith, said, "We brought him here to you from the sidewalks of New York," Smith's musical fate was sealed. This even though Smith was actually "commodore" of the official Ned Harrigan fan club in 1910! (Kahn, p. 77).
Incidentally, the flip side of the Dalhart recording was "Al Smith for President." I don't know whether that's cause or effect. It's interesting to note that Herbert Hoover (Smith's opponent, who won the 1928 election) doesn't seem to have made any influence on oral tradition, but in addition to the Dalhart recording, Dave Macon sang an Al Smith song.
According to Studwell/Schueneman, p. 55, "In the true melting pot tradition of the city, New York native James W. Blake... collaborated with Irish immigrant Charles B Lawlor [to produce this song]."
Jasen, p. 26, reports that this was popularized in 1894 when it was sung by Lottie Gilson, known as "The Little Magnet" because of the crowds she drew.
Jasen, p. 28, reports, "Supposedly, [Charles] Lawlor, humming the melody, walked into the hat shop where [James] Blake was working, and asked him to write some lyrics about New York. Blake agreed then and there, writing the words down as he waited on customers. When the song was finished, Lawlor took it to Pat Howley, who bought it outright."
Kahn, p. 74, says that that bandmaster who played it for Al Smith wasn't entirely wrong about a Harrigan and Hart connection: "Lawlor and Blake are thought to have been inspired, consciously or subconsciously, by an 1879 tune from _The Mulligan Guards' Ball_, entitled 'The Babies on Our Block'" [Indexed as "Babies on Our Block"]. - RBW
Bibliography

DESCRIPTION: The Allen Family is in court; Sidney and the others break out by shooting the judge and starting a gunfight in the court. Recaptured and brought home, he is sentenced to a long prison term instead of being executed.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Henry)

KEYWORDS: prison fight trial feud

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1912 - Trial of the Allen family

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,SE,So)

REFERENCES (10 citations):
Laws E5, "Sidney Allen"
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 104, pp. 242-243, "Sidney Allen" (1 text)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 140, "Sidney Allen" (1 text)
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, p. 155, (no title) (1 text, 1 tune)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 113, "Hillsville, Virginia" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 254-255, "Sidney Allen" (1 text)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, p. 208, "Sidney Allen" (1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 191-192, "Sidney Allen" (1 text)
DT 777, SIDALLEN

Roud #612

RECORDINGS:
Vernon Dalhart, "Sydney Allen" (Columbia 15042-D, 1925) (Domino 3642, 1925; Banner 1672, 1926)

Henry Whitter, "Sydney Allen" (OKeh 40109, 1924)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Pardon of Sycna Allen" (subject)
cf. "Casey Jones (I)" [Laws G1] (meter)

NOTES [998 words]: Most of the background to this comes from Robert M. Rennick's article in NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, so I'd suggest you read that if you want the fuller story; the full issue is on the web at the North Carolina Digital Collections site.

The members of the Allen family seem to have been the backest of backwoodsmen, and the sort of individualist conservatives who found right-wing militia, although they had done fairly well by themselves and some of them were educated. But they also had terrible tempers; Floyd had once had a shootout with his own brother Jack. A third brother was Sidney, whose name was apparently pronounced "Sidna" and sometimes spelled that way -- including by Rennick.

The events took place in 1911-1912 near Hillsville, Virginia, in the southwestern part of the state. Even today, it has a population of less than three thousand. It all started with a fight over a girl between someone named Thomas and Wesley Edwards (the 19-year-old nephew of Floyd and Sidney Allen, and the first cousin of Claude, Floyd's son). The fight took place in a church, so there were plenty of witnesses; Wesley and his 21-year-old brother Sidney Edwards faced charges over the altercation.

The Edwards brothers had lost their father some years ago, so Floyd had watched over him. He advised them to go to North Carolina until things blew over. They left, but were induced to return -- and were promptly arrested. When Floyd saw them handcuffed and bound (a precaution that was clearly warranted, given that they were fugitives from justice), he attacked the deputies who were transporting them and set the boys free.
Eventually retaken, Wesley and Sidney Edwards were sentenced to sixty and thirty days, respectively, served their time, and were freed. But Floyd now faced charges for his interference -- plus assault on officers of the court. All he was charged with was "malicious obstruction of justice"; I suspect the charges would be harsher today. Floyd Allen ended up on trial, in March 1912, for "malicious obstruction of justice." (Sidney was also charged, but the charge was dropped; he had been nearby but apparently not taken part.)

Floyd's trial was postponed more than once, but on March 13, 1912, he went before the law. He was found guilty the next day, and was sentenced to a year in prison by Judge Thornton L. Massie. Massie agreed to hear new evidence presented by Allen's lawyer, but required Floyd -- who had, after all, been convicted -- to stay in prison for the night; the new evidence would be presented the next day. Floyd told the court, "Gentlemen, I just ain’t going" -- whereupon the whole family started shooting and made their escape. Two shots, one supposedly from Claude and one from Sidney, hit Judge Massie; the second one was fatal. Floyd also started firing, and so did his nephew Friel and others. So indiscriminate was their fire that four people were killed, including a 17-year-old girl, Betty Ayres, who had been a witness for the defense. At least eight others were wounded -- bystanders, jurors, plus Floyd and Sidney Allen. Floyd's wound was bad enough that he was unable to make a getaway and was to a hotel instead, where he was eventually arrested.

The rest fled, supposedly making a pact not to be taken without a fight. It took week to find them, but first Sidney Edwards, then Claude Allen, then Friel Allen (another son of Floyd) were found. Sidney Allen and his nephew Wesley Edwards managed to make their way to Des Moines, Iowa. But Wesley's sweetheart, Maud Irler, decided to visit him -- and suspicious family had her trailed, and she led the authorities to where Sidney and Wesley were to be found.

That took long enough that Floyd had already gone on trial again, this time for the murder of the Commonwealth's Attorney in his first case, William M. Foster. The case was tried on April 30, 1912; Floyd was convicted on May 17 and sentenced to electrocution. Claude (I read somewhere that it was spelled "Claud," but Rennick always uses the "e") was convicted of second degree murder and sentenced to fifteen years. His lawyers wanted a new trial -- this ended in a hung jury. Public pressure was such that Claude was tried a third time -- and this time was convicted of first degree murder and sentenced to death. Both Claude and Floyd were executed on March 28, 1913.

Sidney Allen was tried twice, on two different charges; he and Friel Allen were sentenced to to eighteen years, and separately, he and Wesley Edwards were tried for the murder of Judge Massie, with Sidney getting 35 years and Wesley 27. Friel Allen was eventually pardoned and became a model citizen. Wesley Edwards, pardoned in 1926, also managed to live a decent life after release. Sidney Edwards, though he too was pardoned in 1922, couldn't clean up his act; two years later, he killed his wife and then himself. Sidney Allen was also pardoned in 1926 and seems to have lived relatively quietly for the rest of his life.

For substantially more detail about the Allens, see the NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal article cited above; in addition to texts, it has background on the family. Sidney Allen's story, Memoirs of J. Sidna Allen - A True Narrative of What Really Happened at Hillsville, Virginia was published by F. H. Lamb of Mount Airy, NC in 1929, and is now available on some reprint sites, but the quality of those things is consistently awful and the cost high. In any case, I doubt its reliability.

A more recent book is Jerry L. Haynes, Mountain Justice: A Search for the Truth in the Aftermath of the Carroll County Courthouse Tragedy, 2012, which seemingly tries to get at the politics of the situation. (The Allens apparently felt that all their troubles came because of the political attitudes of the county.) I have not found a copy.

There is also an historical novel, No Villains, No Heroes, by Thomas Moore, 2012. I have no idea if it's awful or merely bad or useless; it seems a safe bet that it is one or the other. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1

File: LE05

Siege of Plattsburg, The

DESCRIPTION: "Back side of Albany stands Lake Champlain." "On Lake Champlain Uncle Sam set his boats, And Captain McDonough to sail 'em." The British come to attack Plattsburg, but scare off the British governor

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1845 (Newspaper, "Brother Johnathan")

KEYWORDS: war battle
Aug/Sept 1814 - Plattsburg campaign. As part of a three-pronged attack strategy (the other prongs being at Chesapeake Bay and the lower Mississippi), a British army of 11,000 regulars led by General Sir George Prevost and a naval force under Captain George Downie attack Lake Champlain.

Sept 6, 1814 - The British army reaches Plattsburg and awaits the navy
Sept 11, 1814 - Battle of Plattsburg. An American naval squadron under Captain Thomas Macdonough (1783-1825) defeats the British force in a fierce contest with very high casualties, compelling the British fleet to retreat in disorder. The British army, though under no military compulsion, retreats as well.

FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 510-512, "Siege of Plattsburg" (1 text, 1 tune)
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 351-352, "The Siege of Plattsburg" (1 text)
Roud #15541

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Banks of Champlain" (subject)
cf. "Noble Lads of Canada" (subject)

NOTES [1379 words]: In 1814, with Napoleon temporarily under control after the Battle of Leipzig and, later, his abdication, the British decided to finally finish off the War of 1812 with the Americans. They decided on a three-pronged attack -- the northern force starting from the Great Lakes, the center heading for Washington D.C., and the southern attack being made on New Orleans.

Considering that the British would have more force available than ever before (because they could use the ships and men that had been fighting Napoleon), and that they had generally had the best of it to that time even with their minimal forces -- pushing back every American attack on Canada and eventually driving most of the small American fleet off the seas -- the results were disastrously bad.

Only the middle assault had any success, when Robert Ross's men burned many of the government buildings in Washington. Their move toward Baltimore, however, was stopped at the siege of Fort McHenry, commemorated in "The Star Spangled Banner."

The Battle of New Orleans (for which see, e.g., "The Hunters of Kentucky" and "The Battle of New Orleans" [Laws A7]) resulted in the death of the slow-moving British commander Pakenham and the defeat of his force. To be sure, that assault followed the attack on Baltimore -- and the peace treaty.

Plattsburg, though, was the real disaster, because the British had every advantage and managed to lose anyway.

General Sir George Prevost, the British commander-in-chief in Canada (and before that at various points around the Caribbean; Heidler/Heidler, p. 428) had done a good job to this point, but he had never actually commanded in the field; Isaac Brock had won the great victories of 1812 (see "The Battle of Queenston Heights" and "Brave General Brock" [Laws A22]), and Gordon Drummond had been field commander at Lundy's Lane in 1814 (see "The Battle of Bridgewater"). With the British finally going on the offensive now that extra troops were available, Prevost himself took charge. Orders from London told him to advance toward Lake Champlain, which would among other things split Federalist New England (which had opposed the war and was still trying to trade with the British) from the more pro-war West and South (Borneman, pp. 199-200). Prevost had every advantage, too: The Americans, expecting more action on the Niagara front, had sent roughly half of the forces they had had in the Champlain area to Sacket's Harbor to meet a threat which never materialized (Hickey, p. 190; Heidler/Heidler, p. 420).

Prevost was hardly enthusiastic. Even though he had some 10,000 troops at his disposal (Jameson says 14,000), all regulars, meaning that he could sweep aside any force the Americans could put up, he wanted his ships to control the rivers. As a result, he dawdled (Borneman, p. 201). This even though the Americans had left in the Champlain region was a few thousand soldiers under Brigadier General Alexander Macomb (whose wife would eventually be credited with writing another song about this battle, "The Banks of Champlain"); plus the naval forces that 31-year-old Master Commander Thomas Macdonough could scrape up. These were inferior to the British forces (the British had captured two of the stronger American ships in 1813, giving them naval superiority; Hickey, p. 190), but Macdonough was to handle them brilliantly, and Prevost would do the rest.

Each fleet had one big vessel at Lake Champlain: The Americans had a 700-tonner named Saratoga, with 26 guns; the British had the strongest ship on the lake in the 1200-ton, 37-gun Confiance -- which was, however, so new that workmen were still aboard her as she headed up Lake Champlain! (Hickey, p. 190). Confiance was supported by the 16-gun Linnet and the 11-gun sloops Chub and Finch (the ships taken from the Americans the year before). The American flagship Saratoga's consorts were the 20-gun Eagle, the 17-gun Ticonderoga, the 7-gun Preble, and a bunch of one-gun and two-gun small fry (the British had some of those, too; see Borneman, pp. 205-206). Most of these were slapped together in just two months, using construction shortcuts and unsuitable wood (Delgado, p. 111), although the Ticonderoga had already been under construction; she had been started as a steamship and was hastily converted to a schooner-rigged warship (Delgado, p. 110).

The weight of broadside of the two fleets was about even, but the American ships were short of sailors, they were manned with "soldiers, convicts from an army chain gang[,] and army musicians" (Delgado, p. 110). And the British ships, with more long guns, were much better for an action on open water (Heidler/Heidler, p. 420). An action on open water was just what they didn't get. When it came time to attack the American position at Plattsburg, Prevost again wanted his navy to go first, even though the man who had built the British fleet and who knew the local waters, Lieutenant Daniel Pring, had been replaced as head of the fleet by Captain George Downie at the last minute (Borneman, pp. 204-205). Downie would play right into Macdonough's hands.

The American general Macomb had set up his lines on the edge of Plattsburg Bay. This let Macdonough put his forces at the head of the bay, making it difficult for the British to attack at long range; they almost had to turn into the bay, exposed to Macdonough's broadsides -- and, because they had to turn, they would lose most of their wind. Plus MacDonough had a trick: He had Saratoga tied to a series of winches so he could turn her around in place should her starboard side (facing the battle) be too damaged (Borneman, pp. 208-211).

The two lead ships, Saratoga and Confiance, were soon locked in battle. Saratoga probably took more damage (the British were firing heated cannonballs, which twice set her afire; Hickey, p. 191), but one of Saratoga's shots killed Downie, and at the key moment Macdonough spun his ship around. Confiance tried the same trick, couldn't manage it -- and took so much damage in the process that she had to strike her colors. Paine, p. 119, estimates that she took 105 hits from round shot, killing 40 of her crew and wounding 83. Saratoga was too damaged to fight an open-water action -- the two sides had roughly equal casualties -- but she had won. And, without Confiance, the rest of the British fleet was doomed. Linnet struck her colors about fifteen minutes later, and the battle was over (Borneman, p. 212).

Prevost still had at least a two to one edge on land, and it was probably closer to three to one (if Jameson's numbers are right, it was four to one) -- but he retreated anyway, without even seriously engaging Macomb (Borneman, pp. 213-214; Hickey, p. 193). The British thrust in the North -- the potential war-winner -- was at an end. Indeed, as it turned out, that was the effective end of the war on the Canadian frontier.

The American victories at Plattsburg and Baltimore, especially the former, were largely responsible for the end of the war; the Duke of Wellington told the British government that they needed naval superiority on the Great Lakes, and Plattsburg proved once and for all that they didn't have it. The Americans and British had been negotiating, but the two defeats caused the British to back off their harsher demands.

Ironically, the final Treaty of Ghent didn't even address the issues over which Madison had gone to war (impressment, etc.), though it did eventually result in some boundary clarifications. Incidentally, Paul Stamler tells me that they now spell the name of the town "Plattsburgh."

Macomb earned a major general's commission for Plattsburg, and eventually became commander-in-chief of the Unites States army from 1835 until 1841 (Jameson, p. 391). MacDonald, however, whose careful planning had been the key to the victory on the lake, soon contracted tuberculosis (if he wasn't suffering from it already), and spent most of the rest of his career ashore. He never rose above the rank of captain, and died in 1825 at the age of 41 (Heidler/Heidler, p. 313). Archaeologists have now discovered the wrecks of several of the ships at Plattsburg, including Eagle, Ticonderoga, and Linnet. Presumably artifacts will someday show up in museums.

Bibliography

- Delgado: James P. Delgado, Lost Warships: An Archaeological Tour of War at Sea, Checkmark, 2001
Siege of St. Malo
DESCRIPTION: "On the fourteenth of November, Straight to the French coast we did steer, All against the brave St. Malo, With our fleet we did steer... To burn St. Malo down." They bombard the town. The French ships and town are burned
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (collected by Sabine Baring Gould from J. Peale)
KEYWORDS: battle France
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Nov. 16-19, 1693 - Admiral Benbow's bombardment of St. Malo
FOUND IN: Britain(England(West))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 19, "The Siege of St. Malo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3309
NOTES [12 words]: For Admiral John Benbow (1653-1702), see the notes to "Admiral Benbow." - RBW
Last updated in version 4.5
File: Gund019

Sights and Scenes of Belfast, The DESCRIPTION: The singer claims to be "a country clown" looking for work. He finds muddy streets, "scavengers" on strike, strange fashions -- "the Grecian Bend" -- hawkers that will "tear you limb from limb," drunkards and shirkers and artful dodgers.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1989 (Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong)
KEYWORDS: commerce humorous nonballad
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong 8, "The Sights and Scenes of Belfast" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [17 words]: Leyden-BelfastCityOfSong says that this is a "song that takes us on a tour of the city in the 1870s." - BS
File: Leyd008

Sign On Day
DESCRIPTION: "It's sign-on day at the Dance Palais And we're down to a quid or two...." The singer describes the hard work of (sugar) cane cutting. "Our hands are raw, but two bob more Will make them seem like new. If we get enough pay we'll cut all day...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960
KEYWORDS: work Australia harvest
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 198-199, "Sign On Day" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [47 words]: Cane-cutting was seasonal work, so cutters and farmers gathered for a "sign on day" at some local venue (such as the "Dance Palais" mentioned here). Cane-cutters were paid by how much they cut, so they would often work exhausting long hours, then crash once the season was done. - RBW
Signing the Pledge

DESCRIPTION: "The old folks would be happy If they knew I'd signed the pledge, For my feet have long been straying On the brink of ruin's edge." He hopes, "God helping me," to stay free of drink, to help his parents as they grow old

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1920 (Randolph)

KEYWORDS: drink family

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 328, "Signing the Pledge" (1 text)
Roud #7802

Silent Night (Still the Night, Stille Nacht)

DESCRIPTION: German christmas song with multiple English translations, the most famous beginning "Silent night, holy night, All is calm, all is bright." The night of Jesus's birth is praised

AUTHOR: Music: Franz Gruber (1787-1863) / German Words: Joseph Mohr (1792-1848)

EARLIEST DATE: 1832 (sheet music)

KEYWORDS: Christmas religious Jesus nonballad foreignlanguage

FOUND IN: Germany Britain US

REFERENCES (8 citations):
Heart-Songs, p. 407, "Heart Songs" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, "Silent Night, Holy Night" (1 text)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 267, "Silent Night" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 384, "Silent Night" (1 text)
DT, SLNTNITE*
ADDITIONAL: Charles Johnson, One Hundred and One Famous Hymns (Hallberg, 1982), pp. 64-65, "Silent Night" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ian Bradley, _The Penguin Book of Carols_ (1999), #299, "Stille Nacht" (1 text)

RECORDINGS:
The Sinking of HMS Hood (File: Tawn067)

NOTES [809 words]: Joseph Mohr, the assistant priest at a church in Oberndorf, Austria (Reynolds, p. 192) reportedly wrote these words in 1818. The tale of Gruber's music is the stuff of folklore: His church's organ was broken (damaged by mice), and could not be repaired until after Christmas. Therefore Gruber needed music for guitar and voice -- the only things he had available. On December 24, he wrote this music for Mohr's words.

According to Stulken, p. 168, "[Mohr and Gruber] sang the hymn that evening, with Gruber accompanying on the guitar, and the choir repeating the last two lines in four-part harmony."

It is said that the music was given to the world by the organ repairman, though this may be one cute story too many, as the song was not published until 1832 (indeed, even the broken organ story has been described as probably fictional). The truth, according to Johnson, is simply that the song was circulated privately for some years, until someone named Friese heard it, took it down, and had it published. It apparently took some time for Gruber and Mohr to get credit. It is interesting to note that Mohr wrote six verses (which, incidentally, never mention Mary!), but three of these have been completely ignored by later singers.

The first version published in America, J. W.Warner's "Silent Night! Hallowe'd night" (published 1849 in _The Devotional Harmonist_) seems to have had no currency.

Julian, p. 761, lists no fewer than eight "common" English translations of these words and three that aren't in common use. There are really only three of much significance, though. The earliest, "Stilly night, holy night," by Emily Elliot, has since been largely forgotten. In the U.S., the form "Silent Night, Holy Night" is usual; it is often listed as anonymous though it's sometimes credited to John Freeman Young (e.g. Stulken, p. 129). Reynolds, pp. 470-471, also accepts the attributions, and points to an article in the October 1957 edition of _The Hymn_ by Byron Edward Underwood, entitled "Bishop John Freeman Young, Translator of 'Stille Nacht.'" Reynolds reports that Young was born in Pittston, Maine, in 1820, and educated at Wesleyan University, but became an Episcopalian and attended Virginia Theological Seminary. He eventually became Bishop of Florida, and died in New York City in 1885.

In Britain, we often meet the version "Still the night." This too is often listed as anonymous, but Julian, p. 183, lists it as by Stopford Augustus Brooke (born 1832); I read somewhere that the translation was published in 1881, which would mean that it is from Brooke's Christian Hymns, which he published after becoming an Anglican in that year.

Neither "translation" actually represents the German words very well.

Spaeth reports that the song was popularized in the United States by the Reiner (Rainer) family, starting around 1841. Ian Bradley's Penguin Book of Carols also attributes its popularity to this group -- but in Austria.

Minnesota choral director Philip Brunelle makes the interesting point that we almost always hear this sung too slowly. Gruber's original arrangement was at a typical waltz tempo. The melody has also gotten a little less elaborate over the years; a couple of places where Gruber's melody cycled through a chord where we now stay on a single note.

Despite the famous story of the song's origin, some sources do not list Mohr and Gruber as the authors. Songs That Never Grow Old, which lists 1909 and 1913 copyright dates, calls it "Holy Night" and credits it to "Michael Haydn."

Also, there are other songs known as "Silent Night." H.S. Perkins, The Climax, 1883, p. 45, has an item that begins "Silent night! silent night! Starry lamps thy pathway trace, Look in heav'nly splendor bright...."

Julian, pp. 760-761, says that this is the only poem by Joseph Mohr ever translated into English, and reports that Mohr "was born at Salzburg, Austria, on Dec. 11, 1792. After being ordained priest on Aug. 21, 1815, by the Roman Catholic Bishop of Salzburg, he was successively assistant at Ramsau and at Laufen; then coadjutor at Kuchl, at Golling, at Vigaun, at Adnet, and atAUTHERING; then Vicar-Substitute at Hof and at Hintersee -- all in the diocese of Salzburg. In 1828 he was appointed Vicar at Hintersee, and in 1837 at Wagrein, near St. Johann. He d[jied] at Wagrein, Dec. 4, 1848."

Reynolds, p. 323, says that Gruber was born near Hochbert in 1787, the son of a linen weaver who did not encourage his son's musical interests; he learned to play violin on his own, then studied organ. He was primarily a schoolteacher from 1807 to 1833, taking up the job of organist in 1816 to supplement his income. In 1833 he finally got a full-time position as organist and choir director at Hallein. In his life he is credited with some ninety compositions, but this tune is the only one that is remembered. - RBW

Bibliography

Last updated in version 6.0
File: FSWB384B

Silk Merchant's Daughter (I), The [Laws N10]

DESCRIPTION: A girl's parents send her lover away. She dresses in men's clothes and follows him. Their ship sinks. In a lifeboat, she is chosen by lot to be killed for food; he is to kill her. (She reveals herself); they spot (land or a ship) and all are saved

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1794 (Journal of the Polly)

KEYWORDS: love exile cross-dressing ship wreck disaster cannibalism reprieve rescue sailor

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,SE,So) Canada(Newf,Ont) Britain(Scotland,England(South)) Ireland

REFERENCES (25 citations):
- *Laws N10, "The Silk Merchant's Daughter"
- Greig/Duncan1 177, "The Silk Merchant's Daughter" (3 texts, 1 tune)
- Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Ox 239, "As I Was A-Walking by Newgate One Day" (1 text)
- Purslow-TheConstantLovers, pp. 91-92, "The Silk Merchant's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #4, "The Silk Merchant's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)

Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 296-298, "The Silk Merchant's Daughter" (2 texts, 1 tune)

Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 184-185, "Constant Lovers (The Silk Merchant's Daughter)" (1 long but incomplete text, 2 tunes)

Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 25, "The Castaways" (1 text, 1 tune)

Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 63-64, "The Merchant's Daughter Turned Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)

Munnelly/Deasy-TheMountCallanGarland-Tom-Lenihan 1, "To Fair London Town" (1 text, 1 tune)

Randolph 43, "The Silk Merchant's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)

Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 71, "The Silk Merchant's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)

Cox-FolkSongsSouth 99, "The Silk Merchant's Daughter" (fragments of a text with narration of the plot as recalled by the informant)

Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 107, "The Silk-Merchant's Daughter" (2 texts)

Morri, #212, "The Silk Merchant's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)

Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 35, pp. 148-149, "The Silk-Merchant's Daughter" (1 text)

Grimes-StoriesFromTheAnneGrimesCollection, p. 29, "Seafaring Man" (1 text)

Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 43, "The Silk-Merchant's Daughter" (1 text, which Laws describes as "almost completely rewritten": the boy goes to sea to avoid the girl)

Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 10, p. 21, "The Silk Merchant's Daughter" (1 fragment, probably this)

Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #42, "The Silk Merchant's Daughter" (1 text)

Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 64, "The Silk Merchant's Daughter" (4 texts, 4 tunes)

Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 64, "The Silk Merchant's Daughter" (1 text)

Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 61, "The Silk Merchant's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT 441, SLKMRCHT

ADDITIONAL: Harold Nestler, "Songs from the Hudson Valley" (article in _New York Folklore Quarterly_, Volume V, #2, Summer 1949), p. 78, "The Old Miser" (1 text, missing most of the action; it might be Laws N6 or Laws N10 or something else)

Roud #552

RECORDINGS:
- Tom Lenihan, "To Fair London Town" (on IRTLenihan01)
- Dellie Norton, "The Silk merchant's Daughter" (on OldTrad1, FarMts4)

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Harding B 11(2698), "New York Streets" ("As I was a walking up New York street"), J. Pitts (London), 1819-1844; also Harding B 11(3744), "The Silk Merchant's Daughter" ("As I was a-walking up New London street", unknown, n.d.; Harding B 25(1778), "The Silk Merchant's Daughter"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "The Ship in Distress" (plot) and references there
- cf. "MacDonald's Return to Glencoe (The Pride of Glencoe) [Laws N39]" (tune)

SAME TUNE:
- MacDonald's Return to Glencoe (The Pride of Glencoe) [Laws N39] (File: LN39)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
- Jamie and Nancy of Yarmouth
- New England
- The Rich Merchant's Daughter

File: LN10

---

Silly Doe, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer, "a silly doe, From Elford town I strayed." The master has his keeper take his hounds to chase her down "for leaving of the bounds." The chase goes "for many miles" and she is caught, cut, and murdered by the Duke of Cornwall.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1892 (Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle)

KEYWORDS: death hunting animal dog
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 119, "The Silly Doe" (1 text)
Roud #17213
NOTES [63 words]: Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle: "Chasing the doe is a common metaphor for sexual pursuit, and may have been used as a disguise for a local scandal involving an important personage." - BS
Given that the Duke of Cornwall is one of the titles of the Prince of Wales, I'd say so! Perhaps a story about one of those notorious womanizers, the future George IV or the future Edward VII? -
RBW
Last updated in version 2.7
File: ReCi119

Silly Old Man
DESCRIPTION: "Here's a silly ould man that lies all alone He wants a wife, and he can get none." He chooses. "Now, young couple, you're married together ... must obey father and mother ... love one another ... kiss together"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1830 (Carleton)
KEYWORDS: courting floatingverses playparty
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North)) Ireland
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 40, "Silly Old Man" (5 texts)
ADDITIONAL: William Carleton, Traits and Stories of the Irish Peasantry (London, 1896 (reprint of 1830 Dublin edition ("Digitized by Google")), p. 151, "The Silly Ould Man" (1 text)
Katharine (Tynan) Hinkson, "The Girls' Room" in Christabel R. Coleridge and Arthur Innes, editors,
The Monthly Packet (London, 1897 ("Digitized by Google")), Vol. XCIII, pp. 345, "The Old Fishwife" ("Here's an old Fishwife left all alone") man he walks alone") (1 text)
Roud #13181
CROSS-REFERENCES:
 cf. "Nuts in May" (tune, per Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
 cf. "King William was King James's Son" (some lines)
 cf. "Little Sally Walker" (some lines)
NOTES [97 words]: Among the "Silly Old Man" Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame texts are four that begin "One poor widow left all alone," "Here's a poor widow, she's left alone," "Two old bachelors left alone" and "Three old bachelors all in a row." The rest of each text follows the description above. The shared text includes something like "Choose to the east, and choose to the west, Choose the one that you love best"; Chamberlain starts with that text, with no one being alone; one problem is that it shares that text and the ending with "King William was King James's Son" and
"Little Sally Walker." - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: OpGa040

Silver Dagger (I), The [Laws G21]
DESCRIPTION: Two young people wish to marry; the boy's parents are against it because the girl is poor. The heartbroken girl stabs herself to death. The boy, finding her dying, takes the dagger and stabs himself as well
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1866 (Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin)
KEYWORDS: love poverty suicide family
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,Ro,SE,So) Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (34 citations):
Laws G21, "The Silver Dagger"
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 57, "Come All Good People" (1 text, 1 tune) Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 123-126, "The Silver Dagger" (2 texts plus 1 excerpt and references to 5 more, 1 tune)
Randolph 139, "The Silver Dagger" (6 texts, 2 tunes)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 161-163, "The Silver Dagger" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 139A)
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 75, "Katie Dear" (1 text, 1 tune)
Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin 13, "Come Youth and Age" (1 text)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 102, "The Green Fields and Meadows" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 23, "The Silver Dagger" (1 text)
List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, pp. 308-310, "The Golden Dagger" (1 text, 1 tune)
Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois, pp. 161-161, "The Silver Dagger/To All True Lovers Whom Parents Will Part" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 72, "The Silver Dagger" (1 text plus mention of 2 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 72, "The Silver Dagger" (2 excerpts, 2 tunes)
Jones-MinstrelOfTheAppalachians-Bascom-Lamar-Lunsford, pp. 205-206, "Young Man and Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #36, "Silver Dagger" (1 text)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 64, pp. 188-189, "The Silver Dagger" (1 text)
Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains, pp. 34-35, "Parents, Warning" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 38, "The Silver Dagger" (2 texts plus mention of 2 more, 1 tune)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 730-731, "The Silver Dagger" (1 text)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #30, "The Silver Dagger" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 109, "The Silver Dagger" (2 texts plus mention of 1 more)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol1, pp. 60-61, "Who's That Knocking at my Window?" (1 text, 1 tune)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol4, pp. 60-62, "Silver Dagger" (1 text, 1 tune)
Thomas-DevilsDitties, pp. 110-111, "Young Men and Maids" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, pp. 71-72, "Come All Ye Fair and Tender Ladies" (1 text, with the "Fair and Tender Ladies" first line but otherwise clearly this song)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 165, "The Silver Dagger" (1 text plus a fragment, 2 tunes, but the "B" fragment is probably "Charming Beauty Bright" [Laws M3])
Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, p. 42, "(The Bloody Dagger)" (1 short text, omitting the suicides)
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 40, pp. 71-73, "The Two Lovers (The Silver Dagger)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart1 31, "The Silver Dagger" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cray-AshGrove, p. 10, "Don't Sing Love Songs" (1 text, 1 tune, containing only the middle verses; it's almost a mix of this and "Fair and Tender Ladies")
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 221-222, "Young Men and Maids" (1 text)
DT 639, SILVDAG2*
ADDITIONAL: Fred W. Allsopp, Folklore of Romantic Arkansas, Volume II (1931), pp. 202-203, "(The Young Lovers)" (1 text)
Roud #711
RECORDINGS:
Blue Sky Boys, "Katie Dear" (Bluebird B-7661/Montgomery Ward M-7468, 1938)
Homer and Walter Callahan, "Katie Dear (Silver Dagger)" (Banner 33103/Melotone M-13071/Oriole 8353/Perfect 13017/Romeo 5353, c. 1934; Conqueror 9145, 1938; on GoingDown)
Sheila Clark, "Silver Dagger" (on LegendTomDula)
Betty Garland, "Never Make True Lovers Part" (on BGarland01)
Paul Joines, "Young Men and Maids" (on Persis1)
Tommy Moore, Clint Howard et al, "True Lovers" (on Ashley02)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Greenback Dollar" (plot)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
An Awful Warning
O Parents, Parents, All Take Warning
NOTES [31 words]: For the relationship between this and "The Drowsy Sleeper," see the notes on that song. Several songs are filed there which contain nearly as much material from that song as from this. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0
File: LG21

Silver Dollar (A Man Without a Woman)

DESCRIPTION: "A man without a woman is like a ship without a sail, Is like boat without a rudder... But the saddest thing... is a woman without a man." "Now you can roll a silver collar cross the bar-room floor" but a woman won't miss her man until he is gone
AUTHOR: Jack Palmer and Clarke Van Ness? (sheet music found on YouTube)
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric); internet sources, without documentation, say it was written in 1907
KEYWORDS: love courting separation drink nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 76, "Man Without a Woman" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #11405 and 19994
NOTES [36 words]: Apparently this was recorded by Bobby Darin in 1965, but this isn't responsible for it being in tradition; note that Browne collected it before that. He suggested that his informant may have learned it in college. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3
File: Brne076

Silver Flagon, The

DESCRIPTION: "'Lift high,' shouts Clarke, 'the Silver Flagon...The gift of good John Jacob Astor... I drink the curse of hated savage.'" When the flagon is found missing, Clarke hangs an Indian, despite a lack of evidence
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Burt-AmericanMurderBallads); supposedly written 1914
KEYWORDS: theft punishment execution Indians(Am.) discrimination
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 133-134, "(The Silver Flagon)" (1 text)
NOTES [119 words]: The John Jacob Astor of this song is of course not the man who went down with the Titanic, but his great-grandfather of the same name (1763-1848), who came to the United States in 1784 and founded the family fortune in the fur trade. As the song says, he founded the city of Astoria in 1811.
According to Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, this piece arises out of an incident in one of Astor's fur expeditions. John Clarke, one member of the company, was responsible for transporting the flagon. On May 30, 1813, due largely to his own carelessness, it was stolen. Clarke saw an Indian sneaking about, and even though the unfortunate man did not have the flagon or any of the other items missing, Clarke hanged him. - RBW

File: Burt133

Silver Herring, The (Caller Herring)

DESCRIPTION: Peddler's song/street cry: "Who'll buy my silver herrings? I cry from door to door". Verses tell different ways prepare herring, plus different names. Many enjoy eating herring; more weep for the fishermen who are lost catching them AUTHOR: Carolina Oliphant, Lady Nairne?
EARLIEST DATE: before 1800 (Nairne's publication), with the tune older; O. J. Abbott learned the traditional version c. 1890
LONG DESCRIPTION: Peddler's song/street cry: "Who'll buy my silver herrings? I cry from door to door". Verses tell different ways to cook and eat herring, plus different names - Yarmouth bloaters or Digby kipper red. Many enjoy eating herring; many more weep for the fishermen who are lost catching them or for their loved ones' safety
KEYWORDS: grief death fishing work food nonballad animal sailor worker family
NOTES [228 words]: If, as I believe, O. J. Abbott's "The Silver Herrings" is a traditional version of Lady Nairne's "Caller Herring," it has a complicated pedigree. Lady Nairne wrote "Caller Herrin'" toward the end of the 18th century to help Nathaniel Gow (son of Neil Gow). Nairne set it to a harpsichord piece by the elder Gow, which itself was based on a fish-seller's call.

To make life even more complicated, Jonathan Swift (1667-1745) had his own herring cry ("Herrings"; see Kathleen Hoagland, editor, One Thousand Years of Irish Poetry (New York, 1947), p. 324). This has lines such as, "Be not sparing. Leave off swearing. Buy my herring Fresh from Malahide, Better never was tried. . . . Come, sixpence a dozen, to get me some bread, Or, like my own herrings, I soon shall be dead." Possibly independent, but who knows....

Lady Nairne's version was well enough known that Charles Dodgson ("Lewis Carroll") alludes to it in a poem he sent to Clara Halyburton Cunnynghame entitled "To Hallie" (which, despite its title, I suspect of having been intended for the tune "Annie Laurie"):

A chord of "Caller Herrin';"
A note of "Home sweet Home;"
A bar of Scotland's "Blue Bells;"
Will make my spirit roam.

(see Morton N. Cohen, editor, with the assistance of Roger Lancelyn Green, The Letters of Lewis Carroll, two volumes, Oxford University Press, 1979, volume I, pp. 110-112). - RBW

Last updated in version 4.0

File: RcsilHer

Silver Jack [Laws C24]

DESCRIPTION: Robert Waite condemns the Bible as fictitious and Jesus as "just a common man." Silver Jack proceeds to beat the "infidel" until he admits the error of his ways.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (article, John A. Lomax)

KEYWORDS: Bible fight

FOUND IN: US(MW,NW,Ro,SE,So)

REFERENCES (11 citations):

Laws C24, "Silver Jack"
Rickaby-BalladsAndSongsOfTheShantyBoy 32, "Silver Jack" (1 text)
Rickaby/Dykstra/Leary-PineryBoys-SongsSongcatchingInLumberjackEra 32, "Silver Jack" (1 text)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 78, pp. 206-207, "Silver Jack" (1 text)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 60, "Silver Jack" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 38, "Lumberjack's Revival" (1 text)
Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, pp. 88-91, "Lumberjack's Revival or Religion in Camp" (1 text)
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 25, "Lumberjack's Revival" (1 text)

DT 606, SILVRJAK(*)

ADDITIONAL: Tristram P. Coffin and Hennig Cohen, _Folklore in America: Tales, Songs, Superstitions, Proverbs, Riddles, Games, Folk Drama and Folk Festivals_., Doubleday, 1966, pp. 85-87, "Silver Jack" (1 text)

Roud #705

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Camp 13 on the Manistee" (subject of beating a non-religious man)
cf. "Clementine" (tune)
cf. "Bung Yer Eye" (character)
cf. "The Protestant Maid" (subject: religious conversion) and references there

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Silver Jack the Evangelist

NOTES [179 words]: John "Silver Jack" Driscoll seems to have been the subject of this ballad; a quarrelsome, fighting man from the Saginaw valley of Michigan, he apparently fought too hard one time, and was sent to prison. To quote T. G. Belanger: "He died with his boots off, in the Ottawa Hotel, in L'Anse, Michigan, April 1, 1895. Beside him ... were found the following: a bottle of cough medicine, $85.00 in bills, and a note: 'This will be enough to bury me.'" - PJS

This particular example of Christian charity and peacefulness is suspected by both Hudson and Lomax (without supporting evidence) of having been originally published in a newspaper. Given its anti-intellectual tone (stanza 1 describes Waite as "Kind of cute and smart and tonguey; Guess he was a graduate"), I am inclined to doubt this. - RBW

I'm not; newspapers could be rabidly anti-intellectual. Read the Chicago Tribune during the McCormick era, or the early Hearst press. - PJS

On consideration, Paul has a point. But would any newspaperman claim that "the spread of infidelity was checked in camp that day"? - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: LC24

Silver Threads among the Gold

DESCRIPTION: "Darling, I am growing old, Silver threads among the gold Shine upon my brow today; Life is fading fast away; But, my darling, you will be... Always young and fair to me." The singer describes how (his) beloved will grow old, but he will love her anyway

AUTHOR: Words: Eben Eugene Rexford (1848-1916) / Music: Hart Pease Danks (1834-1903)

EARLIEST DATE: 1873 (sheet music published by Chas. W. Harris of New York)

KEYWORDS: love age nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (7 citations):

Jackson-PopularSongsOfNineteenthCenturyAmerica, pp. 194-197, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" (1 text, 1 tune)
Geller-FamousSongsAndTheirStories, pp. 1-4, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 259, "Silver Threads Among The Gold" (1 text)
Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 170-172, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" (1 text)
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #62, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" (1 text)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, p. 501, "Silver Threads Among the Gold"

DT, SILVTHRD*

ST RJ19194 (Full)

Roud #6403

RECORDINGS:

Henry Burr, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" (Victor 19131, 1923)
Fiddlin' John Carson, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" (OKeh 45488, 1930)
Andrew Jenkins & Carson Robison, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" (OKeh 45246, 1928)
Frank & James McCravy, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" (Brunswick 197, 1928; rec. 1927)
McMichen's Melody Men, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" (Columbia 15247-D, 1928; rec. 1927)
Marie Narelle, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" (CYL: Edison 9162, 1905)
Riley Puckett, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" (Columbia 405-D, 1925)
Royal Hawaiians, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" (Broadway 8100, c. 1930)
Will Oakland, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" (CYL: Edison [BA] 1547, n.d.)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Sweet Genevieve" (theme)
cf. "When You and I Were Young, Maggie" (theme)

SAME TUNE:

At the Boarding House (Silver Threads; While the Organ Pealed Potatoes) (File: DTbordho)

NOTES [248 words]: Jackson notes, "The fashionable message of the song -- that romantic love remains always young even though bodies wrinkle and age -- was apparently lost on Danks's wife; she left the forty-year-old composer the year after 'Silver Threads' appeared."

This was the only song by Rexford (1848-1916) that amounted to anything in its original form (but see "Bill Vanero (Paul Venerez)") [Laws B6]; also, according to John Julian, editor, A Dictionary of Hymnology, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes), p. 1587, he produced a number of minor hymns published by Ira D. Sankey in the late 1870s) -- but it by itself was enough to cause monuments to be erected to him in both his birthplace in New York and his primary place of residence in Wisconsin.
Danks (1834-1903) spent much of his life trying to make a career of music; he composed several other melodies and several stage pieces -- but, again, none of them amounted to anything. According to James J. Geller's Famous Songs and their Stories, this collaboration came about in a curious way: Rexford was editing a Wisconsin farm magazine and, needing a space filler, threw in one of his poems. Danks saw it, thought it worth setting to music, and sent Rexford a small sum to purchase the rights. That song went nowhere -- but Rexford responded by sending Danks much of his other works. Among those songs was "Silver Threads." Danks supplied music, and the two had the only hit they would ever produce.

Last updated in version 6.0

Silver Whistle, The

DESCRIPTION: Scots Gaelic, welcoming Bonnie Prince Charlie to Scotland: "Oh who will play the silver whistle? ... (when my) king's son to sea is going?" The singer describes those who will welcome Charlie, as well as the handsome prince himself.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Kennedy-Fraser/MacLeod-SongsOfTheHebrides)

KEYWORDS: Jacobites ship return travel

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
- 1720-1788 - Life of Charles Edward Stuart, "Bonnie Prince Charlie"
- 1745 - The (last) Jacobite Rebellion
- 1746 - Prince Charlie's rebellion crushed at Culloden.

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Hebr))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 9, "Co Sheinneas an Fhideag Airgid? (O Who Will Play the Silver Whistle)" (1 text+ English translation, 1 tune)
- Kennedy-Fraser/MacLeod-SongsOfTheHebrides I, pp. 134-135, "An Island Jacobite Song/The Silver Whistle (An Fhideag Airgid)" (1 text+ English translation, 1 tune)
- DT, SILVWHIS

Silvery Grass

DESCRIPTION: School rhyme: "Silvery grass will make you pass, A rusty nail will make you fail."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)

KEYWORDS: playparty

FOUND IN: New Zealand

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 63, "(Silvery grass will make you pass)" (1 short text)

Silvery Lee, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer says "never river saw I any Half so fair or dear to me As my own, the silvery Lee" He prefers it to the Rhine (and whisky to wine), the Tagus, Tiber, Danube, Seine and Elbe. But he is influenced by "her voice" who also favors the Lee.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1818 (Cork broadside, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)

KEYWORDS: river drink wine nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 226-227, "The Silvery Lee" (1 text)

File: CrPS226
Silvery Moon, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer sees a girl lamenting in the moonlight. Her lover was true and brave, "but now he is dead, the youth once so gay... And he silently sleeps while I'm left here to weep By the sweet silver light of the moon."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1825 (broadside, Bodleian Johnson Ballads fol. 19)
KEYWORDS: love death separation
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) US(MW,So)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Randolph 800, "The Silvery Moon" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 128, "By Thy Sweet, Silver Light, Bonny Moon" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Gl 41)
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 233-234, "Silvery Moon" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dean-FlyingCloud, p. 94, "Sweet Silver Light of the Moon" (1 text)
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 123, "Roll On Silvery Moon" (3 texts)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2023, p. 136, "Roll On Silver Moon" (2 references)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads fol. 19 [words barely legible], "The Sweet Silver Moon" ("As I went to my cot, at the close of the day"), J. Catnach (London), 1825; also Johnson Ballads fol. 16, "The Sweet Silver Moon"; Firth b.26(337), Johnson Ballads 1016, Harding B 11(3819), Firth b.25(408), Harding B 17(306a), Firth b.28(39) View 2 of 2, Harding B 16(288b), Firth c.26(37), Harding B 26(636), 2806 c.8(275), ["Thy | The] Sweet Silver Light Bonny Moon"; 2806 c.17(391), "Silver Moon"; Johnson Ballads 1351, Johnson Ballads 12 View 1 of 2 [some words illegible], Johnson Ballads 2987, Firth b.27(396), Firth b.25(306), ["The] Bonny Moon"
NLScotland, RB.m.168(065), "Bonny Moon" ("As I went to my cot, at the close of the day"), T. Birt (London), c.1840

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Roll On, Silver Moon

NOTES [87 words]: Broadsides Bodleian Johnson Ballads fol. 19 and Johnson Ballads fol. 16: "Altered from a song entitled 'come down, bonny moon.'"

Silvery Tide, The [Laws O37]

DESCRIPTION: A nobleman courts Molly while Henry is away. The noble threatens to drown Molly if she will not marry him. She refuses. He strangles her and throws her in the sea. Henry finds her body and the noble's handkerchief. The nobleman is hanged, and Henry mourns

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1839 (broadside, Bodleian Firth c.13(172))
KEYWORDS: homicide love revenge execution
FOUND IN: US(MW,So) Canada(Mar,Newf) Britain(Scotland,England(South)) Ireland
REFERENCES (17 citations):
Laws O37, "The Silvery Tide"
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 126-127, "Mary in the Silvery Tide" (1 text)
Randolph 93, "The Silvery Tide" (1 text, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 60, "Out on the Silvery Tide" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 17, "The Silver Tide" (1 text)
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 282-283, "Mary on the Silvery Tide" (1 text)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H77, pp. 418-419, "The Silver[ly] Tide" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 472-473, "The Silvery Tide" (1 text)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Gl 142, "Silvery Tide" (1 text)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #125, "Mary in the Silvery Tide" (1 text, 1 tune)
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 125-127, "The Silvery Tide" (text)
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 206-209, "The Silvery Tide" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 52, "Mary on the Silvery Tide" (1 text)
Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 107-109,255, "The Silvery Tide" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-21FolksongsFromPrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 72-75,83-84, "The Silvery Tide" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi 93, "The Silvery Tide" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT 336, SILVTIDE*
Roud #561
RECORDINGS:
Paddy Breen, "On the Banks of the Silvery Tide" (on Voice10)
Sam Jagoe, "The Silvery Tide" (on Miramichi1)
Monica Rossiter, "Banks of the Silver Tide" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth c.13(172), "Poor Mary in the Silvery Tide," J. Catnach (London), 1813-1838; also Firth b.28(25a) View 2 of 2[partly illegible], Firth c.13(171), Harding B 11(3093), Harding B
11(3094), Harding B 11(3095), Harding B 11(3096), Harding B 11(3097), Harding B 20(276), "Poor
Mary in the Silvery Tide"; 2806 c.16(275), "Poor Mary in the Silvery Tide!"; Firth b.27(202), "Poor Mary of the Silvery Tide"; Harding B 11(66), "Mary of the Silvery Tide"

File: L037

Sim Courted the Widow

DESCRIPTION: "Seven long years did Sim court the widder... Seven long years, and Sim didn't git her." Sim went home grieving -- but not before stealing a curry-comb. Forced to return it by "my son John," the rest of the song relates Sim's disjointed further adventures

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)
KEYWORDS: courting rejection theft humorous
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 436-437, "Sim and the Widow" (2 texts)
Randolph 371, "Sim Courted the Widow" (1 text, 1 tune) Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 301-302, "Sim Courted the Widow" (1 text, 1 tune
-- Randolph's 371)
Roud #7621
File: R371

Simon and Janet

DESCRIPTION: Old man and wife, Simon and Janet, hear Bonaparte has landed. In spite of her dreams of his death, he goes to join the fight. The captain tells him to be ready next morning. It is a false alarm. They return from the war unscathed, cursing the French.

AUTHOR: Andrew Scott (1757-1839) (source: Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast
#27, p. 2)
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan1)
KEYWORDS: age army war Scotland humorous husband wife Napoleon
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #25, p. 1, "Simon and Janet" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan1 73, "Simon and Janet" (1 text)
Roud #5771
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Noble Huntly" (subject: the threatened invasion by Napoleon)
NOTES [30 words]: Greig/Duncan1: "The song refers to the false alarm of Bonaparte’s landing when the beacons were lit by mistake in the Border counties of England and Scotland on 2
February 1804." - BS
Last updated in version 2.4
Simon Brodie

DESCRIPTION: Symon Brodie is honest, stupid, old and confused; "I'll awa to the north-countree And see my ain dear Symon Brodie!" He lost his cow and couldn't find her but she "came hame and her tail behind her" His bonny wife used a dish towel to bind her hair.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1776 (Herd, according to Hecht-Herd)

KEYWORDS: clothes humorous nonballad animal wife hair

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Greig/Duncan8 1658, "Simon Brodie" (1 text plus a single verse on p. 396, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: Hans Hecht, editor, Songs From David Herd's Manuscripts (Edinburgh, 1904), #54 pp. 173,303, "Symon Brodie" [Not yet indexed as Hecht-Herd 54]

Alexander Rodger, editor, Whistle-Binkie, Second Series (Glasgow, 1842), pp. 75-76, "Simon Brodie"

Roud #8531

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Little Bo-Peep" (theme: animal returns by itself, with its tail "behind")

NOTES [544 words]: Greig/Duncan8 has Simon lose a dove that also returns "into the doocot an' her tail behind her."
The Whistle-Binkie text adds a description of Simon Brodie. It includes adjectives like plump, cheerful, shrewd and, maybe, crack-brained. Physically, he is "in height an ell but an' a span [an ell is 45" and a span is 9"] An' twice as braid" with thin, grey hair.

James Hogg, Tales of the Wars of Montrose, (Philadelphia, 1836 ("Digitized by Google")), Vol. II, pp. 28-79, wrote "A Few Remarkable Adventures of Sir Simon Brodie." He begins, "As I have been at great pains in drawing together all possible records and traditions during the troubled reign of Charles the First, and being aware that I have many of those relating to Scotland to which no other person ever had access, I must relate some incidents in the life of one extraordinary character so well known to traditionary lore, that I have but to name him to interest every Scotchman and woman in his heroic adventures. The hero I mean is Sir Simon Brodie, of Castle-Garl, whose romantic exploits well deserve to be kept in record."
The adventure runs from July 7 to September 16, 1644. Montrose, escaping to the Highlands of Scotland after the battle of Marston-moor, enlists loyalist Brodie, whom he has not met before, to raise a force to fight the Covenanters near Sterling. Brodie, though "enthusiastically, madly loyal," manifested "a singular vacancy and indecision of character. Indeed, he appeared ... to be rather what the Scots call a half-daft man." But, "he was a man like Leviathan, made without fear." He repeatedly enters a battle outnumbered, is taken prisoner, believes he has captured his captors, but is rescued or escapes without ever understanding the situation.

Montrose, to keep Brodie out of the way, sends him after Argyle, who escapes to sea. Brodie gets aboard Argyle's ship, the Faith, imagines he has taken all prisoner [again], and is thrown overboard to be rescued by a seal he takes for a mermaid. Put ashore at Inch-Colm -- a place reputed to be haunted -- he takes prisoner what claims to be the Covenantter ghost; this time his prisoner escapes. He is captured again by Covenanters he thinks are corpses; they consider him "altogether a fool ... and not one word that he says can be relied on. Think of his stories of taking 1200 men prisoners with his own hand; his pursuit and seizure of Argyle; and last of all, his being brought to our retreat hanging at the tail of a mermaid." He escapes to join Montrose again, and later escapes at Philliphaugh; ... "from that unfortunate day he never met Montrose again. He was exempted from Cromwell's act of grace, and wore out an old age of honest poverty among his friends in Aberdeenshire, his lands being confiscated to the State."

For more on Montrose, Argyle, and the Covenanters see "The Battle of Philiphaugh" [Child 202], "The Bonnie House o Airlie" [Child 199], "Bonnie John Seton" [Child 198], "The Haughs o' Cromdale" and "The Battle of Alford." - BS

It will perhaps demonstrate the power of folklore to create (and abolish) characters that I checked ten histories -- five of Scotland, two of Great Britain, two of the Stuart era, and one specifically about Charles I -- without finding mention of Brodie. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.5
Simon Taylor

DESCRIPTION: Two-couplet verse. Each couplet is a call followed by the response "Simon Taylor, Hilo." See notes.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1890 (JournalOfAmericanFolklore, Bolton)

KEYWORDS: ship shanty

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1739-1813: life of Simon Taylor, wealthy Jamaica sugar plantation owner (see NOTES)

FOUND IN: Bermuda

REFERENCES (1 citation):

NOTES [224 words]: Bolton's five fragments include calls about women -- "Nancy Green she dress so fine ... She dress herself in pumpkin vine," "Somerset girl ain't got no hair ... Take a bit of wool and stick it dere," "Paget girls are pretty girls ... Warwick girls, ugly girls": daily chores -- "I caught that ship yesterday morning ... I took her about four o'clock in the morning" and "I'm gwine down de ribber to get some shads ... Mamie, Mamie give me some bread"; and the traveling verse "Hilo and away we go ... Hilo and away we go." Bolton always writes "high-lo" or "hy-lo" instead of "Hilo." As Stan Hugill writes, "it is on paper quite possible that many of these 'hilos' are nothing more than 'high-low' ... Take your pick." (Shanties from the Seven Seas (1994), p. 183). Of Hugill's "Hilo Group" this seems closest in form to "Can't Ye Hilo?"

"At his death he (Simon Taylor) was one of the wealthiest men in the British empire, and his massive personal fortune was built on the backs of the enslaved men, women, and children who laboured on the sugar estates and other properties that he owned or managed. He 'owned' over 2,000 slaves when he died." (Slavery and Revolution: Jamaica and Slavery in the Age of Revolution - Simon Taylor, @ https://blog.soton.ac.uk/slaveryandrevolution/simon-taylor-and-jamaican-slavery/ , downloaded Dec 28, 2019) - BS

Last updated in version 5.3

File: JAFSiTay

Simon the Cellarer

DESCRIPTION: "Old Simon the Cellarer keeps a rare store" of liquor, and drinks "his sober six flagons a day." "Dame Margery" also consumes heavily. It is suggested that the two would be good for each other. He says, "What, marry old Margery? No! no! no!"

AUTHOR: Words: W. H. Bellamy / Music: J. L. Hatton (source: Heart-Songs)

EARLIEST DATE: 1870 (New-Comic-Songster)

KEYWORDS: drink courting age

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
New-Comic-Songster, p. 10, "Simon the Cellarer" (1 text, 1 tune)
Heart-Songs, pp. 348-349, "Simon the Cellarer" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [21 words]: A piece by this name was collected in Virginia, which is why I have indexed it, although I have not seen the Virginia piece. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: NCSSiCel

Simon Too-Too

DESCRIPTION: Simon Too-Too sets bird traps instead of going to Sunday School. He catches a snake which is a spirit. The snake tells him to take it home, kill it, eat it, serve it to company. One bone is left and tells Simon to go to bed. He dies, a Sabbath violater

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1918 (Parsons)

KEYWORDS: sin death hunting magic food religious animal ghost

FOUND IN: West Indies(Bahamas)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Martha W Beckwith, "The English Ballad in Jamaica: a Note Upon the Origin of the Ballad Form" in _Publications of the Modern Language Association_ [PMLA], Vol. XXXIXI, No. 2 (Jun 1924
Notes: In the Beckwith version Simon begins to violate the Sabbath after his mother dies; the spirit that he catches is his mother, and she kills him. In the Palmer version Simon lives with his grandmother who thought she was sending him to Sunday school every week, but every week "De boy ain' goin' to school. Gone in de bush settin' bud trap." - BS
I find it interesting that it is a snake -- the tempter in the Garden of Eden -- which led Simon astray.
- RBW

last updated in version 3.8

file: SSSiToTo

simple gifts

description: "'Tis the gift to be simple, 'Tis the gift to be free, 'Tis the gift to come down Where we ought to be...." In praise of "simplicity" and love, which bring the hope of heaven author: unknown (a citation in Andrews says it was "composed by the Andrews Ministry June 28, 1848; Goodwille and Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird cite a widespread attribution to Elder Joseph Brackett of the Maine Ministry, also in 1848)
earliest date: 1848?
keywords: religious nonballad
found in: us
references (6 citations):
darling-newamerican-songster, pp. 258-259, "simple gifts" (1 text) messerli-listentothemockingbird, pp. 71-72, "simple gifts" (1 text) salt-buckeye-heritage-ohios-history, pp. 77-78, "simple gifts" (1 text, 1 tune, which I suspect includes non-traditional verses) dt, simplegf*
additional: edward deming andrews, _the gift to be simple: songs, dances and rituals of the american shakers_, 1940 (references are to the 1962 Dover reprint, p. 136, "simple gifts" (1 text, 1 tune) christian goodwille, compiler and editor, with contributions from joel cohen, _shaker songs: a celebration of peace, harmony, and simplicity_, black dog & leaventhal publishers, 2002, pp. 82-83, "simple gifts" (1 text, 1 tune, plus an illustration of a manuscript copy titled "quick dance")
cross-references:
cf. "i will bow and be simple" (theme)
same tune:
the lord of the dance (by sydney carter; dt lordance)
notes [47 words]: this song has become one of the most popular in the folk revival. the idea of a simple life seems very refreshing in today's overcomplicated age. but i wonder how many of the people who have sung the song realize that "simplicity" means, among other things, abstinence from sex? - RBW

last updated in version 5.3

file: DarN259A

simple little nancy brown

description: various girls go out, get in trouble, and find unexpected solutions. example: "they went walking by the beach, went in swimming, got out of reach; she lost her socks and ev'rything, so what d'ye suppose she came home in... she came home in the twilight."
author: unknown
earliest date: 1905
keywords: humorous nonsense wordplay
found in: us (ma)
references (1 citation):
cazden/haufrecht/studer-folk-songs-of-the-catskills 149, "simple little nancy brown" (1 text plus assorted excerpts, 1 tune) st fsc149 (partial)
roud #4613
Simple Simon

DESCRIPTION: "Simple Simon met a pieman, Going to the fair, Said Simple Simon to the pieman, Let me taste your ware." The pieman demands payment, which Simon does not have. He tries to catch a whale; he seeks plums on a thorn; he does not succeed

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1764 (chapbook published by Dicey and Marshall, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)

KEYWORDS: food injury fishing money

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 476, "Simple Simon met a pieman" (1 text)
- Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #60, pp. 68-69, "(Simple Simon met a pieman)"
- Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 190, "Simple Simon (1 text)
- Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 34, "Simple Simon Met a Pieman" (1 text)
- Roud #19777

NOTES [80 words]: The term "Simple Simon" seems to be very old, but that didn't prevent Katherine Elwes Thomas coming up with a crazy explanation for this rhyme; she suggested that it is an account of James VI moving south to become James I of England. Slightly more probable is Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel's note that St. Simeon of Ermesa was the patron saint of holy fools. On the other hand, neither of my dictionaries of saints mentions a sixth century St. Simeon, so he can't be very well known. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.3

File: 002476

Simple Will

DESCRIPTION: Simple Will walks up the street looking at every girl. Kate smiles. He proposes. She agrees, intending to wear the breeches. They fight over his drinking. She beats him with a poker. He wishes he had wed "some country wench" and not a Glasgow lady.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan5)

KEYWORDS: shrewishness marriage fight drink husband wife

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Greig/Duncan5 959, "Simple Will" (1 text)
- Roud #6743

NOTES [14 words]: This is like "The Wearing of the Britches" with the woman winning the britches war. - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD5959

Simpson Bush

DESCRIPTION: "Attention give while I relate Though horrible is the shame, I'll tell you of a doomed man, Bush they call his name." He is sentenced to die "for the murder of his own dear wife." The singer describes the methods of the murder, then moralizes

AUTHOR: James W. Day (Jilson Setters)

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)

KEYWORDS: homicide husband wife children

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 129-130, (no title) (1 text)

NOTES [8 words]: Definitely not one of Setters's better songs. - RBW

File: ThBa129
Sin-Sick Soul, The
DESCRIPTION: "Brother George is a-gwine to glory, take care the sin-sick soul" (x3).
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 49, "The Sin-Sick Soul" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #12007
File: AWG049B

Since I Laid My Burden Down
DESCRIPTION: Gospel song, describing singer's plans to meet with his mother and with Jesus, shake hands with angels, walk and talk in glory "since I laid my burden down."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recording, Elders McIntosh & Edwards' Sanctified Singers)
KEYWORDS: death nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE,So,MW)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Dunson/Raim/Asch-AnthologyOfAmericanFolkMusic, p. 70, "Since I Laid My Burden Down" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit, pp. 38-39, "Glory, Glory Hallelujah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #17355
RECORDINGS:
Roy Acuff, "When I Lay My Burden Down" (OKeh 05587/Vocalion 05587/Conqueror 9433, 1940; Conqueror 9667, 1941; rec. 1940)
Bessemer Sunset Four, "When I Lay My Burden Down" (Vocalion 1488, 1930)
Church of God in Christ, "Glory, Glory (Lay My Burden Down)" (on USMississippi01)
Rev. Clayborn, "When I Lay My Burden Down" (Vocalion 1458, 1930; rec. 1929)
Roosevelt Graves, "When I Lay My Burden Down" (Paramount 12974, 1930; rec. 1929)
Gullah Kinfolk, "Burden Down Lawd" (on USSeasland04)
Mississippi John Hurt, "Glory Glory Hallelujah" (on MJHurt04)
Elders McIntosh & Edwards' Sanctified Singers, "Since I Laid My Burden Down" (OKeh 8698, 1929; rec. 1928; on AAFM2, Babylon)
Turner Junior Johnson, "When I Lay My Burden Down" (AFS 6608 B3, 1942; on LC10, LCTreas)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Will the Circle Be Unbroken" (tune)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Glory, Glory Hallelujah
Since I Laid My Burthen Down
File: ADR70

Since James Went on the Stage
DESCRIPTION: "My name is Patrick Hogan, in this city I reside, I raised a son to manhood and he was my joy and pride," but now "me carpet is tore and me house is in a roar Since James went on the stage." The singer tells of the troubles caused by his son's acting
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Dean-FlyingCloud)
KEYWORDS: father children humorous
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dean-FlyingCloud, p. 62, "Since James Went on the Stage" (1 text)
Roud #5499
NOTES [13 words]: This looks like a stage song, but I have been unable to locate the original. - RBW
File: Dean062B
Since Me Born
DESCRIPTION: The singer claims he has never seen a toad wearing a beaver hat "since me born." A toad is wearing a beaver hat! A plantain is growing under a bed? A woman has given birth to a coconut? A jackass is wearing a watch and chain?
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1954 (Elder-FolksongsFromTobago)
KEYWORDS: magic nonballad animal Caribbean
FOUND IN: West Indies(Tobago)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Elder-FolksongsFromTobago 29, "Since Me Born" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [57 words]: Elder-FolksongsFromTobago: "'Since me born' exemplifies one of the standard tale-telling 'opening formulae'. It consists of denying the credibility of an act or fact in order to emphasise the veracity of the tale-teller [reporting on the fantastic feat of some obeahman [shaman]]." This is "The Derby Ram" taken seriously. Or, maybe not. - BS
Last updated in version 4.0
File: ElTo029

Since Me Leader Dead
DESCRIPTION: "Since me Leader dead an' gone, It is me one in the field"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1954 (Elder-FolkSongAndFolkLifeInCharlotteville)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: West Indies(Tobago)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Elder-FolkSongAndFolkLifeInCharlotteville, p. 52, "Since Me Leader Dead" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: ElCh052A

Since My Dear Laddie's Gane Far Awa'
DESCRIPTION: The singer thinks of the days when she and her sweetheart herded on the hills and "in his plaid he's sheltered me" Now he's left her, "oot owre the sea," "wi' grief an' care" and a baby. She'll have no other but him.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: grief love sex separation nonballad baby shepherd clothes
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan6 1108, "Since My Dear Laddie's Gane Far Awa'" (1 text)
Roud #6837
File: GrD61108

Since She's Gone Let Her Go
DESCRIPTION: The singer goes to see his sweetheart but finds her "asleep in another man's arms." He complains that young women will "promise to thirty and prove constant to none... I'll have a good one if there's one to be found."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: courting infidelity
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan6 1207, "Since She's Gone Let Her Go" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #803
ALTERNATE TITLES:
I Once Loved a Lassie
File: GrD61207
Since Terrence Joined the Gang

DESCRIPTION: "My name is Michael Slattery, and from Ireland I came." He has a son Terrence, who has "joined the gang" and now wears a "big watch and chain," talks back to his parents, steals, and has been convicted of theft

AUTHOR: Words: W. Scanlon / Music: William Cronin
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Dean-FlyingCloud); a broadside published c. 1870 by Bell & Company; probably found in Beadle's Half-Dime Singer's Library #5 of 1878

KEYWORDS: father children robbery prison

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 113-114, "Since Terrence Joined the Gang"
Roud #9580

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Since Terry Joined the Gang (broadside title)

File: Dean113B

Sindbad

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, it's Sindbad [sic] the sailor and Robinson Crusoe, I left my native counterie a roaming for to go. I went to be a sailor returned just as you see, a mixture of an Indian, a Turk, and a Japanee. Oh, jeffer see my jibber ahoy...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen)

KEYWORDS: sailor shanty rambling

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 184, "Sindbad" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4712

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Sinbad

NOTES [35 words]: Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen included this as an example of Negro songs, but even she was doubtful of that origin. She says that it was sung by a Frenchman to Capt. Edward H. Cole, who then sang it to her. - SL

File: Colc184

Sinful Army

DESCRIPTION: "O fathers, ain't you glad you left that sinful army? (x2), The sea gave way -- Oh, mothers, ain't you glad the sea gave way? Oh, Moses smote the water And the children all passed over... And the sea gave way." "oh, brothers, ain't you glad...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Henry, from "a group of Negroes at Montreat, North Carolina")

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 199, "Pharaoh's Army" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Old Moses Smote the Waters" (lyrics)

File: MHAp199

Sing a Song of Sixpence

DESCRIPTION: "Sing a song of sixpence A pocket full of rye; Four and twenty blackbirds, baked in a pie." The pie is opened and the birds sing. The king is in the counting house, the queen in the parlour, the maid in the garden and a blackbird "snapped off her nose"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1784 (Gammar Gurton's Garland, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)
KEYWORDS: food nonballad bird royalty
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord)) US(SE)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 189, "Sing a Sing o Sixpence" (1 fragment)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 486, "Sing a song of sixpence" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #3, p. 26, "(Sing a song of sixpence)"
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 193, "Sing a Song of Sixpence" (1 text)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 147, "Sing a Song of Sixpence" (1 text)
Henry-SongsInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 229, "Sixpence" (1 text, with a different ending: No King in the counting-house, and the singer is "Sitting on a stool... a-singing for a fool")
Roud #13191
SAME TUNE:
Three Brave Blacksmiths (File: OLcM071)
Sing a Song of Charleston (Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, p. 342) (1880 Republican campaign song) ("Sing a song of shotguns, Pocket full of knives, Four-and-twenty black men, Running for their lives") (Paul F. Boller, Jr., _Presidential Campaigns_, second revised edition, Oxford University Press, p. 145)
The Tale of a Pig (by Kate Skates) (Les Cleveland, The Great New Zealand Songbook, p. 79)
Father Gander's Melodies ("Sing a song o' swindle, Safe full of stocks") (Foner, p. 155)
NOTES [442 words]: Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes: "It is well known that in the sixteenth century surprising things were inserted in pies.... The mention of a 'counting-house'... also helps to indicate that the rhyme may be traced to the sixteenth century.... Kidson says that the air to which the words are generally sung is the old Scottish dance tune 'Calder Fair.'" - BS

The "surprising things" in the pie often were intended as a entertainment or reward (a theme which more recently inspired J. R. R. Tolkien's "Smith of Wootton Major," his last fantasy work). This tradition continued in Newfoundland into the twentieth century; on Shrove Tuesday (Fat Tuesday, locally called "Pancake night"), it was common to bake a cake containing a button, a coin, a ring, and sometimes a nail; the one who finds the ring will soon marry, the one who finds the coin will get money, the button forecasts never marrying, and the nail forecasts either an early death or marrying a carpenter (England, p. 215; Young, p. 193).
The notes in the Annotated Mother Goose mention a connection with Henry VIII, Katherine of Aragon, and Anne Boleyn. But Henry VIII was the sort of monarch you wouldn't be likely to find in a counting house. If there were an English king involved, especially in the sixteenth century, it would doubtless be Henry VII, who was such a money-grubber that he would without doubt have had intimate relations with his cash had he figured out a way to do it.
One book I read seemed to be implying that this is about the Popes during the so-called "Babylonian Captivity" of the thirteenth century, when they resided at Avignon rather than Rome. Some of the Avignon Popes were indeed very concerned with money, but that seems extraordinarily early. And what does the text describe in that case? The Great Company invading the Papal territories? England taking possession of Aquitaine after the Treaty of Bretigny? All these things fall under the heading "possible but not at all convincing."
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, while mentioning the Henry VIII hypothesis, seems to be more interested in an explanation involving the pirate Blackbeard (for whom see "Teach the Rover"), although he admits he doesn't believe it.
As the Opies say, many of the suggested explanations are "not so easy to disprove" -- but even harder to prove.
The story may have undergone evolution over the years. Briggs, volume A.2, pp. 563-564, "A Thrawn Song," is clearly distinct, but contains enough analogous lines that I have to suspect some sort of dependence.
According to Davey/Seal, p. 187, this song inspired an Australian brand of meat pies called "Four'n Twenty Pies."- RBW

Bibliography

• Briggs: Katherine Briggs,A Dictionary of British Folk-Tales in the English Language, Part A: Folk Narratives, 1970 (I use the 1971 Routledge paperback that combines volumes A.1 and A.2)
• Davey/Seal: Gwenda Beed Davey and Graham Seal,A Guide to Australian Folklore, Kangaroo Press, 2003
• England: George Allan England,Vikings of the Ice: Being the Log of a Tenderfoot on the Great Newfoundland Seal Hunt (also published asThe Greatest Hunt in the World), Doubleday, 1924
Sing a Song, Blow-Along O!

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. "Way down in Dixie! Way down in Dixie, oh I had a gal. Ch: Sing a song, blow-along O!" Verses continue describing the aforementioned gal, the singer, and what they did (or would do) to each other.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas)

KEYWORDS: shanty worksong

FOUND IN: West Indies

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p.417, "Sing a Song, Blow-Along O!" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, p.318]

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Miss Lucy Loo" (chorus lyrics)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Dixie Land

NOTES [26 words]: According to Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, this along with most West Indies shanties, was probably used as a cotton loading song before it went to sea. - SL

Sing Fare You Well

DESCRIPTION: "Fare you well, I wish you well, Hurrah and fare you well, Fare you well till I return, Hurrah, sing fare you well." "Oh, fare you well, my bonny young girl." "As I walked out one morning fair... I met a lady fair," but the sailor must work on his ship

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1989 (Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea)

KEYWORDS: sailor travel farewell shanty

FOUND IN: Britain(England)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp.101-102, "Sing Fare You Well" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #320

File: Kins101

Sing Ha-Ha, Come From Chine

DESCRIPTION: "My name Sing-Ha-Ha, come from China, Keep a little wash shop way down street. No like-a 'Melican man, too much chin-chin...." The singer is pursuing an Irish girl, but she is stolen away. He has also had trouble with the law

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1890 (sheet music for "Hong Kong," according to Cohen)

KEYWORDS: China emigration humorous

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp.116-117, "Sing Ha-Ha, Come From China" (1 text plus a portion of the original "Hong Kong" text)

Roud #22304

File: CAFS1116

Sing One for Me

DESCRIPTION: "Down in the lonesome pine woods, This song is sung with glee. Now I have sung a song for you And you may sing one for me."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1957 (Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick)
KEYWORDS: music nonballad
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick, p. 34, "Sing One for Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [19 words]: Ives-FolksongsOfNewBrunswick quotes the singer: "Here's a verse that used to be sung sometimes after a song." - BS
File: IvNB034

Sing One, Two, Three, Come Follow Me
DESCRIPTION: "Sing one, two, three, Come, follow me, And so shall we Good fellows be"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 306, "Roundelay" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 694)
Roud #1347
NOTES [61 words]: "Anecdotes of the Late Earl of Mornington" in The Edinburgh Magazine, or Literary Miscellany (Edinburgh, 1786 ("Digitized by Google")), (February 1786) Vol. III, p. 82:: "... he soon learned the two old catches of 'Christ Church Bells;' and 'Sing one, two, three, come follow me:'"
The current description is all of the Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames text. - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: WT306R

Sing Outs
DESCRIPTION: Likely the predecessor to the full shanty (which has discernable words and a division of solo & chorus parts). These are short phrases or vocalizations, often made up of nonsense syllables, and used for hauling.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951
KEYWORDS: shanty work nonballad nonsense
FOUND IN: Britain US Canada
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips pp. 8-9, 20-21, 24, 29, "Handsome Charlie's Sing Out,"
"Hauling in the Slack of the Foresheet," "A Sing Out" (3 texts, 3 tunes & several fragments)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas pp. 573-579, "Sing-outs for Rope, Capstan, and Halyard
Winch" (several fragments) [AbEd, pp. 398-401] Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman pp. 91-92, (no title, quoted from Capt. James P.
Barker)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Haul Out
Sweat-in' Up Chants
Short Cries
Royal Artillery Man
St. Helena Soldier
Hauley, Hauley-Ho!
Holystoning
NOTES [40 words]: Several of the examples listed by Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas had titles, though the title and what there was of the text were generally the same. Many were quoted from other sources, and I've listed them in the alternate titles field. - SL
File: Hugi573
Sing-Sing

DESCRIPTION: The singer and Johnny King are imprisoned in Sing-Sing. They make an attempt to break out, but they cannot create a large enough opening and are trapped. King is shot. Soon after, the singer is pardoned and gratefully bids farewell to prison

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1982
KEYWORDS: prison pardon
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 167, "Sing-Sing" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST FSC167 (Partial)

NOTES [33 words]: Charles Hinkley, who gave the song to Cazden et al, claimed he was one of the two composers. The collectors admit the possibility, but only that.
This song is item dE52 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW
File: FSC167

Sing, Sally O!

DESCRIPTION: There are two versions, one a halyard and the other a capstan shanty. Characteristic refrain is "Sing Sally O, an' a fol-lol-de-day." The verses of the capstan version have a general whoring theme and are speaking to a "Mudder or Mammy Dinah."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys)
KEYWORDS: shanty worksong whore sailor
FOUND IN: West Indies Britain
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 60, "Sing Sally O!" (1 text, 1 tune - 1 verse only, no choruses)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 388-389, "Sing, Sally O!" (2 texts, 2 tunes) [AbEd, pp. 296-297]
Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, XXXI, p. 36, "Sing, Sally O" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 233, (second of four "Fragments from Maryland") (1 fragment, which I link to this on the basis of the mention of Mammy Dinah, though it might be anything)
DT, SNGSALLY*
Roud #4699
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Hawl Away, Joe" (tune)
cf. "Sally Brown" (some verses)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Mudder Dinah
File: Hugi288

Singapor-Sang (Singapore Song)

DESCRIPTION: German shanty. Tired of tough meat, the steward of a ship buys a bull in Singapore. They manage to hoist it onto the ship but have considerable trouble killing it and the bull causes much damage before it expires. Last phrase of verses repeat as chorus.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Baltzer, _Knurrhahn_)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage shanty animal humorous food death
FOUND IN: Germany
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 566-568, "Singapor-Sang" (2 texts, German & English, 1 tune)
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 79, "Singapor-Sang" (2 texts, German & English, 1 tune)
NOTES [21 words]: Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas said this was based on an actual incident that took place on board a ship called Arkona. - SL
Last updated in version 5.0
Singin' Gatherin', The
DESCRIPTION: "Far back in the dusty hollow Where the trees grow straight and tall, Sits the Traipsin' Woman Cabin... Where in the June-time of the year Is held the folk-lore festival." The singer describes the event and the people who attend and praises the organizer
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)
KEYWORDS: music nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 260-261, (no title) (1 text)
NOTES [47 words]: There are many pieces in Thomas that I don't really trust -- but there is none I more suspect of being Thomas's own work than this (and "Wee House in the Wood," which bears the same traits). It's anonymous, it's about Thomas's own Festival, and it rather sounds like her style. - RBW

Singin' Hinnie, The
DESCRIPTION: "Sit doon, noo, man alive! Te tell ye aa'll contrive O' the finest thing the worl' hes ivver gin ye, O. It's not fine claes nor drink, Now owt 'at ye can think Can had a kannle up ti singin'-hinney, O." The song tells how the singin' hinnie shapes lives
AUTHOR: "Harry Haldane"
EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland)
KEYWORDS: technology
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 172-173, "The Singin' Hinnie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2618
NOTES [77 words]: The title of this song is given as "The Singin' Hinnie," but references in the text call it a "Singin' Hinney."
I will admit that I'm truly not sure what this is about. Normally, a "singing hinnie (honey)" would be a musical loved one, but I have this funny feeling it refers to a piece of machinery -- probably a steam-powered pump or elevator.
Fortunately, we don't really have to figure it out; it appears this song has never been found in oral tradition. - RBW

Singing Class, The
DESCRIPTION: The singers are listed. Josie Fowlie, "goodman o' Cadgiedykes," Sawners Fenty "Fleein' like a bird." "Some sang Bangor, And some sang bass, But bonny Mary Jamieson Sang munsy in the as" [?]
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: music moniker
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 625, "The Singing Class" (2 fragments)
Roud #6062
NOTES [117 words]: Greig/Duncan3: "The two fragments on this theme are given together here but it should be noted that, although they may be parts of the same song, it is not possible to be certain of this on the present evidence."
The following songs are all one or two verses or fragments with a verse beginning "[so-and-so he/she] was there": "Mary Glennie," "Jean Dalgarno," "The Singing Class" and "The Achnairy Ball." Should two or more be considered the same song? - BS
Single Days of Old, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls "The merry days -- the days of old" when her husband loved her. With time, he grows more aloof and distant. Eventually "my health gave way, my spirits fled, They told him I would die." The husband again pays attention, and she survives.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO)

KEYWORDS: husband wife disease

FOUND IN: Ireland Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 704, "Single Days of Old" (1 text)
- Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H659, p. 504, "Singles Days of Old" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #2679

File: H659

Single Girl, Married Girl

DESCRIPTION: "Single girl, single girl, go and dress so fine... Married girl, married girl goes ragged all the time...." The lives of single and married women compared: The single girl can go out (and perhaps even spend); the married girl must care for the baby; etc.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Carter Family)

KEYWORDS: marriage wife

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
- Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 128, "Single Girl, Married Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, p. 102, "Single Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Dunson/Raim/Asch-AnthologyOfAmericanFolkMusic, p. 87 "Single Girl, Married Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 84, "Single Girl, Married Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 185, "Single Girl" (1 text)

DT, SINGGLRL

Roud #436

RECORDINGS:
- Carter Family, "Single Girl, Married Girl" (Victor 20937, 1927; Montgomery Ward M-6445, 1936; on AAFM3) (ARC 7-04-53/Conqueror 8733, 1937)
- Frank Profitt, "Single Girl" [excerpt] (on USWarnerColl01)
- Ruby Vass, "Single Girl" (on LomaxCD1702)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "I Wish I Were a Single Girl Again"
- cf. "I Wish I Were Single Again (II - Female)"
- cf. "Single Girl, Married Girl"
- cf. "Sorry the Day I Was Married"
- cf. "When I Was Young (II)" (theme)
- cf. "For Seven Long Years I’ve Been Married" (theme)
- cf. "Married and Single Life" (subject)

NOTES [148 words]: Roud lumps "I Wish I Were a Single Girl Again" and "Single Girl, Married Girl" (and perhaps others). Definitely a stretch, though the songs can easily cross-fertilize. The Carter Family version of this is one of the songs that they recorded at the very first "Bristol Session" -- the famous recording session at which Ralph Peer of Victor found both Jimmie Rodgers and the Carters. It was waxed on the second day that the Carters were in the studio -- and, according to Barry Mazor, Ralph Peer and the Making of Popular Roots Music, Chicago Review Press, 2015, p. 109, says that A.P. Carter didn't show up on that day, leaving Sara understandably irritated. Peer suggested that Sara and Maybelle record this particular song for that session, letting Sara get some of her ire out. We can't know what the Carters would have recorded otherwise, but it was an interesting choice by Peer. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.1

File: Wa128

Single Life She Choosed, A

DESCRIPTION: "The birds they sing so sweetly on every branch and vine, My joys would overdouble if you were only mine.... Oh love, if an answer I must give you, a single live I'll choose, I never thought it suited for me to be your wife."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (High-OldOldFolkSongs)

KEYWORDS: love rejection

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

High-OldOldFolkSongs, p. 9, "A.. Single Life She Choosed" (1 short text)

File: High009C

Single Life, A (Single Is My Glory)

DESCRIPTION: "Some do say there are good girls, Oh, where shall we find them? Some do say there are good boys, But never do you mind them." The singer warns of deceivers, concluding, "A single life I am to live, Oh, single is my glory... Then who will control me?"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (recording, Roba Stanley)

KEYWORDS: nonballad warning courting

FOUND IN: US(SE,So)

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Brown/Belden/Hudson-Frank BrownCollectionNCFolklore 3 18, "A Single Life" (1 text)

Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 121-122, "Blue-Eyed Boy Is Mad At Me" (1 text, 1 tune)

Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 54, "A Single Life" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #4963

RECORDINGS:

Roba Stanley, "Single Life" (OKeh 40436, 1925)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Married and Single Life" (subject)

File: BTN198

Single Man Blues

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a single man, I'm a single man, I ain't doing nothing but going from hand to hand." The singer hopes to find a woman to love. He will go downtown to look for a woman. He will be a "little 'tomic bomb" and hopes for divine support

AUTHOR: Booker T. Washington "Bukka" White

EARLIEST DATE: 1971 (Burton-TennesseeTraditionalSingers)

KEYWORDS: love hardtimes loneliness nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Burton-TennesseeTraditionalSingers, pp. 198-199, "Single Man Blues" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: BTN198

Single Sailor (III)

DESCRIPTION: "I wadna gie a gless o' wine For my single sailor he's new come home; And he's bidden's spen' and nowise hain, And live most royally, Since my bonnie love's brought back his ship From the high streams of the sea"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)
KEYWORDS: love return reunion money ship sailor
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #103, p. 2, ("I wadna gie a glass o' wine") (1 fragment)
NOTES [99 words]: The current description is all of the Greig fragment.
Greig says "The first two lines [through 'new come home'] seem to have some connection with 'The Single Sailor,' which we once gave." Greig may be referring to "The Sailor" in Greig #23, indexed here with "Pretty Fair Maid" [Laws N42]. The similar lines he has in mind there may be from "Oh yes, I see yon high high castle, And how it glitters in the sun; But I'd rather drink one cold cup of water With my poor sailor when he comes home." If there's a connection it would have to be in verses sung after the single sailor reveals himself. - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: Grg103a

Sinking of HMS Hood, The

DESCRIPTION: "When HMS _Hood_ went down in the deep, That was the news that made most mothers weep." "They had a duty which they had to do," but still the British are sad. Many ships combined to "send Bismarck to hell." May the sailors sleep "in heavenly peace" AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: navy death derivative
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
May 24, 1941 - Battle of the Denmark Strait. The German battleship Bismarck and the cruiser Prinz Eugen sink the HMS Hood
FOUND IN: Britain(England(West)) Canada
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, pp. 89-90, "The Sinking of HMS 'Hood'" (1 text, tune referenced)
ADDITIONAL: Andrew Norman, _HMS Hood: Pride of the Royal Navy_, Stackpole, 2001, pp. xi-xii, "Song of HMS Hood" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Commissioning of HMS Hood" (subject of the Hood)
cf. "Silent Night" (tune)
NOTES [6558 words]: Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy's is not the only song about the Hood that is said to be to the tune of "Silent Night." Norman, pp. xi-xii, has "Song of HMS Hood," which has a few similar lines but is not, to my mind, the same song. And I cannot for the life of me figure out how to sing Norman's text to "Silent Night," although there are some "Silent Night"-related words at the end. I suspect Norman picked up his "Hood" song somewhere, and understood there to be a song about the Hood sung to "Silent Night," and assumed they were the same. Nonetheless I've lumped them here because neither is widely known and they are about the same event.
The story of the Hood began before World War I, when Kaiser Wilhelm II of Germany decided he wanted a big, fancy navy. The British, who were committed to having the world's best and strongest fleet, could not allow that. The result was the world's first real arms race, with Britain and Germany striving both to build better ships and to build more of them.
It is arguable that the Germans won the quality race; the British managed two tremendous breakthroughs (the Dreadnought of 1905 and the Queen Elizabeth class of a decade later -- the former the first "all big gun" battleship; the latter the first fast battleships and the first vessels to mount eight 15" guns). The British also invented the battlecruiser (a ship with heavy guns but light armor that allowed them to be much faster than properly-armored battleships) -- but British battlecruisers proved to be highly combustible. Three were lost at the Battle of Jutland (May 31-June 1, 1916), all to magazine explosions with the loss of almost all hands; the Germans lost only one, and it took two dozen hits from heavy guns to do her in (Beekman, p. 107).
The loss of those British battlecruisers would affect the design of the Hood significantly.
To this day, there is disagreement over whether to call Hood a battlecruiser or a fast battleship (Preston, p. 96; Worth, pp. 91-92) -- a question with a good deal of history behind it. She was initially ordered as a battle cruiser before Jutland -- but when the British Navy suffered the loss of those three battle cruisers, they decided it was time for a rethink. "After Jutland the weight of [Hood's] armour was increased, but she still remained a battle-cruiser in conception, even though her armouring was now nearly as heavy as that of a contemporary battleship" (Bradford, p. 22). She was up-armored, but not redesigned from scratch; "the lessons which [Jutland] should have taught had not been completely incorporated into her design" (Bradford, p. 28) -- e.g., although she had a lot of armor, some of it was inefficiently allocated (Preston, p. 97). There simply hadn't been time to get it right if she were to be finished quickly. The irony was that she was not in fact to be involved in the Great War.

"HMS Hood was the largest, heaviest, and fastest armored warship in the world, at 860 feet long, with a beam of 104 feet, a draught of 32 feet, a displacement of 44,600 tons, and a maximum speed of 32 knots.... Building of Hood began on September 1, 1916, at John Brown and Company's shipyard on Clydebank. [This is actually the date construction was restarted; Norman, p. 134, Preston, p. 96, and others say she was laid down starting May 31, but construction was immediately halted to assess the effects of Jutland.] She was launched two years later, on August 22, 1918, by Lady Hood, widow of Rear Admiral Horace Lambert Hood, who lost his life at the Battle of Jutland in his ship HMS Invincible. Over the following nineteen months, Hood was fitted out and, on March 29, 1920, was finally commissioned. Her original cost was £6,025,000" (Norman, p. 3).

Smith, p. 64, writes, 'The 'Mighty 'ood' was Queen of the seas for 20 years and symbolic of everything that was best in the Royal Navy of the 'between war' period. She was perhaps one of the best loved warships of any era and certainly among the most beautiful warships to have graced the world's oceans.... [I]n the final count the greatest of British battle cruisers was to follow the Invincible, the first, in the same split-second annihilation." Her modified, neither-fish-nor-fowl design might have mattered less if battleship-building had continued after World War I, but it did not. Her three sisters were all canceled when the British realized that the Germans had stopped working on certain of their big ships (Hoyt, p. 4), and there was little need for heavy ships after the war, when the German fleet was taken away from them. Then the Washington Naval Conference of 1920 resulted in agreements that restricted the building of future ships. The United States and Japan were allocated no additional battleships at all. Britain was allowed to scrap many old ships and build two replacements, Nelson and Rodney, completed 1927, but their tonnage was reduced by the conference (Worth, pp. 92-93; Ballard, p. 85, repeats an old joke that called the two the "Cherry Tree" class because they had been "cut down by Washington"). They had more and bigger guns than Hood, but they were much slower. So Hood alone, the biggest fast ship the British had, was called upon to show the flag all over the world. Which meant that she never had time for a major update (Worth, p. 92). "Magnificent she surely was, but time does not stand still, and over the long period of peace design moved on and no government was willing to pay for her to be kept in line. Finally, with war clearly imminent the money was voted for extra protection and modern anti-aircraft armament, but it was then too late" (Smith, pp. 64-65).

"Her obvious deficiencies prompted criticism -- outspoken, repeated, and blunt -- within the Admiralty. The rest of the world, though, took no notice. Between the wars, Hood reigned over the seas, revered as the most powerful warship afloat, the symbol of British naval might. Of course, she wasn't the most powerful; she was merely the heaviest.... So, overweight and sloshingly wet, Hood steamed unchanged into World War II, vulnerable according to standards that had been inadequate twenty years earlier" (Worth, p. 92). "In 1938 [the Director of Naval Construction] warned that HMS Hood was in poor mechanical condition and that her thin deck armour made her 'unfit for front line service' [but concluded that funding would not be available to upgrade her].... In an uncannily accurate prophecy he warned 'We may have eternal cause for regret'" (Preston, p. 99). She was "wet" indeed; she rode so low in the water that the seas often rolled over her stern in storms or when she steamed at high speed (which interfered with her gunnery as well as her handling). Her refits added so much topweight that "the ship became like a half-tide rock" (Bradford, p. 104); the waves not only swept her quarterdeck but sometimes her upper decks! By 1940, her top speed had fallen to about 28 knots -- a loss of three or four knots from her speed at launch (or more, if Hoyt, p. 46, is right in saying that she was only able to make 25 knots in 1939!). Almost all un-modernized ships lost speed, but her slightly older contemporaries the Queen Elizabeths had lost only about a knot and a half; Hood had suffered more than most.

And, of course, she paid for it. World War II placed even stronger demands on the British navy than had World War I. The Hood was busy in the winter of 1939-1940, when both Nelson and Rodney were undergoing work, leaving Hood as the heaviest unit in the Royal Navy, though she had little contact with the enemy in that time (Hoyt, pp. 46-47). In hindsight, that probably would have been a good time to put her in dock as well, because the German navy still had no heavy ships, and Italy hadn't joined the war, plus the French fleet was available to help the British. As it was,

Hood

missed the invasion of Norway for a minor refit, although some of her hands were sent to Norway as part of the desperate defense of the country (Hoyt, pp. 51-63). When she came back into service, her next job was the disarmament of the French navy at Oran, which resulted in the British firing on the French vessels in the port (Hoyt, pp. 79-80). It was her first real sea battle, but it wasn't much of a test of her capabilities, since the French weren't ready to fight.

On February 15, 1941, Ralph Kerr took command of the ship -- the last captain in her long history (Hoyt, p. 101). This during a period when she rarely saw the enemy -- many alarums and excursions, but not much fighting.

Meanwhile, her conqueror was preparing for her first voyage.

After World War I, the German navy seemed to be out of business. Germany was forbidden to have large ships, submarines, or naval aviation. But in 1935 Britain decided to set all that aside -- the Anglo-German naval accord granted the Germans the right to have 35% of the British surface ships, and 45% of the submarines (Worth, p. 40). The Germans had already tried to sneek around the restrictions on them with the so-called "pocket battleships" (for which see "The Sinking of the Graf Spee") and by making submarines for other countries to test; after the agreement, they started building genuine capital ships -- first the battle cruisers/light battleships

Scharnhorst

and

Gneisenau, then the bigger

Bismarck

and Tirpitz.

The Germans had bigger plans. Hitler had told Grand Admiral Raeder, the naval commander-in-chief, that there would be no war with Britain before 1946, so Raeder came up with a plan to build up to a world class fleet in that year (Becker, pp. 32-34). Only to have the war arrive ahead of deadline. None of the big ships were ready. And in 1940, there was the invasion of Norway. The Germans lost only one big ship, the heavy cruiser

Blücher

(Becker, pp. 110-113), but almost everything else was damaged enough to be put out of action for a time. When

Bismarck

was completed, she was the leading ship of a fleet that had no chance of defeating the British in a straight-up battle. There never had been, and probably never would be, such a time -- and Raeder knew it.

But he also had an answer: Commerce warfare. Sending out his big ships on raids into the Atlantic and elsewhere, to starve the British. This was, of course, also the purpose of the U-boat war, but the surface ships gave him another way. The

Graf Spee

had been doing this at the very start of the war, and the

Admiral Scheer

did it in 1940 (Zetterling/Tamelander, pp. 42fff.; for part of this voyage, see the notes to "The Jervis Bay"). The

Scharnhorst

and Gneisenau also engaged in "cruiser warfare." In spring 1941, it was the Bismarck's turn.

There was "extraordinary admiration" for the Bismarck (Preston, p. 148); it is widely stated that the Bismarck was the strongest ship in the world -- e.g. Hoyt, p. 37, calls her the "most powerful warship afloat" and von der Porten, p. 146, calls her "the greatest warship in the world." This is understandable, because von der Porten wants to glorify the Germans and Hoyt wants to justify the loss of the

Hood -- but it's not true. The Bismarck had eight 15" guns -- equivalent to the armament of

Hood, and of the five British

Queen Elizabeths

and the five

Revenge

class, although Bismarck's guns were newer and more destructive than the British 15" weapons. Nonetheless, the British had

Nelson

and

Rodney

with nine 16" guns; they certainly outgunned

Bismarck. The Japanese had

Nagato

and Mutsu, with eight 16" guns (Worth, p. 179). And the Americans had the Colorado, Maryland, and West Virginia, also with eight 16" guns (Worth, p. 292). Indeed, Germany's ally Italy was bringing out the Littorio class, with nine 15" guns and a top speed effectively the same as the Bismarck's, though their armor was lighter (Worth, p. 144).

Thus, at the time the Bismarck was completed, there were seven ships in the world with heavier artillery, and three more with guns of the same caliber and more of them, and fully ten with a weight of guns equal to Bismarck. But none of the ships with heavier guns could hit 30 knots, and only the Japanese could hit 25. Thus

Bismarck, it could plausibly be argued, was the most effective ship in the world at the time of her commissioning -- until the American

North Carolina

class was finished a few months later, with nine 16" guns and a speed of 28 knots (Worth, p. 294), followed by the

South Dakota

and

Iowa

classes, better still; also, the Japanese by this time were finishing off the

Yamato

class, with nine 18" guns. Until the Iowas

were finished, the

Bismarck could perhaps have outrun what she could not outfight, but she was never the strongest battleship afloat.

Plus she was an inefficient design (her 45,000+ tonnes carried less armament than the Americans managed on 35,000 in North Carolina), with poor fuel efficiency (Worth, p. 48) and obsolescent armor placement (Worth, p. 47), requiring far too many tonnes and men for her attack capability

(she had a crew of over 2000; Preston, p. 151;

Hood, which had the same main armament and about the same speed, had a crew of less than 1500); Worth, p. 48, suggests that the class "may be the most over-rated warships of all time." For ships designed in the 1930s, her anti-aircraft armament was poor, too. _Bismarck's_ only real virtue was the excellent buoyancy that kept her afloat after dozens of heavy shell hits at point-blank range. Frankly, _Bismarck_ and _Tirpitz_ were too much like World War I ships (in fact, they were based on a World War I design, the _Bayern_; Preston, p. 148). But the British also had a fleet of World War I battleships. Against the Americans or Japanese, the _Bismarck_ might have had a lot of trouble. But she was better than anything the British had in 1941.

Bismarck

"Operation Rheinübung" was still an ambitious plan by the Germans -- sending out a brand-new battleship, the first of its type, on a major raiding cruise on her shakedown voyage, accompanied only by a cruiser that was itself new and that came from a class infamous for its engine problems -- Whitely, p. 59, calls the engines of the _Hipper/Prinz Eugen_ class "fragile and uneconomic"; Worth, p. 53, labels their engines "extremely troublesome" and says that it cut their range (which was supposed to be about 6500 miles) to about 5000 miles. That's only a third of the range of the pocket battleships, and much less than _Bismarck_.

The raid ended up being delayed slightly; _Prinz Eugen_ hit a mine on April 24, forcing a few weeks' delay in the operation (Hoyt, p. 107). Admiral Günther Lütjens, in command of the force, hoped that the delay would mean he would be allowed another ship, either the _Scharnhorst_ or the Bismarck's nearly-ready sister _Tirpitz_, but they weren't available and Admiral Raeder didn't want to wait (Hoyt, pp. 107-108). The ships would sail on May 18, 1941 (Hoyt, p. 108). They initially had several destroyers for company, but the smaller ships soon turned back; they didn't carry enough fuel to go on long raids (Hoyt, p. 118).

The two ships were ordered to avoid fighting if they could: the orders to Admiral Lütjens included the instructions, "the primary objective is the destruction of the enemy's carrying capacity. Enemy warships will be engaged only in furthermore of this objective, and provided such engagement can take place without excessive risk" (Becker, p. 219). But, of course, it was hard to avoid fighting when most of the Royal Navy was searching for them!

The hunting wasn't easy. Lütjens and his force were starting from Norway. They had been spotted by British aircraft there, and a British aircraft later spotted that she had left (Norman, p. 55), so the British knew she was on her way to the Atlantic. But they did not know where she was, and there were many paths toward the convoy routes (Bradford, p. 149, counts five, and that doesn't even count the English Channel; there is a good map on p.116 of Zetterling/Tamelander). The English channel was surely out, and so was the passage between the Shetlands and the Scottish coast; they were too close to British air patrol routes. There was a 160 mile wide passage between the Shetlands and the Faroes, and a 250 mile wide passage between the Faroes and Iceland; the latter was a strong possibility, and the former might be safe if the weather made plane flights difficult. Finally, there was the Denmark Strait between Iceland and Greenland. The Greenland ice blocked one side, and there were known British minefields as well (Hood, in fact, had escorted some of the minelayers involved; Hoyt, p. 98), so it was only a few dozen miles wide, but it had the advantage of being far from British bases and of being very stormy, making it hard to spot ships there. Lütjens had gone that way before, when he had taken the _Scharnhorst_ and _Gneisenau_ on a raid in January-March (see map on p. 65 of Zetterling/Tamelander). Although the operation took place in May, these was much bad weather, hampering both sides' air operations. The Germans found it hard to learn when British ships left Scapa Flow, so they didn't know where the British ships might be. But it was far worse for the British, who had to find the _Bismarck_ and couldn't fly many search missions. Since there was no telling which course Lütjens might take, the British had no choice but to try to cover all of them. Admiral John Tovey, commander of the home fleet, deployed the heavy ships at his command -- the _Hood_, the new battleship _King George V_ (Tovey's flaghip), the so-new-it-was-barely-functional battleship _Prince of Wales_, the old battlecruiser _Repulse_, and the new carrier _Victorious_ -- for action in the North Atlantic, and sent cruisers to watch the main exit points from the north. The light cruisers _Birmingham, Manchester_, and _Arethusa_ were sent to cover the Iceland/Faroes waters; the heavy cruisers _Norfolk_ and _Suffolk_, under Rear Admiral Frederick Wake-Walker, were assigned to the Denmark Strait (again see the map on p. 116 of Zetterling/Tamelander).

(Nitpicky footnote: it is often said that _Suffolk_ and _Norfolk_ were sister ships. They were not. The _Suffolk_ was a member of the _Kent_ class of 1924, the _Norfolk_, along with the _Dorsetshire_, of which more below, formed the _Norfolk_ class of 1927; Whitely, pp. 83, 90. The _Kents_ and the _Norfolks_ had identical armaments of eight 8" guns, and almost the same dimensions, and all had three funnels, with the middle one larger than the others, which is why they and certain other ships are sometimes collectively referred to as the "County" class, but _Norfolk_ was the lighter ship and, as a result, almost a knot faster than _Suffolk_ -- the _Suffolk_ was sometimes hard-pressed to keep up with the _Bismarck_. The "Counties" weren't a class; they were a type -- cruisers with eight 8" guns and Loosely speaking, Tovey set up two battle groups: Admiral Lancelot Holland, with the _Hood_ and _Prince of Wales_, sailed first (Hoyt, pp. 116-117) and was located further west, to cover the Denmark Strait; Tovey, with the remaining large ships and several cruisers, stayed close to Scapa Flow, to cover the routes around the Faroes. Either could reinforce the other, given time, but it was clear who was primarily responsible for each passage. Holland’s group had more gun power (although it lacked a carrier), but it was not very experienced. Captain Kerr, as we saw, was new to the _Hood_; Captain Leach of the _Prince of Wales_ was of course new in his job -- and Admiral Holland was also new to his post; he had replaced Admiral Whitworth less than two weeks before, on May 11, and his previous experience had been with cruisers, not battleships (Norman, p. 80). Many of the _Hood’s_ crew were also new (Hoyt, p. 109). If he had had his way, Tovey would probably have preferred that his ships, not Holland’s, found the _Bismarck_ first. It was not to be. On Friday, May 23, at 7:22 p.m., watchman Newell of the _Suffolk_ sighted the German ships. For the first time, the British knew where to go. Holland’s initial plan appears to have been good; he was going to catch the Germans in such a way that the light would make it easy to see them, but they would find it hard to see him (Norman, p. 83). Unfortunately, helped by snow that interfered with radar (Bradford, p. 172), the Germans very briefly shook off their pursuing cruisers (for less than three hours, from 12:15 a.m. to 2:47 a.m.; Norman, pp. 84-85), and Holland, to make sure they did not escape, changed course before the _Suffolk_ found them again, and Holland (who very likely expected the Germans to realize that they were not being tracked and therefore to change course; Bradford, p. 173) found himself out of position. His force could still intercept -- but no longer was he in his ideal position. He had hoped to spot the Germans around 1:45 a.m. Instead, the British heavy ships got close enough to spot them at 5:37 (Norman, p. 85). Making things even harder for Holland’s ships, they had to race forward as fast as they could to get to the range Holland wanted, meaning that only their forward turrets could fire until the British ships reached their preferred position to straighten up and fire full broadsides. (We don’t know why Holland made his mad charge, but he was probably worried about the _Hood_’s thin deck armor, wanting to get close enough that the _Bismarck_ could not hit him with a plunging shell that could penetrate the armor; he was less worried about shells hitting the side of the ship, where the _Hood_ was well-protected; von der Porten, p. 154) In addition to having his T crossed, Holland made another mistake: He ordered his ships to fire on the "lead" German ship, which was the _Prinz Eugen_, not the _Bismarck_. (The two had similar silhouettes, although obviously the _Bismarck_ was much larger.) The crew of _Prince of Wales_ knew better, and Captain Leach ordered them to fire on _Bismarck_ despite Holland’s order, but _Hood_ opened fire on the wrong ship before correcting its aim. Thus _Hood_ missed its chance to hurt her enemy quickly (Becker, pp. 221-222; Norman, p. 92). Holland, who had insisted on radio silence to make sure the Germans didn’t know he was coming, also neglected to tell Wake-Walker’s cruisers to join in the fight (no, they probably couldn’t hurt _Bismarck_, but they could at least keep _Prinz Eugen_ occupied. Given that the first hit on _Hood_ was probably from _Prinz Eugen_ -- Becker, p. 222 -- it might have mattered.) The first Wake-Walker knew of Holland’s presence was when Holland sent a signal that he had spotted the enemy (Norman, p. 76). Holland didn’t involve his destroyers in the action, either (Norman, p. 81; Hoyt, p. 129, says that they could not keep up in the heavy seas and Holland decided to go on without them); it was just _Hood_ and _Prince of Wales_ against _Bismarck_ and _Prinz Eugen_. It is also possible that Holland’s decision to keep his two ships close together made it easier for the Germans to shift fire from _Hood_ to _Prince of Wales_, allowing _Bismarck_ to do more damage (von der Porten, p. 155). The exact timing is hard to know, but _Hood_ suffered a hit very early on, while still steaming straight toward _Bismarck_, and she caught fire as a result (Norman, p. 92). About six minutes into the battle, Holland ordered his ships to turn, so that they could open with their full broadsides (Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 171). Norman, p. 94, describes what came next: “Within seven minutes, _Hood_ had fired twelve four-shell salvos, _Prince of Wales_ nine five-shell salvos, and _Bismarck_ had just fired her fifth four-shell salvo. Now, as _Hood_ turned, the guns of her X turret roared out, but for some reason, those of Y turret remained silent. Then [crewman Ted] Briggs saw a blinding flash sweep around the outside of the compass platform, and its occupants were once again thrown off their feet. The ship jarred, then slowly listed to starboard. Through the voice-pipe, the helmsman reported, 'Steering’s gone, sir,' to which Captain Kerr calmly replied, 'Very good. Change over to emergency steering.' Hood righted herself, but then began to list alarmingly to port. “As she continued to list, those on the compass platform realized that she was not going to come back.... [Briggs] looked back to see the vice admiral slumped in his chair with a look of total
As well he might. Within seconds, the explosion had destroyed Hood (Becker, p. 222). Of the 1419 officers and men aboard, only three -were rescued: Midshipman William Dundas, signalman Ted Briggs, both of whom were on the compass platform with Holland and his staff, and Able Seaman Robert E. Tilburn, who was stationed by one of the antiaircraft guns (Norman, pp. 95-97. All were quite young -- between 18 and 20 years old -- which might explain how they survived the sinking and the time in the cold water until they could assemble the wreckage they were clinging to.

Dundas, as senior, set them to singing songs such as "Roll Out the Barrel" while they hoped for rescue. They were eventually found by the destroyer Electra (Norman, p. 99).

(In an ironic footnote, the Electra was one of the ships sent to rescue survivors of the Prince of Wales and the Repulse when the Japanese sank them on December 10, 1941. But she herself was lost at the Battle of the Java Sea two and a half months later."

Von der Porten, p. 155, suggests that "Admiral Holland had fought a very poor battle, and it was Captain Leach's insubordination that saved it from being completely futile."

This is slightly unfair, since Admiral Holland's plan were disrupted by the cruisers' inability to track Bismarck, but certainly the Hood had accomplished very little except to get sunk, and Holland's plan turned out to make things easier for the Germans.

Most books about the Bismarck and the Hood devote at least as much time to what happened to Bismarck after she sank Hood as to what came before, but this song is about Hood, so I will try to be a little more brief. The loss of Hood did not immediately end the Battle of the Denmark Strait; Prince of Wales was still in action, though she had to do a rapid dance to dodge the wreck of Hood (Norman, p. 101, who suggests that the turn affected her guns' accuracy). She of course could not stay to look for survivors; she had to fight.

She fought pretty hard, considering that she was really not ready for combat; she hit Bismarck twice, plus a shell that passed through a boat without igniting and did no real damage (Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 185). In return she was hit perhaps nine times (Becker, p. 223), but none of them vital, although they did kill most of the bridge crew and slowed her a little. What took Prince of Wales out of the fight was her own mechanical troubles; one by one, her guns went out of service, until she was no longer an effective ship. Captain Leach ordered her to break off the fight at least until she could get her guns un-jammed (Norman, p. 102). And Bismarck let her do so; no one knows why, but the guess is that Lütjens felt it was his task to continue commerce-raiding (Becker, p. 224). Admiral Wake-Walker ordered Prince of Wales to stay with him, to help him track the Germans and give him some protection, but she would not initiate another battle.

It looked like a lopsided win for the Germans, but they hadn't had it entirely their own way. One of the British hits had penetrated one of Bismarck's fuel tanks. Between contamination of the fuel and the fact that other fuel couldn't be pumped, her range was dramatically decreased -- and she had not been fully fueled before she left Norway. And she was leaking oil, which could be spotted, and the water she had taken on reduced her speed. She might have sunk Britain's most famous ship, and her guns were entirely intact, but her seakeeping had been significantly reduced. Admiral Lütjens decided it was time to head back to base (Bradford, p. 188 -- although he chose to head for France, which had repair facilities, not Norway, which didn't). And the British still had Suffolk, Norfolk, and Prince of Wales trailing her; if the British could get another battleship into play, they might yet sink her. Or maybe an aircraft carrier could hurt her.

One tried; the Victorious, which was as new as Prince of Wales and had a very inexperienced set of airmen, launched a flight of Swordfish torpedo planes. One apparently managed a hit on the Bismarck, but it hit her squarely in the armor plate and didn't even slow her down, though it did result in the first fatality she had suffered (Bradford, p. 190).

Admiral Lütjens then managed to throw off his pursuers; by a tricky little maneuver, he first cut loose the Prinz Eugen to cruise on her own, and later freed the Bismarck of her tails. If she could make it to France without being spotted, she could still be repaired and do much more damage. And although the British managed a radio fix on his location, the Admiralty misinterpreted the data, and the British ships all went the wrong ways. This left the path to Brest wide open even as it caused the British to waste a lot of fuel they desperately needed (the constant story of the hunt for the Bismarck was of British ships running short of fuel; both Prince of Wales and Repulse had to give up the hunt at this time for this reason; Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 214. It is ironic that the Germans, with such a small fleet, still managed to have refueling ships in the Atlantic, but the British had none). When a Catalina flying boat finally spotted Bismarck (Bradford, p. 192; Zetterling/Tamelander, pp. 229-232; Taylor, pp. 100-101), she was far away from any ship that could safely fight her (von der Porten, p. 160).

Except one. The Admiralty had called out every available ship, including pulling the battleships...
Ranillies and Revenge away from their convoys. Not that they mattered; the "R" class were the drags of the British battleship force, built during World War I, with eight 15" guns but only 21.5 knots of speed (Worth, pp. 90-91); had they somehow found the Bismarck, she would simply have sailed around them. The Rodney, slightly newer, slightly faster, much better armed, although in need of a refit, was also summoned (Zetterling/Tamelander, pp. 182-183). (For some reason, no one seems to have considered trying submarines, of which Britain had dozens and which accomplished very little during the war years.) Closer, and much faster, was Force H, normally based in Gibraltar and responsible for Africa and the western Mediterranean, which was ordered into the Atlantic to try to catch Bismarck. And although the only big-gun ship in the force was the tired old battlecruiser Renown, which was clearly not strong enough to fight the Bismarck (Bradford, p. 193; according to Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 235, the commander of Force H, Admiral Somerville, was ordered not to let the Renown engage), Force H had an aircraft carrier, the Ark Royal, with an air group both larger and better-trained than Victorious. Once again the British had a carrier that might slow Bismarck down down.

What her pilots almost did was sink the British light cruiser Sheffield, which Admiral Somerville had been ahead of Force H to shadow the Bismarck; no one had told the pilots that there was a British ship along their path (Taylor, p. p. 104; Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 235; apparently the message was sent to Ark Royal at low priority), so they all went after their own cruiser. Fortunately for all involved, the Swordfishs' torpedoes had been armed with magnetic firing pistols, which malfunctioned in the heavy seas (von der Porten, p. 162; Taylor, p. 106). So Sheffield survived undamaged, and the British realized they needed to use standard contact pistols, and the Swordfish flew another horribly difficult mission -- and, this time, were rewarded with a hit on Bismarck's rudder. (There may have been a second hit, on her armor belt -- Bradford, p. 196 -- but if there was, her armor again saved her; it was the hit on her rudder that mattered.) She was almost in range of German air cover, but not quite, and now she was stuck. Her rudder was jammed, sending her around in slow, somewhat irregular circles, and she could not steer on her propellers. A flotilla of destroyers led by Captain Philip Vian harassed her all night; all their torpedoes missed -- the erratic movements of the rudders were good for something after all! -- but they kept everyone awake on board (von der Porten, p. 163) and made it hard to do any repairs because of the violent maneuvering (Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 254). Vian's ships also fired starshells to help other ships identify and find the Bismarck (Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 255). Most of Vian's destroyers suffered at least some damage at the battleship's hands, but all survived. And all Bismarck could do was steam in circles and wait for the end.

That end was supplied by King George V and the old Rodney (The Norfolk too had come up, though she probably didn't do much damage. The heavy cruiser Dorsetshire, which like Rodney had broken away from a convoy she was escorting, also arrived during the battle.) They came up on the Bismarck and pounded her into pulp -- the guns which had done so well against Hood seemed to have lost their ability to hit anything, probably because the ballistic computer was getting bad data from the broken steering mechanisms (Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 268). The worst damage to Rodney, e.g., came from the firing of her own guns! The Bismarck was soon an absolute wreck, although somehow she refused to sink. Admiral Lütjens was killed. It was also reported that Captain Lindemann was dead, but this was apparently retracted (Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 273, and Taylor, pp. 120-121 and Zetterling/Tamelander p. 282 describe him dramatically going down with the ship); her second-in-command, Commander Oels, finally ordered her scuttled and abandoned (Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 274). Even so, it took torpedoes from the cruiser Dorsetshire (the last British ship to have any) to finish her off (Bradford, pp. 197-198; Taylor, p. 120; Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 280). The British rescued about 110 men, but about 95% of her crew died, either on the ship or, often, in the water. The British had tried for a rescue, but had to cut it short when they thought they saw a submarine (Zetterling/Tamelander, pp. 284-285).

Most of the British ships then had to crawl home at low speed -- Tovey and King George V, e.g., didn't even have fuel to stick around and watch Bismarck sink (von der Porten, p. 165). She went down at 10:40 a.m. on May 27 (Norman, p. 110).

The Prinz Eugen fueled at a tanker, but was unable to go raiding because of engine problems (Taylor, p. 123). Despite this, she survived and made it to Brest on June 1 (Becker, p. 228) -- indeed, she survived the war, despite a lot of damage along the way, to be expended in a nuclear weapons test (von der Porten, p. 158) -- but doesn't seem to have accomplished much at this time or thereafter. And the British, after this, started rounding up the tankers and supply ships that had made all these German raids possible (von der Porten, p. 165; Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 294, says that this was possible because they cracked the German naval code). Without those ships, the German navy couldn't go raiding even if Hitler had allowed it, which he didn't.
That left only the question of what, exactly, had happened to Hood. Something had blown up, but what? A Board of Enquiry was soon formed, but it wasn't particularly inquisitive -- of the three survivors, it called only Midshipman Dundas. It nonetheless concluded that the cause was a magazine explosion (Norman, p. 113). The Director of Naval Construction counter-proposed that some of her torpedoes had cooked up (Norman, pp. 113-114). This conflict caused a second Board to be formed, which took much more testimony (Norman, p. 114) but could only conclude again that a magazine had exploded; they did not know which one, although they suggested it was that of her 4" secondary weapons (Norman, p. 115). Nor could they determine where the fatal shell had hit (Norman, p. 127). Norman lists many other possibilities on the following pages, but none of them is so convincing as to remove all doubts. His own proposal, on pp. 141-146, is that a shell went down one of Hood's funnels and set her fuel supply alight. Bradford, p. 208, thinks a German shell exploded her aft 15" magazine -- though the calculation he presents for the ability to hit the magazine appears to ignore the effects of air resistance.

To be fair, reliable information about what happened was thin and contradictory. According to Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 171, "Despite the fact that many thousand men fought in the battle, only a few of them actually saw the explosion and all of them experienced it differently." A curiosity is that all the observers agree that there was very little if any sound -- certainly no sound of an explosion (Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 172).

The wreck of the Hood was found in July 2001 (Preston, p. 101. The wreck of the Bismarck had been found twelve years earlier by Robert D. Ballard, who made it the subject of his book The Discovery of the Bismarck, which has many useful drawings and maps but which struck me as a little too casual to be cited in this article). The wreck showed pretty clearly that Hood did suffer a magazine explosion -- she was in three pieces -- but it still doesn't make it clear what caused it; very little exploration was done because it was a war grave site. Ted Briggs, who was still alive in 2001, was allowed to drop a plaque on the wreck site commemorating the dead at a memorial held on July 26, 2001 (Norman, p. 150).

There aren't many surviving folk songs about the Royal Navy's fights in World War II, but it's not surprising that there is one about the Hood. "To the British, the loss of the Hood was more than the loss of a warship, it was the loss of a symbol for the nation. She had been bigger, faster, and better armed than most warships. Suddenly she no longer existed.... Just as most Englishmen remembered what they were doing the day Britain declared war on Germany so many remembered what they were doing when they were told that the Hood had blown up" (Zetterling/Tamelander, p. 181).

The song as printed by Tawney doesn't contain many details, but what there are are accurate. The Hood was sunk in May. Six ships are listed as being part of the kill: King George the Fifth, Prince of Wales, Norfolk, Suffolk, Dorsetshire, Rodney. King George the Fifth, Rodney, Norfolk, and Dorsetshire were indeed the ships present at the kill, and she would never have been sunk had not Suffolk tracked her, and probably not without the damage done by Prince of Wales. Note, however, that the song omits the absolutely vital damage done by the aircraft from Ark Royal, and the Sheffield's role in guiding them. This hints that the song was written very early, before the full story had been discovered or publicized.

Bibliography

- Beekman: (no editor listed), Beekman History of the World Wars Library, Warships & Sea Battles of World War I, Beekman House, 1973
Sinking of the Graf Spee, The

DESCRIPTION: The Admiral Graf Spee, "built in Nazi Germany ... looted merchant men of every nationality." It lost a battle with three British "little cruisers" and "went to cover." The pocket battleship was scuttled "in Davy Jones's pocket"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster)

KEYWORDS: battle navy sea ship England Germany humorous

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
December 13, 1939 - Three British cruisers battle the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee in the Battle of the River Plate.
December 17, 1939 - The Admiral Graf Spee is scuttled outside Montevideo harbor to avoid another battle

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster 31, "The Sinking of the Graf Spee" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 149, "The Sinking of the Graf Spee" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, GRAFSPEE*
Roud #2909

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Golden Vanity" (tune)
cf. "The Battle of the River Plate" (subject of the Graf Spee)
cf. "HMS Exeter Song" (subject of HMS Exeter)

NOTES [6549 words]: One of the many, many causes of World War I was the great expansion of the German navy prior to the war, the result of the peculiar desires of Wilhelm II. Imperial Germany didn't need a big navy -- it had very few overseas colonies -- but even Wilhelm's mother admitted "Wilhelm's one idea is to have a Navy which shall be larger and stronger than the Royal Navy" (Keegan-Admiralty, pp. 112-113).

The Germans never quite managed to build a fleet to match the Royal Navy, but they came close enough to scare the British badly, and to win a tactical victory (though a complete strategic defeat) at the Battle of Jutland in 1916.

After the war, the British determined there would be no more of that. One of the conditions of the Armistice was that the major units of the German fleet (which by then was mutinous and hardly capable of fighting) be placed under guard in Britain. Half a year later, knowing that the ships would be surrendered, the German crews scuttled the entire fleet at Scapa Flow (Keegan-First, p. 420).

And the German fleet from then on was to be restricted to a small, lightly-armed force, with no ability to fight a surface battle with the British.

The Germans, in the years after the Great War, did their best to figure out ways around the restrictions. The time eventually came when they started laying down new ships, and after a few small craft, they wanted something bigger. But they were trying it to do it on 10,000 tons, the upper bounds for a cruiser under the treaty (battleships by then were up to 35,000 tons, and even that was insufficient for what most designed wanted). Starting in 1923, the Germans looked at many ideas, most of which were simply not workable (Bennett, pp. 73-74; Grove, pp. 4-6). Eventually they came out with the concept of the panzerschiff, known in Britain as the "pocket battleship." (It's worth noting that these were not Nazi ships; they were designed and laid down before Hitler took power; even non-Nazis disliked the restrictions on them.)

The first ship of this type, the Deutschland (later renamed Lützow) caused "a sensation... for she was an expression of Germany's will to outflank the conditions of Versailles" (Preston, p. 133). Two more ships of the class, the Admiral Graf Spee (named after an admiral who had died in World War I) and the Admiral Scheer, followed. There might have been more, but Jackson, p. 9, says that the rise of the Nazis caused the navy to change plans.

From the start, though, the ship names showed that the Germans meant business with their navy, since the names Scheer and Graf Spee evoked the naval heroes of World War I (Smith, p. 32, says "their names should have been enough to sound alarm bells in the Admiralty).
The pocket battleships didn’t really deserve either the name or the hype. They had six 11” guns (the bare minimum size to be considered a battleship, though a real battleship would have had at least eight of them), and the guns could be elevated very high to give the shells exceptional range -- although the guns had to be lowered back to rest position to re-load (Grove, p. 9), so her rate of fire at long range was low (based on the table on p. 41 of Worth, she needed 24 seconds between rounds; it was 11 seconds or less for the British ships). And although her fire control system was excellent, there was really only one of them for the main armament, so she could only fight one enemy at the time (Grove, pp. 10-11). And the first ship in particular had vibration problems so severe as to render the optics initially unusable (Koop/Schmolke, p. 218).

The secondary armament was much more problematic. There were eight 5.9” guns in four single turrets on each side, and far too few anti-aircraft guns, which weren’t much good at their task anyway (Koop/Schmolke, p. 11). The 5.9” guns had a maximum elevation of 35 degrees (Koop/Schmolke, p. 26), giving them good range, but they couldn't be used against aircraft, and their single turrets (with open backs!) made them somewhat hard to aim and easy to damage. Far better would have been a battery of 12 or 16 true dual-purpose (i.e. anti-ship and anti-aircraft) guns in double turrets, such as the American 5” that was used in everything from destroyers to aircraft carriers, but such does not seem to have been contemplated; the Germans never came up with a good dual-purpose gun.

Although her guns were battleship-grade, her armor did not exceed three and a half inches (a battleship should have had three times that, and four was more typical). Her designers had wanted somewhat more (Woodman, p. 4), but given the 10,000 ton limit, something had to go, and the something was armor (Smith, p. 32). This meant that Graf Spee’s armor was actually lighter, at some points, than her future adversary Exeter (Grove, p. 60), although Graf Spee had better armor on her turrets and some other vital spots.

In fact, even with the cutbacks to the armor, the three ships were certainly much heavier than their nominal displacement (Bruce/Cogar, p. 2, estimates roughly 12,000 tons; Paine comes up with over 15,000; Von der Porten, p. 5, says 11,700; Woodman, p. 4-5, comes up with 11,700 for the Deutschland, the first of the class, with the Graf Spee, which had heavier armor, being 12,500; Worth, p. 51, says 12,100; Showell, p. 128, offers 12,000 standard, 16,000 full load; Smith, p. 32, quotes a source that says 14,000 but on p. 33 says 12,400; Koop/Schmolke, p. 14, give a "standard" displacement of 14,890 and an "operational maximum" of 16,320; Bennett, p. 72 -- who is probably trying to make the British look good -- says 12,100 tons standard, 16,200 full load, and Grove, p. 8, accepts this figure, which would make her nearly as heavy as the first modern battleship, Dreadnought, which was less than 18,000 tons).

The Graf Spee had problems in heavy seas, being very "wet" and not handling well (Koop/Schmolke, p. 36, says that the problems were so bad that there were plans for a year-long refit, but she never got it); on one occasion, she had to simply sit for two days in the southern ocean (Woodman, p. 44). This may have contributed to problems with the accuracy of her guns (Grove, p. 26). What's more, she had vibration problems, particularly at high speeds, which could make the problems worse when fighting at high speed (Grove, p. 67).

The only really unusual feature of the Panzerschiff seems to have been that they could stay at sea for a very long time without touching a supply base due to their (experimental and cranky) diesel engines -- the Germans of course had no overseas bases after 1918. Their range was further extended by having special supply tankers -- the Graf Spee in 1939 would operate with the Altmark, which was unusual for a tanker in having a high top speed of 21 knots (22 knots according to Bennett, p. 73).

Even so, the "pocket battleship" design was basically an overgunned heavy cruiser. (Indeed, Grove, p. 11, calls her "fundamentally a 'light cruiser'!"). Theoretically, she could "outrun what she could not outgun" -- overwhelming cruisers with her heavy guns and using her speed to get away from battleships. Except that she wasn't all that fast. There is dispute over her top speed -- Paine, p. 3, Bennett, p. 72, Jackson, p. 9, and Smith, p. 33 say 26 knots; Worth, p. 51, believes it was 27 knots; Von der Porten, p. 5, Grove, p. 9, and Showell, p. 128, say 28 knots; Draminsky, p. i, claims 28.5 knots; Woodman, p. 6, also says 28.5 knots on her trials. But that was in early 1936, before she had gone to sea. It seems that, by the end of her voyage, her engines needed a refit (Pope, p. 76, Woodman, p. 41; Grove, pp. 34-35); so that her best speed at the end was a mere 24 knots (Pope, p. 118) or perhaps 25 knots (Von der Porten, p. 49, although he blames it on hull encrustations rather than the engines). Her cooling system was also failing due to lack of refrigerant; the ship that was supposed to supply it had been captured (Bennett, p. 32), and this increased the odds of fire or a magazine explosion.

In any case, the British had three battle cruisers (Hood, Repulse, and Renown) which could outrun "and" outgun the pocket battleships, and the battleships of the Queen Elizabeth class were only two to three knots slower than the pocket battleships (assuming the 26 knot speed is correct). The French also had ships capable of dealing with them. And the battleships of the King George V class, which started to come off the stocks at the beginning of World War II, were also faster than the pocket battleships. Had the panzerschiff existed in World War I, they would have been revolutionary and been good leaders for cruiser squadrons. In World War II, they were pests, but hardly technological miracles. (This was a constant problem for the German navy: they thought too much in World War I terms. Their alleged super-battleships, Bismarck and Tirpitz, were slightly improved versions of the World War I Baden class, relatively under-armed and with inefficient machinery that took too much space and weight for the power they produced. It has been claimed that the Bismarck was the strongest battleship in the world at the time of her maiden voyage. But vessels of the American North Carolina and South Dakota classes, and the Japanese Yamato, were all stronger, and all were in service by the end of 1942. Perhaps biggest advantage of the German ships was that -- unlike the major British ships -- they were still new. The Graf Spee had been commissioned January 6, 1936, and her only real action had been sailing near Spain during the Civil War there, according to Draminsky, p. i)

Still, even a cruiser could do major damage if it came across unprotected merchant ships (the Admiral Scheer once single-handedly knocked off six ships from an Atlantic convoy; Paine, pp. 4, 273-274), and could also disrupt shipping schedules just by their presence in the area (the "fleet in being" concept). So the Germans meant to use every vessel they could lay their hands on to attack British commerce (Humble, p. 140). When World War II began, the Germans sent out the pocket battleships to see what they could find. Their long range made them ideal for this duty, assuming one was prepared to accept that they were likely to eventually be run down and destroyed. They could be sent to out-of-the-way places like the South Atlantic, where they could sink a merchantman and disappear before a naval unit could find them (Pope, p. 9). These regions were better hunting grounds anyway; in the North Atlantic, the British turned to convoys when the war started, but ships still sailed individually in the more remote areas (Woodman, p. 14-15). To help the Graf Spee in her task, she was also given a unit of intelligence specialists to decrypt and interpret British radio chatter (Woodman, p. 13). She left Germany on August 21, 1939 (Pope, pp. 11-12).

In one of history's little ironies, the Graf Spee headed for South America (Becker, p. 37), where the fleet of her namesake, Graf von Spee, had died when his small fleet of cruisers was destroyed at the Battle of the Falklands in 1914; for background on this, see "The Noble Eighth of December." It was some time after the declaration of war before Graf Spee was given the all clear to start fighting -- and almost ran across a British cruiser while she waited (Pope, pp. 32-35; Grove, p. 23). But on September 26, 1939, the order came to begin attacking British shipping (Pope, p. 37), painting a false name on the ship to aid in deception (Pope, p. 39 -- although, as Koop/Schmolke note on p. 205, this deception might have worked better if they hadn't put the ship name Deutschland in quotation marks!). At first, it seemed the Germans had found the Happy Hunting Grounds; Graf Spee took nine prizes (Paine, p. 4) totalling about 50,000 tons, for the most part stopping them, sending off the crews, and then sinking them; many of the British sailors were put on the supply ship Altmark, while some were put on neutral ships that the Graf Spee encountered (Pope, p. 45).

British planning to catch the pocket battleship began on September 30, after the Graf Spee found her first victim, the steamer Clement (Pope, pp. 40-44. The sinking did bring the Graf Spee's crew a notice that they still had training to do; they had a very hard time hitting even a stationary target that was not resisting (although part of the problem may have been her poor seakeeping; Grove, p. 26). It is rather funny to learn that the Graf Spee next disguised herself as the Admiral Scheer; what was the point of having one pocket battleship pretend to be an identical ship? (Other than to confuse the British naval planners, but they must have seen through that!) A better trick was one she used when she sank the Newton Beach, sending false signals designed to make it appear she had been sunk by a submarine; Pope, p. 56. And, later on, Captain Langsdorff rigged a dummy funnel and even a dummy turret to make his vessel look more like a British ship; Pope, p. 77; Woodman has a photo of this mock turret, which looks surprisingly real. Unfortunately, it interfered with the ship's fire control, so eventually it was dismantled; Grove, p. 52).

It took many hours for the British to get the message about the Clement through a long series of relays, but when they did, they reacted with vigor, just as they had in 1914 in chasing Admiral Spee. A total of twenty ships (a few of them French) were formed into eight task groups to hunt the lone German ship (Humble, p. 140). The reinforcements sent to the South Atlantic included two old battleships, an ancient aircraft carrier, and five cruisers; they joined a force of four cruisers and some destroyers already there. Later, even more ships, including Britain's only new aircraft carrier, were assigned.
(Their net caused the Graf Spee at one point to head for the Indian Ocean, and seek prizes off southern Africa; Pope, pp. 70. She sank the Africa Shell there, and hoped it would cause the British to think she was heading for the Indian Ocean; Pope, p. 74. But she then headed back west.)
The British goal was to have at least two heavy cruisers, or the equivalent, in each task group (Pope, p. 56), since this (it was felt) would supply enough strength to deal with one pocket battleship -- or, at minimum, damage her enough that she could be run down by a stronger force (Grove, p. 50). But not all the groups were actually that strong. In the end, it was one of the weaker task forces that found her: The heavy cruiser Exeter and light cruisers Ajax and Achilles, commanded by Commodore Harry Harwood, who had correctly guessed where the Germans would head. It was a scratch force (they had first come together just one day earlier; Pope, p. 110), and there were no reinforcements within 2000 miles (Pope, p. 114), but they caught up with the German on December 13, 1939.
This force was not even as strong as it looked on paper; Graf Spee had a big edge in weight of shell and range of guns. Exeter was an under-armed ship for a heavy cruiser, with just six 8" guns (Paine, p. 178; Exeter was such a weak ship that Pope, p. 21, mentions a canard that the British designed her to be sold to a potentially hostile nation! The truth, according to Bennett, p. 70, was that the British government was so strapped in the late 1920s that it couldn't afford to build enough strong cruisers to meet all its needs, so it started building weaker, cheaper ships like Exeter; Worth, p. 102, says that Exeter was envisioned as being a commerce protector and so didn't need to be as strong, and notes defects in her armor protection as well as her armament). The two light cruisers had nothing heavier than a 6" gun, and only eight of those.
Thus the Germans had a big advantage in firepower. Pope, p. 126, calculates the Germans as having a broadside weight of 4140 pounds plus their secondary armaments (although Bennett, p. 77, claims the German secondary armaments scored no hits at all), while the British had about 3400 tons. The figures on p. 76 of Bennett are 4164 pounds for the Germans plus secondary armaments, to 3136 for the British. On the other hand, the British had more total guns to fire (a total of 22, to six big guns or 14 primary and secondary for the Germans) and so could perhaps expect more hits, plus they had more tonnage to absorb the hits. And the British could fire much faster, so that Grove, pp. 62-63, claims that the British could put 22,000 pounds of shells in the air in the space of a minute, to about 16,000 for Graf Spee. Similarly, Koop/Schmolke calculate the total broadside weight of Graf Spee (counting primary and secondary guns) as 2164 kg—about 4750 pounds; he works out the British broadsides as 1509 kg or about 3325 pounds -- but then notes that the British could fire faster, determining that the British could put 7663 kg of shells in the air per minute compared to 5056 kg for the Germans (interestingly, these figures are about a third less than Grove's figure). Still, all seem to agree that the Graf Spee should have won a pure slugging contest, because any hits she managed would cause tremendous damage.
(To put this in perspective, though, that 4140 pound broadside of the Graf Spee shows how short of being a battleship she was. Worth, p. 178, says that Japan's Kongo class, the weakest dreadnoughts to serve in World War II, had a broadside of 11,880 pounds: the typical American pre-war battleship had a broadside around 18,000 pounds, and Britain's new King George V class, derided as a weak battleship, had a broadside of 15,900 pounds. Thus Graf Spee had barely more than a third the weight of broadside of the weakest true battleship!) And while some have argued that the Graf Spee should have run away, Grove, p. 166, quotes a calculation by one of the British officers observing that, if the Germans had run, their big guns would not have helped them much: Exeter's guns had a range only about 3000 yards less than Graf Spee's, and with a five knot speed advantage, could probably have brought Graf Spee into range before Exeter could have suffered much damage. The light cruisers would have needed longer to close the range, but Graf Spee would have had no way to fight them if she concentrated her rear turret on Exeter -- especially if she was running away, taking most of her guns out of action.
Perhaps the Germans should have run, but instead the Graf Spee played into the British hands. Her scout plane was out of commission (the design had a tendency to destroy the engine cylinders when it landed; Bennett, p. 79), and although the British had a few planes, they were somewhat short (the Achilles had lost hers, and one of Ajax's was out of commission, according to Bennett, p. 69; Grove, p. 63, adds that Exeter's flight crews were still learning to use their planes), so they were not used on the morning of the battle (Bennett, p. 33). As a result, all contacts were from the ships themselves. When the Germans spotted the enemy, they identified the force as consisting of the Exeter and two destroyers -- a force that could not defeat the Graf Spee but could shadow her until stronger units could come up. And it would be hard to defeat them while running away, because long-range gunnery wasn't especially accurate (Bennett, p. 35). And it was just daybreak, so it would be many hours before the German raider could hope to vanish in the dark. So, rather than flee and run the risk of being overtaken by ships he could not fight, Captain Langsdorff decided to attack in order to try to defeat the British and again disappear -- after finishing off the convoy Langsdorff guessed they were covering (Pope, p. 118; Woodman, p. 76), considers his decision to be a clear violation of his orders, and Grove, pp. 37-39, describes how he reinterpreted those orders now that his worn-out engines meant that it was time to end his patrol; since the cruise had to end anyway, he would allow himself to be more aggressive.

But Harwood had a trick of his sleeve. He had been thinking about the problem for many years (Grove, p. 55), and his consideration paid off. His force came at Graf Spee from two different directions, and the German ship had only two main turrets -- and, as the sinking of the Clement showed, the Germans were still learning how to aim them, although the German gunnery proved to be more accurate than the British (Bennett, p. 77, calculates that the Germans achieved one hit for every 41 shells fired; for Exeter it was one hit for every 64 shells, and the light cruisers -- which had fire control problems -- were even worse. All sides used torpedoes, but there were no hits; Bennett, p. 78. Koop/Schmolke, p. 179, give different numbers, claiming the light cruisers hit with 4.82% of their shells, Graf Spee with 3.48%, and Exeter, firing mostly manually, with a mere 2.66%). Graf Spee managed to silence Exeter's guns (and also kill almost all the bridge personnel, putting her out of control for a time; Pope, pp. 147-148), although the heavy cruiser did manage two hits on the German, one very damaging (Pope, p. 149). Achilles was almost untouched except for some splinter damage, but Ajax sustained damage in the battle from straddles (Paine, p. 10) and from one direct hit that very nearly caused a magazine explosion, although in practice the damage was relatively mild; two turrets were disabled, plus a hoist went out, leaving her with only three usable guns; Woodman, p. 108), but she could still move and fight (Pope, pp. 166-167). She also suffered a shortage of ammunition for her one fully functioning turret (Pope, p. 169). The battle had lasted almost an hour and a half (Von der Porten, p. 52), which was a very long time for a combat of this type.

The Ajax had seven killed, Achilles four, and Exeter, by far the hardest-hit, had more than fifty dead (Pope, p. 122, says 53; Woodman, p. 109, and Koop/Schmolke, p. 176, say 61); there were many more wounded, a few of them fatally. Exeter reportedly had suffered seven hits from 11" shells (although Koop/Schmolke, p. 178, claims that Graf Spee used the wrong type of ammunition, reducing the damage done); her "A" and "B" turrets were hit and put out of action, her bridge and other control positions damaged, she suffered fires, had a list due to flooding, and lost both telephone and wireless communications; orders had to be passed by messengers, and even the undamaged guns mostly could not be fired due to power problems or the like (Pope, pp. 159-161). The British airplane spotter, sent to call her back to action, reported that he had never seen a ship so it would be many hours before the German raider could hope to vanish in the dark. So, rather than flee and run the risk of being overtaken by ships he could not fight, Captain Langsdorff decided to attack in order to try to defeat the British and again disappear -- after finishing off the convoy Langsdorff guessed they were covering (Pope, p. 118; Woodman, p. 76), considers his decision to be a clear violation of his orders, and Grove, pp. 37-39, describes how he reinterpreted those orders now that his worn-out engines meant that it was time to end his patrol; since the cruise had to end anyway, he would allow himself to be more aggressive.

But Harwood had a trick of his sleeve. He had been thinking about the problem for many years (Grove, p. 55), and his consideration paid off. His force came at Graf Spee from two different directions, and the German ship had only two main turrets -- and, as the sinking of the Clement showed, the Germans were still learning how to aim them, although the German gunnery proved to be more accurate than the British (Bennett, p. 77, calculates that the Germans achieved one hit for every 41 shells fired; for Exeter it was one hit for every 64 shells, and the light cruisers -- which had fire control problems -- were even worse. All sides used torpedoes, but there were no hits; Bennett, p. 78. Koop/Schmolke, p. 179, give different numbers, claiming the light cruisers hit with 4.82% of their shells, Graf Spee with 3.48%, and Exeter, firing mostly manually, with a mere 2.66%). Graf Spee managed to silence Exeter's guns (and also kill almost all the bridge personnel, putting her out of control for a time; Pope, pp. 147-148), although the heavy cruiser did manage two hits on the German, one very damaging (Pope, p. 149). Achilles was almost untouched except for some splinter damage, but Ajax sustained damage in the battle from straddles (Paine, p. 10) and from one direct hit that very nearly caused a magazine explosion, although in practice the damage was relatively mild; two turrets were disabled, plus a hoist went out, leaving her with only three usable guns; Woodman, p. 108), but she could still move and fight (Pope, pp. 166-167). She also suffered a shortage of ammunition for her one fully functioning turret (Pope, p. 169). The battle had lasted almost an hour and a half (Von der Porten, p. 52), which was a very long time for a combat of this type.

The Ajax had seven killed, Achilles four, and Exeter, by far the hardest-hit, had more than fifty dead (Pope, p. 122, says 53; Woodman, p. 109, and Koop/Schmolke, p. 176, say 61); there were many more wounded, a few of them fatally. Exeter reportedly had suffered seven hits from 11" shells (although Koop/Schmolke, p. 178, claims that Graf Spee used the wrong type of ammunition, reducing the damage done); her "A" and "B" turrets were hit and put out of action, her bridge and other control positions damaged, she suffered fires, had a list due to flooding, and lost both telephone and wireless communications; orders had to be passed by messengers, and even the undamaged guns mostly could not be fired due to power problems or the like (Pope, pp. 159-161). The British airplane spotter, sent to call her back to action, reported that he had never seen a ship survive that looked so damaged (Grove, p. 85; Pope, p. 178). Ironically, it was a near miss, not a hit, that destroyed the power systems and took her out of the fight. Fortunately, her machinery worked; she could still move, and headed for the Falklands to make such repairs as she could.

But Graf Spee's armor was so thin that even the light cruisers could hurt her, at least if they hit her in the right spots. Woodman, p. 112, says she suffered two 8" hits from Exeter and 18 6" hits from the light cruisers; this agrees with the total of 20 hits mentioned by Von der Porten, p. 52. Koop/Schmolke, p. 176, suggest 17 6" hits and two 8" hits. Bennett, p. 85, has a diagram showing 19 hits, of which three were from Exeter. Grove, p. 86, claims "at least 23 hits," although he uses the same chart as everyone else. Pope, pp. 172-174, describes fifteen hits, and gives a full catalog on pp. 253-355 of the effects of 18 hits and some near misses, some of which did no damage but several of which disabled a large number of Graf Spee's secondary weapons; they also wounded Langsdorff (Koop/Schmolke, p. 178, believe this affected his thinking, and they note that his first officer wasn't trusted) and did a lot of damage to her communications, radar, airplane, rangefinders, and other equipment; there were six leaks below the waterline, although none was major, and apparently more than fifty holes in her of one sort or another (Pope, p. 197; most of these must have been splinter holes, and minor. Wortman, p. 48, claims "as many as seventy hits" on her, but this must have been a count of holes if it's a record of anything). Her ability to fight was definitely affected. Her anti-aircraft guns (which were inadequate to begin with) were crippled, one of the big guns could not be aimed, the main director was damaged (meaning that the guns could not be aimed accurately; Grove, p. 167, notes that Graf Spee's shooting got worse as the battle went along), and the torpedo system was out (Grove, p. 87). And Grove, p. 105, says that although her engines had taken no damage, the demands of fast maneuvering, and their time away from repair facilities, had left them so debilitated that they were now only capable of 17 knots.

The German ship had 37 killed and 57 wounded (Pope, p. 175), and she was low on ammunition (only 31 shells remaining per gun of her main armament, or enough for a half an hour's battle,
Germans -- a trick the Germans had used in World War One); this would have let him function as a suggestion was that the circumstances where he could hope to escape (Pope, pp. 206-207; Woodman, p. 125; one he would likely have a better chance of making proper repairs and being interned in friendly Langsdorff asked for instructions from Berlin, suggesting that he try to reach Buenos Aires where rank, were also given honors (Pope, pp. 220-221; Woodman, p. 132).

Admiral for his role in the battle, and given a knighthood; his captains, although not elevated in The British ships did at least have a little more status; Commodore Harwood was promoted Rear (Pope, p. 216). But the British managed enough tricks to make it sound as if major forces were coming on the scene. In fact, they had only the equivalent of the force they had had before the first battle -- one heavy cruiser (Cumberland) and the two light cruisers. Cumberland was stronger than Exeter (eight 8" guns rather than six, and better armor; Worth, pp. 101-102), but the other two now had damage.

The good news for the Germans is that they would have most of a week before serious forces arrived (although, once all the scattered forces arrived, they would be overwhelming -- two aircraft carriers, a battle cruiser, and eight cruisers; Bennett, p. 45). But they didn't take advantage of the respite. British intelligence and diplomacy first worked to keep the ship in place for several days (Pope, p. 200), then tricked Captain Langsdorff into believing that they had overwhelming forces heading for him (Humble, p. 141). One account claimed that the Renown, a battlecruiser that was faster than Graf Spee and had six 15" guns in three turrets (meaning that she had a huge edge in firepower over the Germans) had arrived (Woodman, p. 123). In fact, no reinforcements could reach Harwood in less than five days (Pope, p. 196) except for the heavy cruiser Cumberland, which was making repairs in port but whose captain had correctly anticipated that he would be needed and arrived about a day after the battle (Pope, p. 193; Woodman, p. 110; Grove, pp. 85-86, notes that she actually set out before all her shafts were working; she actually was still engaging in repairs as she started her voyage north).

And the entrance to the River Plate was so wide that Harwood's two cruisers couldn't even patrol it all until Cumberland arrived (Pope, p. 191). And the British were short of both fuel and ammunition (Pope, p. 216). But the British managed enough tricks to make it sound as if major forces were coming on the scene. In fact, they had only the equivalent of the force they had had before the first battle -- one heavy cruiser (Cumberland) and the two light cruisers. Cumberland was stronger than Exeter (eight 8" guns rather than six, and better armor; Worth, pp. 101-102), but the other two now had damage.

The British ships did at least have a little more status; Commodore Harwood was promoted Rear Admiral for his role in the battle, and given a knighthood; his captains, although not elevated in rank, were also given honors (Pope, pp. 220-221; Woodman, p. 132).

Langsdorff asked for instructions from Berlin, suggesting that he try to reach Buenos Aires where he would likely have a better chance of making proper repairs and being interned in friendly circumstances where he could hope to escape (Pope, pp. 206-207; Woodman, p. 125; one suggestion was that the Graf Spee might be "given" to the Argentines but operated by the Germans -- a trick the Germans had used in World War One); this would have let him function as a "fleet in being," pinning down British ships. But the British cleverly sailed a merchant ship at this moment -- meaning that the Graf Spee was forced to stay in Montevideo harbor or violate the neutrality laws (which required giving merchant ships a 24 hour head start; Pope, p. 208).

Langsdorff took this as dooming the Argentina plan. He wrote that he would sail his ship out to sea and sink her in shallow water to save his crew (Pope, p. 212, who suggests on p. 213 that the letter -- which levels many accusations at Uruguay -- was designed to be used as propaganda).

Having made his decision, Langsdorff put it into action and started to disable his ship, and he arranged for most of his crew to be taken off while appointing a few to do the last-minute tasks of scuttling. Then came the bombshell: the ships he had feared, Renown and Ark Royal, were at Rio, not outside Montevideo (Grove, p. 123). He could still escape -- except that he had now seriously disabled his ship, because he didn't want anyone salvaging her!

So Langsdorff went ahead with his plans and took the Graf Spee out into the estuary on December 17. Woodman, p. 133, says that Langsdorff wanted set it up so that he alone could pull a master switch and blow up the ship; there is a hint that he wanted to kill himself along with his ship (indeed, Grove, pp. 125, 128, says that his officers had to talk him out of it, and his second-in-command appointed a junior officer to keep watch on him). But the gunnery officer he consulted said that such a master control was not possible. Once he had gotten away from shore (although not yet out in deep water), he had a merchant vessel and tugs come alongside and take off the bulk of the crew while he and his select handful blew up the ship (Pope, pp. 224-225). Wortman, p. 49, says that twenty thousand people watched her last trip.

Not all the charges exploded, so the front end for the ship was not as badly ruined as the back, but she burned for four days (Grove, p. 156); there was certainly no possibility of salvaging her.

Three days later, once his men were properly interned, Langsdorff committed suicide (Bruce/Cogar, p. 3. He was probably smart, given the reception he would have faced had he returned to Germany). It appears it took two shots; the first bullet barely grazed his head, but he had the nerve to shoot again, and that one was fatal (Grove, pp. 138-139). He had arranged it so that most of his men ended up in Argentina, not Uruguay -- although they were restricted more closely than he would have liked (Pope, pp. 232-233), and when Argentina eventually declared war on Germany, they became POWs (Woodman, p. 141). When they finally went home, ironically, the Germans were escorted home by the Ajax (Jackson, p. 20) -- although Grove, p. 144, reports that almost half decided to settle in Argentina after the war rather than return to a defeated Germany.

It is widely reported that Langsdorff, when he shot himself, had set it up so that his body fell on an ensign of the German Imperial Navy (i.e. the flag from World War I), not the Nazi flag (Pope, p. 235), although Grove, p. 139, denies this.

In terms of tonnage sunk, the Graf Spee had "paid for herself." But the British had had the last laugh, so they treated it as a moral victory, and the Germans as a defeat. On the other hand, some of the pocket battleship's officers managed to escape Argentina and do more damage -- one died on the Bismarck a year and a half later, and one captained a submarine that sank more tonnage than the Graf Spee herself (Woodman, pp. 141-142).

The commander of the support ship Altmark eventually tried to bring home the British sailors who had been captured and placed on his ship, apparently going against Langsdorff's orders to have them interned (Jacksen, p. 22). But a British destroyer group caught up with them in Norwegian waters and freed them (Keegan-Second, p. 50; Woodman, pp. 144-146; Jackson, p. 23). This had the side effect of boosting the prospects of Winston Churchill, who as the cabinet official responsible for the navy had ordered the move (Von der Porten, p. 61), so it arguably helped the war effort far more than just by freeing a few sailors. Since Norwegian waters were neutral (neither side should have had warships there), the British did not sink the Altmark; after a complex career, she sank due to an accidental explosion in Yokohama, Japan in 1942 (Woodman, p. 146).

Delgado, p. 159, notes that the location of the Graf Spee wreck is known -- indeed, parts of the ship remained above the surface until 1950 (Woodman, p. 138) -- and that a survey in 1997 found that much of the ship had vanished in ways that did not suggest battle damage. It has been suggested that the British did some clandestine dives to recover such things as the ship's radar. If so, the British search has never been documented. Grove, pp. 157-164, does document a complicated campaign by the British to gain ownership of the wreck, and they did gather some parts (e.g. of the radar), but it doesn't sound as if they really learned much.

The damage to Exeter was so severe that there was talk of scrapping her, but it was decided that she was too important psychologically to be gotten rid of. She was so heavily reworked that she was in the dockyard for more than a year, finally returning to service in early 1941 (Grove, p. 153), and joined the combined Dutch/British/American/Australian forces guarding the East Indies about a year later (Navallint, p. 58) -- only to be damaged very early in the action at the Battle of the Java Sea. She was again the first cruiser damaged, and had fallen out of the battle line in a way that perhaps cost the allies what little hope they had (NavalInt, pp. 66-68; Morison, p. 94). Unable to repair the damage and with her speed reduced to 16 knots, she was sunk on March 1, 1942 (Morison, p. 100) -- making her one of the very few British ships to have the bitter distinction of being badly mauled by gunfire in both the Atlantic and Pacific (as far as I know, it's the only one -- although Prince of Wales was damaged by the Bismark in the Atlantic and then sunk in the Pacific, she was sunk by aircraft; Exeter in both oceans was damaged by gunfire). Exeter and her escorts apparently went down so quickly that it wasn't until after the war that the Allies even found out what happened to them; NavalInt, p. 78, reports that they called in a sighting of the enemy and were never heard from again, and Parkin, p. 38, says that her crew's fate was not known until after the war when survivors were located in Japanese POW camps; with her speed reduced and her fire control system damaged, she couldn't flee quickly and couldn't fight well, and was sunk with her escorts by an overwhelming force. One of the escorts, USS Pope, fought so valiantly that she and her survivors were awarded three battle stars and a presidential citation (Parkin, p. 42) -- but they had accomplished little except to show that the Americans would fight, and fight hard. The other three British ships most closely involved in the Graf Spee fight, Ajax, Achilles, and Cumberland, all survived -- the latter two, in fact, played themselves in a movie about the battle (Grove, p. 155). Achilles was the last survivor, serving in the Indian navy after 1948 and not being scrapped until 1978.

A longer-lasting accolade to Achilles is found in New Zealand. Achilles was officially a New Zealand ship, and many of her crew came from that country. After the battle, the New Zealand government honored the captain of Achilles, Edward Parry, by naming the Parry Channel after him (NewZealandEncyclopedia, p. 3). The Parry Channel is not shown on Google Maps as of this time, but it seems to be near Whangarei near the northern tip of the North Island.

It is interesting to note that, when the Exeter returned to Britain for repairs, Winston Churchill (then still the Navy boss, not the Prime Minister) was there to give a speech that included the line, "This great action will long be told in sound and story" (Grove, p. 151). This isn't the only item written about the sinking of the Graf Spee; Bennett, p. 56, cites one by a high-ranking British officer, Ronald Hopwood, beginning, "There's a wreck at the mouth of a river, that once was the pride of her land." Major Ralph Furse wrote "I Saw Three Ships," a fantasy beginning "South steamed Ajax, Exeter, Achilles" and printed on pp. 16-17 of Winton. More likely to be traditional, and found in the Index, is "The Battle of the River Plate," published by Cyril Tawney.

- RBW

Bibliography

- Becker: Cajas Becker, Hitler's Naval War, (German edition 1971; English edition 1974 from Macdonald and Jane's; I used the undated Kensington paperback edition)
- Bennett: Geoffrey Bennett, Battle of the River Plate, Ian Allen, 1972, 1974
- Draminski: Stefan Draminski, The German Pocket Battleship Admiral Graf Spee, Topdrawings #22 (a detailed set of ship plans with only very limited text, in Polish and English), Kagero, 2015
- NavalInt: Office of Naval Intelligence, The Java Sea Campaign: Combat Narratives, a classified 1943 report on the battle of the Java Sea, now declassified and published in print-on-demand form without listing a publisher (!)
Sinking of the Newfoundland, The DESCRIPTION: "We have bred many sailors bold, Brave captains by the score, And ranking with the best of them Is Captain John Blackmore." After a long career of sailing and shipbuilding, he retires, can't stand it, builds the Newfoundland -- and sails her into a wreck

AUTHOR: Solomon Samson?

EARLIEST DATE: 1963 (A Glimpse of Newfoundland in Poetry and Pictures)

KEYWORDS: age ship wreck rescue

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

1954 - crushing of the "Newfoundlander"

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, pp. 130-131, "The Sinking of the 'Newfoundland'" (1 text, 1 tune) Roud #V44735

NOTES [313 words]: Despite both being about the wreck of a ship named Newfoundland, this has nothing to do with the various songs about the "Newfoundland Disaster" (e.g. "The Newfoundland Disaster (I)"); that Newfoundland was commanded by Captain Westbury Kean. This is about the second Newfoundland, built and commanded by John H. Blackmore; this much newer ship is also mentioned in "A Noble Fleet of Sealers."

Most Newfoundland sealing songs came from the era of the sealing steamers, which began in the 1860s. Starting in the early 1900s, ironclads joined the fleet -- but all of them were lost or sold during World War I; the steamers were left in charge. But all of them were old -- usually pre-1900. By the 1940s, the steamers -- and, indeed, the Newfoundland sealing industry itself -- were almost extinct.

One of the old captains, John Blackmore, wouldn't give up. He built a diesel-powered boat, J. H. Blackmore (named for himself and his family, of course; there is a very poor photo of it on p. 80 of Winsor); it was the only Newfoundland ship to go to the ice in 1943 (Candow, p. 107). She was a model for the small "motor vessels," or MVs, which replaced the steamers in the 1940s -- in 1948, for instances, nine MVs, including the J. H. Blackmore, went to the seal fishery. But the Blackmore was lost in that year; the MVs were "genuinely accident-prone" (Candow, p. 165). In the 1950s, Blackmore commanded a ship called the Saint Adresse (Candow, p. 151). The Newfoundland, which I assume is the ship mentioned in this song despite the difference in name, "was crushed in the Strait of Belle Isle; the crew of over 60 men walked across the ice to safety at Eddies Cove" (Candow, p. 165). Blackmore eventually abandoned the seal fishery in 1962 (Ryan/Drake, p. 82). That appears to be the subject of this song.

There is a photo of Blackmore on p. 72 of Winsor. - RBW

Bibliography
Sinking of the Titanic (Titanic #9)

DESCRIPTION: The Titanic leaves Southampton. After the ship strikes an iceberg, her officers call upon the Carpathia for help. The passengers and crew place women and children in the lifeboats, leaving the men to go down with the ship.

AUTHOR: Probably Richard Brown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Richard "Rabbit" Brown)
LONG DESCRIPTION: The Titanic leaves Southampton, bound for America with happy passengers and crew. After the ship strikes an iceberg, her officers call upon the Carpathia for help, but she is far away. The passengers and crew, realizing the ship is sinking, place women and children in the lifeboats, leaving the men to go down with the ship. The band plays "Nearer My God to Thee" as the ship sinks (Singer sings the hymn)

KEYWORDS: ship wreck disaster death drowning religious

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

April 14/15, 1912 - Shortly before midnight, ship's time, the Titanic strikes an iceberg and begins to sink. Only 711 survivors are found of 2224 people believed to have been aboard.

FOUND IN: US(So)
ST RcTitaIX (Partial)
RECORDINGS:
Richard "Rabbit" Brown, "Sinking of the Titanic" (Victor 35840, 1927; on TimesAint01)

NOTES [158 words]: This song can be distinguished from the other Titanic songs primarily by its lack of a chorus, by its description of the SOS call to the Carpathia, and by the singing of "Nearer My God to Thee" at the end. - PJS
Richard Brown in fact not only sang "Nearer..." but did it in a sort of distorted voice, like music heard through water. A cute trick. Although the song was not recorded until 1927, Lyle Lofgren thinks it was written soon after the tragedy, because of the details it has, most of which (except for the playing of "Nearer...") are accurate. Despite this song (and other folklore), the band on the Titanic did not play "Nearer My God to Thee" as the ship sank. Instead, they played light music to prevent panic.

For an extensive history of the Titanic, with detailed examination of the truth (or lack thereof) of quotes in the Titanic songs, see the notes to "The Titanic (XV)" ("On the tenth day of April 1912") (Titanic #15) - RBW

File: RcTitaIX

Sinking of the Vestris, The

DESCRIPTION: Vestris sail proudly from New York into a storm: "wild waves... And in her side a hole was pounded" The captain's message for help is too late. "Well do we know that someone blundered. We must forgive after all For we are adrift on life's briny ocean"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA-Leach)
KEYWORDS: travel death drowning sea ship storm wreck

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

Nov 12, 1928 - Steamship liner Vestris bound to Barbados from New York City capsized and sank at Hampton Roads, Virginia with 112 dead (per Northern Shipwrecks Database)

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
Roud #22428
RECORDINGS:
Joe Sutton, "S. S. Vesteris" (on MUNFLA-Leach)
NOTES [28 words]: Bruce D. Berman, Encyclopedia of American Shipwrecks, Mariner’s Press, 1972, p. 149, agrees with the date of the loss of the Vestris but says that 110 were lost. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.4
File: MLSiVes

Sinne, Sinne, Set Ye
DESCRIPTION: The herder welcomes sunset and complains that he has only a drop of corn husks to eat all day. When a cripple bird passes, dragging its wing he clubs it. The bird cheeps. The cock warns it "come na yon road again"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: warning food bird
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1636, "Sinne, Sinne, Set Ye" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Robert Chambers, The Popular Rhymes of Scotland (Edinburgh, 1870 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 27, ("Cleaverie, cleaverie, sit i' the sun")
Roud #13066
NOTES [60 words]: The description follows Chambers because I think I understand it better than I do Greig/Duncan8. As far as I can make out, Greig/Duncan8 has the herder going hungry until sunset, envying the chickens at home that have been eating all day; when he gets home he clubs a chicken, whom the cock upbraids, saying, "you should have come to bed when I told you to" - BS
Last updated in version 2.5
File: GrD1636

Sinner Man
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, sinner man, where you gonna run to? (x3) All on that day." The remainder of the song is variations on the theme, "Run to the (rock), Rock won't you hide me? (x3)... (rock) will be (a-melting)"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Cecil Sharp collection)
KEYWORDS: religious punishment nonballad sin
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 616, "No Hidin'-Place" (2 texts, with the "A" text being "No Hiding Place" but the "B" text, which is damaged, probably belonging here)
Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #45, "O Sinner Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 208, "Sinner Man" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 61, "Sinner Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 366, "Sinner Man" (1 text)
DT, SINERMAN SINERMN2*
Roud #3408
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Heaven Bell a-Ring" (lyrics)
cf. "Can't Hide Sinner" (lyrics)
NOTES [154 words]: Although there is surely no literary connection, the phrasing of this reminds me of a Talmudic story. Alan Unterman, Dictionary of Jewish Lore & Legend, 1991 (I use the 1997 Thames & Hudson paperback edition), p. 68, tells a tale of the first/second century rabbi Eliezer Ben Hyrcanus. Rabbi Eliezer was in a dispute over a point of law, and was unable to convince the others. He called on a tree to help him convince them, and the tree uprooted itself and moved, but the other rabbis said that trees proved nothing. Eliezer called on a stream, which flowed uphill, but the response was that streams proved nothing. He called on the walls of the academy, and they started to fall, but another rabbi told them to stop, and they did. Then Eliezer called on heaven to help him, and a voice from heaven said Eliezer was right. But the assembly still disagreed, and put him under a ban. Later, his views were said to prevail. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: SKE61
Sinner Saved, A

DESCRIPTION: "One night I was in sorrow, My heart with fear did ache, To think that on the morrow The thread of life might break. But soon the savior found me... And took me to his fold." "Each day I look for courage... To tell... His blood has washed each white"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 2014 (Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Jesus

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 363-364, "A Sinner Saved" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: HGam363

Sinner Too Late

DESCRIPTION: The sinner is told what he needs to do, but he ignores the warnings. "Turn ... the sinner wouldn't turn." "My Lord call you -- wouldn't come." "Church bell ring -- you wouldn't come." "O too late, sinner, too late."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslIslands)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslIslands, p. 225, ("Turn sinner turn - sinner wouldn't turn") (1 text)

NOTES [17 words]: Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslIslands writes that this was sung while flailing the rice sheaf. - BS

Last updated in version 4.1

File: Parp225

Sinner What Are You Doing Down There

DESCRIPTION: "(Sinner, what are you doing down there?) (3x) Oooh, my Lord." First lines include "Doing my Master's work," "Haul in the plank and let us go," "This old world ain't my home," "Walking on the borrowed land," "Never miss my mother till she's gone."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang)

KEYWORDS: death nonballad religious Jesus

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang, pp. 238-239, "Sinnuh W'ah Yuh Doin’ Down Dere" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [18 words]: The description follows Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang but I do not repeat the dialect. - BS

Last updated in version 5.1

File: HPR238A

Sinner Why Will You Die On That Day

DESCRIPTION: "When you (hear the trumpet blowing/hear the wind blowing/see the lightning flashing/hear the thunder rolling) on that day, on that day, Oh sinner, why will you die on that day"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang)

KEYWORDS: death nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang, pp. 250-251, "Sinnuh W'y Will Yuh Die on Da’ Day" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [18 words]: The description follows Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang but I do not repeat the dialect. - BS
Last updated in version 5.1
File: HPR250A

Sinner Won't Die No More
DESCRIPTION: "O the lamb been down here and died (x3), Sinner won't die no more." "I wonder what bright angels, angels, angels, I wonder what bright angels, The robes all ready now." "I see them ships a-sailing... The robes all ready now."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad clothes
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 85, "Sinner Won't Die No More" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12043
File: AwG085

Sinner You Better Get Ready
DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Sinner you better get ready" (3x). "The hour is coming that a sinner must die" Verse (see notes: "The good old chariot passing by, Jarred the earth and shook the sky" "I looked at my hands, my hands was new, I looked at my feet, my feet was too."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1874 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro- HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious death floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Barton-OldPlantationHymns, p. 26, "Sinner You Better Get Ready" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, pp. 16-17, "Oh, Sinner, You'd Better Get Ready" (1 text, 1 tune; pp. 208-209 in the 1874 edition)
Roud #19341
RECORDINGS:
NOTES [64 words]: The description is based on the Barton-OldPlantationHymns text. For the verse, every line is followed by "For the hour is coming that a sinner must die." Barton-OldPlantationHymns verses include the floating verse "The tallest tree in Paradise, The Christian calls it the tree of life." Monroe Brothers include "God gave Noah the rainbow sign, Won't be the water but fire next time." - BS
Last updated in version 4.0
File: Bart026

Sinner, Please Don't Let This Harvest Pass
DESCRIPTION: "Brother, be sure you got your soul right, Sister, be sure you got your heart right, See the time is winding up, Don't let this harvest pass." Jesus is coming. God is a warrior. Jesus is a rock. The time is coming. So get moving!
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1997 (Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad farming Jesus
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit, pp. 76-83, "Sinner, Please Don't Let Dis Harves' Pass" (1 text, 1 tune, arranged in such a way that it cannot be sung by a single musician)
Roud #12220
Sinnerin o' Me and My Love, The
DESCRIPTION: The seventeen year old pregnant singer sees her false lover and curses the church and minister of his coming marriage, future wife and sons ["every year a burial"], farm and waters. "The woman never will follow you ... That will love you so well's I do"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: courting infidelity curse pregnancy nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #126, pp. 1-2, "The Sinnerin o' Me and My Love"; #121, p. 3, ("To-morrow's my lovie's wedding day") (1 text plus 2 fragments)
  Greig/Duncan6 1148, "The Sinnerin o' Me and My Love" (3 texts)
Roud #6325
File: GrD61148

Sinners Will Call for the Rocks and the Mountains
DESCRIPTION: "Sinners will call for the rocks and the mountains (x3) When the last trump shall sound." "Jesus will bear the Christians higher (x3) When the last trump shall sound." "Brothers, won't you go to glory with me (x2) When the last trump shall sound."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Randolph 651, "Sinners Will Call for the Rocks and the Mountains"
Roud #7572
CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "When the Stars Begin to Fall" (words)
File: R651

Sintali
DESCRIPTION: Alternate lines are a chorus, "Sintali I-yah you know." The shantyman sings: Sintali was a poor fisherman who went to sea. He couldn't get bait so he took off his penis, his leg, and other parts of his body for bait. "What a great fishing guy"
AUTHOR: unknown
KEYWORDS: poverty fishing ordeal shanty children father injury
FOUND IN: West Indies(St Vincent)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Abrahams-DeepTheWaterShallowTheShore, pp. 114-117, "Sintali" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [39 words]: Abrahams quotes a blackfish whaler: "This shanty is about Sintali.... He could not get bait. But he insist that he must go fishing and get something for the children them. Have he cut off certain parts of his body, used as bait." - BS
Last updated in version 4.0
File: AWIS114

Sioux Indians, The [Laws B11]
DESCRIPTION: A train of white settlers is bound for Oregon. While on their way they are attacked by a band of Sioux. Outnumbered, the whites are nonetheless victorious and finish their journey
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910
KEYWORDS: Indians(Am.) battle settler
FOUND IN: US(Ap,Ro,So) Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (12 citations):
Laws B11, "The Sioux Indians"
Randolph 195, "The Indian Fighters" (1 text, 1 tune)
McNeil-SouthernFolkBalladsVol1, pp. 148-149, "The Indian Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol1, pp. 14-15, "The Indian Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 134, "Sioux Indians" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #156, "Sioux Indians" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 142-143, "(The Sioux Indians)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 179-181, "Sioux Indians" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 43, "Sioux Indians" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 155-156, "The Indian Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 487-488, "Sioux Indians" (1 text)
DT 379, SIOUXIND*

RECORDINGS:
Eugene Jemison, "Crossing the Plains" (on Jem01)
Alex Moore, "The Sioux Indians" (LC -------, 1940)
New Lost City Ramblers, "The Sioux Indians" (on NLCR14)
Cyril O’Brien, "Killing the Deer and the Wild Buffalo" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Pete Seeger, "Sioux Indians" (on PeteSeeger07, PeteSeeger07a, AmHist1)
Marc Williams, "Sioux Indians" (Brunswick 240, 1928) (Decca 5011, 1934; on BackSaddle)

NOTES [32 words]: Despite the title, the Jemison recording is not the same as the song we've called "Crossing the Plains," but is a version of "Sioux Indians," with the Kaw being substituted for the Sioux. - PJS

Last updated in version 5.1
File: LB11

Sir Aldingar [Child 59]

DESCRIPTION: Aldingar, spurned by the Queen, puts a (blind/drunken) leper in her bed and shows the king. She will be burned and the leper hanged. She finds a (child) champion who defeats Aldingar. He confesses. (The leper is made whole, becomes steward.)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1750 (Percy Folio)

KEYWORDS: royalty knight adultery trick disease reprieve

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (9 citations):
Child 59, "Sir Aldingar" (3 texts)
Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume I, pp. 165-171, "Sir Aldingar" (1 text)
Percy/Wheatley-ReliquesOfAncientEnglishPoetry II, pp. 54-67, "Sir Aldingar" (2 texts, one the original from the Percy folio and the other the retouched version in the _Reliques_)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 185-196, "Sir Aldingar" (2 texts)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 4, "Sir Aldingar" (1 text)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 163-167, "Sir Hugh le Blond" (1 text)
Morgan-MedievalBallads-ChivalryRomanceAndEverydayLife, pp. 108-114, "Sir Aldingar" (1 text)
DT 59, SIRALDGR

Roud #3969

NOTES [3216 words]: The single most important book about this ballad is probably still Paul Christophersen, _The Ballad of Sir Aldingar: Its Origin and Analogues_, cited in the bibliography. It includes texts of the English-language versions, translations of the Scandinavian versions, source notes, and comparisons to sundry romances. On the other hand, it gets so deeply into the weeds of just how a particular name moved from one language to another that it frankly often seems completely irrelevant to the English ballad. And many of its conclusions are based on Chambers and Entwistle, also cited in the bibliography. I have referred to the discussion of Chambers and Entwistle, rather than Christopherson, as far as I can.

One interesting point that Christopherson makes, on p. 109, is that "the modern British versions show no verbal resemblance to the Scandinavian ballad; but what is more remarkable, they show no mutual resemblance. I cannot find a single line or phrase which the two British versions may be said to have in common." This raises a genuine question of whether the two are truly one song or are merely two different framings of the same legend. Frankly, knowing the nature of the Percy Folio, I am very open to the latter latter: There was probably once a romance of Aldingar, which the Percy Folio cut down (as it did with almost every other romance it contains), and there is a ballad, "Sir Hugh le Blond," on the same theme but otherwise unrelated.

The strongest argument that they're the same, it seems to me, is just the number of ways they both differ from the European analogues of the song (discussed on p. 110 of Christopherson). A rather weak case for unity.... Fowler, p. 161, suggests that this ballad is based on a lost metrical romance, which agrees with my own thought (and, again, I suspect that the Percy Folio might be a cut-down version of it); it might well be that this was the case for the Scandinavian ballad as well, which would explain the similar plots but unrelated lyrics.

The theme of the calumniated queen, specifically the queen and a servant being falsely accused of familiarity, is Thompson K2121.2, and is surprisingly common, although Thompson lists only two items, Icelandic (idric's Saga) and Hawaiian. There is apparently a whole book on it by Margaret Schlauch, Chaucer's Constance and Accused Queens. Fellows, pp. xvi-xvii and note 52, observes it in the Middle English romances of "Sir Tryamowre/Tryamour," "Octavian," "Emare," and "Valentine and Orson." In the case of "Sir Tryamour," Hudson, p. 145, notes also the theme of a faithful dog which occurs in this ballad as well. (There is a version of "Sir Tryamore" in the Percy Folio; Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume II, pp. 78-135; MSPercyFolio, p. 210. A somewhat similar item in the Folio is "The Emperoure and the Childe; Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume II, pp. 390-399; MSPercyFolio, p. 314, but it would be hard to sing.)

Child connects this ballad with the story of Gunhild, wife of the Holy Roman Emperor Henry III (reigned 1039-1056). Certainly the Scandinavian analogues mostly feature a woman named Gunhild or something like it (Christophersen, p. 16). A certain superficial similarity may be granted. Gunhild (or Gunnhild, or Gunnhildr) was the daughter of King Canute (Cnut) and his more-official wife Emma of Normandy (see genealogy in O'Brien, p. viii). This made her the full sister of the future king Harthacanute (Har acnut, Hardacnut, etc. -- I'm going to stop with the alternate spellings now) and the half-sister of Swein and Harold I Harefoot, who were Canute's sons by his less official wife Aelgifu of Northampton. (Canute had married Aelgifu as his first wife, out of love or at least lust, then married Emma, the second wife and widow of the old king Ethelred II "the Unready" out of politics -- Canute was a conqueror, and marrying the old king's wife smoothed his way. But he did not set aside Aelgifu).

Interestingly, there was folklore that Emma of Normandy was also accused of infidelity and subjected to a trial by ordeal (walking through fire), and also proved her innocence (Christopherson, pp. 33-34). Child mentions this, and briefly refers to a (lost) song about it. Christopherson, p. 34, suggests that this is the piece cited in Piers Plowman, which contains the lyric "Dieu vous saue, Dame Emme," which might be another candidate for Earliest English Ballad (or, at least, Earliest Ballad in England), if only we had its text. The line in Piers Plowman is found at:

A text: Prologue, line 103 (so Langland/KnottFowler)
B text: Prologue, line 224 (so Langland/Bennett) or 225 (so Langland/Schmidt)
C text: Passus I, line 225 (according to Christopherson, p. 34)

There was ballad on Emma's ordeal sung in 1338 (Christopherson, p. 34; Langland/Bennett, p. 103). However, Langland/Schmidt, p. 413 says the song in Piers Plowman "may allude to the 'wise woman' Dame Emma of Shoreditch referred to in [Passus] XIII 339 rather than Cnut's virtuous queen. In neither case, of course, does it refer to Emma's daughter Gunhild.

We do not know when Gunhild was born, but it obviously must have been after Canute assumed the throne of England in 1016. This would make her no more than ten in 1027 when she went to Rome with her father. She may well have been much younger. But she was probably betrothed there to Henry, son of the Emperor Conrad II. It was a logical match; Canute, as King of England, Denmark, and Norway (O'Brien, p. xvii) was one of the strongest monarchs in Europe. The marriage may have helped seal a bargain; the Emperor ceded the province of Schleswig to Denmark at that time (Linklater, p. 139)

But the marriage had not yet taken place when Canute died in 1035. This led to a real mess in England; the presumably-official heir, Harthacanute, had been governing Denmark for his father, and while he succeeded at once to the Danish throne, his absence allowed Harold Harefoot to take the English throne (O'Brien, p. xix). Suddenly Gunhild, as the half-sister of the king rather than his daughter, was worth less in the marriage market. But, somehow or other, the marriage went... through (O'Brien, p. 169).
O'Brien, pp. 170-171, tells the rest: "According to William of Malmesbury, after a fairy-tale beginning Gunnhild's marriage went horribly wrong. Although she was reputedly a dutiful wife, Gunhild was accused of adultery. In William's story she was offered a chance to prove her innocence through man-to-man combat. [This although trial by combat reportedly was not allowed in English law at this time; Head, p. 77.]
"Gunnhild herself was not expected to participate; the informant of her alleged infidelity would take on a representative to fight on her behalf. The accuser, William claims, was a man of gigantic proportions and against this daunting individual Gunnhild could find no one willing to defend her except a small pageboy, who was the keeper of a pet starling she had brought with her from England. However... the pageboy won and, triumphant, Gunnhild refused ever to sleep with her husband, Henry, again. William writes that she subsequently divorced him, become a nun, and lived 'to a leisurely old age..."
She and Henry had stayed together long enough to have a daughter, Beatrice (Barlow, genealogical table I in endpapers), but the girl too ended up in the church (O'Brien, p. 171). The marital alliance by then hardly mattered anyway. Harold I Harefoot had died in 1040. Harthecanute had followed him on the throne, but died in 1042. Canute's dynasty was extinct (except for poor Gunhild, whom everyone apparently ignored). The English witan gave the throne to Edward the Confessor, the son of the old English king Ethelred II. Edward was the son of Emma, so he was Gunhild's half-brother -- but Emma was by this time pretty much forgotten; the link meant very little politically, and Edward the Confessor probably wasn't close to her personally. The similarities between Gunhild's story and the plot of this ballad are obvious, although we note that "Sir Aldingar" gives a motive for the accusation against the queen, while there seems to be none in the historical case.
Entwistle goes beyond even Child, ringing in William of Malmesbury's statement that a poem about this event circulated in England in his time (twelfth century):
"William of Malmesbury states definitively that a poem about Canute's daughter Gunhild, falsely accused before her husband the Emperor Henry III [emperor 1039-1057] and unexpectedly delivered, was 'nostris adhuc in triviis cantitata' (c. 1140). Brompton (c. 1350) names her accuser and defender, Roddyngar and Mimicon; Matthew of Westminster gives us Mimecian. There is no doubt that these references are to a poem of traditional nature and content identical with the ballad of Sir Aldingar" (quoted by Chambers, p. 154; Cristopherson, p. 31, also seems to think several chroniclers referred to a ballad even if William did not). On p. vii of his revised volume, Entwistle draws a specific comparison of three versions, Middle English, Danish, and this ballad, arguing that the "Sir Aldingar" names came about because the king was identified as Henry II of England. In the Middle English version, the king is Emperor Henry III, in Spire; the accused is Gunhild daughter of Canute; the accuser is the giant Roddyngar, and the defender is a boy, Munecon/Mimecan. In the Danish, the equivalents are Duke Henrik the Lion, Gunhild (in Spire, Ravengaard/Raadengaard), and Mimering. In two English versions the king is always Henry II, the woman is either Elinor (Eleanor of Aquitaine) or just "Queen", the accuser is Sir Aldingar or Roddingham, and the defender is a little child or Sir Hugh le Blond. Cristopherson, p. 17, points out that it was Percy who first connected the "Eleanor" of "Sir Aldingar" with Gunhild, claiming that Gunhild was somewhere called "Eleanor." Christopherson counters that he has nowhere found Gunhild called "Eleanor."
Entwistle also mentions the account of Matthew Paris, who says that accounts of this wedding feast were still circulating in his time, another three quarters of a century after William of Malmesbury (Entwistle, p. viii; Keen, p. 34). About this Chambers is scathing: "But surely there could be no more gratuitous hypothesis than an assumption that a poem which, like Sir Aldingar, comes to us from the Percy MS. of about 1650 can be identical in style with one known to William of Malmesbury in the twelfth century." This is especially so since the English language changed dramatically between the reign of Canute and the time of the Percy manuscript -- the writer of the folio simply would not have understood the Old English poem. Chambers grants that there may be similar legends as the source. Fowler, p. 61 n. 31, follows Nygard in also regarding this assumption as extremely dubious. Despite Entwistle's categorical statement (p. viii) that "These are not conjectures," I am not absolutely convinced even of the existence of those legends, although I grant the possibility; the similarity in names seen by Entwistle is certainly interesting. Entwistle adds that "the story of Gunnhild and Roddyngar was (1) performed popularly as a sung tale with musical accompaniment" (which in his definition makes it a ballad, although in mine it makes it a minstrel piece); he points out that the accounts also tell of Gunhild's vindication in a trial by battle and that it spoke of her splendid wedding. The Danish downplays the wedding but adds another motif, the champions' choice of swords. It is at this point that Entwistle makes his Big Conjecture, that the Middle English source which the chroniclers describe, but which is no longer extant, is of ballad proportions and in ballad style. I would consider this too much hypothesis, as is his suggestion that his listeners would have liked the David-versus-Goliath motif because the English felt oppressed by the Normans. Still, accusations of unchastity against wives are not rare -- witness the fact that the Bible prescribes a trial by ordeal for women accused of hidden adultery (Numbers 5:11-31) -- almost the only instance in the Bible of guilt being assigned without actual evidence. Julius Caesar divorced one of his wives on mere suspicion of adultery (Langguth, p. 137). There are dozens of adultery ballads. The number of Scandinavian analogs to this piece cited by Child proves that there is no necessary dependence -- there are too many possible sources for something like this, including even the King Arthur legend. And the charge of adultery levied against one who will not commit adultery goes back at least to the story of Joseph and Potiphar's Wife in Genesis 39. Plus Chaucer has something similar in the "Man of Law's Tale" (LindahlEtAl, p. 4).

Indeed, the whole story of Gunhild is considered a standard folklore type, usually known as "The Accused Queen" or "The Maiden Without Hands" (LindahlEtAl, p. 4); it is Thompson type AT 706. (This is to be distinguished from the individual motif of The Calumniated Queen.) Ranke, p. 212, reports versions from "the Orient, West Asia, India, Japan, North Africa, and South and North America," and compares it with the tales of Crescencia, Hildegardis, Florentia, Sibylla, Genofeva, Helena, Violetta, Hilranda, and Octovianus -- although I have to say that many of these versions, including that on pp. 84-89 of Ranke, bear very little resemblance to either Gunhild or the story in Sir Aldingar.

Zipes, p. 26, says that the motifs often come from "Byzantine and Greek tales and Medieval legends. There is some connection to the marriage customs in the pre-Hellenistic period. Other important sources are the legend of the famous eighth century king Offa, John Gower's Confessio Amantis, written in the fourteenth century, and Geoffrey Chaucer's Canterbury Tales." Many of these links, however, are to the incest motif, not the trial motif, and I assume the link to the Canterbury Tales is to the Clerk's Tale, where the queen is degraded but without cause.

The use of a champion is historical -- and sometimes required by law. In the Angevin period (well after Canute's time, but well before the Percy Folio was written) it was even rather normal in certain types of cases: "Trials in cases of right was theoretically by battle. The demandant could not fight his own battle, unlike in criminal cases: he had to be represented by someone supposedly a witness to the basis of his claim. The defendant could have a champion; professional champions were disapproved of in the twelfth century but were common in the thirteenth" (Mortimer, p. 58). Thus the idea represented in this song could fit the era of William of Malmsbury -- or be rather later.

Nor are boy-champions unusual; we see a sort of twisted parallel in "The Boy and the Mantle" [Child 29]. But the whole business is so obscure that not even Gunhild's mother Emma, in her self-justifying book, mentions the poor girl (O'Brien, p. 124).

If there is a historical connection, it has been heavily distorted, because (to repeat) the king and queen in "Sir Aldingar" are Henry and Eleanor (either Henry II or England and Eleanor of Aquitaine, or Henry III and Eleanor of Provence). And, as Chambers points out on p. 157, William of Malmsbury was dead before even Henry II took the throne. One suspects, as Entwistle hints, that the tale was attracted to Henry II and Eleanor of Aquitaine because of the accusations (probably false) that Eleanor was unfaithful. (For this, see the notes to "Queen Eleanor's Confession" [Child 156]).

Nor was Gunhild's story well-known in England. The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, the primary source for English history at this time, never mentions Emperor Henry III by that name, although there are a few references to "the Emperor" in this period, and two manuscripts of the Chronicle mention his death in 1057, using his other name "Cona" (Swanton, pp. 186-187). Gunhild daughter of Cnut is not mentioned at all in the Chronicle (at least based on the index in Swanton and some online searches). There is a brief mention of Gunhild the niece of Cnut, daughter of an unnamed sister of that King by Wytgeorn king of the Wends (Barlow, genealogical table II in endpapers); Swanton, p. 157 note 15, says that her uncle sent her into exile because he feared her husband was conspiring against him; Barlow, p. 57, while agreeing that she was exiled, more logically dates this to the reign of Edward the Confessor in 1044 (since Edward the Confessor would fear a revival of Cnut's lineage).

Conclusion: While this story might possibly have its roots in the tale of Gunhild and Henry III, there are plenty of other sources from which such a tale might be assembled. If I had to suggest one source, it would be the Middle English romance of "Octavian." This derives from an Old French original, and was popular enough to have been translated twice. This gives us an English source, much more recent than the tale of Gunhild.
The parallels to Sir Aldingar are not complete, but they are substantial; "Octavian" features an accusation of adultery and a pretend lover falsely slipped into a lady's bed. For a text of the better-known of the English translations, see Mills, p. 75, or Hudson, p. 39 (the latter slightly more modernized than the former). Christopherson also discusses it on pp. 39-40, 147-149. Christopherson cites many other parallels, English, Scandinavian, and (occasionally) otherwise. I think most of these are pushing it. In almost all cases, they have a Calumniated Queen Saved by a Champion section, but they almost all contain something else, too. The relationship between all these pieces is not literary; it's just that they all make use of a particular folklore motif -- one that goes back in part to the Biblical/Apocryphal tale of Susannah (in the Additions to Daniel, so it's not canonical to Protestants, but it was very popular with Catholics), so the fact that it's widespread doesn't need much explanation! I observed that linkage myself, before I read Christopherson, but he points out "The fact that the story of Susanna is centuries earlier than other treatments of the theme seems to me never to have been sufficiently stressed by writers on the subject of accused queens" (Christoperson, p. 114). He points out that that theme was also the topic of a Middle English writing attributed to "Huchown" (p. 115), although Huchown (who has been suggsted, e.g., as the author of "Sir Gawain and the Green Knight") is a very shadowy figure. Despite the obscenity of "Sir Aldingar" itself, great things have been claimed for it -- Fowler, p. 172, suggests that "echoes" of it are found in "Glasgerion" [Child 67], "Old Robin of Portingale" [Child 80], "Child Maurice" [Child 83], and "Little Musgrave and Lady Barnard" [Child 81]. Of course, all of those pieces except "Little Musgrave" are pretty obscure themselves. - RBW

Bibliography

- Barlow: Frank Barlow, Edward the Confessor (one of the English Monarchs series), University of California Press, 1970.
- Chambers: E. K. Chambers, English Literature at the Close of the Middle Ages, Oxford, 1945, 1947
- Entwistle: William J. Entwistle, European Balladry, Oxford University Press, 1939; corrected second impression with a new prefatory note 1951
- Head: Victor Head, Hereward, Alan Sutton Publishing Ltd., 1995
- Hudson: Harriet Hudson, Four Middle English Romances: Sir Isumbras, Octavian, Sir Eglamour of Artois, Sir Tryamour, second edition, TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2006. Much of the material in this book is also available online
- LindahlEtAl: Carl Lindahl, John McNamara, and John Lindow, editors, Medieval Folklore: A Guide to Myths, Legends, Tales, Beliefs, and Customs, 2000 (I use the 2002 one-volume paperback edition)
- O'Brien: Harriet O'Brien, Queen Emma and the Vikings, Bloomsbury, 2005
- Ranke: Kurt Ranke, editor, Folktales of Germany, translated by Lotte Baumann and with a foreword by Richard M. Dorson, University of Chicago Press, 1966
Sir Andrew Barton [Child 167]

DESCRIPTION: Merchants complain to the King that their trade is being disrupted. The King sends a crew to deal with Barton, the pirate. After a difficult battle marked by great courage and skill on both sides, Barton is defeated and killed.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1723; a song with this name was in William Thackeray's broadside catalog by 1690

KEYWORDS: sailor sea battle nobility pirate

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

1509-1547 - Reign of Henry VII (mentioned as king in some texts of the ballad)

FOUND IN: US(MA,NE,NW,SE)

REFERENCES (21 citations):

- Child 167, "Sir Andrew Barton" (2 texts)
- Bronson 167, "Sir Andrew Barton" (10 versions)
- Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 167, "Sir Andrew Barton" (3 versions: #2, #5b, #8)
- Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume III, pp. 399-417, "Sir Andrew Barton" (1 text)
- Percy/Wheatley-ReliquesOfAncientEnglishPoetry II, pp. 188-207, "Sir Andrew Barton" (3 texts, one from the folio manuscript and the other the completely rewritten version in the _Reliques_)
- Ritson-AncientSongsBalladsFromHenrySecondToTheRevolution, pp. 323-331, "Sir Andrew Barton" (1 text)
- Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-BritishBalladsFromMaine pp. 248-258, "Andrew Barton" (3 texts); p. 483 (1 tune) {Bronson's #9}
- Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland4, pp. 15-44, "Sir Andrew Barton" "but including Henry Martyn" (11 texts plus a fragment, 10 tunes; in every text but "L," the robber is Andrew Bardeen or something like that, but many of the texts appear more Henry Martin-like) {K=Bronson's #2 tune for Child #167; B=#46, C=#31 for Child #250}
- Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 467-475, "Sir Andrew Barton" (1 text)
- Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 348, "Sir Andrew Barton" (1 text)
- Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 2, "Sir Andrew Barton" (1 text, 2 tunes; the text is composite and neither tune direct associated with it; #2 in the first edition)
- Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 130, "Sir Andrew Barton" (1 text)
- Gummere-OldEnglishBallads, pp. 130-141+329-331, "Sir Andrew Barton" (1 text)
- Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN2850, "When Flora with her fragrant flowere"
- DT 167, ANDBART" HENRMRT4*
- Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #1621
- DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #2714

ADDITIONAL: Karin Boklund-Lagopolou, _I have a yong suster: Popular song and Middle English lyric_, Four Courts Press, 2002, pp. 181-190, "(Sir Andrew Barton)" (1 text)
- Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; notes to #418, ("But when hee saw his sisters sonne slaine") (1 long but incomplete text)

MANUSCRIPT: York Minster MS., number unknown (lost since at least 1890)

Roud #192

CROSS-REFERENCES:

- cf. "Henry Martyn" [Child 250] (plot, lyrics)

SAME TUNE:

My bleeding heart, with grief and care/A Warning to all Lewd Livers (Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex
As I lay musing all alone, Great store of things I thought upon

Sir Andrew Barton from "Henry Martyn"; the pirates' names exchange freely, and the basic plot is similar. What is more, the ballads have clearly exchanged elements, especially in America, where mixed versions are the rule. Child did not have to contend with this.

In Child, the basic distinction might almost appear to be length; the versions of "Andrew Barton" are 82 and 64 stanzas, while the texts of "Henry Martyn" do not exceed 13 stanzas. Thus the former looks more literary and the latter more popular. In addition, there are hints of historical background in "Andrew Barton" (e.g. Ritson-AncientSongsBalladsFromHenrySecondToTheRevolution says that it describes an event of 1511), though much distorted. Still, it is best to check both ballads for a particular version.

See the notes to "Henry Martin" for a summary of opinions on the issue.

The original Andrew Barton is probably historical. Williamson, p. 77, says "The Earl of Oxford had long been lord Admiral, but the office was legal and administrative and not combatant, and Oxford did not go to sea. Henry, with a view to finding a successor with sea experience, picked out the two young Howards, Thomas and Edward, sons of the Earl of Surrey, and sent them to sea in 1511 to bring to account Sir Andrew Barton, a Scottish officer whose piracies were the complaint of English merchants. Barton was a servant of James IV and a commander of the new Scottish navy. The Howards fought and killed him and added his two privateers as prizes to Henry's fleet."

Rodger, p. 169, gives a different account of how the battle came about; "There had been several incidents of hostility [between Scotland and England], notably in June 1511 when the Lord Admiral of England, Sir Edward Howard, escorting a convoy to Zealand, accidentally encountered and killed the Scottish pirate Andrew Barton."

Additional information about Barton can be found in Child. As for Edward Howard, note that his father Surrey was the man who, two years later, fought and won the Battle of Flodden (and was given back his Dukedom of Norfolk as a reward). The Lord Howard who led the English fleet against the Spanish Armada was also a member of this family.

Broadsides about the event, which one might suspect of being the ancestor of this ballad, go back to the early seventeenth century. Rollins has three candidates:
- p. 213, #2454, "Sir Andrew Barton," registered June 1, 1629
- p. 213, #2453, "Sir Andrew Barton Revived," registered July 16, 1634 by Jno. Wright and partners
- p. 236, #2731, "A true relacon of the life and death of S(i)r A. Barton," registered March 13, 1656
- p. 195, #2255, "A relacon of the life and death of S(i)r A. Barton," registered March 1, 1675

Many American texts refer to Barton fighting a Captain Charles Stuart (replacing the Lord Howard of earlier versions -- "Howard" being a reasonable name, even apart from the Barton battle cited above, since Earl Howard of Norfolk was Admiral of England at the time of the battle with the Armada). Gordon thinks this Charles Stuart was Bonnie Prince Charlie, but Barry et al point to the American Charles Stewart (1778-1869) who commanded the U. S. S. Constitution at the end of the War of 1812. - RBW

Bibliography

Last updated in version 5.3

File: C167

Sir Cawline [Child 61]

DESCRIPTION: Sir Cawline falls ill for love of the king's daughter; she attends him. He desires to prove himself worthy of her; she sends him to vanquish the elvish king. He then defeats a giant threatening to wed her, and survives a lion attack before marrying her.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1750 (Percy folio); the text of "Sir Collyne," in Scotland National Archive MS. H13/35 is dated c. 1583 by Lyle
KEYWORDS: courting disease royalty knight battle marriage
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (11 citations):
Child 61, "Sir Cawline" (3 texts, 1 tune) {Bronson's #1}
Bronson 61, "Sir Cawline" (2 versions, but #2 is "King Malcolm and Sir Colvin")
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 61, "Sir Cawline" (1 version: #1)
Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume III, pp. 1-15, "Sir Cawline" (1 text)
Percy/Wheatley-ReliquesOfAncientEnglishPoetry I, pp. 61-81, "Sir Cawline" (1 text)
Lyle/McAlpine/McLucas-SongRepertoireOfAmeliaAndJaneHarris, pp. 12-17, "Sir Colin" (2 texts, 1 tune) {Bronson's #1, with differences}
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 3, "Sir Cawline" (1 text)
DT 61, SIRCAWL*
ADDITIONAL: Emily Lyle, _Fairies and Folk: Approaches to the Scottish Ballad Tradition_, Wissenschaftlicher Verlag Trier, 2007, pp. 85-93, "(Sir Colin)" (2 parallel texts, one the Percy text, one the "Edinburgh" version of c. 1583, plus on pp. 104-105a collation of Lyle's transcription of the Edinburgh text against Stewart's; the Harris tune is on p. 943)
Rhiannon Purdie, _Shorter Scottish Medieval Romances: Florimond of Albany, Sir Colling the Knight, King Orphius, Roswall and Lillian_, Scottish Text Society, Fifth Sieries, No. 11, 2013, pp. 241-248, "Sir Cawline" (1 text); pp. 104-111, "Sir Colling the Knycht" (1 text)
Roud #479
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "King Malcolm and Sir Colvin" (derivative, some lines, plot)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Sir Collyne
Sir Colling
NOTES [901 words]: According to David C. Fowler, _A Literary History of the Popular Ballad_, Duke University Press, 1968, p. 158 n. 25, this is one of eighteen ballads in the Child collection found only in the Percy Folio. That's perhaps a little oversimplified; the only copy of this that Child accepted as real is that in the Percy Folio (which Percy thoroughly corrupted), though Child prints two texts ("Sir Collin" and "King Malcolm and Sir Colvin," from the Harris ms. and Buchan respectively) in an appendix.
Percy's modifications to the text are so thorough that the 210 lines of the Percy manuscript are made into 392 lines in his text. Percy is even responsible for giving the heroine the name "Christabelle"; in the folio text, she is nameless.
Based on Child's notes, it would seem that this song was never traditional as we would define the term; all the later versions were derived from the literary text as reworked by Percy. Bronson, however, pointed out that the Harris version was found in tradition, even if the text was influenced by Percy (Bronson adds that the result is in many ways simpler and superior to the Percy text; it also has a different ending). It seems that there were folk revivals before The Folk Revival. Also, the "Sir Colling" text, found in the 1970s, shows that the piece had a substantial history even before the Percy Folio text was written.
It appears (paraphrasing and expanding comments by Lyle, p. 93) that this ballad existed in two states: A full form, in which Sir Cawline/Colin/Colling fights an "elvish knight," a giant, and a lion; this is represented in the Percy and Edinburgh texts. There is also a short form, in the Buchan and Harris texts, in which the fight with the knight is the only major escapade. Although Child considered the long form to be the true version and relegated the other to the appendix, Lyle, pp. 93-94, suggests treating the long form as a "ballad romance" -- a strange term but not an unreasonable suggestion. Given the frequent connections between ballad and romance, a semi-literary origin seems likely.
I am less confident of Lyle's next stage, which consists of trying to identify and retrovert cases where original six-line stanzas were converted to four-line stanzas; it is her belief that the original "Sir Colin" romance was in six-line stanzas rhymed abcbdb and with a 434343 metrical pattern (Lyle, pp. 96-99). It takes an almost Percy-esque amount of fiddling to get there, though.
Purdie goes so far as to treat the Edinburgh text of "Sir Cawline/Colling" as a full-blown, if short, romance, and is much less confident of Lyle's complex suggestions. I too wonder if Lyle has been too ambitious. Purdie goes on to suggest that "Sir Cawline" itself is a derivative item, having elements in common with the well-known romance "Sir Eglamour of Artois" (which is also connected with "Sir Lionel" [Child 18]. This connection is also mentioned on p. xlv of Frances E. Richardson, editor, Sir Eglamour of Artois, Early English Text Society/Oxford University Press, 1965; for more details for "Sir Eglamour," see the notes to "Sir Lionel"). Also, "Sir Cawline" shares the slaying of an Elvish knight with the romance of "Eger and Grime," and even uses some of the same lyrics. Thus there is a real possibility that "Sir Cawline" is a derivative tale.

Which raises another interesting question. The Percy Folio has several cut-down romances -- that is, items which exist as a full-blown Middle English romance but which also have a shorter form in the folio. Examples of this include the romances of "Eger and Grime," "Guio of Warwick," "Sir Gawain and the Carle of Carlisle," the various "Marriage of Sir Gawain"-type romances, and "The Squire of Low Degree." Could "Sir Colling/Cawline" be a cut down form of something else, and are the short forms a further shortening of "Sir Colling," or of the hypothetical original romance, or of something else? It may be time to give this ballad another hard look.

There is another interesting point about Child's text, which is that he chopped off the first two verses of the Percy Folio version, regarding them as part of another ballad which referred to Robert Bruce. But this material is in the "Sir Colling" text, except that it refers to Robert Bruce's brother Edward and his invasion of Ireland ("Vith Edvaird the Bruce he fui for fecht /In Irland byond the sie" -- lines 9-10 on p. 104 of Purdie). This implies that the lyrics are original to the ballad, and that on this point at least "Sir Colling" is more correct than the Percy version (since Edward, not Robert, invaded Ireland). But it also gives us a date: Edward Bruce went to Ireland in 1315, and died there in 1318. Purdie suggests, therefore (p. 19), that "Sir Colling" is one of the various Colin Campbells, and that this is a sort of Campbell Family romance. Which makes some sense to me; some minstrel made it up for the Campbells of Argyll.

Purdie, p. 21, points out that the language of "Sir Colling," which seems to be the oldest copy, is much too modern for a fourteenth century event. This strikes me as further evidence that the piece was a latter attempt to glorify the early Campbells. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: C061

Sir Francis Drake, or Eighty-Eight

DESCRIPTION: "In eighty-eight, ere I was born, As I can well remember, In August was a fleet prepared, The month before September." Spain and allies prepare an "Armado." They fail. "If they come again, a, They shall be served with that same sauce."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1841 (Halliwell, Early Naval Ballads of England, according to Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs)

KEYWORDS: navy battle food

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

1558-1603 - Reign of Elizabeth (I)

1588 - Voyage of the Spanish Armada

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 7, "Sir Francis Drake, or Eighty-Eight" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #22269

NOTES [25 words]: Palmer thinks this has been damaged by oral tradition. I wonder if it wasn't intended to be funny. It's certainly rather silly as it now stands. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.4

File: PaSe007

Sir Hugh, or, The Jew's Daughter [Child 155]

DESCRIPTION: A child tosses the ball into a Jew's/Gypsy's garden. The Jew's daughter/wife lures him into the house, where she murders him, (for ritual purposes?). Dying, he gives instructions for his burial (with a prayer book at his head and a grammar at his feet).

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1765 (Percy)

KEYWORDS: homicide death ritual Gypsy Jew lastwill burial
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber,Bord),England(All)) Ireland US(Ap,MA,MW,NE,Ro,SE,So) Canada(Mar) West Indies(Bahamas)
REFERENCES (61 citations):
Child 155, "Sir Hugh, or, The Jew's Daughter" (21 texts)
Bronson 155, "Sir Hugh, or, The Jew's Daughter" (66 versions)
Bronson-Singing Tradition Of Child's Popular Ballads 155, "Sir Hugh, or, The Jew's Daughter" (7 versions: #1, #4, #5, #10b, #21, #25, #28)
Percy/Wheatley-Reliques Of Ancient English Poetry I, pp. 54-60, "The Jew's Daughter" (1 text)
Bell-Combined-Early Ballads-Customs Ballads Songs Peasantry England, pp. 189-91, "The Jew's Daughter" (1 text)
Broadwood/Maitland-English County Songs, p. 86, "Little Sir William" (1 text, 1 tune)
Riewerts-Ballad Repertoire Of Anna Gordon-Mrs Brown Of Falkland, pp. 254-255, "Hugh of Lincoln" (1 text)
Lyle-Andrew-Crawfurd's Collection Volume I 10, "Sir Hugh" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reeves-The Everlasting Circle 121, "Sir Hugh" (1 text)
Roud/Bishop-New Penguin Book Of English Folk Songs #119, "Hugh of Lincoln" (1 text, 1 tune)
Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-British Ballads From Maine pp. 461-462, "Sir Hugh, or The Jew's Daughter" (notes plus an excerpt from Child A)
Belden-Ballads Songs Collected By Missour Folklore Society, pp. 69-73, "Sir Hugh, or, The Jew's Daughter" (2 texts plus a fragment)
Randolph 25, "The Jew's Garden" (3 texts plus a fragment, 1 tune) {Bronson's #38}
Randolph/Cohen-Ozark Folk Songs-Abridged, pp. 47-49, "The Jew's Garden" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 25A) {Bronson's #38}
Arnold-Folk Songs of Alabama, pp. 42-43, "It Rained, It Mist" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #45}
Moore/Moore-Ballads And Folk Songs Of The Southwest 33, "The Jew's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)
Eddy-Ballads And Songs From Ohio 20, "Sir Hugh, or, The Jew's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)
{Bronson's #48}
Grimes-Stories From The Anne Grimes Collection, p. 30, "It Rained a Mist" (1 text)
Peters-Folk Songs Out Of Wisconsin, pp. 198-199, "'Twas On a Cold and Winter's Day" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #9}
Flanders/Olney-Ballad Migrant In New England, pp. 30-32, "Little Harry Huston" (1 text, 1 tune)
{Bronson's #66}
Flanders-Ancient Ballads Traditionally Sung In New England 3, pp. 119-126, "Sir Hugh, or The Jew's Daughter" (2 texts, 2 tunes) {A=Bronson's #66; B=#65 with verbal variants}
Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Berry-New Green Mountain Songster, pp. 254-256, "The Jew's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #65, with minor variants}
Davis-Traditional Ballads Of Virginia 33, "Sir Hugh, or The Jew's Daughter" (13 texts, 7 tunes entitled "The Jew's Daughter," "It Rained a Mist," "A Little Boy Threw His Ball So High," "Sir Hugh, or Little Harry Hughes," "Sir Hugh"; 3 more versions mentioned in Appendix A) {Bronson's #39, #54, #3, #34, #6, #47, #53}
Davis-More Traditional Ballads Of Virginia 30, pp. 229-238, "Sir Hugh, or The Jew's Daughter" (4 texts, 4 tunes)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-Frank C. Brown Collection NCFolklore 2 34, "Sir Hugh; or, The Jew's Daughter" (4 texts)
Brown/Schinhan-Frank C. Brown Collection NCFolklore 4 34, "Sir Hugh, or, The Jew's Daughter" (2 excerpts, 2 tunes)
Smith-South Carolina Ballads, #XI, pp. 148-150, "Sir Hugh, or, The Jew's Daughter (The Two Playmates)" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #52}
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, pp. 258-259, "The Jeweler's Daughter" (1 text)
Morris-Folk Songs Of Florida, #165, "Sir Hugh, or, The Jew's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #11}
Hudson-Folksongs Of Mississippi 19, pp. 116-117, "Sir Hugh, or, The Jew's Daughter" (1 short text, lacking the actual murder)
Burton/Manning-East Tennessee State Collection Vol 1, pp. 1-2, "Little Son Hugh" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scarborough-ASong Catcher In Southern Mountains, pp. 171-175, "Sir Hugh, or, The Jew's Daughter" (3 texts, the first also in Davis, with local titles "A Little Boy Threw His Ball So High," "Little Sir Hugh," "Hugh of Lincoln"; 1 tune on p. 403) {Bronson's #3}
Scarborough-On The Trail Of Negro Folk Songs, pp. 53-55, "A Little Boy Threw His Ball" (2 texts, 1 tune) {Bronson's #3}
Brewster-Ballads And Songs Of Indiana 18, "Sir Hugh" (3 texts, 1 tune) {Bronson's #44}
Leach-The Ballad Book, pp. 425-431, "Sir Hugh, or, The Jew's Daughter" (4 texts)
Korson—Pennsylvania Songs and Legends, pp. 36-38, "Fair Scotland" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #61}
Creighton—Songs and Ballads from Nova Scotia 8, "Sir Hugh; or The Jew's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #2}
McNeil—Southern Folk Ballads Vol. 2, pp. 147-149, "Sonny Hugh" (1 text, 1 tune)
Friedman—Viking/Penguin Book of Folk Ballads, p. 62, "Sir Hugh (The Jew's Daughter)" (3 texts)
Quiller—Couch—Oxford Book of Ballads 79, "Hugh of Lincoln and The Jew's Daughter" (1 text)
Sharp—English Folk Songs from Southern Appalachians 31, "Sir Hugh" (7 texts plus 3 fragments, of which "I" in particular might be something else, 10 tunes) {Bronson's #22, #20, #21, #23, #15, #10a, #16, #14, #8, #17}
Sharp—One Hundred English Folksongs 8, "Little Sir Hugh" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax—Folk Songs of North America 273, "The Queen's Garden" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gummere—Old English Ballads, pp. 164-166+336, "Sir Hugh" (1 text)
Sharp/Karpeles—Eighty English Folk Songs 20, "Little Son Hugh (Sir Hugh)" (1 slightly edited text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #10}
Hodgart—Faber Book of Ballads, p. 70, "Sir Hugh (The Jew's Daughter)" (1 text)
Buchan—A Book of Scottish Ballads 22, "Sir Hugh" (1 text)
Cox—Folk Songs from the West Virginia Hills, Vol. 14, "Sir Hugh, or The Jew's Daughter" (6 texts plus mentions of 8 more)
Gainer—Folk Songs from the West Virginia Hills, pp. 68-69, "The Duke's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)
MacColl/Seeger—Travellers Songs from England and Scotland 14, "Sir Hugh" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Whitelaw—Book of Scottish Ballads, pp. 30-31, "The Jew's Daughter" (1 text)
Harvard Classics—English Poetry from Chaucer to Gray, pp. 81-83, "Hugh of Lincoln" (1 text)
Pound—American Ballads and Songs, 5, pp. 13-14, "The Jewish Lady"; p. 15, "The Jew Lady" (2 texts)
Hubbard—Ballads and Songs from Utah, #11, "Little Saloo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Newell—Games and Songs of American Children, #18, "Little Harry Hughes and the Duke's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling—New American Songster, pp. 36-40, "Sir Hugh, or the Jew's Daughter"; "The Fatal Flower Garden"; "It Rained a Mist" (3 texts)
Journal of American Folklore, Elsie Clewes Parsons, "Spirituals and Other Folklore from the Bahamas," Vol. 41, No. 162 (Oct-Dec 1928), Toasts and other verses: Watlings p. 470, "Dere is many fine ladies" (1 text)
North Carolina Folklore Journal, Walter McCraw, "A Variant of 'Sir Hugh,'" Vol. VII, No. 1 (Jul 1959), pp. 35-36, "(It rained a mess, it rained a mess)" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 155, SIRHUGH1* SIRHUGH1* SIRHUGH2* SIRHUGH3
ADDITIONAL: Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #420, "Sir Hugh, or The Jew's Daughter" (1 text)
ST C155 (Full)
Roud #73
RECORDINGS:
John Byrne, "Little Sir Hugh" (on IREarlyBallads)
Cecilia Costello, "The Jew's Daughter (Sir Hugh)" (on FSB5 [as "The Jew's Garden"], FSBBAL2) {Bronson's #55}
{Mrs.?] Ollie Gilbert, "It Rained a Mist" (on LomaxCD1707) {Bronson's #35}
Nelstone's Hawaiians, "Fatal Flower Garden" (Victor 40193, 1929; on AAFM1) {Bronson's #12}
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Twa Brothers" [Child 49] (lyrics)
NOTES [3161 words]: A.L. Lloyd reports, "In 1225, in Lincoln, England, a boy named Hugh was supposed to have been tortured and murdered by Jews. A pogrom ensued." - PJS
Although this song is often associated with the murder of Hugh, Fowler, p. 259, says -- correctly, I think -- "It seems to me quite unlikely, however, that such a ballad could have lasted in tradition for five hundred years leaving no trace of its existence, only to emerge suddenly from obscurity with the publication of [Percy's] Reliques in 1765." Fowler seems to think the ballad an eighteenth century composition (on p. 260, he suggests "The Cruel Mother" [Child 20] as the primary model, with "Sweet William's Ghost" [Child 77] supplying much of the second half); I wouldn't go that far, but I think any connection to the thirteenth century Hugh quite indirect. Fowler, p. 268, suggests that the initial tune was "The Bitter Withy," even though the first collection of "Sir Hugh" is much older. I grant that "The Bitter Withy" is almost certainly far older than the first collection, so the timing probably works, but all of this depends on "Sir Hugh" being a fake.
Assumed it was blasphemous. Jesus. According to McLynn, p. 120, the Jews were bringing a gift to the new king, but the mob (Gillingham, p. 131, who blames the Crusade for whipping up passions about the Jews killing crusade, including an incident when 150 were killed at York, some of them after surrendering earlier, there had been major anti-Jewish riots in the period when Richard I was preparing his subsidies as a result (Morris, p. 228).

And all so that he could go on Crusade and fight the people who belonged to yet a third religion. It not only harmed the Jews, it created unfortunate knock-on effects in the financial system. When Edward I came to the throne, he destroyed the livelihood of many of the Jews by forbidding moneylending -- theoretically opening other jobs to them, but not supporting the change (Morris, p. 85). His father had also put Jews in a bad position by allowing unscrupulous barons to buy up loans and foreclose them, in effect stealing land at bargain prices (Morris, p. 87).

Unfortunately the Jews did not respond, and succeeded in charging even higher rates than before, and also formed a ring for clipping the coinage.... Adding to the economic difficulties [blamed on the Jews]... was a series of most sinister crimes committed against Christian children, including murder (allegedly ritual) and forcible circumcision. Whatever we may think of the evidence in favour of 'ritual murder'... a number of instances of mysterious child-murder undoubtedly did occur in twelfth- and thirteenth-century England, at least ten being well-documented between 1144 and 1290.

The evidence against individual Jews was considered conclusive in the case of Hugh of Lincoln (Little Saint Hugh), murdered in 1255, when, after exhaustive trials before the justices, later adjourned before Henry III in person, certain Jews were convicted and hanged."

But also consider Prestwich, pp. 345-346: "There was undoubtedly very considerable prejudice against the Jews in England. There were stories of ritual child-murder and torture, which, although they now appear groundless on the basis of the recorded evidence, were generally believed. The most famous was that of the death of Little St Hugh in 1255, but there were others. The chronicle of Bury St. Edmunds recorded the crucifixion of a boy by the Jews at Northampton." (Rather absurd, since crucifixion was a Roman, not a Jewish, means of execution.)

Prestwich's cautions are quite proper -- there were only a few thousand Jews in England at the time (Prestwich, p. 344, estimates 3000; Morris, p. 86, suggests 5000); they could hardly have committed all the crimes charged against them. Despite that, they suffered severely at the hands of Edward I, being charged (along with goldsmiths) with being coin-clippers in 1278 (Prestwich, p. 245; Morris, p. 171, believes that Edward killed half the male Jews in England at the time). Indeed, Edward I had gone after the Jews even before he became king in 1272; in the late 1260s, as he was trying to raise money for a crusade, he proposed anti-Jewish legislation as a fundraising method (Morris, p. 85). His father had also put Jews in a bad position by allowing unscrupulous barons to buy up loans and foreclose them, in effect stealing land at bargain prices (Morris, p. 87). It not only harmed the Jews, it created unfortunate knock-on effects in the financial system. When Edward came to the throne, he destroyed the livelihood of many of the Jews by forbidding moneylending -- theoretically opening other jobs to them, but not supporting the change (Morris, pp. 125-126, who thinks Edward tried to protect the Jews, but I see no sign of it). Then he expelled them in 1290; the order, sent July 18, said they had to be gone by November 1: "For what was very definitely the final time, the Jews were made to pay the price for the King of England's insolvency" (Morris, p. 227). Bigoted as it was, the rest of the people liked it, and voted Edward generous subsidies as a result (Morris, p. 228).

And all so that he could go on Crusade and fight the people who belonged to yet a third religion. Earlier, there had been major anti-Jewish riots in the period when Richard I was preparing his crusade, including an incident when 150 were killed at York, some of them after surrendering (Gillingham, p. 131, who blames the Crusade for whipping up passions about the Jews killing Jesus. According to McLynn, p. 120, the Jews were bringing a gift to the new king, but the mob assumed it was blasphemous).
If a Jewish murder of a Christian did happen, one can almost see it as a case of balancing things out for the treatment of the Jews, for -- in addition to the general prejudice against them -- the King was allowed to seize their property when they died (Mortimer, p. 49), although he usually settled for "only" a third (Mortimer, p. 50). Thus a Jewish death often brought not only mourning but impoverishment.

I do note with interest that Mortimer, p. 50, declares that the "most famous of all the great Jewish capitalists was Adam of Lincoln" (died 1186, near the end of the reign of Henry II).

But Powicke, who devotes roughly eight times as much space to the reign of Henry III as does Harvey, never mentions Hugh or the trials which followed, although he does note (p. 322) Edward I's anti-usury law of 1275 -- and its follow-up, a law of 1290 which expelled the Jews. (Stenton, p. 197, cynically notes that the Jews were no longer "useful" by then -- i.e. the crown had extorted so much money that they were no longer a significant source of revenue. Prestwich, p. 343, observes that Edward managed to make money even on the exiling of the Jews, because he used the occasion to wring an exaction from the clergy in return for the expulsion. Prestwich on p. 346 says that the expulsion was not officially reversed until 1656, although many Jews were tolerated by then -- it is said that Elizabeth I's physician was Jewish.)

I also note that ten unexplained child-murders in a century and a half is a rate far below what we experience today (and, frankly, I would be tempted to look at the Catholic clergy, not the Jews, for killing the poor children, given what we now know about the Catholic Church and young boys...). And murder was more common in the Middle Ages than today.

The death of Hugh and its aftermath did not stop the violence against Jews. "Between 1263 and 1267 there were massacres in, among other places, London, Canterbury, Winchester, Lincoln, Bristol, Nottingham and Worcester. Angry, fearful Montfortian knights [who had been on the wrong side of the civil wars of the period and were subject to large fines]... struck down their [Jewish] creditors in the hope of erasing the evidence of their indebtedness. The restoration of peace [after Henry III and the future Edward I defeated Simon de Montfort] had brought an end to these attacks, but the problems associated with Jewish credit remained" (Morris, p. 88).

One part of the prejudice against Jews that seems to be accurate is the charge of exorbitant interest. On p. 191 Stenton mentions a calculation that their average rate of interest was 43% (per year), with some instances in excess of 60%. The blame for this does not lie entirely with the Jews; the monarchy in effect was taking a cut, in the form of high licensing fees on the Jews (Stenton, p. 194; Morris, p. 86). So the Jews had to charge enough to live on and the pay the royal bribe. (I would love to have heard, say, Richard I explain how that was different from charging interest himself, but of course Richard would never answer to me.) Stenton, p. 193, also tells a tale which sounds surprisingly like this one:

"Already in 1144 Jews were accused in Norwich of the murder of a Christian boy named William, whose story was told within a few years of his death by Thomas of Monmouth, a Norwich monk. William was about 12 when he was found dead in Thorpe Wood near the city. His father... was already dead, but his mother Elviva was alive and had been offered for William a post in the kitchen of the archdeacon of Norwich. The man who made the offer took William away with him and called on William's aunt to tell her about it. She told her daughter to follow and see where William was taken. The child said he was taken to a Jew's house. William was next seen dead in Thorpe Wood. The credulity of the populace and their readiness to suspect the Jews made William a miracle worker and consequently a saint. Between 1144 and 1172 his body was four times translated, each time to a place of higher honour.... William was only the first of a series of English boys whose unexplained deaths were attributed to the Jews."

Porter, p. 116, says that Thomas of Monmouth was a monk of Norwich's Benedictine priory, and wrote his "history" in 1172-1173; Porter also says that William Thurby, Bishop of Norwich from 1144 to 1172, was convinced the boy was a saint. The whole thing, frankly, sounds like the result of psychosis on the part of either Thomas of Monmouth or of Thurby.

The legend of Hugh of Lincoln became popular in many forms of literature; Benet lists Chaucer's "Prioress's Tale," Marlowe's The Jew of Malta, and a 1459 piece called Alphonsus of Lincoln, which I have not seen.

The link to "The Prioress's Tale" is undeniable (Percy, in fact, referred readers to the Tale to learn the ending of the story; Fowler, p. 267), since lines 684-686 of the Tale (Chaucer/Benson, p. 212) explicitly compares the tale to that of "yonge Hugh of Lyncoln, slayn also With cursed Jewes, as it is notable. For it is but a litel while ago." (It's line 1874 in Chaucer/Boyd, p. 165, with discussion on pp. 166-167. To give Chaucer the only excuse we can -- and it a very feeble one -- he lived in an England where Jews were barred, and so perhaps had never met an English-speaking Jew!) I personally don't see much connection, except thematic, to The Jew of Malta.

But the link to "The Prioress's Tale" is only partial, although it has been affirmed by scholars going all the way back to Percy. Chaucer/Boyd, pp. 10-11, summarizes Carlton Brown's thematic analysis of "The Prioress's Tale" and its analogs, which he grouped into three types. All have, in essence, four parts: The young boy somehow offends a group of Jews, who murder him -- but he survives in some form to bring charges against the Jewish murderers, who are punished. "The Prioress's Tale" and this song have the middle parts (the murder and the boy's survival) -- but the first part is quite different (in the "Tale," he goes about singing a religious song in a way that I'd find obnoxious; in the ballad, his ball goes lands on Jewish property; also, "The Prioress's Tale" is NOT a tale of ritual murder; Chaucer/Boyd, p. 17); the final parts, the hunt for the boy and the punishment, varies greatly between versions -- both of the song and the miracle tale.

What's more, Chaucer's tale is set in "Asie" (Asia). It doesn't really have any Asian color (supposedly the setting has faint similarities to Bruges; Chaucer/Boyd, p. 21), but it doesn't matter if the setting is accurate; the point is, Chaucer explicitly denied that the events happened in England! (Also, many scholars now think "The Prioress's Tale" is a satire -- Chaucer/Boyd, p. 32 -- because the Prioress's attitude is contrary to the teachings of the Church, as Chaucer should have known. Sadly, though, I think this is the result of a desire to whitewash Chaucer; no one in the Canterbury Pilgrimage points out the heresy. The great ballad scholar George Lyman Kittredge was of the opinion -- Kittredge, p. 175 -- that "Of all the Canterbury Pilgrims none is more sympathetically conceived or more delicately portrayed than Madame Eglantine, the prioress" -- but of course Kittredge lived at a time when anti-Semitism was still basically acceptable. Perhaps the best way to understand Chaucer's tale, and this song, is for people of European descent to substitute "Muslim" for "Jew" and see how offended they fell....)

Child (who was a noteworthy Chaucer scholar) noted the parallels, but doesn't devote much space to it; he seems to consider the items to have mixed elements but to have independent parts as well. I agree.

That a boy named Hugh did die and get buried in Lincoln seems clear; there is a body in his crypt. But that doesn't mean the Jews of Lincoln were responsible. Joseph Jacobs in 1896 investigated the matter and concluded that Hugh, who was the eight-year-old son of a widow named Beatrice, accidentally fell into a cesspit near a Jewish resident on July 31, 1255. The body was not discovered for 26 days, when a group of Jews gathered to celebrate a wedding. Their one crime was that, having found the dead body, they dropped it down a well at some distance from where the boy had died, where it was discovered on August 29. No doubt, given the state of the body, there was some possibility that Hugh had been murdered (although there is no reason to suspect it) -- but even if he had been murdered, there is no evidence that the Jews were responsible (summarized from Chaucer/Boyd, p. 18).

In any case, the story of the murdered boy and the Miracle of the Virgin is first found in the Stella Maris of c. 1248-49 -- a dating which, if correct, places it before the death of Hugh of Lincoln! (Chaucer/Boyd, p. 64), which certainly should end any link between the Jews and Hugh.

The charge of ritual murder against the Jews lasted far too long. This song is not the first example, and it is far from the last.

Although Jews suffered regular persecution from Christians from the time the Roman Empire was converted, it was the Crusades which really seemed to start the tendency to attack Jews. Runciman, pp. 134-141, details the extreme misbehavior of the People's Crusade as it set out for Jerusalem in 1098-1099. (Interestingly, the particular mobs responsible for the atrocities almost all ended up being massacred themselves -- not by the Jews, but by Christians whom they also oppressed along the way. There seems to have been a particular sort of bone-headedness among Crusaders which caused them to think any furriner they saw must be a target worth attacking.) Frey/Thompson, p. 56, note that the ritual murder charge was bandied about at the time of the Phagan case (for background, see the notes to "Mary Phagan" [Laws F20]), and on p. 57 Frey/Thompson mention the Beilis case in Russia, where there were attempts to blame the entire Jewish race for a murder they did not commit. (This case would go on to inspire some of Sholom Alechem's Tevye stories, hence playing a part in the musical Fiddler on the Roof; Solomon, pp. 33-34).

The fame of "Little Hugh of Lincoln," who is sometimes called a saint, may be by confusion with another Hugh of Lincoln, the bishop of that city (died 1200 and canonized in 1220, according to DictSaints, p. 116). Chaucer/Boyd, p. 166, cites William Thynne as already pointing out this confusion in response to Speght's 1589 edition of Chaucer. Hassall, p. 103, indirectly affirms the confusion by warning that we should not confuse St. Hugh of Avalon, St. Hugh of Wells and Lincoln, or little St. Hugh of Lincoln. Warren, p. 70, says that "Hugh was famous for his saintly life, his great work as a pastor, his sharp tongue, and his pet swan. He had been one of the great characters of the 12th century episcopate." Indeed, he was regarded as a standard for other English bishops -- one they rarely met.
Kerr, p. 171, says that "The key to the success of the city and diocese of Lincoln lies with one man, Sir Hugh of Avalon, who was a competent and respected bishop during his episcopacy in 1186-1200 and, after his death, a popular author."

DictSaints, p. 116, says that upon being appointed bishop (a post he had to be pressured into taking) he "quickly restored clerical discipline, revived schools, and helped to rebuild the cathedral with his own hands."

Bishop Hugh also became the subject of legend -- e.g. Jones, p. 93, mentions a story (for which he does not cite a source) that he "was helped by an angel who cut off his manhood to relieve him of impure desires." (I must say that this strikes me as unlikely -- there were reports that the great scholar Origen had castrated himself, as did the Slavic Skoptsy sect, but this was not a common Christian behavior, and the Jewish Law explicitly forbids priests from having major mutilations.)

Hazlitt, p. 333, says that he was the patron of shoemakers.

In the context, it is ironic to note that OxfordCompanion, p. 495, explicitly notes that Bishop Hugh "condemned the persecution of Jews which spread throughout England in 1190-1." Similarly DictSaints, p. 116: "He denounced the persecution of the Jews, repeatedly forcing armed mobs to release their victims, and was unafraid to correct both Henry II and King Richard the Lionheart." - RBW

Bibliography

- Chaucer/Benson: Larry D. Benson, general editor,The Riverside Chaucer, third edition, Houghton Mifflin, 1987 (based on F. N. Robinson,The Works of Geoffrey Chaucer, which is considered to be the first and second editions of this work)
- Harvey: John Harvey, The Plantagenets, 1948, 1959 (I use the 1979 Fontana paperback edition)
- Hazlitt: W. C. Hazlitt's Dictionary of Faiths & Folklore, 1905 (I use the 1995 Studio Editions paperback)
- Porter: Enid Porter, The Folklore of East Anglia, Batsford, 1974
Sir James the Rose [Child 213]

DESCRIPTION: James the Rose (has killed a squire, and) is forced to flee. He asks his leman's help. She, under pressure, tells his pursuers of his hiding place. James is taken and killed. His leman regrets her actions

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1781 (Pinkerton)

LONG DESCRIPTION: "O heard ye of Sir James the Rose ... he has killed a gallant squire An's friends are out to take him." He visits his lover, the nurse at the House of Marr. He tells her he is looking for a place to hide. Her pursuers ask if she has seen him. As they are about to leave she tells them where he is hiding. He tries to buy them off but they kill him and give his heart to his lover. In despair she drops from sight. "A traitor's end, you may depend, Can be expect'd no better."

KEYWORDS: love death betrayal revenge hiding

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (8 citations):
Child 213, "Sir James the Rose" (1 text)
Bronson 213, "Sir James the Rose" (27 versions+1 in addenda, but a large fraction of these are "Sir James the Ross")
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 213, "Sir James the Rose" (3 versions: #6, #18, #20)
Buchan/Moreira-TheGlenbuchatBallads, pp. 19-21, "Sir James the Ross, the Young Laird of Balethen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 39-40, "Sir James the Rose" (1 text)
Leach-HeritageBookOfBallads, pp. 91-93, "Sir James the Ross" (1 text)
DT 213, JAMEROS2

ADDITIONAL: Peter Buchan, Gleanings of Scarce Old Ballads (London, 1825 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 9-11, "Sir James the Rose (Old Way)"

Roud #2274

BROADSIDES:
NLScotland, L.C.Fol.70(50), "Tragedy of Sir James the Rose," Poet's Box (Glasgow), 1869; also RB.m.143(157), "Sir James the Ross"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sir James the Ross" (general plot) and references there

NOTES [60 words]: Child has only one version of 213 ("O heard ye of Sir James the Rose") but acknowledges a different ballad: "Sir James the Ross, A Historical Ballad' (sometimes called 'The Buchanshire Tragedy'), was composed by the youthful Michael Bruce (1767) upon the story of the popular ballad, and has perhaps enjoyed more favor with 'the general' than the original." - BS
Sir James the Ross

DESCRIPTION: Matilda's father wants her to marry John Graham rather than James Ross. James kills John's brother and hides with Matilda while she sends her page to raise John's men. The page betrays James to John Graham. James is killed and Matilda commits suicide.

AUTHOR: Michael Bruce (1746-1767)?

EARLIEST DATE: 1825 (Buchan)

LONG DESCRIPTION: "Of all the Scottish northern chiefs... The bravest was Sir James the Rose." He leads 500 warriors. He loves Matilda, daughter of "Buchan's cruel lord," who prefers that she wed Sir John the Graham. John's brother Donald spies on James and Matilda and hears her say "the grave shall be my bridal bed If Graham my husband be." Donald confronts James and is killed. He tells Matilda he has killed Donald and must hide because his own men are "far far distant." He plans to go to raise his men but she convinces him to hide and send a page to raise his men. The page meets Graham and twenty of his men and tells where James is hiding. James fights bravely. Matilda pleads for his life but he is mortally wounded. She kills herself on James's sword. With his dying effort James kills Graham.

KEYWORDS: love death suicide betrayal revenge hiding brother father

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar,Newf) US(NE) Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (15 citations):
- Chambers-ScottishBallads, pp. 315-321, "Sir James the Rose" (1 text)
- Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #39, pp. 1-3, "Sir James the Rose" (1 text plus 2 fragments)
- Greig/Duncan2 235, Greig/Duncan8 Addenda, "Sir James the Rose" (16 texts, many very short, 14 tunes) {A=Bronson's #7, C=#4, D=#3, E=#5, F=#11, G=#12, I=#1, J=#13, K=#10, L=#8, M=#20, N=#19; most of these have no text or only a few lines}
- Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-BritishBalladsFromMaine pp. 284-291, "Sir James the Ross" (1 text from manuscript)
- Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland, pp. 147-154, "Sir James, the Rose" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #25}
- Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland3, pp. 239-254, "Sir James the Ross" (3 texts, 1 tune; of the three texts, "C" is short, while "A" is based on penciled changed George Edwards wrote in the margin of Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-BritishBalladsFromMaine) {Bronson's #25}
- Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 75-79, "Sir James the Ross" (1 text plus 2 fragments, 2 tunes) {Bronson's #27, 26}
- Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, pp. 23-25, "Sir James the Ross" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 7, "Sir James the Ross" (2 texts, 1 tune)
- Peacock, pp. 715-719, "Sir James the Rose" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland 18, "Sir James the Ross" (2 texts, 3 tunes)
- Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 11, "Sir James the Rose" (2 texts, 1 tune) {Bronson's #16}
- Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 41-43, "Sir James the Rose" (1 text)
- DT 213, JAMEROSE

ADDITIONAL: Peter Buchan, Gleanings of Scarce Old Ballads (London, 1825 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 11-18, "Sir James the Rose (Modern Way)"

Roud #2274

RECORDINGS:
- John Molloy, "James the Ross" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
- Peter Ryan, "Sir James the Rose" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]

BROADSIDES:
- NLScotland, L.C.Fol.70(50), "Tragedy of Sir James the Rose," Poet's Box (Glasgow), 1869; also RB.m.143(157), "Sir James the Ross"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Child Maurice" [Child 83] (tune)
cf. "Sir James the Rose" [Child 213] (general plot)

NOTES [290 words]: Child has only one version of 213 ("O heard ye of Sir James the Rose") but acknowledges a different ballad: "'Sir James the Ross, A Historical Ballad' (sometimes called 'The Buchanshire Tragedy'), was composed by the youthful Michael Bruce (1767) upon the story of the popular ballad, and has perhaps enjoyed more favor with 'the general' than the original." Coffin, The British Traditional Ballad in North America (Philadelphia, 1950), pp. 128-129: "The Child 'Sir James the Rose' ballad is not in America. The American texts [including Pound's from Nebraska] are highly sophisticated and based on 'Sir James the Ross,' a song Child, IV, 156 thought to have been composed by Michael Bruce [disputed by Coffin citing Barry citing Keith 'that Michael Bruce is mistakenly considered the composer....']." Mackenzie regarding his two versions: "[They] represent 'Sir James the Ross,' an unacknowledged adaptation by Michael Bruce, of the old Scottish ballad 'Sir James the Rose' (Child, No. 213)." Confirming Coffin's observation, Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland, Peacock, Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick, and Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs all are derived from the same text as MacKenzie's.

Greig: "The version now generally known and sung is the one we give. Its composition is credited to Michael Bruce (1746-1767), the author of the well-known 'Ode to the Cuckoo.'" Greig/Duncan2: "Greig does not give his source for the 53-stanza text he prints and, as it may have been a collated text rather than a version from tradition, it is not included here; it resembles A and B."

Greig's text follows Buchan with a few word and punctuation changes. Buchan's text is twenty-six and a half 8-line verses; Greig's is 53 4-line verses. - BS

Last updated in version 4.2

File: C213A

---

Sir John Butler [Child 165]

DESCRIPTION: Men cross a moat by leather boat to Sir John Butler's hall. His daughter Ellen warns him his uncle Stanley is here. He says he is therefore doomed, and, indeed, he is murdered. His wife, in London, dreams his death, confirms it, seeks redress in vain.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1750 (Percy folio)

KEYWORDS: family homicide dream

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

1463 - The Butler Murder

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (4 citations):

- Child 165, "Sir John Butler" (1 text)
- Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume III, pp. 205-214, "Sir John Butler" (1 text)

MANUSCRIPT: {MSPercyFolio}, The Percy Folio, London, British Library, MS. Additional 27879, page 427

Roud #4000

NOTES [310 words]: According to David C. Fowler, A Literary History of the Popular Ballad, Duke University Press, 1968, p. 158 n. 25, this is one of eighteen ballads in the Child collection found only in the Percy Folio.

Child gives a good deal of background to this murder, while admitting to some very substantial questions about it. But he distinctly fails to give some additional background -- notably the fact that this happened during the Wars of the Roses, when battles between noble families were commonplace. And he makes, in my view, far too little of the complicated connections of the families involved.

Lord Stanley was Thomas Stanley, the future Earl of Derby -- and the future husband of Margaret Beaufort, the mother of the future King Henry VII. And Ellen Butler? Well, there was an Eleanor Butler -- born Eleanor Talbot, but called "Butler" after she married Thomas Butler -- who (at least according to the Bishop of Bath and Wells and King Richard III) was betrothed to King Edward IV, who was king in 1463 -- and who, if she did have a relationship with Edward IV, was having it right about the time of this murder. (For more on the Stanleys, see e.g. "The Vicar of Bray": for the whole mess of Eleanor Butler, see e.g. "The Children in the Wood (The Babes in the Woods)"

[Laws Q34].

I'm not claiming that any of this is necessarily meaningful -- for example, Thomas Butler, Eleanor's husband, died probably in 1459, and his father was named Ralph, not John -- and Ralph Butler died in 1473. But if anyone decides to try to learn more than Child had to say about this ballad, this probably needs to be looked into.

The latest reference on the topic, and probably the most authoritative (although it also contains far too much speculation for my taste) is John Ashdown-Hill, Eleanor, the Secret Queen: The Woman who put Richard III on the Throne, 2009. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: C165
Sir Joseph Ward

DESCRIPTION: "When I was a lad I served my term With 'Seddon & Co.,' then a rising firm." He shows such interest in his superiors "That now I am Sir Joseph Ward, you see." He becomes expert in politics and surpasses his mentor "Dick" and becomes a power in the land

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Election Fortune-Teller and Sketcher, according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)

KEYWORDS: derivative political New Zealand

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1893-1906 - Richard John Seddon (1845-1906) Prime Minister of New Zealand
1906-1912, 1928-1930 - Sir Joseph George Ward (1856-1930) Prime Minister of New Zealand

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, p. 104, "Sir Joseph Ward" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Vote for Joey Ward" (subject)

NOTES [578 words]: Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ do not list a tune for this, but there is absolutely no doubt in my mind that it was intended to be sung to the tune of Gilbert and Sullivan's "When I Was a Lad" from "H. M. S. Pinafore." Just like the "ruler of the Queen's Navee," Ward starts as an assistant, and the song ends with this verse:

Now, statesmen all, whoever you may be,
If you want to rise from obscurity --
If you don't want to be forever a tool --
Be careful to be guided by this golden rule:
Stick close to your guns whilst Dick's at sea,
And you'll all be "Sir Joe's," the same as me.

"Seddon & Co." is not an actual company; rather, it refers to Richard John Seddon (the "Dick" of the song), the leader of the Liberal Party, whom Sir Joseph Ward replaced as Premier upon Seddon's death. According to Ell, p. 132, he was known as "King Dick"; "Richard John Seddon was regarded as the uncrowned monarch of New Zealand during his years as Premier (1893-1906). A populist, his common-man approach appealed widely as did his government's championing of their causes. Seddon, who was born in Lancashire in 1845, went as a youth to the Australian goldfields, and made his mark in Westland.... It was Seddon who lead New Zealand's creation of its own Empire in the South Pacific, annexing the Cook Islands and Niue in 1901.... He died while in office, age 61, in 1906."

NewZealandEncyclopedia, pp. 492-493 tells us that he "was the longest-serving Prime Minister in NZ's history -- from 1 May 1893 to 10 June 1906." Born in Lancashire, he was such a bad student that he was encouraged to quit school at age 12. He held odd jobs, losing one for pay agitation, and went to Australia at age 18. Failure as a gold miner caused him to try New Zealand instead, where he again failed as a miner. Nothing ever worked for him until he went into politics, serving in provincial offices before becoming the first mayor of the town of Kumara. He went broke in 1878 but avoided formal bankruptcy, and was elected to parliament in 1879. He became a cabinet member in the early 1890s then became Prime Minister when John Ballance died.

Ironically, the youthful agitator, who led a progressive party, had little to offer in the way of new legislation: "The progressive nature of the Liberal Party slowed down during the early years of the 20th century, as the autocratic Seddon gained complete dominion over his cabinet and caucus. As well as being Prime Minister, Seddon was Minister of Finance, of Education, or Immigration, of Labour, and of Defence." He did make it easier for children to go to school, but "otherwise his growing conservatism smothered the crusading zeal the party once had, and lead (sic.) indirectly to the establishment of the Labour Party."

He was "a tall, powerfully built man" who became obese as he grew older; he died on a ship called the Owestry Grange while returning from a government trip to Australia.

The authoritarianism mentioned above became proverbial; NewZealandDictionary, p. 144, has an entry "King Dick," referring to him; Seddon was called by that name at least as early as 1904.

Seddon seems to have had a curious sort of afterlife. NewZealandDictionary, p. 252, discusses "various [proverbial] phrases indicating a time in the distant past, alluding to the infrequency of the happening under discussion or review." Along with examples such as "since Adam was a cowboy" we find "since Dick Seddon died" and "since Dick Seddon was a boy." - RBW

Bibliography
Sir Lionel [Child 18]

DESCRIPTION: (Sir Lionel) hears report (from a lady in distress?) of a murderous boar. Meeting the boar, he slays the beast. In the older versions, the boar's keeper then comes out to demand a price, and the knight then slays the keeper also.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1750 (Percy Folio), but see the notes about the "Bangum" versions

KEYWORDS: animal fight magic

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(High),England) US(Ap,NE,SE,So)

REFERENCES (53 citations):
Child 18, "Sir Lionel" (6 texts)
Bronson 18, "Sir Lionel" (17 versions)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 18, "Sir Lionel" (6 versions: #1, #2, #3, #4, #5, #10)
Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume I, pp. 74-78, "Sir Lionell" (1 text)
Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 344-346, "The Jovial Hunter of Bromsgrove" (1 text); p. 470, "The Old Man and His Three Sons" (1 fragment)
Leather-FolkLoreOfHerefordshire, pp. 203-204, "Brangywell"; p. 204, "Dilly Dove" (2 texts, 2 tunes) {Bronson's #5, 13}
Williams-FolkSongsToTheUpperThames, pp. 118-119, "Bold Sir Rylas" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 322)
Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-BritishBalladsFromMaine pp. 434-435, "Sir Lionel" (notes plus a partial reprint of Child A)
Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland, pp. 60-61, "Old Bangum" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #17}
Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland1, pp. 226-229, "Sir Lionel" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #17}
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 29-31, "Sir Lionell" (2 texts, 1 tune, plus fragments of 1 stanza and 1 line respectively) {Bronson's #7}
Randolph 7, "Lord Bangum" (1 fragmentary text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #14}
Davis-TraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 8, "Sir Lionel" (7 texts, 4 tunes entitled "Bangum and the Boar," "Old Bang'em," "Ole Bangim," "Sir Lionel") {Bronson's #12, #10, #8, #15}
Davis-MoreTraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 10, pp. 72-78, "Sir Lionel" (4 texts, 4 tunes) Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, pp. 24-25, "Old Badman" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scarbrough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. 191-191, "Sir Lionel" (1 text reprinted from Scarbrough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, and found also in Davis and Scarbrough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, with local title "Old Bangum"; 1 tune on p. 407) {Bronson's #8}
Scarbrough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 51-52, "Old Bangum" (1 text, 1 tune, the same as that in Scarbrough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains) {Bronson's #8}
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 9 "Sir Lionel" (4 fragments, 4 tunes) {Bronson's #16, #15, #11, #9}
Ritchie-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 85, "Bangum Rid by the Riverside" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 8, pp. 18-20, "Old Bangum" (1 text, 1 tune)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, p. 44, "The Jobal Hunter" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 10A, "Bangum Rode the Riverside"; 10B, "Old Bangum" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 100-103, "Sir Lionel" (2 texts)
McNeil-SouthernFolkBalladsVol2, pp. 157-159, "Ole Banghum" (1 text, 1 tune)
Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 19, "The Jovial Hunter of Bromsgrove" (1 text)
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 149-150, "Old Bangham" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 272, "Old Bangum" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #8}
Niles-BalladBookOfJohnJacobNiles 13, "Sir Lionel" (3 texts, 3 tunes)
Chase-AmericanFolkTalesAndSongs, pp. 126-127, "Old Bangum and the Boar" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abrahams/Foss-AngloAmericanFolksongStyle, p. 60, "Old Bangum" (1 text, 1 tune)
Morgan-MedievalBallads-ChivalryRomanceAndEverydayLife, pp. 117-119, "Sir Lionel" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 217, "Old Bangum" (1 text)

DT 18, JOVHUNTR* OLBANGUM*

ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 24, #2 (1975), p, 5, "Quil O'Quay" (1 short text, 1 tune, from the singing of Nimrod Workman)

RELATED: Versions of the Romance "Sir Eglamour of Artois" --
Frances E. Richardson, editor, _Sir Eglamour of Artois_, Early English Text Society/Oxford University Press, 1965, (2 parallel texts, of Lincoln Cathedral MS. 91 and Cotton Caligula A.2, with an appendix containing British Library MS. Egerton 2862 and some readings from the other manuscripts; the two main texts are given a common numbering to bring the total to 1375 lines but L in particular omits some of these lines)
Harriet Hudson, _Four Middle English Romances: Sir Isumbras, Octavian, Sir Eglamour of Artois, Sir Tryamour_, second edition, TEAMS (Consortium for the Teaching of the Middle Ages), Medieval Institute Publications, Western Michigan University, 2006. Much of the material in this book is also available online), pp. 101-132, "Sir Eglamour of Artois" (1 text, of 1320 lines, based mostly on British Library MS. Cotton Caligula A.2)
(William Beattie), _The Chepman and Myllar Prints: A Facsimile with a Bibliographical Note by William Beattie_, Edinburg Bibliographical Society, 1950, pp. 53-88, "(no title)" (1 text, a facsimile of the Advocates Library copy, STC #7542 below)

John Edwin Wells, _A Manual of the Writings in Middle English 1050-1400_, 1916 (references are to the 1930 fifth printing with three supplements), pp. 115-116, "Sir Eglamour of Artois" (a prose summary)

Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #1725
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #2867
MANUSCRIPT: Oxford, Bodleian Library, MS Douce 261 (Bodleian 21835), folio 26
MANUSCRIPT: Cambridge, University Library, MS. Fl.2.38, folio 71
MANUSCRIPT: (MSLincolnThornton), Lincoln, Lincoln Cathedral Library MS. 91 [Robert Thornton MS. 1; Lincoln Thornton MS.], folio 138
MANUSCRIPT: London, British Library, MS. Egerton 2862 (previously Sutherland, Trentham Hall), folio 148 (fragment, one leaf only)
MANUSCRIPT: Ann Arbor, University of Michigan MS. 225 (fragment)

EARLY PRINT EDITIONS:
Published by Wynken de Words, 1500? -- one leaf) (STC #7542, p. 168)
Syr Eglamoure of Artoys, Published by Chepman and Myller, 1508 (STC #7542, p. 168)
Published by W. Copland (1548-1569) (STC #7543, p. 168)
Published by J. Walley (c. 1570?) and entered to J. Carlewood, Jan. 15, 1582 (STC #7544, p. 168)
Roud #29

RECORDINGS:
Bentley Ball, "Bangum and the Boar" (Columbia A3084, 1920)
Logan English, "Bangum and the Boar" (on LEnglish01)
Samuel Harmon, "The Wild Boar" (AFS 2805B; on LC57) {Bronson's #2}
Frank Hutchison, "Wild Hog in the Woods" (OKeoh 45274, 1928)
Eunice Yeatts MacAlexander, "Wild Hog in the Woods" (on FarMtns1)
Jean Ritchie, "Old Bangum" (on JRitchie01)
Lonesome Luke [D. C. Decker] & his Farm Boys, "Wild Hog in the Woods" (Champion 16229, 1931; on KMM)
G. D. Vowell, "Bangum and the Boar" (AFS; on LC57)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Wild Hog
The Jovial Hunter
Rurey Bain
Bangum and the Bo'
Wild Hog in the Woods
Many versions of this song have been stripped down to descriptions of the [boar] hunt and the fight. Others have subplots concerning Sir Lionel's brothers. The versions of this called "Wild Hog in the Woods" should not be confused with the fiddle tune of the same name, which is unrelated to any tune I've ever heard with the ballad. Great tune, though - PJS

Fowler, p. 160, goes beyond what Paul says about the ballad being stripped down and cites Bronson as saying "that a ballad was re-created from the romance, probably in 1615 by Samuel Rowlands, and that modern survivals of the 'old Bangum' type, usually considered descendants of the [Percy] folio version, are actually independent of it." This in fact goes somewhat beyond what Bronson said; Bronson merely pointed out that serious versions are very rare, and that Rowlands produced a serious version, and the two types may be independent. Still, I think Fowler is largely correct: the connection between "Sir Lionel" and "Bangum" is slight.

Flanders, in her notes in "Ancient Ballads," makes the astonishing (for her) admission of how different the common version of this is from the alleged roots: "If 'Old Bangum' can be considered as a direct descendant of the romance Sir Eglamour of Artois, it is surely a classic example of degeneration through oral tradition.... Although the Child 'Sir Lionel' is probably related to the medieval romance, scholars have just as probably been over-enthusiastic in relating 'Old Bangum' songs too closely to 'Sir Lionel.' As Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, 29, suggests, a song-book or music hall rewriting may well lie between the two."

She adds, "The 'Old Bangum' texts are the only American forms of Child 18. They are known in... England as well, and are characterized by a nonsense refrain which Alfred Williams... notes is meant to sound like a bugle."

Note that D'Urfey's version (Bronson's #3; not given by Child) actually calls the hero "Sir Eglamore," although this might be editorial.

Child mentions several analogies to the boar-hunting tale in the romances, including part of the story of "Culhwych and Olwen" in the Mabinogion (in which Culywych is given seemingly-impossible tasks in order to win Olwyn) and the tale of "The Avowing of [King] Arthur."

Louis B. Hall, p. 130 in his introduction to the "The Avowing of Arthur," says the following: "With the wolf practically extinct in England, the wild boar had no enemies except the hunter, and a number of tales describe that hunt. The boar is a fearsome beast today and was even more so in the fifteenth century. Archaeological evidence indicates that it then stood four feet tall at the shoulder and weighted about 300 pounds. Its two tusks were like butcher knives, and the boar could use them to either stab or rip. Its successive layers of bristles, hide, muscle, and fat were impenetrable to arrows. To attack this beast alone with only spear and sword was exceedingly dangerous."

Of "Culhwych and Olwen" Child has little to say except to compare it with other tales of battles with a boar: "But both these, and even the Erymanthian, must lower their bristles before the boar in 'Kilhwch and Olwen,' Mabinogion, part iv, pp. 309-316." This is true as far as it goes; Ford-Mabinogi, p. 119, observes that "The story ostensibly deals with the love of Culhwych for Olwen, the giant's daughter, and describes how, with the help of his cousin Arthur, the impossible tasks imposed by the giant were accomplished and Olwen won... [but] the story is really about Arthur, his wonder-working retinue, and a series of exploits performed by them, culminating in the pursuit of the great boar, Twrch Trwyth. This last ends virtually in a draw between Arthur and the boar, although the carnage on both sides is great."

But the story may not have started there. Mabinogion/Davies, p. xxiii, points out that Arthur's boar hunt is mentioned in the ninth century History of the Britons. On p. 16 Ford-Mabinogi seems to suggest that the boar in "Culhwych" is a vague memory of a pig-god, which presumably makes his opponent semi-divine as well. This would fit well in a the world of giants and talking beasts of "Culhwych," less well with this ballad.

But Child fails to note that the fuller versions of "Sir Lionel," like "Culhwych," involves a giant, Olwen's father. This is not to suggest any direct dependence -- just that these tales of highly deadly boars often have giants somewhere in the vicinity as well.

Lionel himself is an Arthurian character, but a relatively minor one -- e.g. he does not have an entry in Lacy. Moorman/Moorman, p. 81, says of him, "In the Vulgate Lancelot, BOHORT's brother, LANCELOT's cousin. In the Queste del Saint Graal his fury almost leads him to kill BOHORT."

Makes you wonder a little if Lionel and the boar didn't get their parts mixed up.

As for the romance of "Sir Eglamour," according to Hudson, p. 97, "Sir Eglamour of Artois tells a familiar story of lovers separated by a disapproving father, their vicissitudes, and their eventual marriage in a triumph of faithful love." To win the hand of Cristabelle, Eglamour has to accomplish a series of challenges set by her father, including a boar, giants, and a dragon; the father clearly wants Eglamour to fail, and probably die. When Christabelle gets pregnant, she and her son Degrebelle are set adrift. Eventually everyone is reunited after Eglamour has overthrown the wicked father and gone to Egypt to rescue Cristabelle (Hudson, pp. 97-98).

In the romance, the battle with the boar is in the middle of the list of tasks Eglamour must perform. "The boar is... in Sidon, and as Eglamour approaches, he finds the dismembered bodies of the beast's earlier opponents. The boar kills the knight's horse an requires three days to subdue, but his eradication is a great boon to the country which he had ravaged" (Hudson, p. 98).

The romance does have the interestingly "folk-ish" motif of a knight of (relatively) low status winning the hand of a girl of higher status. On the other hand, it is in the 12-line "tail rhyme" format, which for whatever reason is rarely used in romances that have relationships with ballads.

Unlike many Middle English romances, there does not seem to be a French equivalent of "Sir Eglamour." It is suggested that the piece was composed around 1350 in the northern Midlands. There are no fewer than seven manuscripts and four early printings of the romance, making it among the most popular of all the Middle English tales, even though it has not been popular with modern editors, probably because of the "jingling verse and the general unrealness of the story" (Wells, p. 116). Derek Pearsall (Brewer, p. 31), sarcastically tells us that "Sir Eglamour is a mechanical shuffling-together of stock incidents, whisked vigorously and poured out at a pace that aims to provide little time for reflection on what rubbish it all is." This even though one of the manuscripts to include it is the famous "Percy Folio." The full list of manuscripts (from Richardson, pp. ix-xiv; see also Hudson, p. 100):

- British Library MS. Egerton 2862, c. 1400 (a fragment of the first 160 lines, often denoted "S").
- Lincoln Cathedral MS. 91, c. 1440, the "Lincoln Thornton Manuscript," after scribe Robert Thornton, who copied many romances and a few ballad-ish lyrics ("L").
- British Library MS. Cotton Caligula A.2, c. 1450 ("C").
- Cambridge University Library MS. Ff.2.38, c. 1460 ("F").
- Bodleian Library MS. Douce 261, 1564, from 1564 ("d")
- British Library MS. Additional 27879, the Percy Folio, c. 1650. ("p")

The early prints:

- National Library of Scotland, Edinburgh, printed by Chepman and Myllar, 1508? (incomplete; titled "Sir Eglamore of Arteys") ("e").
- Cambridge University Library. Inc. 5.J.1.2, printed by Wynken de Worde, c. 1530? (fragment of fewer than sixty lines) ("g").
- Cambridge University Library, Syn 7.52.12, printed by Richard Bankes, c. 1530 (fragments totalling fewer than a hundred lines) ("b")
- Bodleian Library MS. Selden d 45(5), printed by William Copland, c. 1555 (this is very likely based on the Wynken de Worde edition, or perhaps an earlier, lost, Caxton edition) ("a"). There is good reason to think the Percy Folio version related to this; it contains several other romances found in Copland editions.

It might perhaps be noted that Richardson's work was done as a thesis under none other than J. R. R. Tolkien (whose knowledge of folklore doesn't get enough attention), and it likely reflects many of Tolkien's opinions.

According to Richardson's descriptions and the stemma on p. xx, the manuscripts form three groups, S+L, the earliest and generally the best; C+F; and the late texts, e+g+w+b+a+d+p (with the Percy Folio p being especially close to a and w; Richardson in fact thinks p is derived from a, the de Worde edition).

Most printed editions have used L as their base text. Richardson prints L and C in parallel columns. Hudson, although agreeing that L is the best text, works from C because it is the fullest.

There is an interesting footnote to this, in that "Sir Eglamour" is one of the few places where we can test the quality of the text in the very valuable Percy Folio. According to Richardson's stemma (p. xx), the Percy text is copied, at one remove, from the Bodleian Selden print by Copeland. Richardson, p. xix, calls it the worst of all the texts and lists a number of unique errors. We should perhaps take this with a grain of salt, since Richardson would also allow the possibility that the Percy text is derived from multiple sources, but if Richardson is correct, we should perhaps be cautious in the use we make of the Percy Folio.

Richardson thinks "Sir Eglamour" is a blending of three romance types, which he calls "Tochmarc Emire/The Wooing of Emer," "Degare," and "Octavian." In English, the first of these is best known from "Emare," the second from "Sir Degare" (Digory)." Richardson thinks the "Eglamour" poet knew specifically "Emare," "Sir Degare," and one or the other of the two English "Octavian" romances. The theme of tasks is from the "Tochmarc Emire/Emare" group; Richardson is not sure if his only source is "Emare" or if there is another source as well.
Mehl, p. 77, says sarcastically of the romance, "The story of Sir Eglamour deserves a brief examination, if only on account of its mediocrity and its highly eclectic character." On p. 78, he adds, "It would be easy to find analogues for all these motifs in earlier romance and to demonstrate that Sir Eglamour is a rather synthetic product. There are particularly close links with Guy of Warwick, Octavian, and Sir Ysumbras....

For a bibliography of references to "Emare," see Rice, pp. 253-254; for "Guy of Warwick," see pp. 277-280; for "Octavian," pp. 365-366; for "Sir Degare," pp. 409-414; for Sir "Isumbras," pp. 469-471; for "Sir Eglamour," pp. 415-416. Summaries of most of them are found in Wells. I can't help but think, if two scholars both agree that "Eglamour" is derivative, but derive it from different sets of romances, then perhaps the actual sources are something different and now lost -- and if perhaps "Sir Lionel" is related to that.

Mehl, p. 82-83, goes on to suggest that "Eglamour" is a "minstrel poem" -- which, in this context, means a poem the outline of which was memorized but the details largely at the performer's choice, most of them being commonplaces or derived from oral tradition. And, of course, anything that borrows from tradition is likely to lend to it as well.

Or perhaps there is another, lost, "Eglamour" romance. The alliterative poem "The Parlement of the Thre Aiges," has these lines:

Sir Eglamour of Artas, full euerous in armes,
And Christabelle the clere maye es crept in her graue;
(Turville-Petrie, p. 98; lines 622-623). The "Parlement" (which exists in two copies) cannot be certainly dated, but the best guess is late fourteenth century (Turville-Petrie, p. 67). The context is a list of famous lovers; Tristram and Dido are among the others mentioned.

Richardson, p. xlii, notes in addition a report of an Eglamore play that was staged at St. Alban's in 1442/43. On the same page, Richardson reports a reduced form of the story, in which Eglamour does little except kill a dragon, in Samuel Rowland's 1615 work "The Melancholy Knight," and a version from 1656 in "Wit and Drollery." Finally, Richardson mentions a version "still sung in schools and Boy Scout camps today." In the absence of a footnote, I don't know what that refers to; I would assume it's some version of this song. More secure is the link of the romance with "Sir Cawline" [Child 61], with which it shares plot elements and some lyrics. But it's an open question just how traditional "Sir Cawline" is; see the notes to that song.

Richardson, pp. xl-v, suggests that "Sir Eglamour" also influenced the romance of "Sir Torrent of Portyngale" -- or, more correctly, that "Eglamour" influenced "Torrent" and that "Torrent" then influenced the manuscripts of "Eglamour." Wells, p. 113, says that "It has been claimed by some that Sir Torrent is a making-over of Sir Eglamour, and by others that the two are from a common source. He lists two main plot elements in both romances, the "Eustache" story of a family that is driven into poverty and exile and threatened with religious persecution and the "Constance" story of a girl whose father abuses her and forces her to flee to a foreign land where she marries a king and is again banished before reuniting with her husband; these themes are also found in the romance of Octovian, although it is clearly distinct textually, and also in Emare.

Alice B. Morgan, "'Honor & Right' in Arthur of Little Britain" (on pp. 371-384 of Benson) observes that the motif of one substituting for another in bed occurs in "Sir Degare," "Sir Torrent," "Sir Eglamour," and "Partenope of Blois," and also in the French "Arthur of Little Britain" (Benson, p. 377), which John Bourchier, Lord Berners, translated into English I the sixteenth century (Benson, pp. 371-374). So someone who researches "Sir Lionel" has a few more romance to dig into, at least casually.

The wooden knife used to kill the boar has folklore analogies. Simpson, pp. 31-32, has a story told of one Sir Goddard Oxenbridge of Brede (although she notes that it is demonstrably not true). He was somehow turned into a carnivorous giant who went around eating children. Nor could he easily be killed; he was said to be immune to normal metal weapons, plus a crow could warn him when he was about to be attacked. The children of Sussex brewed a huge vat of beer, got him drunk, and sawed him in half with a wooden saw. - RBW

Bibliography

Sir Neil and Glengyle [Laws M39]

DESCRIPTION: Ann is wooed by Sir Neil and Glengyle. Her brother, hearing a false rumor that Sir Neil has slandered his sister, demands a duel and is killed. Glengyle kills Sir Neil. Ann, horrified by the slaughter, will not have Glengyle and vows to die unwed

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1801 (Hogg, Scottish Pastorals)

KEYWORDS: homicide brother sister courting death

FOUND IN: US(NE) Canada(Mar,Newf) Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (9 citations):

Laws M39, "Sir Neil and Glengyle"
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #109, p. 1, "Sir Niel and M'Van" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan2 217, "Sir Niel and Macvan" (7 texts, 5 tunes)
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, pp. 92-95, "Sir Neil and Glengyle" (1 text, 3 tunes)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 20, "Sir Neil and Glengyle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ives-FolksongsFromMaine 16, "Sir Neil and Glengyle" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 289-290, "Sir Neil and Mac Van" (1 text)
DT 590, SIRNEIL

ADDITIONAL: James Hogg, Scottish Pastorals (Edinburgh: John Taylor, 1801 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 49-55, "The Death of Sir Neil Stuart and Donald M'Vane"
Roud #1914

RECORDINGS:
Alexander March, "Glen Gyle" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

NOTES [61 words]: Hogg's subtitle is "an auld tale made new again." He has as his tune, "Jonny Faa." But is Hogg the author? Greig/Duncan2 p. 531: "James Hogg, perhaps drawing on a chapbook source, included the song in his Scottish Pastorals...."
I was not able to read the one broadside Bodleian, 2806 c.11(44), "Glengyle & Sir Neil" ("In yonder isle beyond Argyle"), unknown, n.d. - BS

Last updated in version 4.2
Sir Patrick Spens [Child 58]

DESCRIPTION: The King, needing a good sailor, calls upon Sir Patrick Spens to sail (to Norway?) in the dead of winter. Though both Captain and crew fear the trip, they undertake it, and are drowned

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1765 (Percy)

KEYWORDS: sea storm wreck death

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1286 - Death of Alexander III of Scotland
1290 - Death of his granddaughter Margaret "Maid of Norway"

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber)) US(Ap,MA,SE) Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (33 citations):

Child 58, "Sir Patrick Spens" (18 texts, 1 tune) {Bronson's #5}
Bronson 58, "Sir Patrick Spens" (12 versions+1 in addenda)

Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 58, "Sir Patrick Spens" (3 versions: #2, #3, #5)
Percy/Wheatley-ReliquesOfAncientEnglishPoetry I, pp. 98-102, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text)
Lyle/McAlpine/McLucas-SongRepertoireOfAmeliaAndJaneHarris, pp. 3-11, "Sir Patrick Spens" (2 texts, 1 tune, plus a manuscript facsimile) {Bronson's #5, with differences}

Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 128-134, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 text)

Chambers-ScottishBallads, pp. 3-8, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 text)

Buchan/Moreira-TheGlenbuchatBallads, p. 155-158, "Patrick Spence" (1 text)

Greig/Duncan 17, "Sir Patrick Spens" (3 texts, 2 tunes) {B=Bronson's #3}

MacColl-PersonalChoice, pp. 6-7, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #11, but a different transcription and not entirely identical}

Wells-TheBalladTree, p. 279, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 partial text, 1 tune) {apparently Bronson's #3, but transposed and with different words}

Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 16, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 16, "Sir Patrick Spens' (1 excerpt, 1 tune)

Carey-MarylandFolkloreAndFolklife, pp. 51-53, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 text, 1 tune)

Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 179-184, "Sir Patrick Spens" (3 texts)

Leach-HeritageBookOfBallads, pp. 46-47, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text)

Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 297, "Sir Patrick Spens (Spence)" (2 texts, 1 tune)

Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 75, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 text)

Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 66, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 text)

Niles-BalladBookOfJohnJacobNiles 25, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 text, 1 tune)

Hirsh-MedievalLyric-MiddleEnglishLyricsBalladsCarols #41, "Sir Patrick Spens" (4 texts [3 from Child, 1 from Niles])

Gummere-OldEnglishBallads, pp. 144-1445+331-332, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 text)

Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 25-27, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 text, 1 tune)

Hodgart-FaberBookOfBallads, p. 121, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 text)

Buchan-ABookOfScottishBallads 50, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 text)

Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 2, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 text, a recited version)

Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads, pp. 9-12, "Sir Patrick Spens" (2 texts)

Whiting-TraditionalBritishBallads 20, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 text)

Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 60-63, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 text)

Morgan-MedievalBallads-ChivalryRomanceAndEverydayLife, pp. 24-26, "Sir Patrick Spens" (1 text)

HarvardClassics-EnglishPoetryChaucerToGray, pp. 74-76, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text)

DT 58, PATSPENS

ADDITIONAL: Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #418, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text, with several variants in the notes)

ST C058 (Full)

Roud #41

CROSS-REFERENCES:

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #418, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text, with several variants in the notes)

ST C058 (Full)

Roud #41

CROSS-REFERENCES:

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #418, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text, with several variants in the notes)

ST C058 (Full)

Roud #41

CROSS-REFERENCES:

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #418, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text, with several variants in the notes)

ST C058 (Full)

Roud #41

CROSS-REFERENCES:

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #418, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text, with several variants in the notes)

ST C058 (Full)

Roud #41

CROSS-REFERENCES:

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #418, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text, with several variants in the notes)

ST C058 (Full)

Roud #41

CROSS-REFERENCES:

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #418, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text, with several variants in the notes)

ST C058 (Full)

Roud #41

CROSS-REFERENCES:

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #418, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text, with several variants in the notes)

ST C058 (Full)

Roud #41

CROSS-REFERENCES:

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #418, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text, with several variants in the notes)

ST C058 (Full)

Roud #41

CROSS-REFERENCES:

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #418, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text, with several variants in the notes)

ST C058 (Full)

Roud #41

CROSS-REFERENCES:

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #418, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text, with several variants in the notes)

ST C058 (Full)

Roud #41

CROSS-REFERENCES:

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #418, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text, with several variants in the notes)

ST C058 (Full)

Roud #41

CROSS-REFERENCES:

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #418, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text, with several variants in the notes)

ST C058 (Full)

Roud #41

CROSS-REFERENCES:

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #418, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text, with several variants in the notes)

ST C058 (Full)

Roud #41

CROSS-REFERENCES:

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #418, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text, with several variants in the notes)

ST C058 (Full)

Roud #41

CROSS-REFERENCES:

Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #418, "Sir Patrick Spence" (1 text, with several variants in the notes)

ST C058 (Full)

Roud #41

CROSS-REFERENCES:
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Patrick Spenser
Sir Patrick Spence

NOTES [1491 words]: Whether this song is historical is disputed. If it "is" historical, it is based on one of the oldest incidents known to balladry: The succession of Scotland in the thirteenth century. Alexander III of Scotland came to the throne in 1249, a boy not yet ten years old (Magnusson, pp. 96-97). Two years later, he went to England to be knighted and to marry Margaret, the daughter of the English King Henry III and the sister of the future Edward I (Magnusson, p. 97). Alexander came of age in 1259. Within a couple of years, he was sending embassies to Norway, trying to gain control of the Western Isles and Orkney -- which for many centuries had given their allegiance, such as it was, to Norway (Magnusson, p. 97). Eventually negotiations gave way to war: Alexander wanted the Hebrides, while Norwegian king Haakon wanted to keep them and strengthen his control.

Fry/Fry, p. 74, report that one of Alexander's vassals attacked Skye in 1262. Our sources are all Norwegian, so we don't know whether Alexander was really involved, or how extensive the attack was. What is clear is that both sides sent forces to the western isles, though the ensuing Battle of Largs (1263) was more a series of meeting engagements than a full-scale battle. More damage was done to the combatants by a storm, and king Haakon, having seen his fleet badly damaged, headed for home and died soon after in the Orkneys (Mitchison, p. 33).

With Haakon dead, the Norwegians decided to negotiate once again. A treaty was concluded in 1266, by the terms of which Scotland in effect bought the Hebrides (and at a surprisingly low price; Magnusson, p. 103, thinks the Norwegians demanded the cash only so they could justify giving away land they were no longer willing to fight for).

In practice, the result didn't matter; the folk of the Isles "paid no more heed to their Scottish than they had to their Norwegian overlords" (MacLean, p. 33). But at least it ended the war. The countries became friendly enough that Alexander's daughter Margaret, by then 19 years old, was married to the 14-year-old grandson of King Haakon in 1281. Margaret's young husband was already Norway's King Eric II; he had ascended in 1280 (Mitchison, p. 37). Margaret didn't see much of his reign, though; she died in 1283, probably in childbirth; the baby girl would come to be known as "Margaret Maid of Norway" (Magnusson, p. 104).

At the time of the elder Margaret's betrothal, the Norwegian connection seemed minor; although Alexander III was a widower (his wife Margaret having died in 1275), he had two living sons. But the younger son, David, died in 1281, and then the heir, who would have been Alexander IV, died in 1284 (Magnusson, p. 105).

Alexander finally decided he had to marry again; he married Yolande (or Yolette) de Dreux in 1285. But it was too late for him. Indeed, the marriage brought his downfall, and led to the end of one of the few relatively peaceful period in Scottish history. On a dark night, on his way to visit his wife after a feast, he somehow fell from his horse and died in 1286 (Magnusson, pp. 106-107; Cook, p. 65). This, incidentally, led to one of Thomas of Ercildoune's most famous prophecies; see the notes to "Thomas Rymer" [Child 37].

When Alexander died in 1286, the only heir of his body was his granddaughter Margaret, daughter of the King of Norway by Alexander's daughter. She was four years old, but was made queen (not without some concern, since Scotland till then had never had a ruling queen; Cook, p. 65).

Naturally there was a guardian council.

At first, Edward I of England left things mostly to the Scots; he and Alexander III had been cordial (Prestwich, pp. 357-360). But it should be recalled that Edward I had already conquered Wales, and claimed a degree of authority over Scotland. And Margaret was such a tempting target.... For one thing, she was a girl who could potentially be married to his son; for another, Margaret of Norway was not too distantly related to Edward himself, and a potential claimant to the English throne. And Edward, being Edward, had no respect for Scotland, or for anything else that stood in his way (Prestwich, p. 361). Edward firmly interjected himself into the process of trying to bring the girl back to Scotland (Cook, p. 69).

The negotiations were intricate (Magnusson, pp. 110-111; Prestwich, pp. 360-361), since Norway, England, and Scotland were interested in her dynasty (because she stood fairly high in the succession for each), and England, Scotland, and the Papacy were involved in negotiations for her marriage (since she and her proposed husband, the future Edward II, were within the prohibited degrees, being first cousins once removed. A dispensation was eventually obtained; Cook, p. 70). Poor little Margaret! So much rested on her fate that the histories give us no idea of what she was like; on paper a queen, she was in fact a pawn. Oram says, p. 107, "There is surely no more poignant passage in Scottish history than the tragically short 'reign' of this child monarch." One can only feel sorry for her. She lost her mother, who was only 23, at birth (Oram, p. 107); heir to the throne of Scotland before her first birthday, she became queen of Scotland at three (Oram, p. 108). Her marriage was decided upon by the time she was six (Oram, p. 108), she left her childhood home at seven, and died at sea without even viewing the land of which she was titular queen! (Oram, p. 109). It was the forceful Edward I, not the Scots, who conducted most of the negotiations with the Norwegians. And one can't help but wonder if Edward's bluster didn't cause the Norwegians to drag things out. Eric II delayed Margaret's return for years.

Edward had theoretically agreed to leave Scotland an independent state after the marriage, and it was agreed that, if Margaret's marriage produced no heirs, Scotland would remain independent (Magnusson, p. 111). But it was quite clear that Edward had every expectation of running things (MacLean, p. 34); he was already acting as if he were regent of Scotland, even though there was a guardian council and the wedding between Margaret and Edward hadn't taken place anyway (Prestwich, p. 363).

Finally Edward fitted out a well-provisioned ship to carry the Queen, and perhaps her father (Cook, p. 71). Eric didn't like that; he preferred to use one of his own ships. It didn't help the poor girl; she died on the trip -- surrounded by the usual rumours of poisoning and murder. And then Scotland really had a succession problem. But that is an issue for another song.

Thus the texts of the ballad match some of the facts (fetching home "the king's daughter of Norrowa"), but ignore the fact that the old king of Scotland was long dead when the Scottish ship sailed to bring home the princess. (Unless the "king" is Edward I, but in that case, he wouldn't have been in Dunfermline!)

Some have proposed emending the text to describe sending Alexander's daughter "to" Norway, noting that a ship containing several Scottish lords sank on the way home. This is ingenious, but does not seem to fit the rest of the ballad; I would regard this emendation as highly suspect. (Of course, I don't like emendation.)

The song was probably well known in the late eighteenth century. Coleridge's 1798 poem "Dejection: An Ode" opens by citing the ballad (the "Late late yestreen I saw the new Moon" verse) and opens "Well! If the bard was weather-wise, who made The grand old ballad of Sir Patrick Spence...." And Longfellow's "The Wreck of the Hesperus" borrows plot elements, and even a whole stanza, from this song.

The folklore of the new moon is still known today, in Newfoundland at least, where a rhyme maintains, "The old moon in the arms of the new Bodes no good for me nor you" (Young, p. 292). The geography of the song is at least logical: Dunfermline is on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, and Aberdour is also on the shore of the Forth, a modest distance east (and hence closer to the North Sea).

Aytoun claimed that there was a grave reported to be that of Sir Patrick on the tiny island of Papa Stronsay in the Orkneys -- in one sense, a logical location, since Papa Stronsay is in the eastern part of the archipelago, and so would be near the path of a ship from Norway to Scotland. And there isn't much on the island (which is just 74 hectares=about 180 acres and which was eventually abandoned by its small population) except a small monastery. But I've found no reference since Aytoun to this place, and remember, the song says Sir Patrick's body lies at the bottom of the sea!

Just about every recording I've heard of this song seems to use the highly majestic tune sung by Ewan MacColl, which MacColl attributed to his father William Miller, but Bronson admits only one other traditional version with a tune akin to MacColl's; nine of his twelve versions are of a different type, and the twelfth (from Johnson) he believes inauthentic. - RBW

Bibliography

- Cook: E. Thornton Cook, Their Majesties of Scotland, John Murray, 1928
- Fry/Fry: Peter and Fiona Somerset Fry, The History of Scotland, 1982 (I use the 1995 Barnes & Noble edition)
- MacLean: Fitzroy MacLean, A Concise History of Scotland, Beekman House, 1970
- Young: Ron Young, Dictionary of Newfoundland and Labrador, Downhome Publishing Inc., 2006
Sir Peny

DESCRIPTION: "Peny is an hardy knyght, Peny is mekyl of myght, Peny of wrong ge makyt right" wherever he goes. "Go bet, peny, go bet, go." One who has Peny as a messenger will do well. Men like those with Peny. When he is without Peny, they reject him

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1430 (British Library -- Sloane MS. 2593); printed by Ritson 1790

KEYWORDS: money humorous travel commerce nonballad MiddleEnglish poverty hardtimes

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (9 citations):
Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols, #393, p. 261, "(Peny is an hardy knyght)" (1 text)
Ritson-AncientSongsBalladsFromHenrySecondToTheRevolution, pp. 115-117, "A Song in Praise of Sir Penny" (1 text)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #2747
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #4361

Rossell Hope Robbins, _Secular Lyrics of the XIVth and XVth Century_, Oxford University Press, 1952, #57, pp. 50-51 "Sir Penny, I" (1 text)

MANUSCRIPT: {MSSloane2593}, London, British Library, MS. Sloane 2593, folio 26
MANUSCRIPT: Oxford, Balliol College, MS. 8, folio 222 (fragment)

NOTES [309 words]: Based on external evidence, this does not meet my criteria for inclusion in the Index; it is found in just two Middle English manuscripts, and although one of them is the extraordinary manuscript Sloane 2593, the other, Balliol College MS. 8, has only two pieces of poetry in it, the other being only a stanza of a well-known song ("Sweet Jesu now will I sing," found in seven other manuscripts) written in a flyleaf.

However, this has been held up by several scholars as an extraordinary early carol, and certainly it is an early example of a song about the relationship between money and popularity. Then, too, it is very popular with modern anthologists. I have indexed it on that very tentative basis.

"Peny/Penny" is, of course, money -- and not a trivial amount in the fifteenth century; the silver penny was the basic coin of England for most of the medieval era, and fractions of a penny (farthings, groats) existed.

Greene, p. 429, says that "The personification of 'Penny' is met with in a number of medieval vernacular and Latin compositions. Chambers, p. 118, mentions a poem on the same theme: Sir Peny over all gettes the gré [honor, goodwill], Both in burgh and in ceté [city], In castell and in towre.

Withouten owther sperre or schelde, Es the best in frith [woodland] or felde, And stalworthest in stowre [fighting].

The phrase "Go bet" probably does not mean "go gamble" but is rather a hunting chorus meaning something like "Hurry Up"; see the notes to "A Hunting Carol (At A Place Where I Me Set)," which also contains the phrase.

Yet another "Sir Peny" is found in Joseph Ritson, _Pieces of Ancient Popular Poetry_, second edition, William Pickering, 1833, pp. 99-108; it opens "In erth it es a littill thing, And regnes als a riche king."

For more on manuscript Sloane 2593, see the notes to "Robyn and Gandeleyn" [Child 115]. - RBW

Bibliography

Sir Peter Parker

DESCRIPTION: "Sir Peter Parker" relates how he attacked Sullivan's Isle outside Charleston. He receives no support from his superior, Clinton, so the rebels are able to beat off his ship Bristol. Parker decides it's time to return to base.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1777 (Philadelphia Advertiser) (Source: Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents)

KEYWORDS: rebellion war humorous injury

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
June 28, 1776 - Clinton and Parker's failed assault on Charleston

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 64-66, "Sir Peter Parker" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, p. 70, "A NEW WAR SONG by Sir Peter Parker" (1 text, tune referenced)
Rabson-SongbookOfTheAmericanRevolution, pp. 34-25, "A New War Song by Sir Peter Parker" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, NEWWAR*

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "At Sullivan's Isle" (subject)
cf. "On the Late Engagement in Charles Town River" (subject)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
A New War Song by Sir Peter Parker

NOTES [567 words]: The setting is, of course, the American revolution. Having been completely blocked by the colonials in 1775, the British decided on a two-part strategy in 1776. Most of the troops in Boston were shifted to New York (via Halifax), while a second force was sent to attack Charleston, South Carolina. It was to be a fiasco.

To be fair, the whole thing had been directed from London, and handled at too great a distance. According to Cook, p. 245, "orders were issued in December... to embark the Irish regiments at Cork and head across the Atlantic to rendezvous with a fleet in the American waters off Cape Fear, North Carolina. General Clinton would meet them at the end of February with additional reinforcements from Boston, and the combined armies would head for Charleston." Sir Henry Clinton was to head the army in the Charleston assault, while Sir Peter Parker was in charge of the naval forces. Since Clinton was already in America, and Parker was coming from England in nine ships spearheaded by the 50-gun Bristol, the two did not cooperate well (Stokesbury, p. 83).

The first problem was the timing. Atlantic weather saw to it that Parker's fleet, somewhat depleted, arrived in April, not February. This had the unfortunate effect of seriously weakening the troops, who had been at sea for eighty days (Weintraub, pp. 61-62). Some didn't even arrive for the campaign; the ships went back to Ireland (Stokesbury, p. 83).

Clinton, who had been on the scene, learned that no one even had an accurate map to use when planning the landing. It took a week just to get past the outer bar (Stokesbury, p. 84). So bad was the British information that, when they tried to bombard Charleston, most of the mortar shells landed in unfortified bogs, or at best in soft spots in the forts where they did no damage (Weintraub, p. 62). And as all this was going on, the Americans were bringing in defenders, including three regiments from out of state, as well as Charles Lee, one of the senior officers in the American army (Stokesbury, p. 84).

Clinton got his troops ashore, but did not attack the crucial colonial position in Fort Moultrie. Indeed, the channels and low islands meant that he couldn't join in Parker's assault; he was stuck on land that had no access to the forts that Parker wanted to attack! (Stokesbury, p. 85). Clinton opposed the final plan, but Parker was in charge and ordered the assault to go ahead. Even this was delayed, by five days, by adverse winds (Stokesbury, p. 85). To get into the harbor, Parker had to try to batter the fort into submission. He failed (Kraus, p. 226), and in the process a colonial shot blew off his breeches (producing the reference to "the wind in my tail," and a sour joke beginning "If honour in the breech is lodged"; Weintraub, p. 62). Other losses were more significant than Parker's pants: Three frigates aground (two would escape, but one had to be destroyed), three ships damaged; the captain of the Bristol lost his right arm. 225 British soldiers and sailors were killed or wounded, compared to just three dozen American casualties (Stokesbury, p. 85).
Clinton and Parker returned to New York. It is likely that both should bear responsibility for the failure, but Parker seems to have borne the brunt of it; when General Howe was recalled from his post as commander of British forces in America, Clinton was chosen to succeed him. - RBW

Bibliography

- Kraus: Michael Kraus, The United States to 1865, University of Michigan Press, 1959
- Stokesbury: James L. Stokesbury, A Short History of the American Revolution, Quill, 1991

Last updated in version 4.4
File: SBoa064

Sir Piggy

DESCRIPTION: "One morning Sir Piggy put on his fine clothes; Taking his cane, out walking he goes." He goes to a tavern, calls for wine, and goes to visit Miss Puss. Piggy and Towser duel over her; Piggy shoots off Towser's tail. A judge says Towser should ride a rail

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: fight animal injury
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 184, "Sir Piggy" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #11369
NOTES [31 words]: This sounds like the worn-down remnants of a much longer song about a pig and dog dueling over who will wed a cat. Too bad it's so short; I suspect the original was quite interesting. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3
File: Brne184

Sir Robert o' Gordonstown

DESCRIPTION: "Oh! wha has na heard o' that man o' renown -- The wizard, Sir Robert o' Gordonstown!" The wizard had cheated the devil of his soul but is tricked into accompanying the Devil to his death.

AUTHOR: William Hay (source: Cumming, Greig/Duncan8) EARLIEST DATE: 1839 (Cumming)
LONG DESCRIPTION: The wicked wizard Sir Robert had cheated the devil of his soul. Afterwards, he didn't even have a shadow: "langsyne had he lost it in far foreign parts" Then he made "a fiend-salamander" in his furnace to learn secrets that allowed him, for example, to ride his coach across thin ice without falling through. One night the Devil disguised himself as the wizard's friend, the Parson o' Duffus, and they drank until the wizard became drunk and confused. "Duffus"s shape changed to a charger. Apparently realizing that his soul was in danger again, and believing that safety lay in reaching the graveyard at Birnie, Sir Robert rode the [Devil] charger toward Birnie where "The spries o' the earth, an' fiends o' the air" were waiting. The Devil took Sir Robert's soul and that of the Parson of Birnie as well.

KEYWORDS: shape-changing death suicide magic drink horse clergy Devil witch
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1887, "Robert Gordon of Gordonston" (1 text)
[George Cumming, editor,] The Lintie o' Moray being a Collection of Poems Chiefly Composed for and Sung at the Anniversaries of the Edinburgh Morayshire Society From 1829 to 1841, (Forres, 1851 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 55-58, 81-82, "Sir Roberts o' Gordonstown"
Roud #13117
NOTES [245 words]: The ballad leaves holes in the story, which Cumming resolves by telling the whole story in an Appendix. The story, but not the ballad, explains that Sir Richard rode to Birnie because he had been advised by "Duffus" that "if he reached and set foot on the holy mould even of the [Birnie] kirk-yard, no power in hell could touch him." In the ballad "Duffus" is misleading Sir Robert into a trap. In the story the Devil follows and catches Sir Robert after being inadvertently misdirected by the drunk Parson of Birnie; that parson's error leads to his own death at the Devil's hands. In the ballad there is no chance that the Devil is misdirected since he is carrying Sir Robert; the death of the Parson of Birnie by suicide -- "for the Parson o' Birnie has put himself doon" -- in the ballad is not explained.

Cuming: "Sir Robert Gordon was second son of the Earl of Sutherland. He had received his education partly in Italy, and travelled abroad during his younger days. He was created a baronet of Nova Scotia in 1625, and in 1634 was a privy counsellor of Charles I. He was a man of uncommon genius, and in a knowledge of art and science, was far in advance of the age in which he lived. Hence he was deemed a 'wizard,' and was the terror of the common people who believed he was familiar with Satan." - BS

It is interesting to note a legend that a man without a shadow was said to have lost his soul. The loss of his shadow presumably predicted Sir Richard's end. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD81887

Sir Robert Peel, The

DESCRIPTION: "In the pleasant month of May, 'twas the year of thirty-eight... It was down in the narrows where they watched for the eel Lay her majesty's steamer called the Sir Robert Peel." Forced to land in America, the ship is burnt to avenge the Caroline

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960
KEYWORDS: ship battle political revenge
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Dec 29, 1837 - The American vessel the Caroline, which had been transporting supplies to the Canadian rebels, is set afire and run over Niagara Falls by Canadians led by Captain Andrew Drew
May 30, 1838 - The Sir Robert Peel halts at Wells Island to take on wood. Raiders led by Bill Johnston attack her, take off her crew, and set her afire to avenge the Caroline

FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong, pp. 76-78, "The 'Sir Robert Peel'" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4031
NOTES [33 words]: For the history of the Canadian rebellion, which led to the events in this song, see the notes on "An Anti-Rebel Song" and "Farewell to Mackenzie."
This song is item dA33 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW

File: FMB076

Sir Roland

DESCRIPTION: "When he came to his ain luve's boucher," his "fair fause luve" admits him. It is Halloween, and she kills him. At a river, she meets a knight. Only one who is faithful can cross there. She tries to ride with him, and drowns. The knight is her lover's ghost

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1829 (Chambers-ScottishBallads)
KEYWORDS: death river betrayal homicide dog ghost revenge
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Chambers-ScottishBallads, pp. 231-234, "Sir Roland" (1 text)
Roud #9090
NOTES [44 words]: There seems to be only one text of this, from Motherwell, and it damaged -- it's not even clear why Motherwell called it "Sir Roland." It's unfortunate; there is enough left to give us the general idea of the song, and it sounds quite impressive in a spooky way. - RBW
Sir Steeple
DESCRIPTION: Sir Steeple courted "queer widow Glib" for her money and the chance for knighthood if they were married. "Together they gadded to concerts and halls." At the wedding the parson says "Your wife's rather short" "In choosing two evils I've chosen the least"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: greed marriage money humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Greig/Duncan4 819, "Sir Steeple" (1 text)
  Roud #6213
File: GrD4819

Sissy in the Barn
DESCRIPTION: "Sissy in the barn, O join the wedding, Sweetest li'l couple I e'er did see, O Bon Ton, put your arms around me! Say, li'l Sissy, Won't you marry me?" "Gety back, gal, Get yo' arms from around me!" The two children discuss courting
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1944 (Trent-Johns-PlaySongsOfTheDeepSouth)
KEYWORDS: courting playparty rejection
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Trent-Johns-PlaySongsOfTheDeepSouth, pp. 2-5, "Bon Ton or Sissy in de Barn" (1 text, 1 tune with 2 arrangements)
  Roud #16198
File: TrJo002

Sistah Ca'oline
DESCRIPTION: "Sistah Ca'oline, Sistah Ca'oline, can't you dance the peavine? See that water melyine, I'se gwine to have a home bye and by. My old mistress promised me, I'm gwinta have a home bye and by, When she die she set me free, I'm gwinta have...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama)
KEYWORDS: dancing slave floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 94, "Sistah Ca'oline" (1 short text, 1 tune)
  Roud #16292
File: Arno094

Sister Seusan
DESCRIPTION: "Sister Sue and my (Aunt/gal) Sal, Gwine to git a home bime by-high. All gwine to lib down shin-bone al; Gwine to git a home bime by." Various verses on working, sailing, complaints. Noted as a Barbadian hand over hand.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Bullen, _The Log of a Sea Waif_)
KEYWORDS: worksong shanty
FOUND IN: US West Indies
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 200-201, "Gwine to Git a Home Bime By" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 390-391 "Sister Susan" (1 text, tune) [AbEd, p. 299]
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Shinbone Al

NOTES [51 words]: Bullen transcribed this shanty, and described the time he first heard it in his book The Log of a Sea Waif. He also included it later in his collection Songs of Sea Labor. Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas mentions that "Shinbone Alley" is a place name often referred to in American Negro songs. - SL
File: Hugi390

Sit Down, Servant, and Rest A Little While

DESCRIPTION: See notes for format. Verses "Sit down servant," "I know you're tired," "I know you've been talked about," "I know you've been lied on," "You've come a mighty long way"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (recording, Rev. J. M. Gates)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious worksong

FOUND IN: US(SE)

Roud #12096

RECORDINGS:
Rev. J. M. Gates, "Sit Down, Servant, and Rest A Little While" (OKeh 8398, 1926)
Rev. Timothy Hayes and Group, "Sit Down Servant" (on VaWork)

NOTES [69 words]: VaWork is an oyster shucking work song. In this case the song is call-and-response. That is: a verse is a one-line call and the response is "sit down"; that is repeated three times, followed by the line "Why don't you sit down and rest a little while" where at least "sit down and rest a little while" is sung by all the workers. Singers work to their own rhythm rather than working to the rhythm of the singing. - BS

Last updated in version 4.2

File: RcOK8398

Sittin' in de Cotton

DESCRIPTION: "When the cannonballs a-singing and the mustard gas is low, If I surely had my rothers, Alabama's where I'd go. Sitting in the cotton where you won't give a damn, Singing whoa buck." He thinks of all the deaths in the war and thinks even slavery is better

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe)

KEYWORDS: soldier animal death war home

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 200-203, "Sittin' in de Cotton" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #27891

File: NiMo200

Sitting Here Thinking

DESCRIPTION: "I'm just sitting here thinking, thinking about the past." When the singer gets the blues and wants to feel good he would take his baby's hand. "I wouldn't be worried if I could only hold her hand."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (USChartersHeroes)

KEYWORDS: love nonballad lover

FOUND IN: US(SE)

RECORDINGS:
Memphis Willie B and Gus Cannon, "Sitting Here Thinking" (on USChartersHeroes)

NOTES [18 words]: Three line blues: the first line is repeated -- more or less -- and the last line completes the thought. - BS

Last updated in version 5.2

File: RcSiHeTh
Sitting in a Tree (K-I-S-S-I-N-G, First Comes Love, Dick and Jane)

DESCRIPTION: "Dick and Jane [or any other boy and girl] SItting in a tree, K-I-S-S-I-N-G, First comes love, then comes marriage, Then comes (something) with a baby carriage."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (Carey)

KEYWORDS: playparty courting baby marriage

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Carey-MarylandFolkloreAndFolklife, p. 81, "(no title)" (1 short text)
Roud #19216

NOTES [69 words]: I seem vaguely to remember this chant from... somewhere... so I have included it here. Considering how few traditional rhymes I learned from tradition, I would imagine it is very common -- but it rarely seems to be cited, perhaps because the names are always changing. In my experience, it's used to tease: children too young to be interested in the opposite sex use it to harass the children who are interested. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.8

File: CarMF81A

Sitting on Top of the World

DESCRIPTION: Singer's woman leaves him, then says "Come back... I need you so". He spurns her: "If you don't like my peaches, don't shake my tree...." He'll find another woman. Ch.: "But now she's gone, and I don't worry/Because I'm sitting on top of the world"

AUTHOR: Probably Walter Vincson (Digital Tradition lists Lonnie Carter and Walter Jacobs)

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (recording, Mississippi Sheiks)

KEYWORDS: hardheartedness love travel abandonment floating verses lover

FOUND IN: US(SE,So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
DT, STTNTOP*

Roud #7689

RECORDINGS:
Alabama Sheiks "Sittin' On Top of the World" (Victor 23261, 1931)
Beale St. Rounders, "Sittin' On Top of the World" (Vocalion 1555, 1930)
(Joe) Evans & (Arthur) McClain, "Sitting On Top of the World" (Banner 32211/Oriole 8079/Perfect 180/Romeo 5079, 1931)
Shelton Brothers, "I'm Sittin' On Top of the World" (Decca 5190, 1936)
Mississippi Sheiks, "Sitting on Top of the World" (OKeh 8784, 1930; OKeh 45506, 1931)
Scottsdale String Band, "Sittin' On Top of the World" (OKeh 45509, 1931; rec. 1930)
Doc Watson, "Sitting On Top of the World" (on WatsonAshley1)
Clarence Williams Jug Band, "Sitting On Top of the World" (OKeh 8826, 1930)
Moses Williams, "Sitting on Top of the World" (on USFlorida01)
Bob Wills, "Sittin' On Top of the World" (Vocalion 03139, 1936 [rec. 1935])

SAME TUNE:
Mississippi Sheiks, "Sitting On Top of the World #2" (OKeh 8854, 1931; rec. 1930)

NOTES [39 words]: This song should not be confused with the Tin Pan Alley song, "I'm Sitting on Top of the World" (which goes on, "Just rollin' along, just rollin' along"), although the Mississippi Sheiks may have been ironically quoting from it. - PJS

Last updated in version 5.1

File: dtSTTNTO

Six Days Shalt Thou Labor

DESCRIPTION: "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thou art able, And on the seventh -- holystone the decks and scrape the cable" (or "the seventh the same, and clean out the stable," etc.) A (sailor's) complaint about hard work and dishonoring the Sabbath

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1840 (Two Years Before the Mast)
Six Dukes Went a-Fishing

DESCRIPTION: (Six dukes) go fishing and find the body of the (some Duke). His body is brought (home/to London); the embalming is described in rather gory detail. His burial is described in language reminiscent of "The Death of Queen Jane"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1690 (broadside)

KEYWORDS: death burial nobility corpse funeral

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,South)) US(NE)

REFERENCES (11 citations):
- Bronson (170), 2 versions in Appendix B to "The Death of Queen Jane," though these are not all the versions of the song known to Bronson
- Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, p. 219, "Two Dukes" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #12}
- Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland, pp. 78-79, "Two Dukes" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland3, pp. 159-160, "The Duke of Bedford" (2 texts, 2 tunes) {A=Bronson's #12}
- Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 48, "The Duke of Grafton" (1 text)
- Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 21, "The Duke of Bedford" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #11}
- Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 35, "The Duke of Bedford" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #11}
- VaughanWilliams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolksongs, p. 97, "Six Dukes Went a-Fishing" (1 text, 1 tune)
- OShaughnessy/Grainger-TwentyOneLincolnshireFolkSongs 20, "Six Dukes Went a-Fishing" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Hodgart-FaberBookOfBallads, p. 150, "Six Dukes went a-fishing" (1 text)
- Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN316, "As two men were a walking, down by the sea side"

ST FO078 (Partial)

Roud #78

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "The Death of Queen Jane" [Child 170] (lyrics)

NOTES [1634 words]: The person referred to in this ballad is hard to determine. One text refers to the Duke as the "Duke of Grantham." There were three barons of Grantham (died 1770, 1786, and 1859; the third Baron was made earl in 1833), but their circumstances do not seem to fit the ballad. In any case, they were not dukes. - AS, RBW

In another text, the Duke is lord of Grafton. Grafton was a very late and temporary dukedom; Henry Fitzroy (the illegitimate son of Charles II) briefly held the title. Grafton is notable only for leading a Guards regiment during the Glorious Revolution, when he abandoned James II to support William and Mary. (There is, however, a broadside, Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex ZN2703, "Unwelcome Tydings over spreads the Land," entitled "Englands Tribute of Tears.. Death..Duke of Grafton.. 9th. of October, 1690.") A later Duke, Henry Fitzroy, third Duke of Grafton (1735-1811), was Prime Minister 1767-1770, and partly responsible for the colonial problems leading to the American revolution (Brumwell/Speck, p. 166), but this is obviously too late. So are his successors. If we ignore the names and look at the internal evidence of the song, perhaps the least implausible Moleyns was sufficient to move the great seal or authorize an exchequer writ; the King himself did not have the Carta right of appealing to them for judgment (Griffiths, p. 684). Henry ordered Suffolk's exile in 1450 (to spare his life), but the ship he was sailing on was intercepted and Suffolk taken off. Suffolk was beheaded by the ship's crew, incompetently, and his body thrown on the shore on May 2, 1450 (Gillingham, pp. 62-63). Supposedly the body lay on the shore for several days before finally being taken away by the sheriff of Kent (Royle, p. 125). Rumor (probably false) had Suffolk linked romantically with Queen Margaret of Anjou, which would partly explain the line "royal Queen Mary went weeping away" in the "Grafton" text. Although the relationship probably wasn't sexual, it is said that Margaret took to her bed for some days after the shock (Royle, p. 125). And we know that there were mocking songs about his death; Royle quotes one (in modernized language). There were also tales, probably false, that he had raped a French nun (Griffiths, p. 682); the only thing worse than Suffolk's actual acts was his reputation.

It is interesting to note, incidentally, that de la Pole was married to Chaucer's granddaughter Alice Chaucer, according to Kerr, p. 111; Griffiths, p. 308. One might speculate that a member of the family might have originated this poem, except that there is no evidence that Chaucer's skills were passed on to his offspring -- although Alice Chaucer, according to Castor, p. 148, etc., proved excellent at managing her dead husband's estate and her children's prospects; her son in fact married into the royal family and her grandson was declared heir to the throne by Richard III.) Another possibility, which as far as I know is original to me, is that the reference is actually to Richard Woodville, first Earl Rivers (c. 1410-1469). Rivers was never a Duke -- indeed, he was only briefly an earl, and not a landed one. But he was the father of Queen Elizabeth Woodville (wife of Edward IV), which made him a sort of vague member of the royal family, which might cause him to be called a duke. Plus, he lived in Grafton Regis (Reid, p. 425; Hicks, p. 328). Rivers was executed in 1469 by members of the Neville (anti-Edward) faction in the second major phase of the Wars of the Roses (Ross, p. 80; OxfordCompanion, p. 809). And, because he was the king's father-in-law, his death was of unusual interest to the various royal dukedoms.

The period of the Wars of the Roses also suggests the case of Thomas Lord Scales. A veteran of the Hundred Years' War, in 1460 he defended the Tower of London for the government of the Lancastrian king Henry VI (Reid, p. 392). But London supported the Yorkists, and the Tower was besieged. An agreement was made with the Yorkists for Scales and his officers to leave the tower in safety. But Scales had bombarded London as part of his defense, and the Londoners caught up with him, killed him, and tossed his body on the banks of the Thames at Southwark (Castor, p. 137; WagnerHundred, p. 279; WagnerRoses, p. 244). So his fate fits the song, but he wasn't a duke and his body wasn't discovered by dukes.

It is interesting to note that the daughter of Scales married Anthony Woodville, the son of Rivers, who thus in turn became Lord Scales and eventually Earl Rivers. But he was executed by Richard III far from the ocean. not have to sign. And his murder was shortly followed by the arrest of Suffolk. Similarly, William Ayscough, Bishop of Salisbury, ally of Suffolk, and confessor to Henry VI, was murdered by a mob while conducting a mass in Wiltshire (Tuck, p. 298). He wasn't thrown out on the seashore, but he was beheaded (Storey, p. 66); his fateshows the tenor of the times. And, like Suffolk, he seems to have enriched himself, since he was reported to have been plundered of 3,000 pounds.

Also coming at about this time was the case of Sir Humphrey Stafford of Grafton, who was killed in a scuffle with Jack Cade's rebels in 1450 (Royle, p. 129). He wasn't thrown on a beach, and he wasn't a duke -- but he was a kinsman of the Duke of Buckingham, and the name might have caused confusion.

All these early possible identifications suffer from the fact that, until relatively recently, England almost never had more than nine active Dukedoms (Buckingham, Clarence, Exeter, Gloucester, Lancaster, Norfolk, Somerset, Suffolk, York), and usually fewer (e.g. the only Dukes of Lancaster who were not also King were Henry of Derby and his son-in-law John of Gaunt, and the Dukes of Somerset tended to be very short-lived). England, until the eighteenth century, had a limited peerage; it was James VI and I who first started selling earldoms in exchange for ready cash (Lyon, p. 203; according to Gregg, p. 143, the House of Lords had just 59 members -- most of them not dukes -- when James VI and I took the throne in 1603; he created a net of 45 more peers, and by the end of Anne's reign in 1714 there were 168). And even James had some restraint; by comparison, the first three Georges nearly doubled the number of peers, creating the first significant class of landless Lords; the purposes, of course, were political.

The case of Suffolk, murdered in large part because he was a favorite, has been compared to that of George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, the favorite of James VI and I and friend of Charles I, who was murdered in 1628 (Storey, p. 61; for background on this, see the notes to "A Horse Named Bill"). That case, however, came much later, and the details don't fit this song.

I guess it's safe to conclude that this story is badly garbled. I find myself wondering if this might not be a sort of a conflation of all those nobles murdered in the period 1450-1470: The Duke of Suffolk and Moleyns of Chichester combined perhaps with Rivers of Grafton to produce a Duke of Grafton murdered by the sea. - RBW

To these possibilities, Sharp's 100 English Folksongs adds the son of the fourth Duke of Bedford, killed by a fall from his horse in 1767. - PJS

And, in an interesting twist, the fourth duke of Bedford was part of the Grafton government of 1770, according to Oxford Companion, p. 92. But this, of course, appears to be later than the earliest broadside texts. At least Bedford was a real dukedom, attested to in some versions of the text, so the song might have been adjusted. - RBW

See also Mary Rowland, 'Which Noble Duke?', FMJ 1965 - RBW, following WBO

Bibliography

- Castor: Helen Castor, Blood & Roses: The Paston Family in the Fifteenth Century, Faber & Faber, 2004
- Gillingham: John Gillingham, The Wars of the Roses, Louisiana State University, 1984
- Gregg: Edward Gregg, Queen Anne, 1980 (I use the 2001 Yale English Monarchs paperback edition with a new introduction by the author)
- Hicks: Michael Hicks, Who's Who in Late Medieval England (1272-1485), (being the third volume in the Who's Who in British History series), Shepheard-Walwyn, 1991
- Lyon: Ann Lyon, Constitutional History of the United Kingdom, Cavendish, 2003
- Reid: Peter Reid, By Fire and Sword: The Rise and Fall of English Supremacy at Arms: 1314-1485, Constable, 2007
- Tuck: Anthony Tuck, Crown and Nobility 1272-1461, 1985; I use the 1986 Barnes & Noble
Six Horse-Power Coaker, The

DESCRIPTION: An old run-down motor that still has a lot of life left in it fails one day as the weather worsens and they have a dory in tow. An orphan boy comes to the rescue in a skiff and is able to start the motor. They take on the boy from that time forward.

AUTHOR: Arthur R. Scammell (1913-1995)

EARLIEST DATE: 1940

KEYWORDS: recitation technology talltale ship rescue

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (4 citations):

Blondahl-NewfoundlanderSing, pp. 68-69, "The Six-Horsepower Coaker" (1 text, 1 tune)

Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 332-335, "The Six Horsepower Coker" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #7310

RECORDINGS:

Eddy Primroy, "Coaker" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

Ned Rice, "Six Horsepower Coaker" (on NFAGuigné01)

NOTES [317 words]: The author, Arthur Reginald Scammell (mistakenly spelled with one "l" in [Doyle]), has written many poems, songs and even stories with Newfoundland themes. One of his more famous songs is, "The Squid-Jiggin' Ground." Some collections of his works include: _My Newfoundland: Stories, Poems, Songs_ (St. John's: Harry Cuff Publications, 1988) and "Newfoundland Echoes" (St. John's: Harry Cuff Publications, 1988). _Collected Works of A. R. Scammell_ was also published by Harry Cuff in 1990.

The boy in the song is referred to as being a "bedlamer boy" which is a corruption of the French phrase, "bête de la mer" used in Newfoundland to refer to half-grown seals and boys. See: Harold Horwood, _Newfoundland_ (Toronto: Macmillan of Canada, 1969), p. 84. - SH

For background on Arthur R. Scammell, see the notes on "The Squid-Jiggin' Ground." - RBW

Bedlamers are second year seals, not yet fully mature but able to care for themselves -- sort of the seal equivalent of teenagers. The title is a description of age; a bedlamer may be either a "harp" or a "hood." The origin of the name is uncertain; some connect it with "bedlam," because they create bedlam, others with French "bête de la mer," "beast of the sea" (Young, p. 33; StoryKirwinWiddowson, p. 37, prefer the "bedlam" sense, and first cite the term from 1766. Their second meaning, "bedlamer [boy]." refers to a youth approaching manhood; it is not attested prior to 1896. Scammell's 1940 publication of this poem is their second attestation; clearly "bedlamer" refers more often to seals than men).

StoryKirwinWiddowson, p. 102, says that a "coaker" was a "gasoline fuelled engine used in fishing boat c1920, and named for Sir William Coaker, president of the Fishermen's Protective Union" (for whom see "Coaker's Dream"). The "coaker" engine was said to be a major improvement on the boat engines which had come before, being much quieter. - RBW

Bibliography

- Young: Ron Young,Dictionary of Newfoundland and Labrador, Downhome Publishing Inc., 2006
Six Jolly Miners

DESCRIPTION: About "six jolly miners." They come from all over Britain, "but all of their delight was to split those rocks in twine." "Sometimes we have good credit, boys, sometimes we've none at all." "We'll call for liquors plenty and drink our healths all round."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle); c.1867? (broadside, Harding B 26(374))

KEYWORDS: work mining drink nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North,South)Scotland(Bord)) Canada(Mar) US(MA)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 238, "Six Jolly Miners (1 text with supplements, 1 tune)
Copper-SongsAndSouthernBreezes, pp. 286-287, "Six Jolly Miners" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 92, "The Miners" (1 text)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #141, "Six Jolly Miners" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, p. 176, "The Jolly Miner " (1 text, 1 tune)
MacColl-PersonalChoice, p. 58, "Six jolly miners" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
Louis Rowe, "Six Jolly Miners" (on FSB9)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 26(374), "Lines written on the Six Jolly Miners" ("Lts of six jolly miner lads six miners yo [sic] shall hear"), P. Brereton (Dublin), c.1867; also 2806 c.8(197), "Lines wretten [sic] on the Six Jolly Miners"

NOTES [17 words]: The Brereton [broadside] date is problematic. Bodleian assigns c.1867 for all Brereton broadsides. - BS

Last updated in version 6.1
File: K238

Six Little Mice Sat Down to Spin

DESCRIPTION: "Six little mice sat down to spin; Pussy passed by and she peeped in. What are you doing, my little en? Weaving coats for gentlemen. Shall I come in... You'd bite off our heads... Oh, no, I'll not... That may be so, but you don't come in."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1842 (Halliwell)

KEYWORDS: animal clothes

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 349, "Six Little Mice Sat Down to Spin" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #183, pp. 130-131, "(Six little mice sat down to spin)"
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 109, "Six Little Mice Sat Down to Spin" (1 text)

Roud #14008

File: 002349

Six Men and One Woman Taken Off the Ice at Petty Harb'r

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you hardy Fishermen, And hark to what I say, And hear how six were rescued Near Petty Harbor Bay." Stranded overnight on the ice, they desperately signal for help. Spotted at last, the Ingraham comes to rescue them

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Harbour Grace Standard)

KEYWORDS: wreck rescue

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, p. 80, "Six Men and One Woman Taken Off The Ice at Petty Harb'r" (1 text, 1 tune)
Six Months Ain't Long
DESCRIPTION: Singer reports that "all I've got's done gone"; he was framed by an upright judge and sentenced to six months in jail for shooting up the town. Ch.: "Six months ain't long, ain't long my dear...six months ain't long for me to be gone/oh darling...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (recording, Rutherford & Foster)
KEYWORDS: captivity love violence crime prison punishment trial judge prisoner
FOUND IN:
RECORDINGS:
Leonard Rutherford & John Foster, "Six Months Ain't Long" (Brunswick 490, rec. 1930; on KMM)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "My Last Gold Dollar" (lyrics)
cf. "Six Months in Jail Ain't So Long" (subject)
NOTES [27 words]: The similarity to "Six Months in Jail Ain't so Long" is primarily in the situation, not the song. The lyrics are different, the tune is different, I split them. - PJS
File: Rc6MoLo

Six Months in Jail Ain't So Long
DESCRIPTION: "Six months in jail ain't so long, baby, It's workin' on the county farm. Got my pick an' shovel now, baby, Yo' true lub is gone. Who's gwine to be yo' true lub, baby, When I'm gone? Who gwine to bring you chickens... When I'm workin' on the county farm?"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1923 (AbbotSwan)
KEYWORDS: prison lover food work
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 231, "Work-Song" (1 short text)
Abbot/Swan-8Negro 1, "Who Gon' Bring You Chickens" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Who Will Shoe Your Pretty Little Foot" (theme)
cf. "Six Months Ain't Long" (subject)
NOTES [51 words]: This started a chain of songs; the Virginia-based folksinger and folklorist Paul Clayton adapted the song into "Who's Gonna Buy You Ribbons?"; Bob Dylan adapted that into "Don't Think Twice, It's All Right", which was then adapted into "Understand Your Man" by Johnny Cash. Sounds like a folk song to me. - PJS
Last updated in version 4.3
File: ScNF231A

Six Sweethearts, The
DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls courting "six girls all at once." He enjoys it greatly until he starts to forget the girls' names. The girls unite to pay him back. He dreams of what else they might do -- and of being a Turk and marrying all of them
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: courting betrayal dream
FOUND IN: Ireland Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Six Whistles
DESCRIPTION: "Six whistles, six again -- the fatal call" which makes those who hear "Ask, 'What poor devil's got it now?'" Bill, a married man with children, is the dead man "the first this month." The loggers wonder who will be next
AUTHOR: Rona Morris Workman (source: Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps)
EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps)
KEYWORDS: logger lumbering death
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 68, "Six Whistles" (1 text)

Six-Bit Express, De
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, the six bit 'spressmen sing this song, doo dah, oh, doo dah day. Oh, the six bit 'spress is a hundred miles long." They will run the train all night and day "In a dirty lousy dugout on a bed made of hay." The singer does well at craps.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe)
KEYWORDS: train war soldier gambling
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 212-214, "De Six-Bit Express" (1 text, 1 tune)

Sixteen Men in a Pine-Slab Bunk
DESCRIPTION: "Sixteen men in a pine-slab bunk -- Gosh, how the bullies snore!" They sleep soundly to prepare for the next day's work. They are so crowded that they have to turn in their bed in unison. They wait, eat a lot, and head out into the woods to work
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps)
KEYWORDS: logger lumbering work derivative
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 32, "Sixteen Men in Pine-Slab Bunk" (1 text)
NOTES [47 words]: Clearly derived from Stevenson's "Fifteen men on the Dead Man's Chest," which mean it must have originated after Treasure Island was published in 1883; Beck says further that it is derived from Young E. Allison's 1891 poem "Derelict," an expansion of Stevenson's short text. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2

Sixteen Thousand Miles from Home
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, I'm sixteen thousand miles from home... To think that I should humble down To come out here stone-breaking." The new immigrant is met by a local contractor, who flatters him and tricks him into a menial job. (The singer prefers to join the army)
AUTHOR: unknown
Sixteen Tons

DESCRIPTION: "Now some folks say a man is made out of mud, But a poor man's made out of muscle and blood." The singer describes the hard life in the mines -- and the debts incurred. "St. Peter, don't you call me, 'cause I can't go; I owe my soul to the company store."

AUTHOR: Merle Travis
EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (recorded by author)
KEYWORDS: work hardtimes poverty mining
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 154, "Sixteen Tons" (1 text, 1 tune)
Green-OnlyAMiner-RecordedCoalMiningSongs, p. 279-281, "Two by Travis": p. 295, "Sixteen Tons" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, TON16
Roud #15162
RECORDINGS:
George Davis, "Sixteen Tons" (on GeorgeDavis01)
Tennessee Ernie Ford, "Sixteen Tons" (Capitol 3262, 1955)
B. B. King, "Sixteen Tons" (RPM 451, n.d.)
Merle Travis, "Sixteen Tons" (Capitol 48001, 1947; on 78 album "Folk Songs of the Hills", Capitol AD 50; rec. 1946)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "'31 Depression Blues" (lyrics)
File: LoF154

Sixteen Years, Mama

DESCRIPTION: The daughter says that at 16 it is time she was wed. The mother offers her daughter a sheep instead; daughter would weep. Mother offers a cow; daughter would frown. Mother offers a man; daughter says "as soon as ever you can... Married I'd like to be"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1977 (IRClare01,Voice15)
KEYWORDS: dialog mother bargaining animal
FOUND IN: Ireland
Roud #12942
RECORDINGS:
Mary Delaney, "Fourteen Last Sunday" (on IRTravellers01)
Mikey Kelleher, "Daughter, Dearest Daughter" (on IRClare01)
Tom Lenihan, "Sixteen Years, Mama" (on Voice15)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Whistle, Daughter, Whistle" (subject)
cf. "Lazy Mary" ("She Won't Get Up") (subject)
cf. "The Maid's Complaint to her Mother" (theme)
NOTES [38 words]: This is "Whistle, Daughter, Whistle" without the whistle.
The last verse of Mikey Kelleher's "Daughter, Dearest Daughter" on IRClaire01 is the "father and mother in yonder bed do lie" verse from "Blow the Candle Out" [Laws P17]. - BS

Last updated in version 2.6
File: Rc16YrsM

Skeppet Bernadotte

DESCRIPTION: Swedish capstan shanty. Translation - Ship sails from Cardiff, runs into various mechanical problems and bad weather and are left with nothing but bread to eat.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (Sternvall, _Sang under Segel_)

KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage shanty ship technology food

FOUND IN: Sweden

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 469-470, "Skeppet Bernadotte" (2 texts, Swedish & English, 1 tune)
- Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 146, "Skeppet Bernadotte" (2 texts, Swedish & English, 1 tune)

File: Hugi469

Skerry's Blue-Eyed Jane

DESCRIPTION: The singer rides up to a "lovely maid," and asks if she will come away with him. She refuses; she loves another. He says her love is married. She says he lies, and if her love were here, he would slay the singer. The singer reveals that he is her love

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: love courting separation reunion disguise

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeopleH737, pp. 309-310, "Skerry's Blue-Eyed Jane" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #3816

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "John (George) Riley (I)" [Laws N36] and references there

File: HHH737

Skewball [Laws Q22]

DESCRIPTION: (Skewball) and one or more other horses run a race; the crowd favors another animal. (Half way through the course), Skewball tells his rider he will win. He pushes on to victory (and drinks a toast with his rider)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1784 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B25)

KEYWORDS: horse racing promise

FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,NE,SE,SO) Britain(England)

REFERENCES (16 citations):
- Laws Q22, "Skewball"
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 136, "Skew Ball" (2 fragments)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 136, "Skew Ball" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
- Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 51, pp. 88-89, "Skewball" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 253, "The Noble Skew Bald" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Thompson-APioneerSongster 34, "Skewball" (1 text)
- Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster, pp. 172-174, "The Noble Sku-ball" (2 texts, 1 tune)
- Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 68-70, "Stewball" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 62-64, "The Noble Skewball" (1 partial text plus a British version in a footnote, 1 tune)
- Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 102-110, "Stewball" (4 texts, 1 tune, linked to this by the horse's name Stewball though the versions often seem to pick up pieces of other racing songs, notably Skibbereen

DESCRIPTION: A boy asks his father why he left Skibbereen when he is always speaking of it. The father lists reasons: First came the blight. Then the landlord took the land. Then he joined the 1848 rebellion, and had to flee. The boy promises revenge.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Dean-FlyingCloud)

KEYWORDS: Ireland rebellion hardtimes landlord exile starvation

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
- 1847/8 - Greatest of several Irish potato famines
- 1848 - Irish rebellion

FOUND IN: Ireland Australia Canada(Ont) US(MW)

REFERENCES (7 citations):
- Hayward-UlsterSongsAndBalladsOfTheTownAndCountry, pp. 52-53, "Skibbereen" (1 text)
- Galvin-IrishSongsOfResistance, p. 46, "Skibbereen" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, p. 163, "Skibbereen" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 22-23, "Skibbereen" (1 text)
- Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario 18, "Skibbereen" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Vikár/Panagapka-SongsNorthWoodsSungByOJAbbott 24, "Skibbereen" (1 text, 1 tune)
- DT, SKIBREEN*

RECORDINGS:
- O. J. Abbott, "Skibbereen" (on Abbott1)
- Freddy McKay, "Skibbereen" (on Voice08)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Molly and Tenbrooks" [Laws H27] (plot)
- cf. "Little Dun Dee" (plot)

NOTES [19 words]: This seems to have given rise to a work song fragment, "Old Skubald"; see Darling-NewAmericanSongster, p. 325. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1

File: LQ22
cf. "Over There (I - The Praties They Grow Small)" (subject: The Potato Famines) and references there NOTES [347 words]: The 1848 Irish rebellion was the result of many factors. One was hunger -- the potato blight drove food prices beyond the reach of common people; in the end, millions died and many more went to America. For details, see the notes to "Over There (I - The Praties They Grow Small)."
 Another was land hunger; the preceding decades had forced many Irish smallholders off their lands while allowing the rich (usually English) to enlarge their holdings. By the time of the blight, most Irish were working holdings of five acres or less; there simply wasn't enough land for the population.
The image of the landlord squeezing the tenants is also accurate. Though landlords in Ireland were always unusually ruthless, things got worse in the post-blight period. The landlords preferred raising stock, with a prospect for selling it, to helping peasants (who supplied only labor). The poor laws of the period helped them clear off the land: A peasant who appealed for food because his crops were taken by the blight automatically lost his lease. Between 1851 and 1857, the number of smallholdings in Ireland fell by about a sixth.
Finally, revolution was in the air; almost all of Europe (except England) was in turmoil.
Unfortunately for the rebels, the very factors that caused the revolt meant that it had no strength and could gain no foreign help. And England, with a stable government at home and all her enemies distracted, could deal with the rebellion at its leisure.
I don't know that it's significant that Skibbereen is described as the rebel's home place. But it's interesting, since Skibbereen was where O'Donovan Rossa founded the Phoenix National and Literary Society -- which, despite its name, was an armed rebel group -- though this was abouta decade after1848. (For this story, see Terry Golway, For the Cause of Liberty, p. 131, or T. W.
Moody, F. X. Martin, and Dermot Keough, with Patrick Kiely, The Course of Irish History, fifth edition, 2011 (page references are to the 2012 paperback edition), p. 243. For Rossa, see the notes to "Rossa's Farewell to Erin.") - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: PGa046

Skibbereen (II)
DESCRIPTION: The singer tells "what happened to me at the wake o' me cow" in Skibbereen. His "relayshuns ... in their thousands" drank up the still, fought, broke up the house and killed his sow.
Next day all were sentenced to a week or two for fighting.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland)
KEYWORDS: fight violence trial drink party talltale animal family
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 88, "Skibbereen" (1 text)
File: 0Con088

Skidding Down the Runway
DESCRIPTION: Complaints of the crew of a shot-up plane: "She'll be skidding down the runway when she comes." "She'll be needin' ammunition when she comss." "She'll be weepin' tears of oil when she comes. "She'll be plugged chock full of holes when she comes."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead)
KEYWORDS: technology flying hardtimes soldier derivative
FOUND IN: Canada
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, p. 121, "Skidding Down the Runway" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #29421
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "She'll Be Coming Round the Mountain" (tune) and references there
File: Hopk121
Skidmore Fancy Ball, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, here we go so nobly, oh, de colored Belvederes, A number one, we carry a gun, we beat the fusileers." "Every coon's us warm as June, at de Skidmore fancy ball." "We're bon ton darkies all: Sweet Caledone, it gives a tone to de Skidmore fancy hall."

AUTHOR: Words: Edward Harrigan / Music: David Braham

EARLIEST DATE: 1879 (The Mulligan Guard Ball)

KEYWORDS: dancing nonballad Black(s)

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Finson-Edward-Harrigan-David-Braham, vol. I, #23, pp. 79-82, "The Skidmore Fancy Ball" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Spaeth-ReadEmAndWeep, pp. 114-115, "The Skidmore Fancy Ball" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: Richard Moody, editor, _Dramas from the American Theatre, 1762-1909_, World Publishing Company, 1966; the play "The Mulligan Guard Ball" is on pp. 549-565 (this is the first printed edition, taken from the manuscript filed with the Library of Congress in 1879, and may not have matched the actual performances perfectly); this song is at the end of scene 4, on pp. 559, apparently led by Captain Sim Primrose

Edward Harrigan, _The Mulligans_, G. W. Dillingham, 1901, pp. 127, 142, "(no title)" (2 fragments) Roud #V15479

NOTES [326 words]: For background on Harrigan and Braham, see the notes to "The Babies on Our Block." This does not seem to have been collected in tradition, but it was very popular at the time it was composed; Spaeth, p. 187, refers to "musical hits [such] as The Skidmore Fancy Ball (a satirical treatment of a colored company)." I wonder if this (and another popular Skidmore song, "The Skidmore Guard") might not have been suppressed by liberal collectors -- because the Skidmore Guards were a Black target company, whose utterances were marked by strong dialect and who fought with razors. They and the Mulligan Guard, the company that Edward Harrigan made the subject of his most famous plays, had both rented the same hall for a ball, resulting in conflict over who would use the space (Franceschina, p. 118). Eventually the proprietor put the Mulligans downstairs, the Skidmores upstairs -- and the Skidmores broke the floor and fell on the Mulligans (Moody, pp. 5, 87-89), resulting in one of Harrigan's beloved Big Loud Spectacles.

According to Franceschina, p. 118, the song was sung by John Wild and Billy Gray, in blackface, with Wild playing Sam Primrose and Gray playing the Reverend Palestine Puter, who seem to have been allies in running the Skidmore Guard for their own benefit (although Harrigan eventually made Puter a criminal and Primrose an honest barber; HarriganMulligans, p. 450).

Bibliography

- HarriganMulligans: Edward Harrigan,The Mulligans, G. W. Dillingham, 1901

Last updated in version 5.2

File: HaBrSFB

Skin a Rabbit

DESCRIPTION: Teasing game. "Skin a rabbit, skin a rabbit, Chop him off here." (After which the singer strikes or taps another in the arm.)

AUTHOR: unknown
Skin and Bones (The Skin and Bones Lady)

DESCRIPTION: "There was an old woman, all skin and bones." The old woman decides to go to church. At the church she encounters a (rotting?) corpse. She asks the (parson/clock), "Will I be thus when I am dead." When told "Yes," she screams and/or dies

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1810 (Gammer Gurton's Garland, revised edition)
KEYWORDS: death questions
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,NE,SE,So) Britain(England)
REFERENCES (22 citations):
- Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 502-503, "Old Woman All Skin and Bone" (3 texts)
- Randolph 69, "The Skin-and-Bone Woman" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 142, "Old Woman All Skin and Bones" (4 texts plus 2 excerpts and mention of 3 more; the "B" text seems to have picked up a "Worms Crawl In" chorus)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 142, "Old Woman All Skin and Bones" (3 tunes plus text excerpts)
- Hudson-FolkTunesFromMississippi 43, "There Was an Old Woman" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
- Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 123, "There Was an Old Woman" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 84, pp. 135-136, "Skin and Bones" (1 text plus an excerpt from another, 1 tune)
- Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 53, "The Skin-and-Bone Lady" (1 short text, clearly this though it lacks the "skin-and-bone" reference)
- Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 86, "The Skin-and-Bone Lady" (2 texts, 1 tune)
- Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 203, "Ghost Song" (1 text)
- Ritchie-SingingFamilyOfTheCumberlands, pp. 11-12, "$[Skin and Bones]$" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Ritchie-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 20, "Skin and Bones" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Cox-FolkSongsSouth 167, "The Skin-And-Bone Lady" (2 texts)
- Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol3, pp. 12-13, "Skin and Bones" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 180-181, "The Old Woman All Skin and Bones" (2 texts, 1 tune)
- Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 44-46, "Old Woman All Skin and Bone" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 293, "There was a lady all skin and bone" (1 text)
- Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #92, pp. 86-88, "(There was a lady all skin and bone)"
- Chase-AmericanFolkTalesAndSongs, p. 186, "The Old Woman All Skin and Bones" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Botkin-TreasuryOfNewEnglandFolklore, p. 586, "Old Woman All Skin and Bone" (1 text, 1 tune)
- DT, SKINBONE

ADDITIONAL: Katherine Briggs, _A Dictionary of British Folk-Tales in the English Language_, Part A: Folk Narratives, 1970 (I use the 1971 Routledge paperback that combines volumes A.1 and A.2), volume A.2, p. 529, "The Lady That Went to Church" (1 text)

Roud #501

RECORDINGS:
Anonymous singer, "There Was an Old Woman All Skin and Bones" (on USWarnerColl01)
File: R069

Skin the Goat's Curse on Carey

DESCRIPTION: Skin the Goat says before he sails that he will give Carey, the informer, his curses, such as, "by some mistake may he shortly take A flowing pint of poison." Skin the Goat promises that "when I die, my old ghost will sit on his bed-post"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1883 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
KEYWORDS: transportation humorous betrayal curse Ireland
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Chronology of the Phoenix Park murders (source: primarily Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion, pp. 62, 63, 281-286.)

May 6, 1882 - Chief Secretary Lord Frederick Cavendish and the Under Secretary Thomas Henry Burke are murdered by a group calling themselves "The Invincible Society."
January 1883 - twenty seven men are arrested.
James Carey, one of the leaders in the murders, turns Queen's evidence.
Six men are condemned to death, four are executed (Joseph Brady is hanged May 14, 1883; Daniel Curley is hanged on May 18, 1883), others are "sentenced to penal servitude," and Carey is freed and goes to South Africa.
July 29, 1883 - Patrick O'Donnell kills Carey on board the "Melrose Castle" sailing from Cape Town to Durban.
Dec 1883 - Patrick O'Donnell is convicted of the murder of James Carey and executed in London (per Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast)

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 85, "Skin the Goat's Curse on Carey" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Phoenix Park Tragedy" (subject: the Phoenix Park murders) and references there

NOTES [123 words]: For another broadside on the same subject see Bodleian, Harding B 26(605), "Skin the Goat's Letter" ("You jolly old boys just hold your noise"), unknown, n.d.
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion p. 62: "The Phoenix Park murders and their judicial sequels struck the popular imagination and were a gold-mine for ballad-writers: some thirty songs were issued on this subject, which was the last great cause to be so extensively commented upon in broadside ballads."
Zimmermann p. 284: "'Skin the Goat' was the nickname of James Fitzharris, the cabman who drove the murderers of Lord Cavendish and Thomas Henry Burke to and from Phoenix Park. He was sentenced to penal servitude for 'conspiracy' because he refused to identify his passengers." - BS

File: Zimm085

Skinner on the Dock

DESCRIPTION: The singer leaves Lockport (on the Erie Canal), curses out Skinner, and describes some of his crewmates on the canal boat.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE:
KEYWORDS: bawdy canal moniker
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1825 - Erie Canal opens (construction began in 1817)

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 466-467, "Skinner on the Dock" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [19 words]: Legman in Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms posits that these are the "lost" first verses of "The Erie Canal." - EC

File: RL466

Skinner, Skinner, You Know the Rule

DESCRIPTION: "Skinner, skinner, you know the rule, Eat your breakfast and curry your mule, Curry your mules and curry them right, Let's get on the big boat next Saturday night." The singer complains about (work? and) his troubles with his woman

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1944 (Wheeler)
KEYWORDS: work nonballad animal

FOUND IN: US
Skinner's Song

DESCRIPTION: "I looked at de sun and de sun looked high, I looked at de captain and he wunk his eye, And he wunk his eye, and he wunk his eye, I looked at de captain and he wunk his eye." "I looked at de sun and de sun looked red... de captain... he turned his head."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)

KEYWORDS: work

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 230, "Skinner's Song" (1 short text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES: cf. "On the Road Again" (form)

NOTES [63 words]: A skinner is a teamster. Scarborough explains that "The Negro is not eager to work overtime." Understandable, since he certainly wouldn't get paid for it! Scarborough's fragment doesn't look quite like anything else I've seen, but it feels as if it's derived from "On the Road Again," or something in the "Joseph Mikel" family. One of those railroad/rambler songs, anyway. - RBW

File: ScaNF230

---

Skinny Leg Blues

DESCRIPTION: Singer is "a little bitty mama ... got everything a little bitty mama needs." "I've got little bitty legs ... something underneath works like a boar hog's eye." She makes her lover "whine" but she would cut his throat: "graveyard be your resting place"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (StuffDreams1)

KEYWORDS: sex warning bawdy nonballad lover

FOUND IN:

RECORDINGS:

Geeshie Wiley, "Skinny Leg Blues" (on StuffDreams1)

NOTES [101 words]: Three line blues: the first line is repeated -- more or less -- and the last line completes the thought.

I need some help with the reference to "skinny leg." Singer is not a "Big Leg Woman." If she were, says Johnny Temple (Decca 7547, 1938) "if you roll her belly like you roll her dough, Let you down so easy till you want some more." Jerry Lee Lewis, in his cover (Sun SI-1119,1970) of Temple, says, "Big leg women keep your dresses down... You've got something up under there make me want to lay down" So, the singer here does not look like a big legged woman. Nevertheless, she will not be put down. - BS

Last updated in version 5.2

File: RcSkLeBl

---

Skinny Malinky Long Legs

DESCRIPTION: "Skinny Malinky long/lanky legs, And big banana feet, Jammy face."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)

KEYWORDS: playparty

FOUND IN: New Zealand

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 126, "(Skin a ma links)"

(1 text)

Roud #19020
Skip to Me

DESCRIPTION: "Skip to my one and skip to me two, Harriet's other is looking at you, Skip to my three and skip to my four, who's that knocking at Harriet's door? Five... six... I love you but push you away quick..." The marriage was "only a dream"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1944 (Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry)

KEYWORDS: marriage home separation

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1909 - Joe Pawelka marries Hannah Wilson (probably the "Harriet" of "Skip to Me") After less than half a year, they separate; Pawelka attempts suicide and refuses to leave her alone. Discovered in possession of stolen property, he escapes from prison twice (the second time on Mar 23, 1910). Pawelka then tries again to reconcile with his wife. Other crimes follow. Captured again Apr 17, 1919, he is convicted of various crimes but soon escapes for a final time and is never seen again (source: Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry)

FOUND IN: New Zealand

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 65, "Skip to Me" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ruahine Run" (subject of Joe Pawelka)
cf. "Joe's Train Journey" (subject of Joe Pawelka)

Skip to My Lou

DESCRIPTION: Various stanzas, all with the chorus "Skip to my Lou, my darling": "Lost my partner, what'll I do?" "I'll get another one prettier than you!" "Flies in the buttermilk, shoo shoo shoo!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Ames)

KEYWORDS: playparty courting nonballad

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,SE,So)

REFERENCES (33 citations):
Randolph 516, "Skip to My Lou" (5 texts plus 2 excerpts, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 395-397, "Skip to my Lou" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 516A)
Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty, pp. 174-175, "Skip to My Lou" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5, p. 520, "Skip to My Lou" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Joyner-FolkSongInSouthCarolina, p. 99, "Shoe-Lie-Low" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 152, p. 300, "Skip to My Lou" (1 text)
Hudson-FolkTunesFromMississippi 38, "Skip to My Lou" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #128, "Skip to My Lou" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, pp. 166-169, "Skip to My Lou" (1 very full text)
Cambiaire-EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads, pp. 131-132, "Skip to My Lou" (1 text)
Bush-FSocCentralWestVirginiaVol4, pp. 19-20, "Skip to my Lou" (1 text, 1 tune)
Richardson/Speth-AmericanMountainSongs, p. 82, "Skip to my Lou" (1 text, 1 tune)
Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains, p. 33, "Skip-to-ma-loo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 159-160, "Skip to My Lou" (1 text, 1 tune)
Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois, pp. 201-202, "Skip to My Lou" (1 text)
Wolford-ThePlayPartyInIndiana, pp. 89-90=Wolford/Richmond/Tillson-PlayPartyInIndiana, pp. 198-200, "Skip-to-My-Lou" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ist, pp. 139-141, "Skip to My Lou" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, p. 215, "Little Red Wagon Painted Blue" (1 text)
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 167-168, "Skip to My Lou" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongsUSA 30, "Skip to My Lou" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 294-295, "Skip to My Lou" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 99, "Skip to My Lou" (1 text, 1 tune)
Skipper Dan

DESCRIPTION: The Tiger is ready to go out. The singer on Sunday tries to borrow money from Skipper Dan. Skipper Dan refuses because the singer would get drunk. The singer replies that he will sell his rags to get money for liquor.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1976 (Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou)

KEYWORDS: drink sailor

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 97, "Skipper Dan" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #28985

NOTES [208 words]: Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou: "No doubt more verses exist." - BS Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou also speculate that the "Tiger" of this song was the sealing steamer Tiger which served in Newfoundland from 1878 to 1884. There was also a Tigress, which served from 1873 to 1875. There is a problem, though, in the name "Skipper Dan." According to Chafe, p. 104, the skippers of the Tiger were James Joy (1878-1881), G. Hudson (1882), and Thomas Dawe (1883-1884). The only skipper of the Tigress was Isaac Bartlett. So neither ship could have had a "Skipper Dan." We must either find another ship or perhaps emend "Skipper Dan" to "Skipper Dawe."

It appears, however, that the Tiger may have had an earlier existence as a coastal steamer. At least, there was a Tiger which served on the coastal run until 1877 (obviously the year before the Tiger first went to the ice). That much I glean from Prim/McCarthy, p. 47; I do not know the name of the ship's captains during that period.

There was also a schooner Tiger lost in suspicious circumstances in 1893; it rather looks as if it was an insurance scam, since she had little cargo (I've lost my source for this). The captain's surname was Goodwin, but I don't know his first name. - RBW

Bibliography

- Parsons: Robert C. Parsons, Cape Race: Stories from the Coast that Sank the Titanic, Flanker Press, 2011
- Prim/McCarthy: Captain Joseph Prim and Mike McCarthy, The Angry Seas: Shipwrecks on the Coast of Labrador, Jesperson Publishing, 1999

Last updated in version 5.1
File: LeBe097

Skipper George Whitely
DESCRIPTION: Singer/writer, from Bellburns, warns "young girls ... Never go working with Skipper Whitely." To work at Forteau, "he promised to pay ten dollars [a month] but paid only seven"; instead of a ticket home only gave her a ticket to Port aux Choix.
AUTHOR: Clara House Stevens (source: Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports)
EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports)
KEYWORDS: warning money work worker
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 336-337, "Skipper George Whitely" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #25331
NOTES [38 words]: Bellburns is midway down the west coast of the Northern Peninsula of Newfoundland. Forteau is on the Labrador coast. Port aux Choix is across the Strait of Belle Isle from Forteau, and 30 miles or so up the coast from Bellburns. - BS
Last updated in version 4.2
File: Guig336

Skipper o' Dundee, The
DESCRIPTION: "The skipper brocht his guid ship hame, And he anchored aff the toun," and sees a fire burning. The skipper's mother Janet Grey, described as a witch, is being burned. The skipper curses the town and vows never to return
AUTHOR: unknown (tune added by Jim Reid)
EARLIEST DATE: 1882 (Poems by Two, according to Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)
KEYWORDS: sailor home mother homicide magic rejection abandonment witch
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 6, "The Skipper o' Dundee" (1 text, 1 modern tune)
Roud #31098
File: Gath006

Skipper Tom
DESCRIPTION: "I scarce been in bed three ticks of the clock When at me back door I heard a loud knock." Skipper Tom wakes the singer because he has a big fish on the line. The big fish gets away. They go closer to shore to get smaller fish.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: fishing sea ship
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peacock, pp. 143-144, "Skipper Tom" (1 text, 1 tune)
Skipper's Wedding, the

DESCRIPTION: "Good neighbours, I'm come for to tell you, Our skipper and Moll's to be wed; And if it be true what they're saying, Egad, we'll be rarely fed." The available foods are listed, as are the odd characters who will be present

AUTHOR: Words: William Stephenson

EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland); Stephenson died 1836

KEYWORDS: marriage party music food

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 24-26, "The Skipper's Wedding" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST StoR024 (Partial)
Roud #2620

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Blythesome Bridal" (theme) and references there
cf. "The Night Before Larry Was Stretched" (tune)

Skon Jungfrun Hon Gangar Sig Till Sogsta Berg (The Pretty Maid Climbs the Highest Mountain)

DESCRIPTION: Swedish shanty. A maid's her betrothed sails away. After (three) years she agrees to marry another. He returns just after the wedding, she laments it is too late, she thought he was dead. He says he will be soon, write her a farewell and kills himself.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (Sternvall, _Sang under Segel_)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Swedish shanty. A maid's her betrothed sails away. After (three) years she agrees to marry another. He returns just after the wedding, she laments it is too late, she thought he was dead. He says he will be soon, write her a farewell and kills himself. (In some versions it is the bride who commits suicide.)

KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage shanty sailor separation suicide wedding return reunion betrayal

FOUND IN: Sweden

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 545-548, "Skon Jungfrun Hon Gangar Sig Till Sogsta Berg" (2 texts, Swedish & English, 1 tune)
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 100-101, "Skon Jungfrun Hon Gangar Sg Till Hogsta Berg" (2 texts, Swedish & English, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Out In the Moonlight (I Will Love Thee Always)" (plot)
cf. "Susannah Clargy [Laws P33]" (plot) and references there

Skunk, The

DESCRIPTION: "I hunt ze bear, I hunt ze wolf... Las' week I take my ax An' hunt ze skunk polecat." He sneaks up on it from behind, and is sprayed. When he comes home, his wife sets the dog on him. Not even the hog will let him approach. No more skunk hunting for him!

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps)

KEYWORDS: hunting animal humorous

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Beck-LoreOfTheLumberCamps 67, "Ze Skunk" (2 texts)
Roud #4254
Sky-High
DESCRIPTION: "The scream of the outlaw split the air As we tied him hard and fast." The horse would be forced to learn to work. "Bugger" attempts to ride the horse, which goes wild. The rider stays in the saddle until the horse is too tired to continue
AUTHOR: N. Howard Thorp
EARLIEST DATE: 1921 (Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys)
REFERENCES: (1 citation):
Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys, pp. 138-140, "Sky-High" (1 text)

Skye Boat Song (Over the Sea to Skye)
DESCRIPTION: "Speed, bonnie boat, like a bird on the wing... Carry the lad that's born to be king Over the sea to Skye." The singer grieves over the dead of Culloden, and wishes Bonnie Prince Charlie a safe escape
AUTHOR: Words: Harold Boulton / Music: Annie MacLeod
EARLIEST DATE: 1884 (sheet music)
REFERENCES: (5 citations):
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 79, "Speed, Bonnie Boat" (1 fragment plus a copy of Boulton's original text)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 61, "Flora MacDonald and the King" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 260, "The Skye Boat Song" (1 text)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 18, "Skye Boat Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, SKYEBOAT
Roud #3772
REFERENCES:
NLScotland, RB.m.143(121) "Over the Sea to Skye," Poet's Box (Dundee), c.1890
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Flora MacDonald's Lament" (subject)
cf. "Twa Bonnie Maidens" (subject)
NOTES [121 words]: It is ironic to note that, while this song had a certain vogue as an art piece, the only traditional collections seem to have been in North America. Susan Maclean Kybett, in Bonnie Prince Charlie: A Biography of Charles Edward Stuart (Dodd, Mead, 1988), pp. 232-233, makes an interesting observation: Although the song says that Flora (MacDonald) will keep watch over Charlie during the passage: "It was actually the Prince who kept watch by Flora's weary head during their storm-tossed crossing of the sea of the Hebrides. Having been up the last two nights sewing, she fell asleep while Charles sang Jacobite songs, such as 'The Twenty-ninth of May' from the rising of 1715 and 'The King Shall Enjoy His Own Again....'" - RBW
Last updated in version 4.0
Slaap, Kindje, Slaap (The Dutch Lullaby)

DESCRIPTION: Dutch. "Slaap, kindje, slaap, Daar buiten luupt een Schaap....." "Sleep, child, sleep. Outside there runs a sheep. The sheep has four white feet, It drinks the milk so sweet, (So) sleep, little one, sleep."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1963 (Warner-FolkSongsAndBalladsOfTheEasternSeaboard)

KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage lullaby sheep

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Warner-FolkSongsAndBalladsOfTheEasternSeaboard, p. 40, "The Dutch Lullaby" (3 texts, Dutch, English, and German)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, p. 96, "The Dutch Lullabye" (1 text)

File: CAFS1085

Slap Hands

DESCRIPTION: "'S'posin you had Lige on a housetop? S'posin I did? S'posin' you had Adam on a housetop? S'posin' I did. S'posin' you had Ben... What would you do with Ben Pitch him a piece of cornbread every now and then... Adam... Throw him off...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains)

KEYWORDS: playparty courting food rejection

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains, p. 16, "Slap Hands" (2 texts)

File: Skea016

Slapander-Gosheka

DESCRIPTION: "What would my mother say to me, if I should come home with Big Billy? Chorus: Slappoo, slapeter, slap-an-der-go-she-ka, slappoo! I'd tell her to go and hold her tongue, for she did the same when she was young." Other verses have similar rhymes.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1945 (Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips)

KEYWORDS: shanty nonsense

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 98-99, "Slapander-Gosheka" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #9168

File: Harl098

Slaughter of the Laird of Mellerstain, The [Child 230]

DESCRIPTION: Fragment: A fair lady is heard lamenting for her slain husband, "John Hately, the Laird of Mellerstain." She laments that her ladies were not men who could have stood by him as he was killed.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1828

KEYWORDS: death mourning homicide

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Jan 3, 1603 - Murder of "Johne Haitlie of Millstanes" by "William Home hes guidfather."

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Child 230, "The Slaughter of the Laird of Mellerstain" (1 text)

Roud #4020

NOTES [46 words]: According to Mary Ellen Brown, Child's Unfinished Masterpiece: The English and Scottish Popular Ballads, University of Illinois Press, 2011, p. 138, Child would have liked to place this ballad as #195, to keep it with similar pieces, but did not receive the text in time. - RBW
Slavery Chain Done Broke at Last

DESCRIPTION: "Slavery chain done broke at last, broke at last, broke at last... Gonna praise God till I die." The former slave describes praying to God for relief from pain and oppression. God has answered with mighty armies; "He gave me liberty."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)

KEYWORDS: slave slavery freedom religious

REFERENCES (6 citations):
- Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 112, "Slav'ry Chain" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 299-300, "Slavery Chain Done Broke at Last" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber-SoldierSongsAndHomeFrontBalladsOfCivilWar, p. 41, "Slavery Chain Done Broke at Last" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, p. 102, "Slavery Chain" (1 text)
- Foner-AmericanLaborSongsOfTheNineteenthCentury, p. 96, "Slavery Chain" (1 text)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 299, "Slavery Chain Done Broke At Last" (1 text)
- Roud #15257

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Joshua Fit the Battle of Jericho" (tune)

NOTES [33 words]: In 1880, Samuel Butler and James Bland published "De Slavery Chains Am Broke at Last." I would not consider it the same song, although obviously the one line from one might have inspired the other. - RBW

Slavery Days

DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls slavery in Virginia: "they took away my boy"; they sold his wife; at night the wind seemed to say "you people must be free"; "our souls they were tied down"; "they'll never come again... cruel slavery days"

AUTHOR: Words: Edward Harrigan / Music: David Braham

EARLIEST DATE: 1876 (sheet music published by William A. Pond & Co.)

KEYWORDS: grief separation slavery children wife Black(s)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Finson-Edward-Harrigan-David-Braham, vol. I, #8, pp. 29-31, "Slavery Days" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Ives-FolksongsFromMaine 9, "Slavery Days" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, pp. 106-107, "Slavery Days" (1 text, 1 tune)
- ADDITIONAL: Wehman's [Universal Songster] Collection of 104 Songs No. 24 (New York, 1889 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), p. 21, "The Unfortunate Lovers" (1 text)
- Roud #12897

NOTES [248 words]: For background on composers Harrigan and Braham, see the notes to "The Babies on Our Block."

According to Franceschina, p. 85, this song is from a Harrigan and Hart sketch of the same name, which debuted in March 1875; Franceschina refers to the tune as "Stephen-Foster-like," but the text obviously has a lot more "Darling Nelly Gray" in it. As Spaeth, p. 185, says, "A great Harrigan-Braham song of 1876 was Slavery Days, in which an old Negro told his young companion of past horrors." The sketch was later upgraded into a full-scale drama, "Pete" (Franceschina, p. 184). "In Pete, Harrigan returned to the melodramatic entanglements of his early plays. Colonel Coolidge has inadvertently married twice. His first wife has given him a child unbeknownst to him. His second wife is after his fortune. He's called up to join his regiment, is killed, and when the second wife tries to claim the plantation, she's foiled by his child Mary Morgan with the assistance of Old Pete [who is black]. The telltale document is the original wedding license. The witnesses' names have been shot away, but Pete has retrieved the wad from the bullet, with the names! It took three hours and ten minutes to ravel and unravel the story, explore related sub-plots, exhibit both threatening and entertaining spectacles, and introduce slavery songs and spirituals" (Moody, p. 176). According to Moody, p. 173, it was a "new kind of play."

For more on "Pete," see the notes to "Haul the Woodpile Down." - RBW

Bibliography

Last updated in version 5.2
File: IveMa09

Slaves to the World

DESCRIPTION: "Slaves to the world should be tossed in a blanket" like the mill wheel that rises and falls "the ground it touch until"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames)

KEYWORDS: abuse nonballad slave

FOUND IN: Britain (England (South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 306, "Slaves to the World" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 707 with tune)

Roud #1345

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "There Was an Old Woman Tossed up in a Basket" (theme: tossing in a blanket)

NOTES [445 words]: "Wy, he ought to be tossed in a blanket; it fills a true Briton with shame" (Punch, p. 97).

"[In 1715] there were reports of [small arms] ... intercepted by the vigilance of a riding officer of the excise, who was afterwards tossed in a blanket on a moonless night, by an association of stout yeomen, for his officiousness" (Scott, p. 26).

Tossing in a blanket seems to be intended to humiliate for relatively minor offences, and adds a humorous touch in literature. Addison has a character threatened, "that if thou dost not do thy business well ... thou wilt be tossed in a blanket" (Addison, Act 3, Sc. 1, V. V, p. 185). "I have seen a tale-bearer in the village tossed in a blanket by the maids, as it is represented in 'Don Giovanni on London,' a scene in the King's Bench" (Jehoiada, V. II, p. 1562). Don Quixote upbraids Sancho Panza for complaining of being tossed in a blanket once while he, Quixote, has been thrashed a hundred times (Cervantes, V. III, p. 16 [Part II, Book 1]). "Voiture has left a letter describing how he was tossed in a blanket as a punishment for failing in a game of forfeits" (Yonge, V. XX, p. 85).

Pope has a character tossed "from the blanket, high in the air he flies" (Pope, p. 22, Book 2, l. 131). "[Pope] Leo applauded and rewarded successful authors and actors, but he had a monk whose piece was a failure severely tossed in a blanket before him" (Van Dyke, p. 322).

Sometimes neither the offence nor punishment were so trivial: "The gatekeeper ... made secret arrangements to open the castle gates, and deliver it [the castle] into the enemy's hands. His treachery was discovered, however, and, in punishment, his master ordered him to be tossed in a blanket from the top of the castle tower into the midst of the enemy's camp, where he was so anxious to be" (Guerber, p. 164).

There is sometimes a religious meaning: "And in Vendee, the farmer's wife, as the corn-mother, is tossed in a blanket with the last sheaf to bring good luck in the subsequent threshing. Perhaps Caesius had some of this in view when he associated our sky figure [Virgo] with Ruth, the Moabitess, gleaning in the fields of Boaz" (Allen, p. 461).

It is also reported for an Orange Society initiation (Cleary, p. 118).

Prince Henry, son of James I, apparently had the court fool condemned to blanket tossing for his officiousness in making a joke at the king's expense (Jesse, V. I, p. 166).

In the time of James II there are reports of mayors, unfriendly to the king's "endeavors to restore popery throughout his dominions," being tossed in a blanket (Dalton, V. II, p. xxvi). In this connection see "There Was an Old Woman Tossed up in a Basket". - BS
Bibliography

- Allen: Richard Hinckley Allen, Star-Names and Their Meanings, G.E. Stechert, 1899 ("Digitized by Google")
- Cleary: H.W. Cleary, The Orange Society, Catholic Truth Society, 1899 ("Digitized by Google")
- Guerber: H.A. Guerber, Legends of the Rhine, A.S. Barnes, 1899 ("Digitized by Google")
- Jehoiada: Letter by "Jehoiada" in William Hone, The Every-Day Book and Table Book Vol. II, Thomas Tegg and Son, 1838 ("Digitized by Google")
- Pope: Alexander Pope, The Dunciad, A. Dodd, 1728 ("Digitized by Google")
- Punch: "'Arry om 'Arrison and the Glorious Twelfth" in Punch, or the London Charivari Vol XCVIII, August 30, 1890 ("Digitized by Google")
- Scott: Walter Scott, Waverly, Gebbie Publishing Co, 1896 ("Digitized by Google")
- Yonge: Charlotte M. Yonge, The Monthly Packet of Evening Readings for Members of the English Church 3rd Series Vol XX, Walter Smith and Innes, July 1890 ("Digitized by Google")

Last updated in version 2.6
File: WT306S

Sledburn Fair
DESCRIPTION: "I'd oft heard tell of this Sledburn fair, And fain would I gan thither." The singer's parents let him go there with Nell. They arrive at Sledburn, find an alehouse, and settle down to enjoy a fine dinner.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (de la Mare)
KEYWORDS: horse travel
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; #79, "Sledburn Fair" (1 text)
Roud #2543
NOTES [33 words]: By his placement and notes, de la Mare seems to think this a honeymoon song, but there is little direct hint of this except that the boy and girl go out together for (at least) a day unhaperoned. - RBW
File: WdlM079

Sledmere Poachers, The
DESCRIPTION: The singer names one hunting dog and lists the woods and fields to hunt hare and pheasant but "our names we dare not tell, If we meet a keeper bold we'll cause his head to swell"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1860 (Ingledew)
KEYWORDS: poaching dog animal
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, p. 133, "The Sledmere Poachers" (1 fragment)
ADDITIONAL: CJ Davison Ingledew, The Ballads and Songs of Yorkshire (London: Bell and Daldy, 1860 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), pp. 308-311, "The Sledmere Poachers" ("Come all you gallant poaching lads, and gan alang with me") (1 text)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(3546), "Sledmere Poachers" ("Come all you gallant poaching lads and gang alang with me"), H. Such (London), 1863-1885; also Firth b.34(277), Firth b.34(124), Firth b.34(276), Harding B 15(294b), Firth c.26(225), Firth b.34(243), Firth c.19(53), "[The] Sledmere Poachers"
File: KiTu133B

Sleep, Baby, Sleep
DESCRIPTION: "Sleep, baby, sleep, Thy father guards the sheep, Thy mother shakes the dreamland tree, And from it fall sweet dreams for thee; Sleep, baby, sleep, Sleep, baby, sleep." The moon is the shepherd, the stars sheep. The Lamb, she Savior, loves the sheep
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Heart-Songs)
KEYWORDS: religious baby nonballad sheep
FOUND IN: REFERENCES (1 citation):
Heart-Songs, p. 323, "Cradle Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V42405
NOTES [40 words]: It's not clear that this is traditional, but there are just enough hints that I've indexed it.
Jesus as the True Shepherd is an analogy to John 10. Jesus is the Lamb of God in John 1:29 and repeatedly in the Apocalypse (e.g. Rev. 5:6). - RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File: HeSo323

Sleeping Beauty (Thorn Rose, Briar Rose)
DESCRIPTION: Singing game. "Fair Rosa was a lovely child... Fair Rosa slept a hundred years... A forest grew around her tower... A wicked fairy found her there... A noble prince came riding by... And now she's happy as a bride."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: magic rescue marriage beauty
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H599, p. 12, "Fair Rosa/The Sleeping Beauty" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hammond-SongsOfBelfast, p. 19, "Fair Rosa" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 61, "Fair Rosie" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #7889
NOTES [74 words]: Very common as a folk tale, of course, and quite old. In the Grimm collection, it is "Briar-Rose" ("Dornröschen," #50, 1812, from Marie Hassenpflug); Perrault also had a version ("La belle au bois dormant"). The oldest version known is in the Volsung saga; in section 20, Sigurd awakens Brynhild by slicing away her enchanted armor. Roud appears to lump this with a rare piece called "Melven Vine." This is possible, but I'd want more evidence. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: HHH599

Sleeping for the Flag
DESCRIPTION: "When the boys come home in triumph, brother, With the laurels they shall gain... We shall look for you in vain." The brave man lies dead "underneath the Southern tree." "Sleeping to waken in this weary world no more... Sleeping for the flag you bore."

AUTHOR: Henry Clay Work
EARLIEST DATE: 1863 (sheet music published by S. Brainerd's Sons and copyrighted by Root & Cady)
KEYWORDS: Civilwar death burial soldier
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Work-SongsOf-Henry-Clay-Work, pp. 39-42, "Sleeping for the Flag" (1 text, 1 tune, a copy of the original sheet music)
- Hill-PoemsAndSongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 212-213, "Sleeping for the Flag" (1 text)
- DT, SLEPFLAG*

Sleepy Man Blues
DESCRIPTION: "When a man get trouble in his mind, he want to sleep all the time (x2)." "I'm feeling worried in mind, and I'm trying to keep from crying." "I want somewhere to go, but I hate to go to town." "I wonder what's the matter with my right mind."
AUTHOR: Booker T. Washington "Bukka" White
EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (recording, Booker T. Washington "Bukka" White)
KEYWORDS: hardtimes nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Burton-TennesseeeTraditionalSingers, pp. 180-181, "Sleepy Man Blues" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
- Bukka White, "Sleepy Man Blues" (OKeh 05743, 1940)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "When the Sun Goes Down" (by Leroy Carr) (tune, according to Burton-TennesseeTraditionalSingers)
NOTES [83 words]: The notes in Burton-TennesseeTraditionalSingers (p. 179) observe that this "is one of the few blues to treat the subject of mental illness in some depth." This is certainly correct; depression can increase the need for sleep, or it can produce insomnia which leaves the person always sleepy despite what should be enough sleep time. It is interesting to note that the singer says he is "standing in the sunshine to keep from weaking down." Some people do become depressed due to lack of sunlight. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.8

Sleepy Merchant, The
DESCRIPTION: The merchant comes calls for a bed and a girl. She gives him a sleeping drug. The next night, he pours out the drug and sleeps with her, but does not leave the gift he promised. Later, he arrives to find her pregnant and gives her his hand in marriage
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1827 (Kinloch)
LONG DESCRIPTION: The merchant comes to an inn and calls for a bed and a girl. She gives him a sleeping drug, and arises a maiden. The next night, he pours out the drug and sleeps with her, promising her a fine plaid. When he departs, she finds no plaid and curses him. Twenty weeks later, he arrives to find her pregnant. He gives her the plaid and his hand in marriage, and they live happily.
KEYWORDS: sex drugs drink pregnancy trick clothes reunion marriage
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Kinloch-TheBalladBook II, pp. 4-11, "The Sleepy Merchant" (1 text)
- Greig/Duncan7 1498, "The Sleepy Merchant" (5 texts, 3 tunes)
- Roud #7164
CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "The Broomfield Hill" [Child 43] (plot)
- cf. "Bonny Glasgow Green" (tune, per Greig/Duncan7)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Pedlar's Wife
NOTES [145 words]: Child mentions this song in his notes to "The Broomfield Hill," but writes it off as "a modern ballad" perhaps based on an Italian story.
I allow the possibility; "The Sleepy Merchant" seems a rather disjointed piece, with the first part being a tale of how the girl tricked the merchant into not sleeping with her (as in "The Broomfield Hill") and the second being your standard seduction-pregnancy-and-return sort of song, as in, e.g. "The Broom of Cowdenknows." But the piece feels more traditional than literary, so I've tentatively included it in the Index even though I've never seen its like. - RBW
Greig/Duncan7 1498A provides motivation missing in Kinloch: "A wager wi' him she did lay ... That she wad sleep a nicht wi' him And rise a maid again." There is also a bet in Child 43B "that a maid sha nae go to yon bonny green wood And a maiden return again." - BS

Last updated in version 2.5
File: KinBB02

Sleepytoon (II)
DESCRIPTION: "Cam all my lads that follow the ploo:" the singer tells about the job at Sleepytoon. The foreman wakes you at five for porridge. The farmer's "weel respected" but his wife is an ugly, scowling, "argefying bitch"

AUTHOR: See NOTES
EARLIEST DATE: 1974 (recording, John MacDonald)
KEYWORDS: farming food hardtimes nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
Roud #9140
RECORDINGS:
John MacDonald, "Sleepytoon" (on Voice05)

NOTES [208 words]: Except for the title and general subject matter this seems to me to be entirely unlike "Sleepytown (I)."

The author, according to notes to Voice05, is George Morris. The Musical Traditions Notes attribution says that the song was "popularised on a 78 disc by the late George S Morris of Old Meldrum. (Reg Hall's comment that [George] Morris wrote the piece is incorrect)." My choice, with no information beyond what is in this note, is to follow Musical Traditions Notes. - BS
In accordance with the above observations, previous versions of the Index stated in the AUTHOR field that the creator of the piece was "probably Willie Clark (c.1854, according to Yates, Musical Traditions site Voice of the People suite "Notes - Volume 5" - 25.8.02)."
However, Reinhard Zierke wrote to me that "According to Greig/Duncan Volume 3 page 623 the author of Sleepytoon G/D #356 B is William 'Poet' Clark. It is rather unlikely that Clark wrote both Sleepytoon songs. "Therefore I believe that Mike Yates mixed both songs up and that his comment on Sleepytoon in the Morning... that Morris wrote the piece is incorrect... and that George Morris is indeed the author of Sleepytoon in the Morning."

This seems reasonable to me, although I can't prove it. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1
File: RcSlee2

Sleepytown (I)
DESCRIPTION: Singer, tired of his old job, hires out as a laborer to farmer Adam Mitchell, of Sleepytoon. The farmer's work (no more than ten hours a day, but with strict rules and fines) is described; with the season ended, singer and friends are off to celebrate

AUTHOR: See NOTES
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: farming work worker
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #133, pp. 2-3, "Sleepy Toon"; #127, pp. 2-3, "Sleepytoon"; #123, p. 2, "Sleepytoon"; #102, p. 3, "Sleepy Town" (3 texts plus 1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan3 356, "Sleepy Toon" (6 texts, 3 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp 225-226, "Sleepytown" (1 text)
ST RcSlepTn (Full)
Roud #3775
J. C. Mearns and friends, "Sleepytoon" [2 verses missing] (on Lomax43, LomaxCD1743)

NOTES [206 words]: In the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, Scottish workers hired out as contract farm laborers, living in "bothies," barn dormitories. Many "bothy ballads" were composed there, including this one. - PJS

Paul compares this to a wide variety of lumbering songs, which have the same theme of working too hard and then partying the off-season away. The song type is hardly limited to lumbermen; there are, e.g., many Australian shearing songs of the same type. Compare also Scottish songs such as "The Barnyards o Delgaty."

Reinhard Zierke writes to point out to me that "According to Greig/Duncan Volume 3 page 623 the author of Sleepytoon G/D #356 B is William 'Poet' Clark." But see also "Sleepytoon (II)." - RBW

Greig/Duncan3: "The farm was officially named Christ's Kirk, with Sleepytoon appearing as the title after 1870. Adam Mitchell, named in the song, was farmer from the 1840s to 1858."

Greig/Duncan3 has a map on p. xxxv, of "places mentioned in songs in volume 3" showing the song number as well as place name; Sleepytoon (356) is at coordinate (h2-3,v6) on that map [roughly 25 miles WNW of Aberdeen]. - BS

Last updated in version 4.1

File: RcSlepTn

Sliabh na mBan (Mountain of the Women)

DESCRIPTION: Gaelic. It is untrue that we fled like cattle on Sliabh na mBan. Had we waited patiently we'd have had support. Few retreated but many died or were imprisoned. If it's true that the French are coming to help the Gael we'll repay the robber Saxon.

AUTHOR: George Sigerson (1836-1925) (translator) (source: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)

EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Behan-IrelandSings)

KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage rebellion battle Ireland patriotic

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

July 23, 1798 - General Sir Charles Asgill disperses a body of United Irishmen assembled on Sliabh na mBan mountain in Tipperary (source: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 103, "Sliabh na mBan" (1 Gaelic text, 1 tune); 104, "Sliabh na mBan" (1 English text)

Behan-IrelandSings #82, "Sliabh na mBan" (1 English text, 1 tune, translated by Wolfe Stephens)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Slievenammon" (subject)

NOTES [155 words]: The description is from the translation by George Sigerson as Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 104, "Sliabh na mBan."

Zimmermann p. 207: "The original 'Sliabh na mBan' is one of the few traditional songs in Irish inspired by the rising of 1798."

The ballad is recorded on one of the CD's issued around the time of the bicentenial of the 1798 Irish Rebellion. See:

Aine Ui Cheallaigh, "Sliabh na mBan" (on "The Croppy's Complaint," Craft Recordings CRCD03 (1998); Terry Moylan notes) - BS

This event is obscure enough that I couldn't find mention of it in any of the Irish histories I checked. It was just one of those skirmishes that took place after the 1798 rising had largely collapsed. The one thing that's certain is that the brutal Asgill would not have stopped while there was a live enemy left to kill.

Behan-IrelandSings, interestingly, translates the title as "The White Mountains," not "Mountain of the Women." - RBW

Last updated in version 3.2

File: Moyl103

Slidin' Delta (I)

DESCRIPTION: The singer says his suitcase is packed and he's ready to go "up the country" on the Sliding Delta ("baby don't you want to go"). He complains that the "big Kate Allen" -- like a man -- will "steal your baby every time she lands"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1963 (MJHurt04)

KEYWORDS: courting travel nonballad

RECORDINGS:

Mississippi John Hurt, "Slidin' Delta" (on MJHurt04)

NOTES [16 words]: I've seen speculation that the "Sliding Delta" is a train and "big Kate Allen" is a steamboat. - BS

Last updated in version 4.0

File: RcSliDe1

---

Slidin' Delta (II)

DESCRIPTION: "Delta slide ... been here and gone" Singer wants to leave the delta before the water rises. "If I don't get drownded ... lose my mind." He won't come back

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (StuffDreams1)

KEYWORDS: grief home travel flood nonballad

RECORDINGS:

Tommy Johnson, "Slidin' Delta" (on StuffDreams1,USChartersHeroes)

NOTES [46 words]: Three line blues: the first line is repeated -- more or less -- and the last line completes the thought.

In the notes to "Slidin' Delta" (I) I wrote, "I've seen speculation that the 'Sliding Delta' is a train...." I don't know where I found that but it fits here as well. - BS

Last updated in version 5.2

File: RcSliDe2

---

Slieve Gallen Brae

DESCRIPTION: The singer urges the visitor from the city to view Slive Gallen Brae: the old dolmen, the chieftain's graves, the singing linnets, the flowers, the home of Rory Dall, the grave of Cooey-na-gall. He says that bards come from far away to find inspiration

AUTHOR: James O'Kane?

EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: nonballad home music

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H784, pp. 172-173, "Slieve Gallen Brae" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #1420

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Banks of the Roe" (for Cooey-na-Gal) and references there

NOTES [42 words]: Not to be confused with the emigration song, "[Farewell unto] [Bonnie] Slieve Gallen Braes."

For "Cooey-na-Gal" O'Cahan and Dungiven Priory, see the notes on "The Banks of the Roe." "Rory Dall" is of course the famous blind harper of the O'Cahans. - RBW

File: HHH784

---

Slieve Gallen Braes

DESCRIPTION: The singer walks out to view the beauties of Slieve Gallen Braes. He recalls walking and hunting in the past near his small farm. "But the rents were getting higher and I could no longer stay So farewell unto you bonny, bonny Slieve Gallen Braes."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Carl Hardebeck in _Gems of Melody: Seoda Ceoil, _according to OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)
Slieve Na Mon

DESCRIPTION: Tithes and taxes: "No more they're legal on Slieve na Mon." At Carrickshock we left "the rabble ... in death's cold agony." The accused are freed "by the means of our noble Dan." Soon "tithes no more will oppress the land" "We'll banish Brinswickers"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c.1832 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)

KEYWORDS: violence trial death farming Ireland political police

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Dec 14, 1831 - Carrickshock, County Kilkenny: Peasants attack tithe process servers, killing at least 13 (source: Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 42, "Slieve Na Mon" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #V13221

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 25(81), "Slieve Na Mon" ("You banished sons of this injured nation"), unknown, n.d.

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Battle of Carrickshock" (subject: The Tithe War and the Carrickshock Riot)
cf. "Sliabh na mBan" (tune)

NOTES [329 words]: The context is "The Tithe War": O'Connell's Catholic Association was formed in 1823 to resist the requirement that Irish Catholics pay tithes to the Anglican Church of Ireland. The "war" was passive for most of the period 1823-1836, though there were violent incidents in 1831 (source: The Irish Tithe War 1831 at the OnWar.com site)
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion p. 18: "In the early 1830's a veritable state of insurrection prevailed in Leinster and Munster, when the military and the police were called in to assist in collecting the tithes or seizing and auctioning the cattle or crops of those who refused to pay." Zimmermann's description of the "Battle of Carrickshock": "a proctor tried to serve tithe processes at Carrickshock, County Kilkenny; he was accompanied by a police force of thirty-seven men. A party of peasants armed with scythes, spades and pitchforks attacked them. The proctor and at least twelve policemen were killed. The peasants charge with murder were skilfully defended by O'Connell, and the trial was abandoned."
The broadside description of the battle is graphic: "Who could desire to see better sport, To see them groping among the loughs, Their sculls all fractured, their eye-balls broken, Their great long noses and ears cut off."
Zimmermann states that a version was noted "from oral tradition c. 1900." - BS
For the overall history of the Tithe War, as well as more information on this song, see the notes to "The Battle of Carrickshock." The name "Brinswickers," i.e. "Brunswickers," was used as a generic term in Ireland for non-Catholics -- even though, ironically, the Germans were Lutherans, while the English were Anglican and the Ulster immigrants were Presbyterian (Reformed); neither of the latter two sects are, technically, Protestant. (A distinction, I concede, of greater significance to non-Catholics than Catholics.) There was a song by Charles Kickham called "Slievenamon"; I assume it was inspired by this. - RBW.

Last updated in version 5.1
Slievenamon

DESCRIPTION: "Two thousand men for Ireland, on splendid Slievenamon." They are a sign to every village and to Irish in America and "every clime." They put to shame "the blushless recreant." Push on "till every mountain in the land be manned like Slievenamon!"

AUTHOR: Dr. Campion (source: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)

EARLIEST DATE: 2000 (Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)

KEYWORDS: rebellion battle Ireland nonballad patriotic

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
July 23, 1798 - General Sir Charles Asgill attacks and disperses United Irishmen on Sliabh na mBan Mountain, Tipperary (source: Moylan-Tipperary-1776-1815)

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 105, "Slievenamon" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sliabh na mBan" (subject)

NOTES [54 words]: This event is obscure enough that I couldn't find mention of it in any of the Irish histories I checked. It was just one of those skirmishes that took place after the 1798 rising had largely collapsed. The one thing that's certain is that the brutal Asgill would not have stopped while there was a live enemy left to kill. - RBW

File: Moyl105

---

Slighted Suitor, The

DESCRIPTION: A rich merchant's daughter has many suitors; she rejects them. One wins her heart, but she says, "I have no desire a single life to part." He courts another. She begs him to change his mind. He rejects her in turn. (She warns against doing as she did)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: love courting rejection abandonment

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenry'sSongsOfThePeople H159a/b, pp. 396-397, "The Slighted Suitor" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 34, "The Merchant's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #4715

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Rejected Lover" [Laws P10] and references there

NOTES [38 words]: The notes in Henry/Huntington/Herrmann speculate that this might be a version of "The Rejected Lover" (Laws P10). The plots are indeed the same. But I see no points of contact in the lyrics; I think they are separate songs. - RBW

File: HHH159

---

Sligo Town

DESCRIPTION: "O once I knew a pretty little girl When pretty little girls were but few; Ofttimes I've rolled her in my arms All over the fog and dew." After all this courting/rolling, he writes to ask if she will marry him. He wishes he were in Sligo with a girl

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1967

KEYWORDS: courting love separation sex

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates 180, p. 145, "Sligo Town" (1 text)

Roud #558

CROSS-REFERENCES:
Sling the Flowing Bowl

DESCRIPTION: "Come come my jolly lads the wind's abaft, Brisk gales our sails shall crowd...."
"Then sling the flowing bowl. Fond hopes arise the girls we prize Shall bless each jovial soul." The sailors boast of their prowess while on patrol
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1839 (Journal from the Chile)
KEYWORDS: ship sailor nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
    Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 51-52, "Sling the Flowing Bowl" (1 text, 1 tune)
    Erskine-TwentyYearsBeforeTheMast, p. 6, "(Then we'll sling the flowing bowl)" (1 text)
Roud #2015
NOTES [33 words]: Huntington's versions are from American whalers, but it is clear that this song was originally sung by British sailors, probably from naval vessels, as it refers to patrolling the coast of Spain. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: SwMS051

Slippy Stane, The

DESCRIPTION: "There's aye a muckle slippery stane at ilka body's door." If your neighbor slips "lend a hand to lift him up"; you may find yourself in his condition some day. "Kings and emperors hae fallen"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: virtue nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
    Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #111, p. 2, "The Slippery Stane"; #121, p. 2, "The Slippery Stane" (1 text plus 1 fragment)
    Greig/Duncan3 666, "The Slippy Stane" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #6092
BROADSIDES:
    NLScotland, RB.m.143(125, "The Slippy Stane" ("Wade canny through this weary world"), Poet's Box (Dundee), c.1890
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Laddie Wi' the Tarry Trews" (tune, per Greig/Duncan3)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Slippery Stane
NOTES [65 words]: Greig has Hamilton Nimmo (1836-1892) as the author. On the other hand, Greig/Duncan3 cites National Choir 1.339: "The song is said there to be by James Hendrie and to have been first published in The People's Friend in 1875." - BS
In either case, it sounds to me as if it might have been inspired by a meditation on Ecclesiastes 11:1-6, with perhaps a little of Luke 14:7-14 thrown in. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.6
File: GrD3666

Slob Song, The

DESCRIPTION: The ship is loaded and heads to Forteau. It is caught in slob ice at Launce Amour cove. A rescue boat fastens a line from shore to the ship. While four men and three women hold the line the crew pull the ship to shore. Crew and cargo are safely landed.
AUTHOR: Leo O'Brien
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast)
KEYWORDS: rescue sea ship
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 73, "The Slob Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST LLab073 (Partial)
Roud #9981
NOTES [124 words]: Forteau Bay and L'Anse Amour are on the lower Labrador coast on the Strait of Belle Isle. - BS
The version printed by Leach includes absolutely no specific details which could be used to identify the ship, but I can't help but notice how much the event described resembled the wreck of the Raleigh, which took place in the same place as the ship in this song, and in similar conditions, less than a decade before Leo O'Brien wrote his piece (for details, see the notes to "The Nordfeld and the Raleigh"). The only significant difference is that this ship was carrying "furniture." This song does not appear derived from "The Nordfeld and the Raleigh," but I wonder if it might not be a rewrite of some other piece about the Raleigh wreck. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.4
File: LLab073

Slow Men of London

DESCRIPTION: "There were three lads in our town, Slow men of London!" The three court a widow, and "left her undone." "They went to work without their tools." "They often tasted the widow's cheer." Eventually she sends them away
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1840 (Buchan, Secret Songs of Silence)
KEYWORDS: sex separation
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Roud #12564
File: SloMnLon

Smashing of the Van (I), The

DESCRIPTION: Two Fenian leaders, Kelly and Deasy, have been imprisoned; a party of Fenians led Allen, Larkin, and O'Brien, stop and break into the prison van and free them. But the rescuers kill a man, and in the end are executed
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
KEYWORDS: prison Ireland rebellion execution death
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Sep 11, 1867 - Kelly and Deasy are arrested and rescued a week later by 30 Fenians
Nov 24, 1867 - Three of the ambushers are hanged (source: _The Manchester Martyrs_ on the Gorton Local History Group site)
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Galvin-IrishSongsOfResistance, pp. 50-51, "The Smashing of the Van" (1 text, 1 tune)
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 14, "The Manchester Martyrs" or "The Smashing of the Van" (1 text, 1 tune)
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 72, "The Smashing of the Van" or "The Three Manchester Martyrs" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3028
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Allen, Larkin and O'Brien" (subject: The Manchester Martyrs)
cf. "God Save Ireland" (subject: The Manchester Martyrs)
NOTES [681 words]: Ben Schwartz tells me that this is sung to the tune of "The River Roe," but I'm not sure which song of that name is meant.
The Fenians were a group of Irishmen (many of them living in America) whose purpose was to liberate Ireland. Whatever one thinks of their goal, their history was almost comic; they kept trying goofy ideas and nothing ever worked.

This incident is typical: in 1867, the Fenians were talking rebellion, though leader James Stephens (for whom see "James Stephens, the Gallant Fenian Boy") was trying to call things off. But the British continued to arrest potential rebels.

On September 11, two men were captured in Manchester and charged with loitering. An informer pointed out that they were Thomas J. Kelly, who had been proclaimed chief executive of the Fenian's Irish Republic (Kee, pp. 31, 33), and one Captain Timothy Deas(e)y (Kee, p. 45). Kelly and Deasy probably were not in danger of losing their lives, but they were "rescued" anyway on September 18 by a crew of about thirty Fenians (Fry/Fry, p. 243). It wasn't that hard; the police wagon was unescorted. It was, after all, in England, not Ireland.

In the course of the "rescue," a police sergeant, Charles Brett, was killed. Kee reports that one Peter Rice (who later escaped, with Kelly and Deasy, to America) fired the fatal shot. Few other sources definitively list a name, but he is obviously the prime suspect.

The British, in their usual inept way in such matters, hauled in a large crowd of Irish folk found near Manchester. Five men were put on trial for killing Brett. Rice was not among them. One of the five, Maguire, had no involvement in the rescue at all and was later given full pardon.

The other four prisoners, William Allen, Edward Condon, Michael Larkin, and Michael O'Brien, had taken part in the attack but almost certainly had not fired the fatal shot. Nonetheless they were convicted of the murder (officially Allen was regarded as the one who had done the shooting). Allen, Larkin, and O'Brien were executed on November 24 (so Kee, p. 47; and Golway, p. 147; the article The Manchester Martyrs on the Gorton Local History Group site says November 23).

The three men came to be known as the "Manchester Martyrs."

A rescue attempt failed, but was bloodier than the first try: This time, the Fenians managed to kill a dozen bystanders.

Even though the blood had been shed by the Irish, and the British had followed the law throughout (under both British and American law, one engaged in a felony in which a murder is committed is guilty of the murder even if one is not a murderer), both sides blamed the other, increasing Anglo-Irish tensions. The incident also increased rebel recruiting. Indeed, according to Oxford Companion, p. 343, says that it "prompted a partial reconciliation between the Catholic church and Fenianism."

The description of the van being "smashed" is literally accurate: The van was locked, and Brett had the keys, so the Irish pounded on it with rocks to get it open. This failed, and Brett refused to yield, and so the fatal shot was fired. It is not known whether the bullet was aimed at Brett, or at the van's lock, or merely intended to intimidate; in any case, it proved fatal.

The trial of the martyrs also gave the Irish a memorable phrase: Edward Condon (the one raider who was condemned but not hung, because he was an American citizen) shouted out "God save Ireland!!" during the proceedings, and it inspired the song of that name.

The British, having watched all these acts, plus another bungled rescue of a prisoner (Richard O'Sullivan Burke, for whom see the notes on "Burke's Dream" [Laws J16]) which led to the death of twelve English citizens and the maiming of dozens more (Kee, pp. 49-51; Fry/Fry, p. 244), were hardly in a mood for pity. But the Gladstone government, which came to power in 1868, released most Irish political prisoners in 1871.

For other examples of Fenian bungling, see the notes to "A Fenian Song (l)" and "The British Man-of-War." For their one big splashy success, see "The Fenian's Escape (The Catalpa)."

- RBW

Bibliography

- Fry/Fry: Peter and Fiona Somerset Fry, A History of Ireland, 1988 (I use the 1993 Barnes & Noble edition)
- Golway: Terry Golway, For the Cause of Liberty, Simon & Schuster, 2000
- Kee: Robert Kee, The Bold Fenian Men, being volume II of The Green Flag (covering the period from around 1848 to the Easter Rising), Penguin, 1972

Last updated in version 2.5

File: PGa050
Smashing of the Van (II), The

DESCRIPTION: Ten Sinn Fein men smash a prison van on Glasgow's High Street to free a prisoner. The police arrest the Sinn Fein men and Father McRory "a mere clergyman." Counsellors McKane and Sandymen defend the accused and the verdict is "Not Guilty."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1988 (McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen)
KEYWORDS: violence crime trial clergy police IRA
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
May 4, 1921 - Attempted rescue of Frank Carty from a police van in Glasgow (source: Coogan)
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen 65, "The Smashing of the Van" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3028
NOTES [316 words]: The song is about a failed rescue attempt of IRA commander Frank Carty while he was being transported in a police van to Duke Street prison. Inspector Johnson was killed. Father McRory, among others, was charged but all the accused were acquitted. "The trial, and in particular Father McRory's arrest, fanned sectarian tensions to white heat. However, the Anglo-Irish Truce of July 1921 helped to defuse the situation." (source: Tim Pat Coogan, Wherever Green is Worn (2001, New York), p. 243). McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen: "Fr. McRory, mentioned in this song was from the 'Parish', the rural area that lies north of Bunrana Town, hence the popularity of this short song in Inishowen." McBride's text begins "It was on the twenty fourth of May nineteen and twenty one"; The Times of London supports Coogan's date of May 4, 1921 (source:"Irish Outrage in Glasgow Police Inspector Murdered", The Times, May 5, 1921, p. 7, Issue 42712, column D, Copyright 1921 The Times, Article CS119083173, Copyright 2002 The Gale Group). - BS
The index to Younger reveals that there were two Frank Cartys of interest during this period, one from Sligo, one from Wexford. Frank Carty of Wexford was an IRA brigade adjutant (Younger, p. 343), but it is Carty of Sligo who is meant here. Interestingly, Younger has far more references to Cary of Wexford than Carty of Sligo, mentioning this rescue only in passing. And most of the other histories I checked don't mention Carty at all. I would not hasten to accept that Father McRory was a "mere" clergyman. I assume this is Joseph MacRory (1861-1945), archbishop of Armagh from 1928 and cardinal from 1929 (OxfordCompanion, p. 339); he is said to have been "reluctant to condemn IRA activities." And he later inflamed the troubles with a statement that Protestant churche were not part of the true church of Christ (Murphy, p. 159). - RBW
Bibliography
• Murphy: John A. Murphy, Ireland in the Twentieth Century (originally published in 1975 as a portion of the Gill History of Ireland), Gill and Macmillan, 1989
• Younger: Calton Younger, Ireland's Civil War (1968, 1979; I used the 1988 Fontana edition)

Last updated in version 2.5
File: McB1065

Smeara, Na (The Blackberries)

DESCRIPTION: Singer, "with a wish for every woman": loved "a dark-eyed damsel" while "herding horny cows"; was engaged to Peg O'Doherty who "vanished with a vagabond"; hit on a widow who "nearly scalded me." He loves a girl among the blackberries at harvest time.
AUTHOR: J.P. Craig [in Gaelic] (source: Tunney-WhereSongsDoThunder)
EARLIEST DATE: 1948 (Tunney-WhereSongsDoThunder)
KEYWORDS: courting seduction sex humorous nonballad rake harvest food
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tunney-WhereSongsDoThunder, pp. 9-11, "The Blackberries" (1 text)
Smeller Song, The
DESCRIPTION: "When I was a baby I was my mammy's joy, In fact the girls they all said I was a handsome boy." His problem is his "smeller," which "stuck out just a feet." He describes the troubles caused by a big nose, including knocking off his girlfriend's bonnet
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama)
KEYWORDS: humorous courting rejection mother children loneliness
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, pp. 80-81, "The Smeller Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5117
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Wish They'd Do It Now" (theme of a man who was popular as a boy but not now)

Smiggy Maglooral
DESCRIPTION: Smiggey marries a maid (or fights in Bull Run). The maid winds the clock and milks the cow "from the chimney top." She has a cramp (or gets the croup) and "they brought her to with some turtle soup." She meets Mose, they come to blows and home she goes.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1849 (Greig/Duncan7); before 1865 (broadside, Bodleian LOCSinging as203350)
KEYWORDS: humorous nonsense disease injury animal food fight
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar) Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast "Folk-Song in Buchan," p. 30, "The Wee Wifie" (1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan7 1290, Greig/Duncan8 Addenda, "The Thrifty Wife" (3 texts, 4 tunes)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 71, "I Have a Wife" (1 text, 1 tune)
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 143, "Smiggy Maglooral" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2130, p. 143, "Smiggy McGuirrel" (2 references)
ST OCon143 (Partial)
Roud #7193
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 18(711), "Smiggey McGuirrel", H. De Marsan (New York) , 1861-1864 [same as LOCSinging as203350]
LOCSinging, as203350, "Smiggey McGuirrel", H. De Marsan (New York), 1861-1864 [same as Bodleian Harding B 18(711)]
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Wee Wifie
NOTES [47 words]: Greig/Duncan7: "Sung by John Allan, Caysmill, 1849."
Broadside LOCSinging as203350 and Bodleian Harding B 18(711): H. De Marsan dating per Studying Nineteenth-Century Popular Song by Paul Charosh in American Music, Winter 1997, Vol 15.4, Table 1, available at FindArticles site. - BS
Last updated in version 3.5

Smiling Potatoes, The
DESCRIPTION: "Sweet roots of Erin! we can't do without them; No tongue can express their importance to man ... Then here's to the brave boys that plant them and raise them."
AUTHOR: Rev. John Graham (source: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
EARLIEST DATE: 1829 (Graham, _Poems, Chiefly Historical_, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
KEYWORDS: farming food Ireland nonballad
Smith's a Gallant Fireman, The

DESCRIPTION: "Rab, the village smith .... He's knicht o' war an' lord o' love an' king o' a the shire man At feast or fray, by nicht or day the smith's a gallant fireman." He is praised for honour, heart, strength, courage and generosity.

AUTHOR: John Harrison (1814-1889) (source: Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)

KEYWORDS: virtue nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #73, p. 2, "The Smith's a Gallant Fireman" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 461, "The Smith's a Gallant Fireman" (3 texts, 1 tune)

Roud #5899

NOTES [6 words]: Greig: The song was written in 1862. - BS

Last updated in version 2.4

File: GrD3461

Smoke Goes Up the Chimney Just the Same, The DESCRIPTION: "You can turn your damper up, you can turn your damper down, but the smoke goes up the chimney (chimbly, chimley) just the same." Describes a "Man of distinction's" struggles with his stove's flue.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (sheet music)

LONG DESCRIPTION: "You can turn your damper up, you can turn your damper down, but the smoke goes up the chimney (chimbly, chimley) just the same." A man of distinction struggles fruitlessly with his stove's flue, concluding that, no matter his adjustments, the smoke goes up the chimney just the same. In later verses he burns money to impress his friends, noting mysteriously "Chinese gum, opium," but the smoke goes up the chimney just the same. He accuses his neighbor of stealing his chickens and searches the neighbor's kitchen, but not a chicken is to be found. He concludes that "you can turn the damper up, you can turn your damper down, but the smoke will reach the chickens just the same." In other versions, the singer talks about circumstances when "bumming" is and isn't fun, with the conclusion that "everybody's buming just the same."

KEYWORDS: theft animal chickens begging nonballad

FOUND IN: US

RECORDINGS:
Fiddlin' John Carson & his Virginia Reelers, "The Smoke Goes Out the Chimney Just the Same" (Okeh 45186, 1927; on Protobilly)
Dan W. Quinn, "The Smoke Goes Up the Chimney Just the Same" (Victor 1469. 1902; on Protobilly)

NOTES [45 words]: There's a drawing of an opium pipe included on the cover of the sheet music and a cryptic reference to opium in the lyrics sung by Quinn; the annotators of "Protobilly" suggest that this "might explain the pipe on the sheet music cover and the song's surreal images." -PJS

Last updated in version 5.1
File: RcSGUCJS

Smokeroom on the Kyle

DESCRIPTION: "Tall are the tales that fishermen tell when summer's work is done." They tell of fish, of men saved from freezing, a giant potato. Grampa Walcott tops them all with a tale of a year when the squid were hard to find -- until they came in in huge numbers.

AUTHOR: Ted Russell (Source: Doyle-OldTimeSongsAndPoetryOfNewfoundland; Hanrahan)

EARLIEST DATE: 1966 (Doyle-OldTimeSongsAndPoetryOfNewfoundland, 4th edition)

KEYWORDS: talltale fishing moniker

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):

ADDITIONAL: Maura Hanrahan, _The Alphabet Fleet_, Flanker Press Ltd., 2007, pp. 196-198

"The Smokeroom on the Kyle" (1 text)

Roud #7311

NOTES [1037 words]: This did not originate as a song, and one has to suspect that it owes its slight traditional vogue to its inclusion in the Doyle songbooks, but it is singularly fitting that this tale be set on the Kyle.

The Kyle was one of the "Alphabet Fleet" (for which see the notes to "The Wreck of the Steamship Ethie"), and was the longest-lasting of the bunch; she served a wider variety of duties than almost any ship in Newfoundland history, and became genuinely famous. Hanrahan, p. 5, says that "the SS Kyle became legendary on the [Newfoundland/Labrador] run" and was "the heroic ship that looms above even all these other great ships [of the Alphabet Fleet]."

"On her trials trip in May 1913, the Kyle did 12 knots. With a gross tonnage of 1,055, she was substantial for an Alphabet fleet boat and, unlike most of the other ships, she was built in Newcastle, England rather than Scotland. Destined for the Labrador run, ... the Kyle was also an icebreaker, which was crucial in Newfoundland and Labrador waters" (Hanrahan, pp. 5-6). She was said to be both beautiful and luxurious (Hanrahan, pp. 58-59).

Bruce, p. 21, says that the Kyle "was bigger and faster than the older [Alphabet Fleet] vessels. Her length was 220 feet, her gross tonnage 1,055, and her speed 13.5 knots. Her long, tough service on the Labrador shore would earn her a nickname: 'The Bulldog of the North'. She was among the first vessels the Reids [owners of the Alphabet Fleet] ordered with a modern bluff-bow." (The Kyle which initially served on the run to Sydney, Nova Scotia, was moved to the Labrador run in part to accommodate the heavy traffic on the Labrador run; the smaller Home that had been in that service earlier had been overloaded; Hanrahan, pp. 58-59, 100.)

Among other things, the Kyle was the first ship called upon to search when the Southern Cross vanished (see "The Southern Cross (I)") and was involved in other rescues as well (Hanrahan, pp. 72-77). When the Pollux and the Truxton went aground in Newfoundland in an ice storm, in 1942, the Kyle was responsible for saving most of the 186 who were rescued (Hanrahan, pp. 88-89; 203 men were lost in the wreck when no one could get to the stranded ships). She also transported troops during World War II.

O'Neill, p. 977, describes the end of the Alphabet Fleet. "By the 1970s the Kyle was the only one still around. She lay beached at Riverhead, Harbour Grace, where she was finally purchased by the provincial government for five thousand dollars. The Kyle was the vessel chartered by William Randolph Hearst to take part in a search of the Atlantic for the American plane Old Glory [lost in 1927 carrying tabloid editor Philip Payne] and she returned to St. John's with part of the wreckage. In this she was more successful than her search had been for the Southern Cross. In world War I (sic.) she saw service as an icebreaker in the employ of the Tzar (sic.) of Russia."

Although she was the pride of the fleet in 1913, half a century later, the papers were calling her "weather-beaten and wheezy-engined." In 1959, she suffered the fate that old steamers had been suffering for almost a century: she was sold by the Canadian National Railways (which had owned her since Confederation a decade earlier) to become a sealer. (Yes, Newfoundlanders love their sealers -- but they generally didn't use new ships for the trade, because the stink oaks into the woodwork and never comes out; making her a sealer would effectively guarantee that she could never again be a passenger ship.) She was even briefly renamed the Arctic Eagle (Hanrahan, p. ...
But sealing was no longer very profitable, and she was damaged in 1965, and no one was sure whether she was worth fixing; left to rest in Harbour Grace, in 1967 she broke free of her anchors and drifted aground at Riverhead, Harbour Grace, where souvenir-hunters slowly stripped her. She was eventually given a cosmetic restoration in 1997, and is apparently still there, but her sailing days were over (Hanrahan, pp. 168-169; Connors, p. 29, has a newspaper account of her planned restoration). Ryan/Drake, plate 45 caption, says that she is "the last [surviving] representative of Newfoundland's coal-burning sealers."

She was one of the best-known and best-loved Newfoundland ships of all time; this isn't the only poem built around her; Connors and Hanrahan each has a second piece, and I seem to recall others from other sources. But Connors, p. 29, says that this is the best-known work about the Kyle.

There is a photo of the Kyle at sea on p. 102 of Hanrahan; p. 129 shows her bringing back part of "Old Glory"; p. 106 shows her aground at Harbour Grace at the end of her career. Connors, p. 26, shows her in service, while p. 30 shows her after many years aground. Ryan/Drake, plate 45, is of her. She also has her own web site, http://sskyle.org/ -- which features, among other things, a recitation of this piece by the son of the author.

Ted Russell, the author of this piece, was born June 27, 1904 at Coley's Point on Conception Bay, Newfoundland; he quit school at age sixteen to become a teacher (ButlerHanrahan, p. 155). He would eventually go on to earn a bachelor's degree, but it took him several stints in college; he was 61 when he finally graduated! (ButlerHanrahan, p. 158). He became a magistrate, then, after Newfoundland became part of Canada, was elected to its House of Assembly in that organization's first sitting and was made Minister of Natural Resources -- but soon quit because he disagreed with Premier Joseph Smallwood, going into the insurance business (ButlerHanrahan, p. 156).

It was after this that he began writing plays and monologues, some of which appeared on the CBC. "The Chronicles of Uncle Mose," set in a fictional outport named "Pigeon Inlet," made him a popular sensation (ButlerHanrahan, p. 157). The play "Holdin' Ground," set in Pigeon Inlet, was also very popular. This poem is one of the Pigeon Inlet pieces. Russell died on October 16, 1977 (ButlerHanrahan, p. 158). There is a biography, The Life and Times of Ted Russell, by his daughter Elizabeth Miller, which also seems to have appeared under the title Uncle Mose. - RBW

Bibliography

- Bruce: Harry Bruce, Lifeline: The Story of the Atlantic Ferries and Coastal Boats, Macmillan of Canada, 1977
- ButlerHanrahan: Paul Butler and Maura Hanrahan, Rogues and Heroes, Flanker Pres, 2005
- Connors: William Connors, By the Next Boat: A Photo History of Newfoundland Coastal Boats, Johnson Family Foundation, 2002

Last updated in version 6.0
File: Doyl4081

Smoky Mountain Bill

DESCRIPTION: "Smoky Mountain Bill... drunk a lot of gin -- That's what caused him all the trouble he got in." Bill, a moonshiner, shoots a revenuer. Imprisoned by the sheriff, he escapes to the mountains, where he and his still live a happy life

AUTHOR: Carson Robison
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (recording, Frank Luther & Carson Robison)
KEYWORDS: death drink humorous
FOUND IN: Canada(West)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fowke/Johnston-FolkSongsOfCanada, pp. 102-104, "Smoky Mountain Bill" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST FJ102 (Partial)
Roud #4544
RECORDINGS:
Frank Luther & Carson Robison, "Smoky Mountain Bill" (Brunswick 412, 1930)
Smuggler's Bride, The
DESCRIPTION: "Attention give and a tale I'll tell, Of a damsel fair in Kent did dwell... She fell deep in love with a smuggler bold." She goes to sea with him. A cutter finds them after a storm. They are killed at almost the same moment and die in each others' arms
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1888 (Ashton-Modern Street Ballads)
KEYWORDS: love courting ship death
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 31, "The Smuggler's Bride" (1 text, tune referenced; #27 in the first edition)
Roud #21894
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Female Smuggler" (lyrics, theme)

Smuggler's Song (II), The
DESCRIPTION: "When the blink o' the day is fading fast... O, that is the hour for to flash the oar." The singer talks of the troubles at sea, sneers at the German royalty, then waxes at length about the joys when they come back to shore.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Ord-BothySongsAndBallads); reportedly published 1844
KEYWORDS: ship sea home
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 386, "Smuggler's Song" (1 text)
Roud #3795
NOTES [105 words]: It's hard to determine what this is about. Although the title refers to smuggling, the song itself has no such references. We have only two facts: Ord-BothySongsAndBallads reports that the song was published in 1844 in the Ayrshire Wreath, and then there is the reference to "the German" (it doesn't say King, or Kaiser, but said German lives in a palace). My best guess, on that basis, is that the song refers to Napoleon's blockade of Great Britain -- the Continental System, proclaimed in Berlin on November 21, 1806, in which the German states were reluctantly included. For details on this, see "The Ports are Open." - RBW

File: Ord386

Smuggler's Song (III)
DESCRIPTION: "Midshipman, search the boat, to see she carries no gin! Right-to-lu-ral la-di-dee, Right-to-lu-ral lay!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (collected from Captain T. Collett by Ralph Dunstan)
KEYWORDS: drink
FOUND IN: Britain(England(West))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 41, "Smuggler's Song" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #3305
File: Gund041

Smuggler's Song (Watch the Wall While the Gentlemen Go By)
DESCRIPTION: "If you wake at midnight, and hear a horses's feet, Don't go drawing back the blind or looking in the street..." The child is assured that all is well, and told not to repeat what she hears. If she keeps quiet, she may be rewarded and will hear no lies
AUTHOR: Words: Rudyard Kipling?
Smuggler's Victory, The

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you Sussex heroes with courage stout and bold." About a battle between the "preventive men" and a band of smugglers. The preventive men attack and shoot two smugglers, but the smugglers counter-attack and win. They celebrate

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Palmer-Oxford Book of Sea Songs)
KEYWORDS: pirate battle money sailor
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-Oxford Book of Sea Songs 89, "The Smuggler's Victory" (1 text)
Roud #V6813
File: PaSe089

Smugglers of Buffalo, The

DESCRIPTION: "It was on the sixth of April as I lay on my bed, A-thinking of the sorrows that crowned my aching head," that the singer, a smuggler, was taken into custody. He will go home to his girl in Sandusky when released, and hopes she never learns what happened

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (collected from John W. Green by Walton)
KEYWORDS: crime sailor prison freedom
FOUND IN: US (MW)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 116-117, "The Smugglers of Buffalo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen-American Folk Songs A Regional Encyclopedia 1, pp. 117-118, "The Smugglers of Buffalo" (1 text)
Roud #19842
RECORDINGS:
J. W. Green, "Smugglers of Buffalo" (Library of Congress LOC 2296 B2, 1938; on Walton Sailors; the words differ slightly from the lyrics in Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors although they come from the same recording)
File: WGM116
Snagtooth Sal

DESCRIPTION: The singer happily remembers "Walking down through Laramie with Snagtooth Sal." "But she turned me down completely" -- by dying (!). He will die for love, and gives instructions for his own burial

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934

KEYWORDS: cowboy love death separation burial

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 106, "Snagtooth Sal" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 405-406, "Snagtooth Sal" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #11096

NOTES [39 words]: The Fifes regard this as traditional -- but it is noteworthy that they had to get their tune from the Roger Wagner Chorale! To me, it looks like a cowboy adaption of something along the lines of "The Butcher Boy" or "The Pinery Boy." - RBW

File: FCW106

Snail, Snail (I)

DESCRIPTION: "Snail, snail, come out of your hole, Or else I'll beat you as black as coal." "Snail, snail, put out your horns, I'll give you bread and barley corns." Or, "John Jago... put out... Thy brother and sister are at the back door, Crying for barley bread"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1744 (Tom Thumb's Pretty Song Book, according to the Opies)

KEYWORDS: animal food nonballad injury

FOUND IN: Britain(England(West)) US(So)

REFERENCES (7 citations):
- Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 482, "Snail, Snail" (1 text)
- Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #471, pp. 210, "(Snail, Snail)"
- Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 44, "(Children’s Snail-Racing Song)" (1 fragment with the first words "John Jago, John Jago, put out thy great horn," 1 tune, filed with a group of songs under the general heading "Crowdy Crawn")
- Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 130, pp. 275-276, "Shule Aron" (1 text, which opens with this poem but otherwise appears to be a badly damaged version of "Shule Agra (Shool Aroo[n], Buttermilk Hill, Johnny's Gone for a Soldier")"
- HudsonTune 32, "Snail, Snail" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Heart-Songs, p. 55, "Chinese Baby-Song" (1 short text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: Peter and Iona Opie, _I Saw Esau: Traditional Rhymes of Youth_, #163, "(To the Snail)" (1 text)

Roud #20210

File: Gund044B

Snail, The

DESCRIPTION: The snail leaves a slimy track, eating our leaves and stealing away under cover of night. The blackbird finds and eats him. The snail is like "a meddling old gossip with falsehood's trail; And pick ... Till no beauty appears" until "Truth finds her out"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1866 (Stevens and Hole)

KEYWORDS: lie nonballad animal bird

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 213, "The Snail" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Gl 69)
- Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 313, "Snail" (1 text)

Roud #1284

File: WT213
Snake Baked a Hoecake

DESCRIPTION: "Snake baked a hoecake, left the (frog) to mind it. Frog he went a-nodding, lizard came and stole it. 'Bring back my hoecake, you long-tailed ninny!'"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Brown; reportedly found in Washington Irving's notebooks in 1817)

KEYWORDS: animal theft thief food

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE) West Indies(Bahamas)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 185, "Snake Baked a Hoecake" (3 short texts)
- Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 238, "Snake Baked a Hoe-cake" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Richardson/Spaeth-AmericanMountainSongs, p. 104, "Wake, Snakes!" (1 text, 1 tune)
- JournalOfAmericanFolklore, Elsie Clews Parsons, "Spirituals and Other Folklore from the Bahamas," Vol. 41, No. 162 (Oct-Dec 1928), Toasts and other verses: Cat Island p. 469, ("Snake take de hoe cake") (1 text)

Roud #3622

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Come, Butter, Come" (lyrics, some versions?)

NOTES [53 words]: Roud places some butter churning lyrics -- including one version of a Jean Ritchie text -- here, while others (including other Ritchie versions) go with #18167 ("Come, Butter, Come"). Personally, I'd lump them all, and split them from this song. But I guess, even in song titles, butter doesn't always come easily. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: Br3185

Snake in the Grass

DESCRIPTION: A young man vigorously courts the singer, then asks how much money her father has promised as a dowry. When she answers "None," he vanishes. She warns, "But well a day, alas, alas, 'Mong roses sometimes there's a snake in the grass."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Randolph)

KEYWORDS: courting abandonment dowry money

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Randolph 819, "Snake in the Grass" (1 text)

Roud #7434

File: R819

Snake River Massacre, The

DESCRIPTION: "A cruel massacre took place Of late upon the plains; 'Tis hard to describe the place -- It was upon Ward's train." A small band is attacked by Indians, and overwhelmed; two boys escape, but the rest -- men and women -- are slaughtered

AUTHOR: Nicholas Lee?

EARLIEST DATE: 1854 (Salem, Oregon Statesman)

KEYWORDS: homicide battle Indians(Am.)

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
- Aug 20, 1854 - Alexander Ward's party of 21 is assailed and slaughtered. The only survivors are the boys Newton and William Ward

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, p. 138-139, "(The Snake River Massacre)" (1 text)
- Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp 578-579, "Snake River Massacre" (1 text)

File: Burt138
Snakes

DESCRIPTION: "Reginald Alfonsus Bungy had a scientific mind. From his earliest childhood was he taxidermically inclined." In his field expeditions he encounters a drunken rambler who advises him to go to the nearest pub, where he has seen many (illusionary) snakes.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1968
KEYWORDS: drink humorous animal recitation
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 232-234, "Snakes" (1 text)
File: MA232

Snapoo

DESCRIPTION: Three German (air) officers ask the landlady if she has a daughter who will sleep with them. The mother says her daughter is much too fine; the girl protests she is not.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen)
KEYWORDS: bawdy landlord sex mother soldier
FOUND IN: Australia Canada US(MW,So,SW)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 379-384, "Snapoo" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 308-311, "Snapoo" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart2 71, "Snapoo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, pp. 51-52, "Skibboo" (1 text)
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, pp. 110-111, "Mademoiselle from Armetieries" (1 text plus an excerpt, 1 tune)
Gilbert-LostChords, pp. 73-74, "Snap Poo" (1 text)
Roud #4703
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" (tune) and references there
cf. "Mademoiselle from Armetieres" (approximate tune; theme)
cf. "Brave Marin (Brave Sailor)" (approximate tune)
cf. "Little Red Train"
cf. "Johnny the Sailor (Green Beds)" [Laws K36] (plot)
NOTES [99 words]: For the relationship of this item to "Mademoiselle from Armetieries," see the notes to that song.
The word "Snapoo" occurs in a thing called the "Non-Committal Song," listed to a "German Air," and coming from the election of 1840. And it fits the "Armetieries/Snapoo" tune. This would seem to imply that "Snapoo" goes all the way back to 1840. For the song, which begins "A Dutchman came over from Kinderhook -- snapoo," see Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, p. 279. Kinderhook was the home of Martin Van Buren, the incumbent president who lost his 1840 bid for re-election. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: EM379

Snow Covered Face, The

DESCRIPTION: Singer, riding in the mountains, finds the body of a cowboy frozen in the snow. He finds a letter, bidding farewell to his mother and asking the finder to take it to her. Singer hopes the cowboy may have found heaven "for his work is all done here below"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (recording, Patt Patterson & Lois Dexter)
KEYWORDS: corpse death dying mother cowboy
FOUND IN: US
RECORDINGS:
Patt Patterson & Lois Dexter, "The Snow Covered Face" (on Conqueror 7756, 1931; on WhenIWas2)
File: RcTSVF
Snow Deer

DESCRIPTION: "Sweet Snow Deer mine, moon's a-shine through the pine, While Mohawks sleep, let us sleep through the vale, Your cowboy lover Your heart will cover." "My pretty Snow Deer, Say you will go, dear." They will escape to the ranch and live happily

AUTHOR: Words: Jack Mahoney / Music: Percy Wenrich (source: sheet music)

EARLIEST DATE: 1913 (sheet music by Wenrich-Howard)

KEYWORDS: love courting Indians (Am.)

FOUND IN: US (Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, p. 140, "Snow Deer" (1 text, tune)

Roud #7508

NOTES [65 words]: Despite the fact that the singer loves an Indian girl, the song is overall pretty racist -- and certainly doesn't strike me as good poetry. Percy Wenrich is perhaps slightly better known as the composer of "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet." Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle suggests that this might have been inspired by the success of "Red Wing," which strikes me as reasonable, but I can't prove it. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: Boet140

Snow Gull

DESCRIPTION: Scots Gaelic. The singer (a girl who has lost her love?) asks the gull where her love sleeps. She describes the dead all together in the land under the waves.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Kennedy-Fraser/MacLeod-SongsOfTheHebrides)

KEYWORDS: death separation bird

FOUND IN: Britain (Scotland (Hebr))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kennedy-Fraser/MacLeod-SongsOfTheHebrides I, pp. 84-87, "The Seagull of the Land-Under-Waves" (2 texts with literal and loose English translations, 1 tune)

NOTES [85 words]: This is one of those thoroughly dubious pieces. Reading the notes in Kennedy-Fraser/MacLeod-SongsOfTheHebrides, it's not clear that this song ever existed in Gaelic as it stands. And it did not exist in English until she published it. And yet, Gordon Bok sings an English version so different from the Kennedy-Fraser/MacLeod-SongsOfTheHebrides text that oral tradition (if only in Bok's family) seems to have taken over the translated text.

When in doubt, even extreme doubt, we index -- so here the song is. - RBW

File: KFrI084

Snow It Melts the Soonest, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh the snow it melts the soonest when the winds begin to sing... And when a woman tells me that my face she'll soon forget, Before we part, I wad a croon, she's fain to follow't yet." The singer declares analogies to why parting need not be forever

AUTHOR: Words probably by Thomas Doubleday

EARLIEST DATE: 1821 (Blackwood's Magazine)

KEYWORDS: love abandonment nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain (England)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 120-121, "The Snow It Melts the Soonest" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST StoR120 (Full)

Roud #3154

File: StoR120

Snowed In

DESCRIPTION: "When I heard Australian shearers talk, in good old days gone by, Of being snowed in in Maoriland, I used to wonder why." A Maori girl agreed to marry him -- until he ran out of money. He is not ready for conditions along the Condamine
AUTHOR: "The Wanderer" (Mick Laracy?) (source: Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ)
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ)
KEYWORDS: New Zealand sheep travel money courting rejection home
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cleveland-NZ-GreatNewZealandSongbook, p. 46, "Snowed In" (1 text, 1 tune)
Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, p. 157, "(Snowed In)" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Oh! Susanna" (tune) and references there
File: Clev046

Snowflakes

DESCRIPTION: "The snowflakes gave a party all on a winter's night, The snowflakes were invited and they all came dressed in white, Each rode in a tiny carriage made of the softest silk, And slowly, gently, drifting down, they all came merrily"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, p. 110, "Snowflakes" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #7528
File: Boet110

Snowy-Breasted Pearl, The

DESCRIPTION: "There's a colleen fair as May, For a year and for a day I sought by every way Her heart to gain." He's tried everything, without luck. He would follow her to France or Spain. Don't condemn him for wanting his "snowy-breasted pearl"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster)
KEYWORDS: love beauty courting rejection nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 182, "There's a Colleen Fair as May" (1 text)
Roud #22450
File: HMHS182C

Snuffer

DESCRIPTION: "There is a practice now in use For which there is no good excuse, They smoke and chew that filthy weed And they commit a sinful deed." The singer warns against as "snuffer for a wife." They ruin everything; "it's awful, awful, awful"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1969 (Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol3)
KEYWORDS: nonballad marriage warning drugs
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol3, pp. 71-73, "Snuffer" (1 text plus a fragment, 2 tunes)
Roud #7058
File: BWV3071

Snuffer's Grace

DESCRIPTION: "Here's my mull and tak' a sneeshin, Dodsake gie yer nose a creeshin; Ye're welcome sid ye snuff a groat, Yestreen I snuffed a pun and mair o't The feint a grain o't made me sneeze In fact it isna worth the cairryin', If it warna jist to scare flees."
Snuffer's Toast, The

DESCRIPTION: "Here's to the nose, and up it goes, And all that it contains, It clears the eyes and clogs the nose, And clarifies the brain; And it makes the lugs to crack; And oh it is a capital thing For ony man to tak'. Amen."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: drugs nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 567, "Snuffer's Grace" (1 short text)
Roud #6038

NOTES [10 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan3 entry. - BS

Last updated in version 2.4

File: GrD3567

So Dear Is My Charlie to Me (Prince Charlie)

DESCRIPTION: The lady bids her listeners to lament for her, "for so dear is my Charlie to me." She tells how she turned down many nobles because of her love for Charlie. She admits that he is Catholic and she Presbyterian, but she will accept Rome for Charlie

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1890 (broadside, Bodleian 2806 c.11(146))

KEYWORDS: love courting separation Jacobites

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1720-1788 - Life of Charles Edward Stuart, "Bonnie Prince Charlie"
1745 - The (last) Jacobite Rebellion
1746 - Prince Charlie's rebellion crushed at Culloden. Charlie spends months fleeing the English. One of those who helps him escape is Flora MacDonald

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H533, p. 292, "So Dear Is My Charlie to Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
Tunney-StoneFiddle, pp. 162-163, "Prince Charlie Stuart" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3099

RECORDINGS:
Paddy Tunney, "Prince Charlie Stuart" (on IRPTunney01)
Roisin White, "So Dear Is My Charlie To Me" (on IRRWhite01)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.11(146)[useless for determining text, but see NOTES], "Charlie Stuart" ("Come join in lamentation queens and princesses"), R. McIntosh (Glasgow), 1849-1889; also Harding B 15(40b), 2806 c.14(129)[beginning and ending verses illegible], "Charlie Stuart"; Firth b.26(4) [end missing], "Flora Macdonald's Lament for her Charlie" ("Come join in lamentation you queens and you princes")

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Flora's Lament for Her Charlie" (subject)
cf. "Flora MacDonald's Lament" (subject)

NOTES [364 words]: Broadside Bodleian, 2806 c.11(146), "Charlie Stuart" ("Come join in lamentation queens and princesses"), R. McIntosh (Glasgow), 1849-1889 large image could not be downloaded but the small image could be magnified enough to verify that the broadside is for this ballad.

As for the Flora Macdonald text of Bodleian Firth b.26(4) there is no question but that this particular text is an example of "So Dear Is My Charlie to Me."

This is not the same song as either Hogg 92, Jacobite Relics of Scotland, "The Lament of Flora Macdonald" or "Flora's Lament for Her Charlie."

Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenry'sSongsOfThePeople H533, p. 292. Tunney-StoneFiddle pp. 162-163, and the Bodleian broadsides listed are all clearly the same ballad and seem likely to have all sprung from the same broadside.

As for Flora MacDonald, here is part of the commentary to broadside NLSScotland RB.m.168(178): "Flora MacDonald, born on South Uist in 1722, is now the most famous heroine of the Jacobite cause and one of its most romantic stories. Bonnie Prince Charlie was fleeing Scotland after his Culloden defeat. When the situation became perilous on the Isle of Skye, Flora was persuaded to participate in her foster-father, Clanranald's, plan to help Charles' escape." - BS

The text of this song in Sam Henry looks troubled; the first verse doesn't fit particularly well with the last two. And there are so many songs on this theme that it's hard to tell which are the same and which distinct.

Some equate this with the various "Flora MacDonald's Laments." This has problems both textual and historical. There is no indication, in the Henry text, that the singer is Flora MacDonald; it's just some woman of the many who desired the handsome "Young Pretender."

Historically, I know of no indication that Charlie had any sort of actual relationship with Flora MacDonald. His only real liaison, during the period of the Forty-Five, was with Clementina Walkinshaw, who would become the mother of his only child. It appears that he was faithful to her during this period.

For background on Flora MacDonald, see in particular "Flora MacDonald's Lament." For the broader context, see "Culloden Moor." - RBW

Last updated in version 3.0

File: HHH533

So Early in a Summer Morning

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets a shepherd's daughter herding her flock. She refuses his advances because he appears rich; she would prefer a "poor shepherd laddie." He says (to us) that she's "the bonniest lassie that ever I saw"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan5)

KEYWORDS: courting rejection money farming beauty

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan5 963, "So Early in a Summer Morning" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #6769

File: GrD5963

So Early in the Morning (I)

DESCRIPTION: In "South Carolina's sultry clime" "massa 'neath de shade would lay While we poor niggers toil all day." The singer used to wait on massa and "brush away de blue tail'd fly." Massa's dead now; he was the best of massa's; "miss him now, him dead and gone"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1863 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3562))

KEYWORDS: death slavery bug servant Black(s)

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 178, "So Early in the Morning" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Gl 82)

Roud #1274

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(3562), "So Early in de Morning" ("South Carolina's a sultry clime"), H. Such (London), 1849-1862; also Firth b.25(282), Harding B 15(295a), Firth c.26(240), Harding B 11(1298), "So Early in the Morning"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Blue-Tail Fly" (one verse) and references there

NOTES [73 words]: Don't confuse this with such play-party songs as "Going to Boston" which have a one-line tag on each verse: "So early in the morning." The chorus here is "So early in the morning, (x3) Before the break of day." Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames and the Bodleian broadsides include the blue-tailed fly verse: "When I was young, I used to wait, On massa's table -- lay de plate; Pass de bottle when him dry, Brush away de blue-tail'd fly." - BS

Last updated in version 2.6
File: WT178

So Give Me Old Boorowa

DESCRIPTION: "So give me old Boorowa and give me a tart And I will be simply all right. Can anyone point to a finer old joint Than Brown Street on Saturday night?... Get out of the way, for it's Joey, they say, Going out with his fair dinkum tart."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Fahey-Joe-Watson-AustralianTraditionalFolkSinger)
KEYWORDS: courting nonballad
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fahey-Joe-Watson-AustralianTraditionalFolkSinger, [p. 17, page headed "After several social visits..."]], "(no title)" (1 short text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Boorowa Was Boorowa" (subject of Boorowa)
NOTES [14 words]: Interestingly, Boorowa, Australia does not currently seem to have a Brown Street. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5
File: FaWSGMOB

So Handy

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Characteristic line: "Handy, me boys, so handy!" The song tells of how the good crew came together: "You've got your advance and to sea you must go, Handy... Around Cape Horn through frost and snow, Handy..."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1869
KEYWORDS: shanty ship
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, p. 12, "So Handy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 76, "So Handy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 142-143, "So Handy, My Boys, So Handy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 479-484, "Handy, Me Boys," "Hand O'er Hand" (3 texts, 3 tunes) [AbEd, pp. 357-361]
Sharp-EnglishFolkChanteys, XLII, p. 48, "So Handy" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST Doe012 (Partial)
Roud #814
RECORDINGS:
Richard Maitland, "So Handy, Me Boys, So Handy" (AFS, 1939; on LC27)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Handy, Me Girls

File: Doe012

So Heave Away

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. "The Gustav's loaded down with grain. So heave away! heave away!" (x2). "The Gustav is a fine big ship, we're bound away on a damn long trip." More verses about drink and other unprintable topics.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas)

KEYWORDS: shanty drink ship

FOUND IN: Germany Britain

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 319-320, "So Heave Away" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Shine the Light" (Salvation Army hymn) (tune)

NOTES [43 words]: According to Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, the crew of a German barque Sterna took a Salvation Army hymn "Shine the Light" and altered the words to use as a shanty. Hugill and his crew, on board the Gustav further altered the song into this form. - SL

File: Hugi319A

---

So It's Pass

DESCRIPTION: "So, it's pass around the grog, my boys." Give me the girl I love, toast Queen Victoria, and "when our money is all gone We'll go to sea for more." Chorus: "Here's to him that merry be ... March onward, my brave boys"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Creighton-NovaScotia)

KEYWORDS: sex drink nonballad shanty sailor

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

1837-1901 - Reign of Queen Victoria

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 56, "Chanty Song" (1 text, 1 tune)

DT, CAPEVIEW

ST CrNS056 (Partial)

Roud #1798

ALTERNATE TITLES:

See, See, The Cape's In View

NOTES [23 words]: Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia has this as a chanty but says "it looks more like a sailor's adaptation of a soldier's song." - BS

File: CrNS056

---

So Like Your Song and You

DESCRIPTION: "I wandered in the radiant dawn O'er glistening fields of dew, And listening to the lark's sweet song, I thought, my love, of you." No matter what the singer does or wherever (he) goes, it reminds (him) of (the girl's) song

AUTHOR: Words: Andrew Doey

EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: love music nonballad

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H508, pp. 226-227, "So Like Your Song and You" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #7976

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "My Singing Bird" (tune)

File: HHH508

---

So Long, It's Been Good to Know Yuh

DESCRIPTION: "I've sung this song, but I'll sing it again." The singer tells of the difficulties of life (in the dust bowl). At last he prepares to depart: "So long, it's been good to know you (x3)... And I've got to be drifting along."

AUTHOR: Woody Guthrie
EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (copyright)
KEYWORDS: hardtimes home rambling clergy dustbowl
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, pp. 164-165, "So Long, It's Been Good to Know Yuh" (1 text, 1 tune)
Seeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 92, "So Long, It's Been Good To Know You" (1 text [dustbowl version], 1 tune)
Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, pp. 205-206, "So Long, It's Been Good to Know You" (1 text [dustbowl version], 1 tune)
Abernethy-SinginTexas, pp. 172-173, "(no title)" (1 excerpt, from the dustbowl version)
DT, SOLÖNGIT
Roud #15161
RECORDINGS:
Pete Seeger, "So Long, It's Been Good to Know Yuh" (on PeteSeeger17) (on PeteSeeger41) (on PeteSeeger27); "So Long" (on PeteSeeger23)
NOTES [136 words]: There are actually two versions of this, Woody's original dustbowl text and the popularized Weavers version. Since Woody wrote both, however, I think we can list them under one entry. - RBW
Make that three versions. Woody also wrote one (recorded in 1944) with lyrics pertaining to World War II. - PJS
Incidentally, if it be questioned whether this is a folk song, I think it is, at least in Minnesota, where they used it as a theme for a popular children's television show. My generation learned it by non-folk means, but it's started to pass on to younger generations.
It appears that Guthrie's original version of this is based largely on actual events of the so-called 'Black Easter' of 1935. For details of this storm and how it affected Guthrie and others near him, see Ed Cray's Ramblin' Man, p. 69fff. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.5
File: Arn165

So Merry, So Merry Are We
DESCRIPTION: "So merry, so merry, so merry are we, There is no one more merry than the sailor on sea, Oh, I dare say... Give a sailor his grog, but no salt meat too strong." The singer tells of hard work and condition, and wants "good rum and a good shanty song."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin)
KEYWORDS: sailor work food drink
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 106-107, "So Merry, So Merry Are We" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #21100
NOTES [49 words]: Roud lumps this with a number of other alphabet songs, and there seems no doubt that it is derived from the Sailor's Alphabet. But it has none of the alphabet lyrics -- just the chorus and some words about a sailor's life. I would consider it to have drifted far enough to be a separate song. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.6
File: Pet106

So Now We've Gained the Victory
DESCRIPTION: "So now we've gained our victory ... the bantam cock shall never crow on the plains of Waterloo." We'll send him to a far off island and not let him return again. A health to King George and Wellington. Boney will always remember Waterloo.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (recording, Freddie James, RQMS Williams, G.W. Greening and Harry Hawkins?)
KEYWORDS: war exile nonballad patriotic Napoleon
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
June 18, 1815 - Battle of Waterloo
So Selfish Runs the Hare (Horn, Boys, Horn)

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, so selfish runs the hare, and so cunning runs the fox, Who would think this little calf would grow to a noble ox? To live among the briars, and run among the thorns, And die the death his father did with a large pair of horns? Horns, boys, horns...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Cecil Sharp collection)

KEYWORDS: animal hunting drink

FOUND IN: Britain(England)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

_ADDITIONAL:_ Sing Out _magazine, Volume 38, #2 (1993), pp. 60-61, "So Selfish Runs the Hare" (1 text plus many additional stanzas, 1 tune; the source is not clearly stated)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Wearing of the Horns

File: So38n2b

So Soon This Evenin' (Axe Timing Song)

DESCRIPTION: "'So soon this evenin', hey now, mmmm, So soon this evenin', oh Lord, Back in the bottom... Just hewin' down timber... Done had my dinner... Don't feel no better...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (collected from David Tippett by Jackson)

KEYWORDS: work prison

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 228-229, "So Soon This Evenin'" (2 texts, 1 tune)

NOTES [57 words]: Jackson says that the lyrics of this "are not songs in themselves"; rather, they were used to establish the rhythm for the axes used in cutting trees. But it seems to me that, if sea chanteys for timing are songs (which they clearly are), then this is a song -- or, at least, pieces like it were worth preserving to help future tree-cutters. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.4

File: JDM228

Social Band, The

DESCRIPTION: "Bright angels on the water, Hovering by the light; Poor sinner stand in the darkness And cannot see the light. I want (Aunty Mary/Brother David) to go with me, I want Aunty Mary for to go with me (x2), To join the social band."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 105, "The Social Band" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #12061
Social Fellow, The

DESCRIPTION: "Come push the bowl about and ne'er mind the score, When that is gone my boys we'll call for more And he that will not merry be shall ne'er taste of joys, See, see the game's in view, hark forward my brave boys" Various toasts.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1820 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 12(101))

KEYWORDS: drink nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South,West))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 89, "Push the Bowl About" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Ox 297)
- Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 49, "Drinking Song" ("Push the jug around, my boys") (1 text, composite, 1 tune)

Roud #1252

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Harding B 12(101), "The Social Fellows" ("Come push the bowl about and ne'er mind the score"), J. Pitts (London), 1802-1819; also Harding B 25(1794), "The Social Fellows"; Harding B 28(73), 2806 c.17(394), Harding B 17(290a), Harding B 17(290b), Harding B 11(2715), "The Social Fellow"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Landlord, Fill the Flowing Bowl!" (theme: drink and good fellowship)) and references there
- NOTES [73 words]: The toasts villify misers -- "the worst in the world" -- and has a health to "your favorite lass." The Bodleian broadsides toasts add absent friends, sailors, "George our King ... Likewise his consort Charlotte our queen."
- Bodleian broadside reference to George and Charlotte is George III (reigned 1760-1820) and Charlotte (d.1818); one broadside replaces the Charlotte reference with "And may good Trade and Liberty in Britain remain." - BS

Last updated in version 4.5

File: WT089

Social Thistle and the Shamrock, The

DESCRIPTION: "The Scotch and Irish friendly are, their wishes are the same, The English nation envy us, and over us would reign ... Now to conclude and end my song, may we live long to see, The Thistle and the Shamrock, entwine the olive tree"

AUTHOR: Henry Joy McCracken (1767-1798) (source: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)

EARLIEST DATE: 1887 (Madden's _Literary Remains of the United Irishmen of 1798_, according to Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)

KEYWORDS: England Ireland Scotland nonballad patriotic

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 108, "The Social Thistle and the Shamrock" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Henry Joy McCracken (I)" (information about the author)
- NOTES [86 words]: The thistle represents Scotland and the shamrock represents Ireland. See, for example, "The Sprig of Shillelah." - BS
- Although the Scots are descended from the Irish (or, more correctly, Highland Gaelic culture is descended from Irish; the genes may tell a different story), I suspect this could only have been written by an Ulster Protestant. And Henry Joy McCracken (1767-1798) was one of the most liberal and high-minded men in Ireland at the time; for his background, see the notes to "Henry Joy McCracken (I)." - RBW

File: Moyl108
Soft Lowland Tongue o the Borders, The

DESCRIPTION: "Blithe is the lilt o his ain mother tongue To the exile...." "We hear the auld tongue frae the stoot Border lad... The Border lass sings it in strains sweet or sad." The soft lowland Border tongue "was spoken by Leyden and Scott [and] by Hogg"

AUTHOR: William Sanderson (1853-1945) (source: McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen)

EARLIEST DATE: 1989 (McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen)

KEYWORDS: homesickness pride emigration Scotland nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen, pp. 32-33, 149, "The Soft Lowland Tongue o the Borders" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #21754
File: McSc032

Solas Market

DESCRIPTION: "Me sell me akee, go Solas Market, Not a quatty would [or "quatty-worth"] sell, Send me out, I go Solas Market, Not a quatty would sell. Why not a light, not a bite, Not a quatty would sell. Why not a light, not a bite, Not a quatty would sell."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (recorded from Edith Perrin)

KEYWORDS: commerce food hardtimes Caribbean

FOUND IN: West Indies(Jamaica)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warner-FolkSongsAndBalladsOfTheEasternSeaboard, p. 50,"Solas Market" (1 short text)
Roud #16397

RECORDINGS:
Edith Perrin, "Solas Market" [excerpt?] (on USWarnerColl01)

NOTES [158 words]: There appear to be only two sources for this: The Edith Perrin recording made by the Warners, called "Solas Market," and a text in Jekyll's Jamaican Song & Story entitled "Linstead Market." Apart from the details of place, the choruses are similar, but there is almost no text to let us know what the songs are about (unless the Warners had more from Edith Perrin which they did not publish).
To make matters worse, the Perrin recording is very noisy -- almost unintelligible. It supplies the text quoted in the description, but I have had to reconstruct based in part on the Warner notes, and it must be considered uncertain. The Warners themselves, in Warner-FolkSongsAndBalladsOfTheEasternSeaboard, gave a different transcription.
According to the Warners, Perrin was a Jamaican (they called her a "colored" -- argh) who for a while looked after the Warners' son Jeff. So although she was from Jamaica, the song was recorded in New York. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: RcSolMar

Sold Off to Georigy

DESCRIPTION: "Farewell, fellow servants, O-ho! o-ho! I'm gwine 'way to leave you... I'm gwine to leave de ole county... I'm sold off to Georigy." The singer bids farewell to home, parents, master, wife, and child; he confesses his heart is breaking

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1824 (Printed in "The Valley of Shenandoah" by George Tucker)

KEYWORDS: slavery slave family separation work home

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, p. 206, "Sold Off to Georigy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Foner-AmericanLaborSongsOfTheNineteenthCentury, p. 89, "Sold Off to Georigy" (1 text)
Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, pp. 94-95, "Hilo! Hilo!" (1 text, fragmentary, but apparently related to this song)

NOTES [6 words]: "Georigy" is, of course, Georgia. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
Sold!

DESCRIPTION: "As I was walking down Queen Street one day I saw a big picture just over the way" of fine land for sale. A man he meets praises the property. The singer agrees to buy it -- and visits it to learn that it is nothing like the picture; it is a useless swamp.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (AndersonStory)
KEYWORDS: commerce trick hardtimes

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 111-112, "Sold!" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Buying Land" (subject of buying a swamp)

Soldier and the Sailor, The DESCRIPTION: The sailor "has a good mind to pray For the rights of all people and the wrongs of all men." He accuses the lawyers of "tak[ing] your hard earnings and giv[ing] you hard laws"; the ministers for condemning you to hell, and the farmers for high prices.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1902 (Petrie)
KEYWORDS: political curse

REFERENCES (10 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 277-278, "The Soldier and the Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hudson-FolkTunesFromMississippi 5, "The Sailor and the Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan 3 685, "The Soldier and the Sailor" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople 85, "The Sailor and the Soldier" (1 text)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 709, "Soldier's Prayer" (1 text)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 239, "The Soldier and the Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hamer-GarnersGay, p. 22, "The Soldier and the Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi 94, "The Soldier's Prayer (The Soldier and the Sailor)" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 151-153, "The Soldier's Prayer" (1 text, 1 tune)
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, Charles W. Joyner, "The Repertory of Nancy Jones as a Mirror of Culture in Scotland County," Vol. XXI, No. 3 (Sep 1973), p. 96, "The Soldier and the Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST Doe277 (Partial)
Roud #350

RECORDINGS:
Archie Lennox, "The Soldier and the Sailor" (on FSB8)
Brigid Tunney, "The Soldier and the Sailor" (on IRTunneyFamily01)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth c.14(226), "The Soldier and the Sailor"[title incomplete] ("As a sailor and a soldier was walking one day"), unknown, n.d.

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Pleasant and Delightful" (meter)
cf. "The First Thing They Asked For" (some lyrics)

NOTES [103 words]: This appears to exist in two forms -- one, exemplified by Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, condemning various wrongs; the other, found in Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland, just calling for a good time (praying for beer and the like). There are, however, enough similarities that I would consider them still one song. On the other hand, the song we've filed as "The First Thing They Asked For" is essentially the request for a good time without the rest. The problem of intermediate versions is so severe that Roud lumps them. I think the extremes are distinct enough to split, but you'd better see both. - RBW
Soldier Boy (Ill), The (The Texas Volunteer)

DESCRIPTION: "I volunteered to Texas, I will have you all to know, A long road to travel, I never travelled before, Oh, my home, sweet home!" The singer recalls the sorrow his parents suffered when he left. The song ends with verses from "The Roving Gambler."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (Cambiaire)

KEYWORDS: separation home travel floating verses

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cambiaire-EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads, pp. 20-21, "The Soldier Boy" (1 text)
Roud #11410

NOTES [91 words]: This is a peculiar song, with an opening that seems to be known only from the Rakes family of Tennessee (mother and daughter: Mrs. J. P. Rakes and Lola Rakes). The interesting point is that the second half is entirely from "The Roving Gambler (The Gambling Man)" [Laws H4] -- but that it is well-integrated with the first half, about a fellow cajoled into volunteering to go to Texas. Why was he so induced? There is no hint. I suspect that we have only a fragment of the song of the Volunteer to Texas, missing both the beginning and the end. - RBW

File: Cmb020

Soldier Boy [Laws O31]

DESCRIPTION: A large company of Irish soldiers must depart for India. One of them is explaining to his sweetheart that he must leave her. She (offers to come with him and is refused. She) tearfully bids him good luck and farewell.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)

KEYWORDS: love farewell India soldier

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf) Ireland

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Laws O31, "Soldier Boy"
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 80, "Soldier Boy" (1 text)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H244, pp. 295-296, "The Soldier Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 171, "The Soldier Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 814, SOLDBOY
Roud #1917

NOTES [278 words]: Laws, relying on Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland's broken version, locates the war in India. Henry (and its copy, Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815) refers to India as a past war and has the soldiers leaving to fight the Russians.
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815: "As John Moulden suggests, the song is probably about the Crimean war, given the mention of Russians..." - BS
The mention of Russians also allows for campaigns in Afghanistan -- which was, in fact, a nation created by the British to separate India from Russia. The British and Russians never really fought in Afghanistan, but there were times when conflict seemed possible. And there were plenty of other problems between Russia and Britain (mostly over Ottoman territory, but also, e.g., during the Russo-Japanese war when a Russian fleet attacked British fishermen).
But there is at least one other reason to suspect that this is about the Crimean War, and that is the soldier's refusal to let the girl come with him. This was, of course, a common theme in song, and one that predates the Crimean War. But it became particularly important around the time of the Crimean War, when the British military started excluding women in any capacity. Arthur Herman, To Rule the Waves, p. 453 footnote, notes that female sailors were "a regular feature of old navy life... one or two disguised themselves as men and served as ordinary ratings. All were expected to pitch in even in battle." He notes that two women even applied for medals for their service at Trafalgar, but were turned down -- "the precedent would prompt 'innumerable applications' from other women veterans." - RBW
Soldier Boy for Me (A Railroader for Me)

DESCRIPTION: "I would not marry a doctor; He's always killing the sick." "I would not marry a blacksmith...." The girl praises the soldier/railroader: "O soldier boy, o soldier boy, O soldier boy for me; If ever I get married, A soldier's wife I'll be"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (published by C. B. Ball)

KEYWORDS: soldier marriage courting railroading technology humorous rejection

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,SE,So,SW)

REFERENCES (16 citations):
- Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 461-465, "A Railroader for Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, p. 154, "The Railroad Man" (1 text)
- Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 374-377, "The Guerrilla Boy" (4 texts, 1 tune; the second of two texts filed as "C" is this song)
- Randolph 493, "The Railroader" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 373-375, "The Railroader" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 493)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3, "Miss, Will You Have a Farmer's Son" (1 text, probably edited so the girl wants a California Boy and then again so she wants a Southerner, but too similar in style to file separately); 17, "I Wouldn't Marry" (7 text (some short) plus 6 excerpts, 1 fragment, and mention of 5 more, of which "F" and the fragments "G" and "I" belong here)
- Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians272, "Soldier Boy for Me" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
- Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs68, "Soldier Boy for Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica215, "A Railroader for Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Botkin/Harlow-TreasuryOfRailroadFolklore, p. 465, "A Railroader for Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging21, pp. 136-139, "The Buckskin Shirt" (1 text, 1 tune, a strange composite starting with "The Roving Gambler (The Gambling Man) [Laws H4]), breaks into a cowboy version of "Soldier Boy for Me (A Railroader for Me)," and concludes with a stanza describing the happy marriage between the two)
- Montgomery/Montgomery-ScottishNurseryRhymes170, "(I wouldna have a baker, ava, va, va)" (1 short text, of this type but perhaps not this song)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 343, "Daughters Will You Marry" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: James P. Leary, Compiler and Annotator, _Wisconsin Folklore_ University of Wisconsin Press, 2009, article "Kentucky Folksong in Northern Wisconsin" by Asher E. Treat, p. 234, "I Will Not Marry a Farmer" (1 text, 1 tune, sung by Maud Jacobs and Pearl Jacobs Borusky) cf. Kinloch-TheBalladBookIV, pp. 14-15 (no title) (1 text, beginning, "Awa wi' your slavery hireman," probably not this song but based on the same idea: Roud #8152)
- cf. _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 42, #1 (1997), p, 72-73, "Maedli, Witt Do Heiere? (Young Girl, Will You Marry?)" (1 text, 1 tune, a Pennsylvania Dutch analog to the "Daughter Will You Marry?" type of song)
- ST R493 (Full)
- Roud #1302

RECORDINGS:
- Logan English, "A Railroader for Me" (on LEnglish01)
- May Kennedy McCord, "The Railroader" (AFS 5301 A2, 1941; on LC61)
- Pete Seeger, "Daughter Will You Marry" (on PeteSeeger11)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "The Farmer and the Shanty Boy" (theme: professional comparison)
- cf. "The Husbandman and the Servingman" (theme: professional comparison)
- cf. "The Plooman Laddie (I)" (theme: professional comparison)
- cf. "The Bonnie Mason Laddie" (lyrics; theme: professional comparison)
- cf. "Yon Bonnie Lad" (theme: professional comparison)
- cf. "I'll Never, Never Marry the Blacksmith Lad" (theme: professional comparison)
- cf. "The Tailor He's Been Seekin' Me" (theme: professional comparison)
- cf. "Oh But I'm Weary" (theme: professional comparison)
- cf. "Dialogue entre Deux Metis: Le Cultivateur et la Chasseur (The Hunter and the Farmer)" (theme: professional comparison)
cf. "Jinny Go Round and Around" (plot)
cf. "Fond of Chewing Gum" (floating verses)
cf. "A Farmer's Life for Me" (theme)

NOTES [300 words]: It will be observed that the preferred occupation in this song can be almost anything -- and the rejected occupations can truly be anything at all. Cohen, p. 464, compares eight texts. All of them list farmer as one of the occupations, and six list blacksmith, but there are 11 other occupations mentioned in one or another text. - RBW

C. B. Ball published this piece in 1907, but it's hard to believe he actually wrote it (at least in that year); the diverse collections by Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety (collected 1910!) , Randolph and Sharp clearly imply that it is older. - (PJS), RBW

Cohen notes that the Ball text is the first to mention railroads; it may be that Ball adapted an older song to the railroads. There is, however, one interesting side note: Laura Ingalls Wilder, By the Shores of Silver Lake, chapter 6, quotes a "railroad man" version. If Laura actually heard the song then, we could date the "railroad" versions to 1879. But, of course, Laura was writing not-quite-autobiography, and writing it more than fifty years later. So that's not a very good indication of date. Some elements of this sort of song are very ancient indeed. British Library MS. Additional 38666 contains a marginal poem, probably written between 1450 and 1500, which Rossell Hope Robbins calls "The Clerk and the Husbandman." As it stands, it is a discussion of love, not occupations, and Robbins believes much of it derived from a Latin piece. But it also has elements of this sort of piece. The text as printed in Rossell Hope Robbins, Secular Lyrics of the XIVth and XVth Century, Oxford University Press, 1952, #181, pp. 180-181, opens,

As I cowth walke be-cause of recreacion
Be a grene wode syde as I kane,
I herde a meuose comynycacion
Be-twene a clerke and a husbandman. - RBW

SOLDIER CAME TO A BONNIE LASSIE'S WINDOW, A

DESCRIPTION: "A soldier came to a bonnie lassie's window." She says, "I winna lat in my red coat sodger To do as he has done before." He says he'd just stand sentry over her room. She questions why he takes off shoes and stockings; "nor do I mean to fright the cat"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: seduction dialog nightvisit soldier
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan4 790, "A Soldier Came to a Bonnie Lassie's Window" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6199
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Young Munro" (tune, per Greig/Duncan4)

SOLDIER FOR JESUS

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "I'm a soldier for Jesus Enlisted for the war, And I'll fight until I die."
Verses are about a "soldier of the cross"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Barton-OldPlantationHymns)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious battle
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Barton-OldPlantationHymns, pp. 27-28, "Soldier for Jesus" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Rev. Stephen D. Shaffer, Pilgrim Songster (Zanesville: Shaffer, 1848 ("Digitized by the Internet Archive")), p. 211, ("A soldier for Jesus, I've listed in the war, And I'll fight until I die")
NOTES [168 words]: The description is based on the Barton-OldPlantationHymns text. The first verse is a two-line excerpt from "Am I a Soldier of the Cross." Barton-OldPlantationHymns's remaining verses are couplets, not from that hymn: "This is the way I long have sought And mourned because I found it not" and "I've got my breastplate, sword and shield And I will die upon the field." The latter verse is reminiscent of another Moody and Sankey verse, "Then gird on the sword of the Spirit, With helmet, and breastplate, and shield; And valiantly follow your Captain, Determined you will never yield" (Ira D. Sankey, Sacred Songs and Solos Twelve Hundred Hymns (London: Collins, n.d.), #671, ("Awake! for the trumpet is sounding"); "Am I a Soldier of the Cross" is also in Sankey and Moody [#672]. Sankey and Moody is now a convenient collection, but was not yet printed when Barton collected his hymns.) Shaffer does not print the entire song. The excerpt is listed in a section headed "A Collection of Choice Choruses." - BS

Last updated in version 4.0
File: Bart027C

Soldier from Missouri, The [Laws A16]

DESCRIPTION: A dying soldier sends a message to his home in Kansas. Having become a rebel at the urging of his neighbors and sweetheart; he regrets not following his mother's cautious advice
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1890 (Wehman, according to Cohen)
KEYWORDS: soldier death
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Laws A16, "The Soldier from Missouri"
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 133, "The Soldier from Missouri" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph 213, "A Soldier from Missouri" (1 text plus an excerpt, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 203-205, "A Soldier from Missouri" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 213A)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 494-495, "Along the Kansas Line" (1 text)
DT 365, SOLDMISS
Roud #2206
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Kansas Line
NOTES [18 words]: Neither Randolph nor Laws mentions the fact, but Cohen considers this a parody of "Bingen on the Rhine." - RBW
Last updated in version 3.3
File: LA16

Soldier Maid, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer, a maiden, runs away from her parents and enlists as a soldier/sailor. She proves highly successful. Sent home to recruit, a woman falls in love with the "soldier boy." The other woman betrays her secret; the woman is cashiered.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Greig/Duncan1)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer enlists as a (drummer/sailor) (and fights "with the Noble Duke of York at the siege of Valenciennes"). Her "fingers neat and small" makes her the best drummer. She sleeps with the men but remains "a maiden all the while," Sent as a guard to the Tower of London a girl falls in love with her, she reveals her secret which the girl betrays to the regiment. She is given a bounty by the queen for her courage, marries and teaches her husband to drum, and would enlist again "if the (Queen/Duke) be short of men"
KEYWORDS: soldier sailor love disguise trick cross-dressing betrayal war
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
May 24-July 28, 1793 - Siege of Valenciennes by the Allies including the British under the Duke of York (source: Campaigns in the Online Encyclopedia site "Originally appearing in Volume V11, Page 182 of the 1911 Encyclopedia Britannica")
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland,England(Lond,South)) Ireland Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (10 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H497, p. 326, "The Drummer Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #104, p. 2, "The Soldier Maid" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan1 182, "The Soldier Maid" (6 texts, 6 tunes); 183, "The Female Soldier" (1 fragment)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 311, "The Soldier Maid" (1 text)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 567, "Female Drummer" (1 text)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 568, "To Beat the Drum Again"; Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Ox 248, "To Beat the Drum Again" (2 texts)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #7, "The Female Drummer" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 34-36, "The Female Drummer" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 346-347, "The Soldier Maid" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, SAILMAID* SOLDMAID
ST DTsoldma (Full)
Roud #226
RECORDINGS:
Harry Cox, "The Female Drummer" (on HCox01)
Mary Ann Haynes, "The Female Drummer" (on Voice11)
Mrs. Clara Stevens, "The Soldier Maid" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.17(132), "The Female Drummer" ("A maiden I was at the age of sixteen"), W. Armstrong (Liverpool), 1820-1824; also Harding B 11(2338), Harding B 11(1187), Harding B 11(1188), Firth c.14(165), Firth c.14(166), Firth c.14(168), Harding B 11(970), Harding B 17(93b), Harding B 11(969), Harding B 11(2505), Harding B 16(93c), 2806 c.16(67), Harding B 20(240) [some words illegible], "The Female Drummer"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
ct. "The Banks o' Skene" (plot)
ct. "The Drum Major (The Female Drummer)" (plot)
ct. "Lauchie" (plot)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Handsome Young Sailor
When I Was a Fair Maid
The Drummer Girl
NOTES [3320 words]: The [long] description is from broadside Bodleian, 2806 c.17(132). In Mary Ann Haynes's version on Voice11 her secret is revealed when she is wounded on the battlefield and she would enlist again "If our old queen was to go short and never want of men." The queen is a character in all versions (the broadsides are almost identical to each other) but not as an indication there is no king. Possibly this is a side reference to one of King George III's bouts of "madness" (porphyria).
Yates, Musical Traditions site Voice of the People suite "Notes - Volume 11" - 11.9.02 cites broadsides from c.1655 to 1689, predating the Siege of Valenciennes. Between 1689 and 1793 the Musical Traditions notes that "Roy Palmer ... [reports] there was indeed a female drummer at Valenciennes by the name of Mary Ann Talbot (1778 - 1808). In 1809 Talbot was the subject of a book The Life and Surprising Adventures of Mary Ann Talbot."
Greig/Duncan1 seems to me a minor change to two lines of "The Soldier Maid." - BS
Ben Schwartz originally described his texts of "The Female Drummer" as separate from "The Soldier Maid." As the above makes clear, the song evolved heavily over time -- e.g. the localization to Valenciennes. I consider "The Female Drummer" a special case of "The Soldier Maid," though, and have lumped accordingly.
This song has proved very popular with folk revival singers. It doesn't seem to have been quite as popular in tradition, though by no means rare (the notes in Henry/Huntington/Herrmann list only fifteen traditional texts, mostly from Greig, but many Pop Folk recordings). - RBW
For extensive cross references and commentary on women warriors, cross-dressing women in the military, and gender roles in Anglo-American balladry consult
The theme is ancient and well-known. Edith Fowke quotes Belden, "The figure of the Maiden Warrior (as she is called in some of the English broadsides of the seventeenth century) has appealed to the human imagination from the days of Theseus and Hippolyta in the Mediterranean countries and of Alfred and Alfhind in the Baltic, down through the Britomart and the Mary Ambree of Elizabethan England, to our own time."
Indeed, it even shows up in saints' lives. Michael P. Kuczynski, on pp. 141-142 of Fein, describes the story of an obscure saint, presumably local to England and perhaps even to Herefordshire, Saint Marina. Her father prays to God that he be virtuous -- and God, being perhaps a little too literal and having read too many monks' tales praising chastity, kills Marina's mother so her father won't be tempted by the flesh. The father joins a monastery -- but, not wanting to separate from his daughter, convinces her to dress as a monk and join him there. She is a good monk -- until a woman accuses her of fathering the other woman's child (!), whereupon Marina is forced from the monastery to care for the child. When she dies, her sex is revealed and her honor restored.

George III's madness, mentioned by Ben, is a controversial point. That he was not very clever is hard to deny. That he had bouts of "something" is also quite clear. The diagnosis of porphyria was suggested in the 1960s in Macalpine/Hunter, who showed what they thought was a chain of disease going all the way back to Mary Queen of Scots (Macalpine/Hunter, pp. 201-212) and her cousin Arabella Stuart, implying that it was present as early as the English King Henry VII (Macalpine/Hunter, pp. 212-214), but Peters, p. 4, notes that many of George's symptoms do not match porphyria.

It is certain that Macalpine/Hunter trace an astonishingly long line of porphyria (see the charts on p. 196), and claim to have evidence from twentieth century royals. In the absence of genetic testing, that seems impossibly long. and recent genetic testing has apparently been less than conclusive (Lyon, p. 306 n. 21).

Peters seems to argue that George's condition was bipolar disorder with obsessive compulsive disorder eventually leading to dementia. It appears to me that this ignores some of George's symptoms also -- the king certainly had physical problems, and while his doctors doubtless made them worse with their poisonous nostrums, the problems were manifest before the quacks moved in. Emsley, p. 299, notes the interesting fact that George's discoloured urine, a possible symptom of porphyria, is also a side effect of lead poisoning. Indeed, porphyria and lead poisoning display many of the same symptoms -- and lead poisoning can aggravate the symptoms of porphyria. Emsley, p. 132, says that a sample of George III's hair contained more than ten times the normal level of lead (and an even higher excess of arsenic, plus a little excess mercury).

Emsley apparently thinks that George III suffered both porphyria and lead poisoning, but his statements seem to imply that lead poisoning -- caused perhaps by the king's liking for sauerkraut and lemonade (both of which could extract lead from lead-glazed pottery), or perhaps by the other medicines given him -- would have sufficed to cause his illness. We perhaps have to simply say that George III was not of sound mind and leave it there.

Nonetheless the mention of George III's madness helps us with the dating, since Valenciennes was fought over more than once. Valenciennes was one of the great border forts Louis XIV used to protect from invasions from the Netherlands, and was first fought over in July 1656 when the Prince de Conde (at that time serving the Spanish) forced the Vicomte de Turenne (then a French officer) to give up the siege of Valenciennes. Admittedly there is no particular reason to think that English soldiers would be involved in that; Oliver Cromwell did not commit English troops to the fight (on the side of the French) until 1657.

George III had his first fit of madness in 1788, with later bouts in 1801, 1804, and from 1810 until his death in 1820 (Peters, p. 4). That first spell of madness, we note, started before the French Revolution.

The first attack on Valenciennes (then held by the Austrians) was undertaken by the French in late April 1792. It failed utterly. A second attempt, in June, managed to take Courtrai, but then collapsed (Pope, p. 495). Most of Belgium finally fell that fall (Pope, p. 189).

In 1793, the English put a force in Flanders under the Duke of York (George II's second son) which was supposed to reconquer Belgium. They managed, after a long siege, to retake Valenciennes (Pope, p. 189), but the Allied army then broke up as the individual nations pursued their own aims. York stayed in command until 1795, but his ineffectiveness was sufficient that he became the subject of parody; many think "The Noble Duke of York" is about him (Pope, p. 525, but see the notes to that song).

Incidentally, there are many historical records of women running off to join the army and navy. Herman, p. 224, tells of a woman (unnamed) who fought at La Hogue (1692) aboard the St. Andrew and was later invited to meet the queen. Davies, p. 166, says that a woman served on the French ship Achille at Trafalgar; she had enlisted to be near her husband, and was freed by the British after the ship was captured (compare Cordingly, p. 104). Cordingly, pp. 54-56, mentions a book by Suzanne Stark which documents about twenty women who served in the navy, one of whom, "William Brown," served during the Napoleonic Wars and became Captain of the Foretop, and later captain of the Forecastle, in the first-rate Queen Charlotte. That is a significant accomplishment for any sailor. She was eventually discovered, but managed to rejoin; records are not available to show her eventual fate.

Mary Lacy/William Chandler managed to serve in the Royal Navy so long that she actually gained a disability pension after being injured in shipwright's work (Cordingly, pp. 56-60). Rebecca Young, the subject of "The Female Rambling Sailor," died while in disguise in 1833 (Cordingly, p. 63).

Hannah Snell's service in the navy became so famous that it earned her a job as an act in a sort of circus (Cordingly, pp. 68-70); she also became the subject of a much-exaggerated biography.

Mayo, pp. 79-84, tells of a Massachusetts woman named Deborah Samson who served in the American Revolutionary War (joining the army as "Robert Shurtleff" in 1782) and was badly injured at Tarrytown. She was discovered during an illness in 1783. She died at age 66 in 1827 of yellow fever. Her husband applied for a widower's pension -- the first ever granted by congress.

Carruth, p. 149, says that one Lucy Brewer served on the U. S. S. Constitution during the War of 1812 under the name "Nicolas Baker." Cordingly, pp. 47-52, gives details on this account: Brewer claimed to have had a child by a man who abandoned her, run away from home, become a prostitute, then gone to sea. She published three books about this career, later combined as a single volume The Female Marine, which went through multiple editions before 1820. Even her former madam published a book about the girl (and, of course, claimed that Brewer had enjoyed her work and that her real name was Eliza Bowen). Cordingly, p. 53, does point out that the whole account has been shown to be fiction -- but surely many people in the nineteenth century believed it.

Cordingly, pp. 90-91, notes in addition that many naval ships had wives aboard -- especially the wives of the standing (warrant) officers, such as the gunner and carpenter. These sailors were allowed to take their wives aboard because they were theoretically assigned to their ships for life -- if their families did not come along, they could never see them. Of course, these wives were not in disguise (although the Admiralty tried to ban them; Cordingly, p. 92). But the point is, ships were more used to women than we sometimes think. We have records of four women aboard the Goliath at the Battle of the Nile, for instance -- and, to some extent, taking part in the fighting (Cordingly, p. 103).

As early as the Revolutionary War, we see disguised women fighting on the American side (Blanton/Cook, pp. 5-6). This was probably relatively easy to pull off in the colonial armies, which were anything but organized.

There are fairly extensive records of female soldiers in the American Civil War. At least two modern books on the subject have been written, Tsui's and Blanton/Cook's. Sadly, our personal knowledge of these women is slight -- as Blanton/Cook note on p. 2, most female soldiers were in disguise and did not write home or keep journals. Blanton/Cook catalog many of these women on pp. 10-24, but rarely have more than a few sentences about any of them. I would estimate that two-thirds of the female soldiers mentioned by Blanton/Cook are inadequately identified.

Still, we know that at least three women served in the Army of the Potomac during the winter of 1862/1863; Sears, p. 79, notes a case of two soldiers who slept together; one was found to be a woman when she became sick. Pregnancy was often the cause of detection: in the 118th Pennsylvania, '"Corporal Blank' reported sick one evening and was sent to the hospital tent for examination, 'said examination causing a great commotion among the doctors and hospital attendants.... In the course of the night Corporal Blank gave birth to a fine boy -- a genuine child of the regiment." There was also a case in the 107th Pennsylvania, and reportedly one in a New Jersey regiment in the First Corps, and one among Massachusetts troops in the Sixth Corps. In one case, the woman was serving alongside her husband.

We have far more names of women who tried to volunteer and were rejected (e.g. Blanton/Cook, pp. 25-26). Such women of course could not be the subject of this song; they merely give additional evidence that women were willing to serve. Blanton/Cook, p. 28, note that a significant number of examiners were willing to let wives, especially newlyweds, join with their husbands; they imply that this was one of the major causes of female enlistment.

Still, a few female soldiers were better documented; e few even became officers: Cuban immigrant Loreta Janeta Velazquez reportedly served as "Lt. Henry Buford" from 1861 until discovered in 1863, though many of the stories about her are self-reported and dubious. Tsui, p. 29, even reprints a woodcut of her in uniform, with a mustache and beard. (I must admit to finding this account pretty unreliable. I am not alone -- but Blanton/Cook, p. 2, claim that many of her statements can be verified. On the other hand, on p. 9, they say she could not procure a regular commission, yet managed to serve at the very first major battle at Bull Run, after which she started writing her own orders and claims to have been wounded at Shiloh. She may have hung around the Confederate armies, but I think they are taking her memoirs too seriously.)

Whatever you think of Velasquez's yarns, the Confederates did deliberately commission one female officer, Sally Louisa Tompkins -- though she was commissioned to allow her to run a hospital. (Women were allowed to serve as nurses in the war -- Blanton/Cook, p. 66, mention that there were thousands of paid female nurses in the Union medical system -- although the majority of nurses at this time were male.)
On the other hand, it's hard to believe two stories found on p. 67 of Blanton/Cook. Supposedly a 12-year-old girl served as a regimental clerk, and it is claimed that a Black woman, Maria Lewis, impersonated a white man.

This is apart from the well-documented cases of women serving as spies. There were, of course, a lot of women who carried intelligence (with the overrated Belle Boyd being the most famous), and some who did it professionally. But this involved no disguise -- and most accounts I have seen say that spies made very little difference in the Civil War; there was little attempt to suppress newspaper accounts, so the military could get better information from enemy papers.

Several of these tales resemble folk songs. For example, we have several cases where, like the Handsome Cabin Boy, a woman is pregnant while on service. On p. 11, Blanton/Cook claim that a woman fought at the battle of Stones River/Murfreesboro while five months pregnant -- although they do not give her name. They also mention on pp. 13-15 a pregnant woman serving in the Seven Days' Battles, and staying with the army and fighting two more battles before giving birth -- and don't give her a name either. They also describe on p. 54 a New Jersey woman who gave birth while in the ranks and was discovered as a result -- but she too is unnamed (possibly this is one of the women mentioned by Sears). They also seem to imply (p. 72) that this woman was promoted from private to corporal to sergeant. It is not clear how many of these women became pregnant while in service, but odds are that the first two, at least, conceived after they entered the military, since most soldiers in the armies involved had been inducted before the women became pregnant.

Blanton/Cook, p. 32, do note that there are several known instances of a woman running away to be a soldier alongside her lover because the parents had disapproved of her young man. They also note, on pp. 41-42, women who went to war to avenge a relative or lover.

According to Blanton/Cook, p. 62, it was not uncommon for several men in the ranks to know that one of their comrades was female. The young women generally were not discharged unless one of their officers found out.

Tsui profiles several disguised soldiers, but by no means all -- a woman named Mollie Bean fought in the 47th North Carolina regiment, and was used as a major character in Harry Turtledove's historical science fiction novel The Guns of the South. Turtledove offers as her reason a desire to escape a career as a prostitute. He admits that this is pure fiction, but Blanton/Cook, p. 36, cite several women who joined the Union army to escape such a career.

Although tales of female Civil War soldiers seem to be common, they cannot have inspired all the songs of this time; Blanton/Cook, p. 42, say that several Civil War soldiers were inspired by stories of the Female Warrior Bold.

Tsui, p. 1, states that "Scholars today estimate that about 250 women joined the Southern troops and that up to 1,000 women may have enlisted in both the Confederate and Union armies." I do not know the basis for this estimate -- it sounds as if it might just be a case of "There's one in every regiment!" Though in fact that would give a somewhat higher figure for the Federals. Based on the statistical totals in Phisterer, the Union armies eventually mustered the equivalent of about 1830 regiments of volunteers, plus 130 regiments of Black troops, 30 regiments of regulars, and about 50 regiments of soldiers from Confederate states. That's roughly two million men in arms. So it was really a case of "There's one in every brigade."

There were far more than that with the British army in many of its fights; according to Cordingly, p. 93, there were about 4500 women with the British Army in the Peninsular campaign during the Napoleonic Wars.

Amazingly, a woman reportedly led a company of Mexican lancers, more or less openly, at the Battle of Monterrey in 1846 (Wheelan, p. 193).

Supposedly the first woman to circumnavigate the globe began her voyage in disguise. Jeanne Baret was a French botanist, the assistant (and, probably, lover) of another biologist, Philibert de Commerson. Commerson was chosen to be the official botanist aboard the Etoile on Louis Antoine de Bougainville's great exploratory voyage of 1766.

Commerson was allowed an assistant, but French naval regulations did not permit women on board ship, so Commerson and Baret resorted to a subterfuge. Commerson kept rejecting potential assistants until it was time to sail, and then had Baret show up, disguised as a man, at the last minute. He made it appear that he hired her on the docks, whereupon they set sail -- and the Etoile's captain made things easier by letting the two botanists take over his cabin.

Baret made it halfway around the world, but was discovered -- and, very possibly, raped -- in the Pacific. Bougainville dumped Commerson and Baret in Mauritius; it took them until 1775 to make it back to France (Bougainville had arrived home in 1769).

It is of course possible that an earlier women, perhaps in disguise, had made it around the globe, but Baret does appear to be the first documented instance. She is the subject of a recent book by Glynis Ridley, The Discovery of Jeanne Baret, A Story of Science, the High Seas, and the First Woman to Circumnavigate the Globe.

It's interesting to note how "folkloric" some of these women's stories sound. For example, Tsui, pp. 8-9, says that Sarah Emma Edwards ran away from home at fifteen to avoid being married, and at twenty she enlisted in a Michigan regiment as Franklin Thompson (Tsui, p. 10), though she served primarily as a medical attendant rather than a front line soldier. She also fell in love with at least one of her officers (pp. 17-18). Later on, she would desert (p. 20). Must have been quite the character....

The very earliest instance of a cross-dressing woman being revealed by accident, however, seems to go back all the way to classical Greece. According to Jones, p. 50, at the Olympics in 440 B.C.E., a widow, Kallipateira, had a son who was entered in the boxing event. Women were excluded from watching, so she disguised herself as a man. When her son was victorious, she leapt onto the field and her clothing tore, revealing her gender. Women who watched the games were supposed to be killed; she, however, was spared because the boy had won, but the rules for competitors and trainers were tightened after that -- arguably the beginning of gender testing in sports. - RBW

Bibliography

- Blanton/Cook: DeAnne Blanton and Lauren M. Cook, They Fought Like Demons: Women Soldiers in the American Civil War, 2002 (I use the 2005 Sutton paperback edition)
- Cordingly: David Cordingly, Women Sailors and Sailors' Women, Random House, 2001 (I use the undated, but later, paperback edition)
- Lyon: Ann Lyon, Constitutional History of the United Kingdom, Cavendish, 2003
- Peters: Timothy Peters, George III: a new diagnosis, article in History Today magazine, September, 2009, pp. 4-5
- Phisterer: Frederick Phisterer, Campaigns of the Civil War: Statistical Record of the Armies of the United States, 1883 (I use the 2002 Castle Books reprint)
- Pope: Stephen Pope, Dictionary of the Napoleonic Wars, Cassell, 1999 (I use the undated Facts on File hardcover edition)
- Sears: Stephen W. Sears, Chancellorsville, Houghton Mifflin, 1996
- Tsui: Bonnie Tsuie, She Went to the Field: Women Soldiers of the Civil War, Twodot, 2003

Last updated in version 6.1

File: DTsoldma

Soldier of the Cross, A

DESCRIPTION: "I am a soldier of the cross, A follower of the lamb, I shall not fear to own his cause Nor blush to speak his name," "Sure I must fight if I would reigh, Increase my courage, Lord...."

AUTHOR: Words: Isaac Watts

EARLIEST DATE: 1724 (Watts's "Sermons," according to John Julian, editor, _A Dictionary of Hymnology_, 1892)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad soldier
Soldier of the Jubilee

DESCRIPTION: Leader: "I'm a noble soldier (Too young to marry)." Response: "Soldier of the Jubilee." Leader: "I'm gettin' old and crippled in my knee." Response: "Soldier of the Cross"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1983 (McIntosh1)

KEYWORDS: nonballad worksong

FOUND IN: US(SE)

RECORDINGS:
- James Cook, "Soldier of the Jubilee" (on McIntosh1)

NOTES [71 words]: Art Rosenbaum's liner notes to McIntosh1: "This is ... a work song, or shanty, that James Cook used early in the century when he worked as a stevedore in the port of Darien, stowing pine timbers that had been rafted down the Altahama River ...." (p. 5).

While not a religious song one of the responses is from hymns like "A Soldier of the Cross." The Jubilee reference to Emancipation is also a familiar theme in Black hymns. - BS

Last updated in version 4.1

File: RcSootJu

Soldier, Soldier, Will You Marry Me

DESCRIPTION: The girl asks the soldier to marry her. He says that he lacks suit, shoes, whatnot. She runs off to the craftsmen and fetches him everything he mentions. Now well-equipped, he tells her that he already has a wife at home

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren)

KEYWORDS: courting lie request rejection soldier dialog

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,NE,Ro,SE,So) Britain(England(West),Scotland(Bord)) Ireland Canada(Mar,Newf)

REFERENCES (27 citations):
- Randolph 65, "Soldier, Soldier, Marry Me" (1 text plus an excerpt, 1 tune)
- Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 261-262, "Soldier Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 7, "Soldier, Soldier, Won't You Marry Me?" (1 text plus 2 excerpts and mention of 3 more)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 7, "Soldier, Soldier, Won't You Marry Me?" (2 tunes plus text excerpts)
- Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 89, "Soldier, Soldier, Won't You Marry Me" (1 text plus an DESCRIPTION: A soldier dreams the war is over and he was home with his wife and children, swearing "from my home and weeping friends never to part." Then he wakes up.

AUTHOR: Words: Thomas Campbell / music: T. Attwood (source: Carpenter)

EARLIEST DATE: 1835 (_The Universal Songster_)

KEYWORDS: battle war home children friend wife soldier dream

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))

REFERENCES (5 citations):
- Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 167-168, "The Soldier's Dream" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Forget-Me-Not-Songster, pp. 63-64, "Soldier's Dream" (1 text)
- Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2145, p. 144, "The Soldier's Dream" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: The Universal Songster (Boston: Charles Gaylord, 1835 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 171-172, "The Soldier's Dream" ("Our bugles sung truce, for the night-cloud had lower’d") (1 text)

J.E. Carpenter, The Book of Modern Songs (London: G Routledge & Co, 1858 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 7, "The Soldier's Dream" ("Our bugles sung truce, for the night-cloud had lower’d") (1 text)

Roud #13899

BROADSIDES:
- Bodleian, Harding B 11(4318), "The Soldier's Dream" ("Our bugles sung truce for the night-cloud had lower’d"), J. Catnach (London), 1813-1838; also Harding B 15(300a), 2806 c.19(29), 2806
Soldier's Dying Wife, The

DESCRIPTION: A mother is dying. "How can I bear to leave my little children... No father near... away from here tonight in the army of the union... he loved his country children wife but country best of all." She leaves a note for her husband and dies

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1863 (Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin)
KEYWORDS: Civil war war dying death patriotic soldier children wife
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin 29, "The Soldiers Dying Wife" (1 text)
Roud #4267
File: MuLa029

Soldier's Epitaph

DESCRIPTION: "Born in North Carolina, Raised in Tennessee, Worked like hell in Georgia, Died in Germinée."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: death work
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 396, "Soldier's Epitaph" (1 short text)
Roud #11755
File: Br3396

Soldier's Farewell (IV), The

DESCRIPTION: "I met a little kitten in Wairoa, Bought her a big red ruby stone, Sunday I put it on her finder, Monday she left me alone." He tries to find the girl, without success. He sees the Sergeant Major and ships off to the war. "Goodbye to all you Kiwi girls!"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (Cleveland-NZ-GreatNewZealandSongbook)
KEYWORDS: soldier war love separation ring
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cleveland-NZ-GreatNewZealandSongbook, pp. 58-59, "The Soldier's Farewell" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: Clev058

Soldier's Farewell (V), The

DESCRIPTION: A soldier, about to leave for battle, tells his sweetheart that he has her picture near his heart. He is killed and his comrade tells her he was buried with her picture and "will wait for her in heaven" She asks why men invent the implements of war

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA-Leach)
Soldier's Farewell (VII), The

DESCRIPTION: "I am dying, soldiers, dying, Soon you'll miss me from your camp, And your friend will soon be lying Beneath the earth so cold and damp." The soldier sends farewells to his father, mother, wife. He blesses his wife and wishes he had seen her again

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1963 (NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal)

KEYWORDS: soldier death separation farewell derivative

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Dying Californian" (form, lyrics)

File: NCFXI04

Soldier's Funeral, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer describes a military funeral attended by the dead soldier's widow, orphan, and comrades. He will be forgotten by his comrades and even his orphan, horse, and dog. His widow will not forget him.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1866 (Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin)

KEYWORDS: grief war death funeral music nonballad dog horse orphan wife soldier animal family

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1861 - Death of E. Elmer Ellsworth

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin 5, "Elsworths Funeral" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2150, pp. 144-145, "The Soldier's Funeral" (8 references)
ADDITIONAL: Wehman's Song Book [of 148 Songs] No. 59 (New York, n.d., digitized by Internet Archive), p. 15, "The Soldier's Funeral" (1 text) [see notes re source]

Roud #4278

BROADSIDES:
LOCsinging, cw105310, "Soldier's Funeral" ("Hark! To the shrill trumpet calling"), J.H. Johnson (Philadelphia), no date; also cw105300, "Soldier's Funeral"; cw104060, "The Officer's Funeral" PopMusicMTSU, 94-017 Goldstein ID 001399-BROAD, "The Officer's Funeral" ("Hark! to the shrill trumpet calling"), J.H. Johnson (Philadelphia), 1858-1859 and 1863-1876; also 94-017 Goldstein ID 000610-BROAD, "Soldier's Funeral," A.W. Auner (Philadelphia), 1865-1874 VonWalthour, CD Drive>civil war songs>civil war songs(562), "Soldier's Funeral" ("Hark! to the shrill trumpet calling"), J.H. Johnson (Philadelphia), n.d.

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ellsworth's Avengers" (subject of Elmer Ellsworth)
cf. 'Colonel Ellsworth" (subject of Elmer Ellsworth)

NOTES [569 words]: The Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin song shares a number of lines with the broadsides. Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin: "... it appears likely that either the song commemorating Ellsworth's death was closely patterned after some general song of a soldier's death, or, that such a general song was fashioned from a song expressly composed on the death of Col. E.E. Ellsworth." The description follows the broadsides.

According to Broadside PopMusicMTSU, 94-017 Goldstein ID 001262-BROAD, "Assassination of Colonel Ellsworth, at Alexandria, VA., May 24th, 1861" ("Now friends I beg you listen, a sad story I will tell"), J.H. Johnson (Philadelphia), 1858-1859 and 1863-1876, "Ellsworth [commander of the New York Fire Zouaves" was shot by a rebel in the town of Alexandria after tearing down "the flag of Secession" while "returning to his own brave boys."

Regarding Wehman's Collection Norm Cohen writes, "Songbook #6 was undated, but most likely 1884-5." Each page except the first is headed Wehman's Universal Songster. The first page is undated but states, "Published Quarterly -- January, April, July and October. Norm Cohen's Finding List ... has WE29, Universal Songster as "monthly serial ... [beginning] 1881 (Norm Cohen, A Finding List of American Secular Songsters Published Between 1860 and 1899 (Murfreesboro: Middle Tennessee State University), p. 150).

Broadsides LOCSinging cw105310 and VonWalthour, CD Drive>civil war songs>civil war songs(562) appear to be the same edition.

Broadsides LOCSinging cw104060 and PopMusicMTSU, 94-017 Goldstein ID 001399-BROAD appear to be the same edition. - BS

According to Mark M. Boatner III, The Civil War Dictionary, 1959 (there are many editions of this very popular work; mine is a Knopf hardcover), pp. 263-264, Colonel Ellsworth was one of the first noteworthy casualties on the Union side in the Civil War. Ephraim Elmer Ellsworth was born in 1837, and had organized what amounted to a parade troupe; they had performed at the White House in 1860. He had come to Washington with Lincoln, and when the war broke out, he tried to join the War Department, then went off to raise the 11th New York Regiment -- a fancy outfit of Zouaves, known as the New York Fire Zouves because many of them were firemen.

To the French, Zouaves were an organization with special training, but in America, they merely wore silly uniforms. In other words, they were a bunch of showoffs. Ellsworth himself demonstrated this when he removed the flag flying over the Marshall House Tavern. Having taken down the flag, he was shot by the building's proprietor, James T. Jackson. Private Francis E. Brownell then killed Jackson. A reporter was present, so the incident made headlines throughout the country. Certainly there were many, many children named after him -- I recently did a book search for volumes about Ellsworth, and didn't find anything, but found six different authors named "Elmer Ellsworth (something)" -- e.g. Elmer Ellsworth Brown.

Oddly, the regiment Ellsworth raised was disbanded after only a little more than a year, despite signing up for two (Boatner, p. 594); it thus, relatively speaking, played a small part in the war. The song may have played a bigger role than Ellsworth's troops. Wolf-AmericanSongSheets lists eight different broadside prints, by two different publishers, one of them labelled "The Officer's Funeral." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.0
File: MuLa005

Soldier's Joy

DESCRIPTION: Dance tune with verses; "I am my mama's darling boy...." "Grasshopper sitting on a sweet potato vine...." "Fifteen cents for the morphine, 25 cents for the beer/Fifteen cents for the morphine, gonna take me away from here"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Greig/Duncan8)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Dance tune with verses; "I am my mama's darling boy/Play that tune called Soldier's Joy"; "Grasshopper sitting on a sweet potato vine/Along come a chicken and says 'You're mine'"; "Fifteen cents for the morphine, 25 cents for the beer/Fifteen cents for the morphine, gonna take me away from here"

KEYWORDS: dancing nonballad drugs

FOUND IN: Britain US(All) Scandinavia

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1743, "The Soldier's Joy" (2 texts, 1 tune)6389
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 109-111, "Soldier's Joy" (1 tune plus dance instructions)
DT, SOLDRJO2
Roud #27659

RECORDINGS:
Arkansas Woodchopper [pseud. for Luther Ossenbrink] & his Square Dance Band, "Soldier's Joy" (OKeh 06297, 1941)
Blue Ridge Highballers, "Soldier's Joy" (Columbia 15168-D, 1927)
Fiddlin' John Carson, "Soldier's Joy" (OKeh 45011, 1925)
Zeb Harrelson & M. B. Padgett, "Soldier's Joy" (OKeh 45078, 1927; rec. 1926)
Sid Harkreader w. Uncle Dave Macon, "Soldier's Joy" (Vocalion 14887, 1924)
Kessinger Brothers, "Soldier's Joy" (Brunswick 341, c. 1929)
John D. Mounce et al, "Soldier's Joy" (on MusOzarks01)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Soldier's Joy" (on NLCR07) (on NLCR16)
Aulton Ray, "Soldier Joy" (Gennett 6205, 1927)
Glenn Smith, "Soldier's Joy" [instrumental] (on GraysonCarroll1)
Gid Tanner & his Skillet Lickers, "Soldier's Joy" (Bluebird B-5658, 1934; RCA Victor 21-2168, 1947) (Columbia 15538-D, 1930; rec. 1929; on Tanner2)
Taylor's Kentucky Boys, "Soldier Joy" (Gennett 6205, 1927)
Doc Watson, "Soldier's Joy" (on RitchieWatson1, RitchiteWatsonCD1)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Love Somebody, Yes I Do" (tune)
SAME TUNE:
My Stetson Hat (File: Ohr083)
NOTES [44 words]: The quintessential nonballad, but I've indexed it because it is cross-referenced elsewhere.
Reputed to have been found around the year 1000, but...
Morphine was reputed to be called "soldier's joy" during the American Civil War, but the title is older than that. - PJS
Last updated in version 5.0
File: RcSoJoy

Soldier's Lament, The

DESCRIPTION: "Beneath a far Australian sky an Irish soldier lay." As he is dying he thinks of his boyhood in Ireland and asks to be buried there. "My dying prayer -- May God bless the island of the brave!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster)
KEYWORDS: homesickness death Australia Ireland lament nonballad patriotic soldier
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Peacock, p. 163, "The Soldier's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 94, "Exile's Lament" (1 text)
Roud #25024
NOTES [94 words]: This appears, on its face, to be derived from On Buena Vista's Battlefield or one of its relatives (or, perhaps Will Hays's "The Drummer Boy of Shiloh" [Laws A15]). But which, and how it came to be as it is (in Canada, no less), I do not know. It seems to be known mostly in Irish songsters, where the title is "The Exile's Lament." The title "The Soldier's Lament" is used in the Index because it's the first one we found in tradition. Roud formerly split Peacock's version from the songster versions, which also contributed to what I now consider a mistake. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.1
File: Peas163

Soldier's Last Letter

DESCRIPTION: Mother opens a letter from her son. It says he loves her. As he writes from a trench he gets orders. He will finish the letter later. The letter is unsigned so she knows he is dead.
She prays "protect all the boys ... keep old Newfoundland/America free"
AUTHOR: Henry "Redd" Stewart (during World War II) (source: Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports)
EARLIEST DATE: 1944 (Ernest Tubb recording)
KEYWORDS: army battle war death patriotic religious mother soldier
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 338-340, "The Soldier's Letter" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #25338
RECORDINGS:
Alvina Coles, "The Soldier's Letter" (on NFAGuigné01)
Marie Hartery, "The Soldier's Last Farewell" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Ernest Tubb, "Soldier's Last Letter" (Decca 6098, 1944)
Soldier's Last Letter to His Sweetheart, The

DESCRIPTION: "Seven days and seven nights we retreated ... And if we don't overcome them They'll send us all down to the grave."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Greig/Duncan1)

KEYWORDS: soldier battle death

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan1 107, "The Soldier's Last Letter to His Sweetheart" (1 fragment)

Roud #5787

NOTES [554 words]: The current description is all of the Greig/Duncan1 fragment.
Greig/Duncan1: "It refers to the disastrous campaign in Flanders against the French in 1793 under the Duke of York." - BS

Much depends on whether this is actually the same song as one listed in earlier chapbooks. I find it interesting that Grieg collected it in 1917, three years after the beginning of World War I, about the time the (surviving) soldiers of the original British Expeditionary Force would have come home.

The Germans of course opened the war by launching the "Schlieffen Plan," invading France via Belgium (Flanders). The British were on the left of the long French line which extended from Switzerland to Belgium (Keegan, p. 94). Their first major engagement was the Battle of Mons, August 23, 1914 (Keegan, p. 97). Although the British force was heavily outnumbered, they were all regulars, and most of the soldiers were trained marksmen. The Germans were draftees. The Germans suffered such heavy losses that there were claims that the entire British army was using machine guns -- though in fact they were deficient in this key weapon (Stokesbury, p. 44).

The British, because their troops were so good, were able to hold the Germans off their front, but they were so few (apart from the nearly-useless cavalry, only four divisions of infantry! -- Chandler/Beckett, p. 211) that they eventually were outflanked as the French retreated, and had to pull back themselves (Keegan, p. 97).

"The great retreat has begun, a retreat which would carry the French armies, and the BEF on their left, back to the outskirts of Paris during the next fourteen days" (Keegan, p. 100). "For the British, the Retreat from Mons passed into legend" (Stokesbury, p. 44) -- for it was a fighting retreat, with contact with the Germans possible at any moment. Many soldiers must have felt they were on the brink of being overwhelmed -- though in fact the British survived (well, other than the ones who were shot). There was, indeed, a very bad moment at Le Cateau, when one British corps, forgotten, was nearly wrecked (Stokesbury, p. 46). The French, with some British help, would finally stop the Germans at the Battle of the Marne.

Of course, the situation fits the 1793 Flanders campaign as well. Frederick Duke of York (1763-1827), the second son of George III, repeatedly proved to be a lousy field commander. (So much so that he is often said to be the officer who inspired "The Noble Duke of York"; Chandler/Beckett, p. 146.) Sinclair-Stevenson, p. 119, notes that he was groomed from an early age to be an officer, but quotes Lord Cornwallis's description of him: "The Royal Person whom I saw does not give much hope, further than a great deal of good nature and a very good heart. His military ideas are those of a wild boy of the Guards." (These were the days of commission by purchase, when officers didn't have to know anything except how to scrape up cash.)

Frederick fought in Flanders from 1793 to 1794, when he was defeated at Turcoing and recalled. He also had a bad experience in the Low Countries in 1799. Being a prince, however, he eventually was made a field marshal (Chandler/Beckett, p. 146). To give him his due, he was a good administrator, and enacted needed reforms in the army when commander-in-chief (Chandler/Beckett, p. 147). - RBW

Bibliography
Soldier's Last Request, The

DESCRIPTION: "The rain was slowly falling on a bloody battle-field" as the soldier lies dying. There is only time to hear a few of his last words: "Tell her that I loved her truly, And that I know no fear." The singer, with heavy heart, tells his beloved of his death

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (Nestler)

KEYWORDS: soldier death love

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

ADDITIONAL: Harold Nestler, "Songs from the Hudson Valley" (article in _New York Folklore Quarterly_, Volume V, #2, Summer 1949), p. 101, "The Soldier's Last Request" (1 text)

Soldier's Letter, The

DESCRIPTION: "Dear Madam I am a soldier And my speech is rough and plain. I'm not much used to writing And I hate to give my name." The writer was a friend of the girl's lover; they fought together. The young man died; the old soldier is left to write of his death

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1921 (Randolph)

KEYWORDS: soldier death separation friend battle farewell

FOUND IN: US(NE,So) Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Randolph 244, "The Soldier's Letter" (1 text)
Ives-FolksongsFromMaine 8, "The Soldier's Letter" (1 text, 1 tune)
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 73-75, "The Boy That Wore the Blue (The Soldier's Letter)" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #4389

RECORDINGS:

Mike Carey, "The Boy Who Wore the Blue" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
Mrs. T. Ghaney, "Madam I Am a Sailor" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Dying Soldier (Erin Far Away I)" [Laws J6] (plot) and references there

Soldier's Life (It's Little You Good People Know)

DESCRIPTION: "It's little you good people know(s) What we poor people undergoes When called upon to take up arms To guard our country from all harms. As to our grub, we have enough Although our beef is lean an tough... We hope to get good beef again."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Allsopp)

KEYWORDS: food soldier hardtimes

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

ADDITIONAL: Fred W. Allsopp, Folklore of Romantic Arkansas, Volume II (1931), p. 228, (no title) (one fragment)

Roud #16590?
Soldier's Life, A

DESCRIPTION: After an introduction from "The Sailor Boy," ("A soldier's life is a weary life, Robs young girls..."), the girl is given a letter about her lover, telling her that he is dying. She finds his grave, and says she will join him with joy when she dies

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE:

KEYWORDS: love separation soldier death burial

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cox/Hercog/Halpert/Boswell-WVirginia-B, #11, pp. 145-146, "A Soldier's Life" (1 text, 1 tune)
Arnold-FolkSongsOfAlabama, p. 49, "The Soldier Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST CoxIIB11 (Partial)

Roud #273

CROSS-REFERENCES:

NOTES [87 words]: Cox's version clearly opens with material from "The Sailor Boy" (with which Roud lumps it), but this breaks off into something else. The combination probably qualifies as a separate song. Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama's version appears to be this other song, WITHOUT the "Sailor Boy" opening. Roud still lumps it, but Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama's version has nothing specific to the Sailor Boy versions -- no building of boats, no asking where the lad is found, no description of a sailor/soldier/lumberman's difficult life. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2

File: CoxIIB11

Soldier's Poor Little Boy, The [Laws Q28]

DESCRIPTION: A poor boy, trapped in a severe storm, comes to a lady's door to ask for shelter. He explains that his mother is dead and his father gone to war. The lady lets him in and tells him to stay as long as he has to, for her own son has fallen (in battle)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety); 19C (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets)

KEYWORDS: orphan mercy father death soldier family

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) US(Ap,MA,MW,Ro,SE,So) Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (22 citations):
Laws Q28, "The Soldier's Poor Little Boy"
Williams-Witshire-WSRO Ox 177, "Poor Old Soldier Boy" (1 text)
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 100, "The Little Soldier's Boy" (1 text)
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 43, "The Friendless Soldier Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 273-275, "A Soldier's Poor Little Boy" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 134, "A Soldier's Poor Little Boy" (1 text)
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 93, pp. 117-118, "The Soldier's Poor Little Boy" (2 texts)
Randolph 718, "A Soldier's Poor Little Boy" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
High-OldOldFolkSongs, p. 32, "A Soldiers Little Boy" (1 text)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 154, "A Poor Little Sailor Boy" (1 text)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 73, "The Soldier's Poor Little Boy" (2 texts)
Cox/Hercog/Halpert/Boswell-WVirginia-A, #28, p. 104, "The Soldier's Poor Little Boy" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, p. 159, "The Soldier's Poor Little Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, p. 161, "The Soldier's Poor Little Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 151, "The Soldier's Poor Little Boy" (2 texts)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 151, "The Soldier's Poor Little Boy" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
Brewster-BalladsAndSongsOfIndiana 67, "The Soldier's Poor Little Boy" (2 texts plus mention of 3
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #103, "The Poor Little Soldier Boy" (2 text, 1 tune)
Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, pp. 284-285, "The Soldier's Poor Little Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #1901, p. 128, "The Poor Little Soldier's Boy" (3 references); #2152, p. 145, "The Soldier's Homeless Boy" (7 references)
cf. Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, p. 482, "The Soldier's Boy" (source notes only)
DT 536, SOLDBOY SOLDBOY2
Roud #258
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Fisherman's Girl" (plot)
cf. "The Poor Smuggler's Boy" (plot)
NOTES [92 words]: Cox reports this in a Philadelphia broadside attributed to Charles Bender, but it is obviously older and more widespread. Both Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety and Laws mention it as having British antecedents, but the only British occurrences are in broadsides. The Warner tune is described as a variant of "The Star of the County Down." The other versions generally have a different melody. Wolf-AmericanSongSheets has one text listed as being to "The Summer Eve is Gliding" and another that claims music by David A. Warden. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.3
File: LQ28

Soldier's Return (I), The

DESCRIPTION: Jimmie returns home from the war. He disguises himself in bandages and says his true self is close behind. He sees that everyone, including "my Jessie" is truly happy. He leaves them planning the wedding "Since Jimmy escaped the soldier's grave"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1859 (broadside, Bodleian Johnson Ballads 1879)

KEYWORDS: wedding war return disguise family soldier

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, pp. 160-161, "The Soldier's Return" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2700

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 1879, "Soldier's Return" ("The wars for many months were o'er"), J.O. Bebbington (Manchester), 1855-1858

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Lea Rig" (tune, per McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen)

NOTES [14 words]: McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen: "A genuine squaddie song from the trenches...." - BS

File: CrMa160

Soldier's Return (III), The

DESCRIPTION: When "the bullets flew... doon yon trench in single file We ran like hell... An mony's the lad nae rise again." Commanded to advance they sing "Marshallease" and "Scotland Yet." At war's end "we'll name the day... An we like bairnies cuddle doon"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1989 (McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen)

KEYWORDS: marriage army battle war return reunion separation soldier

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen, pp. 76, 152, "The Soldier's Return" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #21747

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Lea Rig" (tune, per McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen)
Soldier's Tear, The

DESCRIPTION: "Upon the hill he turned To take a last fond look Of the valley and the village church." The soldier wipes away a tear as he leaves home. His girl prays as he leaves. He will be brave now that he has "wiped away the tear"

AUTHOR: Words: Alexander Lee / Music: T. H Bayley (source: Heart-Songs)
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster)
KEYWORDS: soldier travel separation home

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Heart-Songs, pp. 474-475, "The Soldier's Tear" (1 text)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 110, "The Soldier's Tear" (1 text)
Roud #13900
File: HeSo474

Soleil s'en Va Se Coucher, Le (The Sun Is Going Down)

DESCRIPTION: French. A gentleman asks his lover to join him at an inn. She has one drink and says she must leave. He suspects she has changed lovers. That's your fault, she says. I waited three years for you with no news.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage courting infidelity dialog
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peacock, pp. 596-597, "Le Soleil s'en Va Se Coucher" (1 text, 1 tune)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
La Bergere Refuse les Presents

File: Pea596

Solidarity Forever

DESCRIPTION: The crimes of the corporations and their bosses are described. But the workers can protect themselves, as the chorus notes: "Solidarity forever (x3), For the union makes us strong."

AUTHOR: Words: Ralph Chaplin
EARLIEST DATE: 1915
KEYWORDS: labor-movement nonballad political work derivative
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 282-283, "Solidarity Forever" (1 text)
Seeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 91, "Solidarity Forever" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, p. 181, "Solidarity Forever" (1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 374-375, "Solidarity Forever" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 133, "Solidarity Forever" (1 text)
DT, SOLIDART*

Roud #15158

RECORDINGS:
Pete Seeger, "Solidarity Forever" (on PeteSeeger1, PeteSeeger48)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "John Brown's Body" (tune & meter) and references there
cf. "Solidarity Forever (Montana Version)"

File: SBoA282
Solidarity Forever (Montana Version)

DESCRIPTION: "On the twelfth of June in '17, one bright mid-summer's day, The workers in the mines of Butte, they took a holiday." The miners strike for better pay; the owners "called the A.C.M." The singer calls for unity and an end to the "rustling card."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1918, according to Cohen

KEYWORDS: mining derivative hardtimes labor-movement

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 565-566, "Solidarity Forever" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Solidarity Forever"

File: CAFS2565

Solomon Grundy

DESCRIPTION: "Solomon Grundy, Born on a Monday, Christened on Tuesday, Married on Wednesday, Took ill on Thursday, Worse on Friday, Died on Saturday, Buried on Sunday. That is the end of Solomon Grundy."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1844 (Halliwell)

KEYWORDS: childbirth marriage death burial

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 483, "Solomon Grundy" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose p. 105 n. 18, "(Solomon Grundy)"
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 198, "Solomon Grundy" (1 text)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 49, "Solomon Grundy" (1 text)

Roud #19299

NOTES [38 words]: The easiest explanation for this is offered by the Baring-Goulds: It was intended to teach the days of the week. Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel claims the name "Solomon Grundy" is from the food called Salmagundi, but offers no evidence. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.3

File: 002483

Some Be Merry and Some Be Sad (Women, Women, Love of Women)

DESCRIPTION: "Some be merry, and some be sad, And some be busy and some be bad, Some be wild, by Saint Chad. Yet all be not so, For some be lewd, and some be shrewd, Go, shrew, wherever you go." The characteristics of many sort of women are listed

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1537 (Hill MS., Balliol Coll. Oxf. 354)

KEYWORDS: nonballad drink wife MiddleEnglish

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (9 citations):
Greene-TheEarlyEnglishCarols, #401, pp. 267-208, "(no title)" (2 texts plus variants)
Sidgwick/Chambers-EarlyEnglishLyrics CXXIV, pp. 214-215, "(no title)" (1 text)
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #3171

DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #4956

ADDITIONAL: Roman Dyboski, Songs, Carols, and Other Miscellaneous Poems from the Balliol Ms. 354, Richard Hill's Commonplace Book , Kegan Paul, 1907 (there are now multiple print-on-demand reprints), #96, pp. 113-114, "[Women, women, love of women]" (1 text); an additional tet is on pp. 188-189

Maxwell S. Luria & Richard Hoffman, _Middle English Lyrics_, a Norton Critical Edition, Norton, 1974, pp. 72-73, #74 (no title) (1 text)

MANUSCRIPT: {MSEngPoetE1}, Oxford, Bodleian Library, MS. Eng. Poet. e.1 (Bodley 29734), folio 56

Some Do Like the Tortoise-Shell

DESCRIPTION: Lullaby about cats: some like tortoise-shell, some white and some grey. The singer's favorite is "the old black cat." There is the obligatory "sleep, baby buntin'"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: lullaby animal baby
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #159, p. 2, ("Some do like the tortoise-shell") (1 text)
Greig/Duncan8 1553, "Some Do Like the Tortoise-Shell" (1 text)
Roud #13208
File: GrD1553

Some Folks Say that a Preacher Won't Steal

DESCRIPTION: "Some folks say that a (preacher/nigger) won't steal, But I caught (one) in my cornfield." This stanza floats but sometimes is used as a platform for various complaints about the raiders on the singer's field

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1919 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: thief clergy floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 423, "Some Folks Say that a Nigger Won't Steal" (3 short texts plus 1 fragment, 2 excerpts, and mention of 2 more. Almost all are mixed; "A" is this piece, but "G" has the chorus of "Run, Nigger, Run" while "E" and "F" have the "Mourner, You Shall Be Free (Moanish Lady)" chorus); see also the "B" text of 435, "The Dummy Line"; also 511, "The Preacher Song" (1 text, a complex mix of verses from "Turkey in the Straw" and this song with the "Uncle Eph" chorus)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 423, "Some Folks Say That a Nigger Won't Steal" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 224-225, (no title) (1 short text, with the "My ole mistus promised me" and "Some folks say a nigger won't steal" verses and the 'Mourner, you shall be free" chorus)
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions,, p. 31, "Way Down Yonder in the Cornfield" (1 text)
NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, B. E. Washburn, "College Folklore at Chapel Hill in the Early
Some Little Bug

DESCRIPTION: Singer describes perils of eating various foods, which can lead to ptomaine and death. This is why, before meals, some people pray. Ch.: "Some little bug is gonna get you someday..." "Eat that luscious ripe pineapple/And the sextons dust the chapel."

AUTHOR: Benjamin Hapgood Burt & Roy Atwell (lyrics); Silvio Hein (tune in sheet music; tune of folk version by unknown author)

EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (sheet music)

KEYWORDS: disease warning death funeral food humorous nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
DT, SOMEBUG

Roud #19680

RECORDINGS:
Roy Atwell, "Some Little Bug Is Going to Find You" (Columbia A-1926, 1916; rec. 1915)
Bradley Kincaid, "Some Little Bug Is Goin' To Get You Someday" (Bluebird B-5179/Montgomery Ward M-4379, 1933)
Billy Murray, "Some Little Bug Is Going to Find You" (Victor 17826, 1916; rec. 1915)
Unidentified baritone solo [Dan Quinn], "Some Little Bug Is Going to Find You" (Emerson 764, 1916)

NOTES [44 words]: This has attained enough popularity in the bluegrass and folk-revival communities to warrant inclusion. The Bradley Kincaid recording, which is the one that has spread, uses a very different tune from the one found in the sheet music; possibly Kincaid wrote it. - PJS
Some Love to Roam (The Pirate's Life for Me)

DESCRIPTION: "Some love to roam o'er the dark sea foam, Where the shill winds whistle free, But a chosen band in a mountain land, And a life in the woods for me." The singer loves the life at sea. They capture even armed ships; "we merrily seize our prize. Ye ho...."

AUTHOR: Words: Charles Mackay (1814-1889) / Music: Henry Russell (1812-1900)

EARLIEST DATE: 1836 (sheet music)

KEYWORDS: pirate travel ship

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 46, "The Pirate's Life for Me" (1 text, 1 tune, #52 in the first edition, but with only a partial text and no tune)
Roud #13820
File: FrPi048

Some Rival Has Stolen My True Love Away (The Rifles, The Merry King)

DESCRIPTION: The singer complains that a rival has stolen his true love "so I in old England no longer can stay." He will "swim the wide ocean" to her and, when they meet he'll "welcome her kindly." A health to true lovers and confusion to rivals.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1898 (Broadwood _English Traditional Songs and Carols_)

KEYWORDS: love exile separation derivative floating verses nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,South))

REFERENCES (8 citations):
Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople 23B, "The Cuckoo" (1 text, a composite of two versions)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 122, "Some Rival Has Stolen" (2 texts)
Butterworth/Dawney-PloughboysGlory, p. 5, "The American King" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 179, "The Rifles" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 348, "Rifles Have Stolen My True Love Away" with vocal rendition)
Broadwood-EnglishTraditionalSongsAndCarols, pp. 108-111, "Some Rival Has Stolen My True Love Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 33-34, "The Rifles" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: Lucy E. Broadwood, "Songs from the Collection of Lucy E. Broadwood" in Journal of the Folk-Lore Society, Vol. I, No. 4 (1902 (available online by JSTOR)), #37 p. 208, "The Americans that Stole My True Love Away" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #587

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Love's Fierce Desire and Hope's of Recovery" (source) and references there

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Americans Have Stolen My True Love Away

NOTES [536 words]: The description is based on Broadwood _English Traditional Songs and Carols_ (also found, with more restricted access, as Lucy E. Broadwood, "Songs from the Collection of Lucy E. Broadwood" in Journal of the Folk-Lore Society, Vol. I, No. 4 (1902 (available online by JSTOR)), #35 p. 205, "Some Rival Has Stolen My True Love Away" (1 text, 1 tune.). Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople includes the first two of Broadwood's three verses and adds three floating verses: "... meeting is pleasure ... the grave it will moulder you....," "...Don't settle your mind on your sycamore tree For the leaves they will but wither....," and "The cuckoo is a merry bird... she'll ever sing cuckoo till the summer draws near." Broadwood has an image missing in Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople but included in "Love's Fierce Desire": "... I'll be as constant as a true turtle dove... never... prove false...."

One of the Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople texts in the composite is all but the "meeting is pleasure" floater.
Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople begins, "The Americans have stolen...."
The story line makes less sense here than in the source, "Love's Fierce Desire and Hope's of Recovery." In "Rival," the exiled man would swim back to his sweetheart, ignoring his exile. In "Love's Fierce Desire" he is exiled but it is the woman who would swim to him, etc., so that, presumably, both would remain exiled.
The examples of Broadwood JFLS (1902) and Broadwood, et al., JFLS (1908) are similar to Broadwood's English Traditional Songs and Carols in the following respect [see the discussion at "Love's Fierce Desire and Hope's of Recovery"]: they share seven or eight of the lines, and one similar line, with "Love's Fierce Desire"; all three adjust the exile so that the singer "in England no longer can stay." The two JFLS versions add floating verses from the same set as Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople has in his composite: "Meeting is pleasure ...", and "The grave it will rot you ..." are in both, and one has "... Never set your mind on a sycamore [maple] tree ..." while the other has "In the middle of the ocean There shall grow a myrtle tree ...." Broadwood's JFLS (1902): "... supplied the words as sung by his mother 'sixty years ago.'" - BS The Butterworth version also included the cuckoo floating verse, although it was relegated to the notes by editor Dawney.

Broadwood suggests that the "Merry King" of some versions is Edward IV (reigned 1461-1470 and 1471-1483). This makes a certain amount of sense, in that Edward IV had an immense number of sexual liaisons -- more than any king since at least John, and probably since Henry I, all of whom are too early to be subjects for ballads. And, other than Charles II, few kings since then have been so lusty. Even if the original reference is indeed to the "Merry King" stealing the singer's love, I strongly suspect the reference is to something else -- perhaps a boy gone away to be a soldier. Which makes an eighteenth century date the most likely. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2

Some Say the Devil's Dead

DESCRIPTION: "Some say the devil's dead, Buried in (Fowey) harbor, Some say he's 'live again, and prentice to a barber.... When Tom's father died, Tom and I took a ride, down by the rive side, and home again to dinner."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall)

KEYWORDS: Devil death burial river

FOUND IN: Britain(England(West))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 46, "Three-Handed Reel" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #8904

NOTES [75 words]: Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall's version of this is a fiddle tune, with these words the mnemonic, but there are other songs opening "Some say the devil's dead," which I assume at least inspired the Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall piece. The Roud Index lists Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall's "Three Hand Reel" as #2904, but that is also the number for "Thousands Are Sailing"; I think it is an error for #8904. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5

File: Gund046

Some Ships in Port

DESCRIPTION: Ships are listed and their characteristics or owner noted: "Gaffney's two clippers, Caledonia and Glynn ... the noble torpedo they call Jenny Lynd ... the Alice T with Splanche on her bow."

AUTHOR: "Splanche" Brien

EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast)

KEYWORDS: moniker commerce sea ship nonballad

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast, p. 53, "Some Ships in Port" (1 text)
Some These Days I'll Be Gone

DESCRIPTION: Singer says, "Some these days you're going to miss your honey... I am going away!" "... you'll be sorry" Every verse ends, "I know you're gonna miss me, sweet babe, I be going away."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (StuffDreams2)

KEYWORDS: warning parting nonballad lover

FOUND IN:

RECORDINGS:
Charley Patton, "Some These Days I'll Be Gone" (on StuffDreams2)

File: RcSTDIBG

---

Some Treat of David

DESCRIPTION: Father Murphy excels David and Joshua. His victories are listed, and the loss at Vinegar Hill; "after all, alas, he was taken, And stripped quite naked in the open street; His flesh and bone were separated, And a crimson stream at his joints did meet"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1798 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)

KEYWORDS: battle execution rebellion Ireland clergy patriotic

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
- May 26, 1798 - Beginning of the Wexford rebellion
- May 27, 1798 - The Wexford rebels under Father John Murphy defeat the North Cork militia
- June 5, 1798 - The Wexford rebels attack the small garrison (about 1400 men, many militia) at New Ross, but are repelled
- June 21, 1798 - The rebel stronghold a Vinegar Hill is taken, and the Wexford rebellion effectively ended
- July 2, 1798 - Father Murphy (1753-1798) captured, executed and cremated.

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 11A, "Some Treat of David" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Father Murphy (I)" (subject of Father Murphy) and references there

NOTES [546 words]: "The end for Father John Murphy came on July 2, 1798 when he and fellow rebel leader James Gallagher were captured by military forces loyal to the British crown. Fr. John was brutally beaten for hours by the yeomen warders, finally stripped of his clothes, denied a trial by jury and hung from the town gallows.

"For the perceived insult of being a Catholic priest and not cooperating with the local authorities Fr. John's body was subjected to further desecration when the yeoman, "unsatisfied by the lack of entertainment" dropped the dead body of Fr. John into a nearby barrel of pitch and lit it on fire until the corpse was consumed. His ashes were scattered in the town square as a warning to all those who dare to take up arms against the British crown." (source: Father John Murphy of Boulavogue by Nicholas Furlong as summarized at site of Ancient Order of Hibernians Father John Murphy -- Division #9 Plymouth, MA 02360)

Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion p. 46, fn. 57: In 1866 this song was still "dangerous" enough that a ballad-singer could be arrested in County Down for its sale. - BS

For a fuller history of Father Murphy, see the notes to "Father Murphy (I)."

The issue of Murphy's death is vexing. That he was captured and hung seems certain. Whether he was tortured is another question. Golway,p. 87, says he and his bodyguard were stripped, flogged, and Murphy hung on the spot, then his body burned. Similarly Bartlett/Dawson/Keough, p. 135: "He was stripped, mercilessly flogged, hanged and decapitated and his corpse burnt in a barrel." But Golway's citation system, which is very strange, does not appear to cite a source for this claim (might it have been this song?), and Bartlett/Dawson/Keough has no footnotes at all
I eventually checked eight other Irish histories, some specific to the 1798 and some more general.
Six do not mention Murphy's death. (One, specific to the last part of the eighteenth century, doesn't even mention Murphy!) Kee, p. 124, mentions that he was hanged, his body burned, and his head set on a pike -- but he doesn't cite a source either! OxfordCompanion, p. 373, mentions his hanging, but no torture or cremation. Boylan, p. 259, says only that "His fate is uncertain, but it appears he was later captured by the yeomen and hung."
The whole thing has strange parallels to the death of Jesus, too.
Murphy was not the only one to be listed as having his body burned; see the fate of Captain Swayne described in "The Song of Prosperous."
Examining the sources, it's clear that the pro-English sources don't mention his fate, the pro-Irish do. While most of the Irish leaders were eventually executed, few were executed without trial. Of course, junior officers didn't always follow policy. But I really wish someone could cite a source for this atrocity!
The mentions of David and Joshua are clearer. The two were the earliest members of the so-called Nine Worthies. They were also the Old Testament figures best known for conquest -- Joshua for the conquest of Canaan and David for the conquest of a small empire (as well as for rebellion against his master Saul, which the Bible tries to treat as justified, but one wonders....)
Joshua and David also were, unlike Murphy, successful enough soldiers to die in their beds. - RBW

Bibliography

- Bartlett/Dawson/Keough: Thomas Bartlett, Kevin Dawson, Daire Keogh, The 1798 Rebellion:
  An Illustrated History, Roberts Rinehart, 1998
- Boylan: Henry Boylan, A Dictionary of Irish Biography, second edition, St. Martin's Press, 1988
- Golway: Terry Golway, For the Cause of Liberty, Simon & Schuster, 2000
- Kee: Robert Kee, The Most Distressful Country, being volume I of The Green Flag (covering the period prior to 1848), Penguin, 1972 1998.

Last updated in version 5.2
File: Zimm011A

Some Valiant Soldier

DESCRIPTION: "I want some valiant soldier here (x3), To help me bear the cross. O hail, Mary, hail (x2), To help me bear the cross." Alternate second ver: "For I weep, I weep, I can't hold out; If any mercy, Lord, O pity poor me."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad soldier
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates, p. 45, "Hail, Mary" (2 texts, 2 tunes; the first text is clearly related to this; the second text and tune probably belongs with "Many Thousand Gone (Auction Block)"); p. 50, "Some Valiant Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12001 and 12008
NOTES [137 words]: Roud splits "Hail Mary" (#12001) and "Some Valiant Soldier" (#12008). This is understandable; both are known only from Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates (at least as far as he and I know), and that book splits them. Very much of the material in Allen/Ware/Garrison-SlaveSongsUnitedStates has now vanished completely, and much of the rest is free-floating material. It is certainly possible that the two are of different origin (they have different tunes). But, given that half the words are the same, it seemed to me more useful in this case to lump them.
As a wild guess, this may have started as a Catholic song with the Marian references. Then it was revised toward Protestantism. (The change is unlikely to have gone the other way, since the non-Marian version would be acceptable to Catholics "as is.") - RBW
Last updated in version 2.4
Somebody Loves Me

DESCRIPTION: "Somebody loves me. How do I know? Somebody's eyes have told me so. Somebody loves me. How do I know...." "Somebody loves me. How do I know? Somebody loves me; I know this is so... That somebody is you."

AUTHOR: H. Starr? (source: Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)

EARLIEST DATE: 1952

KEYWORDS: love nonballad

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 32, "Somebody Loves Me" (2 short texts)
Roud #11401

File: Brne032

---

Somebody Stole My Henhouse Key

DESCRIPTION: Alternate lines are a chorus: "No man can get out of here." The game leader sings "I lost my mother's henhouse key." "I betcha ten dollars I can get out of here." "Dog fleas will bite me." "Mama calling for peas and rice."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (USSealIsland01)

KEYWORDS: nonballad playparty

FOUND IN: US(SE)

RECORDINGS:
Moving Star Hall Singers, "Somebody Stole My Henhouse Key" (on USSealIsland01)

NOTES [28 words]: The current description is based on the USSealIsland01 text. The USSealIsland01 liner notes have this as a children's song. The "leader" changes as the game proceeds. - BS

Last updated in version 4.0

---

Somebody's All de Time Talkin' 'Bout Me

DESCRIPTION: "Somebody's all de time talkin' 'bout me, But that's all right." "Talk about me just as much as you please, I'm goin' to tell it to Jesus down on my knees." "Talk about my Jesus here below, Talkin' 'bout me wherever you go."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 634, "Somebody's All de Time Talkin' 'Bout Me" (1 text)
Roud #11933

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "That's All Right" (repeating line "that's all right," floating verse "talk about me")

File: Br3634

---

Somebody's Buried in the Graveyard

DESCRIPTION: "Somebody's buried in the graveyard, Somebody's buried in the sea, Going to get up in morning a-shouting, Going to join the jubilee." "To the promised land I'm bound to go." "Sometimes I'm up, sometimes I'm down"; he'll go to heaven no matter what

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad burial

FOUND IN: US
Somebody's Darling

DESCRIPTION: "Into the ward of the clean white-washed halls Where the dead slept and the dying lay... Somebody's darling was borne one day." "Somebody's darling, somebody's pride, Who'll tell his mother where her boy died?" All bid farewell to the handsome boy soldier

AUTHOR: Words: Marie Ravenal de la Coste / Music: John Hill Hewitt (according to Silber-SoldierSongsAndHomeFrontBalladsOfCivilWar)

EARLIEST DATE: 1898 (Wharton)

KEYWORDS: soldier death Civilwar mother

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES:
- Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 145-147, "Somebody's Darling" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber-SoldierSongsAndHomeFrontBalladsOfCivilWar, pp. 84-85, "Somebody's Darling" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2167, p. 146, "Somebody's Darling" (1 reference)
- Emerson-StephenFosterAndCo, pp. 119-121, "Somebody's Darling" (1 text)
- DT, SOMEDARL*

ADDITIONAL:
- Fred W. Allsopp, Folklore of Romantic Arkansas, Volume II (1931), p.222, "(Somebody's Darling)" (1 fragment)
- Martin Gardner, editor, _Famous Poems from Bygone Days_, Dover, 1995, pp. 50-52, "Somebody's Darling" (1 text)

NOTES: H. M. Wharton's War Songs and Poems of the Southern Confederacy (p. 188) gives the author's name as "Marie La Coste," rather than "de la Coste." Allsopp says it was "sung" by "Marie La Conte of Georgia." Edwin Wolf 2nd, American Song Sheets, Slip Ballads, and Political Broadsides 1850-1870, Library Company of Philadelphia, 1963, p. 146, lists a broadside, probably from the Civil War era, which credits it to Marie Ravenal de la Coste. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.5

File: SCw84

---

Somebody's Dying Every Day

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Every day, passing away (3x), Somebody's dying every day," Verses, couplets alternating with "Somebody's dying every day" (see notes for examples)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Bible

FOUND IN: West Indies(Bahamas)

REFERENCES:
- Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories 1, "I Looked O'yer Yander" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES: The description is based on the Edwards-BahamaSongsAndStories text. Verses include "I looked over yonder; What I see ... See bright angels standing there" and "Come along Moses don't get lost ... Stretch your rod and come across." The Moses reference seems to combine two Biblical passages: Exodus 14:17 has Moses stretch out his hand to divide the waters of the Red Sea; Moses's rod is a sign of his God-given authority in Exodus 4:1-17 (King James). - BS

Last updated in version 4.2

File: Edwa001

---

Somebody's In Here, It Must Be Jesus

DESCRIPTION: Second and fourth line of each verse: "It must be Jesus," "It must be the Lord." The third line repeats the first. First lines include "Somebody's in here," "See the lightning flashing," "Yonder's ship Maria," "She is out a-sailing," "She is heavy laden"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang, pp. 272-273, "Somebody Een Yuh, It Mus’ Be Jedus" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [18 words]: The description follows Hutson/Pinckney/Rutledge-SomeSongsTheNegroSang but I do not repeat the dialect. - BS
Last updated in version 5.1
File: HPR272A

Somebody's Knockin' at Your Door

DESCRIPTION: "Somebody's knockin' at your door (x2), Go, Mary, go, Martha, Somebody's knockin'...." "It's your mother, Somebody's... It's your father...." "In the churchyard...." "It's the preacher...." "Come to tell you, Somebody's knockin' at your door."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad clergy
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 144, "Somebody's Knocking at Your Door" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 155 in the 1909 edition)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 635, "Somebody's Knockin' at Your Door" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 635, "Somebody's Knockin' at Your Door" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #11931
File: Br3635

Somebody's Tall and Handsome

DESCRIPTION: "Somebody's tall and handsome, Somebody's fond and true, Somebody's hair is very black, And somebody’s eyes are blue." Said somebody comes to ask the singer to marry, "And of course I said all right."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1920 (Randolph); Wehman printed a similar broadside c. 1884
KEYWORDS: courting marriage mother father ship
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,SE,So)
REFERENCES (12 citations):
Randolph 380, "Somebody's Tall and Handsome" (2 texts plus a fragment, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 310-311, "Somebody's Tall and Handsome" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 380A)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 275, "Somebody" (2 text plus mention of 2 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 275, "Somebody" (2 tunes plus text excerpts)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 163, "Tommy" (1 text, 1 tune, heavily localized, in which Tommy owns a speedboat and father is happy to be rid of his daughter)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, pp. 101, "Someone" (1 text, which has degenerated into a repeating song with this first verse as chorus: "Someone called for (mother/brother/sister/father), And mother went out to see, Mother came back with a tear in her eye, Someone has asked for me")
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 74, pp. 120-122, "Soolebody's Tall and Handsome" (1 text, 1 tune, much longer than the typical version)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 464-465, "Somebody" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Somebody's Waiting for Me

DESCRIPTION: The singer reports that, being unemployed and broke, he has taken a job as a sailor. All the while, in all the ports he visits and despite all the fine things he sees, he remembers that "There is somebody waiting for me At an old cabin down by the sea..."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (recording, Sweet Bros.)
KEYWORDS: sea separation love
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 160, "Somebody's Waiting for Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST Wa160 (Partial)
Roud #7504
RECORDINGS:
Cousin Levi & his Carolina Bluebirds, "Somebody's Waiting" (Bluebird B-7522, 1938)
Ernest V. Stoneman, Willie Stoneman, and The Sweet Brothers, "Somebody's Waiting for Me" (Gennett 6620 [as by the Sweet Brothers]/Supertone 9323 [as by the Caldwell Brothers], 1929/Champion 15586 [as by the Clark Brothers]; rec. 1928); Ernest Stoneman and Eddie Stoneman, "There's Somebody Waiting for Me" (Vocalion 02632, 1934)
Charles K. "Tink" Tillett, "Somebody's Waiting for Me" [instrumental] (on USWarnerColl01)
File: Wa160

Someone Has Been There Before

DESCRIPTION: The singer complains that he's "always late" for everything, "for someone has been there before." A shoemaker, he invents a new heel, but someone had done that before. He asks a girl to marry but "she gave me a kick... someone has been there before"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)
KEYWORDS: courting marriage rejection commerce humorous
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 341-342, "Someone Has Been There Before" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #24949
RECORDINGS:
Bobby O'Brien, "I'm a Poor Unfortunate Miserable Man" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
File: Guig341

Somerset Carol

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you worthy gentlemen That may be standing by, Christ our blessed savior Was born on Christmas day... Oh we wish you the comfort and tidings of joy!" The Christ child is born and laid in the manger; the singers wish the householders good cheer
Somerset Wassail

DESCRIPTION: "Wassail, wassail, all over the town, The cup is white and the ail is brown." Singer toasts the wassail bowl, likewise the residents of the house, begging entry, food, drink, hospitality and money.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1857 (Bell)
KEYWORDS: request ritual drink food begging nonballad wassail
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Wales)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #350, p. 180, "(Wassail, wassail to our town)"
Scarfe-TheCrystalSpring 100, "Wassail Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #209
RECORDINGS:
Phil Tanner, "The Wassail Song" (on Lomax41, LomaxCD1741, Voice16)
Wassailers, "The Wassail Song" (on Voice13)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Gloucestershire Wassailers' Song" (subject, one verse)
cf. "Apple Tree Wassail" (subject, one verse)
cf. "Here We Come A-Wassailing" (subject)
cf. "Wassail Song (III)" (subject)
cf. "Le Roi du Bal (King of the Ball)" (subject)
cf. "The Carol for the Wassail-Bowl" (subject)
cf. "Wassail, wassail, wassail, syng we, In worship of Cristis natuite" (lyric from Richard Hill's manuscript; see Roman Dyboski, _Songs, Carols, and Other Miscellaneous Poems from the Balliol Ms. 354_, Richard Hill's Commonplace Book, #54, p. 45) (subject)
NOTES [251 words]: The custom of "wassailing" (going from house to house, usually on January 5th, begging food, drink and hospitality) is mentioned as far back as the 12th century in England; similar rituals are found across the continent of Europe and in the United States. -PJS
"Wassail," incidentally, is from Old English "Wes hael," "Be hale/whole," i.e. "Be in good health." Paul Stamler suggests that this should not be called the "Somerset Wassail," because it's well-known outside Somerset and is often known as "The Wassail Song" (or under other titles). The problem is, all wassails seem to be called "The Wassail Song" by local singers. I use the Oxford Book of Carols title because that's as close as there is to a canonical reference.
To tell this wassail song from all the others (most if not all of which are lumped by Roud), consider the first verse:
Wassail and wassail all over the town
The cup it is white and the ale it is brown
The cup it is made of the good old ashen tree
And so is our beer of the best barley.
(The Gloucester Wassail is similar for the first three lines, but the fourth is "With our wassailing..."
bowl we'll drink to thee.
)
The chorus varies; Sharp collected one version that has the refrain
To you a wassail
Aye, and joy come to our jolly wassail.
while another runs
For it's your wassail, and it's our wassail,
And it's joy be to you and a jolly wassail. - RBW
Also see Calenig, "The Wassail Song" (on Callenig, "A Gower Garland," Wild Goose Records WGS 299 CD (2000)) - BS
Last updated in version 5.0
File: ShH92

Somersetshire Hunting Song
DESCRIPTION: "There's no pleasures can compare Wi' the hunting o' the hare, In the morning, in the morning, In fine and pleasant weather." The singer cheers the hunt, speaks of killing the victim, and declares he will hunt again tomorrow
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1846 (Dixon-AncientPoemsBalladsSongsOfThePeasantryOfEngland)
KEYWORDS: hunting animal death
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Dixon-AncientPoemsBalladsSongsOfThePeasantryOfEngland, Song #29, pp. 221-222,
"Somersetshire Hunting Song" (1 text)
Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 437-438,
"Somersetshire Hunting Song" (1 text)
ST BeCo437 (Full)
Roud #1181
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Hunting the Hare (I)" (subject)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Hunting the Hare
File: BeCo437

Something Got Hold of Me
DESCRIPTION: "When first I heard of the people who claimed This old-time religion was real," the singer concluded it was "just a weak mind," but chose to visit anyway -- though the Devil urged against it. Then "Something got hold of me" and the singer turned Christian
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: religious
FOUND IN: US(MW,So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Randolph 640, "Something Got Hold of Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Teresa L. Reed. "Shared Possessions: Black Pentecostals, Afro-Caribbeans, and Sacred Music" in _Black Music Research Journal_, Vol. 32, No. 1 (Spring 2012 (available online by JSTOR)), p. 15, "Somethin' Got a Hold of Me" (1 text)
Roud #4224
NOTES [41 words]: Randolph's text is from "Holy Roller meetings in the woods."
Reed's text is from a Pentecostal church service. Reed's verse is close to Randolph's chorus.
Reed's chorus is call-and-response: call "It was the Holy Ghost" response "Holy Ghost." - BS
Last updated in version 4.2
File: R640

Sometimes
DESCRIPTION: "Sometimes I live on de fat ob de land, Sometimes I live on de len, An' when I got nuttin' else to do, I sweeps my kitchen clean"
Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child

DESCRIPTION: "Sometimes I feel like a motherless child... a long way from home.... Sometimes I feel like I have no friend(s).... Sometimes I feel like I'm almost gone...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: religious home orphan nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 172, "Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 115 in the 1901 edition)
Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro, p. 54, "Feel Like a Motherless Child" (1 text)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 107, "Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child" (1 text, 1 tune)
Seeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 49, "Sometimes I Feel Like A Motherless Child" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 62, "Sometimes I Feel Like A Motherless Child" (1 text)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, p. 514, "Sometimes I Feel Like A Motherless Child"
Roud #10072
RECORDINGS:
Mildred Bailey, "Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child" (Vocalion 05209, 1939)
Rev. Gary Davis, "Motherless Children" (on GaryDavis02)
Harmonizing Four, "Motherless Child" (Vee Jay 854, rec. 1957)
Ruth Mallard, "Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child" (on BlackAmRel1)
Paul Robeson, "Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child" (Victor 20013, 1926)
Pete Seeger, "Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child" (on PeteSeeger23) (on PeteSeeger24)
Sister Nellie Lynn & the Southern Sons, "Motherless Child" (Haven 521, n.d.)
Lee Wiley, "Motherless Child" (Decca 132, 1934)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Motherless Child (II)" (theme, some words, form)
File: LxU107

Sometimes I'm in This Country

DESCRIPTION: "Sometimes I'm in this country, sometimes I'm in this town." The singer asks his love if she will be true; she replies that she has a new sweetheart. He considers drowning himself, but the water might "deceive" him; he decides to travel the wide world

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (recorded from Lee Monroe Presnell)
KEYWORDS: love rejection drowning travel
FOUND IN: US(SE)
ST RcSIITCo (Partial)
Roud #16400
RECORDINGS:
Lee Monroe Presnell, "Sometimes I'm in This Country" (on USWarnerColl01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Goodnight, Irene" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Willy, Poor Boy" (floating lyrics)
NOTES [79 words]: The Warners claim that they could find out nothing about this song. Their informant Presnell thought it was a "sea song." And yet, the kinship to "Goodnight Irene" is clear. If Presnell is right about its sea origin, my guess is that it and "Goodnight Irene" split off from a common original sometime in the nineteenth century, and this went to sea and the other version went to Lead Belly. Since then, they have evolved enough that they can be considered separate songs. - RBW

File: RcSIITCo

Son of a Gambolier (I), The

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a rambling rake of poverty, From Tippery town I came. 'Twas poverty compelled me first, To go out in the rain." The singer tells how hard life, (drink), and rambling has turned him old and unattractive. He can't help it; he's "the son of a gambolier"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1870 (sheet music)

KEYWORDS: rambling drink poverty

FOUND IN: US(SE) Ireland

REFERENCES (11 citations):

- Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 44, "The Son of a Gambolier" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Graham-Joe-Holmes-SongsMusicTraditionsOfAnUlsterman 71, "The Son of a Gamble-eer" (1 text, 1 tune, heavily modified to mae it Irish)
- Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, p. 48, "The Son of a Gambolier" (1 text)
- Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 59-60, "The Son of a Gambolier" (1 text)
- Spaeth-ReadEmAndWeep, pp. 78-80, "The Son of a Gambolier" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Gilbert-LostChords, pp. 159-160, "The Song of a Gambolier" (1 text)
- Ward-PenguinBookOfAustralianBallads, p. 118, "The Ramble-eer" (1 text)
- Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, pp. 515-516, "Son of a Gun -- (Son of a Gambolier; Dunderbeck; and Rambling Wreck from Georgia Tech)"

DT, SONGAMB*

ADDITIONAL: Bill Wannan, _The Australians: Yarns, ballads and legends of the Australian tradition_, 1954 (page references are to the 1988 Penguin edition), p. 74, "The Ramble-eer" (1 text, recognizably this although the first verse has some astronomy references and the son of a gambooleer is made a "son of a gun for beer")

Bill Beatty, _A Treasury of Australian Folk Tales & Traditions_, 1960 (I use the 1969 Walkabout Paperbacks edition), pp. 287-288, "The Ramble-eer" (1 text, much like Wannan's)

ST San044 (Partial)

Roud #2964

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Rambling Soldier (II)" (possible source for this song)
cf. "The Rambling Wreck from Georgia Tech" (tune)
cf. "Dunderbeck" (tune)
cf. "Son of a Gambolier (II)"
cf. "Way Out in Idaho (I)" (tune)
cf. "The Pioneers" (tune)
cf. "According to the Act" (tune)
cf. "The Rakes of Poverty" (tune)
cf. "The Freight Handler's Strike" (tune)
cf. "The Man That Waters the Workers' Beer" (tune)
cf. "Joe Williams" (tune)
cf. "The Infantry" (tune)
cf. "Heligoland" (tune)
cf. "The Sergeant, He Is the Worst of All" (tune)
cf. "Louse Song" (tune)
cf. "The Allentown Ambulance" (tune)

SAME TUNE:

Coast Artillery Song (Jerry Silverman, _Ballads & Songs of WWI_, 1997, pp. 198-199)
The Jolly Sophomore ("When first I went to College, to Columbia's halls I came") (Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, p. 58)

Ye Gallant Sophomore ("There is in sober Itaca A University") (by F. C. Allen, [class of 18]73)

Rambling Rake of Poverty, "A Cornellian's Version" ("Come listen to my ditty, from Itaca town I steer") (Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, p. 113)
Son of a Gambolier/Mary Had a Little Lamb (Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, part 3, p. 50)

NOTES [264 words]: Jonathan Lighter, who has investigated the early versions of this song, gives this information about its history:

"'Son of a Gambolier' (alias 'The Rambling Rake') seems to have been a big deal at Harvard and Princeton in the 1860s. The earliest allusion I have found" is the New Orleans broadside from 1861 cited in the Supplemental Tradition. It "is on the program of the Harvard Senior Class Supper, 1865, where the Senior Class Ode is directed to be sung to the 'Air,--Rambling Rake of Poverty.' (The lyrics of the ode bear no resemblance to those of the "gambolier" song.)

In the "anonymous Fair Harvard: A Story of American College Life (1869), which is set just before the Civil War,[a] Southern student sings, 'Oh, I'm the rambling rake of poverty.'"

"In 1869, G.K. Ward, A.B. Kelly, & J. C. Pennington printed the anonymous song and its tune in Carmina Princetonia." This version is entitled "Son of a Gambolier. A Nassau Song."

Lighter concludes, "My guess is that the song began as a vaudeville piece ca1860 and was more than once rewritten for the stage, whence Harvard, Princeton, and (presumably) Yale quickly appropriated it. (The earliest report from Yale seems to be from the1870s. Later reports are from places like Columbia, CCNY, the U. of Michigan, and Stanford. And, much later, Georgia Tech.)"

The Brown text is clearly a prototype of the various "Son of a Gambolier" versions; in it, the lad is forced by poverty to join the army, and does not mention the gambolier. But so much of the rest is the same that it seems absurd to split the songs. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5
File: San044

Son of a Gambolier (II)

DESCRIPTION: Bawdy, scatological, and sundry verses to the tune of "Son of a Gambolier/Rambling Wreck from Georgia Tech." Often directed at the local arch-enemy (so, e.g. students of Stanford would lampoon California)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE:

KEYWORDS: bawdy parody nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 327-332, "Son of a Gambolier" (1 extended text, 1 tune); also pp. 332-336, "The Cardinals Be Damned" (3 texts, 1 tune)

Roud #2964

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Son of a Gambolier (I)"

NOTES [37 words]: This extended title is used for any song insulting another college which can use the "Gambolier" tune. Why? Because no two versions of the result are alike. The Roud Index lumps this with the regular "Son of a Gambolier." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5
File: EM327

Son of a Seven, The

DESCRIPTION: "The son of a seven's a miser." The singer is a doctor. He gives "Mr Bobie the Censer" "a powder for sleeping ... he never waked again." The doctor pays his respects and is asked for his bill. He gives it reluctantly and doesn't cash it [but see note].

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: death money medicine doctor

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Greig/Duncan3 696, "The Son of a Seven" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:

NOTES [123 words]: This is a recitation and song. The song has a nonsense chorus which is taken to stand in for something that the singer values even more than money. Everything in his doctor shop has a price but "I never heed that when once I get hold of the [chorus:] Fal dree lal dreel tweedledum...." When he gives the family his bill for an extravagant list of medicine "about as long's my staff," instead of just sleeping powder, "I never heeded the bill when once I got hold of the [Chorus:] ...." Is this obscenity in disguise (as in "The Chandler's Wife" and "Jack the Jolly Tar" [Laws K40] and, possibly, "Jock Hamilton")? Greig's source, Bell Robertson, says it "was popular when her father was young, who used to say it was a nursery rhyme." - BS

Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD3696

Song About a Man-of-War, A
DESCRIPTION: The singer and his love part as he prepares to go to sea. The captain convinces him to come "on board of a man of war," where he is bound, abused, and fed horrid food. At last he throws himself overboard, swims to shore, and returns to his love
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown, from a manuscript reportedly dated 1768)
KEYWORDS: sailor ship separation love reunion escape abuse
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation): Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 115, "A Song About a Man-of-War" (1 text)
Roud #661
NOTES [73 words]: The text in Brown seems confused; in the first two verses, the sailor seems about to voluntarily leave his love, then a captain cons him to come aboard ship. Then, once aboard, he is treated as if he had been pressed. The most likely explanation is that several songs have been jumbled together. But the key element -- the third, in which the sailor makes his escape -- is unknown to me, and the editors of Brown confess ignorance also. - RBW
File: BrII115

Song about Snowball
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, Mammy, Mammy, tell me, Oh, tell me, Mammy mine, Why do the white folks' chillun Call me snowball all the time? My daddy calls me sugar plum, My mammy calls me precious one, And Mammy, Mammy, it's a shame, 'Cause Snowball ain't my name."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama)
KEYWORDS: Black(s) mother children
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation): Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, "Song about Snowball" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #16285
NOTES [32 words]: Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama's notes don't explain it, but I assume this is the song of a Black child being taunted by racist Whites. As such, it strikes me as highly effective as a protest. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File: Arno102

Song and Dance
DESCRIPTION: "I just arrived in town today, I'm a stranger to you all. If you don't like this music I can't stop and give you a call." The singer exchanges glances with the girls in the street, becomes involved with one, then heads out of town
AUTHOR: unknown
Song for Bobby Ack Day (Nob Him Once)

DESCRIPTION: "Nob him once, Nob him once, Nob him till he whistles twice"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1976 (Rowling)

KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad hair

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

ADDITIONAL: Marjorie Rowling, The Folklore of the Lake District, Rowman and Littlefield, 1976, p. 119, "(Nob Him Once)" (1 short text)

File: Rowl119

Song for Donald and Andy

DESCRIPTION: "'Twas on a cauld December nicht when fruits and flooers were gone, My brother Andy left me tae be wi' his brother Dan." The singer recalls her times with her brothers. Many mourn them. She hopes they will meet again hereafter

AUTHOR: Belle Stewart (1906-1997)

EARLIEST DATE: 2006 (Stewart/Belle-Stewart-QueenAmangTheHeather); almost certainly written 1965

KEYWORDS: separation brother sister death reunion

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Stewart/Belle-Stewart-QueenAmangTheHeather, pp. 83-84, "Song for Donald and Andy" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: StQue083

Song for the Campaign, A

DESCRIPTION: "Whigs change every year And in new dresses do appear." but Pierce and King and the Democrats will put "Whiggery" to flight and win as Polk did in forty four.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1856 (Thompson-APioneerSongster)

KEYWORDS: nonballad political

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

1844 - Presidential campaign. James K. Polk elected President.
1848 - Presidential campaign. Mexican War hero Zachary Taylor elected President -- the last Whig president. The party will lose in 1852 and will be a non-factor by 1856, replaced by the Republicans 1852 - Presidential campaign. Franklin Pierce and William Rufus Devane King Democratic candidates for president and vice-president. The Whig candidates were Winfield Scott and William Alexander Graham. Pierce wins with 51% of the popular vote (to 44% for Scott and 5% for the Free Soil candidate) and 254 electoral votes to 42 for Scott.

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Thompson-APioneerSongster 61, "A Song for the Campaign" (1 text)

File: TPS061
Song of 1861

DESCRIPTION: "I'll sing you a song of sixty-one -- Mormons, Mormons! For in the world there is lots of fun...." The Mormons are "determined to succeed." People are concerned at the news from Charleston. The Union is "a rope of sand." The Mormons hope for their rights

AUTHOR: William Willis (source: Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah)

EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah)

KEYWORDS: political, Civilwar

FOUND IN: US(Ro)

REFERENCES: (1 citation):

- Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #238, "Song of 1861" (1 text)
- Roud #10909
- File: Hubb238

---

Song of All Nations

DESCRIPTION: "I'll sing you a song of all nations." An Irishman's made of "his shamrock so green and a jug of poteen." Similar lines for Scotchman, Englishman, Frenchman, Jew, ..., old men, old ladies, ..., mammys and daddys.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick)

KEYWORDS: humorous, nonballad

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES: (1 citation):

- Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 80, "Song of All Nations" (1 text, 1 tune)
- ST CrSNB180 (Partial)
- Roud #2766

CROSS-REFERENCES:

- cf. "What's Little Babies Made Of?" (concept)

NOTES: The first part of this has rather the feeling of the educations songs one finds in Randolph and other sources ("States and Capitals," "The Presidents in Rhyme," things like that). But it doesn't really contain information, so this origin seems unlikely.

The second half, in which the song stops talking about various nationalities and turns to types of people (old men, old ladies, etc.) is similar in concept to "What Are Little Boys Made Of" and "What's Little Babies Made Of," but the actual "ingredients" are different enough that I think they qualify as separate songs. There may be a common inspiration somewhere in the distant past, to be sure. - RBW

File: CrSNB180

---

Song of an Old Time Jailbird

DESCRIPTION: "I went down town and got on a whiz... the polie nabbed me and put me in the pokey Way out in the middle of town." The singer complains of bad air, bad food, rats as big as whales, "clinches so old, they had to wear specs"; he vows to stay away from town

AUTHOR: (very possibly assembled by John Daniel Vass)

EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (collected by Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains from John Daniel Vass)

KEYWORDS: prison, police, food, hardtimes, floating-verses, bug, animal

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES: (1 citation):

- Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains, pp. 72-73, "Song of an Old Time Jailbird" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Roud #7324

CROSS-REFERENCES:

- cf. most other prison songs, especially "The County Jail (I)" (theme of hard times in prison and the dangers posed by bugs)

NOTES: This is one of those songs where a lot of the lines seem familiar (though the bit about the clinches wearing spectacles an walking with canes seems unique). The combination, however, is unfamiliar. Shellans-FolkSongsOfTheBlueRidgeMountains compares the tune to "Little Brown Jug." Given that he had the song from John Daniel Vass, who definitely fiddled with a lot of
Song of Joaquin (Wakken), The

DESCRIPTION: "I suppose you have heard of all the talking Of that noted horse thief, Joaquin; He was caught in Calaveras, And he couldn't stand the joke; So the rangers cut his head off." His robberies and 24 murders are listed; the capture of his gang is described

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan)

KEYWORDS: homicide police thief crime punishment

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 195-196, "(The Song of Joaquin)" (1 text)
- Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 135, "Wakken" (1 short text)
- Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, p. 647, "Joaquin, the Horse Thief" (1 text)

ST GC135 (Partial)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Corrido de Joaquin Murrieta" (subject)

NOTES [388 words]: The text in Gardner and Chickering, collected in Michigan but said to originate in California, was badly corrupt (as its title shows), and it is not possible to identify the villain. But it has enough in common with Burt-AmericanMurderBallads's text that I'm fairly sure they're the same song.

The real question is, is this Joaquin in fact Joaquin Murieta (c. 1832-1853, according to DAB, volume VII, p. 370)? The song never uses his surname, but the details fit very well: Murieta (or Murrieta, the spelling DAB prefers), was born perhaps in Sonora (DAB) and came to California around 1849, was the victim of anti-Mexican prejudice, and swore vengeance against all Americans (Benet, p. 751) -- which he carried out with brutal effect.

In 1853, California finally authorized a special company to catch him. They found him and his band in July, and Murieta was killed in the shoot-out. As the song tells, his head -- or, at least, someone's head; those who killed him never heard him declare his name -- was cut off and preserved in alcohol so it could be shown off around the state (YellowBird, p. xxiii). Three others of his band were killed and two captured; a handful escaped (DAB).

Benet, p. 751, says that he "has been portrayed in moving pictures in a sort of Robin Hood role." If there is any actual basis for this, I don't know what it was. But certainly a myth grew up around him, created by the biography by Yellow Bird -- a biography which has about as much truth as a Shakespeare history play (i.e. it has some of the names right, but the rest is effectively all imagination). YellowBird, pp. xi-xii, says that "It is not going too far to say that in this little book [author] Ridge actually created California's most enduring myth. It is true that in the early years of the gold rush there was a Murieta. But it was Ridge's Life of that outlaw, as preposterous a fiction as any of the Dime Libraries ever invented, that sent this vague banding on his way into the California histories...."

DAB's conclusion is that "Accounts of his life are contradictory, and few of the details given can be fully authenticated. By Latin-American writers and by [H. H.] Bancroft he has been invested with a considerable degree of romantic glamor, but the probability is that he was a ruffian, brutal, avaricious, and lawless." - RBW

Bibliography

- DAB: Dumas Malone, editor, Dictionary of American Biography, originally published in 20 volumes plus later supplementary volumes; I use the 1961 Charles Scribner's Sons edition with minor corrections which combined the original 20 volumes into 10

Last updated in version 2.7
Song of Mormon Defiance

DESCRIPTION: "If Uncle Sam's determined On his very foolish plan, The Lord will fight our battles...." The Mormons plan a scorched earth policy "We'll throw down our houses... And we'll organize ourselves Into a roving state." Mormons will never give in

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Anderson, Deseret Saints, according to Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah)

KEYWORDS: battle travel home

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

1857 - Mounting of the Mormon Expedition/Mormon War/Utah War
1858 - Mormons prepare to abandon Salt Lake Valley

FOUND IN: US(Ro)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #235, "Song of Mormon Defiance" (1 text)

Roud #10839

File: Hubb235

Song of Mrs. Shattuck, The

DESCRIPTION: "Farewell, my dear husband and children, farewell, How I feel to leave you, there is no one can tell." On a Fourth of July trip, a hanging limb strikes the family. They are taken to the Granger home. The singer bids farewell to family and friends

AUTHOR: (Mrs.) Abigail Jane Ingraham Harness "Abbie" Payne? (1833-1921)? (source: Rickaby/Dykstra/Leary-PineryBoys-SongsSongcatchingInLumberjackEra)

EARLIEST DATE: 1857 (Eau Claire Times, May 23 edition, according to Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin)

KEYWORDS: death family disaster storm

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, p. 215, "The Song of Mrs. Shattuck" (1 text)

Rickaby/Dykstra/Leary-PineryBoys-SongsSongcatchingInLumberjackEra 63, "The Song of Mrs. Shattuck" (1 text)

Roud #15663

NOTES [132 words]: Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin quotes Rickaby as calling this a "beautiful and touching ballad," but I find it rather confusing. It can't seem to decide who has been hurt, although apparently only one family member dies. And the order of incidents is odd -- why is the singer, who is apparently dying long after the accident, now telling what happened? Peters seems to quote Rickaby as saying it was sung to "Auld Lang Syne," but the words are a dreadful fit; it took me three tries to make even the first line work to that tune, and the result is unpleasant. I rather suspect the proper tune is "A Prisoner for Life (I - Farewell to Green Fields and Meadows)," which fits much better, and has certain similar words -- and is just similar enough to "Auld Lang Syne" to suggest the latter. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: Pet215

Song of Old (Adam the First Was Formed of Dust)

DESCRIPTION: "Adam the first was formed of dust, As scripture doth record, And did receive a wife called Eve...." They are happy until Eve eats the forbidden fruit and destroys their life. Now people keep up the old tradition by bundling

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1794 (Journal of the Polly)

KEYWORDS: sex marriage food humorous

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 330-332, "Song of Old" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [62 words]: Huntington suggest this began as a broadside. I somewhat doubt it -- despite its jovial tone and informal vocabulary (multiple uses of "fust" for "first"), it has the noteworthy feature of using internal rhymes in the first and third lines of the stanza (e.g. "And did receive a wfe called EVE"). This suggests a poet studied in forms other than traditional balladry. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2
File: HGam330

Song of Prosperous, The
DESCRIPTION: "We" United Irishmen burned Prosperous. "Our captain he forsook us," "Phil Mite the informer" betrayed us, Colonel Aylmer led us. "If Ireland had behaved like Wicklow, Wexford, and Kildare, The green flag would be hoisted through town and counterie"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1798 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
KEYWORDS: battle rebellion betrayal revenge death Ireland patriotic
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
May 24, 1798 - "At Prosperous, County Kildare, a garrison commanded by Captain Swayne was massacred by the insurgents" (source: Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 13, "The Song of Prosperous" (1 text)
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 56, "The Song of Prosperous" (1 text)

NOTES [392 words]: Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion: "Philip Mite, one of the assailant party, denounced his leader, a Dr. Esmond, who was hanged. According to John Devoy, this was still the favourite '98 ballad around Naas in the middle of the nineteenth century...." - BS
The story of Prosperous tells us a lot about both Irish historians and about the history of Ireland. It was founded by Richard Brooke around 1780 as a cotton-spinning site. The settlement was on the Grand Canal a short distance north of Naas (in Kildare, west southwest of Dublin)
But English policy was, in effect, to crush any Irish industry which showed signs of competing with British. Tarriffs and other problems caused Prosperous to go bankrupt in 1786.
That much is mentioned in several pro-Irish histories. But they tend to ignore the massacre there. I found details only in Thomas Pakenham's pro-British The Year of Liberty (pp. 112-117). With buildings intact but little industry left, Prosperous made a good place for a garrison; in 1798, there were a couple of dozen Welsh dragoons and about 35 (mostly Catholic) militia from Cork commanded by (Protestant) Captain Swayne.
Swayne, it must be said, was a vicious persecutor of Catholics. His men were not. But, on the night of May 23/24, they were the target of one of the first attacks of the Kildare phase of the 1798 rebellion; reportedly some 500 men took part in the assault. Pakenham reports that 38 of 57 defenders were killed; Swayne himself was shot then burned in a barrel of tar. (A peculiar outcome; see the fate of Father Murphy described in "Some Treat of David.")
The man at the head of the attacking forces was said to be Doctor John Esmonde, the first lieutenant of Richard Griffiths (commander of the Sallins yeoman cavalry, based nearby at Clane, and one of the senior officers in the area).
Griffith himself came under attack that night, but beat it off easily. He did not feel strong enough to attack Prosperous, and ended up retreating to Naas. A yeoman named Philip Mite soon arrived to tell Griffith of Esmonde's leading part in the massacre. Esmonde arrived shortly after, quite neatly dressed, but was taken into custody. He would eventually be hung, with his coat reversed to show he was a deserter (Pakenham, p. 124). It sounds as if Mite's was the only direct testimony against him, but it was enough. - RBW
File: Zimm013

Song of Repentance
DESCRIPTION: A rake repents the "time sadly wasted" drinking, bragging, seducing, and versifying. He has wasted his money on musicians. His creditors would see him in jail. He is poor, growing old, and alone. He warns others not to follow his example.
AUTHOR: unknown, translated by "Frank O'Conor" (1903-1966)
EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)
KEYWORDS: age poverty courting drink music rake
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 82, "Song of Repentance" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [95 words]: OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads: "My friend 'Frank O'Conor' (now Dr. Ml. O'Donovan) has given me leave to reprint his spirited translation of Eoghan Rua O'Sullivan's 'B'theart leigean doibh.'" - BS
Frank O'Connor was an industrious translator of Irish poetry; Charles Sullivan's Ireland in Poetry includes ten of his renditions; the only author more heavily represented is Yeats. Much of his work was collected in Kings, Lords & Commons. He also wrote English short stories and some plays. He had quite a lively life, having been a member of the IRA in his youth. - RBW
File: OLcM082

Song of Temptation, The
DESCRIPTION: Her seduction attempt: birds sport, why shouldn't we? And we are born naked: why wear clothes? Don't quote Holy Writ. He cites David's fall and Sodom; she, Solomon's queens and concubines. He bids her "Begone you slut!" "Without ado they then withdrew"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Tunney-StoneFiddle)
KEYWORDS: seduction dialog nonballad religious Bible
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tunney-StoneFiddle, pp. 45-46, "The Song of Temptation" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5333
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Kissing's No Sin (!)" (theme of the antiquity of sexual relations)
NOTES [184 words]: Both sides have some slight holes in their Biblical logic. David did indeed get into trouble for sexual impropriety (his affair with Bathsheba, told in 2 Samuel chapter 11, with the working-out of the consequences occupying chapters 12-20) -- but that was specifically adultery (Bathsheba was married to the Uriah the Hittite) and David compounded it by killing Uriah. Casual fornication is not nearly the same.
As for Sodom, there was a "great outcry" against them (Genesis 18:20), but fornication was hardly their problem; recall that, just before the destruction of the city, Lot offered his virgin daughters to the Sodomites to rape rather than having then assault his guests. But the Sodomites wanted the (male) guests, so their crime was seemingly homosexuality (Genesis 19:1-10). But the example of Solomon is hardly a counter-argument; he had supposedly 700 wives and 300 concubines (1 Kings 11:3), but these wives "turned away his heart after other gods" (1 Kings 11:4), with the eventual result that his descendants lost control of most of Israel.
I'd call the debate pretty close to a draw. - RBW
File: TSF045

Song of the Alaskero
DESCRIPTION: Ilocano. "It's a hard lonesome fate We face in Alaska." The food is bad and the boss harsh. The weather is cold, and there is no rest. The singer wishes he were back at home and hopes the skies (gods?) will approve of his labor
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Casady, Labor Unrest and the Labor Movement in the Salmon Industries of the Pacific Coast, according to Cohen)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage work travel hardtimes Indians(Am.)
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 683-684 "Song of the Alaskero" (1 translated text)
File: CAFS2683

Song of the Death Valley Prospectors
DESCRIPTION: "We've roamed the hills and made new trails, Our burrows by our side, We've looked for gold but ain't found none." "Oh! Oh, you desert rats, don't you cry no more. We've almost reached the golden gate." The singer looks forward to rest from prospecting AUTHOR: Frank Crampton and others?
EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (Crampton, _Deep Enough: A Working Stiff in the Western Mine Camps_)
KEYWORDS: gold travel hardtimes
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
_Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia_2, pp. 663-664, "Song of the Death Valley Prospectors" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Oh! Susanna" (tune) and references there
File: CAFS2664

Song of the Digger

DESCRIPTION: "This is the lay of the digger, The song of the keeper of gum, Sung in a kerosene twilight." It's a year-round job, done in the dark, always scraping away. The singer had to learn the trade himself, working by candlelight with a bottle by his side
AUTHOR: Words: probably William Satchell
EARLIEST DATE: 1902 (Satchell, Land of the Lost, according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)
KEYWORDS: worker hardtimes courting drink
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (3 citations):
_Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ_ p. 128, "(no title)" (1 excerpt)
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 41, "Song of the Digger" (1 text, 1 modern tune) (p. 24 in the 1972 edition)
Garland-Z, p. 193, "(Song of the Digger)" (1 text)
RECORDINGS:
Jonathan and David Flaws, "Song of the Digger" (on NZSongYngCntry)
NOTES [16 words]: For background on the digging of kauri gum, see the notes to "The Old-Time Kauri Bushmen." - RBW
_Last updated in version 5.0_
File: BaRo128A

Song of the Emigrant, The DESCRIPTION: The singer is "lying on a foreign shore and hear[ing] the birdies sing." His hair is "mixed wi' siller threads" He remembers a girl "in years lang, lang gane," who used to sing the old songs, which he names. He'll sing of Scotland while he can.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3); 19C (broadside, NLScotland L.C.Fol.70(29b))
KEYWORDS: homesickness emigration Scotland nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 532, "The Song of the Emigrant" (1 text)
Roud #6011
BROADSIDES:
_NLScotland, L.C.Fol.70(29b), "The Song of the Emigrant," Poets Box (Dundee), c.1890_
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Scarborough Settler's Lament" and references there
File: GrD3532

Song of the Fishes (Blow Ye Winds Westerly)

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you bold fishermen, listen to me, I'll sing you a song of the fish in the sea, Then blow ye winds westerly, westerly...." The behaviors of the various fish are described as they come forward and speak to the sailors
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Reeves/Sharp-ThelIdiomOfThePeople)
KEYWORDS: fishing bragging nonballad sailor
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) US(NE) Canada(Mar,Newf)
REFERENCES (14 citations):
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, pp. 187-188, "The Boston Come-All-Ye" (1 text, 1 tune)
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 145-147, "Song of the Fishes" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 196-198, 209-210, "The Fishes" (4 texts, 4 tunes) [AbEd, pp. 153-154], "Blow the Man Down" (1 text, version D of "Blow the Man Down") [AbEd, pp. 164-165]
Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople 15, "Blow the Wind Whistling" (1 text)
Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong, pp. 160-161, "The Fish of the Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, p. 859, "Blow the Wind Westerly" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton-FolksongsFromSouthernNewBrunswick 77, "The Old Ark" (1 text, 1 tune, with first verse and chorus from "The Old Ark's A-Moverin'" and additional verses from "this song")
Shay-AmericanSeaSongsAndChanteys, pp. 129-131, "Song of the Fishes" (1 very full text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 496-498, "The Boston Come-All-Ye or The Fishes" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 22, "The Fish of the Sea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryOfNewEnglandFolklore, pp. 557-558, "The Boston Come-All-Ye" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 154, "Boston Come-All-Ye (or The Fishes)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 90, "Blow Ye Winds Westerly" (1 text)
DT. SONGFISH* SNGFISH2
Roud #472
RECORDINGS:
Charlotte Decker, "Blow the Wind Westerly" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
Pete Seeger, "Come All You Bold Sailormen" (on PeteSeeger08, PeteSeegerCD02)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 25(1029), "The King of the Sea" ("Up starts the herring the king of the sea"), unknown, n.d.; also Harding B 28(102), "The King of the Sea"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Yea Ho, Little Fish" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Blow the Wind Southerly" (lyrics)
SAME TUNE:
"Fishes Song" (by Harry Mercer) (fragment on p. 161 of Cox-FolkMusicInANewfoundlandOutport)
File: LxA496

Song of the Freedmen
DESCRIPTION: "We are coming from the cotton fields, We are coming from afar, We have left the plow... And we are going to war." The freed slaves describe all the cruelties they have left behind. Now, apparently, they are fighting for their freedom
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1864
KEYWORDS: slave freedom war Civilwar nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 240-242, "Song of the Freedmen" (1 text, 1 tune)
Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, pp. 80-81, "Song of the Freedmen" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: SBoA240

Song of the Gillie More
DESCRIPTION: Scottish and Soviet farmers and workers share much. "Jocks and Ivans by the score Swappin' yarns"; "Gar it ring frae shore tae shore, Leith tae Kiev -- Don tae Gairloch"
AUTHOR: Hamish Henderson (1948) (source: McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen)
EARLIEST DATE: 1989 (McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen)
KEYWORDS: farming work nonballad Russia Scotland
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen, pp. 143, 156, "Song of the Gillie More" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #21759
Song of the Gumfield

DESCRIPTION: "In the slighted, blighted North where the giant kauris grow" people earn a living "in the trade of digging gum." New chum, "scum," even doctor and lawyer turn to gum-digging. In the end, "the bottom's gone forever from the trade of digging gum"

AUTHOR: William Sachell (writing as Saml. Cliall White) (according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)

EARLIEST DATE: 1896 (Sydney Bulletin, according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ); collected 1957

KEYWORDS: worker hardtimes

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, pp. 127-128, "Song of the Gumfield" (1 text)
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 38, "Trade of Kauri Gum (1 text, 1 modern tune) (p. 22 in the 1972 edition)

NOTES [16 words]: For background on the digging of kauri gum, see the notes to "The Old-Time Kauri Bushmen." - RBW

_Last updated in version 5.0_

File: BaRo127

---

Song of the Nantucket Mariner

DESCRIPTION: "Of all of life's wanderings wherever I stray, O'er old ocean's wavers or by lands far away... There's no place so dear as my own native isle." The island is home to the singer's ancestors. The lighthouse is the guide. He looks forward to going home

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1853 (Journal of the Lexington)

KEYWORDS: whaler travel return home

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 32-33, "Song of the Nantucket Mariner" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27524

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Exiled Irishman's Lament (The Exiles of Erin)" ("dear native isle" motif)

File: HGam032

---

Song of the Range, A

DESCRIPTION: "The bawl of a steer in a cowboy's ear is music of the sweetest strain"; he lives a carefree life and enjoys the range. When he comes home, he sees the rancher girl; "They'll gallop back to the old home shack in the life that is new and strange"

AUTHOR: James Barton Adams (source: Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys)

EARLIEST DATE: 1921 (Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys)

KEYWORDS: cowboy courting home work

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys, pp. 142-144, "A Song of the Range" (1 text)

File: ThLo142

---

Song of the Robbers, The

DESCRIPTION: "You've heard this story often, you've heard it o'er and o'er...." "A tip had come to Morrison... That they would have a visit from the native bad G. Raines." The robber gang, though captured, kills Dr. Clark. They are sentenced to long prison terms

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Burt-AmericanMurderBallads)
Song of the Scottish Shepherd

DESCRIPTION: "Far, far from my home in the Hielands so grand And attending these sheep in a wide distant land," the singer is still happy "with my lass of Australia sweet smiling by me." He describes their life together in glowing terms.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Anderson-FarewellToOldEngland)

KEYWORDS: love courting emigration shepherd

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Anderson-FarewellToOldEngland, pp. 185-186, "Song of the Scottish Shepherd" (1 text)

File: AnFa185

Song of the Seals, The DESCRIPTION: "A sea maid sings on yonder reef, The spell-bound seals draw near." The song causes plowmen to cease plowing, milkmaids to cease milking; even animals listen. When she ceases, ordinary life begins again.

AUTHOR: Words: Harold Boulton / Music: Granville Bantock

EARLIEST DATE: 1977

KEYWORDS: nonballad animal

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 27, #3 (1979), p, 26-27, "The Song of the Sealsr" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [58 words]: This song had a very great fling of popularity a few years ago in pop folk circles. It is not, however, a folk song; it has never been found in tradition. I include it partly because it was so widely heard and partly because the poet, Harold Boulten, produced several other almost-folk songs, notable the Skye Boat Song (Over the Sea to Skye). RBW

Last updated in version 2.4

File: S0v27n3a

Song of the Seamen and Land Soldiers, A

DESCRIPTION: "We seamen are the bonny boys That fear no storms nor rocks, a, That fear no storms nor rocks, a, Whose music is the cannon's noise." The song lists the English ships, and boasts of victories over the Turks and others.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs)

KEYWORDS: sailor ship battle

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 14, "A Song of the Seamen and Land Soldiers" (1 text)

File: PaSe014

Song of the Ship Vineyard

DESCRIPTION: "Come my jovial lads let us all bid adieu To the girls that we love and to whom we'll prove true." The Vineyard sets out in search of whales. They travel the Pacific under Captain Coon. They are happy to return home around Cape Horn.
Song of the Southern Volunteers, The DESCRIPTION: "I would not be a conscript a-hiding in the wood; I'd be a volunteer and do my country good. I wouldn't be alone (x3) to weep and moan." Similarly "I wouldn't be a lawyer... I'd rather be a soldier," etc. -- then perhaps shifting to a female soldier!

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi)
KEYWORDS: Civilwar marriage patriotic soldier work
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 123, pp. 263-264, "I Would Not Be Alone" (1 text)
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 221-223, "The Song of the Southern Volunteers" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, NOTBEALN
Roud #4502
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I'll Not Marry at All" (form)
NOTES [178 words]: The extant texts of this song all appear rather messed up. Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi's text hints at the original: An adaption of "I'll Not Marry at All" in which the singer proclaims his willingness to serve the south -- or, perhaps, a girl proclaims "I would not 'marry' a conscript."
In fact, it's possible that both forms existed, then were mixed to produce Hudson's odd gender-bending text, with verses about a conscript, lawyer, doctor, lady/belle, nurse, farmer, and miller. Scott's song is even more confused; it appears to be a mix of "I Would Not Be a Conscript" and "We Go Walking on the Green Grass" (the latter not to be confused with "Walking on the Green Grass"). It's too complicated for me to disentangle, so I tossed it here.
The original description I wrote of the song is as follows: "I would not marry a conscript... I'd rather marry a volunteer and do my country good.... We go walking on the green grass, thus, thus, thus....' The girl would rather marry, or even be, a soldier boy, than wed someone who will not volunteer for the South." - RBW
File: SBoA221

Song of the Tangier Gold Mines

DESCRIPTION: Gold mining begins May 1861 "back of Tangier and Pope's Harbour." Men leave their work, wives, and sweethearts "for the sake of 'Tangier gold'; ladies "go upon the diggings the miners for to see." Wish the miners success and hope they will be generous

AUTHOR: Catherine Hart (1861)
EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Creighton-NovaScotia)
KEYWORDS: sex gold mining
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1860 - Opening of the Tangier Gold Mines (Source: Halifax Archives per Creighton-NovaScotia)
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 145, "Song of the Tangier Gold Mines" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST CrNS145 (Partial)
Roud #1841
NOTES [43 words]: Tangier is on the coast of Nova Scotia, about 60 miles east of Halifax. - BS Creighton notes that the mining in the Tangier area was extensive but not particularly profitable. But the song was written when the boom was just beginning, so hopes were high. - RBW
Song of the Time, A

DESCRIPTION: "In England several years ago The seen was plesent fair and gay." One John Love sails for America, and worked in the fur trade before going to Boston. He lends three brothers money; they murder him. The murderers are caught and sentences to hang

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales)

KEYWORDS: travel homicide money punishment execution

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 430-432, "A Song of the Time" (1 text)

File: TNY430

Song of the Times (II)

DESCRIPTION: "There's a crowd in every village, and every town astir, Who are going to gather up the gold." "Pike's Peak is the land for the young and old." Women, men, foreigners -- all are heading for Pikes Peak to search for gold; some of them are described

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1859 (Cherry Creek Pioneer, according to Cohen)

KEYWORDS: mining gold travel home

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, p. 589, "Song of the Times" (1 text)

File: CAFS589A

Song of the Times (III), A

DESCRIPTION: "There's a deep and growing murmur Going up through all the land." The workers will gain justice: "Rally, rally, all ye voters (x3), And vote for home and right. The rich may dislike Coxey's Army, but its cause is right. "Shylock's reign is o'er."

AUTHOR: Words: Luna E. (Mrs. J. T.) Kellie (1857-1940)

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Nevada Folklore pamphlet; probably written 1894)

KEYWORDS: nonballad derivative hardtimes money political

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1894 - In the aftermath of the Panic of 1893, Coxey's Army tries to march on Washington seeking work. Only a few hundred marchers arrive; Coxey is arrested and nothing accomplished

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Welsch-NebraskaPioneerLore, pp. 72-73, "A Song of the Times" (1 text, tune referenced)
ADDITIONAL: Nebraska Folklore, Pamphlet Twenty, "More Farmers' Alliance Songs of the 1890's," Federal Writers' Project, 1939, p. 20, "A Song of the Times" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "John Brown's Body" (tune)

 NOTES [669 words]: Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr., editor, The Almanac of American History, revised edition, Putnam, 1993 (I use the 1993 Barnes & Noble edition), p. 378: "30 April 1894. NATIONAL: Jacob Sechler Coxey leads 400 people from Ohio to Washington, D. C. Known as Coxey's Army, the motley crew marches to protest unemployment; underlying that is their sense that the government refuses to legislate in favor of working people, but feels no compunction to refrain from legislating in favor of large corporations. Arriving in Washington amid great applause from a waiting crowd, Coxey and his lieutenants are arrested for trespassing on the grass. The 'army' melts away."

Dictionary of American Biography, supplement V (1977), pp. 139-141:

COXEY, JACOB SECHLER (Apr. 16, 1854-May 18, 1951). businessman, perennial monetary reformer, and leader of "Coxey's Army" of the unemployed, was born in a log house in Selinsgrove, Pa, north of Harrisburg, the son of Thomas Coxey, a sawmill engineer, and Mary Sechler Coxey. At sixteen he went to work in a local iron mill and advanced to stationary engineer. He left in 1878 to go into the scrap-iron business and three years latter settled in Massillon, Ohio, where he bought a sandstone quarrey and founded a company providing silica sand to iron and steel mills. A Democrat by heritage, Coxey had turned in 1877 to the Greenback party, the start of a lifelong devotion to the goal of a non-metal-based legal-tender currency. His active pursuit of that goal began in the depressed 1890's. Taking his cue from the adherents of the new sport of bicycling... Coxey proposed a federal road-building program, financed by $500 million in new greenbacks, to give work to the unemployed. A second... proposal [was for state public works programs financed by interest-free federal loans].

Coxey's initial efforts to publicize his plans met with scant success. Coxey lacked eloquence or charisma. He found those qualities in an ally whom he met at a free-silver meeting in Chicago in 1893 -- Carl Brown... who affected the dress and style of Buffalo Bill. It was Brown who conceived the idea of a "petition in boots," a march of jobless men to Washington to seek enactment of Coxey's two proposals.

The march had been well publicized, and Coxey hoped for a turnout of thousands, but only about a hundred workers and farmers set out on a cold Easter Sunday (Mar. 25, 1894), accompanied by some forty newspaper reporters.... Officially the 'Commonweal of Christ," the group was dubbed by the newspapers "Coxey's Army," with Coxey as "General," a title he carried for the rest of his life. The marchers covered about fifteen miles a day and slept at night on straw under a small circus tent (Coxey and Browne put up at hotels).... [T]he men relied mainly on donated food, sometimes from nervous local authorities eager to speed them on their way.

Other "industrial armies"... were also headed for Washington.... Their militancy, combined with contemporary fears of the tramp, contributed to the tense reaction in Washington when Coxey and his followers marched toward the Capitol on ay 1. Leaving his men peaceably in rank outside the grounds, Coxey and two of his lieutenants made their way to the Capitol steps, where Coxey sought to speak. The three were arrested, sentenced to twenty days in jail for carrying "banners" (Coxey's a mere badge on his ipel), and faind for walking on the grass.

Coxey's good-roads bill, introduced by Populist Senator William a. Peffer [of Kansas], progressed no farther than an adverse committee report.

For the rest of his long life Coxey combined business affairs with periodic new attempts to promote currency expansion through non-interest-bearing bonds. [Coxey lived to see the New Deal enacted, containing many of his ideas, but by then he was largely forgotten. He did manage to be elected mayor of Massillon in 1931, but he was dropped in 1933. A quixotic presidential run on the Farmer-Labor ticked in 1932 went nowhere.] - RBW

Last updated in version 3.6

File: Wels072

Song of the Trap, The

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a trap, I'm a trap, and up here I abide. The camp is my home, and my blue coat's my pride." The uses his staff with good will and to a good purpose; if he must crack heads at night, it won't be the first time. The trap tells his story in many stages

AUTHOR: Charles R. Thatcher (1831-1878)
EARLIEST DATE: 1869 (Thatcher-ColonialMinstrel-Songsters)
KEYWORDS: police work clothes immigration mining

NOTES [89 words]: A "trap" is a policeman who patrols on foot. Although few if any of Charles Thatcher's songs have gone into tradition, this is particularly un-folk-like: it apparently changes tunes several times. Presumably it was one of his vaudeville-like exhibitions.
Thatcher seems to have liked the tune "Nora Creina." He also used it for a song called "Lansell's Case."
For brief background on Charles Thatcher's career, see the notes to "Where's Your License?" For an extensive collection of his songs, see Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong. - RBW

Song of the Vermonters, The DESCRIPTION: "Ho -- all to the borders! Vermonters, come down... To the gathering summons of trumpet and drum. Come down with your rifles...." The poet calls on the residents to "defy all the world" and guard Vermont's holdings
AUTHOR: John Greenleaf Whittier
EARLIEST DATE: 1833 (original publication, according to Cohen)
KEYWORDS: patriotic nonballad
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster pp. 269-272, "The Song of the Vermonters" (1 text, 1 tune)
Flanders-ChapBook Flanders-VermontChapBook, pp. 2-5, "The Song of the Vermonters, 1779" (1 text)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 26-29, "The Song of the Vermonters" (1 text plus a reprint of a broadside)
Roud #4670

Song of the Volunteers, The DESCRIPTION: "Hurrah! tis done. Our freedom's won. Hurrah for the Volunteers!" The Irish Volunteers, behind Grattan and Flood have broken "the Saxon yoke" Prayers, tears and words were vain "till flashed the swords Of the Irish Volunteers"
AUTHOR: Thomas Davis (1814-1845) (source: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)
EARLIEST DATE: early 1840s (_The Nation_, according to Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)
KEYWORDS: pride rebellion Ireland political
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 1, "The Song of the Volunteers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, pp. 111-112, "Song of the Volunteers of 1782" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Green Cockade" (subject of the 1782 Volunteers)
cf. "The Shamrock Cockade" (subject of the 1782 Volunteers)
cf. "The Volunteers" (subject of the 1782 Volunteers)
NOTES [192 words]: The Belfast Volunteers were formed in 1778 because of the threat of war between France and Britain. Similar groups formed, became politicized, and supported "those in favour of legislative independence from the British parliament and the removal of impediments to Irish commerce." Henry Grattan and Harry Flood supported this program in the Irish House of Commons. (Source: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)
Hayes's title places the events in 1782. - BS
Moylan's description sums up the situation pretty well, I think. The Volunteers were not openly rebellious; they were mostly pro-British, and largely Protestant (though Terry Golway, For the Cause of Liberty, p. 51, notes that they included Catholics as well). By 1779, there were 40,000 volunteers (see Peter and Fiona Somerset Fry, A History of Ireland, p. 186). Having shown that Ireland could field an army, a tide of nationalism, expressed in a "Buy Irish" movement, arose. The British, nervous about this, and remembering the recent example of the American rebels, responded by granting legislative independence in the form of Grattan's Parliament, for which see "Ireland's Glory." - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1
Song of Welcome, A
DESCRIPTION: "Our noble Lord's come to the North To view his bonnie lands o' Forth ... Come bid him welcome." He fought the French in Egypt "wi 'Forty-twa' .... Our hero fought at Waterloo ... And bravely did the French subdue"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: return nonballad landlord
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #149, pp. 1-2, "A Song of Welcome" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 439, "A Song of Welcome" (1 text)
Roud #5953
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Our Noble Lord's Come to the North
Lord Saltoun
NOTES [121 words]: Greig: "[Lord Saltoun] was grand-uncle to the present laird, and the song was made up on his home-coming after the battle of Waterloo."
Greig/Duncan3: "The song as composed for Alexander George Fraser (1785-1853), sixteenth Lord Saltoun."
The references are to the Egyptian campaign (1798) and Waterloo (1815) against Napoleon.
"Forty-twa" refers to the 42nd Highland Regiment, the Black Watch, which fought at Waterloo. See "The Bonnets o' Blue" and its references for more information about the Black Watch.
Greig/Duncan3 has a map on p. xxxv, of "places mentioned in songs in volume 3" showing the song number as well as place name; Philorth (439) is at coordinate (h6,v0) on that map [roughly 37 miles N of Aberdeen]. - BS
Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD3439

Song of Whaling, A
DESCRIPTION: "September last the Point we past, With westly breeze so fair, We went over the shoals like jovial souls" to go whaling in the Leo. They take two whales and stop at the Isle of May, then at Nantucket and other points, then return home
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1794 (Journal of the _Polly_)
KEYWORDS: whaler travel return
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 33-35, "A Song of Whaling" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27525
File: HGam033

Song on the Nantucket Ladies, A
DESCRIPTION: "Young damsels all wherever you may be, I pray attention give to me, Some braken hints I will lay down, About the girls in Sherboun town." The girls dress up to look fine. The boys court them. The singer talks about them while rounding Cape Horn
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1819 (Journal from the _Diana_)
KEYWORDS: courting clothes beauty
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Huntington-FolksongsFromMarthasVineyard, pp. 32-34, "'Round Cape Horn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 165-167, "A Song on the Nantucket Ladies" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 49-50, "A Song on the Nantucket Ladies"
Song That Reached My Heart, The

DESCRIPTION: "I sat 'midst a mighty throng within a palace grand, In a city far beyond the sea, in a distant foreign land," as a girl sings "Home, Sweet Home." The memories of home, and the song, affect him deeply
AUTHOR: Julian Jordan (1850-1927)
EARLIEST DATE: 1887 (copyright)
KEYWORDS: home nonballad music
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 62-63, "The Song That Reached My Heart" (1 text)
Roud #3721
NOTES [103 words]: This strikes me as pretty feeble, but it was the first of several fairly big hits for Julian Jordan; he published this in 1887, then "Light of My Life" in 1889, 'Sweet Charity" in 1890, an "Just As We Used To Do at Home" in 1893 (gleaned from Spaeth, A History of Popular Music in America, pp. 604-607). He doesn't seem to have done much of note after that.
This business of a song inspiring a memory seems to have been a common idea in the late nineteenth century; Gussie L. Davis did it with "Sweet Refrain," which seems to treat "Old Folks at Home (Swanee River"
the way this song treats "Home! Sweet Home!" - RBW
File: Dean062C

Song to Baranov

DESCRIPTION: "In eighteen hundred and eight, In Novo-Arkhangel'sk port, Ai Liuli, ai liili," the fort on Sitka Island is threatened with attack. The Russian allies are able to resist and to meet with Baranov. They celebrate
AUTHOR: unknown
KEYWORDS: battle Russia Indians(Am.) party
FOUND IN: US(NW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 671-672, "Song to Baranov" (1 text)
File: CAFS2671

Song to Captain S. D. Oliver

DESCRIPTION: "Far, far to the Arctic Ocean, There the bow heads blow, There's where my heart is turning ever, There's where I want to go." The singer declares the whales "wild and ugly," and begs the captain to let them leave the ocean for someplace better
AUTHOR: Words: George D. Mills / Music: Stephen C. Foster EARLIEST DATE: 1856 (Journal from the Leonidas)
KEYWORDS: whaler hardtimes
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 67-68, "Song to Captain S.D. Oliver" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27527
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Old Folks at Home (Swanee River)" (tune)
File: HGam067

Song Used When Holystoning the Decks

DESCRIPTION: Tune only, no text. According to Hugill, Russian seaman had few real shanties and apart from the songs quotes by Smith there is nothing in the literature.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1888 (L.A. Smith, _Music of the Waters_)
KEYWORDS: foreign language nonballad shanty worksong
FOUND IN: Russia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 580, "Song Used When Holystoning the Decks" (1 tune only, no text-quoted from Smith)
  File: Hugi580

Song Written on the Repeal of the Cider-Tax

DESCRIPTION: "Rejoice! here's welcome news, Come let us merry be, Since George our gracious King... So kindly has consented his subjects' wants to ease, By taking off the cider tax." The nation rejoices to be able to drink strong cider more freely

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1766 (source: Palmer)
KEYWORDS: drink food party royalty money
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
  1763 - repeal of the British cider tax (source: Palmer)
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  ADDITIONAL: Roy Palmer, _Ripest Apples_, The Big Apple Association, 1996, pp. 73-74, "[A New Song]" (1 text, 1 tune)
BROADSIDES:
  Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 217=218, "A Song Written on the Repeal of the Cider-Tax," T. Davies and son (Hereford), 1818
  File: PRIA073

Songs of Old Ireland

DESCRIPTION: The singer thinks back of the songs he heard as a youth. He asks to hear several such songs. He recalls fondly the days of his youth.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: music youth nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenryssSongsOfThePeople H768, pp. 59-60, "Songs of Old Ireland" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Roud #13360
CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "Titles of Songs (Song of Songs, Song of All Songs, Song of Song Titles)" (theme)
  File: HHH768

Sons o Bonnie Scotland

DESCRIPTION: "O let aa the rhymers sing Aboot the lands both far and near, My voice I'll raise and sing in praise My native land sae clear... Oor countrie bonnie Scotland"

AUTHOR: Alec Melville (source: McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen)
EARLIEST DATE: 1989 (McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen)
KEYWORDS: pride Scotland nonballad patriotic
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen, pp. 74-75, 151, "Sons o Bonnie Scotland" (1 text, 1 tune)
  Roud #21746
  File: McSc074
Sons of Hibernia, The

DESCRIPTION: "Brave sons of Hibernia, your shamrocks display, For ever made sacred on St Patrick's day." The shamrock is "the badge of our saint," "a type of religion." It is "an emblem of charity, friendship, and love. May the blight of disunion no longer remain."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland)

KEYWORDS: Ireland nonballad patriotic

FOUND IN: O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 150, "The Sons of Hibernia" (1 text)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Roud #V598

BROADSIDES:

Bodleian, 2806 b.10(184), "The Sons of Hibernia", unknown, n.d.

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "St Patrick's Day" (tune, per Broadside Bodleian 2806 b.10(184))

Sons of Levi (Knights of Malta)

DESCRIPTION: The singer calls all "Knights of (Malta)" to join with him to fight for good. "For we are the true-born Sons of Levi, None on earth can with us compare." The listeners are guided through the (Templar) ritual, and acts of God in Israel are recalled

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Grieg)

KEYWORDS: knight religious soldier

FOUND IN: Ireland Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber)) US(Ap)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H146, pp. 180-181, "The Knights of Malta" (1 text, 1 tune)
Graham-Joe-Holmes-SongsMusicTraditionsOfAnUlsterman 75, "The True-Born Sons of Levi" (1 text, 1 tune); p. 281, "Sons of Levi, A New Masonic Song" (a reprint of the National Library of Scotland broadside)
Grieg-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #155, p. 1, "The Sons of Levi" (1 text)
Grieg/Duncan3 470, "The Sons of Levi" (1 text)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 393-292, "The Knights of Malta" (1 text)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 203, "The Sons of Levi" (1 text)

ST HHH146 (Full)

Roud #2430

BROADSIDES:

NLScotland, RB.m.143(156), "Sons of Levi, A New Masonic Song," unknown, c. 1880-1900

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Knight Templar's Dream" (style)
cf. "The Mason's Word - Keep Your Mouth Shut" (tune, per Greig)

NOTES [411 words]: The Order of the Hospital of Saint John of Jerusalem, or Hospitallers for short, was founded during the Crusades, first as a refuge for pilgrims in need and then as a knightly order to defend the holy sites. After the last Crusader city, Acre, fell in 1291, they gradually retreated across the Mediterranean, settling in Malta in 1530. Since that time, the Hospitallers have been known as the "Knights of Malta," even though they have been based in Rome since Napoleon pushed them out of Malta in 1798. The Hospitallers had strong requirements of initiates, which may be reflected in the song. The order was suppressed in England in early Protestant times, but re-formed in the nineteenth century. I doubt the song actually originates with the Hospitallers, though; they would not publish such a broadside. Rather, it appears to be a Masonic piece, though one with unusual popularity (perhaps because it has been mated with at least one very good tune). Scriptural references in the song are numerous, e.g.

* Joshua crossing Jordan, taking twelve stones along, with the Ark of the Covenant, and ending in Gilgal: Joshua 3:12-4:24
* Noah planted the first garden: Properly the first vineyard; Gen. 9:20. The Bible calls Noah the first tiller of the soil in the same verse, but Cain is called the first tiller in Genesis 4:2
* Moses planted Aaron's rod: Probably a reference to the budding rod in Numbers 17:1-11, though the next few lines refer to the crossing of the Red Sea (Sea of Reeds), Exodus 14:16-29.
Nowhere did Moses turn the Jordan into blood (Moses didn't even reach the banks of Jordan); he turned the Nile to blood in Exodus 7:18-24.
The "ark," of course, is not Noah's Ark but the Ark of the Covenant; the Sons of Levi were the holy tribe of Israel.
The lines in the chorus about the root and branch of David, and the morning star, are from Rev.
22:16 (I'd quibble a bit with the King James translation of the verse -- the New Revised Standard Version renders "I am the root and the descendant of David, the bright morning star" -- but of course the song is based on the Bible as the Masons knew it). And "the branch" was emphatically a messianic title; Zechariah 3:8, "I am going to bring my servant the Branch," was meant to refer both to the heir of David (Zerubbabel) and the coming messiah, although it appears the Persians suppressed Zerubbabel and the text was rewritten. The title "the Branch" does not occur explicitly in the New Testament. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.5
File: HHH146

Sons of Liberty, The [Laws J13]
DESCRIPTION: The singer, an Irish soldier, is sent to America to fight the rebels. He lands in New York and soon finds himself fighting the Sons of Liberty. He grieves for those lost in battle, and praises the courage of Washington and his army
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1790 (Journal from the Dolphin)
KEYWORDS: war
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Laws J13, "The Sons of Liberty"
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 162, "The Sons of Liberty" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 146-148, "The Sons of Liberty" (1 text, 1 tune) Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, p. 170, "Jessie and Jimmie" (1 stanza, probably of this song though it could float, 1 tune)
DT 396, SONSELIB1* SONSELIB2*
Roud #596
NOTES [69 words]: There is another song from the Revolutionary War called "A Song to the Sons of Liberty," opening "Come jolly Sons of Liberty, Come all with hearts united. Our motto is, 'We dare be free....'" It is not related to this song; it is said to have been written against the Stamp Act, and sung to the tune of "Come, Jolly Bacchus." A version can be found on p. 12 of Rabson's
Songbook of the American Revolution. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.4
File: LJ13

Sons of New Jersey, The
DESCRIPTION: "There was a call for volunteers sometime in last year, And there the sons of New Jersey did quickly volunteer. "Burnside now is in command" and on his way to Richmond. The men of the 24th "will fight for Uncle Sam"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 2008 (Cohen); probably composed 1862
KEYWORDS: soldier Civilwar nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2210, p. 148, "The Sons of New Jersey" (1 reference) Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 124-125, "The Sons of New Jersey" (1 text)
NOTES [134 words]: Cohen calls the background of this song "obscure," but we have three useful facts: The song is about New Jersey troops, it refers to the "24th" (i.e. 24th New Jersey), and Burnside is now in command. But Roger D. Hunt, Colonels in Blue: Union Army Colonels of the Civil War: The Mid-Atlantic States, Stackpole, 2007, p. 187, notes that the only colonel the 24th
New Jersey had was William B. Robertson, mustered in September 16, 1862 (the day before Antietam) and mustered out June 29, 1863 (just before Gettysburg).
In other words, the 24th New Jersey was a nine month regiment, formed in the fall of 1862 and joining the Federal service just about when Ambrose Burnside took command of the Army of the Potomac. The soldiers were still too new to realize how much trouble that meant they were in.

---

Soon as My Foot Struck Zion

DESCRIPTION: "Soon as my foot struck Zion. And de lamps all lit on de shore, Bud dis world a long farewell, And de lamps all lit on de shore." "You better walk study [steady?], Jesus a-listenin', Oh, you better walk study, Jesus died... Jesus a-listenin' all day long"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 636, "Soon As My Foot Struck Zion" (2 short texts from the same informant)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 636, "Soon As My Foot Struck Zion" (2 tunes plus text excerpts)

Roud #11934

File: Br3636

Soon I Will Be Done

DESCRIPTION: "Soon I will be done with the troubles of the world... Goin' home to God." "I want to meet my mother...." "I want to see my Jesus...." "No more weepin' and wailin'...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 234, "Soon I Will Be Done" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro, p. 56, "Soon-a-will Be Done-a-with Troubles of the World" (1 text)
- Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 244, "Soon I Will Be Done" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, pp. 238-239, "I'll Soon Be Done With the Troubles of the World" (1 text)

Roud #11954

File: LoF244

Soon May the Wellerman Come

DESCRIPTION: "There was a ship that put to sea, And the name of the ship was the Billy of Tea." The captain spots a whale and sets out to take it. The boats are lost, but the captain will not give up the pursuit even after forty days. The Wellerman visits with supply

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1969/70 (collected from Frank Woods, according to Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry)

KEYWORDS: whaler ship hardtimes

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 17, "Soon May the Wellerman Come" (1 text, 1 tune) (p. 10 in the 1972 edition)
- Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, pp. 48, "(Soon May the Wellerman Come)" (1 excerpt)
- DT, WELLRMAN*
RECORDINGS:

Tommy Wood, "Soon May the Wellerman Come" (on NZSongYngCntry)

NOTES [318 words]: Gordon McLauchlan, editor-in-chief, New Zealand Encyclopedia, David Bateman Limited, 1984, p. 593: "WELLER BROTHERS, Edward, George, and Joseph, were among the earliest N[ew] Z[ealand]-based whalers, the first permanent European settlers on Otago Peninsula, and the first merchants to attempt to establish a trade between the South Island and England. They were recorded as having arrived in NZ from Sydney in 1831, aboard their ship carrying gunpowder and muskets, grog, whaling equipment, clothing and stores, and they quickly established whaling stations in the South Island and set up trade links between NZ and Sydney.... [Because of export duties,] by the early 1840s they had abandoned Otago.... [After suffering a lack of success in Australian land speculation.] One of the Wellers, Joseph, had died in Otago in 1835, and Edward and George disappeared from NZ following the rejection of their land claims and were not heard of again."

The Weller Brothers operation was a Sydney-based company which ran a shore-based whaling syndicate. Since they were shore-based, the ships were supplied from shore rather than carrying supplies for long trips. So the Wellerman came to bring the sailors what they needed for their work. My understanding is that it was very hard to leave the employ of the shore whalers, which would explain the plot of this song, where the whalers could not escape the captain's obsession with the whale.

When this song became an odd internet hit at the end of 2020, a number of commentators observed a similarity to a 1971 recording, "The Lightning Tree," by the Settlers. This is only a year and a bit after Neil Colquhoun reported collecting the song, and a year before he published it. The Tommy Wood recording is from about the same time. Colquhoun usually admitted to making up tunes when he did so, but could his source, but could source Frank Woods have heard the song? - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0
File: Colq010

Soon One Morning

DESCRIPTION: "Soon one morning death come creepin' in my room (x3) Oh my Lord, oh my Lord, what shall I do to be saved?... Death done been here, took my mother and gone... I'm so glad I got religion in time."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1917

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 103, "Soon One Morning" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, p. 30, "Soon One Mornin' Death Come Creepin'" (1 text, 1 tune)
Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, pp. 40-42, "Soon, One Mornin'" (1 text, 1 tune, a sort of song/sermon which differs substantially from that in the DESCRIPTION but still appears to be the same song)
DT, DETHCREP*

Roud #10069

RECORDINGS:

Delta Big Four, "I Know My Time Ain't Long" (Paramount 12948, 1930; on VocalQ2)
Golden Gate Quartet, "Hush" (Columbia 30136, 1948)
Blind Willie Johnson, "You're Gonna Need Somebody on Your Bond" (Columbia 14530-D, 1930)
Rev. Willie Gresham & congregation, "Soon, One Mornin'" (on FolkVisions1)
Fred McDowell, "Soon One Mornin'" (on LomaxCD1703)
Wiseman Sextet, "Hush, Somebody's Calling My Name" (Paramount 12077, 1924)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Hush

NOTES [29 words]: Without a source for "You're Gonna Need Somebody On Your Bond" I don't remember the lyrics well enough to know if it's the same song as "Soon One Morning," but I THINK it is. -PJS

Last updated in version 3.2

File: LxU103
Soon Thy Bark Must Leave Our Harbour

DESCRIPTION: "Soon thy bark must leave our harbor, Soon thy sails must be unfurled, Soon the last fond look be taken." The sailors' beloved will gather to say farewell and wish them good luck. They hope there will be no misfortunes. They will write many letters

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1844 (Journal of the Walter Scott)
KEYWORDS: whaler travel separation
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 31-32, "Soon Thy Bark Must Leave Our Harbour" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27529
File: HGam031

Sophie's First Trip, The

DESCRIPTION: "I suppose that you remember when the Sophie she was new, And Johnny Buddy Antie hoped to go mate on her crew." Antie requests the job, but is rejected. He apparently is hired in a lesser job, but mishandles the sails (?) and now will never be mate

AUTHOR: (redited to John Brown of Goderich, Ontario)
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (collected by Walton from Norman Maclvor)
KEYWORDS: sailor ship
FOUND IN: Canada(Ont)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 96-97, "The Sophie's First Trip" (1 text, rather damaged)
Roud #19851
File: WGM096

Sorghum Molasses

DESCRIPTION: A (hobo? Georgia soldier?) prepares his meal and declares, "All the world there's none surpasses Good cornbread and sorghum molasses." "He declares, "Georgia girls there's none surpasses, They are sweeter than sorghum molasses."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: food soldier nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 386, "Sorghum Molasses" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 386, "Sorghum Molasses" (2 tunes plus text excerpt)
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 79, Sorghum Molasses" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6684
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sorghum Syrup" (theme)
File: Br3386

Sorghum Syrup

DESCRIPTION: "I been to the North and I been to the South... And I've travelled all over Europe; Never saw the likes of sorghum syrup." The southerner describes courting the girls and all the uses of sorghum

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960
KEYWORDS: food travel nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE,So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sorrowful Lamentation of Denis Mahony, The

DESCRIPTION: "Honest Denis Mahony that now lies in the clay ... his precious blood was freely spilt before the tithes he'd pay." Farmer Mahony is murdered. The Parishioners catch the murderer "and laid him on the ground" but "the tithes they paid without delay"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1830s (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
KEYWORDS: homicide farming Ireland political lament
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 38, "The Sorrowful Lamentation of Denis Mahony" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Battle of Carrickshock" (subject: The Tithe War) and references there NOTES [113 words]: The complete title of Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion's broadside is "The Sorrowful Lamentation of Denis Mahony, Who Lost His Life in the Parish of Inniscarra, in the County of Cork, on Account of the Tithes."
The context is "The Tithe War": O'Connell's Catholic Association was formed in 1823 to resist the requirement that Irish Catholics pay tithes to the Anglican Church of Ireland. The "war" was passive for most of the period 1823-1836, though there were violent incidents in 1831 (source: The Irish Tithe War 1831 at the OnWar.com site) - BS
See "The Battle of Carrickshock" for more about the Tithe War, and the cross-references there for more songs on the topic. - RBW
File: Zimm038

Sorrowful Lamentation on the Recent Price Increases in Ales, Wines and Spirits, A

DESCRIPTION: Since Richie Ryan up'd porter to ten bob a pint, who could be blamed for buying "last night's left-overs." Father Matthew "tried to keep us off the booze " but the new price is more effective. This should improve the market for poteen.

AUTHOR: Jimmy Crowley (source: OCanainn-SongsOfCork)
EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (OCanainn-SongsOfCork)
KEYWORDS: drink humorous nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCanainn-SongsOfCork, pp. 40-41, "A Sorrowful Lamentation on the Recent Price Increases in Ales, Wines and Spirits" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: OCan040

Sorry the Day I Was Married

DESCRIPTION: Married woman recounts the miseries of her life and wishes she hadn't married: "Sorry the day I was married, Sorry the day I was wed; It's Oh, if I only had tarried When I to the altar was led." She recalls all the good things she had before marriage

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE:
KEYWORDS: marriage abuse humorous
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
DT, SRRYMRRY*
Roud #1561
Souling Song

DESCRIPTION: "A soul, a soul, a soul-cake, Please good mistress a soul-cake, One for Peter and one for Paul And one for the Lord that made us all. An apple, a pear, a plum or a cherry, Any good thing to make us merry." Once a year, singers beg for food, clothes, money

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1886 (Holland, as quoted by Palmer)

KEYWORDS: food begging religious

FOUND IN: Britain(England)

REFERENCES (8 citations):
- Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, pp. 30-31, "The Souling Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Palmer-EnglishCountySongbook, #139, "Souling Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #408, p. 194, "(A soul-cake, a soul-cake)"
- Wells-TheBalladTree, p. 278, "The Souling Song" (1 short text, 1 tune)
- Ritson-AncientSongsBalladsFromHenrySecondToTheRevolution, p. 354, "A Christmas Carol" (1 short text, which could be any of the "God bless the master of this house" songs)
- DT, SOULCAKE* SOULCAK2*

ADDITIONAL: Jon Raven, _The Urban and Industrial Songs of the Black Country and Birmingham_, Broadside, 1977, pp. 23-25, "(no title)" (3 short texts, which could be souling or wassailing songs or something else)
- Jacqueline Simpson, _The Folklore of Sussex_, B. T. Batsford, 1973, p. 134, "(Soul! Soul! For a soul-cake!)" (1 short text); also p. 141, "(Cattern and Clemen be here, here, here)" (1 short text, which appears to be based on this although it is said to be associated with St. Catherine's Day/November 25)
- Roud #304

NOTES [252 words]: A song for All Souls Eve and Day (November 2 and the night preceding), when it was customary to give out food and alms on behalf of the dead. According to Simpson/Roud, entry on All Souls Day, Abbot Odilo of Cluny created the festival in the eleventh century to pray for the souls of those who had died. (Hence the Souling custom: In Catholic belief, prayer would get you out of purgatory, so travellers would pray in return for food -- almost a return to the professional mourners of Roman times). The original date was in February, but it was moved to November to align with All Saints Day. The 1686 reference is to Aubrey's account of customs in Shropshire, when it was still customary to put out cakes for all passers-by on this day. These were called "soul cakes" or, according to Hazlitt's entry, "soul-mass cakes."

Opie/Tatem, p. 367, entry "Soul Cake," report that G. Young's 1817 _History of Whitby_ tells that "The custom of making soul mass loaves, on the day of all-souls, Nov. 2, is kept up to a certain extent: they are small round loaves, sold by the bakers at a farthing each, chiefly for presents to children. In former times it was usual to keep one or two of them for good luck: a lady in Whitby has a soul mass loaf about 100 yrs old." Opie/Tatem also cite an 1851 mention from Denham. I haven't seen anyone comment on the mentions of Peter and Paul in this song, but it may (or may not) be significant that Peter was the chief apostle to Jews, Paul to Gentiles (Galatians 2:8, etc.) - RBW

Bibliography

- Hazlitt: W. C. Hazlitt, Dictionary of Faiths & Folklore, Reeves & Turner, 1905 (I use the 1995 Studio Editions paperback)
Sound of the Drum, The DESCRIPTION: "In the merry month of May, When bees from flower to flower did hum, Soldiers through the town marched gay, And the villagers ran to the sound of the drum." Cobbler, Tailor, others, leave their tasks to follow the drum; even three old ladies want to join
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1968 (Hamer)
KEYWORDS: soldier music recruiting
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hamer-GarnersGay, p. 48, "The Sound of the Drum" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1076
File: HaGa048

Sound Off (Cadence Count, Jody Chant)
DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Sound off, One, two, Sound off, Three, four." Verses, in marching cadence, can be about anything soldiers dislike, or their sex lives, but often involve the despicable Jody: "Jody's got my gal and gone, Left me here a-singing this song...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1935
KEYWORDS: army betrayal separation bawdy
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 394-398, "Sound Off" (3 texts, 1 tune); see also pp. 398-400, "Honey Babe" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 317, "Sound Off" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 167-176, "Jody" (4 texts, though three are from the same informant, 1 tune)
DT, SOUNDOFF* SOUNDOF2*
Roud #10398
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Swing Cadence
The Airborne Chant
Duckworth Chant
NOTES [93 words]: If one is only studying origins, this would probably not be considered one song. However, cadence chants so freely exchange verses, and can so readily shift from clean to bawdy and back, that I see no point in trying to separate any which use the same meter. It is interesting to see the chants being taken over in Texas prisons. Here, the cadence count ("Sound off, one two...") is replaced by a simple "Yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah" -- but the ever-troublesome Jody is still around. Jackson explains "Jody" as a worn down form of "Joe the," i. e. "Joe the Grinder."
Last updated in version 2.4
File: LoF317

Sounding Calls
DESCRIPTION: This barely qualifies as a song, as there are only three notes, repeated in the same order with slight variation. There is no plot; the depth of the river is taken in order to avoid running aground. "Half twain, quarter twain, mark twain."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939
KEYWORDS: river nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Botkin-TreasuryMississippiRiverFolklore, p. 572, "Mississippi Sounding Call" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wheeler-SteamboatinDays, pp. 59-66, "Soundings at Memphis"; "Soundings from Uncle Mac";
Soundings from Tee Collins" (3 texts, 3 tunes)
NOTES [326 words]: The terminology used in these song is explained in Botkin's notes, and more fully in sources such as Wheeler.
In simplest form, the measurements are in fathoms, and additive -- so, e.g. "half twain" is "half a fathom plus two fathoms," i.e. 15 feet; "quarter twain:" "quarter fathom plus two fathoms," i.e. 13.5 feet; "mark twain": two fathoms exactly, i.e. 12 feet.
Distances less than "quarter less twain" (10.5 feet) are given in feet, and distances over a certain limit (usually Mark Four, i.e. four fathoms=24 feet) are described as "no bottom."
It should be noted that this system is specific to riverboats. Soundings at sea are very different.
Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, A Seaman's Pocket Book, London, June 1943, designed for 25-27, describes the sounding calls of an ocean-going Royal Navy ship. Their standard lead is 25 fathoms, with marks on the line at 2, 3, 5, 7, 10, 13, 15, 17, and 20 fathoms. If the depth is at one of these marks, the sounding will be "by the mark" followed by a number (e.g. "by the mark seven"); if it is an even fathom, then the call is "by the deep" and the number (e.g. "by the deep eight"); the call may be amplified by halves or quarters. Thus the two systems have almost no overlap -- not surprising, given that the deepest water encountered by a riverboat is shallower than almost anything in which an ocean vessel can maneuver.
The various "songs" combined under this heading are, of course, not ballads, and not even true tunes, nor do they constitute a single song. The tunes are simple, and almost all the words are simply the numbers for depths (though in fact the various singers had their own methods of calling the numbers -- a valuable skill if it helped keep the listeners alert). But collectively these chants represent a significant part of river culture, so I've included them. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.1
File: BMRF572

Soup Supper in Clattice Harbour
DESCRIPTION: The singer has not recently attended the local "times" but goes to this one on November 18, held at the church. He pays the five cents admission and enjoys the soup supper, dancing till four or five, and another supper after that.
AUTHOR: Peter Leonard
EARLIEST DATE: 1983 (Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou)
KEYWORDS: dancing food party
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 99, "Soup Supper in Clattice Harbour" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #26159
CROSS-REFERENCES:
Anita Best, "The Soup Supper in Clattice Harbour" (on NFABest01)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Buns of Daily Bread
NOTES [39 words]: Peter Leonard is also credited with at least four songs in the Index, "The Schooner Annie," "The Hole in the Wall," "Soup Supper in Clattice Harbour," and "Tobias Murphy and Tom Hann," none of which seem to have been very well known.- RBW
Last updated in version 6.1
File: LeVe099

Sour-Milk Cairt, The
DESCRIPTION: The singer meets a maid and offers to drive her to Glasgow on his milk cart. On the way he proposes and she agrees. Before next term they plan to marry. When he suggests a coach for the wedding she says to save their silver and use the milk cart.
AUTHOR: Thomas Johnstone (source: Greig/Duncan5)
Sourwood Mountain

DESCRIPTION: Dance tune with words; young man wants his true love, but she is coy. Versions often contain a variety of floating or spontaneous verses. First stanza may begin, "Chickens crowing on Sourwood Mountain...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1913 (collected by Olive Dame Campbell); +1909 (JAFL22)
KEYWORDS: courting love rejection nonballad playparty

REFERENCES (26 citations):
Randolph 417, "Sourwood Mountain" (4 texts plus a fragment, 1 tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 346-347, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 417A)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 251, "Sourwood Mountain" (7 texts plus an excerpt and 3 fragments)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 251, "Sourwood Mountain" (7 tunes plus text excerpts)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #142, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wyman/Brockway-LonesomeSongs-KentuckyMountains-Vol1, p. 91 "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, pp. 180-181, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Boette-SingaHipsyDoodle, pp. 162-163, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Thomas-DevilsDitties, pp. 114-115, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Richardson/Spaeth-AmericanMountainSongs, p. 89, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #76, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, pp. 170-171, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text)
Cambiaire-EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads, p. 11, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text)
Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, pp. 20-21, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, p. 216, "I Got a Woman on Sourwood Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune, with some of the lyrics rewritten by Earl Johnson)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 125, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune); 320-321, "I Got a Gal at the Head of the Holler" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 216, "Sourwood Mountain" (3 texts, 3 tunes)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongsUSA 24, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 276-277, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune, composite) Lunsford/Stringfield-30And1FolkSongsFromSouthernMountains, pp. 24-27, "Sourwood Mountain" (2 texts, 2 tunes; the tunes, although clearly related, are not identical)
Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolkslore, pp. 897-898, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Chase-AmericanFolkTalesAndSongs, pp. 148-149, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
McNeil-SouthernMountainFolksong, pp17-18, "(Sourwood Mountain)" (1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 257-258, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 35, "Sourwood Mountain" (1 text)
DT, SOURWOOD

Roud #754

RECORDINGS:
Coleman & Harper "Sourwood Mountain" (Perfect 12751, 1931) (Oriole 8095, 1935)
Fruit Jar Guzzlers, "Sourwood Mountain" (on CrowTold01)
I. G. Greer & Mrs. I. G. Greer, "Sourwood Mountain" (AFS; on LC12)
Stanley Hicks, "Sourwood Mountain" [2 versions] (on FarMtns 2)
The Hillbillies, "Sourwood Mountain" (Vocalion 5022, c. 1926)
Earl Johnson & his Dixie Entertainers "I've Got a Woman on Sourwood Mountain" (OKeh 45171, 1927)
Kessinger Brothers, "Sourwood Mountain" (Brunswick 308, c. 1929)
Bradley Kincaid, "Sourwood Mountain" (Gennett 6417/Silvertone 8220, 1928) (Brunswick 420, 1930) (Conqueror 8090, 1933) (one of these is on CrowTold02, but it's not clear which)
Clayton McMichen, "Sourwood Mountain [part of instrumental medley]" (Decca 2649, 1939)
Land Norris, "Dogwood Mountain" (OKeh 40433, 1925)
Fiddlin' Powers & Family, "Sour Wood Mountains" (Victor 19448, 1924) (Edison 51789/5123, 1925)
Hobart Smith, "Sourwood Mountain" [instrumental] (on LomaxCD1702)
Kilby Snow, "Sourwood Mountain" (on KSnow1)
Ernest V. Stoneman, "Sourwood Mountain" (Victor 20235, 1926)
Stove Pipe No. 1 [pseud. for Sam Jones], "Cripple Creek & Sourwood Mountain" (Columbia 201-D, 1924)
Uncle "Am" Stuart, "Sourwood Mountain" [instrumental] (Vocalion 15840, 1924)
Gid Tanner & Riley Puckett, "Sourwood Mountain" (Columbia 245-D, 1924)
The Vagabonds, "Sourwood Mountain" (Bluebird B-5335, 1934)
Wade Ward, "Sourwood Mountain" [instrumental] (on Holcomb-Ward1); "Sourwood Mountain" [instrumental] (on GraysonCarroll1)
Henry Whitter's Virginia Breakdowners, "Sourwood Mountain" (OKeh 7005, 1924)
NOTES [41 words]: The Baptist church disapproved of dancing, but allowed playparties (dances with sung tunes instead of instrumental music). - PJS
It should be noted that this is primarily a fiddle tune; it's listed because it occasionally turns up with words. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: R417

Souters of Selkirk, The

DESCRIPTION: "Up wi' the souters of Selkirk, And doun wi' the Earl of Home." The shoemakers are praised for their gallantry; the colors of the Earl of Home are despised because of his poor performance at Flodden.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1803 (Scots Musical Museum #438)
KEYWORDS: clothes soldier
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
MacColl-PersonalChoice, pp. 11-12, "The Souters o' Selkirk" (1 text, 1 tune)
Winstock-SongsAndMusicOfTheRedcoats, pp. 93-95, "The Souters of Selkirk" (1 tune, partial text)
Roud #5505
File: SMM438

Souters' Feast, The

DESCRIPTION: "The souters [shoemakers] they had a feast ... Souters cam' frae far and near." One got drunk and began to shit leather, lasts, knives and broken glass. And when he seemed finished "he spued a muckle beatin' stane"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: drink food bawdy humorous scatological clothes
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
South Australia (I)

DESCRIPTION: The sailor reports, "South Australia's where I was born." Often used as a shanty, with chorus, "Heave away, heave away... we're bound for south Australia." Often he speaks of leaving his Australian girl behind

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927

REFERENCES (12 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, p. 71, "South Australia" (1 text, 1 tune)
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 90, "Rolling King" (1 text, 1 tune)
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 33-35, "South Australia" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 193-195, "Rolling King," "South Australia" (3 texts, 2 tunes) [AbEd, pp. 150-151]
Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 58-59, "South Australia" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fahey-PintPotAndBilly, p. 64, "Bound for South Australia" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, pp. 2-4, "Bound for South Australia" (1 text, 2 tunes)
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslards, p. 220, "Haul Away, I'm a Rollin' King" (1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 315-316, "South Australia" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 85, "South Australia" (1 text)

DT, SOAUSTRL*

ADDITIONAL: Frederick Pease Harlow, _The Making of a Sailor, or Sea Life Aboard a Yankee Square-Rigger_, 1928; republished by Dover, 1988, pp. 219-220, "South Australia" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #325

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Cape Cod Girls" (floating lyrics, tune, meter, plot)
cf. "We Are Bound Down South Alibama" (form, lyrics)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Ruler King

NOTES [56 words]: There is no true dividing line between this song and "Cape Cod Girls"; they merge into each other. However, the difference in local color and focus is enough that they should be separated. The problem is classifying the intermediate versions.... - RBW

A modern verse: "In South Australia Skylab fell..., 15 billion shot to hell..." - SL

Last updated in version 5.0

File: Doe071

South Carolina State

DESCRIPTION: The singer enlists for gold to fight "in the northern wars." He deserts, is caught, jailed "in South Carolina State," and sentenced to be hung. He asks that the news be sent to his father, mother, and friends, and that he be buried next to his sister

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
South Carolina, a Patriotic Ode

DESCRIPTION: "Land of the Palmetto tree, Sweet home of liberty, Of thee I sing." The singer tells of Mother Carolina, He declares that South Carolina's sons will stand despite "fratricidal war." He asks help of "Great God! our King."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1861 (Library of Congress broadside)

KEYWORDS: patriotic home Civilwar

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 298-299, "South Carolina, A Patriotic Ode" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #C151, p. 194, "South Carolina, A Patriotic Ode" (1 reference)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "God Save the King" (tune) and references there

File: CAFS1298

South Down Militia

DESCRIPTION: Famous warriors are named: King's Guards and Scots Greys, Russians and Prussians, Julius Caesar and Napoleon, "but the South Down Militia is the terror of the land." Their appearance throws the Kaiser and "Krugar" into despair and makes Victoria gush.

AUTHOR: Col. R.H. Wallace (source:Graham-TheOrangeSongster)

EARLIEST DATE: c.1895 (Graham-TheOrangeSongster)

KEYWORDS: army war humorous nonballad talltale Napoleon

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1899-1902 - Boer War

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (5 citations):
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 90 note, "South Down Militia" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Graham-TheOrangeSongster, p. 13, "The Royal South Down Militia" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hammmond-SongsOfBelfast, pp. 40-41, "The South Down Militia" (1 text, 1 tune)
Behan-IrelandSings, #86, "The South Down Militia" (1 text, 1 tune, modified)
DT, SOUTHDWN*

NOTES [148 words]: The description is from the text at South Down Defenders Flute Band Newry site "Words & Music of Traditional Ulster Songs." - BS
I find myself wondering if there are not two different phases of this song. Its inclusion in Graham-TheOrangeSongster would seem to imply a date prior to 1895. And yet, the references to Kruger, the Kaiser, and Victoria date the version of the song containing them fairly precisely: The Jameson Raid (beginning in late December of 1895) provoked the "Kruger Telegram," in which Kaiser Wilhelm II of Germany offered his friendship to Boer president Kruger (though the support turned out to be only moral). The (second) Boer War began in 1899, and ended in 1902; Victoria died in 1901.

The Boer War started with a series of bad British defeats, forcing them to bring in additional forces from all over the Empire. Naturally this included a lot of Irish troops. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: OLoc090N
South of Columbo
DESCRIPTION: "South of Columbo, Down Koggala way, That's where we're stationed now, Please show us how To get away. We'd pay fifty rupees, And that isn't hay, Just to get posted Out Canada way." The airmen complain of life in the Indian Ocean.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead)
KEYWORDS: technology hardtimes soldier derivative
FOUND IN: Canada
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, p. 83, "South of Columbo" (1 text, tune referenced)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "413 Squadrom" (subject of the 413 squadron)
cf. "South of the Border" (tune)
cf. "East of the Border" (tune)
cf. "South of the Sangro" (tune)
cf. "Dear Old New Zealand" (tune)
cf. "The Battle of the River Plate" (tune)
NOTES [23 words]: For the 413 squadron, which spent most of its existence based (at least nominally) at Koggala, India, see the notes to "413 Squadron." - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: Hopk083

South of the Sangro
DESCRIPTION: "South of the Sangro, Down Echelon way, That's where all the Wops and all the quartermasters stay." "Ortona is peaceful, It's back of the line... But it's better to stay, South of the Sangro...." Of the dangers of the Italian campaign
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead)
KEYWORDS: soldier war river warning derivative
FOUND IN: Canada
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, pp. 92-93, "South of the Sangro" (1 text, tune referenced)
Roud #31229
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "South of the Border" (tune)
cf. "East of the Border" (tune)
cf. "South of Columbo" (tune)
cf. "Dear Old New Zealand" (tune)
cf. "The Battle of the River Plate" (tune)

File: Hopk092

South Ythsie
DESCRIPTION: Forsay fees to Johnnie Gray and names the crew. He seems to like the work well enough but at term day "I'll tak' my budgets on my back, Farewell to Johnnie Gray."
AUTHOR: William Forsyth (source: Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #19, p. 2)
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan3); reportedly written in 1851
KEYWORDS: farming worker moniker
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #21, pp. 2-3, "South Ythsie" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 355, "South Ythsie" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
Roud #5758
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Little Ythsie
NOTES [89 words]: Notes to IRClare01: "A budget is a bag or knapsack used for carrying tools." From Peter A Hall, "Farm Life and the Farm Songs," pp. xxi-xxxi in Greig/Duncan3: "The time between hirings was, in the mid nineteenth century North-East, predominantly six months ['terms']
Southampton Tragedy, The

DESCRIPTION: "Within a gaol I am lamenting, Will no one shed a tear for me; In agony I'm sore relenting." Singer Abraham Baker "dearly loved Naomi Kingswell," but then shot her. Making no attempt to flee, he is taken and hopes, after execution, to again be with Naomi

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Browne-FolkSongsOfOldHampshire), apparently from an undated broadside

KEYWORDS: love homicide gallows-confession execution punishment

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-FolkSongsOfOldHampshire, pp. 97-100, "The Southampton Tragedy" (1 text, 1 tune set by Browne)

File: BrHa097

Southerly Wind

DESCRIPTION: Round: "Oh, it's a southerly wind and a cloudy sky, Proclaim it a hunting/sailing morning. Before the sun rises away we'll fly... Hark, hark, forward."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951

KEYWORDS: ship sports

FOUND IN: US(MA) Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 174-175, "Southerly Wind" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Pottie/Ellis-FolksongsOfTheMaritimes, pp. 156-157, "A Southerly Wind" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #9442

File: Doe174

Southern Blues, The

DESCRIPTION: "When I got up this mornin', I heard the old Southern whistle blow (x2), Then I was thinkin' 'bout my baby, Lord, I sure did want to go." The singer watches "the Southern cross the Dog." The singer wonders which train his baby took; he will try Georgia

AUTHOR: Big Bill Broonzy (at least in part)

EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (recording, Big Bill Broonzy)

KEYWORDS: train separation

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 441-443, "The Southern Blues" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
Big Bill Broonzy, "The Southern Blues" (Bluebird B-5998/B-6964, 1935)

NOTES [88 words]: This is one of those who-knows-how-to-file-it blues. The recorded form is Broonzy's, but there are older elements, including especially the line "where the Southern crosses the Dog," the chief basis for Cohen's inclusion of the song. W. C. Handy encountered this line from a street singer around 1903, and it helped inspire his blues career.

There is a recording by W. T. Narmour and S. W. Smith, "Where The Southern Crosses The Dog" (OKeh 45480); I don't know what its relation is to either this song or the one Handy heard. - RBW

File: LSRai443
Southern Cross (I), The

DESCRIPTION: The Southern Cross goes to the Gulf in March to hunt seals. They are successful in the hunt but on their return are lost in a storm. The SS Kyle, sent off to search, could find nothing. The singer concludes by hoping that all are in Heaven if never found.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland); "written out by Lizzie C. Rose" (Doyle-OldTimeSongsAndPoetryOfNewfoundland, 4th edition)

KEYWORDS: hunting storm ship wreck disaster

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Mar 31, 1914 - Last sighting of the Southern Cross

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 139, "The Southern Cross" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 973-974, "The Southern Cross" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 77, "The Southern Cross" (1 text, 1 tune)
Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, p. 80, "The Southern Cross" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, pp. 99-100, "Southern Cross" (1 text, 1 tune)
Mills-FavoriteSongsOfNewfoundland, pp. 34-35, "Southern Cross" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST Doy57 (Partial)
Roud #2796

RECORDINGS:
Jack Dalton, "The Southern Cross" (on PeacockCDROM)
Eddy Primroy, "Wreck of the Southern Cross" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

NOTES [1788 words]: Horace Beck in his book Folklore and the Sea (Mystic Conn.: Mystic Seaport Museum, 1985), p. 208 gives a brief account of sealing disasters in Newfoundland that he obtained from George A. England, "Vikings of the Ice" (London, 1924) pp. 54-59. - SH [England's account really covers only three events, and even those only superficially. All three resulted in pieces cited in the Index: The Greenland Disaster of 1898, for which see "The Greenland Disaster (I)"; the Newfoundland Disaster of 1914, for which see "The Newfoundland Disaster (I)", and the disappearance of the Southern Cross, which is of course the subject of this song - RBW] Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland says that 170 men were lost; "no survivor or wreckage has ever been found."

Southern Cross last sighted by the Portia March 31, 1914 off Cape Race en route from Channel, southwest Newfoundland, to Harbour Grace (on the far side of Conception Bay from St John's); cargo about 20,000 seals; Captain George Clark (Northern Shipwrecks Database).

A must-read article on the ballad and its history, complete with a map, is available online in the archives of the site for the Canadian Journal for Traditional Music. Specifically, Canadian Journal for Traditional Music, vol 10, 1982, "The Southern Cross: A Case Study in the Ballad as History" by T.B. Rogers.

The article is good not only for its exhaustive discussion of this ballad but for the light it sheds on ballad-making in Newfoundland (at least). - BS

The Southern Cross was built in Norway in 1886, initially for use as a whaler, and was originally named the Pollux (Ryan/Drake, p. 33; Galgay/McCarthy, p. 45; Tarver, p. 14; Collins, p. 241); she served in that role for ten years. Only then did she really live up to her new name and go to the Antarctic; in 1896 (so Tarver; Galgay/McCarthy says 1898), she was rebuilt and given a larger engine, as well as renamed the Southern Cross, and went to the Antarctic for five years, setting a new "Farthest South" record for the time. She was the ship used by Carson Borchegrevink (Larson, p. 57), who frantically cobbled together an expedition mostly by appealing to the pride of Australians; as a stunt, it helped start an Antarctic rush but did very little useful research (Larson, pp. 53-57). During that expedition, Borchegrevink had planted the British flag on Antarctica for the first time, although ironically he was a Norwegian (Tarver, p. 42).

When the Southern Cross came home in 1901, she was quietly sold for the sealing trade (Feltham, p. 126). In her first year on the ice, she gathered a full load of seals very quickly and was the first ship to return to St. John's (Galgay/McCarthy, p. 46). She didn't have much success in the dozen years after that -- and I note from the list of her captains on p. 127 of Feltham that she rarely had one of the more famous sealing skippers. Then came 1914.

Her captain that year was George Clarke. It was only his second year as a sealing captain; he had commanded the Bloodhound in 1912, but taken only 809 seals -- a disastrously low total (23 ships went out sealing in that year, and only one other took fewer than 1000 seals; 13 of the 23 took at least 5000, and six took more than 10000; Chafe, p. 79). He may have known the ship fairly well, though -- his brother (?) John Clarke had commanded the Southern Cross 1910-1913. John Clarke did not command a ship in 1914; perhaps George was intended as a fill-in. He was said to have had a reputation as a good sealer but little as a ship's captain (Galgay/McCarthy, p. 46). He picked a very bad year to try to learn the trade. He is also reported to have had an inexperienced gang of sealers (Collins, p. 242), though this shouldn't have affected how the Southern Cross performed in a storm.

1914 was a bad year for Newfoundland sealers even apart from those on the Southern Cross; it was also the year of the Newfoundland disaster (see the notes to "The Newfoundland Disaster (I)"; the same storm that sank the Southern Cross was the one that doomed the sealers from the Newfoundland). To add to the irony, it had been a bad year for seals, and most of the ships in the seal hunt were struggling.

The Southern Cross was one of the few which had been lucky -- she had gone to the Gulf of St. Lawrence rather than the "Front" northeast of Newfoundland (Galgay/McCarthy, p. 46) -- and so was heading home earlier than the rest (Brown, p. 47). It was expected that she would be the first ship home -- a significant honor and the cause of a certain amount of gambling. It is at least possible that Captain Clarke was so intent on being the first ship back that he ignored the storm that blew up and refused to head for a port (Brown, p. 163; O'Neill, p. 974).

On March 30, the Southern Cross was seen by a wireless operator at St. Pierre; he reported she had all flags flying, indicating a full load (Collins, p. 242). As mentioned in the "The Southern Cross (II)," on March 31, the coastal steamer Portia saw her briefly near Cape Pine and on her way around Cape Race (Ryan-Ice, p. 310; Galgay/McCarthy, p. 47). There were no sightings after that, and no other word. It appears that she chose to sail home through open water rather than shelter from the storm in a bay (Looker, p. 19; Brown, pp. 162-163), a decision which would have exposed her to greater danger -- especially given George Clarke's inexperience (Feltham, p. 130).

The crew of the Portia later reported that she seemed somewhat out of trim (Feltham, p. 130). And she was perhaps more vulnerable than most to storms; since her engines were retrofits, they were mounted unusually low and were vulnerable to flooding; she also had high bulwarks, making her hard to maneuver (Galgay/McCarthy, p. 48).

People began worrying about her a day after she was supposed to arrive in St. John's, but the wires to Cape Race had gone down; it was not until those were repaired that it was learned she had not been seen passing the Cape as expected (Brown, p. 162). There was no SOS -- there couldn't be, since she had no wireless (Collins, p. 243). She was simply gone.

It took some time before a search was mounted; the SS Kyle and, later, the USS Seneca found no sign of her -- no bodies, no wreckage, nothing. More than 170 sailors and sealers had simply vanished (Brown, p. 163, Collins, p. 242, Feltham, p. 129, Greene, p. 64, Kean, p. 89, and Ryan-Ice, p. 311 say 173; Ryan/Drake says 172 sailors and her captain went down; Looker, p. 19, says 174 were lost; Chafe, p. 44, and O'Neill, p. 974 state there were 175 on board; Tarver, p. 14, claims 177 deaths; Galgay/McCarthy say ten crew and 163 sealers, which would be 173 or 174 depending on whether the captain is counted as part of the crew).

To this day, there is no real knowledge of what happened, although eventually a few possible traces washed up on the coast of Ireland (Looker, p. 22; Galgay/McCarthy reports that one board read "THERN C," but that its existence could not be verified). Some think her cargo shifted, perhaps due to rotten boards. This was the belief of at least some sealers; Stanley Sturge recalled something similar happening on his ship in 1924 and declared, "That's what happened to the Southern Cross, a pound broke and the seal pelts moved" (Ryan-Last, p. 263).

Alternately, it could have been an effect of the gale; a badly-stowed cargo of seal pelts could shift in the storm -- such a situation had at least once threatened the Neptune, which almost sank right in the entrance to St. John's (Greene, p. 192). It was also suspected that she was overloaded, and in the aftermath, a rule was passed limiting ships to 35,000 seals (Candow, p. 90). Whatever the explanation, it was the worst single disaster in Newfoundland sealing history -- and, when combined with the Newfoundland disaster of the same year, made it an especially sorrowful season for the sealing industry.

The Southern Cross was fairly well-known in Newfoundland sealing poetry; in addition to this song, the ship is mentioned in mentioned in "The Sealer's Song (II)," "Success to the Hardy Sealers," "Success to Every Man," and "The Southern Cross (II);" the Cross of "Captains and Ships" is perhaps also this ship. She also had a place in folklore; England, p. 218, tells of sealers who claimed to have "seen the wrath of the ill-fated Southern Cross". Funny how they "saw" her but didn't ever learn what sank her.... Galgay/McCarthyOlde, p. 109, have an even more substantial version in which she sails into the St. John's narrows, with her flags flying and her crew on deck, then disappears. Ryan-Ice, p. 316, also has tales about the Southern Cross, such one about a sealer who was about to sail on her. Told that he could add one more word to his telegram home at no extra charge, added "goodbye." It was the last his family ever heard of him.

There are photos of the Southern Cross on p. 178 of Feltham, on p. 21 of Looker, on pp. 33, 50 of Ryan/Drake, on p. 86 of Andrieux, on p. 62 of Winsor, and on p. 49 of Galgay/McCarthy.

Galgay/McCarthy, p. 44, has a photo of a model of the ship, which probably shows her design more clearly than any of the others although the paint job makes her look more like a single-decked naval frigate.

Tim B. Rogers wrote a novel about this event, The Mystery of the SS Southern Cross. Even if you like historical fiction, I doubt it is worth the bother; although the Southern Cross vanished without a trace, we know its approximate course because of the sightings as it tried to reach port, and it went down in a big storm; there isn't much mystery about what happened.

This song is item dD36 in Laws's Appendix II. The song is unusually accurate in its details. It appears to be wrong in saying the Southern Cross sailed on the twelfth of March; the 1914 sailing day for the sealing fleet was March 10 (Chafe, p. 81). But everything else is right: her skipper was Captain Clark(e), and she did carry about 170 men. Feltham, p. 129, gives a list of where the sailors were from, and yes, there were men from St. John's, Brigus, and Harbour Grace, with Harbour Grace having the most (25). Ryan-Ice, pp. 325-326 n. 173 also had a list, with a note that some of the names cannot be considered certain. We can't know how many seals she took, but the song's figure of 17,000 was a good enough haul that it might well induce her to go home; only three times had she taken that many or more (Chafe, p. 104). The statement that she was down by the head fits the Portia's report that she was out of trim. The ship that saw her was indeed the Portia. And the Kyle was indeed the first ship to search. - RBW

Bibliography

- England: George Allan England, Vikings of the Ice: Being the Log of a Tenderfoot on the Great Newfoundland Seal Hunt (also published as The Greatest Hunt in the World), Doubleday, 1924
- Feltham: John Feltham, Sealing Steamers, Harry Cuff Publications, 1995
- Galgay/McCarthy: Frank Galgay and Michael McCarthy, Shipwrecks of Newfoundland and Labrador, [Volume I], Harry Cuff Publishing, 1987
- Galgay/McCarthyOlde: Frank Galgay & Michael McCarthy, Olde St. John's: Stories from a Seaport City, Flanker Press, 2001
- Greene: William Howe Greene, The Wooden Walls among the Ice Floes: Telling the Romance of the Newfoundland Seal Fishery, Hutchinson & Co, London (PDF available on the Memorial University of Newfoundland web site)
- Kean: Abram Kean, with a foreword by Sir Wilfred Grenfell, Old and Young Ahead, 1935; I use the 2000 Flanker Press edition edited and with a new Introduction (and new photographs) by Shannon Ryan
- Larson: Edward J. Larson, To the Edges of the Earth: 1909, the Race for the Three Poles, and the Climax of the Age of Exploration, William Morrow, 2018
- Looker: Janet Looker, Disaster Canada, Lynx Images, 2000
Southern Cross (II), The

DESCRIPTION: The Southern Cross sails out through the ice and is last sighted by the Portia off Cape St Mary's sailing home.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1976 (Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou)

KEYWORDS: hunting storm ship wreck disaster

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

Mar 31, 1914 - Last sighting of the Southern Cross

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 101, "The Southern Cross" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #4406

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Southern Cross (I)" (subject)

NOTES [105 words]: The Southern Cross last sighted by SS Portia on March 31, 1914 sailing home to St John's with a cargo of seals. Believed "founedered in blizzard" with a loss of about 172 men. (Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou, Northern Shipwrecks Database)

Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou: see "The Newfoundland Disaster" for another ballad about another wreck in the same storm. "This was a particularly sad and tragic time for Newfoundland... leaving a total of about 252 dead in one month." - BS

For more about the Southern Cross, see the note to "The Southern Cross (I)"; for the whole 1914 seal hunt, see "The Newfoundland Disaster (I)." - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1

File: LeBe101

Southern Encampment, The

DESCRIPTION: "As I rambled out one evening in the pleasant month of June, I spied an encampment by the light of the moon." The southern girl reports on the soldiers' disdain for the northerners; despite their poor living conditions, she and they expect victory

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Randolph)

KEYWORDS: Civilwar patriotic soldier

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Randolph 223, "The Southern Encampment" (1 text, 1 tune)

Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 207-208, "The Southern Encampment" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 223)

Roud #7704

File: R223
Southern Girl's Reply, The (True to the Gray)

DESCRIPTION: "I cannot listen to your words, The land's too far and wide, Go seek some happy northern girl To be your loving bride." The southern girl tells how her youngest brother and lover were slain in the Civil War; she will not marry one who fought to kill them

AUTHOR: Original words ("True to the Gray") by Pearl Rivers

EARLIEST DATE: 1941

KEYWORDS: Civilwar courting rejection

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 156, "The Southern Girl's Reply" (1 collected text plus the original Rivers poem, 1 tune)
- Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 251-252, "The Southern Girl's Reply" (1 text, tune referenced)

Roud #7484

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "The Bonnie Blue Flag" (tune & meter) and references there

NOTES [48 words]: The "Fitzhugh Lee" referred to in the first stanza was Robert E. Lee's nephew, and a cavalry officer. One of the senior generals under Jeb Stuart, he eventually commanded what remained of the cavalry of the Army of Northern Virginia after Stuart's death and Wade Hampton's transfer. - RBW

File: Wa156

Southern Jack, A

DESCRIPTION: "I got a southern jack [train engine], I got a southern jack, First thing yi (sic.) do shovel in the coal, Next thing yi do watch the drivers roll. I got a southern jack, I got a southern jack; All aboard on the southern jack!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1919 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: train

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 239, "A Southern Jack" (1 short text)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 239, "A Southern Jack" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)

Roud #6452

File: Br3239

Southern Ladies

DESCRIPTION: Capstan shanty, Negro origin. "What will you fetch your Julia? Way-ay-ay-ay! What will you fetch your Julia? She's a Southern lady all the day." Meter changes from 2/2 to 3/2 throughout.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (JFSS volume 5)

KEYWORDS: shanty worksong

FOUND IN: Britain

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p.395, "Southern Ladies" (1 short text, 1 tune-quoted from a shanty which Cecil Sharp gave in volume 5 of the Journal of the Folk Song Society) [AbEd, p. 300]

Roud #9173

File: Hugi395

Southern Oath, The

DESCRIPTION: "By the cross upon our banner, Glory to our Southern skies, We have sworn, a band of brothers, Free to live or free to die." Southerns will fight northern "hirelings," and protect southern "fair-haired daughters" from "your fierce and ruffian chief"
Southern Shore Queen

DESCRIPTION: "It's concerning the harbour of Cape Broyle ... we will call it The Southern Shore Queen"; "Now Cape Broyle is famed for its beauty." The song lists the attributes of beautiful Cape Broyle

AUTHOR: almost certainly Gertrude Carew Cahill

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports)

KEYWORDS: pride lyric nonballad

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, p. 47, "Southern Shore Queen" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 343-345, "The Southern Shore Queen" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #7312

RECORDINGS:
- Omar Blondahl, "The Southern Shore Queen" (on NFOBlondahl04)

NOTES [214 words]: Cape Broyle is on the east coast of the Avalon Peninsula, about 40 miles south of St John's - BS

In 2007, Andrea Tarvin, a relative of the author, wrote to me with background on the song. I quote her letter: "The song... was originally recorded by Omar Blondahl. The song was written by Gertrude Carew Cahill. She would have been the daughter of Arthur Carew from Shore's Cove, Cape Broyle, who was my great grandmother's brother. She died here in St. John's about three years ago and before she died they had a birthday party for her in St. Patricks Mercy Home at which time they printed off the words to this song and passed it around for everyone to sing. The Downhomer... a local publication.... had an article published about four to five years ago that read "Southern Shore Queen Mystery Solved." In this article they showed that Gertrude Carew Cahill wrote this song... and she played the accordion as well.... Everyone on the Southern Shore is in agreement that Gertrude wrote this song." - RBW

Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports's version was recorded by Peacock in 1951 at Cape Broyle, so the song was at least in very local circulation before Blondahl came to Newfoundland. It was one of Blondahl's radio favorites when I got to St. John's at the end of 1955. - BS

Last updated in version 6.0

File: Doyl3055

Southern Soldier Boy, The (Barbro Buck)

DESCRIPTION: "Barbro Buck is my sweetheart's name, He's off to the wars and gone, He's fighting for his Nannie dear, His sword is buckled on. He's fighting for his own true love, He is my only joy, He is the darling of my heart, My southern soldier boy."

AUTHOR: Words: Captain G.W. Alexander

EARLIEST DATE: 1864

KEYWORDS: love separation Civilwar

FOUND IN: US(Ap,So)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Randolph 238, "Barbro Buck" (1 text)
Southern Soldier, The

DESCRIPTION: "I'll place my knapsack on my back, My rifle on my shoulder, I'll march away to the firing line...." He bids goodbye to wife and baby. He wonders who will care for his family if he is killed. But he hopes for the success of the southern cause

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (field recording from Mrs. Minta Morgan)

KEYWORDS: soldier patriotic Civilwar

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty, pp. 95-96, "Down to New Orleans" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 217-218, "The Southern Soldier" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #4770

File: SCWF217

Southern Spy, The

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you southern heroes." The singer is a northerner who leaves for the South in 1863 after "Old Abe he ordered us out to arms." He bids parents and wife goodbye to become a Southern spy. "Stand by your canon boys While shells and grape shot fly"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1868 (Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin)

KEYWORDS: Civilwar war dying death patriotic soldier children wife

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin 37, "The Southern Spie" [sic] (1 text)

Roud #4270

NOTES [63 words]: The last two lines of Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin's text -- "and trust to god your savior / And kep your powder dry" [sic] -- are from the lines attributed to Cromwell and also used in Colonel Blacker's "Oliver's Advice" [source: Charles Gavan Duffy, The Ballad Poetry of Ireland (Dublin: James Duffy, 1861 ("digitized by Google")) sixth edition, pp. 83-86]

Last updated in version 3.5

File: MuLa037

Southern Wagon, The (Confederate)

DESCRIPTION: "Come all ye sons of freedom and join our Southern band; we're going to fight the Yankees and drive them from our land." The song describes the state of the Confederate government and declares "The South is our wagon, we'll all have a ride."

AUTHOR: unknown (see NOTES)
EARLIEST DATE: 1889 (The Civil War in Song and Story); the earliest printing, by Joseph Bloch of Mobile, Alabama, is undated but probably from 1864 or earlier
KEYWORDS: Civilwar political
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 374, "The Southern Wagon" (1 text plus a fragment)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 374, "The Southern Wagon" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 121, p. 262, "Wait for the Wagon" (1 short text)
Colonial-Dames-AmericanWarSongs, pp. 132-133, "Southern Song" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #C160, p. 194, "The Southern Wagon" (4 references)
Roud #3716
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Wait for the Wagon" (tune) and references there.
cf. "The Southern Wagon (Union)"
cf. "I Picked My Banjo Too" (lyrics, themes)
NOTES [256 words]: This song, or at least Brown's version, has historical problems. (Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi's version, of only two stanzas and chorus, is hardly significant.) It refers to Jeff(erson Davis) and "(Alexander) Stephens by his side," which is accurate enough (except that the two quickly fell out), and Beauregard, while never the senior Southern general (in fact, he was #5), was certainly the best-known early in the war.
But there was never a date when the Confederacy had exactly the states listed. The author says (South) Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Texas, Alabama, Florida, and Mississippi are in (forgetting Louisiana), but "Missouri, North Carolina, and Arkansas are slow... There's old Kentucky, Maryland, each hasn't made up their mind."
Note that Virginia is not mentioned, and that Tennessee (secedeed June 8, 1861) is "in" when Arkansas (May 6) is still "out." It could be argued that Tennessee ratified an agreement with the South before Arkansas, but both states saw their governors turn south immediately after Sumter and broke free of the Union soon after.
Plus, Missouri, like Kentucky and Maryland, would not join the Confederacy (except in their dreams and the stars on their battle flag), though Missouri in particular did supply partisan troops to the south.
According to Colonial-Dames-AmericanWarSongs, this was written by "Maria Grason, of Anne Arundel County, M[aryland], in 1867, and this version describes events during the war. I would guess Grason's version is a rewrite of an already-existing song. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.1
File: Br3374

Southern Wagon, The (Union)

DESCRIPTION: "Jeff Davis built a wagon and on it put his name, And Beauregard was driver of Secession's ugly (frame/fame)." The song details the slow but steady progress of the Union forces.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety), but see NOTES
KEYWORDS: Civilwar parody
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
July 21, 1862 - First Battle of Bull Run. Mentioned out of order in Belden's version, but Lincoln and General Winfield Scott appointed George B. McClellan commander of the Army of the Potomac the day after the battle ("they put in all new spokes")
Sep 4, 1861 - Occupation of Columbus, Kentucky by forces under Leonidas K. Polk ("Bishop Polk"). Kentucky had tried to declare neutrality; both sides prepared to occupy it once the neutrality was broken. Polk went in first, but the Union had more forces in the area, and gained the bulk of the state. And Polk's invasion helped push the legislature to declare for the Union
Jan 19, 1862 - Battle of Logan Cross Roads (also called Mill Springs, as in the song). A small battle by later standards, but the first major union victory of the war. Federal forces under George
H. Thomas beat forces under Zollicoffer, securing much of Kentucky and opening a path into Tennessee
Feb 16, 1862 - Ulysses S. Grant captures Fort Donelson on the Cumberland River. This, combined with his capture of Fort Henry on the Tennessee (Feb. 6) blows a hole in the Confederate position in Kentucky and forces Confederate commander Albert Sidney Johnston to evacuate Bowling Green. This was the famous "Unconditional Surrender" incident: After the two senior officers at Donelson fled, the #3, Simon Bolivar Buckner, bit the bullet and accepted Grant's unconditional terms
Apr 25, 1862 - Union forces under Farragut capture New Orleans
Jun 6, 1862 - Naval battle of Memphis clears the path for Union occupation of that city

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 364-366, "The Southern Wagon" (1
text)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 70, "Jeff Davis" (1 fragmentary text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2219, p. 149, "Southern Wagon" (8 references)
cf. Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, p. 482, "The Southern Wagon" (source notes only)
Roud #3716
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Wait for the Wagon" (tune) and references there.
cf. "The Southern Wagon (Confederate)"
NOTES [167 words]: Cox lists this as a parody of the "favorite Confederate song" "The Southern Wagon." A Confederate song it may be, but hardly a favorite; I've found no evidence of traditional versions, and the single stanza Cox quotes seems to be the only traditional portion of the parody.
What is interesting is that Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, too, has the "union" form, and a full version.
Possibly Cox is thinking of another wagon song, "The Old Union Wagon" ("The eagle of Columbia, in majesty and pride"), which was extremely popular in broadsides; Edwin Wolf 2nd, American Song Sheets, Slip Ballads, and Political Broadsides 1850-1870, Library Company of Philadelphia, 1963, pp. 116-117, lists nine broadside publications.
This song too was very popular in broadsides; Wolf on p. 149 lists eight broadsides, one of them saying it was sung by the popular vocalist Tony Pastor, who may well have put it into wide circulation. Several of the broadsides call it "The Secession Wagon." - RBW
Last updated in version 3.5
File: JHcox070

Southland Gold Escort, The
DESCRIPTION: "The Southland folk are stirring But they're a deal too slow; In cutting out Otago
They find it is no go." Eight men guard the gold mined in Invercargill -- but there is so little that one man can carry it. The escort is mocked for its small burden
AUTHOR: Words: Charles R. Thatcher (1831-1878)
EARLIEST DATE: 1863? (implied date in Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)
KEYWORDS: gold humorous travel New Zealand
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, pp. 58-59, "The Southland Gold Escort" (1 text)
NOTES [57 words]: Another Thatcher song that appears to be on the same topic is "Go A-Head For brief background on Charles Thatcher's career, see the notes to "Where's Your License?" For an extensive collection of his songs, see Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: BaRo058

Sow Pig, The
DESCRIPTION: John Walker takes the "Lough Swilly Line" to Derry and buys a pig. He takes her to Marshall's to be serviced. A great crowd watches the heroic proceedings. "But all ended well and for in a short time The sow she produced a fine litter of nine"
Sow Took the Measles, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer founds his property on a sow. When the sow takes the measles and dies, he makes a saddle of her hide, a thimble of her nose, a whip of her tail, pickles and/or glue of her feet, etc.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands)
KEYWORDS: animal talltale technology disease
FOUND IN: US(Ap,NE,So,SE) Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Gardham-EastRidingSongster 3, pp. 7, 42-43, "The Herring's Head"; "Bolliton Sands"; "The Dead Pig" (3 texts, 1 tune; the first two are "The Red Herring" but 3B, "The Dead Pig," is "The Sow Took the Measles")
Randolph 412, "The Measles in the Spring" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 177, "My Old Sow's Nose" (1 text)
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 253-255, "The Old Sow Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fuson-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, p. 185, "The Old Sow" (1 text, in which the old sow "died in the winter last spring")
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 15, "The Sow Took the Measles" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 405, "The Sow Took The Measles" (1 text)
DT, SOWMEASL*
Roud #17759
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Red Herring" (theme)
cf. "Old Cow Died of Whooping Cough" (theme of animal disease) and references there
NOTES [33 words]: The disease the sow took is unlikely to have been measles; it is more likely that it was rinderpest, which is closely related. For more on this, see the notes to "Old Cow Died of Whooping Cough." - RBW
Last updated in version 5.2
File: LoF015

Sow's Tail to Geordie, The

DESCRIPTION: Geordie [George I] meets a sow. At every action Geordie takes she makes a fool of him and shows him her tail: he wears turnips on his head, she pulls them down; he invites her to dance, she flaunts her buttocks; she beats him at a race, and so on.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1819 (Hogg-JacobiteRelicsOfScotlandVol1)
KEYWORDS: humorous polilical Jacobites animal food dancing racing
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hogg-JacobiteRelicsOfScotlandVol1 55, "The Sow's Tail to Geordie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan1 121, "The Soo's Tail to Geordie" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #5781
NOTES [123 words]: Hogg-JacobiteRelicsOfScotlandVol1: "All this gibing and fun about the sow and Geordie, that runs through so many of the songs of that period, without explanation must appear rather inexplicable; but from whatever cause it may have originated, it is evident that the less that is said about it the better."
Greig/Duncan1: "... 'the soo' being one of George I's mistresses, Madame Schulemberg, Duchess of Kendal, or Madame Kilmausegge, Countess of Darlington - Hogg apparently thinks the latter." -
BS
I incline the same way. Schulemberg was so thin that she was called "the maypole"; Kilmausegge was so heavy that she was called "the goose" or "the elephant." For more about this two, see e.g. the notes to "Came Ye O'er Frae France." - RBW
Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD1121

Sow's Triumph Over the Peeler, The
DESCRIPTION: A Ballaconnell sow wrestles a police sergeant to the street. The army, called for help, is stopped by two goats. The sergeant tries to take the goats to Cavan jail. The pig's ire is renewed. With the goats, she drives the sergeant into hiding
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1881 (broadside, Bodleian 2806 b.10(138))
KEYWORDS: humorous political animal police soldier
FOUND IN:
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 b.10(138), "The Sow's Triumph Over the Peeler" ("Come pray attention for a while, I'll tell you a jest I do protest"), The Poet's Box (Glasgow), 1849-1880
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The World Turned Upside Down" (tune, per broadside Bodleian 2806 b.10(138))
cf. "The Peeler and the Goat" (theme)
cf. "The Monegran Pig Hunt" (theme)
NOTES [62 words]: Zimmermann p. 215: "The success of ['The Peeler and the Goat'] inspired other texts: 'The Peeler and the Sow' (set in County Cavan, the goat also appearing in that ballad) and 'The Dog's Victory on the Peeler' (set in Kilkenny), both of them very inferior to O'Reyan's satire." The present broadside seems compounded from the sow and dog versions described by Zimmermann. - BS
File: BrdSTOtP

Sowens for Sap at Oor New Tap
DESCRIPTION: "The foremost man o' oor New Tap, He works a stallion fine. The Lion they do call him... The little one that goes to him She's swift and spunky too. Sowens for sap at oor New Tap, Ye'll find it winna do." The singer describes horses and men of the farm
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: farming work nonballad moniker
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #92, pp. 1-2, "Sowens for Sap" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 400, "Sowens for Sap" (1 text)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 251, "Sowens for Sap" (1 text)
Roud #5575
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Parks o' Keltie" (tune, per Greig)
File: Ord251

Sower's Song, The
DESCRIPTION: "Would ye partake of Harvest's joys, The corn must be sown in Spring" "Old Mother [Earth], receive this corn [seed]" The sowers go up and down the rows: "Sow well and you gladly reap"
AUTHOR: Thomas Carlyle (1791-1885) (source: _Nightingale Valley_)
EARLIEST DATE: 1831 (_Fraser's Magazine_ Vol III, April 1831, according to the Carlyle Bibliography in _The Cambridge History of English and American Literature_ at the Bartleby site)
KEYWORDS: farming nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Sowing Oats

DESCRIPTION: "Here we go a-sowing oats, sowing oats, sowing oats, Here we go a-sowing oats, And who will be the binder?” "I have lost my true love... And right here’s where I'll find her."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1974 (Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol4)

KEYWORDS: love farming courting

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol4, p. 21, "Sowing Oats" (1 short text, 1 tune)

File: BWV4021

Sowing on the Mountain

DESCRIPTION: "Sowing on the mountain, reaping in the valley (x3), You're gonna reap just what you so." "God gave Noah the rainbow sign..." "Won't be water, but fire next time."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (recording, Carter Family)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad floatingverses

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 488-492, "Ezekiel, You and Me" (1 heavily composite text, 1 composite tune; the first verse is "Ezekiel Saw the Wheel," the second is from "Keep A-Inchin' Along," the third is "Standing in the Need of Prayer," the fourth is "Chilly Water" [Roud #15312], the last probably derived from "Sowing on the Mountain")
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 263-264, "Sowing on the Mountain" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 363, "Sowing on the Mountain" (1 text)

DT, SOWNGMTN

Roud #11554

RECORDINGS:
Carter Family, "Sow 'em on the Mountain" (Victor 23585, 1931; Bluebird B-5468, 1934; Montgomery Ward M-4744, 1935; rec. 1930)
A. P. Carter Camily, "Sow 'em on the Mountain" (Acme 997, n.d. but probably 1950s)
Coon Creek Girls, "Sowing on the Mountain" (Vocalion 04278/OKeh 04278/Conqueror 9113, 1938)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "You're Going To Reap Just What You Sow" (theme, some chorus lines)

NOTES [171 words]: The Darling text is a slightly edited version of the Cisco Houston(?) and Woody Guthrie version. Silber's seems to be from the same source. The other recordings we have so far -- Carter Family, Coon Creek Girls -- have different verses, but the same tune and chorus. That chorus seems anachronistic to me: "Sowing on the mountain, Reaping in the valley, You're going to reap just what you sow." I expect that "to reap what you sow," you would reap and sow in the same place (as in Job 4:8, ... they that plow iniquity, and sow wickedness, reap the same." (King James)).

A hymn with a tune close to the tunes on the recordings for "Sowing on the Mountain" is "You're Going To Reap Just What You Sow." The verses are not shared with the versions of "Sowing on the Mountain" indexed so far, but the chorus is "You're going to reap just what you sow (2x), Up on the mountain, Down in the valley, You're going to reap just what you sow." That is, wherever you sow, you'll face the consequences.
I assume the hymns are related. - BS

_last updated in version 4.5_

File: FSB363

Spailpin Fanac

DESCRIPTION: Gaelic. Singer, a spalpeen bids farewell to Ireland; on his last job 12 women contended for him. He was happy at first, then found he was being cheated of his pay. He boasts that women like him, and compliments a young woman going down the road

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (recording, Joe Heaney)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Gaelic. Singer, a spalpeen (itinerant agricultural laborer) bids farewell to Ireland; on his last job 12 women contended for him. He was happy at first, then found he was being cheated of his pay. He boasts that women like him, and compliments a young woman going down the road; "The tailor that took her measure/I am sure that he was in love with her/For he took her measure up from the ground/And high above her waist/And they tell me that's the reason/She is always laughing."

KEYWORDS: courting sex bragging emigration rambling travel beauty farming foreign language work worker migrant

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: George Sigerson, Bards of the Gael and Gall (New York, 1907 ("Digitized by Google")), pp. 287-289, "The Rover" (1 text in English translation)

RECORDINGS:
Joe Heaney, "Spailpin Fanac" (on Pubs1)

NOTES [54 words]: In Ireland young workers were often hired at autumn hiring fairs for six months, the women as dairy maids or kitchen maids, the men as farm servants. At the end of the term, often the women would marry and settle, while the men travelled to the next hiring fair or hit the road as itinerant workers, known as "spalpeens." - PJS

_last updated in version 2.6_

File: RcSpaiFa

Spailpin Fanach, An (The Migrant Labourer)

DESCRIPTION: Gaelic. Farewell to my dear island and the boys I left at home. I enlisted in the army; it was a mistake. One wonderful day I could persuade any woman that black was white.
"Twelve envious women compete for the benefit of my love"; even the old hag.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1967 (recording, Sean Mac Donnchadha)

KEYWORDS: foreign language emigration travel drink army nonballad rake soldier worker

FOUND IN: Ireland

RECORDINGS:
Sean Mac Donnchadha, "An Spailpin Fanach" (on Voice20)

NOTES [13 words]: The description is from the translation of the text in the notes to Voice20. - BS

File: RcASpaFa

Spailpin Fanach, An (The Rover)

DESCRIPTION: Gaelic. The singer had been a rover for hire by farmers at fairs. Now, instead, he will carry the Pike under the French banner. He is leaving a girl behind in Kerry. When the French arrive the yeomen and English will be forced to fly.

AUTHOR: George Sigerson (1836-1925) (translator ) (source: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)

EARLIEST DATE: 1897 (Sigerson's _Bards of the Gael and Gall_, according to Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815; source for date: "George Sigerson" on Ireland's Millenia site)

KEYWORDS: foreign language rebellion England France Ireland patriotic

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1798 - Irish rebellion against British rule
Spanish Captain, The

DESCRIPTION: A Spanish captain and his beautiful wife and daughter, bound for Newfoundland, are killed in a shipwreck near Cape Spear. The singer seems to have been one of the crew and laments the loss of the captain and his family.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)

KEYWORDS: wreck death lament family father mother

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Aug 14, 1876 - Loss of the Mayaguenzana

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 137, "The Spanish Captain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 102, "The Spanish Captain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, pp. 87-88, "The Spanish Captain" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
Anita Best, "The Spanish Captain" (on NFABest01)
Omar Blondahl, "The Spanish Captain" (on NFOBlondahl01)
James Maher, "The Spanish Captain" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

NOTES [622 words]: There is a formulaic introduction to the song where the Muses are called upon to help the singer and the public is promised not to be delayed too much in the telling. Cape Spear is the most eastern point in North America. - SH

Editor's Nitpick: Technically, the easternmost point in North America (that is, the point with the most eastern longitude) is in Alaska, since it is the only part of North America to be in the eastern hemisphere. Cape Spear is the easternmost point in the Western Hemisphere.

This song is item dD33 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW

Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou's suggestion seems to me a good one, even though the date in the Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland text (August 20) does not match the date of the disaster. The song says that the ship had a Spanish captain, that he, his wife, and his daughter were lost, and that there was "no tug to take her in" -- all of which fit the Mayaguennzana (the spelling I find in Power). Also, Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland's informant, Stephen John Lewis, thought the event happened about fifty years earlier, and the song was collected in 1929, 53 years after the loss of the Mayaguennzana. The name of the ship is wrong, but it would be no surprise to find Newfoundlanders corrupting a Spanish name.

Galgay/McCarthy-Shipwrecks, p. 87, reports that the Mayaguennzana (their spelling) was a "Spanish brig, lost at Blackhead 14 Aug 1876. Captain and his wife drowned."

Northern Shipwrecks Database:
Mayaguennzana/Maguayzozona stranded in smoke with 2 or 3 lost. - BS

Doyle-OldTimeSongsAndPoetryOfNewfoundland's suggestion to the song seems to me a good one, even though the date in the Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland text (August 20) does not match the date of the disaster. The song says that the ship had a Spanish captain, that he, his wife, and his daughter were lost, and that there was "no tug to take her in" -- all of which fit the Mayaguennzana (the spelling I find in Power). Also, Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland's informant, Stephen John Lewis, thought the event happened about fifty years earlier, and the song was collected in 1929, 53 years after the loss of the Mayaguennzana. The name of the ship is wrong, but it would be no surprise to find Newfoundlanders corrupting a Spanish name.

Galagay/McCarthy-Shipwrecks, p. 87, reports that the Mayaguennzana (their spelling) was a "Spanish brig, lost at Blackhead 14 Aug 1876. Captain and his wife drowned."

Power, pp. 37-39, has more details. The Mayaguennzana was bringing molasses and sugar from the West Indies to Newfoundland. The ship was approaching St. John's (Blackhead Bay, where she was lost, is about two miles southeast of the Narrows of St. John's Harbour), but visibility was poor because of fires near the town. Four of the ship's crew were lost: Captain Fioll, his wife, his daughter (who was nine years old), and one other member of the crew. The body of the daughter was found April 28; Power never mentions recovery of the bodies of the others. The remaining members of the crew were taken aboard a pilot boat.

Galgay/McCarthy-Olde, p. 75, report of the fire, "On August 14, 1876, and for several days after, the Southside Hill was on fire from Syme's Bridge to the Narrows [i.e. the entrance to St. John's harbour]. During the night, the fire attracted thousands of citizens by its wild grandeur. The smoke from the fire, the wind being from the west, filled the bay and in part brought about the wreck of the Spanish brigantine \textit{Mayaguezana}."

An investigation was held afterward, which found that two pilot boats were supposed to be on duty at the time the \textit{Mayaguezana} went aground -- but that one of them had simply sat in the harbour, leaving only one actively at sea. The latter had seen the \textit{Mayaguezana}, and could have put a pilot aboard (he had two available), but the boat's skipper decided to devote all his energies to bringing in another boat, resulting in the loss of the \textit{Mayaguezana}. The captain of the latter pilot boat was suspended for three months; the captain of the one which just sat in port received a six month suspension (on the grounds that, if it had done its duty and been available, the other captain wouldn't have had to decide whether to divide his crew or not). - RBW

Bibliography

\textit{Last updated in version 4.4}

File: Doy38

\textbf{Spanish Cavalier, The}

DESCRIPTION: The Spanish Cavalier plays his guitar under a tree, asking his sweetheart to be true while he is off to war. He promises to return if he lives, and asks her to seek him if he dies

AUTHOR: William D. Henderson? (see NOTES)

EARLIEST DATE: 1887 (College Songs; also Merchant's Gargling Oil Songster for that year)

KEYWORDS: war separation music

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) US(MW,Ro)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO GI 153, "Spanish Cavalier" (1 text)
- Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 106, p. 218, "The Spanish Cabineer" (1 text)
- Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 76, pp. 98-99, "The Spanish Cavalier" (1 text plus a fragment)
- ADDITIONAL: Henry Randall Waite, _College Songs: A Collection of New and Popular Songs of the American Colleges_, new and enlarged edition, Oliver Ditson & Co., 1887, pp. 32-33, "The Spanish Cavalier" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST LPnd218 (Full)

Roud #2684

RECORDINGS:
- Riley Puckett, "Spanish Cavalier" (Columbia 15003-D, c. 1924)

NOTES [142 words]: My 1887 \textit{Merchant's Gargling Oil Songster} lists this song as being copyrighted in the name of Gwo. W. Hagans, but this was simply a publishing house. The author is not listed.

In \textit{College Songs} we find the statement "The 'Spanish Cavalier' was composed by a youth of San Francisco who shipped as a cabin boy on board the flag ship of the Pacific Squadron, about 1875. The vessel lay sometime at Panama, where he deserted and joined the Panama army as a drummer boy." It goes on to explain that he left Panama, worked his way back to San Francisco, and was taken by the Navy as a deserter. The daughter of a congressman got him out of trouble, and he took two tunes he had learned in Panama and set English words in her honor. The girl lost interest in him, and it was not until 1880 that this song was published, but it went on to do very well.

- RBW

\textit{Last updated in version 3.2}

File: LPnd218
Spanish Is the Loving Tongue (A Border Affair)

DESCRIPTION: The singer tells of his love for (and language lessons from) a Mexican girl. "But one time I had to fly For a foolish gambling fight." Though the affair may have been a mistake, he still misses her and remembers her last words to him: "Adios, mi corazon."

AUTHOR: Words: Charles Badger Clark

EARLIEST DATE: 1920; apparently copyrighted 1919. Set to music by Bill Simon in 1925

KEYWORDS: love separation abandonment gambling fight foreigner

FOUND IN: US(Ro,SW)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
- Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys, pp. 10-11, "A Border Affair" (1 text)
- Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 52, "Border Affair" (2 texts, 1 tune)
- Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 278-279, "Spanish Is a Loving Tongue" (1 text)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 141, "Spanish Is The Loving Tongue" (1 text)
- DT, SPANOLOVE*

ADDITIONAL: John I. White, _Git Along, Little Dogies: Songs and Songmakers of the American West_, 1975 (page references are to the 1989 University of Illinois Press edition), pp. 126-136, "Badger Clark, Poet of Yesterday's West" (1 text, 1 tune plus discussion and a short biography of Clark)

Roud #11085

RECORDINGS:
- Tex Fletcher, "The Border Affair (Mi Amor, Mi Corazon)" (Decca 5300, 1936)
- Pete Seeger, "Spanish is the Loving Tongue" (on PeteSeeger30)

NOTES [60 words]: A version of this is printed in volume 38, number 2 of Sing Out! (1993), p. 70 credits the music to Billy Simon. This seems to be based on the statements of Katie Lee, but the information in the Sing Out! article by itself is not sufficient for me to credit Simon. But White supports the attribution to Simon, which strikes me as much better evidence. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: FCW052

Spanish Johnny

DESCRIPTION: "The old West, the old time, The old wind singing through..." are the habitat of Spanish Johnny, who herds cattle and kills men and "sing[s] to his mandolin." Spanish Johnny is finally hung; the night before he dies, he sings one last time to the mandolin

AUTHOR: Words: Willa Cather / Music: C. E. Scoggins (?)

EARLIEST DATE: 1934

KEYWORDS: cowboy death execution music

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 123-124, "Spanish Johnny" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #15551

NOTES [24 words]: Written as a poem, the Lomaxes apparently collected this from the author of the tune. There is no evidence that it ever entered tradition. - RBW

File: LxA123

Spanish Ladies

DESCRIPTION: Sailor bids farewell to the Spanish (Australian, South American) ladies as his ship weighs anchor and departs for England (Massachusetts).

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1769 (Journal of the Nellie)

KEYWORDS: parting sailor Spain England

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South,West)) US(NE) Canada(Mar) Ireland

REFERENCES (18 citations):
- Dixon-AncientPoemsBalladsSongsOfThePeasantryOfEngland, Song #38, pp. 235-236, "The Spanish Ladies" (1 text)
- Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 454-455, "The Spanish Ladies" (1 text)
- Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #19, "Spanish Ladies" (1 text, 1 tune)
Spanish Lady's Love, The

DESCRIPTION: Imprisoned by an English captain, the Spanish lady falls in love with her captor. They exchange praises for the English, and he tells her they are mismatched. This does not convince her; at last he says he is married. They go their separate ways

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1728 (registered 1603, and quoted in 1616)

KEYWORDS: courting separation love prison

FOUND IN: Britain(England)

REFERENCES (8 citations):
Hales/Furnival-BishopPercysFolioManuscript, volume III, pp. 393-398, "The Spanish Ladies Love" (1 text)
Percy/Wheatley-ReliquesOfAncientEnglishPoetry II, pp. 247-251, "The Spanish Lady's Love" (1 text)
Spanish War, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls "our last rebellion" in 1861, and declares that "battle must be fought" against Spain to "avenge the Maine": "They sunk her, never to rise again." Despite the possibility of loss, the war must be pursued

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)
KEYWORDS: Spain battle war navy soldier
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1895 - Cubans rebel against Spain
Feb 15, 1898 - Explosion of the battleship "Maine" in Havana harbour
April 25, 1898 - Congress declares war on Spain
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 95-96, (no title) (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "My Sweetheart Went Down with the Maine" (theme) and references there NOTES [42 words]: For background on the loss of the Maine, and the war that followed, see the notes to "My Sweetheart Went Down with the Maine."
This particular piece of rampant jingoism and blatant inaccuracy strikes me as possibly the work of the yellow press. - RBW
File: ThBa995

Spanking Maggie from the Ross

DESCRIPTION: The singer tells listeners about a race urged by "Mr. Montague." Campbell Miller accepts the bet. Jockey Bell holds back his horse for a time, to increase the excitement and the wagering, then wins easily. The singer offers a toast to the winners

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: racing gambling horse trick
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H516, p. 35, "Spanking Maggie from the Ross" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13354
File: HHH516
Sparkling Sunday Night

DESCRIPTION: As "Down behind the hilltops goes the setting sun," young lovers gather to court and go "sparking Sunday Night." The young people wait impatiently for her parents to drop off so they can spark seriously. Conclusion: sparking is fine -- but best on Sunday

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1855 (LOCSheet sm1855 58168, sm1855 581290); listed as from 1855 by Jon W. Finson, _The Voices That Are Gone: Themes in Nineteenth-Century American Popular Song_, Oxford University Press, 1994, p. 46

KEYWORDS: courting love family

FOUND IN: US(MA,NE,SE,So)

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Thompson-APioneerSongster 40, "Sparking Sunday Night" (1 text)
Thompson-BodyBootsAndBritches-NewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 424-426, "Sparking Sunday Night" (1 text)
Randolph 379, "Sparking Sunday Night" (1 text); 468, "Sparking on Sunday Night" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 721, "Sparking on a Sunday Night" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Huntington-FolksongsFromMarthasVineyard, "The Parlor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, pp. 95-96, "Sparking on a Sunday Night" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, p. 17, "Sparking Sunday Night" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #2820

BROADSIDES:
LOCSheet, sm1855 581680, "Sparking Sunday Night," T. Birch (New York), 1855 (1 text, 1 tune); sm1855 581290, "Sparking Sunday Night," Oliver Ditson (Boston), 1855 (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [106 words]: Randolph treats his two pieces as separate, and does not even cross-reference them. It's true that the forms are slightly different, and that his #379 includes a sub-plot (waiting for the parents to fall asleep) not found in #468. But the key phrase is the same, and so is the feeling; I think they are one piece. - RBW

LOCSinging as113030 has the tune as "Wait for the Wagon"; neither piece of sheet music sounds like "Wait for the Wagon."

Last updated in version 5.2

File: R379

Sparkling and Bright

DESCRIPTION: "Sparkling and bright in liquid light, Does the wine our goblets gleam in, With hue as red as rosy bed, Which a bee would choose to dream in." The poet hopes "We'll drink to-night with hearts as light... As bubbles that swim on the beaker’s brim."

AUTHOR: Charles Fenno Hoffman (1806-1884)

EARLIEST DATE: before 1876 (numerous parodies in Waite); sung by Henry Sibley and friends in the 1850s

KEYWORDS: drink nonballad

FOUND IN:
Roud #V12429

SAME TUNE:
To the American Flag and Harrison ("See in the light of glory bright") (Harrison campaign song) (A. B. Norton, _Songs of the People in the Log Cabin Days of Old Tippecanoe_, p. 12)
All the following references are from Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, part 1:
Gather Ye Smiles ("Gather ye smiles from the ocean isles, Warm hearts from river and fountain") (by F. M. Finch, [class of 18]49) (Waite, p. 47)
Smoking Song ("Floating away like the fountains' spray, Or the snow-white plume of a maiden") (by F. M. Finch, [class of 18]49) (Waite, p. 50)
Smoking Song ("With grateful twirl our smoke wreaths curl, As mist from the water-fall given")
(Waite, p. 79)
A Vesper ("When the evening falls on Brunonia's walls, As the light of day is fleeting") (Waite, p. 95)
Chant Our Rhyme ("Peacefully rest, 'neath the mountain's crest, In thy sheltered vale reclining") (by George L. Raymond, [class of 18]62) (Waite, p. 114)
Bacchanalian ("Oh, bright is the gleam of the silv'ry stream, As it leaps from its native mountain")
(by M. W. Fuller, [class of 18]53) (Waite, p. 124)
Mechanics ("To the solemn tricks of Mechanics We bid farewell forever") (Waite, p. 133)
Logic ("We'll poll no more for the hidden lore Within our Logic's pages") (Waite, p. 133)
Smoking Song ("Sorrow and strife leave the student's life When his pipe is kindled brightly") (by Professor T. S. Doolittle, D.D., [class of 18]59) (Waite, p. 144)

All the following references are from Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, part 2:

Welcome to the Alumni ("Come, friendly throng, and join our song, We welcome every brother") (by A. T. Pierson [class of 18]57) (Waite, p. 19)
Parting Song ("The dewy light of the morning bright, The blush of the summer sunrise") (Waite, p. 28)

Conflagratio Conicorum ("Gather here by the dusky bier, -- Let the requiem deeply roll") (Waite, p. 35)
Evening Hours ("The twilight gaze, with its gentle rays, O'er Trinity's campus stealing") (Waite, p. 36)

Sleighing Song ("Gliding along like a fairy song, Or the mist at early dawning") (by C. H. Sweetser, [class of 18]62) (Waite, p. 42)
We Gather Here ("We gather here with festive cheer, To drown all care and sorrow") (by W. Irving Allen, [class of 18]62) (Waite, p. 45)
Joyous and Free ("Joyous and free our hearts shall be, At the festal board regaling") (by E. P. Dyer, Jr., [class of 18]61) (Waite, p. 45)
Come, Gather Near ("Come, gather near, each classmate here, Fond memories will gather")
(Waite, p. 52)

While We Gather Here ("While we gather here, with song nd cheer, Our thoughts in union blending") (by George O. Whitney, [class of 18]69) (Waite, p. 82)
Hair-belles ("Here's to the maids with borrowed braids, And here's to the girls with curls, sir")
(Waite, p. 96)

The following references are from Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, part 3:
Boat Song ("Lightly afloat swims our gallant bark") (Waite, p. 11)

NOTES [172 words]: As far as I know, there are no field collections of this song, although it was found in at least one edition of the Forget-Me-Not Songster (but not the version used in the Index). There is also a report of it being sung in the future state of Minnesota in the 1850s: "The evening was spent in listening to song and recital. Boury gave us Ingoldsby's "Lord Tom Noddy" with great spirit. White, [future governor Henry] Sibley and others united in "Sparkling and bright" "Health dear woman", "Down East" "Farewell to Moore" "Starspangled banner" "Landlord fill &c", while throughout the night the greatest variety of voyageur songs inspirited the oarsmen...." (so Frank Blackwell Mayer, as quoted on p. 232 of With Pen and Pencil on the Frontier in 1851: The Diary and Sketches of Frank Blackwell Mayer, Minnesota Historical Society Press, 1986.)

This combined with the amazing number of parodies that use the tune finally caused me to decide to include it here, not for its own sake but so we could include the "Same Tune" entries. - RBW

_Last updated in version 6.0_

File: SparBrig

---

Speak of a Man As You Find Him

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, speak of a man as you find him, And censure alone what you see, And should a man blame, let's remind him, From vice we are none of us free." If we knew people's hearts, many who are honored would be scorned. We should ignore gossip

AUTHOR: unknown
Speaking Flower, The
DESCRIPTION: "Our ship is ready to depart, Yet ere I go from thee, Some proof of love to cheer my heart, I pray thee grant to me." He asks at least for the flower in the girl's hand. She does not answer, but drops the flower
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1852 (Journal of the Minerva Smythe)
KEYWORDS: love sailor separation flowers
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
HuntingtonGam, p. 333, "The Speaking Flower" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27530
NOTES [68 words]: Huntington says that this is "surely" an English version of "Une Fleur Pour Response," found in Laura Alexandrine Smith's collection of sailor's songs, "The Music of the Waters." However, the Smith book was published in 1888 (according to the title page of the version of the book on the Internet Archive), so even if the two songs are the same, the English version is in fact the earliest attested form. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.2
File: HGam333

Special Agent/Railroad Police Blues
DESCRIPTION: "Now, when I left for Ripley the weather was kind of cool...." "Now, I swung that 97...." "Now, them special agents up the country sure is hard on a man...." The singer asks the special agents to evict him near a town so he can make a recording
AUTHOR: Sleepy John Estes (1904-1977)
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (recording, Sleepy John Estes)
KEYWORDS: train hobo technology
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 435-436, "Special Agent/Railroad Police Blues" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Sleepy John Estes, "Special Agent (Railroad Police Blues" (Decca 7491, 1938)
File: LSRai435

Speckles (Freckles)
DESCRIPTION: "He was little 'en peaked 'en thin 'an Narr't a no 'account horse" (sic). The singer describes meeting (Freckles) many years ago, and being surprised by the gameness of this "no account" horse (which managed to rescue him from a party of Indians)
AUTHOR: N. Howard Thorp
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys)
KEYWORDS: horse cowboy Indians(Am.)
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thorp/Fife-SongsOfTheCowboys XXIII, pp. 254-257 (48-50), "Speckles" (2 texts, the second being an extension of the first); Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys, pp. 142-145, "Speckles" (1 text)
Roud #8044
NOTES [65 words]: Another Thorp composition that had little play in tradition. Even so, it has a variant reading; the author couldn't decide whether the horse was named "Speckles" or "Freckles"! Based on the notes in Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys, I would guess the horse was originally "Freckles,' but Thorp changed it to "Speckles" to honor P. A. Speckman, who printed the first version of Thorp's book. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
File: TF23

Speed the Plow (Sal'sb'ry Sal)

DESCRIPTION: Known as a fiddle tune, Flanders gives the words as "Oh, high, diddy-di, for Sal'sb'ry Sal, Plump she was, and a right smart gal, Swing to the center and caper down the hall, High, diddy-di, and a balance all...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1931 (Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads)

KEYWORDS: dancetune nonballad

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, p. 26, "Sal'sb'ry Sal" (1 text)
Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 111-112, "Speed the Plow" (1 tune plus dance instructions)

NOTES [161 words]: "Speed the Plow" is, of course, one of the most popular of fiddle tunes. We can't absolutely identify it with the words in Flanders and Brown, though, because they don't give a tune!
The phrase "speed the plow" has been used in songs for many hundreds of years. Richard Greene, editor, A Selection of English Carols, Clarendon Medieval and Tudor Series, Oxford/Clarendon Press, 1962, has as his #32 (pp. 147-148) a piece with the refrain "The merthe of all this londe Maketh the gode hosbonde, With erynge of his plowe." The third verse reads, "Aboute barly and whete,That maketh men to swete, God spede the plowe al day!" The source of this is Bodleian MS. Arch. Selden B.26 of the fifteenth century -- which also contains the primary copy of the Agincourt Carol (scans currently available at https://digital.bodleian.ox.ac.uk/inquire/p/1fd9f36c-2e48-47d3-b7a3-a9dec76fd28). Greene, p. 244, believes it is a carol for Plow Monday, or the Monday after Epiphany. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5
File: FlBr026

Spelling Game (Blue spells B-L-U-E; T-W-O Spells Two; My Mother and Your Mother)

DESCRIPTION: "T-W-O spells two, and O-U-T spells out... My mother gave your mother A punch on the nose, And what color was the blood? (Red) R-E-D spells red, and O-U-T spells out. My mother and your mother Had a fiddle... Chopped it in the middle... How many strings?"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)

KEYWORDS: playparty wordplay music mother

FOUND IN: New Zealand

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, pp. 96-97, "(T-W-O spells two)" (1 or more texts; it's not clear which are continuous)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "One Two Three Four, Mary at the Cottage Door" ("O-U-T spells out" lyric) and references there

File: SuSm096F

Spence Broughton

DESCRIPTION: Broughton at the gibbet post tells about his bad companions and wicked habits that led to his execution. He bids farewell to his wife and children; he should have stayed at home with them.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1856 (broadside, Bodleian Firth c.17(162))

KEYWORDS: crime execution gallows-confession children wife

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Apr 14, 1792 - Spence Broughton of Sheffield executed for robbing the Rotherham postman
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 126-127, "Spence Broughton" (1 text, 2 tunes)
Roud #1107
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth c.17(162), "Spence Broughton" ("To you my dear companions accept these lines I pray"), J. Cadman (Manchester), 1819-1844; also Johnson Ballads 3151, Harding B 11(3615), Firth b.25(381), Firth c.17(161), "Spence Broughton"
File: KiTu126

Spencer the Rover
DESCRIPTION: "These words were composed by Spencer the Rover, who travelled Great Britain and most parts of Wales." After much rambling and assorted adventures, he returns "to his family and wife" and decides to go roving no more
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1856 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3617))
KEYWORDS: rambling family return
FOUND IN: Britain(England(All))
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 130-131, "Spencer the Rover" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 327)
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 154-156, "Spencer the Rover" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 331, "Spencer the Rover" (1 text, 1 tune)
Copper-SongsAndSouthernBreezes, pp. 264-265, "Spencer the Rover" (1 text, 1 tune)
Copper-ASongForEverySeason, pp. 230-231, "Spencer the Rover" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #86, "Spencer the Rover" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, SPENCROV*
Roud #1115
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(3617), "Spencer the Rover" ("These words were composed by Spencer the rover"), J. Cadman (Manchester), 1850-1855; also Firth c.21(8), Johnson Ballads 1880, Harding B 11(3616), Harding B 25(1824), Firth b.25(257), Johnson Ballads 1842 [some words illegible], Harding B 11(3620), 2806 c.16(36), Firth c.26(209), Harding B 11(3618)
LOCSinging, as102610, "Spencer the Rover" ("These words were composed by Spencer the Rover"), Jackson & Son (Birmingham), no date
File: K331

Spider and the Fly, The
DESCRIPTION: "'Will you walk into my parlor?' said the spider to the fly -- "Tis the prettiest little parlor that ever you did spy." The fly demurs; the spider persists; at last she is lured "within his little parlor -- but she ne'er came out again."
AUTHOR: Mary (Botham) Howitt (1799-1888)
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: bug trick lie death
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1670, "The Spider and the Fly" (1 text, 1 tune)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #837, pp. 316-317, "(Will you walkin into my parlor?' said the spider to the fly)"
ADDITIONAL: Florence Milner, "Poems in Alice in Wonderland" (1903), now reprinted in Robert Phillips, editor, _Aspects of Alice_, 1971 (references are to the 1977 Vintage paperback), pp. 249-250, "The Spider and the Fly" (1 text, with "Alice"-related context)
Roud #13006
NOTES [233 words]: Mary Howitt, the wife of author William Howitt, made a number of translations into English (including, apparently, some of the works of Hans Christian Andersen), but is hardly remembered today except for this one piece. Granger's Index to Poetry cites ten poems of hers, but most are in only a single reference; 11 books are cited for this piece. I have this feeling that some of those other citations are instance where editors wanted to prove she did more than write "The Spider and the Fly."
Alice Liddell Hargreaves (as she came to be) referred to singing this song. In an account repeated in Jo Elwyn Jones & J. Francis Gladstone, The Red King’s Dream or Lewis Carroll in Wonderland, 1995 (I use the 1996 Pimlico edition), p. 102, she mentions how she and her sisters sang "Star of the evening, beautiful star," "Twinkle, twinkle, little star," and "Will you walk into my parlour?" on their expeditions with Charles Dodgson (Lewis Carroll) and the Rev. Robinson Duckworth. Dodgson's poem "Will you walk a little faster,' said a whiting to a snail," is said to be a loose parody of this, according to Sidney Herbert Williams and Falconer Madan, revised and augmented by Roger Lancelyn Green, further revised by Denis Crutch, The Lewis Carroll Handbook (earlier editions titled A Handbook of the Literature of the Rev. C. L. Dodgson, 1932, 1961, 1970); Dawson Books, 1979, p. 311. - RBW

Spider from the Gwydir, The

DESCRIPTION: "By the sluggish River Gwydir Lived a wicked redbacked spider...." A drunken shearer falls asleep near its lair. A man and woman come up and set out to rob him. As she approaches, the spider bites her. She flees in pain; the shearer is saved

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1968
KEYWORDS: bug humorous robbery
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 204-205, "The Spider from the Gwydir" (1 text, 1 tune)
Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 170, "The Moree Spider" (1 text)
Ward-PenguinBookOfAustralianBallads, pp. 121-123, "The Spider by the Gwydir" (1 text)
Roud #22629
File: MA204

Spider, The

DESCRIPTION: A spider web catches a fly but can't hold a hornet. "Poor men [are] brought to shame"; the vain rich are praised. The singer wishes to be neither rich nor poor. If rich men would be just the camel's hump could be shaven and "the rich man enter heaven"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs)
KEYWORDS: poverty vanity virtue money Bible nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, pp. 48-49, "The Spider" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1372
NOTES [42 words]: Matthew 19.24 (King James): "And again I say unto you, It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God" (cf. Mark 10.25, Luke 18.25). For more on this see "How Many Miles to Babylon?" - BS

Spinner's Wedding, The

DESCRIPTION: "The gaffer's looking worried, the flett's a' in a steer, Jessie Brodie's getting mairit an' the morn she'll no be here." The spinners have bought her a gift. They wish her well; she will have "love an' loyalty" even though she won't have money

AUTHOR: Mary Brooksbank
EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)
KEYWORDS: marriage gift party
FOUND IN:
Spinnin' o't, The

DESCRIPTION: Once "some canty goodman" sang "A wee pickle tow for the spinnin o't." "The stupid auld carlin" left the linen too close to the fireplace. The goodman says that he had asked forty years for a shirt with nothing to show.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: shrewishness fire husband wife

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #60, p. 2, "The Spinnin’ o’ t" (1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan3 474, "The Spinnin’o’t" (1 fragment)

Roud #5971

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "She's Aye Tease, Teasin'" (theme: the wife who won't spin, but sets the flax on fire)

NOTES [64 words]: Greig prints only the first verse of the three in Greig/Duncan3 and considers it "an introductory verse to 'The spinnin’ o’t' [that is, "The Wee Pickle Tow"] which I have never come across in any version of the song which I have hitherto seen." Greig/Duncan3's other two verses still seem introductory, hardly advancing the story, and may be just a fragment of "The Wee Pickle Tow." - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD3474

Spinning Song

DESCRIPTION: "Spin, ladies, spin all day (x2), Sheep shell corn, Rain rattles up a horn, Spin, ladies, spin all day (x3)."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)

KEYWORDS: worksong nonballad

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 215, "Spinning-Song" (1 short text)

File: ScNF215A

Spinning Wheel (I), The

DESCRIPTION: A young man comes courting the girl, praising her beauty and kissing her hand, "But yet I turned my spinning wheel." At last he proposes (marriage/a roll in the hay); she (accepts and leaves her wheel/orders him away)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE:

KEYWORDS: love courting technology work rejection marriage

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, pp. 12-13, "The Spinning Wheel" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, SPINWHL2*

File: Arn012

Spinning Wheel, The

DESCRIPTION: Silvia, out hunting, sees beautiful Cloe at her spinning wheel. Inviting her to accompany him to court, he seduces her and leaves her "e'er the year ran out in tears to turn her wheel about."
Spinning-Wheel Song, The

DESCRIPTION: Eileen and her blind grandmother are spinning. Grandmother hears someone sighing. Eileen says it is the wind. It is her lover. She sneaks out of the window while grandmother begins to sleep. "Through the grove the young lovers by moonlight are roving"

AUTHOR: John Francis Waller (source: Hayes)
EARLIEST DATE: 1855 (Hayes)
KEYWORDS: courting trick love
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (3 citations):
O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 151, "The Spinning-Wheel Song" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Edward Hayes, The Ballads of Ireland (Boston, 1859 (reprint of 1855 London edition)), Vol II, pp. 326-327, "The Spinning Wheel Song" (1 text)
The Universal Irish Song Book (New York, 1898 ("Digitized by Google"). p. 453, "A Spinning-Wheel Song" (1 text)
Roud #17647
File: OCon151

Spinsters Gay

DESCRIPTION: "We are a set of spinsters gay, As you can plainly see, And we can prove it's all from choice And not necessary." They could change their status in a leap year, but don't want to. They don't need men. They are happy as they are.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: nonballad courting rejection
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 55, "Spinsters Gay" (1 text, tune referenced)
Roud #11328
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Yankee Doodle" (tune) and references there
File: Brne055

Spirit of the Lord Has Fell On Me

DESCRIPTION: "O John, O hallelujah, O John, O the spirit of the Lord has fell on to me."
"Hallelujah to the lamb, Spirit of the Lord has fell on to me, Jesus made me what I am...." "Prettiest work I ever done... To work for the Lord when I was young...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Chappell)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad work Jesus
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 92, "Spirit of the Lord Has Fell On Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4918
NOTES [51 words]: If this is an allusion to any Biblical incident at all (and I'm not sure it is), I suspect it's to Revelation 1:10, where John was "in the Spirit on the Lord's day." John is associated with the giving of the Spirit in passages such as Acts 8:15, but Peter seems to be the prime mover in all such places. - RBW
File: ChFRA092

Sport's Lament
DESCRIPTION: "I am a poor forlorn dog and Sport is my name." Born in Caw, he is sent to Donegal but has no training. At first his owner treats him well, but then a dog tax is imposed; the master throws him out because he is expensive and useless
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: dog abandonment animal home
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H772, p. 23, "Sport's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13346
NOTES [25 words]: Obviously a composed song, with music perhaps set by Sam Henry, but I have been unable to determine when license taxes were imposed on British dogs. - RBW
File: HHH772

Sporting Bachelors, The
DESCRIPTION: "Come all you sportin' bachelors, take warning by me." The singer warns of a fast life and of marriage. His wife dresses him in rags, and makes him work constantly so she may live well. He hopes she dies so he may again be free.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1920
KEYWORDS: marriage courting abuse bachelor
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Wyman/Brockway-LonesomeSongs-KentuckyMountains-Vol2, p. 46, "Sporting Bachelors" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 14, "The Sporting Bachelors" (1 text, 1 tune) DT, SPORTBCH*
Roud #5556
RECORDINGS:
[G. B.] Grayson & [Henry] Whitter, "Never Be as Fast as I Have Been" (Victor 23565, 1929; on GraysonWhitter01)
Buell Kazee, "Sporting Bachelors" (Brunswick 157, 1927; Supertone S-2082, 1930; on KMM)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Never Be as Fast as I Have Been" (on NLCR14)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sorry the Day I Was Married"
cf. "Scolding Wife (IV)" (plot)
cf. "Married and Single Life" (subject)
NOTES [27 words]: Roud lumps this with "Scolding Wife (IV)," and I cannot deny the close similarity in themes. But the two appear somewhat different in both form and emphasis. - RBW
File: LxU014

Sporting Life Blues
DESCRIPTION: "I got a letter from my home, Most of my friends are dead and gone... That sporting life is killing me." The singer describes all the rowdy things he has done, wishes he had listened to his mother, and decides that he should marry and settle down
AUTHOR: Generally attributed to Brownie McGhee
EARLIEST DATE: 1973
KEYWORDS: rambling drink gambling
Sporting Maggie

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets a girl. She doesn't want to marry but only "to court with a sporting young blade that pleases Sporting Maggie." "If you love me as I love thee, What a sporting couple we would be."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1959 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: sex bawdy dialog rake whore
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Peacock, pp. 314-315, "Sporting Maggie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6461
RECORDINGS:
George Decker, "Sporting Maggie" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
File: Pea314

Sporting Youth, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer asks Mary to go with him to America. She agrees although friends say he would not prove true. "So now we are landed and married we be We will live in contentment and sweet unity"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1821 (broadside, Bodleian 2806 c.17(4) View 2 of 2)
KEYWORDS: courting marriage emigration America Ireland floatingverses
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 47, "The Sporting Youth" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3016
BROADSIDES:
Murray, Mu23-y2:013, "The Sporting Youth," The Poet's Box (Glasgow), 19C
Bodleian, 2806 c.17(4) View 2 of 2, "American strander" ("I'm a stranger in this country"), G. Thompson (Liverpool), 1789-1820; also 2806 b.11(278), Harding B 11(3206), Harding B 16(257a), Johnson Ballads 1834, "[The] Sporting Youth"; Harding B 16(6a), "The American Stranger"; Harding B 25(1845)[partly illegible], "The Stranger"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Colin and Phoebe" (tune, per broadside Bodleian Johnson Ballads 1834)
NOTES [13 words]: Usually the stranger comes from America; in some cases he comes from Ireland. - BS
File: OLoc047

Sports o' Glasgow Green, The

DESCRIPTION: "Ae morn in the sweet month o' July... Young Jockey had trysted wi' Jenny To gang wi' him in to the fair." They go to Glasgow, see all the strange people and exhibits, have sundry adventures, and head home to sleep it off

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Ord-BothySongsAndBallads), from an undated songster
KEYWORDS: worker music animal humorous drink food
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 396-399, "The Sports o' Glasgow Green" (1 text)
Roud #5615
CROSS-REFERENCES:
Sports of the Chase

DESCRIPTION: "Of the Bards of old Times, and the minstrel gay strains Have the sports of the Chase, all transcendant reveald." The singer, in extremely flowery language, praises racing

AUTHOR: Massey Robinson (source: Anderson-FarewellToOldEngland)

EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Anderson-FarewellToOldEngland)

KEYWORDS: racing nonballad

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Anderson-FarewellToOldEngland, pp. 68-69, "Sports of the Chase" (1 text)

NOTES [20 words]: This is clearly not traditional, and we should be glad. Reading it was so fatiguing I never even made it to the end. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: AnFa068

---

Spotted Cow, The

DESCRIPTION: Singer meets a milkmaid who has lost her spotted cow. He says he's seen the cow in yonder grove, and offers to show her. They spend the day there. Now whenever she sees him, she calls to him again: "I have lost my spotted cow"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1813 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 28(65))

KEYWORDS: courting love sex farming animal lover worker

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,North,South))

REFERENCES (8 citations):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 71, "The Spotted Cow" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 413)
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 70-71, "The Spotted Cow" (1 text, 2 tunes)
Copper-ASongForEverySeason, pp. 232-233, "Spotted Cow" (1 text, 1 tune)
OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart2 47, "The Spotted Cow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 142, "The Spotted Cow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #38, "The Spotted Cow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #68, "The Spotted Cow" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #956

RECORDINGS:
Harry Cox, "The Spotted Cow" (on H Cox01) (on FSBFTX13)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 28(65), "The Spotted Cow" ("One morning in the month of May"), J. Evans (London), 1780-1812; also Firth b.27(104), Firth b.28(14a), Harding B 11(1759), Harding B 15(311a), Firth c.18(217), Firth b.25(108), Harding B 11(3164), 2806 c.16(260), Firth b.27(95), Harding B 28(65), 2806 c.17(404), Firth b.27(294), Firth b.25(178), Firth b.26(83), Harding B 11(1106), Harding B 11(3628), Harding B 11(4201), "The Spotted Cow"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Kitty of Coleraine" (theme)
cf. "Blackberry Grove" (theme)
cf. "Three Maidens to Milking Did Go" (theme)

NOTES [14 words]: Not to be confused with "The Old Spotted Cow," a version of "The Crafty Farmer." - PJS

Last updated in version 4.3

File: K142
Spotted Islands Song, The

DESCRIPTION: The Anderson leaves Cupids "for a dance in Spotted Islands In the good old Fishin' Time!" The ships are named. "We had on board eight females" but the crew "kept up good behavior" and landed them safely on Wednesday morning.

AUTHOR: Samuel Richards
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing)
KEYWORDS: commerce sea ship dancing
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, pp. 91-92, "The Spotted Islands Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [12 words]: Cupids is on Cape Breton. Spotted Islands is off the coast of Labrador. - BS
File: Blon091

Spottee

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you good people and listen to me, And a comical jest I will tell unto ye, Concerning one Spottee that lived on the law key...." The wild man frightens women and children and horses; many hope to see him move, but sailors will not take him

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland)
KEYWORDS: madness
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 72-73, "Spottee" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: [Cuthbert Sharp], _The Bishopric Garland, A Collection of Legends, Songs, Ballads, &c Belonging to the County of Durham_, 1834 (references are to the 1969 reprint), p. 50, "Spottee" (1 text; 1 tune on p. 85)
ST StoR072 (Partial)
Roud #3142
NOTES [32 words]: Stokoe quotes Sir Cuthbert Sharp to the effect that song tells of an actual madman "who lives in a cave between Whitburn and Sunderland, which still retains the name of 'Spottee's Hole.'" - RBW
Last updated in version 3.1
File: StoR072

Spree at Montague, The

DESCRIPTION: "There were a spree in Montague ... At a farmer's house." The fiddler could not play a good dance tune and blamed the fiddle. A second fiddler is called in and plays very well with the same fiddle. Moral: Invite fiddler number two to ensure a good dance.

AUTHOR: Patrick William Farrell
EARLIEST DATE: 1969 (Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland)
KEYWORDS: vanity dancing fiddle party
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 208-209, 255, "The Spree at Montague" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13996
RECORDINGS:
John Farrell, "The Spree at Montague" (on MRElves01)
NOTES [12 words]: Montague is on the east coast of Kings County, Prince Edward Island. - BS
File: UvDC208

Spree at Summer Hill, The

DESCRIPTION: "His elbows were all greased with gin." "The dancers like chain lightning flew." In the yard, someone "threw the old gander o'er his back"; it will bring fifty cents to pay the thief's school assessment
Sprig of May, The

DESCRIPTION: In May the singer walks "across the dreary moor" and meets a maid who wanted "to marry me." He crosses a flowery field and breaks his finger. She says, "I should like to see You break your finger to pleasure me." "One sprig of May made her belly swell."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle)
KEYWORDS: sex pregnancy flowers bawdy
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 123, "The Sprig of May" (1 text)
Roud #2452
NOTES [43 words]: Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle: "Just as the 'sprig of thyme' is a metaphorical representation of chastity, so 'sprig of may' represents wantonness. The metaphorical character of 'dreary moor,' the 'flowery field,' and the finger-breaking is obvious enough." - BS
Last updated in version 2.7
File: ReCi123

Sprig of Shillelah, The

DESCRIPTION: The Irishman "loves all that's lovely": drinking, fighting. May English, Scots and Irish drub the French and be "united and happy at loyalty's shrine, May the rose and the thistle long flourish and twine Round a sprig of shillelah and shamrock so green!"

AUTHOR: Edward Lysaght (1763-1810)? (according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland); Henry Brereton Code (d. 1830)? (according to Bodleian documentation re broadsides (see notes))
EARLIEST DATE: 1807 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 10(50))
KEYWORDS: war England France Ireland nonballad patriotic
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (5 citations):
O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 13, "The Sprig of Shillelah" (1 text)
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 110-115, "The Sprig of Shillelah" (1 text)
Winstock-SongsAndMusicOfTheRedcoats, pp. 219-223, "The Sprig of Shillelagh" (1 tune, presumably this) Hylands-Mammoth-Hibernian-Songster, p. 89, "The Sprig of Shillelah" (1 text)
Roud #13379
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 10(50), "Sprig of Shillelah and Shamrock So Green", Laurie & Whittle (London), 1807; also Harding B 17(299a), "The Sprig of Shillelah and Shamrock So Green"; Firth b.34(279), "Sprig of Shillelagh"; Harding B 11(3632), 2806 c.18(300), "Sprig of Shillelah"; Harding B 11(892), "Sprig of Shillalah"; Harding B 18(448), Harding B 17(298a), Harding B 17(298b), Johnson Ballads 60, "Sprig of Shillelah"; Harding B 25(1830) [only partly legible], "The Sprig of Shillelah and Shamrock So Green"
LOCSinging, as203420, "Sprig of Shillelah", Andrews (New York), 1853-1859
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Darling Neddeen" (tune, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)
cf. "Nix My Dolly Pals Fake Away" (tune, apparently, according to Winstock-SongsAndMusicOfTheRedcoats)
SAME TUNE:
Black Joke (broadside Bodleian Harding B 10(50))
NOTES [412 words]: Broadside Bodleian Harding B 10(50) notes that the text was "sung with unbounded applause by Mr Johnstone, of the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane." The publication date is October 20, 1807. The Peninsular Campaign against the French in Portugal is in the news. That may explain the text's sense of unity of Irish and English against the French. O'Conor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland has the leek of Wales with the rose of England and thistle of Scotland, in "the rose, leek and thistle" joining the shamrock of Ireland.

The Princess Grace Irish Library (Monaco) site entry for Henry Brereton Code notes that Code included "Sprig of Shillelah" in his 1813 musical drama "The Russian Sacrifice, or the Burning of Moscow." While its inclusion there is consistent with its sense of unity the earlier broadside rules against the play as its first appearance. The site also refers to Code as "a particularly detested character, spy and informer" from the Irish viewpoint.

Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, p. 106: "The Irish oak, figuratively termed 'a sprig of Shillelah,' is so called from Shillelah, a district in the county of Wicklow, formerly celebrated for its oak woods...." [Quoting The Dublin Penny Journal: '... an Irishman cannot walk or wander, sport or fight, buy or sell, comfortably, without an oak stick in his fist.'"

I can no longer reach the Princess Grace Irish Library (Monaco) site. Perhaps I misunderstood the entry there to indicate that Henry B. Code is the author; Bodleian, in its documentation for broadsides Harding B 25(1830), Harding B 17(299a), 2806 c.18(300) and Harding B 17(298b) also has Code as the author [Code's name is not on the face of any of those broadsides]. Croker, possibly Sparling's source, has Edward Lysaght as the author. Lysaght's title for the song was, apparently, "Sprig of Shillelah and Shamrock so Green," as on a number of the broadsides. If this poem had been included in Poems by the Late Edward Lysaght, Esq (Dublin, 1811) that would have gone a long way toward settling the authorship question. That book is a collection of some of Lysaght's poems, but not this one.

Last updated in version 6.1

Sprightly Young Damsel

DESCRIPTION: Daughter complains of pains. Mother says it's time to marry the rich miller. Daughter would marry the unsuspecting father, poor farmer Willie. Mother refuses. Daughter reminds mother of her own indiscretions. Mother relents and prepares a grand wedding.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (according to notes to IRClare01)
KEYWORDS: wedding pregnancy dialog humorous mother miller
FOUND IN: Ireland
Roud #18473
RECORDINGS:
Michael "Straighty" Flanagan, "Sprightly Young Damsel" (on IRClare01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Between the Meadow and the Moss" (theme: daughter reminds mother of her own indiscretions)

Spring of '97, The

DESCRIPTION: "The Spring of '97 boys, For if we never knew The hardship of the frozen pan, We suffered with them too." "We struck the seals off Cabot Isle, Five days out from port." The song describes killing harp seals, storm, ice damage, and sealers dying.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (Peacock)
KEYWORDS: memorial death hunting ship sea work ordeal storm
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Mar 27-Apr 6, 1891 - the deaths on the "Aurora" (see NOTES)
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Peacock, pp. 976-977, "The Spring of '97" (1 text, 1 tune)
Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, pp. 77-78, "The Spring of '97" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, pp. 44-45, "The Spring of '97" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST Doyl3074 (Partial)
Roud #6470
RECORDINGS:
Mrs. Way, "The Spring of '97" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
NOTES [220 words]: This song never names the ship involved in this tragedy, and Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff offer no hint -- but the song says that the crew took 27,000 seals. There was only one sealer to bring in such a haul in 1897: Arthur Jackman's Aurora took 27,883 harp pups (Chafe, p. 64).
This would seem to be confirmed by a newspaper account of this trip: "The ship brought in 27,000 seals, some of them on deck. . . . The Aurora struck the seals on the 15th of March. The men killed about 11,000 on that day, 13,000 on the 16th and a few thousand on the 17th. Then came a big blow. . . . No less than four men have had to answer the death summons out on the stormy Atlantic. Here is the death roll: Edward Sullivan, an elderly man of Conception Harbour died on March 27th. . . . He fell on the ice and injured his chest. James Butler, about 16 years of age from Cupids, died on March 27th from consumption. Thomas Swain, about 27 years, of Caplin Bay, died on April 2nd from sore throat. Michael Sullivan about 20 years of Cape Broyle died on April 6th . . . he suffered from sore throat all spring" (Feltham, pp. 24-25).
For other songs which mention the Aurora explicitly, and more about the ship herself, see "First Arrival -- 'Aurora' and 'Walrus' Full." Jackman himself is mentioned in "Sealer's Song (I)" and "The Old Polina." - RBW
Bibliography

• Chafe: Levi George Chafe, Chafe’s Sealing Book: A History of the Newfoundland Seafishery from the Earliest Available Records Down To and Including the Voyage of 1923, third edition, Trade Printers and Publishers, Ltd., 1923 (PDF scan available from Memorial University of Newfoundland)
• Feltham: John Feltham, Sealing Steamers, Harry Cuff Publications, 1995

Last updated in version 6.0
File: Doyl3074

Spring Trip of the Schooner Ambition, The DESCRIPTION: Captain Himmelmann and the crew of the Ambition go out fishing in March. The song details where they go and even the frozen squid they use as bait, as well as all the trouble the crew has fishing; it ends with all happily ashore
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951
KEYWORDS: ship fishing work
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 177-179, "The Spring Trip of the Schooner Ambition" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9425
NOTES [49 words]: As this piece is blessed with defective metre, no rhyme scheme, and banal lyrics, I can only suspect that the informant was close to the author. I doubt the piece ever established itself in tradition (Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman knows of no other versions, and Roud lists none). - RBW
File: Doe177

Springfield Mountain [Laws G16]
DESCRIPTION: A young man is out mowing a field. He is bitten by a poisonous snake. In "serious" versions, he dies because no one comes to his aid. In others, his sweetheart tries to draw the poison but instead is killed herself when the venom enters a "rotten tooth"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1836

KEYWORDS: death animal lover injury

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Aug 7, 1761 - Death by snakebite of Timothy Myrick, often considered the inspiration for this song

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,NE,NW,Ro,SE,So)

REFERENCES (55 citations):
Laws G16, "Springfield Mountain" (sample text in NAB, pp. 35-36)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 299-300, "Springfield Mountain" (1 text plus a reference to 1 more)
Randolph 424, "Springfield Mountain" (4 texts, 2 tunes)
High-OldOldFolkSongs, p. 12, "The Stuttering Song" (1 text)
Arnold-FolkSongsAla, pp. 64-65, "Rattle Um Snake" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsTheSouthwest 186, "The Rattlesnake Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 257-259, "Joh-Woh-Wonny" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-2ed, pp. 108-109, "Dear John" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abermethy-SinginTexas, pp. 29-31, "Springfield Mountain," Love and Pizen, "Rattlesnake Song" (3 texts, 2 tune)
Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart1 32, "Springfield Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsOhio 109, "Springfield Mountain" (4 texts, 3 tunes)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsSouthernMichigan 38, "Springfield Mountain" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Peters-FolkSongsWisconsin, p. 207, "Young Johnny" (1 text, 1 tune)
Musick-JAF-TheOldAlbumOf-William-A-Larkin 40, "Poison Serpent" (1 text)
Morris-FolkSongsFlorida, #55, "Springfield Mountain" (2 texts)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 208, "Springfield Mountain" (3 text plus 3 fragments and mention of 1 more; the final fragment, "G," may perhaps be another song)
Brown/Chinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 208, "Springfield Mountain" (3 excerpts, 3 tunes)
Hudson-FolkSongsMississippi 61, p. 184, "Springfield Mountain" (1 short text)
Brewster-BalladsIndiana 76, "Springfield Mountain" (1 fragment)
Henry-SongsSouthernAppalachians, pp. 223-224, "Springfield Mountain (I), (II)" (2 texts)
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsMiddleTennessee 29, pp. 51-53, "Stuttering Johnny (Springfield Mountain)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 15-18, "On Springfield Mountain" (2 texts plus some scraps, 2 tunes)
Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster, pp. 159-161, "Springfield Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Linscott-FolkSongsOldNewEngland, pp. 285-286, "Springfield Mountain or The Black Serpent" (1 text, 1 tune)
Beck-FolkloreOfMaine, pp. 106-108, "Springfield Mountain" (1 text)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 719-723, "Springfield Mountain" (4 texts)
Leach-HeritageBookOfBallads, pp. 174-176, "Springfield Mountain" (2 texts)
McNeil-SouthernBalladsVol2, pp. 53-54, "The Rattlesnake Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Friedman-VikingPenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 302, "Springfield Mountain" (4 texts)
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 23, "Springfield Mountain"; 65, "On Springfield Mountain" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Warner-FolkSongsAndBalladsEasternSeaboard, pp. 42-43, "Springfield Mountain" (1 text)
Thompson-BodyBootsBritchesNewYorkStateFolktales, pp. 370-373, "Springfield Mountain" (3 texts plus 2 excerpts)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsSouthernAppalachians 132, "Springfield Mountain" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Scott-TheBalladOfAmerica, pp. 44-45, "Springfield Mountain"; pp. 156-158, "The Pesky Serpent" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 9, "Springfield Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsNorthAmerica 3, "Springfield Mountain"; 212, "Springfield Mountain (Texas Version)" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsRegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 81-82 "Springfield Mountain" (1 text)
Springhill Mine Disaster (1891)

DESCRIPTION: "Hark, the horn blows loud and long. There is something wrong ... One hundred three and twenty Of our Springhill miners dead Killed in the bowels of the earth Where none could hear their cries"
Springhill Mine Disaster (1958)

DESCRIPTION: Describes collapse of mine tunnel in Springhill, Nova Scotia, 1958; twelve men are trapped in a cave-in, while several are killed. The lamps, food and water give out; after eight days some are rescued.

AUTHOR: Peggy Seeger (with additional words by Ewan MacColl)
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (copyright by authors)
KEYWORDS: rescue death mining disaster ordeal worker
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 124, "Ballad of Springhill (The Springhill Mine Disaster)" (1 text)

DT, SPRINGHI*

NOTES [351 words]: I include this, although it's a recently-composed song, because it is solidly within the traditional ballad style, and because it's entered the common repertoire. - PJS

Usually listed as by MacColl and Seeger, but their official report is that it is "chiefly the work of Peggy Seeger." Peggy Seeger, in her book First Time Ever: A Memoir, Faber & Faber, 2017, p. 166, says that it's all her work, except that MacColl (by whom Seeger was pregnant, but to whom she was not yet married) suggested that she needed something that made it sound like she had been down in a mine, so he supplied the verse that begins "Down at the coalface miners working." Seeger adds that she considers this "my first good song."

Seeger adds that the song "has now been officially adopted by the community of Springhill, even though the mine closed after the 1958 'bump' and never reopened." She adds in a note that Caleb Rushton, who is mentioned in the song (and whom she met in 1997) actually took part in the community functions, and sang the verse about him.

There is some confusion about the copyright date; it's listed as 1960 in the Folksinger's Wordbook, but Peggy Seeger's songbook says it was copyrighted 1963.

The mine disaster of 1958 was not the only Springhill tragedy; there had been an earlier (and even more deadly) cave-in in 1891, for which see "La Complainante de Springhill (The Lament of Springhill)" and "Springhill Mine Disaster (1891)."

The town of Springhill is in Cumberland County, Nova Scotia, not far from the New Brunswick border, on the fringes of the Cobequid Mountains (really hills). There is still coal in the area, but it is now considered a minor resource; there is, in fact, a nuclear power plant nearby.

Joseph Ruby reports that MacColl's figures are inaccurate: "75 men were killed and about 40 were rescued - after 12 days, not eight." Seeger says in her book that 74 died and 99 survived after "many days." Seeger wrote the song while the rescue was actually taking place; she does not say so, but I suspect she used the figures which were given at the time, which were not accurate. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3
Springtime It Brings on the Shearing, The (On the Wallaby Track)

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, the springtime it brings on the shearing, And it's then you will see them in droves...." The singer describes the life of the shearer: Hard at work in season; rambling the rest of the year and "making johnny-cakes round in the bend"

AUTHOR: from the poem "On the Wallaby Track" by E.J. Overbury

EARLIEST DATE: 1865 (publication of the Overbury version, according to Gwenda Beed Davey and Graham Seal, _A Guide to Australian Folklore_, Kangaroo Press, 2003, p. 239)

KEYWORDS: sheep work Australia rambling

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, p. 186, "The Springtime It Brings on the Shearing" (1 text, 1 tune); probably also pp. 259-260, "The Springtime It Brings on the Shearing" (1 text, 1 tune, but in a very sorry state of repair)
Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 130-131, "The Springtime It Brings On the Shearing" (1 text, 1 tune)
Paterson/Fahey/Seal-OldBushSongs-CentenaryEdition, pp. 185-186, "(The Springtime It Brings on the Shearing" (1 excerpt, filed under "The Flash Sydney Shearers")
Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads, p. 55, "The Springtime It Brings on the Shearing" (1 short text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Flash Sydney Shearers" (form)

NOTES [59 words]: According to Gwenda Beed Davey and Graham Seal, A Guide to Australian Folklore, Kangaroo Press, 2003, p. 264, "To 'go on the wallaby' or 'on the wallaby track' was a colonial phrase for taking to the road in the manner of a swagman, usually in search of work." E. J. Overbury was also responsible for the original words of "The Shanty by the Way." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: MA186

Squarin' Up Time

DESCRIPTION: With their fish sold, the sailors go to the store to "square up." They spend their cash on various items, often behaving very badly when they can't have what they want. All is well until the parson strolls in, whereupon the men start offering him credit

AUTHOR: Arthur R. Scammell (1913-1995)

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Peacock)

KEYWORDS: sailor money humorous

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Peacock, pp. 98-99, "Squarin'-Up Time" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke/Johnston-FolkSongsOfCanada, pp. 182, ""Squarin' Up Time (1 text; the tune -- "Vilikens and His Dinah" -- is on pp. 180-181)
Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, pp. 35-36, "Squarin' Up" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: A. R. Scammell, _My Newfoundland_, Harvest House, 1966, pp. 120-122, "Squarin' Up" (1 text 1 tune)
ST FJ182 (Partial)
Roud #4548

RECORDINGS:
Omar Blondahl, "Squaring Up Time" (on NFOBlondahl02)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Vilikens and his Dinah (William and Dinah) [Laws M31A/B]" (tune & meter) and references there
cf. "The Merchant's Song" (subject: Newfoundland's truck system) and references there

NOTES [105 words]: Newfoundland fishermen lived much like American farmers: Borrow heavily in the spring to finance their fishing trips, spend the summer fishing, return in the fall with their yield, sell it and "square up" with the bank or the merchant. For background on this "truck system," see the notes to "The Merchant's Song."
For background on Arthur R. Scammell, see the notes on "The Squid-Jiggin' Ground." - RBW Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing: "The poem Squarlin Up was written by Mr Scammell in 1933. This poem and some twenty others by the same author may be found in a booklet titled Mirrored Moments, published in Montreal in 1945." - BS
Last updated in version 5.3
File: FJ182

Squatter of the Olden Time, The DESCRIPTION: "I'll sing you a fine new song, made by my blessed mate, Of a fine Australian squatter." The squatter declared that his animals made Victoria great. He becomes rich, but when he goes to England, the English shun him as a mere colonial
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Anderson, Colonial Ballads)
KEYWORDS: Australia sheep money travel rejection
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 142-144, "The Squatter of the Olden Time" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ward-PenguinBookOfAustralianBallads, pp. 56-57, "A Squatter of the Olden Time" (1 text) ADDITIONAL: A. K. MacDougall, _An Anthology of Classic Australian Lore_ (earlier published as the Olden Time" (1 text)
Roud #8395
File: Mcd145

Squatter's Defeat, The
DESCRIPTION: "If you give me but a haring, I'll tell you of the shearing, The one we just got over, Eighteen hundred eighty-six." The squatters say they will cut the pay for shearers. The squatters say they are broke, but the shearers fight back and avoid the pay cut.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (AndersonStory)
KEYWORDS: sheep worker labor-movement strike hardtimes
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 197-198, "The Squatter's Defeat" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: AnSt197

Squatter's Man, The
DESCRIPTION: "Come, all ye lads, and list to me, That's left your homes and crossed the sea." The singer, newly come to Australia, tries to find a job with a squatter. He complains about all the tasks asked of him. He would rather be a bushranger than stay in that job
AUTHOR: probably A. B. "Banjo" Paterson (1864-1941) EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Old Bush Songs Composed and Sung During the Bushranging and Overlanding Days)
KEYWORDS: emigration Australia hardtimes work
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 149-151, "The Squatter's Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ward-PenguinBookOfAustralianBallads, pp. 82-84, "The Squatter's Man" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Bill Beatty, _A Treasury of Australian Folk Tales & Traditions_, 1960 (I use the 1969 Walkabout Paperbacks edition), pp. 278-279, "The Squatter's Man" (1 text)
File: BBTAF278

Squatter's Troubles, A
DESCRIPTION: "A squatter who lived on a very fine station" prepares for the wool season. His shearers all vanish upon hearing of a gold strike. He recruits new chums, who are no good. When the shearers return, he rejects them. They say they are rich and don't need him

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (AndersonStory)
KEYWORDS: sheep gold abandonment return mining worker

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 102-104, "A Squatter's Troubles" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hoskins/Thatcher-LifeOnTheGoldfields, pp. 83-84, "(no title)" (1 text, tune referenced); p. 157, "A Squatter's Troubles" (1 tune, partial text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "John Jones" (tune); according to Hoskins/Thatcher-LifeOnTheGoldfields, p. 83, this is actually "Jenny Jones" (not to be confused with the song "Jenny Jones (Jennie Jo)" in the Index)

File: AnSt102

Squatters of Maine, The

DESCRIPTION: "Approach ye Feds, in phalanx brace, With mien and visage ireful." "For Maine her 'squatters' sends to town, On legislative station." "Now, join as one, with heart and hand, exterminate this faction." Federalists can thrive by halting the people of Maine

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1806 (Boston _Independent Chronicle_, according to Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks)

KEYWORDS: political nonballad

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks, pp. 142-143, "The Squatters of Maine" (1 text)

NOTES [154 words]: In the early days of the United States, what is now the State of Maine was part of Massachusetts. Maine did not separate until 1820. This apparently caused substantial unrest in 1806 (at least according to Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks). The Federalist Party had lost the presidency in 1800, by a very slim margin, with most of New England voting Federalist while the rest of the country voted for the Jeffersonians. In 1804, the trend was worse -- the Federalists lost even Massachusetts.

It appears, from the items quoted by Gray-SongsAndBalladsOfTheMaineLumberjacks, that Massachusetts proper remained Federalist (and the state went Federalist in 1808, 1812, and 1816, the last elections in which there was a Federalist candidate), but Maine was Jeffersonian. The people of Massachusetts resented the power of the Maine-ites, and complained about it. This satire was apparently a Jeffersonian counter-blast. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.5

File: Gray142

Squatters on the Flinders, The

DESCRIPTION: "O the squatters on the Flinders and the checques they are no good (x3), So don't you go down to the gulf." "For they'll charge you three bob for a pound of weevily flour (x3), So don't you go down to the gulf." To the tune of "John Brown's Body"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1993 (Scott-ACollectorsNotebook-31TraditionalSongs)

KEYWORDS: derivative food money warning

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scott-ACollectorsNotebook-31TraditionalSongs, p. 36, "(no title)" (1 short text, tune referenced, in the notes to "Jack Donahue")

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "John Brown's Body" (tune & meter) and references there

File: ScCo1036
Squid-Jiggin' Ground, The

DESCRIPTION: A song of the life of a squid fisherman. The fishermen are named, as are their homes and their peculiarities. The final stanzas warn of the messy work: "Now if ever you feel inclined to go squiddin', leave your white shirts and collars behind in the town"

AUTHOR: Arthur R. Scammell (1913-1995)

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1929

KEYWORDS: fishing nonballad moniker work

FOUND IN: Canada (Newf)

REFERENCES (8 citations):
- Fowke/Johnston-FolkSongsOfCanada, pp. 51-53, "The Squid-Jiggin' Ground" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, pp. 32-33, "The Squid-Jiggin' Ground" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Mills-FavoriteSongsOfNewfoundland, pp. 6-7, "Squid-jiggin' Ground" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 127, "The Squid-Jiggin' Ground" (1 text)
- England-HistoricNewfoundlandAndLabrador, pp. 52-53, "Squid-Jiggin' Ground" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: A. R. Scammell, _My Newfoundland_, Harvest House, 1966, pp. 118-119, "The Squid-Jiggin' Ground" (1 text 1 tune)

Roud #4429

RECORDINGS:
- Omar Blondahl, "Squid Jiggin' Ground" (on NFOBlondahl05)
- R. Sheaves, "The Squid Jigging Ground" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
- Maudie Sullivan, "The Squid Jigging Ground" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
- May Whalen, "The Squid Jigging Ground" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "When Our Boys Gave Up Squiddin'" (tune)
- cf. "The Napan Heroes" (tune)
- cf. "Hitler's Song" (tune)

SAME TUNE:
- Hitler's Song (File: Guig177)
- Our Boys Gave Up Squiddin' (File: Guig295)

NOTES [1260 words]: Fowke writes, "The tale of what happens when fishermen head for 'The Squid-Jiggin' Ground' is the most widely known of all Newfoundland songs.... It was written by... Arthur R. Scammell when he was only fifteen...."

"The squid is a species of cuttle-fish about ten inches long which is used as bait for larger fish. It has the peculiar characteristic of squirting forth an inky liquid when it is disturbed. Large schools of squid move in at certain parts of the Newfoundland coast during August, September, and October, and then the fishermen head out to pull them in with line and jigger."

Hallowell, pp. 145-146, says that squid was used primarily as bait to catch cod and other fish, but it was also used as fertilizer for vegetable gardens and dried and used to feed dogs in winter.

A jigger is a line with two hooks facing in opposite directions, which was dropped in the water and bobbed up and down. According to Young, p. 226, the result looked something like a fish, which would sometimes cause other fish to come to investigate. The prime advantage over ordinary fishing with a hook and bait was that it could catch fish even if they did not take the bait. According to Young, p. 227, the jigger has now been outlawed because it often kills fish, including fish too small to be used for food or otherwise undesirable. Knowing Newfoundlanders, I suspect their responses to that were mostly unprintable....

Squid jiggers, according to StoryKirwinWiddowson, p. 523, were a little different, with many smaller hooks (20-40), but presumably operated the same way. Interestingly, although "squid jigging" is attested as early as 1883, and a "squid jig" from 1861, there is no mention of the phrase "squid jigging ground" prior to Scammell.

The song received a big boost when it was sung on the Newfoundland radio program "The Irene B. Mellon," although it was written before that show went on the air. For that program, which promoted several other songs which seem to have become folk songs, see the notes to "The Cliffs of Baccalieu."

This song is undoubtedly Arthur Scammell's "hit," but he is responsible for several other songs in the Index: "Squarin' Up Time," "The Six Horse-Power Coaker," "The Shooting of the Bawks," "The Old-Time Sealing Fleet," and "Save Our Swilers." Scott Hadley notes that some collections of his works include My Newfoundland: Stories, Poems, Songs (St. John's: Harry Cuff Publications, DictNewfLabrador, p. 305, lists "My Newfoundland" as a 1974 recording and catalogs several other books by Scammell. It says that Scammell was born in Change Islands in 1913, and wrote "The Squid Jiggin' Ground" in 1929. He taught for a few years in the 1930s, then went to college at McGill University in 1939. He would stay in Montreal for about thirty years, teaching high school -- yet continued to write on Newfoundland themes. He returned to Newfoundland when he retired, and was given an honorary doctorate by the Memorial University in 1977. An annual writing award was named for him in 1985.

There is also at least one school named for him (Clarke, p. 194). Scammell supposedly wrote the song while fishing with his father in Change Islands, and he claimed that the characters in the song are all real (Clarke, p. 193). Clarke has a picture of a young Scammell on p. 194.

The introduction by Ella Manuel to Scammell's collection My Newfoundland reminds us that there is a political remark of sorts in this song that people usually miss today. The second verse ends

There's a red rantin' Tory out here in a dory,
A-runnin' down Squires on the squid-jiggin' ground.

"Squires" is Richard Anderson Squires (1880-1940), who was Prime Minister 1919-1923 and 1928-1932. He was a controversial figure who played a non-trivial part in Newfoundland's progress toward financial disaster in the 1930s (in the period from 1921 to 1923, his government drove up Newfoundland's already-too-high national debt by more than 40%; Noel, p. 152; eventually, the island found it impossible to borrow any more and went bankrupt; Noel, pp. 188-189, resulting in the "Commission of Government," in which Newfoundland gave up its Dominion status).

O'Flaherty, pp. 304-305, speaking of a time when he tried to open a legislative seat by bringing false charges against its occupant, says, "He was a man who took risks, who veered close to lawlessness.... This sprang, likely not from clumsiness or inexperience, but from a belief that no matter what scrape he got into, someone of his quality who ha made his own way to the top in the hard spheres of politics and law would find his way out of it. It was a form of hubris.... There was a quality in him, a slipperiness and aloofness, which could inspire real anger [in the public]."

So complex were his dealings that was forced out by his own cabinet in a strange semi-coup in 1923 (Noel, pp. 158-160). He was even arrested for larceny (Noel, p. 171). But he came back to form a new government in 1928 (Noel, p. 293) and was at the height of his power when Scammell wrote this piece. Later, he would actually be charged with graft -- to the tune of $5000 per year from funds earmarked for veterans and their survivors (Noel, p. 198; O'Flaherty, p. 366, says that he was genuinely in charge of distributing the funds supplied by Britain from German reparations, but that he took a huge cut while handing out very little). Hiller/Neary , p. 181, calculates that $63,000 made its way into his pockets from various sources -- probably the equivalent of millions today. But that was after this was written.

For a bit more on Squires, and how he went from being Prime Minister to a target of mob violence, see the notes to "Anti-Confederation Song (II)"; also "Coaker's Dream."

William Henry Cave (1872-1941) was also a Newfoundland politician of this era, Minister of Shipping 1919-1923 and of Finance 1923-1924, but was out of office in 1928 (DictNewfLabrador, p. 56), so I don't know if he is the "Old Billy Cave" of the song. He did wear a mustache, so his whiskers could have been spattered. (On this point, I note that the glossary in Scammell's My Newfoundland glosses Squires but does not gloss Cave.)

None of the other characters named in the song were noteworthy enough to rate an entry in DictNewfLabrador; they may be real but are presumably not very well-remembered.

On another political note, on the day Newfoundland joined Canada, this song was played -- on the bells of the parliament tower! (Chadwick, p. 225). - RBW

Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario p. 166 identifies the tune as "Larry O'Gaff."

The tune is one used by The Flanagan Brothers for their 1927 release of "Mick from Tralee" (on The Flanagan Brothers, "The Tunes We Like to Play on Paddy's Day," Viva Voce 007 (1996) from Columbia 33187-F June 1927). It is close to the tune of the chorus to "Paddy's Panacea" on Voice13.

The Moore broadside, Bodleian Harding B 26(417), includes the lines "For the lad I love lies at Sebastopol.... And in an Inkerman field your true lover does lie.... We fought for three days, till the fourth afternoon, He received his death summons on the 18th of June...." Is it strange that, so close to the event, the month is so far wrong? Inkerman and Alma -- also cited -- are in October 1854.

On the other hand, of course, the Battle of Waterloo was June 18, 1815, and the printer wanted to preserve the rhyme from an earlier version. - BS

Bibliography
Squire Agnew's Hunt

DESCRIPTION: The singer wanders by (Kellswater park) and is enjoying the bird songs when he spies Squire Agnew's hunting pack. After a long chase, they take down the stag. The singer goes to "drink brandy with Squire Johes Agnew"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: hunting animal drink

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H140, p. 30, "Squire Agnew's Hunt" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13351
File: HHH140

Squire and the Chambermaid, The DESCRIPTION: A squire is seen kissing his chambermaid, Kitty, by the parson's wife. To save Kitty's job he takes his wife out and kisses her. The squire's wife assures the parson's wife that it was not Kitty she saw kissing the squire.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1820 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 17(120b))

LONG DESCRIPTION: A squire kisses his chambermaid, Kitty, under a mulberry tree. The parson's wife sees them and Kitty is afraid the squire's wife will hear about the kiss and fire her. The squire, thinking quickly, brings his wife out and kisses her under the mulberry tree. When the parson's wife tells her tale the wife says "twas I that chanced to take that trip" Kitty keeps her job.

KEYWORDS: infidelity wife clergy

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 124-125, "The Squire and the Chambermaid" (1 text)
(also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO We 492)
Roud #1257

NOTES [60 words]: Bodleian, Harding B 17(120b)[some words illegible], "The Handsome Chambermaid" ("Not far from town a country squire"), J. Pitts (London), 1802-1819; also Harding B 11(3151), Firth c.18(288), Johnson Ballads 2771, Johnson Ballads 2772, 2806 c.16*(93), "The Pretty Chambermaid"; Harding B 11(1455), Harding B 25(792)[some lines illegible], "The Handsome Chambermaid"
Squire and the Gipsy, The DESCRIPTION: A squire meets a Gypsy. He forgets his upbringing, swearing he'll marry her. She offers to tell his fortune; he tells her he knows it: she's to be his bride. She asks if he's trying to insult her; there's more honesty in the lowly than the aristocracy
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1953 (recorded from Harry Cox)
LONG DESCRIPTION: A young squire, straying alone in the countryside, meets a lovely Gypsy lass. He forgets his upbringing, swearing he'll marry her. She offers to tell his fortune; he tells her he already knows it: she is to be his bride. She asks if he's trying to insult her with his "grand proposal", saying she lives a light-hearted and contented life, and that there's more honesty in the poor and lowly than in the aristocracy
KEYWORDS: poverty pride courting love marriage rejection beauty lover Gypsy
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 355, "The Squire and the Gypsy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1628
RECORDINGS:
Harry Cox, "The Squire and the Gypsy" (on HCox01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Laird o Cockpen" (theme)
cf. "The Weaver's Daughter" (theme)
File: K355

Squire Boys, The
DESCRIPTION: "On the eighteenth day of December in the year of ninety-five, Them dates I will remember as long as I'm alive." The singer talks mostly of the troubles and bad weather encountered by teamsters on the way to the camp, but also alludes to the men there
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (Fowke)
KEYWORDS: logger travel lumbering storm
FOUND IN: Canada(Ont)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fowke-LumberingSongsFromTheNorthernWoods #22, "The Squire Boys" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4362
File: FowL22

Squire Curtis
DESCRIPTION: Squire Curtis kills his wife -- no motive is given -- and buries her in the woods. Arriving home he is told that she preceded him and is waiting. He claims that is a lie: she is dead in the woods. A party finds the body. Curtis confesses and is hanged.
AUTHOR: William Allingham (source: Allingham, _Songs, Ballads and Stories_)
EARLIEST DATE: 1868 (Saint Pauls)
KEYWORDS: execution homicide burial husband wife ghost
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople, pp. 239-241, "Squire Curtis" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Anthony Trollope, editor, Saint Pauls, A Monthly Magazine (1868 ("Digitized by Google")), Vol. II, pp. 77-78, "The Ballad of Squire Curtis" (1 text)
Roud #4741
File: ReSh239
SS Leinster Lass, The
DESCRIPTION: The singer wanders by the Clyde when the Leinster Lass comes into view. The singer boasts of the ship, its crew, its band, its flag. He wishes success to ship and crew
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: nonballad ship
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H808, p. 98, "The S[team]s[hip] Leinster Lass" (1 text, 1 tune)
McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen 46, "The Leinster Lass" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13367
NOTES [51 words]: Lani Herrmann notes the oddity of a steamship being called upon to "reef and steer." This occurs in the final verse, which also seems to show a change in perspective (from an onlooker on the shore to, apparently, a crewmember). One must suspect this verse is intrusive. Not unusual in songs of this type. - RBW
File: HHH808

St Peter Down at Courland Bay
DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "St. Peter, St. Peter, down at Courland Bay." I'm going to St Peter's Day. Fishermen get together. The water is fresh and we "feel fresh and gay."
AUTHOR: unknown
KEYWORDS: fishing shore party
FOUND IN: West Indies(Tobago)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Abrahams-DeepTheWaterShallowTheShore, pp. 29-30, "St Peter Down at Courland Bay" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [64 words]: Abrahams gives this as an example of the call-response songs improvised on the Tobago beach on Fishermen's Fete, St Peter's Day, June 29. "They commonly sing of the beauties of the fete, using a traditional tune but introducing topical subjects and an appropriate chorus line.... Singing and dancing in a group are the prevalent forms of ceremonial entertainment in the community." - BS
Last updated in version 4.0
File: AWIS029

St Peter's Fair
DESCRIPTION: She asks if he remembers -- she won't tell -- what they did coming from St Peter's Fair. He says if she'll marry him he'll buy her a spinning wheel and they'll sit by the fireside, not wanting for "milk nor meal"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2)
KEYWORDS: love marriage sex food dialog nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 156, "St Peter's Fair" (1 text)
Roud #15112
File: LyCr2156

St. Croix's Long and Winding Shores
DESCRIPTION: Jim Tombs is on the run "from his cruel foes." Gillis "like a beast of prey," finds and kills him. A passing good Samaritan tries but fails to save Tombs. "Gillis is gone, his victory won"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Ives-FolksongsFromMaine)
St. Patrick, The

DESCRIPTION: "The Mail Boat, Paddy, ... now lies in the sea"; a German Bomber sinks her. Captain Fardy says "All hands try your lives to save" and goes down with the ship. The survivors "risked their precious lives, their shipmates to rescue." Twenty-three are lost.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1943 (Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast)

KEYWORDS: drowning sea ship wreck sailor war

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Jun 13, 1941: World War II. The ferry St Patrick is attacked and sunk by a German dive bomber; Captain and 23 lost. (source: Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast; Bourke in _Shipwrecks of the Irish Coast_ v1, p. 69)

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast, pp. 96-97, "The St Patrick" (1 text)

Roud #20536

File: Ran096

St. Patrick's Day

DESCRIPTION: The singer met James on St. Patrick's day. "My friends and my parents... False stories they told to my true love To banish me out of his mind." "Now he is crossing the ocean." She prays to meet him again on St. Patrick's Day.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA-Leach)

KEYWORDS: courting love lie rejection separation travel family friend

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

Roud #18236

RECORDINGS:
Cyril O'Brien, "St. Patrick's Day" (on MUNFLA-Leach)

File: ML3StPaD

Stable Lad, The

DESCRIPTION: "When Cobb and Co. ran coaches from the Buller to the Grey, I went for a livery stable lad in a halt down Westport way" and loves a red-haired dancer at the European tavern. He hopes to earn enough marry her. But she dies and is buried in Charleston.

AUTHOR: Words: Peter Cape / Music: Phil Garland

EARLIEST DATE: 1982 (recording, Graham Wilson)

KEYWORDS: horse worker love courting dancing death burial separation

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, pp. 87, 228, "(The Stable Lad)" (1 text plus an excerpt)

NOTES [458 words]: This is not, to my knowledge, traditional in New Zealand. But it arguably is traditional "worldwide" -- because I learned it in Richfield, Minnesota, from another Minnesotan who had learned it while visiting New Zealand. Only later did I find it on record, and I'm not sure my source ever heard a recording of it, either. A weak foothold in tradition, to be sure. But it is an absolutely terrific song -- a sorrowful but skilled lyric with a sad but beautiful tune. I'm hoping that it will survive.

Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, pp. 227-228, tells a funny story about this. Peter Cape originally wrote it as a poem, "The Stable Boy." Someone copied it down; this copy ended up in the hands of Elsie Locke. Phil Garland found it in her collection, liked it, and decided to set it to music, changing the title to "The Stable Lad" as he did. He recorded it without talking to Peter Cape, whom he did not then know. Cape heard the song on the radio and thought, "By jove that sounds familiar. I wonder if I wrote that." So Cape called the radio station and asked if he wrote his own song! Fortunately, Cape liked what Garland had done with his text. (As he should have.) They eventually met, and Garland reports that he treasured the moment.

Incidentally, the version recorded by Gordon Bok gets it wrong in several particulars (including errors in the tune); it loses a little along the way, but it's more evidence of oral transmission.

It turns out that there are several errors in the song, including in the first line. The road from Buller to the Greyouth, on the west coast of New Zealand's South Island, was not completed until 1929, so Cobb and Co. (an Australian coach company) never did run coaches on it; the company had gone out of business half a decade before that (according to Gordon Ell, Kiwiosities: An A-Z of New Zealand traditions & Folklore, New Holland Publishers, 2008, p. 46, the last coach in New Zealand ran in 1923). But the Buller and Grey rivers were of course still there, and Westport, Charleston, Murchison, and Greyouth were real towns, and so was the European Hotel (there is a photo in Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ), which lasted from the 1860s to the 1960s -- by which time the town of Charleston, no longer sustained by mining, had disappeared. (Google Maps still shows a "Charleston European Pub," but it's an obviously modern building. There are a few houses labeled "Charleston," too, but not really the old town.)

The line in the fifth verse about tak(ing) his "girl up on the box" has real significance. Ell, p. 56, says that "Passengers vied to sit on the 'box seat' beside the driver." By taking his girl up there, he was both giving her the place of honor and possibly giving up some money as well. - RBW

Stagolee (Stackerlee) [Laws I15]

DESCRIPTION: Stagolee and Billy Lyons are playing cards; Lyons wins the hand and the stakes. An angry Stagolee shoots Lyons, is arrested, sentenced, and hanged. The various versions of the ballad expand on different parts of the story.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1903

KEYWORDS: homicide gambling prison execution

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

Mar 16, 1865 - Birth of Lee Shelton/Sheldon ("Stack Lee")

Dec 26, 1895 - "Stack" Lee murders William Lyons

Mar 11, 1912 - Death of "Stack" Lee

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,So,SE,SW)

REFERENCES (21 citations):

Laws I15, "Stagolee (Stackerlee)"

Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 765-766, "Stagolee" (2 texts)

Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 381, "Stagolee (Stackerlee)" (2 texts)

Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 149-154, "Stackolee" (2 texts, 1 tune)

McNeil-SouthernFolkBalladsVol1, pp. 66-68, "Stagolee" (1 text, 1 tune)

Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, pp. 104-105, "Stagolee Was a Bully" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, pp. 92-93, "Stackolee" (2 texts)

Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 306, "Stagolee" (1 text, 1 tune)

Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 93-99, "Stagolee" (2 texts, 1 tune)

Dunson/Raim/Asch-AnthologyOfAmericanFolkMusic, p. 54 "Stackalee" (1 text, 1 tune)

Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, pp. 131-133, "Stackalee" (1 text)

Seeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 51, "Stagolee" (1 text, 1 tune)

Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 78-79, "(Stagolee)" (assorted fragments)

Wheeler-SteamboatinDays, pp. 100-102, "Stacker Lee #2" (1 text, 1 tune); also perhaps pp. 102-103, "Stacker Lee #3" (1 text, 1 tune, with references to Stacker Lee though the plot elements seem to have disappeared)
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 202-203, "(Stackalee)" (1 text)
Finger-FrontierBallads, pp. 91-93, "Stackerlee" (1 text)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, p. 377, "Stagolee" (1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 243-244, "Stackerlee" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 198, "Stagolee" (1 text)

DT 663, STAGLEE STAGLEE2 STAGLEE3*  ADDITIONAL: Paul Oliver, _Songsters & Saints: Vocal Traditions on Race Records_, Cambridge University Press, 1984, p. 239, "(Stack O'Lee)" (1 text with variant stanzas)  Roud #4183

RECORDINGS:
Archibald, "Stack-A-Lee Pt. 1" (Imperial 5068, 1950) (Pt. 2 is instrumental)
Senter Boyd [or Boyd Senter] "Original Stack O'Lee Blues" (OKeh 41115, 1928; Vocalion 03015, 1935)
Cab Calloway & his Orchestra, "Stack O'Lee Blues" (Banner 32378, 1932; rec. 1931)
John Cephas & Phil Wiggins, "Staggerlee (Stagolee)" (on ClassAfrAm)
Johnny Dodds, "Stack O'Lee Blues" (Decca 1676, 1938)
Cliff Edwards ('Ukulele Ike'), "Stack O'Lee, Part 1/Part2" (Columbia 1551-D, 1928; Columbia 1820-D, 1929; Clarion 5449-C/Harmony 1408-H/Velvet Tone 2509, 1932; Vocalion 03324, 1936)
Tennessee Ernie Ford w. Joe "Fingers" Carr, "Stack-O-Lee" (Capitol 1348 or 1349, c. 1951)
Fruit Jar Guzzlers, "Stack-O-Lee" (Paramount 3121/Broadway 8199, 1928; on RoughWays1, StuffDreams2)
Vera Hall, "Stagolee" (AFS 1323 A2, 1937)
Sol Hoopee Novelty Trio, "Stack O'Lee Blues" (Columbia 797-D, 1926) (Decca 2241, 1938) [instrumental versions of Cliff Edwards version]
Ivory Joe Hunter, "Stackolee" (AFS CYL-8, 1933)
Mississippi John Hurt, "Stack O'Lee Blues" (OKeh 8654, 1929; rec. 1928; on MJHurt01, MJHurt02); "Stackolee" (on MJHurt04)
Frank Hutchison, "Stackalee" (OKeh 45106, 1927; on AAFM1, GoodForWhatAilsYou)
Wallace "Pine Top" Johnson and Maudie Shirley with Jasper Love, "Stackalee and Billy Lyons" (on USMississippi01)
King Queen and Jack, "Stack-O-Lee Blues" (Gennett 6633/Champion 15605, 1928; Champion 40014, 1935)
Furry Lewis, "Billy Lyons and Stack O'Lee" (Vocalion 1132/Brunswick 80092, 1927; on StuffDreams2)
David Miller, "That Bad Man Stackolee" (Champion 15334/Herwin 75564/Challenge 327 [as Dan Kutter], 1927; on RoughWays2)
Uncle John Patterson & James Patterson, "Stagolee Was a Bully" (on FolkVisions2)
Wilson Pickett, "Stagger Lee" (Atlantic 45-2448, 1968)
Lloyd Price, "Stagger Lee" (Sparton 679-R, 1958)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Stackerlee" (on NLCR04)
[Gertrude] "Ma" Rainey, "Stack O'Lee Blues" (Paramount 12357, 1926 [rec. 1925])
Clive Reed, "Original Stack O'Lee Blues" (Black Patti 8030, 1927; on StuffDreams1 [as Long 'Clev' Reed & Little Harvey Hull])
Pete Seeger, "Stagolee" (on PeteSeeger18)
Will Starks, "Stackerlee" (AFS 6652 B2, 1942)
Art Thieme, "Stackerlee" (on Thiem05)
Evelyn Thompson, "Stack O'Lee Blues" (Vocalion 1083, 1927)
Waring's Pennsylvanians, "Stack O'Lee Blues" (Victor 19189, 1923)
Washingtonians, "Stack O'Lee Blues" (Harmony 601-H, 1928)
Frank Westphal & his Orchestra, "Stack O'Lee Blues" (Columbia 32-D, 1924; rec. 1923)
Herb Wiedoeft's Cinderella Orchestra, "Stack O'Lee Blues" (Brunswick 2660, 1924)

SAME TUNE:
Frank Hutchison, "Stackalee No. 2" (OKeh 45106, 1927)
NOTES [1903 words]: On Dec. 29, 1895, William Lyons (levee hand) and Lee Sheldon (coach driver, nicknamed "Stag" Lee) were drinking together at a tavern in St. Louis, Missouri. A political discussion began; in the heat of the argument Lyons knocked off Sheldon's hat, and Sheldon promptly pulled a pistol and shot him dead. He was arrested and tried; the first trial ended in a hung jury, but he was convicted in a second trial and served time in prison, dying in 1916. A St. Louis judge who has researched the case suggests that Sheldon had received a spell from a hoodoo woman giving him exceptional sexual potency. The talisman for that spell was his hat, so knocking it from his head was no ordinary insult.
It is noteworthy that the first recordings of this ballad (Waring, Westphal, Wiedoeft) are by popular dance bands, not blues or hillbilly artists. - PJS Polenberg's account is on pp. 28-37; it is easily accessible account and readable. It includes the death certificate of William Lyons. Brown, p. 24, also shows the death certificate -- which, interestingly, is not signed by the undertaker.

It appears that the usual spelling of "Stack" Lee's last name was "Shelton," not "Sheldon"; this is the spelling on both the Lyons death certificate and on Shelton's death certificate (shown on p. 35 of Brown). It's not clear how he got the nickname "Stack" -- or how this was distorted to "Stag," or indeed which nickname came first in song (although a newspaper referred to him as "Stag" Lee as early as December 1895; Brown, p. 102. But the name "Stack" Lee was also in use at this time.) Oliver, p. 238, says, "The origins of the Stack O'Lee narratives and ballads are unclear.... The original Stacker Lee was the son of Jim Lee, founder in 1866 of he celebrated Lee Line of riverboats on the Mississippi. im Lee named his boats after his sons, so that Stacker Lee was also the name of the third of a fleet that eventually, by the turn of the century, numbered fourteen. Stacker Lee had been a cavalryman in the Confederate Army who fathered several sons of young black women, one of whom, according to Shields McIlwaine, was 'a short black fellow, a cabin bow on the Anchor Line . . . a black with a bad eye' and a killer, Stack Lee." But this hardly matches "Stack" Lee and the Billy Lyons murder.

Brown seeks symbolic meaning in the name. On p. 83, he mentions a possibility that Shelton belonged to a Black political organization (Democratic) called the "Stags," although he mentions both the riverboat and an alleged riverboat captain called "Stack Lee" (Brown, pp. 44-45) -- and "Stack" Lee might also mean someone who "stacked" a deck of cards (Brown, p. 103). The Stack Lee was one of the Lee Line of riverboats, which had a reputation for encouraging illicit sex (Brown, p. 45), so the nickname might either explain, or be explained by, "Stack" Lee's reputation as a pimp. Indeed, Brown, p. 36, compares it to the often-sexual pseudonyms adopted by rappers.

That's "if" Shelton was a pimp. Polenberg's only mention of Shelton's sexual prowess is a statement that he "may have been a pimp" (note the conditional). The story that he was a pimp may have arisen because he managed a "lid club," which is sometimes associated with prostitution (Brown, p. 38). Most of the few records about his work report him to have been a waiter or carriage driver or the like. Brown, p. 39, suggests that he often drove clients to brothels, and that his lid club perhaps helped manage prostitutes, but that isn't quite the same as being a pimp. Nonetheless, Brown, pp. 46-47, clearly regards him as a pimp and even describes the spaces he provided to the girls. He also suggests, p. 48, that Lee was popular and famous because he supplied them with a place to stay and work at a time when most Black prostitutes had to walk the streets.

He was small (apparently only about 120 pounds, based on Brown, p. 35, and five feet, seven and a half inches tall, according to Brown, p. 38) but exercised a lot (Brown, p. 43, says he was a member of the Four Hundred Club, which was organized "for the moral and physical culture of young colored men"). His left eye is said to have been crossed.

Ironically, witnesses reported that Shelton and Lyons were good friends and had never been known to fight before (Brown, p. 29). It sounds to me as if something might have been affecting Shelton's mental health and making him more combative at this time; having managed to post bond for the murder charge, there is a report he had to post bond for something else in June (Brown, p. 31).

There seems to be no question but that he killed Billy Lyons, but there was genuine dispute about whether he was provoked, and how; Henry Crump, who was present at the murder, gave conflicting testimony. Lee's first trial resulted in a hung jury (although the majority wanted to convict on either murder or manslaughter charges; Brown, p. 33); the lawyer who got him off, Nat Dryden, is mentioned in some of the Stagolee texts (Brown, p. 34). But Dryden was dead before Shelton's second trial, which resulted in a quick conviction. Lee was sentenced to 25 years in prison (and I leave it to you to guess what a prison block for black inmates was like in Missouri circa 1900. We know that he was at least once subjected to five lashes; Brown, p. 34).

You'd think a black man convicted of murder would be locked up and forgotten. But there were many appeals by local citizens for some sort of clemency. On November 25, 1909, he was given a conditional pardon (the condition being, naturally, that he stay clean). He failed to do so, beating and robbing a man in January 1911 (Brown, p. 35). He was promptly returned to prison, where the tuberculosis he had contracted in his first stay quickly turned terminal. He was given a medical parole in February 1912 but soon died.

Billy Lyons, according to Brown, p. 60, was born in Missouri in 1864. Brown, p. 61, has a (very poor) photo of his three children, although p. 61 says that he was not married. The three children are mentioned in some versions of the song, although often this is changed to two children.

A recent article discussing how the community viewed Stagolee is Jim Hauser's piece "Stagolee and John Henry: Two Black Freedom Songs?"; it is available at http://theafricanamericanfolklorist.com/2020/11/29/twoblackfreedomsongs/. Hauser offers an interesting opinion: "[C]onsidering the symbolic nature of the Stetson to African Americans, it's likely that many of them would have imagined Stagolee to be a black man and Billy a white man." I had not thought of this myself, but I consider it a very interesting point and recommend the discussion.

Carl Sandburg, incidentally, enjoyed this song so much that he occasionally signed letters "Stackerlee"; see Mitgang, p. 230.

According to Brown, pp. 1-18, the song and legend became a cultural phenomenon in the Black community. Black boys wanted to grow up to be Stagolee -- and to emulate his toughness and his reputed sexual prowess. This even though most of them had no information about who Stagolee was; it was long before anyone, including folklorists, connected Lee Shelton with Stagolee. The speed with which Stagolee became legend is simply amazing. On p. 122, Brown suggests that this was because the song was carried by Blacks working on riverboats.

Oliver, while not going as far as Brown, but does say "Stack O'Lee was a bad man, a ruthless killer, but in the songs he was regarded with awe, and a certain detachment" (p. 238). I'm not sure I buy all of Brown's conclusions (in fact, I'm sure I don't buy them), but it really does seem as if Stagolee was a cultural phenomenon that simply isn't understood by the White community.

Brown describes the Stagolee legend as contributing to the rise of rap music, and it certainly sounds as if Shelton was fond of what we would now call "bling"; Brown, p. 23, describes him at the time of the Lyons shooting: he was wearing gold rings, using a gold-headed cane; he had mirrors on his shoes. I'm not sure I believe this, but it shows how the legend viewed him. And he did have the money to hire a fairly fancy lawyer (Brown, p. 26).

One wonders if all "Stagolee" songs are really the same. The first recorded version, Ma Rainey's (1923) is really just "Frankie and Johnny" with new words (Brown, pp. 144-145; Oliver, p. 241, thinks Rainey confused the two songs). The variation in versions is great; Brown, p. 69, says that "Stagolee has assumed at least seven 'subtype' forms throughout his evolution." Brown, pp. 105-106, has a report that the original Stagolee song was played in a slow ragtime tempo, and says that in the opinion of John David, it was ragtime pianist Tom Turpin (yes, Philip Jose Farmer fans, the guy from the "Riverworld" sequence) who created the first version of the song, based on "The Bully of the Town" [Laws I14]. Brown, p. 109, suggests that it was ragtime which converted "Stack Lee" to "Stack-a-Lee"; it's based on the ragtime habit of inserting a vowel syllable into words, e.g. "walk-a-ing" or the like.

Brown also comments on the significant of the Stetson hat (whereas Billy Lyons is sometimes said to have worn a derby). Brown cites sources (including Louis Armstrong) stating that, up to at least World War I, "the Stetson was a symbol of power and status among black males." He also claims (p. 144) that it wasn't just your standard cowboy hat; it is "the specially made Stetson that the macks wore in St. Louis." Thus it was particularly significant that Lyons went after Shelton's hat. Not every account links Shelton's hat with his alleged sexual potency. In a legend from Chicago, Shelton had sold his hat to the Devil for a hat that would always let him win at gambling. The legend further claimed that if Shelton lost his hat, he would lose his self-control (Brown says "head") also, resulting in his murder of Lyons (Brown, pp. 104-105).

There are a number of errors in various versions of this song. Some, according to Brown, p. 32, go back to the earliest newspaper reports on Lee's trial -- e.g. the July 14, 1896 Saint Louis Globe-Democrat claimed Lee and Lyons were shooting craps, which they were not, and said that Lyons died at once, which he did not. The judge's name was Harvey, not (e.g.) "Murphy." - RBW From David Evans's liner notes to USMississippi01} "Maudie Shirley sings a version of a traditional ballad, 'Stackalee and Billy Lyons,' that originated in the late nineteenth century but her performance is influenced by one of several versions recorded in more recent years by Archibald (1950), Lloyd Price (1958), or Wilson Pickett (1967), all of them hits on the R&B charts." The Maudie Shirley vocal follows the Lloyd Price/Wilson Pickett version. - BS

Brown, p. 143, says that Bob Dylan's 1993 version was inspired by Frank Hutchinson's. - RBW

Bibliography
Stamford Bullards, The

DESCRIPTION: The song invites "bonny boys who love to bait the bonny bull" to join in the chase and even mount the bull. "Take him by the tail ... bridge him if you can, prog him with a nail... Every man must do his best to bait the bull in Stamford."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart2)

KEYWORDS: farming sports ritual nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart2 49, "The Stamford Bullards" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #23378

NOTES [76 words]: OShaughnessy-YellowbellyBalladsPart2: "Every year, on November 13, a bull was publicly chased through the streets of Stamford and, if possible, 'bridged,' i.e., tumbled over the parapet of the town bridge and into the River Welland.... The bull was [finally] slaughtered and its flesh sold cheaply. If however, the animal proved itself 'a beast of spirit'... the bullards [chasers] spared its life." "The last bull-running in Stamford took place in 1839." - BS

Last updated in version 3.0

File: 0SY249

Stampede, The

DESCRIPTION: "When the hot sun smiles on the endless miles..." the cowboys seek water, and find themselves fighting with a "nester" for his well. They spare him only because of his pretty girl. When a storm and stampede start, Texas Red saves the girl.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934

KEYWORDS: cowboy storm rescue recitation

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 392-395, "The Stampede" (1 text)

Roud #12710

NOTES [22 words]: There is no evidence that this piece (first published in Wild West Weekly) was ever a song, or that it ever entered tradition. - RBW

File: 1xA392

Stand By Me

DESCRIPTION: When the storms of life are raging, stand by me (stand by me) (x2), When the world is tossing me, like a storm upon the sea, Thou who rulest wind and water, stand by me." "In the midst of tribulation, stand...." "When I'm growing old and feeble...."

AUTHOR: Charles Albert Tindley (died 1933) (Source; Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit)

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (date of composition, according to Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad storm

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit, pp. 171-172, "Stand By Me" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #21788?

File: WaSp171
Stand in the Rain

DESCRIPTION: "The bubbles on the beer keep haunting me, Every time I have a drink I'm as happy as can be... Won't you come and have a drink we me? Cause I'll never let you Stand in the rain.... I'll hold you tenderly Here in my arms... I'll never let you go"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1947, according to Cleveland-NZ-GreatNewZealandSongbook
KEYWORDS: drink love nonballad
FOUND IN: New Zealand
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cleveland-NZ-GreatNewZealandSongbook, pp. 20-21, "Stand in the Rain" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: Clev020

Stand On a Sea of Glass

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "O this union, Sing this union, I love this union, Stand on a sea of glass."
Alternate lines in verses are "Stand on a sea of glass." Verses have Satan failing to take the singer's soul, and Jesus shaking "the manna tree" for you and me.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Barton-OldPlantationHymns)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus Devil floating verses Bible
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Barton-OldPlantationHymns, p. 28, "Stand On a Sea of Glass" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Oh! Jerusalem" ("sea of glass" theme)
NOTES [533 words]: Barton-OldPlantationHymns uses "Stand on a Sea of Glass," with its "this Union" chorus, as a likely example of a hymn with a Civil War "army origin."
This is likely; the King James Bible never uses the word "union," although there are a few references to "unity." I could argue that the word usually translated "brotherhood" should properly be translated "union" or "fellowship," but it's unlikely the hymn-writer had the Greek to know that. The Greek word translated "glass," and a related word, occur only in these verses of the Apocalypse cited below and in 21:18-21. There are other references to "glass" in both the New Testament and Hebrew Bible, but they come from different roots. - RBW
The "sea of glass" is cited on Revelation 4:2-10 ["And immediately I was in the spirit: and behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne... And out of the throne proceeded lightenings and thunderings and voices: and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are the seven Spirits of God. And before the throne there was a sea of glass like unto crystal: and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, were four beasts full of eyes before and behind.... The four and twenty elders fall down before him that sat on the throne ...."] and 15:1-2 ["And I saw another sign in heaven, great and marvellous, seven angels having the seven last plagues; for in them is filled up the wrath of God. And I saw as it were a sea of glass mingled with fire: and them that had gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his number, stand on the sea of glass, having the harps of God."] [King James]
A pre-Civil War hymn that refers to Revelation 4:2-10 is Shaffer #97 ("My soul, come meditate the day") which has, "before a throne a sea of glass ... Four beasts, and elders twenty-four, Fall down before the throne" [Rev. Stephen D. Shaffer, Pilgrim Songster (Zanesville: Shaffer, 1848 ("Digitized by the Internet Archive")), pp. 166-168]
Marsh has a hymn that, in passing, refers to Revelation 15:1-2: "Behold I stand on the sea of glass, The sea of glass all mingled with fire" [J.B.T. Marsh, The Story of the Jubilee Singers Including Their Songs (London: Hodder and Stoughton, 1903 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), #130 p. 301, "Humble Yourself, The Bell Done Rung"]. Booth has a judgment day hymn that also refers to Revelation 15:1-2: "Then on a sea of glass shall stand King Jesus, with His conquering band, Safe-housed above the fire" [William Booth, Salvation Army Songs (London: The Salvation Army Book Department, 1911 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), #157 pp. 108-109, ("Rejoice, ye saints, the time draws near")].
Barton-OldPlantationHymns's text refers directly to neither verse but seems to draw on the phrase for its apocalyptic imagery in war time. The verses are not connected to Revelation and include the floater, "Tallest tree in Paradise, Christian calls it the tree of life."
Where I have "this union" Barton-OldPlantationHymns has "dis union," and maybe "disunion" is what was intended. See abolitionist William Lloyd Garrison's article "Disunion" in June 15, 1855
The Liberator. - BS

File: Bart028

Stand to Your Glasses, Steady

DESCRIPTION: "We meet 'neath the sounding rafters," "Cut off from the land that bore us... All the good men have gone before us, And only the dull left behind." "So stand to your glasses... Here's a toast to the dead already, And hurrah for the next man who dies"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead)

KEYWORDS: death soldier nonballad

FOUND IN: Canada

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, p. 120, "Stand to Your Glasses, Steady" (1 text)

Roud #29422

NOTES [32 words]: This is one of the few pieces in Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead which neither has a tune nor a tune reference; I suspect it is a toast rather than a song, although it may be traditional. - RBW

File: Hopk120A

Stand Up and Sing

DESCRIPTION: "Michael McCoy takes the greatest of joy in the songs of long ago." His daughter Mary sings current songs he hates "about moon and spoon and June." He asks her to "sing for your father An old tune" like "Annie Rooney"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA/Leach)

KEYWORDS: request music nonballad father

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

Roud #18240

RECORDINGS:
Vince Ledwell, "Stand Up and Sing" (on MUNFLA/Leach)

File: RcStUpSi

Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus

DESCRIPTION: "Stand up for Jesus, soldiers of the cross." The battle will soon be followed by victory and eternal life with "the King of glory."

AUTHOR: George Duffield (words); George J. Webb (music) (source: Date) (see NOTES)

EARLIEST DATE: 1858 ("The Psalmist," according to William Reynolds, _Companion to Baptist Hymnal_, Broadman Press, 1976, p. 201)

KEYWORDS: battle nonballad religious Jesus

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Henry Date, Pentecostal Hymns Nos. 1 and 2 Combined (Chicago: Hope Publishing Company, 1898 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")) #264 p. 207, "Glory to His Name" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
Rosa and Joseph Murray, "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus" (on USSealsland03)

SAME TUNE:
Stand Up for Prohibition ("Stand up for prohibition, Ye patriots of the land") (Anna Adams Gordon,

NOTES [253 words]: According to Reynolds, p. 201, George Duffield Jr. reported that "'Stand up for Jesus' was the dying message of the Rev. Dudley A. Tyng, to the Young Men's Christian Association, and the ministers associated with them in the Noon-Day Prayer Meeting during the great revival of 1858" in Philadelphia, who had suffered a fatal arm injury in a milling accident.
Rudin, pp. 52-53, briefly describes this Tyng in glowing terms, but reading between the lines, he sounds like a crank (although with positive ideas about church union and against slavery); his own congregation forced him out, causing him to form a separate church.

Reynolds does not agree with Date as to the authorship of the tune; he reports, "GEIBEL... was composed by Adam Geibel for this hymn, and it first appeared in his Uplift Voices... 1901... using the first four lines of the first stanza and the refrain. But since Date published the song before Geibel wrote his tune, I've allowed Date's attribution to Webb to stand; my guess is that both of them wrote tunes. And on p. 455, Reynolds credits Webb with having something to do with the song. He further reports that Webb was born in Wiltshire, England, in 1803, and died in New Jersey in 1887. He emigrated to the United States in 1830, and spent forty years as a church organist and music teacher in Boston.

Rudin, p. 54, seems to confirm this, saying that the tune "Webb" was composed for the text "'Tis Dawn, the Lark is Singing," and implies that Duffield's text has had multiple tunes. - RBW

Bibliography

- Rudin: Cecilia Margaret Rudin, Stories of Hymns We Love, John Rudin & Company, 1934 (I use the fourteenth printing of 1951)

Last updated in version 6.1

File: RsSUSTfJ

Stand, Boys, Stand

DESCRIPTION: "Stan', boys, stan', Dah's now no use a-runnin', Use a-runnin'. Look up on yondah hill An' see ol' massa comin', Massa comin', See 'im comin'.' "Bowie knife in one hand An' pistol in de tother.' "Oberseer wid his stick... Ruckus bound to happen."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: work slave
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 232, (no title) (1 text)
NOTES [25 words]: Reportedly a song sung by a Black work gang when they had been caught idling. They reportedly covered by having one of their number feign illness. - RBW

File: ScNF232A

Standin' on the Walls of Zion

DESCRIPTION: "Then it's a hooraw, and a hooraw, Through the merry green fields, hooraw! Standin' on the walls of Zion, Zion, See my ship come sailin', sailin', Standin' on the walls of Zion, See my ship come sailing home."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 484, "Standin' on the Walls of Zion" (1 short text, 1 tune)

File: San484

Standing in the Need of Prayer

DESCRIPTION: "It's me, Oh Lord, standing in the need of prayer." "Not my mother, not my father, but it's me, Oh Lord, sanding in the need of prayer." "Not my brother, not my sister, but its me...." (Others whom it is not may be listed as desired)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (recording, Elkins-Payne Jubilee Singers)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE) Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Standing in the Safety Zone

DESCRIPTION: "I'm standing in the safety zone, sometimes I have to stand alone ... If you want to get to heaven you'd better stand in the safety zone." "How well do I remember, a long long time ago ..." where different versions remember different things.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (recording, Southern Harps)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus

FOUND IN: US(SE)

Roud #10986

RECORDINGS:

Professor Johnson and his Gospel Singers, "Standing in the Safety Zone" (1957, on "Professor Johnson and his Gospel Singers," Brunswick OE 9352)

Southern Harps, "Standing in the Safety Zone" (King 4221, 1947)

Bright Stars, "Standing in the Safety Zone" (Nashboro N 732, 1962)

Lovey Williams, "I'm Standing In the Safety Zone" (on USMississippi01)

NOTES [35 words]: The sound of "Standing in the Safety Zone" on USMississippi01 is closer to Blind Willie Johnson's "Praise God I'm Satisfied" than to any of the recordings I've listed here for "Standing in the Safety Zone." - BS

Last updated in version 5.2

File: RcStSaZo

Standing on the Promises

DESCRIPTION: "Standing on the promises of Christ my King, Through eternal ages let his praises ring, Glory in the highest I will shoul an sing, Standing on the promises of God." The singer declares, in various ways, the power of Biblical promises

AUTHOR: R. Kelso Carter (1849-1926)

EARLIEST DATE: 1885 (composed, according to Johnson; published 1886 and Sweney and Carter, _Songs of Perfect Love_, according to William Reynolds, _Companion to Baptist Hymnal_, Broadman Press, 1976, p. 202)

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Charles Johnson, One Hundred and One Famous Hymns (Hallberg, 1982), pp. 202-203, "Standing on the Promises" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #18551
NOTES [125 words]: Though hardly original in idea, this particular hymn has a very simple, easy-to-learn set of parts in the chorus, and seems to be very popular with amateur gospel groups. I'm a bit surprised it isn't more common in tradition.

According to William Reynolds, Companion to Baptist Hymnal, Broadman Press, 1976, p. 278, Russell Kelso Carter graduated from high school (Pennsylvania Military Academy) in 1867, where he was noted as an athlete; soon after, he became an instructor at the school. He seems to have been restless, travelling to California for a while, and giving up teaching in 1887 to become a minister. Later, he went into medicine. Most of his hymns were published in 1891; this seems to be the only one to have achieved any popularity. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1
File: BdSotPro

Standing Stones, The

DESCRIPTION: Two lovers meet at the Standing Stones and promise to wed. After she leaves, a rival stabs him to death, solely to cause the girl pain. She hears a cry, turns, and sees her beloved. He points to the stars and vanishes; she pines away and dies.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1883 (John Mooney's "Songs of the Norse")

LONG DESCRIPTION: In the Orkneys lives a beautiful young woman who has been loved since childhood by a young man. They meet at the Standing Stones and promise to wed, sealing the promise by joining their hands through a hole in the Lovers' Stone. He kisses her goodbye, watches her leave, then turns to go home, but a rival attacks him and stabs him to death, solely to cause the girl pain. She is arriving home when she hears a cry, turns, and sees her beloved standing near. He points to the stars and vanishes; knowing he is dead, she pines away and dies.

KEYWORDS: grief hate jealousy courting love promise violence crime homicide beauty death mourning ritual supernatural lover ghost

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Hebr))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 332, "The Standing Stones" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, STANSTON
Roud #2151

RECORDINGS:
John & Ethel Findlater, "The Standing Stones" (on FSB7)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Ploughboy's Dream" (tune)
cf. "The Maidenstone" (subject: the sculptured stones)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Lovers--A West Mainland Legend

NOTES [308 words]: The "Standing Stones" are prehistoric stone circles, found throughout Britain, including the Orkneys, where this song was collected. It was the custom in the Orkneys for lovers to plight their troth by joining hands through a hole in the "Odin Stone," then dividing a broken sixpenny piece between them. - PJS

References to Odin may seem odd in Scotland, but the Orkneys were largely settled by the Old Norse. I have not been able to find proof of this, but I believe "Odin stones" are so-called because they have a single hole representing Odin's single eye.

However, the Standing Stones would appear to predate the Norse legends. Magnusson, p. 6, describes the Standing Stones on the Isle of Lewis at Calanais (Callanish): "It was built in stages from about 3000 BC and was certainly completed by 2000 BC. Briefly, it is a circle of thirteen standing stones huddled round a massive central monolith, 4.75 metres high, and a small chambered cairn. A double line or 'avenue' of stones comes from the north, and ragged tongues protruding from the circle create a rough cruciform shape." Magnussen goes on to describe the partial rehabilitation of the site.

Other instances of stones with holes having a magical use are common. Alexander, p. 127, has a section on "Healing Stones," in particular he notes a case at Men-an-Tol, where children with rickets "were squeezed through the rough circular hole" to try to cure the disease. Opie/Tatem, p.
199, mention instances of the healing powers of holes in stone from 1754 to 1970, with rickets again being the disease most likely cured. (I can't help but think that it would be easier to squeeze through the hole if one wore relatively few clothes, and having few clothes would get you out in the sunlight to manufacture vitamin D. So maybe it actually worked -- but not for the reasons specified!) - RBW

Bibliography

- Opie/Tatem: Iona Opie and Moira Tatem, editors, A Dictionary of Superstitions, 1989 (I use the 1999 Barnes & Noble edition)

Last updated in version 2.7
File: K332

Star Light, Star Bright

DESCRIPTION: "Star light, star bright, First star I see tonight, (I) Wish I may, (I) wish I might Have the wish I wish tonight."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Henry, from Mrs. Henry C. Gray, or her maid), though it probably occurs earlier in Mother Goose collections
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,SE)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #430, p. 203, "(Star light, star bright)" (1 text)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 239, (no title) (1 short text)
Dolby-OrangesAndLemons, p. 178, "Star Light, Star Bright" (1 text)
Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, pp. 119-120, "(Starlight, star bright)" (1 text)
Roud #16339
NOTES [45 words]: Some time in my youth, I learned this with exactly the same words as occur in Henry (not the same as in Baring-Gould). So it has some sort of circulation. But I can't remember where I learned it; I have the strange feeling it was some Disney production or the like. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1
File: MHAp239B

Star o Banchory's Land, The

DESCRIPTION: "Banchory's lands are bonnie When spring rolls in the year Wi' lasses sweet and mony But nane saw sweet's my dear." He praises her -- but then sees her at the fair, where she ignores him. He wishes her back or hopes she will at least be true to another

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: love courting rejection
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #95, pp. 1-2, "The Star of Banchory's Land" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan4 707, "The Star o' Banchory's Lands" (6 texts, 4 tunes)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 69-71, "The Star o' Banchory's Land" (1 text)
Roud #5567
CROSS-REFERENCES:
Star of Bannack, The

DESCRIPTION: "Under the lamplight's flick'r'ing gleam, In the dirt of the dancehall floor, The beautiful star of Bannack lies, Never to shine no more." Having left a lover in the east, she turned heads in the west but at last "A bullet would find her there."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1958 (Burt-AmericanMurderBallads)
KEYWORDS: homicide dancing
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Apr 20, 1864 - Nellie Paget (birth name: Helen Patterson) murdered by a former flame in Bannack, Montana
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, pp. 53-54, "(The Star of Bannack)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, p. 560, "The Star of Babback" (1 text)
File: Burt053

Star of Donegal, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer sees a lad and lass discussing their parting. He is going to America to seek his fortune. She does not wish to part. He says the Irish will return to free Ireland. They decide to marry at once, and sail away together

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1912 (OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads)
KEYWORDS: love courting marriage emigration gold
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H555, p. 463, "The Star of Donegal" (1 text, 1 tune)
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 83, "The Star of Donegal" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2996
CROSS-REFERENCES:
File: HHH555

Star of Glenamoyle, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer asks the muses to preserve the star of sweet Glenamoyle as he praises her. Even the birds and rabbits praise her. He says that Joseph, had he been laboring to win her, would have felt it no toil; he would have sailed across the sea to wed her

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: love beauty nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H13, p. 232, "The Star of Glenamoyle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7985
NOTES [118 words]: The final verse of the Henry text contains some truly curious lines:
But had young Joseph received this fair one,
Her golden glory would have decayed away;
But had young Joseph received this fair one,
To win his bride would have been no toil.
I can only guess that the first two lines mean that the girl would not thrive outside Ireland. The latter two lines are clearer, though an obvious error. It was Joseph's father Jabob who worked seven years to win the hand of Rachel, and being cheated of Rachel once, worked another seven years to at last be allowed to marry her. And "Jacob served seven years for Rachel, and they seemed to him but a few days because of the love he had for her" (Genesis 29:20). - RBW

File: HHH013

Star of Glengary, The

DESCRIPTION: "The red moon is up o'er the moss-covered mountain." Donald goes to "Logan's bright water" to propose to "Mary, the star of Glengary," knowing his competition is the rich miller. She apparently accepts since she is "a gude wife to me."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1835 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3541))
KEYWORDS: courting wife river money
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 11, "The Star of Glengary" (1 text)
Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople, p. 234, "Logan's Bright Water" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2237, p. 150, "The Star of Glengarry" (1 reference)
Roud #13901

BROADSIDES:
LOCSheet, sm1877 08720, "The Star of Glengary", Spear & Dehnhoff (New York), 1877 (tune)
LOCSinging, as113120, "The Star of Glengary", J. Andrews (New York), 1853-1859; also sb40474a, "The Star of Glengarry"
Murray, Mu23-y1:075, "The Star of Glengary", James Lindsay (Glasgow), 19C
NLScotland, L.C.178.A.2(299), "The Star of Glengary", unknown, c.1860; also L.C.Fol.70(1a), "The Star of Glengarry"
NOTES [46 words]: LOCSheet, sm1877 08720: "composed by Charles W Pette" may refer to the arranger.

Last updated in version 3.5

File: OCon011

Star of Moville, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer sails to Moville to watch the races. Enlivened by whiskey, he meets Mary, "the star of Moville." He courts her, and buys her a drink. The girl, after spending some time, rejects him and goes home. He wishes that someone would bring her to him

AUTHOR: James McCurry
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: love courting racing rejection drink music
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H68, pp. 276-277, "The Star of Moville" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7968
NOTES [28 words]: A long and highly complex mix: Is it a boat-racing song, a courting song, a rejection song, a drinking song, a song of getting delayed along the shore? I'm not sure. - RBW

File: HHH068

Star of Slane, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer "was ruminating and meditating And contemplating" when he met a maid that would have captivated Paris, Caesar, and Alexander. Her beauty eclipses all others. "For me to woo her I am too poor, I'm deadly sure she won't be my wife"
AUTHOR: Day (c.1800-1866) (source: Sparling)
EARLIEST DATE: 1826 (a Drogheda chap-book, according to Sparling)
KEYWORDS: love beauty humorous nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (3 citations):
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 84, "The Star of Slane" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hayward-UlsterSongsAndBalladsOfTheTownAndCountry, pp. 107-108, "The Star of Slane" (1 text)
Roud #6530
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.8(270), "The Star of Slane" ("You brilliant muses, who ne'er refuses"), unknown, n.d.; alsoHarding B 11(3648), "The Star of Slane"
NOTES [64 words]: This is another song that hides the lover's name: "Her name to mention may cause contention And it's my intention for to breed no strife." See also "Craigane," "The Pride of Kilkee," "The Flower of Benbrada" and "Ar Eirinn Ni Neosfainn Ce hi (For Ireland I Will Not Tell Whom She Is)"; in "Drihaureen O Mo Chree (Little Brother of My Heart)" the singer's brother's name is hidden. - BS
File: OLcM084

Star of Sunday's Well, The DESCRIPTION: The singer loves "That consort fit for Satan, the Star of Sunday's Well." She weighs 15 stone [210 pounds]: "She's blooming and she's bonny with real estate and money." He is rejected in favor of "a grocer's curate"
AUTHOR: W.B. Guiney
EARLIEST DATE: 1870 (_The Cork Examiner,_ according to OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)
KEYWORDS: courting rejection humorous
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads, pp. 258-259, "The Star of Sunday's Well" (1 text, tune referenced)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Lamentation of Hugh Reynolds" [OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 64] (tune)
NOTES [5 words]: Sunday's Well is in Cork. - BS
File: OLcM258

Star of the County Down, The
DESCRIPTION: Near Banbridge town, the singer sees a "sweet colleen." He is instantly smitten with the beauty of "the star of the Country Down." He makes plans to pursue her, and dreams of life with her
AUTHOR: unknown (credited to Cathal McGarvey [1866-1927] by Colm O'Lochlainn)
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Irish Country Songs)
KEYWORDS: love courting clothes
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
DT, STARDOWN*
Roud #4801
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Dives and Lazarus" [Child 56] (tune)
cf. "When a Man's in Love" [Laws O20] (tune)
cf. "The Wreck of the Gwendoline" (tune)
cf. "The Colleen from Coolbaun" (tune)
SAME TUNE:
Dives and Lazarus (File: C056)
The Wreck of the Gwendoline (File: OLcM257)
The Banks of Newfoundland (I) (File: LK25) (File: LO20)
When a Man's in Love [Laws O20] (File: LO20)
Star Promenade

DESCRIPTION: "Six ladies to the center with the right hand crossed, Be careful that you don't get lost, Back to the left and don't be afraid, Pass your partner in the Star Promenade. My old girl went back on me, Just because I went to see, My old girl went away...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (Wolford-ThePlayPartyInIndiana)

KEYWORDS: love separation playparty nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Wolford-ThePlayPartyInIndiana, pp. 91-92=Wolford/Richmond/Tillson-PlayPartyInIndiana, pp. 163-165, "Star Promenade" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #7666

NOTES [37 words]: Roud lumps this with a large number of other playparties, typified by Randolph's "Ladies to the Center." Since they're all dance tunes with little plot, this is possible, but they don't look like the same song to me. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: Wolf091

Star-Spangled Banner, The

DESCRIPTION: A description of bombardment of Fort McHenry by the British Navy, with hopes for the survival of the United States. Either you already know the song, or you don't care. (Perhaps both.)

AUTHOR: Words: Francis Scott Key (1779-1843)/Music: John Stafford Smith (?)

EARLIEST DATE: 1814

KEYWORDS: America patriotic battle

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Sept 13, 1814 - Battle of Fort McHenry. Key allegedly wrote this poem the following morning, when he saw the flag still waving

FOUND IN: US(All)

REFERENCES (14 citations):
Forget-Me-Not-Songster, pp. 26-27, "The Star Spangled Banner" (1 text)
Heart-Songs, pp. 404-405, "The Star Spangled Banner" (1 text, 1 tune)
Krythe-SamplerOfAmericanSongs 2, pp. 15-39, "The Star Spangled Banner" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 300, "The Star Spangled Banner" (1 text)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, pp. 529-534+, "The Star Spangled Banner"
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 166, "Defence of Fort M'Henry" (1 broadside print, perhaps the earliest surviving)
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 262, "The Star Spangled Banner" (1 text)
Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, pp. 205-209, "The Defence of Fort M'Henry";
"The Star Spangled Banner" (3 full texts, 4 partial or complete tunes, all reprints of early editions)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 184, "The Star Spangled Banner" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2241, p. 151, "The Star Spangled Banner" (24 references)
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #5, "The Star Spangled Banner" (1 text)
Colonial-Dames-AmericanWarSongs, pp. 42-43, "The Star Spangled Banner" (1 text plus a photography of the original manuscript)
DT, STARSPAN

ADDITIONAL: Harry Dichter and Elliott Shapiro, _Early American Sheet Music: Its Lure and Its Lore, 1768-1889_, R. R. Bowker, 1941, pp. 36-37, describes three printed copies from before 1816; p. 38 lists songster versions from 1817 or earlier; plates 6-7 show the earliest known sheet music

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "To Anacreon in Heaven" (tune)
cf. "Adams and Liberty" (tune)
cf. "The Battle of Baltimore" (subject)

SAME TUNE:
To Anacreon in Heaven (File: SRW008) (the source song)
Adams and Liberty (File: SRW011)
The Independent Broom (File: Wels064)
Shall Dorr Be Freed (File: CAFS1068)
Freedom Triumphant (see Dichter/Shapiro, p. 35)
The Pillar of Glory (see Dichter/Shapiro, p. 35)
When Death's Gloomy Angel Was Bending His Bow (see Dichter/Shapiro, p. 35)
The Battle of the Wabash (see Dichter/Shapiro, p. 36)
Washington Guards (see Dichter/Shapiro, p. 36)
Ellsworth's Death (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, p. 38)
The National Grass Plot ("O say can you see, by the dawn's early light, That grass plot so dear to the hearts of us all?") (Greenway-AmericanFolksongsOfProtest, p. 63; Foner-AmericanLaborSongsOfTheNineteenthCentury, p 254)
A National Song, for Forefathers' Day ("Hail, ye sons of brave sires! whose Forefathers, free")
(Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, p. 106)
New-York 7th Regiment ("Oh, the first from New-York was our heroes so bold") (Wolf-
AmericanSongSheets p. 108)
Our Beautiful Banner ("Our Beautiful Banner forever shall wave," by Mrs. Louis F. Neagle) (Wolf-
AmericanSongSheets p. 119)
Our Freedom-Lit Banner ("All Hall! we now see in a full blaze of light") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets
p. 120)
Parody of the excellent Song, "To Anacreon in Heaven" ("To G*t in New-York, where he reigns in full glee") (Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, p. 129)
Song for the Fourth of July, 1795 ("In climes where fair Freedom, secure from her foes")
(Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, p. 129)
Rights of Woman ("God save each Female's right") (Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, p. 130)
The President's Chair ("Oh, say do you hear from the East to the West") (Wolf-
AmericanSongSheets p. 129)
The Battle of North Point ("Hark, hark, was the cry, when Baltimore town") (Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, p. 209)
The Union Must and Shall Be Preserved ("Oh! say can a thought so vile and base come," from the Camp-Fire Songster of 1862) (Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, p. 338; Wolf-
AmericanSongSheets p. 163)
Das Star-Spangled Banner (German) (Lawrence-MusicForPatriotsPoliticiansAndPresidents, p. 386)
Stars and Bars ("O say, can you see -- though perhaps you're too tight") (Wolf-
AmericanSongSheets p. 151)
The Stars and Bars ("Oh! say do you see now so vauntingly borne") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, p. 195)
Union Banner-Cry ("Oh, say can you see without blasting the sight," by T. J. Greenwood) (Wolf-
AmericanSongSheets p. 162)
The Flag of Secession ("Oh, say can't you see by the dawn's early light," by Frank Pinkney) (Wolf-
AmericanSongSheets, p. 189)
The President's Chair ("Ye Southrons arouns, and do battle, nor yield") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, p. 193)
The Southern Cross ("Oh1 say: you can see, through the gloom and the storm," by Henry St.
George Tucker) (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, p. 194)
Alumni Song (by F. H. Ludow, [class of 18]56) ("Why chime ye, O bells, to the chorus of feet")
(Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, pp. 134-135)
Ode to Alma Mater (by J. W. Brown, [class of 18]32) (Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia:
A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, p. 135) Saratoga Paraphrase of the Star-Spangled Banner (by Col. B. C. Butler) ("O say, can you see, by the dawn's early light. On Saratoga's broad plains what so proudly is streaming") (William L. Stone, _Ballads and Poems Relating to the Burgoyne Campaign_, 1893 (I use the 1970 Kennikat Press reissue), pp. 273-274)
Harrison Song ("Oh say have you heard how in days that are past") (Harrison campaign song) (A.
B. Norton, _Songs of the People in the Log Cabin Days of Old Tippecanoe_, p. 30)
A New Song ("Oh! who does not see, in this heart-cheering ray") (Harrison campaign song) (A. B.

Paul Jones ("A song unto Liberty's brave buccaneer"; this is not one of the traditional John Paul Jones songs) (Rabson-SongbookOfTheAmericanRevolution, pp. 84-85; p. 101 suggests that "To Anacreon" is the tune, but this is not certain)

The Uprising of Labor ("Brave sires to the summons of Freedom upsprung") (by I. G. Blanchard) (Foner-AmericanLaborSongsOfTheNineteenthCentury, p. 111)

Star Spangled Banner (late 1800s) ("Oh say do you see, by the daylight's broad glare, That blot that arises to tarnish our glory") (Foner-AmericanLaborSongsOfTheNineteenthCentury, p. 269)

'Neath the Banner of Garfield ("Oh, say! have you heard of the man from the West") (Garfield and Arthur Campaign Song Book 1880, p. 11)

Our Country, To Thee ("Our country, to thee, in the cannon's fierce light, We have pledged the best blood of the patriot streaming") (Garfield and Arthur Campaign Song Book 1880, p. 13)

The White Ribbon Star-Spangled Banner ("Fling it out to the breeze; let it tell to the world") (by Kate Lunden Sunderlin) (Anna Adams Gordon, _Popular Campaign Songs_, National W.C.T.U. Publishing House, 1915, p. 30)

NOTES [2068 words]: For the history of this tune, see the notes to "To Anacreon in Heaven." The folklore about the poem is too widely known (and too exaggerated) to bear repeating here; Spaeth has a sort of debunking, with some less-known details, on pp. 41-46, and there are a few notes about Francis Scott Key's part in the Battle for Baltimore in the discussion below.

The popularity of the song in broadsides is amazing. The immense collection of broadsides cataloged by Wolf includes multiple prints of many songs. There are a few with as many as fifteen copies. There are none with the 24 different broadside editions recorded of this song -- including a couple in German "Das Star-Spangled Banner."

In several senses this is not a folk song (in part because it's so difficult to sing) -- but it is well-enough known that its inclusion is at least understandable....

The War of 1812 showed clearly how much stronger the British Empire was than the then-still-new United States. In 1812 and 1813, the British had been putting all their energy into fighting Napoleon, and given the Americas only the dregs (not only did they send only a bare handful of troops to Canada, they reportedly sent only second-rate generals, using the best and brightest against Napoleon (Mahon, p. 144) -- and they "still" held the Americans to a draw: At the end of 1813, the British still held Canada, and while the Americans had had some success at sea, by 1813 their handful of ships were mostly pinned down in blockaded ports (see Mahon, p. 122, for a list of ships involved).

1814 should have seen the British, now free of Napoleon, settle the American hash -- and they did succeed in permanently occupying some of the coast east of what is now the state of Maine. They set out to do far more, planning three major offensives (at Lake Champlain, Chesapeake Bay, and Louisiana). For the first of these, which was one of the most absurd displays ever put on by the British army, see the notes on "The Siege of Plattsburg."

The Chesapeake Campaign was the best-run of the three British attacks of 1814 -- and, overall, the most successful. The war by this time had turned rather bitter as there had been a series of atrocities along the Canadian border (started, we must note, by the Americans, who destroyed the Canadian settlement of Newark as well as the future Toronto, though the British treatment of American prisoners was bad enough that they had nothing to complain about; the sad thing is that the innocent Canadians suffered for the faults of the English government).

The British had responded to the American war crimes by burning Buffalo, e.g., and had raided Chesapeake Bay in 1813 (the British commander in the area, Admiral Cockburn, did so much damage that the Americans accused him of enjoying looting; see Mahon, p. 115), but this was to be altogether bigger. A large fleet, and an army contingent commanded by Major General Robert Ross (who had served under Wellington) were sent to raid the Bay in the late summer of 1814. Their goal was not conquest; it was to keep the Americans from sending major forces against Prevost's (utterly mishandled) Champlain expedition (Borneman, pp. 219-220).

On August 19, 1814, Ross took his troops ashore at Benedict, Maryland, southeast of Washington, D.C. (Borneman, p. 222).

The American response showed a level of ineptitude that would make George W. Bush's Iraq planning look good. Faced with an army at the gates of the U. S. capitol, President Madison chose a political general who had already demonstrated his military ineptness to command in the vicinity of Washington (apparently he hoped William H. Winder's political connections would allow him to raise more militia; Borneman, p. 223; Hickey, p. 196). Winder would show great energy but absolutely no ability to develop plans (Hickey, pp. 196-197).

The weather was dreadfully hot (Borneman, p. 225; Hickey, p. 198), but the Americans made no attempt to harass the overburdened British. On August 24, Ross's troops brushed past the handful of American defenders at Bladensburg, incidentally putting President Madison under fire; he retreated even faster than his soldiers. The battle also saw Secretary of State Monroe giving orders to the soldiers -- something he was not entitled to do, and his orders were in any case bad (Hickey, p. 197). The Americans were so thoroughly routed that the battle was christened the "Bladensburg Races" (Borneman, p. 228). The British promptly entered Washington -- which was so deserted that Ross couldn't even find anyone to offer up a surrender (Hickey, p. 199).

Ross's forces were better behaved than the Americans. They did burn a handful of private buildings -- but, almost without exception, it was because those houses were used for military purposes. Treasury Secretary Albert Gallatin's house, for instance, was torched because snipers in the house had slain one British soldier, wounded three others, and killed General Ross's horse under him (Borneman, p. 229). But mostly the invaders concentrated on buildings such as the White House, the Treasury Building, and the Capitol (Borneman, pp. 230-231). Saddest of all was the torching of the Library of Congress, though the invaders were convinced to let the Patent Office stand (Hickey, p. 199).

The British were not there to stay; having done their damage, they headed back to their ships on August 25 (Borneman, p. 232). Even so, Secretary of War John Armstrong was forced to resign (Borneman, p. 234; Hickey, p. 202).

The next day, the British set out for Baltimore, a much more developed port, with a larger population and a more important shipping center -- but defended by Fort McHenry, plus many earthworks and a much more effective force of militia than those around Washington. It was also much more enthusiastic for the war; soon after the conflict began, a newspaper uttered an anti-war statement -- and the city broke out in riots; the paper's equipment was damaged, and a number of Federalists, including even Revolutionary War hero "Light Horse Harry" Lee, were beaten, in some cases to death or permanent injury (see Hickey, pp. 60-67; Mahon, p. 33).

General Ross apparently thought the raid on Baltimore not worth the trouble -- the psychological damage of the attack on Washington could only be dissipated (Borneman, p. 238). He was overruled; on September 11, the British headed north.

The attack on Baltimore was to come from both land and sea, with the navy attacking Fort McHenry while the army came around the other side. Both prongs of the attack came to grief. Ross was killed by a sharpshooter on September 12 (Borneman, pp. 242-243), and his second-in-command wasn't nearly as inspiring.

The naval assault was a matter of sound and fury and not much else. Fort McHenry was dirt over masonry, hard to subdue by cannon -- and the waters around it were very shallow (Borneman, p. 239; Hickey, p. 203). The navy could not get close to the fort. In fact, they had to stand out so far that the fort's short-range guns could not even reach them. So, on the night of September 13, British mortar vessels fired wildly at the fort, and the bomb Terror (of future Franklin Expedition fame; see the notes to "Lady Franklin's Lament (The Sailor's Dream)" [Laws K9]) fired her rockets (Borneman, p. 244). The fort could not answer, but she suffered only four killed and a couple of dozen wounded; she was still perfectly capable of holding off the British army (Borneman, pp. 244-246).

That was pretty much the end of the siege of Baltimore, though it was a month before the last British forces left the vicinity. The naval commander, Admiral Cochrane, headed for Halifax with part of the fleet; the rest, plus the army, retreated to Jamaica, refitted, took on a new commander by the name of Pakenham, and headed toward a place called New Orleans. It is sometimes stated that Francis Scott Key was a prisoner on the British fleet. He was not. He was in fact a Baltimore lawyer (he spent much of his life as District Attorney for Washington, D.C.; Julian, p. 624) trying to negotiate the release of a doctor-turned-spy named William Beanes.

Beanes was not popular with the British, who considered his behavior particularly egregious (and, if the description in Borneman, pp. 240-242, is accurate, it appears they had a point). The British finally agreed to let him go -- but by that time, they were committed to the attack on Baltimore, so Key, his colleague John S. Skinner, and Beanes had to wait beside H.M.S. Tonnant until it was over (Hickey, pp. 203-204).

The bombardment started during the day, but continued well into the night, and with the fort unable to fire on the British ships, the only way to tell it was still resisting was to observe its flag -- hard to do at night. Apparently Beanes was constantly pestering Key, who had a telescope, to find out if the famous oversize flag was still flying (Borneman, pp. 245-246). Hence Key's song, which he scribbled that night, and elaborated later, was first published as "The Defense of Fort McHenry." Since this event, combined with the victory at Plattsburg two days sooner, caused the British to decide for peace, the siege, and the song associated with it, because immensely popular, and came to be seen as a great American victory -- even though the British had suffered no real casualties except Ross and had done the Americans far more damage at Washington than the Americans caused at Baltimore.
The conflict could not have gone on much longer. The American government was flat broke (had there been someone to force it into bankruptcy, it would surely have done so; loans went unsubscribed and Treasury notes were depreciating fast. To raise such money as it could, the government ended up having to pay $16 for every $10 raised! -- see Hickey, pp. 165-167. By late 1814, the government was defaulting on its notes -- Hickey, p. 224 -- and its notes were discounted 25-40%. At one point the interest on the debt exceeded the government's entire estimated income -- Hickey, p. 247). The Americans for a time were actually seeing their credit financed by a British bank! (Hickey, pp. 223-224). Hickey's final estimate is that the government borrowed a total of $80 million, but because of the way the loans were subscribed, picked up only $34 million in specie. The rest was lost to interest, depreciated notes, and peculiarities of the method of borrowing. The situation was so bad that Federalist New England was making noises about secession and nullification (Borneman, pp. 255-256; Hickey, pp. 270-280, devotes most of a chapter to the "Hartford Convention," which was called to consider withdrawing from the Union; in the end, it did not do so, but it did propose seven constitutional amendments to make it harder to declare war [where was that in 2003?], to end re-election of presidents, to bar consecutive presidents from the same state, to open up trade, and to stop counting slaves toward the totals for congressional representation. The amendments were actually passed by Massachusetts and Connecticut).
Lucky for the United States, the British were tired of fighting, too -- due more to Napoleon than to anything the Americans had done, but it was still war-weariness. The British, knowing they had most of the cards, dragged their feet in the negotiations (Borneman, pp. 264-267), but two sides eventually made peace essentially on the basis of the status quo -- no territory handed over by either side, not changes in law, no changes in anything.
Theoretically, that meant the grievances that started the war were still there. But the Americans were ironically successful: They had survived the first two years of the war mostly because Britain was distracted. In 1814, Britain was no longer distracted -- but with Napoleon gone, the British again wanted free trade, and with the navy shrinking, they didn't need to impress sailors, so they didn't have to do any of the things that had offended the Americans. (The Americans would later use this as a justification for dropping their demands on the issue; Hickey, p. 289.) Peace was possible mostly because no one really wanted to continue the war.
Key's official text of this poem was published in the posthumous volume of his Poems in 1857. He also wrote hymns; Julian, p. 624, lists seven of them, of which he considers four to be in common use; I've never heard of any of them. - RBW

Bibliography

- Julian: John Julian, editor,A Dictionary of Hymnology, 1892; second edition 1907 (I use the 1957 Dover edition in two volumes)
- Mahon: John K. Mahon,The War of 1812, 1972 (I used the undated Da Capo paperback edition)

Last updated in version 6.1
File: MKr015

Stare, Stare, Like a Bear

DESCRIPTION: "Stare, stare, Like a bear, Sitting on a monkey's chair." Or "Have a good stare, By the way, you remind me of a bear."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)

KEYWORDS: playparty animal

FOUND IN: New Zealand

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 132, "(Stare, stare)"; Starfish Song, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh we're tough, mighty tough, in the Starfish, And the Coxswain is a man that we well wish. Oh, the cook makes hors-de-overs Out of matelots' old pullovers, Oh, we're tough, mighty tough, in the Starfish."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)

KEYWORDS: ship navy food hardtimes

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 113, "The 'Starfish' Song" (1 text, tune referenced)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "They're Tough, Mighty Tough, in the West" (tune)
cf. "Twelve Little S-Boats" (subject: The Starfish and other S-Boats)

NOTES [340 words]: The Starfish, according to Bagnasco, p. 110, was one of the first four units of the "S" class of submarines, built at Chatham in 1930-1933. "In 1930, the Royal Navy, in accordance with the plan to modernize the submarine force, decided to build a new type of boat, suitable for employment in the North Sea and restricted waters such as the Mediterranean." They were small for submarines of the 1930s: the first group had a displacement of just 737 tons surfaced (later members of the class were larger); they were 202.5"x24"x10.5". They were slow, too, on the surface: 13.75 knots (although they could manage an impressive 10 knots submerged), and as built had a range of just 3800 miles at ten knots. They had six torpedo tubes, all in the nose, carried a 3" gun, and had crews of three dozen.

Despite their limited abilities, the British liked them and ended up building more than sixty of them (Bagnasco, p. 111). They really didn't have the range to sail outside of European waters, but the Royal Navy found a way: "To achieve greater range for the boats bound for the Far East, several sections of the ballast tanks were adapted for use as fuel tanks.... Stores, especially food and ammunition were increased and were stored in any available space; a small ammunition locker was placed under the table in the officers' quarters" (Bagnasco, p. 112). It sounds like the song's complaint about them is dead on; when on Pacific duty, they must have been almost uninhabitable. Especially the early ones, which had stability problems (Worth, p. 117).

Despite those limitations, Bagnasco, p. 112, concludes, "The combination of their qualities -- none of which, in itself was above average -- together with the reliability of their equipment and the great ease of operation and maintenance made them very effective and safe." But he never had to serve on one! Young, p. 147, reports that the Starfish was lost in a surface action in the North Sea on January 9, 1940.

For the class as a whole, see the notes to "Twelve Little S-Boats." - RBW

Bibliography

- Worth: Richard Worth, Fleets of World War II, Da Capo, 2001
- Young: John Young, A Dictionary of Ships of the Royal Navy of the Second World War, Patrick Stephens, 1975

Last updated in version 5.1

File: Tawn083

Starlight

DESCRIPTION: "It was the last day of the rodeo, And in one of the stout corrals There stood a big sorrel outlaw horse.... He went by the name of Starlight, a bronc as tough as gristle...." The cowboy who draws the horse is depressed, and sure enough he is thrown

AUTHOR: Noah Henry
Starlight Hotel, The

DESCRIPTION: "He's staying tonight at a boarding house, That's known as the Starlight Hotel, Where most of the guests are... Stuck halfway 'twixt Heaven and Hell." The man who stays there is looking for work but finding none -- but it's welcome by the fire

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 2009 (Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ)

KEYWORDS: hardtimes worker travel

FOUND IN:
Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, p. 108, "(The Starlight Hotel)" (1 text)

File: Gar1108

Starry Night to Ramble, A

DESCRIPTION: The singer lists the pleasures he enjoys. Noteworthy among them is courting with his sweetheart. But "Of all the games I love the best, that fill me with delight, I love to take a ramble upon a starry night."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927

KEYWORDS: courting rambling

FOUND IN: US Australia

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 56-57, "A Starry Night to Ramble" (1 text, 1 tune)
Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, pp. 94-95, "Starry Night for a Ramble" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gilbert-LostChords, pp. 177-178, "A Starry Night for a Ramble" (1 text)
Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 52-53, "A Starry Night to Ramble" (1 text)
Meredith/Tritton-DukeOfTheOutback, p. 92, "A Starry Night for a Ramble" (1 fragment)

Roud #972

NOTES [39 words]: Gilbert-LostChords reports that this was popularized by a performer named Dick Gorman, probably in the last years of the nineteenth century -- but offers no details of its authorship (if known), only a catalogue of Gorman's oddities. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: MA056

Stars in the Elements

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "The stars in the elements are falling, And the moon drips away into blood, And the ransomed of the Lord are returning to God, O blessed be the name of the Lord."

Verses: "Don't you hear those Christians praying (sinners screaming/crying)"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute); 1893 (see notes)

KEYWORDS: Bible nonballad religious

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Roud #15226

NOTES [167 words]: In Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute's verses, every verse ends "And the moon drips away into blood, And the ransomed of the Lord are returning to God, O blessed be the name of the Lord."
Biblical references: Revelation 6:12-13: "And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and lo, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood; And the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind"; Isaiah 35:10: "And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads" (King James). The index to the 1893 edition [of Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute] has "Stars in the Elements are Falling" on page 84 (Thomas P. Fenner and Frederic G. Rathbun, Cabin and Plantation Songs (New York: G.P. Putnam's Sons, 1893)). I have not seen page 84. - BS
Last updated in version 4.2
File: Dett162

Starving to Death on a Government Claim (The Lane County Bachelor)

DESCRIPTION: "My name is Frank Taylor, a bach'lor I am, I'm keeping old batch on an elegant plan, You'll find me out west in the county of Lane, A-starvin' to death on a government claim." After much moaning about the bad conditions, the settler gives up and goes home

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910
KEYWORDS: pioneer settler hardtimes bachelor
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
May 20, 1862 - President Lincoln signs the Homestead Act
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,So) Canada(Ont)
REFERENCES (16 citations):
Randolph 186, "Starving to Death on a Government Claim" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 135, "Hurrah for Greer County" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abernethy-SinginTexas, pp. 8-9, "The Gerer County Bachelor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 120-122, "The Lane County Bachelor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke/Mills/Blume-CanadasStoryInSong, pp. 144-146, "The Alberta Homesteader" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke/MacMillan-PenguinBookOfCanadianFolkSongs 34, "The Alberta Homesteader" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 70, "Starving to Death on a Government Claim" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, p. 434, "Greer County" (1 text)
Sackett/Koch-KansasFolklore, pp. 146-149, "The Lane County Bachelor" (2 texts)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, p. 500-502, "The Lane County Bachelor" (1 text)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 22, "The Lane County Bachelor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 83, pp. 178-180, "Starving to Death on a Government Claim" (1 text)
Coleman/Bregman-SongsOfAmericanFolks, pp. 32-34, "The Lane County Bachelor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 121, "Starving To Death On A Government Claim" (1 text)
DT, STARVTD*
ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 33, #1 (1987), pp, 50-51, "The Bent County Bachelor" (1 text, 1 tune, learned by Sam Hinton from Jared Benson)
Roud #799
RECORDINGS:
Bill Bender, The Happy Cowboy, "Lane County Bachelor" (Varsity 5144, c. 1940)
Edward L. Crain (Cowboy Ed Crane), "Starving to Death on a Government Claim" (Conqueror 8013, 1932; Broadway 4056 [as Cowboy Carson], c. 1932)
Benjamin Kincaid, "The Lane County Bachelor" (Supertone 2574, c. 1933)
Pete Seeger, "Greer County Bachelor" (on PeteSeeger07, PeteSeeger07a, AmHist1)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Irish Washerwoman" (tune)
cf. "The Railroad Corral" (tune and references for the "Irish Washerwoman" tune)
cf. "Vilikens and his Dinah (William and Dinah) [Laws M31A/B]" (tune) and references there
cf. "The Little Old Log Cabin in the Lane" (tune) and references there NOTES [209 words]: The song clearly dates back to the latter part of the nineteenth century, the period of Homestead Claims. The Homestead Act of 1862 had opened large areas of the western U.S. to settlement, allowing settlers to lay claim to 160 acre sections in return for nominal payments. However, the settlers were required to live on their claims for five years before they could "prove up" and gain title to the property. Many settlers, like the one here, wound up living in impossible conditions because it was the only way to stake the claim. It was not at all rare for the homesteader to give up, sell the reversion on the claim, and head back east.

Fowke's Canadian version, "The Alberta Homesteader," is very much the same song, slightly adapted to the north country and the minor differences in Canada's homesteading laws (created when Canada took over the western part of the continent from the Hudson's Bay Company in 1871, although most migrants did not start out until the 1880s).

At least three widely-known tunes have been used for this piece, "The Irish Washerwoman," Vilkens and his Dinah," and "The Little Old Log Cabin in the Lane." But the largest number of collections seem to use "The Irish Washerwoman"; I suspect that was the original melody. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5

File: R186

State of Arkansas, The (The Arkansas Traveler II) [Laws H1]

DESCRIPTION: A traveler arrives in Arkansas and finds that it fully meets his (lack of) expectations. He "never knewed what misery was till I come to Arkansas." His boss had promised that the state would make him a different man, and he is: He is now badly starved

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)

KEYWORDS: poverty humorous hardtimes starvation

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,SE,So) Ireland Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (32 citations):

Laws H1, "The Arkansas Traveler"
Randolph 347, "The State of Arkansas" (4 texts plus 2 excerpts, 3 tunes)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 288-290, "The State of Arkansas" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 347A)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 424-426, "Bill Stafford" (2 texts)
Welsch-NebraskaPioneerLore, pp. 49-50, "Bill Stafford" (1 text)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, p. 363, "My Name is John Johanna" (1 text)
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 560-566, "Way Out in Idaho" (2 texts, 1 tune; the main text and tune are "Way Out in Idaho (I)", but a secondary text is a version of this piece)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 331, "Arkansas Traveller (II)" (2 texts)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 331, "Arkansas Traveler (II)" (2 tunes plus text excerpts)
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 138, "Arkansas Traveler (II)" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 80, p. 208, "Tocowa" (1 short text with "Tocowa," not Arkansas, the site of the singer's bad experience)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 190, "The State of Arkansas" (1 text, 1 tune)
Owens-TexasFolkSongs-1ed, pp. 226-228, "Sanford Barnes" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brewster-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfIndiana 52, "The Arkansaw Traveler" (2 texts)
Dean-FlyingCloud, pp. 8-9, "The Arkansas Navy" (1 text)
Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois, pp. 210-212, "William Stafford" (1 text)
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 171-172, (no title) (1 text)
Thomas-DevilsDitties, pp. 152-153, "State of Arkansas" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 434, "The Arkansaw Traveler" (1 text)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 71, "The State of Arkansas" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 167, "The State of Arkansas" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 53, "An Arkansaw Traveller" (3 texts)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol3, pp. 25-27, "Bill Stafford" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 170, "Old Arkansas" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 42, pp. 74-76, "An ARkansas Traveller (Bill Stafford)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Dunson/Raim/Asch-AnthologyOfAmericanFolkMusic, p. 44, "My Name Is John Johanna" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrySongsOfThePeople H0, p. 53, "The State of Arkansaw" (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 225-226, "Old Arkansas" (1 text)
States and Capitals

DESCRIPTION: A catalog of the capital cities of various states, starting perhaps in the northeast: "Maine, the capital is Augusta..." Versions may add additional details, e.g. "...Augusta, on the Kennebeck River"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Randolph); Stout-FolkloreFromIowa's informants thought it was in existence in 1864

KEYWORDS: nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MW,So)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Randolph 878, "States and Capitals" (2 texts, 1 tune)
List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, pp. 80-81, "Capitals of the States" (1 text, 1 tune, with only three states, all in New England)
Grimes-StoriesFromTheAnneGrimesCollection, p. 138, "States and Capitals" (1 text, with only five states, all in New England)
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 103, pp. 127-133, "Early Iowa School Songs" (11 texts, of which the "B" text is this song; this version too has only five verses, all from the northeastern U.S.)

Roud #7543

NOTES [137 words]: This seems to have been at one time a widespread song to help children learn geography (in which it failed, since almost none of the informants could remember much). Whether this is actually a single song is perhaps open to question; the texts in Randolph are very different, and this is perhaps a topic that several schoolmarm/songwriters might have tackled. The information is also sorely out of date. Since the song was sung in the 1880s, of course, it lacks at least half a dozen states. Even for the states that are listed, the data is inaccurate (e.g. the capital of Maryland is Annapolis, not Baltimore, and Rhode Island and Connecticut have only one capital city each, though Randolph's "A" text lists Providence and Newport for Rhode Island, while "B" gives New Haven and Hartford as capital of Connecticut). - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
States Song, The (What Did Delaware?)

DESCRIPTION: "What did Delaware, boys, what did Delaware, I ask you again as a personal friend, what did..." "She wore a New Jersey, boys...." "What did Iowa, boys,..." "She weighed a Washington...." And so forth, through as many states and puns as possible

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Harbin, _Phunology_, according to Cohen)

KEYWORDS: wordplay humorous nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 162-163, "What Did Delaware?" (1 text plus some assorted lyrics)
Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, pp. 206-207 "The States Song" (1 text)

Roud #15378

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ida Ho" (device of using state songs as personal names)
cf. "What Makes the Wild Cat Wild?" (the "personal friend" lyric)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
What Did Tennessee?
The Song of States

Station Cook, The

DESCRIPTION: "The song I'm going to sing about will not detain you long, It is all about a station cook we had at old Pinyong." The singer says that the cook's work "gave us all the stomach ache all through the shearing time." He will blame the cook if he turns sick

AUTHOR: The Australian Star version was either written or submitted by P. J. McGovery

EARLIEST DATE: 1877 (The Australian Star)

KEYWORDS: cook disability disease hardtimes warning food

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, pp. 90-91, "The Station Cook" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [26 words]: Fowler's Bay is on the south coast of Australia, roughly 300 miles northwest of Adelaide. I'm guessing that "Pinyong" is Penong on the shores of the bay. - RBW

Station of Knocklong, The

DESCRIPTION: "The news has spread through Ireland... Sean Hogan he was rescued At the Station of Knocklong." Hogan's guards are overpowered, and two of them killed, by rebels; Hogan is freed

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1962

KEYWORDS: Ireland rebellion escape rescue death IRA

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1919 - Irish terrorists Sean Treacy and Sean Hogan capture a load of explosives from the British, killing two policemen in the process. When Hogan is captured, Treacy rescues him, killing two more policemen along the way

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Galvin-IrishSongsOfResistance, pp. 60-61, "The Station of Knocklong" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. ""Sean Treacy" (for the story of Treacy)
cf. "Tipperary Far Away" (for the death of Sean Treacy)
NOTES [196 words]: For the Soloheadbeg incident, in which a group of Irish irregulars attacked a British explosives truck, see the notes to "Sean Treacy." Among those involved in the raid were Sean Hogan, Treacy, and Dan Breen. According to Calton Younger, Ireland's Civil War, p. 92, Hogan was captured while visiting friends, though his identity was not realized until later. It is uncertain whether there was resistance from the British forces at Soloheadbeg, though it seems unlikely. In the case of Knocklong, it seems pretty clear that there wasn't. Robert Kee, in Ourselves Alone, being volume III of The Green Flag, p. 72, cites Breen to the effect that the Irish decided to shoot first to prevent British guards from killing the prisoner. The casualties at first seemed close to even: Treacy was shot in the throat, Breen through the lung. Both managed to survive. Ironically, though much would be heard of Treacy and Breen in the coming years, Hogan faded into obscurity. He was part of an attempt to assassinate Viceroy French, but the attempt failed and a casual check of four histories and a biographical dictionary showed no other references to his life after Knocklong. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2
File: PGa060

Stavin Chain

DESCRIPTION: "Stavin Chain he's dead and gone, Left me to carry the good work on, Evrybody ought to be like Stavin Chain," The singer complains about river life, misses his woman, and says that everyone should be like Stavin Chain. (His sexual exploits are described.)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (collected from "Tricky Sam")

KEYWORDS: river work separation sex animal

FOUND IN: US(SE,So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 305-306, "Stavin' Chain" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Wheeler-SteamboatinDays, pp. 16-17, "Stavin Chain" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST MWhee016 (Full)

Roud #9994

RECORDINGS:
- Anonymous singer, "Stavin' Chain" (on Unexp1)
- Zuzu Bollin, "Stavin' Chain" (Torch 6912, n.d.)
- Blind Willie McTell, "Chaine" (on USWMcTell01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Poor Howard" (lyrics)

NOTES [128 words]: I would not have considered Willie McTell's "Chainey" to be a version of "Stavin' Chain" without Allan Balfour's liner notes to USWMcTell01. McTell's version has no "dead and gone" theme but there is a tag line that fits the "Stavin' Chain" pattern -- "Lord, lord, lord-y lord, Nobody love like Chainey do" -- and verses to support the tag line. As a performance, McTell's recording is close, in tune and style, to Wilson Jones's. Jones also has no "dead and gone" theme and says "You know you can do just like Chaine did." Incidentally, the McTell/Jones tunes and structures are close to Lil Johnson's "Stavin' Chain" (her text -- "you can't ride, honey you can't ride this train, I'm the chief engineer, gonna run it like Stavin' Chain" -- does not fit here).- BS

Last updated in version 4.0
File: MWhee016

Stay in the Field

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Stay in the field, Stay in the field o warrior, Stay on the field, 'Til the war is ended." Verse: "My eyes are turned to the heavenly gate, I'll keep on my way or I'll be too late" "Green trees burning, why not dry, My Saviour died, why not I"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Barton-OldPlantationHymns); 1893 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute) (see notes)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious war Devil floating verses Jesus
Stay on the Farm

DESCRIPTION: "Come, boy, I have something to tell you... You're thinking of leaving the farm, boy; Don't be in a hurry to go." He warns against the city's vices, and points out that the farm is safe and, over time, will offer as much gold as the mines of Nevada

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: family farming money
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 865, "Stay on the Farm" (1 text)
Roud #7535
File: R865

Stay, Father, Stay

DESCRIPTION: A child, whose mother is already dead, is dying. (S)he appeals to father to remain by the bedside and not to leave until (s)he is dead: "Stay, father, stay, the night is wild, Oh leave not your dying child, I feel the icy hand of death...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1919 (Randolph); 19C (Wolf)
KEYWORDS: death disease drink orphan father
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Randolph 329, "Stay, Father, Stay" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #542, p. 36, "The Dying Girl's Appeal" (2 references)
Roud #7802
File: R329

Steal Apples for Me

DESCRIPTION: "Steal apples, steal apples, Steal apples for me, And while you steal apples, Steal peaches for me." "Let all of the ladies Go enter the ring...." "And when you're done swinging, Remember my call, Take the next lady And promenade all"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: dancing play party theft food floating verses
FOUND IN: US(So)
Steal Away

DESCRIPTION: Recognized by the chorus, "Steal away, steal away to Jesus... I ain't got long to stay here." Verses may have to do with the end of the world; the singer reports that "The trumpet sounds within my soul"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1887 (College Songs)

KEYWORDS: religious Bible nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (10 citations):
Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro, p. 89, "Steal Away to Jesus" (1 text, 1 tune)
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, p. 42, "Steal Away" (partial text)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 298, "Steal Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit, pp. 84-85, "Steal Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 281-282, "Steal Away to Jesus" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 366, "Steal Away" (1 text)

DT, STEALAWY*

Roud #11965

RECORDINGS:
Cotton Pickers Quartet, "Steal Away to Jesus" (OKeh 8878, 1931)
Dinwiddie Colored Quartet, "Steal Away" (Victor 1716, 1902) (Monarch 1716, 1902)
Emory University Glee Club, "Steal Away to Jesus" (Victor 20594, 1927)
Fisk University Male Quartette, "Steal Away to Jesus" (Columbia A2803, 1919)
Fisk University Jubilee Singers, "Steal Away to Jesus" (Columbia 562-D, 1926)
Red Foley, "Steal Away" (Decca 14505, 1949)
Gullah Kinfolk, "Steal 'Way to Jedus" (on USeasIsland04)
Roland Hayes, "Steal Away" (Vocalion [US & UK] 21003, n.d.; Supertone, 1931)
Rev. H. B. Jackson, "Steal Away" (OKeh 8919, 1931; rec. 1929)
Turner Junior Johnson, "Steal Away" (AFS 6609 A4, 1942; on LC10)
 Paramount Jubilee Singers, "Steal Away to Jesus" (Paramount 12072, 1923)
 Paul Robeson, "Steal Away" (HMV [UK] B-8103, 1934)
 Noble Sissle's Southland Singers, "Steal Away to Jesus" (Pathé 20483, 1921)
 Soul Stirrers, "Steal Away" (Aladdin 2001, rec. 1946)
 Horace Sprott, "Steal Away to Jesus" (on MuSouth03)
 Standard Quartette, "Steal Away to Jesus" (CYL: Columbia, no #, rec. 1894)
 Tuskegee Institute Singers, "Steal Away" (Victor 17890, 1916)
 Tuskegee Quartet, "Steal Away to Jesus" (Victor 20519, 1927; rec. 1926)
 Vaughan Quartet, "Steal Away" (Vaughan 300, rec. 1921.)
 Kinsey West, "Steal Away to Jesus" (on BlackAmRel1)

NOTES [25 words]: Given the song's popularity among Black musicians, and in the Black community, it is hard not to read an "escape from slavery" subtext into the song. -PJS

Last updated in version 6.1

File: CNFM042
Steal Away Rang Tang Doolay
DESCRIPTION: "Steal away, rang tang doolay (x2), Stole my pretty girl, rang tang doolay (x2)."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)
KEYWORDS: abandonment playparty
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5, p. 548, "Steal Away" (1 short text, 1 tune)
File: BrS5549

Steal, Miss Liza (I)
DESCRIPTION: "I've got a man and you've got none, Little Liza Jane... O Eliza, Little Liza Jane." "You swing mine and I'll swing yours...." "I've got a house in Baltimo', Forty-'leven children on the floor...." "I steal yours and you steal mine...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960
KEYWORDS: dancing nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 263, "Steal, Miss Liza" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: LoF263

Steal, Miss Liza (II)
DESCRIPTION: "Steal, Miss Liza, Miss Liza Jane (x2), Dat ol' man ain't got no wife; I wouldn't have to save his life, Miss Liza Jane." "My ol' mistress promise me, When she die, she'd set me free." "She lib so long, she go bald, And decided not to die at all."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore)
KEYWORDS: slavery courting husband wife playparty floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, pp. 234-236, "Steal Mis' Liza" (1 text)
Roud #16390
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "My Ole Mistus Promised Me" (lyrics) and references there
File: KiWa234S

Stealin', Stealin'
DESCRIPTION: "Stealin', stealin', pretty mama don't you tell on me, I'm stealin' back to my same old used to be." "Now put your arms around me like a circle 'round the sun...." The singer loves a married woman; it's gotten him in trouble. He says this proves his love
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recording, Memphis Jug Band)
KEYWORDS: love adultery
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 79, "Stealin', Stealin'" (1 text)
DT, STEALN
RECORDINGS:
Memphis Jug Band, "Stealin' Stealin'" (1928)
NOTES [29 words]: Hendrick van Kampen points me to sources attributing this to Gus Cannon and Will Shade. Under the circumstances, I have little choice but to list the author as unknown. - RBW
File: FSBW079A
Stealing Grapes

DESCRIPTION: "What are you doing in my vineyard? Stealing grapes. What will you do if the black man comes? Rush through if I can."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren)
KEYWORDS: playparty food theft
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Newell-GamesAndSongsOfAmericanChildren, #115, "Stealing Grapes" (1 text)

File: Newe115

Steam Arm, The

DESCRIPTION: "A curious soldier I am told, About a soldier fierce and bold." The soldier loses his arm in battle and can no longer fight with his wife. He acquires a steam-powered replacement arm.
He fights off his wife -- and knocks down the jail and the mayor

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1954 (collected from Nancy Stevenson by Boswell); 19C (Wolf)
KEYWORDS: technology humorous soldier injury disability wife husband prison
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond)) US(Ap)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Wolfe/Boswell-FolkSongsOfMiddleTennessee 61, pp. 101-102, "The Steam Arm (A Curious Story)"
(1 text, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2248, p. 152, "The Steam Arm" (1 reference)
Roud #4817
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Johnson Ballads 146, "The Steam Arm" ("Oh, wonders sure, will never cease"), J. Pitts
(London), 1819-1844; also Harding B 11(3655), J. Pitts (London); Harding B 11(3657), J. Whiting
(Birmingham), 1833-1835; Firth b.25(284), W. and T. Fordyce (Newcastle), 1832-1842; Harding B
11(3656); Harding B 18(453); Harding B 11(4159); Harding B 11942); Johnson Ballads 2810; Johnson Ballads 1357

File: BoWo061

Steam Doctor, The

DESCRIPTION: "Steam Doctor, steam till you're ready to faint; Without ever stoppping to ask your complaint. He gives No. 6 and lobelia so fast That within a few hours you're breathing your last These hard times!"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety)
KEYWORDS: disease doctor death
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 442-443, "The Steam Doctor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7832
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Rigs of the Times" (form, lyrics)

NOTES [83 words]: Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety assumes that this is a satire of the methods of Dr. Samuel Thomson (1769-1843), who according to the Dictionary of American Biography was "originator of the 'Thomsonian system' of treatment by vegetable remedies and the vapor bath."

The song seems to have been built from "The Rigs of the Times," but since Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety's single stanza seems to be all that survives, it's difficult for us to say more. - RBW

File: Beld442
Steam from the Whistle
DESCRIPTION: "Steam from the whistle, Smoke from the stack, Going to the graveyard To bring my baby back, Oh, my li'l baby, Why don't you come back?"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: railroading burial separation
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 242, (no title) (1 short text)
File: ScNF242A

Steam Ship
DESCRIPTION: "If a steam ship weighed ten thousand tones And sailed five thousand miles... If the mate was each six feet talls And the captain just the same; Would you multiply or subtract To find the captain's name?" The singer admits "I can't do that sum"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: riddle ship technology
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 151, "Steam Ship" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 151, "Steam Ship" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #15886
NOTES [25 words]: This looks to me like a parody of the "story problems" children are sometimes assigned. The information in the riddle is not sufficient for solution. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Br3151

Steam Tug Olson, The
DESCRIPTION: "Come listen to me one and all, A story I will tell, Of the wreck of a gallant tug one night." The Olson, of Buffalo, steamed out of the harbor seeking something to tow. The boat begins to sink, and the engines fail. Only two men are rescued
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (collected from "Francie" Roddy by Walton)
KEYWORDS: ship wreck disaster death
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 217-219, "The Steam Tug Olson" (1 text)
Roud #19869
NOTES [71 words]: Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors observes that, in the early age of steam, tugs had steam power but long-haul vessels generally did not, so tugs did a brisk business hauling sailing ships into harbor. As more of the larger vessels were powered, the tugs found less work -- and sometimes went far from their home ports to seek it. Since tugs are rarely very seawayorthy, disasters like this one resulted. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: WGM217

Steamboat Bill
DESCRIPTION: The Whippoorwill, steered by Steamboat Bill, is ordered "to try to beat the record of the Robert E. Lee." Provoked by a gambler, Bill drives the boat so hard that the boiler explodes. Bill's wife says that her next husband will be a railroad man.
AUTHOR: Words: Ren Shields / Music: F. A. Mills
EARLIEST DATE: 1910
LONG DESCRIPTION: The Whippoorwill, steered by Steamboat Bill, is ordered "to try to beat the record of the Robert E. Lee." Provoked by a gambler, Bill drives the boat so hard that the boiler explodes, with Bill betting he will fly higher than the gambler. People all along the river mourn. Bill's wife says that her next husband will be a railroad man.

KEYWORDS: ship technology disaster death gambling

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 100-101, "Steamboat Bill" (1 text)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 16, "Steamboat Bill" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 206, "Steamboat Bill" (1 text)

RECORDINGS:
Al Bernard, "Steamboat Bill" (Grey Gull 4177/Radiex 4177/Van Dyke 74177, 1928)
Smiley Burnett, "Steamboat Bill" (Decca 5685, 1939; rec. 1938)
Fiddlin' John Carson, "Steamboat Bill" (OKeh 40306, 1925; rec. 1924)
Arthur Collins, "Steamboat Bill" (Columbia A1005, 1911) (Victor 16867, 1911) (CYL: Everlasting 379-1 (1911), on Protobilly)
Dixon's Clod Hoppers, "Steamboat Bill" (Vocalion 15862, 1931; rec. 1930)
Jack Kaufman, "Steamboat Bill" (Columbia A2809, 1919; Diva 2480-G [as Jack Wilson], 1927)
Beatrice Kay, "Steamboat Bill" (Columbia 36941, 1946; rec. 1945)
Kessinger Brothers, "Steamboat Bill" (Brunswick 563, rec. 1930)
Edward Meeker, "Steamboat Bill" (Edison 50886, 1921)
Riley Puckett, "Steamboat Bill" (Columbia 113-D [as George Riley Puckett], 1924)
Bob Roberts, "Steamboat Bill" (Phono-Cut 5112, c. 1914)
Ernest Rogers, "Steamboat Bill" (Victor 20798, 1927)
Paul Tremaine & his Orch. "Steamboat Bill" (Columbia 2229-D, 1930)
Varsity Eight, "Steamboat Bill" (Cameo 1266/Romeo 500, 1927)
Fred Wilson [probably a pseud. for Jack Kaufman, but I don't know for sure], "Steamboat Bill" (Harmony 5118-H, 1930)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

SAME TUNE:
Earl McDonald's Original Louisville Jug Band, "Casey Bill" (Columbia 14371-D, 1928; rec. 1927; on GoodForWhatAilsYou, Protobilly)
Delmore Brothers, "Steamboat Bill Boogie" (King 1023,1951; on Protobilly)

NOTES [37 words]: "Steamboat Bill" is usually considered a parody of "Casey Jones." Earl McDonald's "Casey Bill," in turn, is a parody of "Steamboat Bill," in which Steamboat Bill has a race down the Mississippi -- against Casey Jones. - PJS

Last updated in version 5.1

File: FCW016

---

Steamer Alexander, The

DESCRIPTION: Tuesday, July 30, Alexander leaves Newcastle. Galley, a passenger, falls overboard and drowns. The song wonders who he was, and what his girl will feel.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1963 (Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi)

KEYWORDS: drowning river ship death

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi 1, "The Steamer Alexander" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST MaWi001 (Partial)
Roud #9206

NOTES [89 words]: Manny/Wilson-SongsOfMiramichi: "The song was made up by 'a man from Neguac.' It tells of a moonlight excursion on the passenger steamer Alexandra, and how Theodore Galley fell overboard and was drowned. These excursions were popular entertainment on the Miramichi River in the 1890's and early 1900's... The composers of these laments like to fix in them the day and date and the time of day of the incident they describe."
Taking that statement for what it's worth, Tuesday, July 30, occurred in 1891, 1896, 1902, 1913 and 1919. - BS
File: MaWi001

Steamer Idaho, The
DESCRIPTION: "On the sixth day of November, On a dark and stormy night... The papers gave a warning Of a fierce and awful storm," but "The captain gave his order." The greedy owners ignore the warnings. Nineteen men die when the Idaho sinks
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1952 (Walton collection)
KEYWORDS: ship storm disaster death
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 228-229, "The Steamer Idaho" (1 text)
Roud #19862
NOTES [173 words]: Blaming greedy owners is a commonplace in disaster songs, but it seems to have been unusually suitable in this case. According to Mark L. Thompson, Graveyards of the Lakes (Wayne State University Press, 2000), p. 336, the steamer Idaho was built in 1863, and based on the drawing on p. 337, she looked rather like the Lady Elgin.
By 1897, she was clearly obsolete, and indeed had been withdrawn from service in the early 1890s. In 1897, though, freight prices were very high, so her owners hastily put her back in service. Hardly the ship to face the gales of November! And, indeed, it was only about a month later when she faced the storm which sank her. Thompson agrees with the song in saying that 19 sailors died. According to Bruce D. Berman, Encyclopedia of American Shipwrecks (Mariner's Press, 1972), p. 247, the sinking took place seven miles from Old Cut Light near Long Point, Ontario.
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors say that two men who clung to the mast were saved. All others aboard were lost. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: WGM229

Steamer Wyoming, The
DESCRIPTION: "Come all ye joky seamen, Now, as it's getting late, And I'll sing you my experiance On a bad package freight." Sailing on the Wyoming "almost proved my ruin": The captain is mean, the mates ruinous, and the rest of the crew unfit for their tasks
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1952 (collected from John E. Hayes by Walton)
KEYWORDS: ship sailor hardtimes
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, p. 112, "The Steamer Wyoming" (1 short text)
Roud #19893
File: WGM112A

Steamship Deane, The
DESCRIPTION: Deane leaves Harbour Grace for Hawke's Harbour with 50 whalers. "Making full speed she lands upon a rock." All are saved by the Penguin light keeper.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1976 (Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou)
KEYWORDS: rescue sea ship wreck
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Jun 23, 1935 - Deane wrecked on North Penguin Shoals. (Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou)
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 29, "The Steamship Deane" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #30703
NOTES [13 words]: Northern Shipwrecks Database lists the cause as "Stranded. Navigation error."
- BS
File: LeBe029

Steel Laying Holler
DESCRIPTION: Foreman's instructions for laying a railroad iron, with variations to fit the particular situation. E.g. "Awright, awright, Ev'rybody get ready. Come on down here. Come on, boys. Bow down. Awright, up high, Awright, throw 'way...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934
KEYWORDS: work railroading nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 10-12, "Steel Laying Holler" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #15100
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Roustabout Holler"
cf. "Levee Camp Holler"
File: LxA010

Steel Mill, The
DESCRIPTION: "The mill O, the mill O, The weary, weary mill O; O' the steel mill I've had my fill, And wish it at the de'il O." The singer wishes he were at any other job. Hard as the work is, the flour is poor. Finally he declares that he will quit
AUTHOR: Words: John Blair
EARLIEST DATE: 1889 (Blair, "Lays of the Old Identities," according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)
KEYWORDS: work miller hardtimes
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, pp. 26-27, "The Steel Mill" (1 text)
File: BaRo026

Stella Kenney [Laws F37]
DESCRIPTION: Stella Kenney is murdered on her way home after spending ten months with her uncle Rob Frazier. Frazier, married and with three children, is sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)
KEYWORDS: homicide incest prison trial family
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1917 (?) - Murder of Stella Kenney. She was pregnant; presumably her uncle was the father
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Laws F37, "Stella Kenney"
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 151-153, (no title; Thomas's informant called the girl "Stell" or "Stellie," not "Stella") (1 text)
ST LF37 (Partial)
Roud #2273
File: LF37

Step It Away
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, step it away, you pretty boys! Step it away your time! God bless your body,
When your legs keep time.

Step It Up and Go

DESCRIPTION: Verses about situations that force (someone) to "step it up and go." The singer's woman no longer loves him. The singer flees the gun of a man whose woman he has been courting. In a river, he meets an alligator. And so forth

Step on a Crack

DESCRIPTION: "Step on a crack, (You'll) break your mother's back, Step on a hole, (You'll) break your mother's (sugar bowl)." Similarly "ditch... mother's nose will itch"; "dirt... tear your father's shirt"; "nail... in jail"

Sterling Price

DESCRIPTION: "Sterling Price he was a brave man, He will clean out Dixie Land." "Sterling Price he marched to Lexington And there he took old Mulligan." "Sterling Price he wheeled his men about And cut the Dutch into sauerkraut." "Rinktum-polle-rodel-day."
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Aug 10, 1861 - Battle of Wilson's Creek
Sep 20, 1861 - Capture of James A. Mulligan (1830-1864), then a colonel, and his force at Lexington
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, p. 355, "Sterling Price" (1 fragmentary text)
Roud #7769
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Old General Price" (subject)
cf. "The Jolly Union Boys" and references there (concerning Battle of Wilson's Creek)
NOTES [322 words]: Sterling Price (1809-1867), a former governor of Missouri and Confederate commander of Missouri troops, was not initially anti-Union, but the behavior of Union partisans caused him to turn Confederate.
Price started raising militia forces, and these formed thelarger part, but not all, of the Confederate army at the Battle of Wilson's Creek. After the Confederates won that battle, Price was able to advance and capture the garrison of Lexington (some 3000 men under Mulligan, who could have been saved had any of the other local Union officers obeyed orders), but it didn't change the strategic situation much; Price retreated into Arkansas soon after.
Even allowing for its fragmentary state, this item is rather confused. As noted, Wilson's Creek came before Lexington. At that battle, the Union commander, Nathaniel Lyon, had tried a divergent attack, splitting off Franz Sigel's brigade (which was regarded as "Dutch," i.e. German) for an attack on the Confederate rear while the main body attacked from the other direction.
This strategy failed. Sigel was quickly routed, whereupon the remaining federal forces, outnumbered by something like 5:2, were forced into a slugging match. They were better soldiers than the utterly raw Confederates, and so were able to keep the field until their ammunition ran out, but then retired.
The confusion, though, arises from the fact that it was the troops of Ben McCulloch (the other Confederate commander at Wilson's Creek) which routed Sigel. But I know of no other battle in which Price defeated a primarily German force, unless perhaps it was the affair at Carthage (July 5, 1861), where Price induced Franz Sigel to retreat without a real fight.
I have the strange feeling that "Old General Price" and "Sterling Price" are a single piece, one being adapted from the other -- but since we don't have a single complete stanza of either, and only one tune, this is beyond proof. - RBW
File: Beld355A

Stern Old Bachelor

DESCRIPTION: The singer describes his life in the "little sod shanty dear to me." He is proud that "I'm a stern old bachelor, from matrimony free." He rejoices that he can live in squalor, snore all he wants, stay out late and never have to explain where he has been

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Chubby Parker)
KEYWORDS: bachelor home
FOUND IN: US(Ap,So)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Randolph 481, "A Stern Old Bachelor" (1 text)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 354-355, "The Old Bachelor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #82, "The Jolly Bachelor" (1 text, with a cheerier form than the others but still clearly the same song)
DT, STRNBACh*
Roud #4306
RECORDINGS:
Carter Family, "Stern Old Bachelor" (Decca 5565, 1938; Montgomery Ward 8070, 1939)
Harry Conway [pseud. for Jerry White] "I'm a Stern Old Bachelor" (Radio 4262, 1928; Van Dyke 74262 [possibly as Ben Litchfield], 1929)
Chubby Parker, "I'm a Stern Old Bachelor" (Champion 15247 [as Smilin' Tubby Johnson]/Silvertone 5012, 1927; Supertone 9188, 1928) (Conqueror 7888, 1931)
File: R481
Steve O'Donnell's Wate
DESCRIPTION: "Steve O'Donnell was an Irishman, as everybody has said. He was loved by all his friends, both rich and poor." He dies; his family mourns; he is prepared for burial. At the wake, one man jokes that O'Donnell was Jewish, and everyone fights and gets drunk
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah)
KEYWORDS: death mourning Jew humorous
FOUND IN: US(Ro)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah,, #168, "Steve O'Donnell's Wake" (1 text)
Roud #10921
File: Hubb168

Stewart Family, The
DESCRIPTION: "'Twas on a Saturday afternoon, A wee before the sun gaed doon, that Ewan [MacColl] cam fae London Toon, To meet the Stewart family." They exchange songs and advice; the singer jokes that Ewan's family must have been tough to put up with the Stewarts
AUTHOR: Belle Stewart (1906-1997)
EARLIEST DATE: 2006 (Stewart/Belle-Stewart-QueenAmangTheHeather)
KEYWORDS: travel music
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stewart/Belle-Stewart-QueenAmangTheHeather, pp. 91-92, "The Stewart Family" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #21431
File: StQue091

Stick My Head in a Paper Sack
DESCRIPTION: "Stick my head in a paper sack, Show dem niggers how to Cairo back. Shake dat flat foot. Shake dat flat foot."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1919 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 463, "Stick My Head in a Paper Sack" (1 fragment)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 463, "Stick My Head in a Paper Sack" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Roud #11787
File: Br463

Sticking Out a Mile from Blarney
DESCRIPTION: Rhyming verses with a chorus: "God be with those merry merry days that we spent outside in Blarney." For example, "Blarney Castle stands up straight and the rocks and the rooms are underneath, If you ask for fish they'll give you meat, sticking out ...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (OCanainn-SongsOfCork)
KEYWORDS: humorous nonballad food
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCanainn-SongsOfCork, pp. 110-111, "Sticking Out a Mile from Blarney" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [59 words]: OCanainn-SongsOfCork: "This is one of those songs with many verses; in convivial company the song often calls forth instant composition of new verses.... [The singer] remembers an old woman singing it on the Dublin train and she had a lot of verses about the war, Sean McEntee and De Valera. God knows what words they'll have for it in a few more years." - BS
Stickit Ball a Hack'
DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Jack t' the rack back Stickit ball a hack Low ball high ball Scallion jack."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSealslands)
KEYWORDS: nonballad playparty
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSealslands, p. 114, "Stickit Ball a Hack" (1 text)
NOTES [58 words]: The current description is based on the Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSealslands text. Parrish writes, "... this curious song is half spoken in a lively fashion, to rhythmic hand clapping. When the verse is finished then [you do the chorus]." Parrish has no verses but, I assume, they are like "my mother bought me x," "If x won't work then ..." - BS
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Parr114

Sticks and Stones May Break My Bones
DESCRIPTION: "Sticks and stones may break my bones, But names will never hurt me."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US Britain New Zealand
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 126, "(Sticks and stones)" (1 text)
Montgomerie-Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 152, "(Sticks and Stones)" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Peter and Iona Opie, _I Saw Esau: Traditional Rhymes of Youth_, #25, "(Sticks and stones)" (1 text)
Roud #19255
File: SuSm126A

Sticks and Stones May Break My Bones, Say What You Please When I'm Dead and Gone
DESCRIPTION: "Sticks and stones may break my bones, Say what you please when I'm dead and gone, But I'm gonna drink corn liquor till I die." Singer may admit that he is not respected, or "know you'll talk about me when I'm gone," but will enjoy himself now/hereafter
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1913 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: drink nonballad death floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 39, "Sticks and Stones May Break My Bones" (1 text)
Roud #7860
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sticks and Stones May Break My Bones"
NOTES [60 words]: Presumably related to the common rhyme "Sticks and stones will break my bones, But names will never hurt me" (for which see, e.g. Montgomerie-Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 152, "(Sticks and Stones)" or Iona & Peter Opie, _I Saw Esau: Traditional Rhymes of Youth_, #25, "(Sticks and Stones)." This, however, takes a slightly different twist on the ending. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.4
File: Br3039
Stinkin' Cow, The

DESCRIPTION: One fine morning, Old McGee sends daughter Molly out with Johnny. They see a bull mating with a cow. Molly asks how the bull knows the cow is willing. Johnny answers, "tis by the smell." She says she stinks like the cow; they emulate the bovines

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (collected by Logsdon from Lew Pyle)
KEYWORDS: sex animal bawdy children
FOUND IN: US(SW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 47, pp. 230-231, "The Stinkin' Cow" (1 text)
Roud #10103
File: Logss047

Stir the Wallaby Stew

DESCRIPTION: Dad's in jail, Mother unfaithful, the sheep are dead, the farm's for sale. Dad gets out, sees this, and goes back to jail. Chorus: "So stir the wallaby stew, Make soup of the kangaroo tail, I tell you things is pretty tough Since Dad got put in jail."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1957
KEYWORDS: work unemployment poverty hardtimes prison family mother father infidelity humorous
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Hodgart-FaberBookOfBallads, p. 234, "Stir the Wallaby Stew" (1 text)
Ward-PenguinBookOfAustralianBallads, pp. 134-135, "Wallaby Stew" (1 text)
Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads, p. 36, "Stir the Wallaby Stew" (1 text)
Roud #8242
RECORDINGS: John Greenway, "Wallaby Stew" (on JGreenway01)
NOTES [771 words]: John Greenway writes of this piece, "Australia's Tobacco Roaders (without the sexual propensities of Jeeter Lester's relatives) are the delightful family of Dad and Dave and the other residents of Shingle Hut -- Mother, Mabel, Sal, Dan, Joe, and Cranky Jack. [The latter not a member of the family but a mentally disturbed man they were somewhat afraid of but kept on because he worked so hard and demanded so little. But in the edition I have of the book, he appears in just one chapter and is hardly mentioned again. I suspect Greenway did not actually read the book.]" "Originally the creation of the first great Australian humorist, Steele Rudd (Arthur Hoey Davis) in his books On Our Selection and Our New Selection, Dad and Dave were the archetype of the hard-working but hard-luck free selectors... but the characters were taken away from him and became progressively more lazy and stupid.... "Wallaby Stew' is a shameful example of the degeneration of the Rudd family (as the tune is a degeneration of the "Bungaree" melody), but it represents an important area of Australian folklore." Rudd [1868-1935] wrote the first portion of the story in 1895, and it was published in The Bulletin in that year; the complete book On Our Selection came out in 1899. The degradation described by Greenway took place in a movie and radio show which came out in Rudd's lifetime but in which he had no part; indeed, Wikipedia says he despised the result.

Gwenda Beed Davey and Graham Seal, A Guide to Australian Folklore, Kangaroo Press, 2003, p. 83, write of the folk evolution of the characters, "Dad and Dave yarns portray Dave as a harmless simpleton, very much in the tradition of the widely distributed 'numb skull' folk stories. I don't know how Rudd lost control of his copyright, but the publication history of his book is an incredible mess. The edition I have of On Our Selection was published in the A&R Classics series in 1953 (mine is the 1973 printing; Steele Rudd, On Our Selection, Angus & Robertson, 1973; ISBN 0207129533). This has a publisher's note which states that "In 1893 Steele Rudd contributed to the Bulletin the first of the series of sketches which later appeared in book form under the title On Our Selection, which in 1903 published Our New Selection. The copyright was purchased by the N.S.W. Bookstall Company, which in 1909 brought out new editions of both books, On Our Selection containing only chapters 1-16 of the original volume, chapters 17-26 and 7 additional chapters being issued under the title Stocking Our Selection in the same year." Curiously, A&R apparently used this abbreviated form of On Our Selection while seemingly using the full text of Our New Selection.

That same publisher’s note says that 250,000 copies of On Our Selection had been published by 1940. This in a country that had about seven million people at the time.

But it’s not clear that Greenway’s connection with Rudd is correct. Ron Edwards doesn’t even mention Rudd in his notes on the song, which he had from A. L. Lloyd, who claimed to have it from Old Bush Songs. But this does not appear to be a reference to Banjo Paterson’s book but to a later volume with the same name. Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads have no notes on it at all. And I would add that Greenway is right that this song doesn’t sound like Rudd’s characters. In the book, Dad is perhaps unwise and stubborn, and frequently angry, but he is a hard worker who does the best for his family; he’s not the sort to go to prison. The ninth story, "Dave’s Snake-bite," in the eleventh paragraph in fact refers to Dad’s "great presence of mind and ability." The third chapter in Our New Selection says that the family had had six straight years of good harvests and was so prosperously that they were able to sell Shingle Hut for £400 and move off to new property.

The song talks about a "big brother Luke," but I haven’t met a Luke; the brothers who are most active in the book are Dave and Joe.

And the Rudd family was already large at the very beginning of On Our Selection, and one daughter married and a son had gone roving early in the book. While Mother might have had "A shearer bloke forever within hail," is it likely that she is young enough that "the family will have grown a bit" after Dad gets out of jail?

On the other hand, the song is right in saying calling the mother "Mother," not "Mum," and the Rudds did have a neighbor named "Brown."

If I had to guess, I’d guess this isn’t based on Rudd’s characters, at least not as they appear in the book. But I won’t claim to be certain. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1

File: Hodg234

Stir-Up Sunday Song

DESCRIPTION: Song for "Stir-Up Sunday," the last Sunday before the beginning of Advent: "Stir up, we beseech thee, The pudding in the pot, And when we get home, We'll eat it all hot."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1973 (Simpson)

KEYWORDS: food nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

ADDITIONAL: Jacqueline Simpson, _The Folklore of Sussex_, B. T. Batsford, 1973, p. 142, "(Stir up, we beseech thee)" (1 short text)

File: Simp142

Stobbie Parliament Song

DESCRIPTION: "In the shelter, oh, the shelter At the top of Albert Street, There’s a sturdy crop of veterans Who regularly meet." Jamie Reid proposes that they all go for a drive. They set out about the area and have a picnic lunch. All enjoy it very much

AUTHOR: adapted by Jim Reid (source: Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)

EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee); original reportedly written c. 1908

KEYWORDS: travel food nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 56, "Stobbie Parliament Picnic" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #22225

NOTES [36 words]: This is what you get when you encourage people to think that songwriting is a virtue instead of something that interferes with the preservation of traditional songs. A song about a country tour and a picnic! Öy. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.5

File: Gath056
Stockman (I), The
DESCRIPTION: "To horse, boys, to horse! O'er the broad plains we ride, The sun for our compass, the bush for our guide." The stockman happily sets about his work. When the day is done and the horses are tired, the workers eat, drink, and relax
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (AndersonStory)
KEYWORDS: worker cattle horse nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, p. 206, "The Stockman I" (1 text, tune references)
File: AnSt206

Stockman (II), The
DESCRIPTION: "A bright sun and a loosened rein, A whip whose pealing sound Rings forth amid the forest trees...." The singer enjoys dealing with restless herds and handling his horse well. "The saddle was our childhood's home, Our heritage the whip."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (AndersonStory)
KEYWORDS: worker cattle horse
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 207-208, "The Stockman (II)" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: AnSt207

Stockman's Last Bed, The
DESCRIPTION: A song lamenting the death of poor Jack, the stockman, (gored to death by a cow). "And we laid him where wattles their sweet fragrance shed, And the tall gum tree shadows the stockman's last bed."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1865 (AndersonStory)
KEYWORDS: death Australia lament
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 46, 92, "The Stockman's Last Bed" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Meredith/Tritton-DukeOfTheOutback, p. 87; "Down Where the Coolibahs Grow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 215-218, "The Stockman's Last Bed I/II" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, p. 168, "The Stockman's Last Bed" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fahey-PintPotAndBilly, pp. 54-55, "The Stockman's Last Bed" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, pp. 84-86, "The Stockman's Last Bed" (1 text, 2 tunes)
ADDITIONAL: Bill Beatty, _A Treasury of Australian Folk Tales & Traditions_, 1960 (I use the 1969 Walkabout Paperbacks edition), pp. 302-304, "The Stockman's Last Bed" (1 text)
Roud #9113
RECORDINGS:
John Greenway, "The Stockman's Last Bed" (on JGreenway01)
NOTES [136 words]: Anderson reports that this is derived from "The Boatswain's Last Whistle" by Charles Dibdin (1865?), but Manifold questions this, observing that the tune does not fit well. Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong says that a George Moran claimed to have written it in 1863, but this version apparently was not published until 1885, twenty years after the first printing. Thus I'd consider the author uncertain.
Gwenda Beed Davey and Graham Seal, _A Guide to Australian Folklore_, Kangaroo Press, 2003, p. 266, say of the Wattle "Folk name of the native [Australian] plant species _Acacia_. Wattle is a popular Australian icon, and is also favoured in folksong and popular verse for romantic and sentimental death scenes. Possibly due to this association, some people believe it is unluck to have wattle in the house. - RBW
Stockmen of Australia, The DESCRIPTION: "The stockmen of Australia, what rowdy boys are them." They curse, they ride hard, You can find him resting in camp, where he will give you a good welcome. He is the ladies' pet. He attends all fun events. The singer cheers for the stockmen
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (AndersonStory)
KEYWORDS: worker animal nonballad
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 201-202, "The Stockmen of Australia" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: Macd226

Stoker's Complaint, The
DESCRIPTION: "There are men in the Navy are known as POs, But what they are there for, the Lord only knows, They stand on the plates and they bawl and they shout, And order the poor old King's Dustmen about."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: sailor navy work derivative
FOUND IN: Britain
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 31, "The Stoker's Complaint" (1 text, tune referenced)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Mountains of Mourne" (tune)
File: Tawn016

Stoker's Lament, The
DESCRIPTION: "Down in the stokehold there's all sorts of jobs, Priming and topping and sorting out cobs." The chief stoker orders the stokers to work. The stokers beg the chief to let one of them go on sleeping
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1968 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: sailor work derivative
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, pp. 32-33, "The Stoker's Lament" (1 text, tune referenced)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Vilikens and his Dinah (William and Dinah) [Laws M31A/B]" (tune) and references there
File: Tawnn017

Stolen Bride, The
DESCRIPTION: "Down by the river, the willows grow tall, Whippoorwill calling, hear their sad call." The girl is in love with a man from a family who is feuding with her own. Her father captures her lover. She begs for his life; refused, she accepts death beside him
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)
KEYWORDS: love death hate hardheartedness family execution revenge feud homicide
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stolen Child, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer meets a boy playing in a field. The boy lives with gypsies. He says his parents are dead and he hopes to bring flowers to their grave.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1835 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3669))

KEYWORDS: abduction flowers death father mother orphan Gypsy

FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 168-170, "The Stolen Child" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #1120

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(3669), "The Stolen Child" ("Alone on the heather a fair child was straying"), Walker (Durham), 1797-1834; also Firth b.26(334), Johnson Ballads 1131, Harding B 11(3668), Firth c.14(190), Harding B 11(2579), Harding B 15(316b), "The Stolen Child"
LOCSheet, sm1857 620050, "Alone on the Heather, or, The Stolen Child" ("Alone on the heather a fair child was straying"), Oliver Ditson (Boston), 1857 (1 text, 1 tune)

File: KiTu168

Stolen Child, The (The Lindbergh Kidnapping)

DESCRIPTION: Catchall of Lindberg songs. Typical example: The singer will "tell you about the stolen baby." Lindbergh's infant is stolen from his home; the kidnapper demands money; after a great hue and cry, the baby is found, but is dead

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)

KEYWORDS: homicide mother father children abduction

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Mar 1, 1932 - Kidnapping of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr. (19 months old at the time). The kidnapper demands and receives $150,000, but the child is not returned
May 12, 1932 - The boy's body is found
Apr 3, 1936 - Execution of Bruno Hauptman, linked to the crime primarily by possession of some of the ransom money

FOUND IN: US(Ap)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, p. 147, (no title); pp. 148-150, "The Stolen Baby" (2 texts; the two are different metrically, but share enough phrases that I think it proper to lump them, since neither seems to have had real traditional vogue)
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, p. 72, (no title) (1 text); p. 73, (no title) (1 text in elementary German, tune referenced)

Roud #14051

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Lindbergh's Baby" (subject)

NOTES [81 words]: The Lindburgh kidnapping, according to Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, inspired "several" songs, apart from Thomas's sundry items. Since none of them show any real evidence of traditional vogue (as opposed to, say, the equally-numerous Titanic songs), I'm lumping them here. (The case is different for "Lindbergh's Baby," which was taken from tradition; it has its own listing.) William Butler Yeats wrote a song, "The Stolen Child." It is not related to any of the items filed here.

- RBW

Last updated in version 4.2

File: ThBa147
Stomach Robber, The

DESCRIPTION: "You may talk about your pleasure trips... But... the Lucy Smith, She surely takes the cake." The cook looks good, but serves poor food from a disgusting galley. "They eat of the swill till their faces turn blue But their stomachs are robbed forthwith."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1953 (collected by Walton from Robert Collen)
KEYWORDS: cook food hardtimes sailor derivative
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Walton/Grimm-Windjammers-SongsOfTheGreatLakesSailors, pp. 87-89, "The Stomach Robber" (1 text)
  Roud #6555
CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "A Trip on the Erie (Haul in Your Bowline)" (theme)
NOTES [39 words]: Roud combines this with "A Trip on the Erie (Haul in Your Bowline)," which is also a song about a bad cook, but the form is different enough that I think this a deliberate rewrite, although they likely come from the same original. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2
File: WM087

Stone and Lime

DESCRIPTION: The singer, a stranger, falls in love with Molly. They court "at the foot of yon mountain [where] there runs a clear stream." They marry in spite of her angry parents though he insists "it's not for her money it's her I adore"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: courting marriage money floatingverses father mother
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #149, p. 2, "Thou Hast Been My Ruin"; #147, p. 2, ("Thou hast been my ruin") (1 text plus 2 fragments)
  Greig/Duncan6 1216, "Stone and Lime" (11 texts, 8 tunes)
  Roud #1081
CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "Gra Geal Mo Chroi" (II -- "Down By the Fair River") (lyrics)
  cf. "Green Grows the Laurel" ("change the green and yellow for the orange and blue) and references there
ALTERNATE TITLES:
  She Has My Heart Enclosed
  Pretty Polly
NOTES [236 words]: The song is a patchwork of fragments and it's not clear, in spite of my description, that it ends happily. The fragments recall "Gra Geal Mo Chroi (II -- Down By the Fair River), sharing lines "Like a sheet of white paper is her neck and breast" and "At the foot of yon mountain there runs a clear stream," and coming close with "She's a pattern for Venus" instead of "She's a pattern of virtue." The one verse, sometimes chorus, that separates the songs, is "For she's aye been my ruin, my sad, sad downfall: She has got my heart enclosed, like a stone and lime wall."
A final verse recalls "Green Grows the Laurels": "It's at our next meeting Our love we'll renew And we'll change the green and yellow To the orange and blue."
Regarding "we'll change the green and yellow To the orange and blue" line, see my rant at "Green Grows the Laurel" about Willaim Studwell's statement in The American Song Reader. I posted a query to the BALLAD-L list [@LISTSERV.INDIANA.EDU]: is "she's changed the green and yellow for the orange and blue ... from an Orange political song?" The most conclusive response was from Dr John Moulden, who wrote "I have inspected almost all the songs in Orange song books in the libraries in Belfast and Dublin, and some in Britain (including the Library of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ireland) and I have no knowledge of any Orange song from which this might derive." [quoted with permission] - BS

Last updated in version 2.6
Stone Cold Dead in the Market (He Had It Coming)

DESCRIPTION: Singer's husband returns from drinking and beats her. She kills him with a rolling pin. "Now he's stone cold dead in the market" His family swears to kill her. She says "if I kill him he had it coming" even "if I was to die in the electric chair"

AUTHOR: Wilmoth Houdini
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Houdini)
KEYWORDS: violence crime homicide derivative husband wife
FOUND IN: West Indies(Trinidad)
RECORDINGS:
Wilmoth Houdini and his Royal Calypso Orchestra, "He Had It Coming" (1939, on Decca 18005)
Ella Fitzgerald and Louis Jordann and His Tympany Five, "Stone Cold Dead in the Market" (1945, on Decca 23546A)
Macbeth the Great and Gerald Clark and the Band, "Stone Cold Dead in the Market" (1999, on "Calypso at Midnight," Rounder CD 11661-1840-2 [recorded 1946]

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Murder in the Market" (some lines; probably the basis for "Stone Cold Dead in the Market")
NOTES [79 words]: The Macbeth Town Hall version ties Houdini's song back to "Murder in the Market" with the verse "Oh Payne dead, Payne dead, he's stone dead (3x) And if I kill him he is me husband." Macbeth also refers to the Fitzgerald-Jordan version with the lines "I catch up the rolling pin And work on his head till I bash it."
I have included this song because of the part it plays in the history of commercial calypso music. For the context see the discussion of "Hold 'im Joe." - BS

Last updated in version 5.2

File: RcSCDitM

Stonecutter Boy

DESCRIPTION: A stonecutter boy sees a young woman. If she'll rest a moment, he'll "tell you of the dream I had last night." They sit under an oak; she soon gives "a little scream." Smoothing her clothes, she invites him to tell the dream again when next they meet

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1960 (recording, A. L. Lloyd)
KEYWORDS: sex dream worker
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
D, STONEBOY
Roud #971
RECORDINGS:
Anne Briggs, "The Stonecutter Boy" (on BirdBush1, BirdBush2, Briggs3, Briggs4)
A. L. Lloyd, "The Stone-Cutter Boy" (on Lloyd01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Next Market Day" (plot) and references there
NOTES [24 words]: According to Lloyd, the song had not appeared in print at the time of its recording. Again, I can't bring myself to assign the keyword "bawdy." - PJS

Last updated in version 5.3

File: DStstoneb

Stones of Eling Mill, THe

DESCRIPTION: "No sails to turn and no vanes to set, For the waters are never still, So bring your corn, we'll grind it to flour, 'Twixt the stones of Eling Mill." The mill is powered by tide not a river. It will work "as long as old nature sends us the tides"

AUTHOR: Ken Stephens (source: Browne-FolkSongsOfOldHampshire)
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Browne-FolkSongsOfOldHampshire)
KEYWORDS: miller nonballad
FOUND IN:
Stonewall Jackson's Way

DESCRIPTION: The prayers and fighting methods of "Stonewall" Jackson and his troops (the "Stonewall" Brigade) are described. Each exploit is described as "Stonewall Jackson's Way." The poem concludes, "The foe had better ne'er been born That gets in Jackson's way."

AUTHOR: John Williamson Palmer (1825-1906)

EARLIEST DATE: 1904 (Wharton)

KEYWORDS: Civilwar battle

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1824-1863 - Life of Thomas Jonathan "Stonewall" Jackson
July 21, 1861 - First Battle of Bull Run/Manassas. In a confusing fight, with his brigade falling to pieces, General Bernard Bee sees Jackson's brigade holding steady. He describes the brigade as a "Stone wall," coining the nickname by which Jackson has been identified ever since (though Jackson always maintained that the name was the brigade's, not his)
May/June, 1862 - Jackson's "Valley Campaign." Jackson, with strength never exceeding two divisions, battles the equivalent of three (weak and scattered) Union corps to a standstill by rapid movement and concentration. One of three federal commanders in the area (the Union army had no overall commander) was the inept Nathaniel P. Banks, whose troops suffered severely at Jackson's hands (and would suffer again at Cedar Mountain in August)
Aug 29-30, 1862 - Second Battle of Bull Run/Manasses. Lee and Jackson defeat Pope

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 79-81, "Stonewall Jackson's Way" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hill-PoemsAndSongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 83-84, "Stonewall Jackson's Way" (1 text)
Colonial-Dames-AmericanWarSongs, pp. 136-137, "Stonewall Jackson's Way" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #C170, p. 195, "Stonewall Jackson's Way" (2 references)
DT, STNWALLJ*

NOTES [389 words]: I have always heard this as a poem, but the Digital Tradition has a tune, and Wharton's War Songs and Poems of the Southern Confederacy also prints a melody; I suppose it might be traditional. I don't know of any field collections, though.
That this piece was composed by an educated man cannot be doubted (note the use of Latin in one stanza); there is no reason to question Palmer's authorship. Wharton however (War Songs, p. 47) reports a rumor that "[t]hese verses were found written on a small piece of paper, all stained with blood, in the bosom of a dead soldier of the old Stonewall Brigade, after one of Jackson's battles in the Shenandoah Valley."
It turns out that this was a bit of deliberate fakery. According to E. Lawrence Abel, Singing the New Nation: How Music Shaped the Confederacy, 1861-1865, Stackpole, 2000, p. 109, "The reason for the anonymity and the falsification was to keep its author, John W. Palmer, from being arrested as a Southern sympathizer." He was a citizen of Baltimore who worked as a war correspondent for various Northern newspapers, and apparently first used the phrase "Stonewall Jackson's Way" in his reporting, then upgraded it to a poem.
Palmer, describing the way he produced the piece, said he built it around an Oregon lumbering tune (Abel, p. 110), although he did not identify the tune.
The origin of the nickname "Stonewall" is explained in the historical references. The poem also calls Jackson "Old Blue Eyes" -- allegedly given because of the way his eyes glowed in battle. The description of the Second Battle of Bull Run in the penultimate stanza is completely backward. Lee had separated his army into wings under Longstreet and Jackson. Union General John Pope caught up with Jackson, and tried very hard on August 29 to dislodge him. He almost succeeded. But then Longstreet came up on Pope's flank and completely demolished the Union army. The "Ashby" referred to in the same stanza is Turner Ashby, who had commanded Jackson's cavalry in the Valley campaign and was killed June 6, 1862.
The descriptions of Jackson's prayer are more reasonable; Jackson was a presbyterian lay preacher (though his students at the VMI described him as very dull), and he attributed all his success to God. Frankly, he was a very obnoxious person -- but, obviously, a great tactician. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1
Stop That Clock
DESCRIPTION: "Stop that clock or I'll lose a quarter, Doe lie snoring on yer back, If I'm not there to mix the mortar, On my word I'll get the sack, Bridget doe yer stop to dress yer, Doe yer stop to put on yer frock... Yo goo down and stop that clock."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1966 (collected from Mrs. E. M. Turner by John Fletcher, according to Raven)
KEYWORDS: work clothes hardtimes
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Jon Raven, _The Urban and Industrial Songs of the Black Country and Birmingham_, Broadside, 1977, p. 185, "Stop That Clock" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #1134

Storm Bird
DESCRIPTION: "The storm bird lives upon the rock, The angry surges roar... (incomprehensible) surges roar."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)
KEYWORDS: bird home
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 764, "Storm Bird" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

Storm Is Passing Over, The
DESCRIPTION: Verse and chorus end "You know the storm is passing over, Hallelu." Verses in Carawan/Carawan-AintYouGotARight begin "Some say Peter, some say Paul Ain't but one God for we all." "The tallest tree in Paradise Christians call the tree of life."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1966 (Carawan/Carawan-AintYouGotARight)
KEYWORDS: floatingverses Bible nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Carawan/Carawan-AintYouGotARight, p. 63, "The Storm Is Passing Over" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [214 words]: Not related to "A Great Storm Pass Over."
The verse "The tallest tree in Paradise / The Christians call the 'Tree of Life'" is a floater. It is in Black religious songs from the southern U.S. and Bahamas, and the Sacred Harp as well (in publication date order, see W. McDonald and S. Hubbard, _The Wesleyan Sacred Harp_ (Boston: John P. Jewitt & Co, 1857 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")), p. 149, "The Resurrection"; Thomas P. Fenner, _Religious Folk Songs of the Negro_ (Hampton: The Institute Press, (1909 ("Digitized by Internet Archive"))(1874)) p. 103, "Stay in de Field"; Charles L. Edwards, _Bahama Songs and Stories_ (Boston: Houghton, Mifflin and Co, 1895 ("Digitized by Internet Archive")) #22, pp. 41-42, "Turn Back and Pray."; Howard W. Odum, _Religious Folk Songs of the Southern Negroes_ reprinted from American Journal of Religious Psychology and Education, July 1909, vol. 3 ("Digitized by Internet Archive"), p. 36). Also, see the Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 644, "Tree in Paradise." Index reference and notes to "All My Trials." The Biblical reference is to Genesis 2.8-9, "And the Lord God planted a garden eastward in Eden .... the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil" [King James]. - BS
Last updated in version 4.0
File: CarCa063
Storm of Heber Springs, November 25, 1926, The (Heber Springs Tornado)

DESCRIPTION: "'Twas on Thanksgiving ay The town of Heber Sprints Was visited by a cyclone And partly swept away." The people were "no doubt feasting," with no hint of their fate. It was their own fault for not properly attending to their churches

AUTHOR: Ruby Dylan and the father of Almeda Riddle? (source: Abrahams/Riddle-ASingerAndHerSongs)

EARLIEST DATE: 1970 (Abrahams/Riddle-ASingerAndHerSongs)

KEYWORDS: disaster religious

FOUND IN: US(So)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Abrahams/Riddle-ASingerAndHerSongs, pp. 21-22, "The Storm of Heber Springs, November 25, 1926" (1 text)
Roud #18113

NOTES [41 words]: According to Almeda Riddle's recollection, every church in Heber Springs was damaged by this storm. Me, I'd draw the conclusion that there was something wrong with the churches, not the congregations, but the song authors didn't see it that way. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1
File: Abr021

Stormalong

DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Characteristic lines: "To me way, old Stormalong!... Aye, aye, aye, Captain Stormalong." About the death of Stormalong, who was elaborately buried off Cape Horn. The singer wishes he were Stormy's son so he could treat the sailors better

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1882

KEYWORDS: shanty sailor death burial

FOUND IN: US(MA) Britain(England(West))

REFERENCES (15 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 82-83, "Stormalong" (1 text, 1 tune)
Bone-CapstanBars, pp. 126-127, "Stormalong" (1 text, 1 tune)
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, pp. 88-89, "Stormalong" (1 text, 1 tune)
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 78-84, "Storm Along John," "Stormy," "Old Stormy" (6 texts, 6 tunes)
Terry-TheShantyBook-Part1, #10, "Stormalong John" (1 text, 1 tune)
Shay-AmericanSeaSongsAndChanteys, pp. 63-65, "Stormalong" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, p. 102, "Stormalong" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 40, "Mister Stormalong" (1 text, 1 tune)
Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, p. 834, "Stormalong" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, STORMALNG*

Frederick Pease Harlow, _The Making of a Sailor, or Sea Life Aboard a Yankee Square-Rigger_, 1928; republished by Dover, 1988, p. 276, "Storm Along John" (1 text, 1 tune)
Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; notes to #398, ("Stormey's dead, that good old man") (1 text)
Roud #216

RECORDINGS:
Bob Roberts, "Mister Stormalong" (on LastDays)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The 'Cholly' Blues" (floating verses)
cf. "Deep Blue Sea (II)" (floating verses)
cf. "Carry Him To the Burying Ground (General Taylor, Walk Him Along Johnny)" (lyrics)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Captain Stormalong
Come-along, Git-along, Stormalong John
Oh, Stormalong
Old Stormalong
Mister Stormalong John
NOTES [74 words]: Shay reports, "Old Stormalong is the only heroic character in the folklore of the sea: he was born, like the great clipper ships, in the imaginations of men."
Shay adds a tall tale of Stormy aboard the clipper Courser, so large that it just barely fit through the English Channel. Stormalong had the ship greased with soap so it could slide through more easily. This is why the sea near Dover is foamy: The cliffs scraped off all the soap. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: Doe082

Stormy Weather Boys
DESCRIPTION: Adventures of a barge crew on the Thames. The captain arrives half-drunk; the crew gets sozzled, the barge runs aground. They meet a mermaid and a ghost (who takes the wheel); eventually they arrive at Yarmouth and wind up in "The Druid's Arms"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Adventures of a barge crew on the Thames. The captain comes aboard half-drunk; the crew gets sozzled and the barge runs aground. They encounter a mermaid ("Up jumped a mermaid covered with muck/We took her down the foc's'le and had a good time") and a ghost (who takes the wheel); eventually they arrive at Yarmouth and wind up in "The Druid's Arms."
Chorus: "Stormy weather boys, stormy weather boys/When the wind blows our barge will go"
KEYWORDS: sex river work drink storm foc's'le humorous sailor worker ghost mermaid/man parody
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South)) Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, pp. 144-145, "Stormy Weather Boys" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 143, "Stormy Weather, Boys" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, STRMYWTH
Roud #1851
RECORDINGS:
Bob Roberts, "Stormy Weather Boys" (on LastDays)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. Windy Old Weather" (meter)
cf. "The E-ri-e" (theme) and references there
NOTES [41 words]: Not having heard this sung, I can't prove it's a parody of "Windy Old Weather" -- but the meter and lyrics both say it is. - RBW
I don't think so, despite the lyrical similarities. "Windy Old Weather" is sung in waltz time, while this is 4/4. - PJS
Last updated in version 4.4
File: DTstrmyw

Stortebeker
DESCRIPTION: German (Plattdeutsch). Forebitter shanty. "De Stortebeker un Godeke Micheel" -- Stortebeker and Micheel are pirates who offend God. Near Hamburg they try to take a merchant, but the Bunte Kutz rams them; they are hanged by Rosenfeld
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1977 (Hugill-SongsOfTheSea)
KEYWORDS: pirate ship battle death execution foreignlanguage shanty
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 131, "Stortebeker" (2 texts, German & English, 1 tune) Stortebeker/Stortebecker was a Frisian nobleman about whom many legends gathered -- e.g. that when his ship was captured, the mast was found to be hollow and filled with bars of gold. Another story was that, when he took prisoners, he executed them unless they could empty his wine glass at one swallow; this was the origin of his name, which means something like "gulper of glasses." It sounds as if he fell somewhere between a privateer and a pirate. He had fought for Lübeck against Denmark, but began raiding ships on his own once peace was made in 1395. He terrorized the entire Baltic, and many nations tried to capture him. In 1402, the Admiral of Hamburg finally caught up with him and he was hanged. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: HSoSe131

Story of Gerald Chapman, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh come all you young people and listen while I tell, The fate of Gerald Chapman who was hung in a prison cell." A "desperate criminal," he killed a policeman on his travels from Georgia to New York to Connecticut. He gives a warning and is hung

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1926 (recording, Carl Conner, according to Cohen)
KEYWORDS: death homicide execution prison
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, p. 88, "The Story of Gerald Chapman" (1 text)
RECORDINGS:
Carl Conner, "Story of Gerald Chapman" (Columbia 15076-D, 1926)
File: CAFS1088

Story of Mine Cave-In: Shirley and Smith

DESCRIPTION: "They worked all day to the evening tide, Before the mountain made it glide, The rocks and earth came a-crumbling down, And under this those men was found."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: mining disaster death
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 338, "Story of Mine Cave-In: Shirley and Smith (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #6656
File: BrS4338

Story the Crow Told Me, The

DESCRIPTION: Nonsense verses, supposedly told by a crow. "I bought me a suit of union underwear... I couldn't get it off 'cause I lost the combination", "My gal took sick the other day... I bought her a corset... She's in better shape now than she was before"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (recording, Carolina Buddies)
KEYWORDS: humorous nonsense animal bird
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 163, "The Story the Crow Told Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
RECORDINGS:
Carolina Buddies, "The Story That the Crow Told Me" (Columbia 15641-D, 1931; rec. 1930; on CrowTold01)
New Lost City Ramblers, "The Story that the Crow Told Me" (on NLCR04, NLCR11)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I'm Going Away in the Morn" (floating lyrics)
NOTES [8 words]: This is almost certainly from minstrel sources. - PJS
File: CSw163
Stove Boat, A

DESCRIPTION: "Your stought young men who go a-whaling... little thinking while you're sailing That grim death may near you be. The singer writes to give warning. The boats pursue a school of whales, but many of the boats are wrecked; only five survive. Others lament

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1794 (Journal of the _Polly_)
KEYWORDS: whaler death wreck
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 36-39, "A Stove Boat" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27532
File: HGam036

Stow'n' Sugar in de Hull Below

DESCRIPTION: "I wish I was in Mobile Bay, Rollin' cotton by the day, Stow'n' sugar in de hull below, Below, belo-ow, Stow'n' sugar in de hull below." A steamboat chant, mentioning the Natchez and depicting the engineer and captain.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1924
KEYWORDS: river nonballad work floatingverses ship
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Botkin-TreasuryMississippiRiverFolklore, p. 592, [no title] (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Belle-a-Lee" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Hieland Laddie" (floating lyrics)
NOTES [22 words]: This uses lyrics from "Hieland Laddie," which is far better known, but the form appears different enough that I separate them. - RBW
File: BMRF592B

Stowaway, The

DESCRIPTION: "From Liverpool 'cross the Atlantic Our white sail floated over the deep." A poor stepfather stows his boy aboard to seek better times in Halifax. First mate will kill the stowaway unless he says who among of the crew put him aboard. The mate relents

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)
KEYWORDS: poverty reprieve ship youth hardtimes ship sailor homicide
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 51, "From Liverpool 'cross the Atlantic" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 890-892, "The Stowaway" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 46, "Stowaway" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6341
RECORDINGS:
Cyril O'Brien, "The Stowaway" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
BROADSIDES:
File: GrMa051

Straight-Out Democrat

DESCRIPTION: "We never took stock in H. Greeley, Though Baltimore took him in tow... The ticket that's honest we'll honor... We would like to have Charlie O'Conor, For O'Conor and Adams we'll

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1860
KEYWORDS: slavery emancipation politics
FOUND IN: AFR, USA
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Roud #3262
RECORDINGS:
The song encourages others to vote for the "true" democrats

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1872
KEYWORDS: political nonballad derivative
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1872 - Grant/Greeley election
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Spaeth-ReadEmAndWeep, p. 43, "Straight-Out Democrat" (1 text, tune referenced)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Rosin the Beau" (tune) and references there
NOTES [113 words]: Ulysses S. Grant was first elected President in 1868, and by the time of the 1872 election it was clear that he could not control corruption in his administration. The Democrats nominated Horace Greeley, but a splinter of the party broke off and nominated Charles O'Connor and the younger John Quincy Adams.
The weakness of the O'Connor bid is shown by the fact that all the minor parties combined picked up only 35,097 votes (less than 1% of the total), and that O'Connor didn't gain a single electoral vote -- even though Greeley died before the electoral tally was taken, and the 68 electoral votes he would have earned were split five ways.
Grant, of course, won the election. - RBW
File: SRW043

Straightened Banks of Erne, The

DESCRIPTION: The romantic "winding banks of Erne" are no more. "'Progress hates meandering' is a maxim all must learn, So the engineers have straightened out the winding banks of Erne" for the new powerhouse at the falls of Assaroe.
AUTHOR: Colm Ó Lochlainn (source: OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)
KEYWORDS: river technology nonballad parody
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 16A, "The Straightened Banks of Erne" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Shannon Scheme" (theme: Ireland's hydro-electrification)
NOTES [191 words]: OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads: "Written by the compiler to celebrate the opening of the Erne hydro-electric scheme and dedicated to the late Dr Laurence Kettle and Professor Tatlow, the engineers responsible for the scheme." By O Lochlainn's description, it is a parody
Notes to IRClaire01: "The Shannon Scheme for the Electrification of the Irish Free State, by harnessing the fall in the River Shannon between Killaloe and Limerick, was commenced in 1925 and completed in 1929 and, within six years, was supplying 85% of Ireland's electricity requirements...." - BS
According to John A. Murphy, Ireland in the Twentieth Century (Gill and MacMillan, 1975, 1989), p. 65, "[T]he most far-sighted step in the development of natural resources by the state was the Shannon Scheme -- the beginning of the national supply of electricity -- and the establishment of the Electricity Supply Board in 1927, destined to be perhaps the most successful of those semi-state bodies which in future years became characteristic and indispensable features of the Irish economy."
For a later song about Ireland's electrification, see "The ESB in Coolea." - RBW
File: OLCm016A

Straloch

DESCRIPTION: "All you that are at liberty, I pray you all draw near, And listen to my story, it's what you soon shall hear. It was at the last Martinmas, I went unto the fair, I did engage wi' Straloch, to work the second pair."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: farming work
Strands of Ballylickey, The

DESCRIPTION: "I oftimes think of home and where I spent my childhood days before I was forced to roam." He recalls playing, fishing, music and dancing "by the strands of Ballylickey on the shores of Bantry Bay." He hopes to return "but fortune seems against me"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (OCanainn-SongsOfCork)

KEYWORDS: home travel return Ireland nonballad

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCanainn-SongsOfCork, pp. 108-109, "The Strands of Ballylickey" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: OCan108

Strange Things Wuz Happening

DESCRIPTION: "Well, they'z strange things wuz happening in the land... The war wuz going on, caused many hearts to moan...." "But Uncle Sam with Germany tried to live in peace, Kept blowin' up his vessels...." Listeners are urged to stand by the United States

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1923 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: war ship

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 240, "Strange Things Wuz Happening" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 240, "Strange Things Wuz Happening" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)

Roud #6623

NOTES [83 words]: The immediate cause of American entry into World War I was, of course, Germany's use of unlimited submarine warfare. Early in the war, the Germans had tried sinking ships without warning, and stopped as the U. S. protested.

I have to think this was intended for popular consumption, but neither the editors of Brown nor I have seen it elsewhere. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.7

File: BrII240

Strange Visitor, The

DESCRIPTION: "A wife was sitting at her reel ae nicht... and aye she wished for company." A body comes in in pieces: Large feet, small legs and thighs, at last a great head. She asks about each part; the visitor explains its purpose. Which is to take her soul
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Montgomerie)
KEYWORDS: death loneliness
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 196, "(A wife was sitting at her reel ae nicht)"
(1 text)
DT, STRANVIS
File: MSNR196

Stratton Mountain Tragedy [Laws G18]
DESCRIPTION: A young woman and her baby are trapped in a cold blizzard. When they are found, the mother is dead but the baby alive; the mother had wrapped it in her cloak
AUTHOR: Seba Smith (?-1843)
EARLIEST DATE: broadside (1843)
KEYWORDS: mother baby death
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1821- Death of Lucy Blake and her daughter Rebecca, whose fate is believed to have inspired this ballad
FOUND IN: US(NE)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Laws G18, "Stratton Mountain Tragedy"
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 27-28, "Stratton Mountain Tragedy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 32-35, "The Stratton Mountain Tragedy,"
"The Snowstorm" (2 texts, one of them being Seba Smith's original; also a copy of the original sheet music cover)
DT 638, STRATMTN*
Roud #5442
NOTES [260 words]: Seba Smith is also widely credited with "Young Charlotte (Fair Charlotte)" [Laws G17], which is obviously far more popular than this.
Smith's greatest claim to fame, at least in his lifetime, was for the creation of a Maine character named "Major Jack Downing." Charles E. Clark, Maine: A History, Norton, 1977, pp. 74-75, describes the origin of this character as follows:
"In January 1830, by contrast, the readers of the new Portland Daily Courier were introduced to an amusing caricature of themselves named Maj. Jac Downing. Jack Downing of Downingville, 'about three miles from the main road as you go back into the country, and... jest about in the middle of down east' was the creation of the Courier's thirty-seven-year-old publisher, Seba Smith, a native of Buckfield, [Maine] and a boyhood resident of Bridgton. Smith's self-taught pioneering childhood, marked by various manual jobs and a stint at teaching school, had led finally to Bowdoin College and an honors degree, some coastwise and transatlantic travel, and the beginning of a newspaper career with the Eastern Argus.... His Courier, begun in 1829, was to be nonpartisan. His main object in creating Jack Downing, a rustic character who made folksy and often hilariously naive observations in Maine dialect on state and national politics, was political satire.... But in addition to creating the prototype for every cracker barrel philosopher and country oracle who has enlivened American journalism ever since, Smith created a regional character, the Downeast Yankee." - RBW
Last updated in version 5.3
File: LG18

Strawberry Fair
DESCRIPTION: A blacksmith, going to Strawberry Fair, meets "a fair maid go selling her ware."
She says she has "a lock that doth lack a key." She invites him to try his key. Now she has no wares and wishes her lock had been a gun to shoot the blacksmith.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle)
KEYWORDS: sex bawdy commerce food
Strawberry Jam, Cream of Tartum

DESCRIPTION: "Strawberry jam, cream of tartum, Give me the initial of your sweethearthurt. "A, B, C, D....\" "What kind of suit is he goin' to wear? "Red, blue, black brown.\" "What kind of house you'll marry in?\" Questions about what the couple will do when they marry

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1944 (Trent-Johns-PlaySongsOfTheDeepSouth)

KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad marriage children

FOUND IN: Trent-Johns-PlaySongsOfTheDeepSouth, pp. 26-27, "Strawberry Jam, Cream of Tartum" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: TrJo026

Strawberry Roan, The [Laws B18]

DESCRIPTION: An unemployed cowboy is offered the chance of a job if he can ride the strawberry roan. Confident of his skill, he mounts the horse -- to be thrown within seconds. He concludes the horse is unridable.

AUTHOR: Words: almost certainly Curley Fletcher (1892-1954)

EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (published by Fletcher in the Globe, AZ Record as "The Outlaw Broncho")

the standard version derives from "Rhymes of the Roundup," published 1917

KEYWORDS: horse cowboy injury unemployment

FOUND IN: US(NW,Ro,SE,So,SW) Canada

REFERENCES (16 citations):

Laws B18, "The Strawberry Roan"
Randolph 202, "Strawberry Roan" (1 text)
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms II, 652-655, "The Strawberry Roan" (2 texts)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #14, "The Strawberry Roan" (1 text)
Fowke/Johnston-FolkSongsOfCanada, pp. 98-100, "The Strawberry Roan" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fife/Fife-CowboyAndWesternSongs 68, "The Strawberry Roan" (2 texts, 1 tune, the second text being the parody "Bad Brahma Bull")
Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 28, "The Strawberry Roan" (1 text, 1 tune); also two sequels by Wilf Carter:
29, "He Rode the Strawberry Roan" (1 text); 30, "The Fate of Old Strawberry Roan" (1 text)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #165, "The Strawberry Roan" (1 text, 1 tune)
Tinsley-HeWasSinginThisSong, pp. 130-133, "The Strawberry Roan" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abernethy-SinginTexas, pp. 140-151, "Strawberry Roan" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: John I. White, _Git Along, Little Dogies: Songs and Songmakers of the American West_, 1975 (page references are to the 1989 University of Illinois Press edition), pp. 137-147, "The Strange Career of 'The Strawberry Roan'" (1 text, 1 tune, plus various excerpts and a history of the song)

Suzi Jones, _Oregon Folklore_, University of Oregon/Oregon Arts Commission, 1977, p. 45, "The Old Strawberry Roan" (1 text, 1 tune)

Tom Nash and Twilo Scofield, _The Well-Travelled Casket: Oregon Folklore_, Meadowlark Press, 1999, p. 120, "The Strawberry Roan" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #3239

RECORDINGS:

Arizona Wranglers, "Strawberry Roan" (Merry Xmas L949, 1929; on BackSaddle)

Bill Boyd & his Cowboy Ramblers, "Strawberry Roan" (Bluebird B-5667, 1934; Montgomery Ward M-4778, 1935)

Beverly Hillbillies, "The Strawberry Roan" (Brunswick 514/Supertone S-2263, 1931)

W. C. Childers "Strawberry Roan, Part 1/Part2" (Superior 2722 [as Enos Wanner], 1931; Champion 16467, 1932; Montgomery Ward 4951, 1936; Champion 45103, n.d.)

Bob Ferguson [pseud. for Bob Miller], "Strawberry Roan" (Columbia 15677-D, 1931)

Paul Hamblin, "The Strawberry Roan" (Victor V-40260, 1930; on WhenIWas2)

Harry Jackson, "Strawberry Roan" (on HJackson1, CowFolkCD1)

Bob Kackley & Bob Ferguson, "Strawberry Roan" (OKeh 45531, 1931)

Bud Kelly, "Strawberry Roan" (Broadway 8331, rec. 1932)

[Frank] Luther & [Carson] Robison "The Strawberry Roan" (Melotone M-12350, 1932)

Ranch Boys, "The Strawberry Roan" (Decca 5074, 1935)

Bob Sherman, "The Strawberry Roan" (Clarion 5336C, c. 1929)

Wesley Tuttle, "Strawberry Roan" (Coral 64051, 1950)

John White, "The Strawberry Roan" (Banner 32179/Orchestra 1629/Perfect 12712/Conqueror 7753, 1931)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "While Hanging Around Town" (tune & meter)

cf. "The Wild Buckaroo" (tune & meter)

cf. "No Balls at All" (tune, in some versions)

cf. "Wild Rover No More" (tune, in some versions)

cf. "The Zebra Dun" (theme of the un-ridable horse) and references there

cf. "The Castration of the Strawberry Roan" (tune, character of the Roan)

SAME TUNE:

Castration of the Strawberry Roan (File: Logs013)

He Rode the Strawberry Roan (Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 29; Wilf Carter, "He Rode the Strawberry Roan" (Bluebird [Canada] B-4974, 1934/Regal Zonophone [Australia] G23152, n.d.))

The Fate of Old Strawberry Roan (Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 30; Wilf Carter, "The Fate of Old Strawberry Roan" (Montgomery Ward M-7186, 1937; Bluebird [Canada] B-4602, c. 1938))

Ridge Runnin' Roan (Tex Fletcher, "Ridge Runnin' Roan" (Decca 5302, 1936))

Tchepone (RECORDING, Toby Hughes, Chip Dockery & Robin Thomas, on InCountry)

ALTERNATE TITLES:

The Outlaw Broncho

NOTES [274 words]: Powder River Jack Lee claimed that Frank R. Chamberlain wrote the words to this song in 1894. No other evidence of this has been offered, however, and every known version seems to go back to Fletcher.

A number of "sequels" to "Strawberry Roan" have been written, including the two by Wilf Carter cited by Ohrlin. Austin E. Fife published an article on the subject, "The Strawberry Roan and His Progeny," in the John Edwards Memorial Quarterly.

For more on the offspring of this song, see the notes to "The Castration of the Strawberry Roan." - RBW

I think it's been fairly well established, despite Powder River Jack, that Fletcher wrote the words, probably in 1914. To quote Logsdon, "It was being sung by many people and Fletcher got no credit or money. So he collaborated with two Hollywood song writers, Nat Vincent and Fred Howard, to publish it as sheet music. When it came off the press they had made changes and added a chorus. Fletcher was furious and demanded that they print his original poem on the inside back cover for those who wanted to sing it the right way (and he wrote a bawdy version.)" The chorus they wrote, "Oh, that strawberry roan," has become part of most versions collected from tradition. - PJS

This general story is also confirmed by White, who notes other places where Fletcher published the poem his way. He doesn't seem to have been bothered as much by the fact that it became a song. - RBW

A soldier serving in Viet Nam wrote "Tchepone" about an "easy" bombing run that turns into a nightmare, to this tune. It was recorded on the CD "In Country: Folk Songs of Americans in the Viet Nam War," not yet indexed. -PJS

_last updated in version 5.3_

File: LB18

Strawberry Shortcake (Lemonade Pop; Guess Who)

DESCRIPTION: "Strawberry shortcake, (Gooseberry/Huckleberry) pie, Tell the initials of your honeypie." Or "Ice cream soda, Lemonade pop," or other foods....

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks)

KEYWORDS: food playparty love nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks, p. 110, "(Strawberry shortcake, gooseberry pie)" (1 short text)

Roud #19307

File: McIn110C

Streams of Bunclody, The

DESCRIPTION: "Was I at the moss-house where the birds do increase" he'd have a kiss from his sweetheart. "The cuckoo is a pretty bird ..." Various if ... then verses. She shuns him. She is rich. He is poor. He is "going to America, my fortune to try."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1888 (Sparling); c.1867 (broadside, Bodleian 2806 b.9(206))

KEYWORDS: love emigration separation America floatingverses

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):

OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 76, "The Maid of Bunclody, and the Lad She Loves So Dear" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #3000

BROADSIDES:

*Bodleian, 2806 b.9(206), "The Maid of Bonclody," P. Brereton (Dublin), c.1867 ; also 2806 b.9(232) [almost entirely illegible], "The Maid of Bon Clody, and the Lad She Loves Dear"

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Cuckoo" (floating verses)

NOTES [487 words]: See H. Halliday Sparling, Irish Minstrelsy, 1888, pp. 224-225, 515. The description follows Sparling who notes, "From a Dublin ballad-slip of very uncertain date, but certainly before 1850." Floating verses include "The cuckoo is a pretty bird .....", "If I was a clerk and could write a good hand .....", "If I was a lark and had wings, I then could fly ... where my love does lie." The cuckoo verse seems uncorrupted:

The cuckoo is a pretty bird, it sings as it flies;
It brings us good tidings and tells us no lies;
It sucks the young bird's eggs to make its voice clear,
And it never cries cuckoo till the summer is near.

In spite of its title -- "The Maid of Bon Clody, and the Lad She Loves Dear" -- broadside Bodleian 2806 b.9(232) seems to follow Sparling exactly. The words I can make out in each verse are the same words that are in Sparling. But then, the same is true of OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 76: same title and same text.

Steve Gardham points out that the text of Richard Hayward's "Down in Glasloch" (78 Recording: Richard Hayward with Roy Robertson Orchestra, "Down in Glasloch" (Rex 15016B/matrix DR 11826-1, 1947)) is very similar to "The Streams of Bunclody"; the verses here seem minor modifications of the non-floating verses there and include the floating verses that do not refer to the
From Sparling's "The Streams of Buncloidy"
O was I at the moss-house where the birds do increase,
At the foot of Mount Leinster or some silent place
Near the streams of Buncloidy, where all pleasures do meet,
And all I'd require is one kiss from you sweet.

For "Down in Glasloch"
Oh, were I down in Glasloch where the birds sing so blithely
I would walk there with my true love and she by my side
And in all things she might ask me I would gladly do her favor
For there's no love like my true love in all Monaghan wide.

The following comment is from John Moulden: "I rather distrust his [Hayward's] versions and suspect that the text you quote has been tinkered. In a later (10 inch LP "Words and Music of Ireland" Decca EBL522) recording of the tune alone played by Hayward on an organ, he states that he collected the song in Monaghan 'close to Sir Shane Leslie's home' wherever that may have been." John Moulden is researcher at the "Centre for the Study of Human Settlement and Historical Change" at National University of Ireland, Galway whose subject is "the printed ballad in Ireland" The date of 1947 for Hayward's record is provided by Bill Dean-Myatt, MPhil. compiler of the Scottish National Discography. He also has a 1938 date for an earlier Hayward recording as "Down in Glaslough". Help provided by Steve Gardham, John Moulden and Bill Dean-Myatt is cited here with their permission.

Glaslough is a village in Count Monaghan, Ireland, just south of Northern Ireland. Mount Leinster and the River Clody are near Buncloidy, County Wexford. - BS

Streams of Lovely Nancy, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer (a sailor?) describes the "streams of lovely Nancy", a mountain with a castle, his beloved (who lives in the castle), a river, and a ship. He ends by addressing all "streamers"; he will write to his love, "For her rosy lips entice me..."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1825 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 28(29))

LONG DESCRIPTION: In this extremely confused song, the singer (probably a sailor) describes the "streams of lovely Nancy", a mountain with a castle, his beloved (who lives in the castle), a river, and a ship from the Indies. He ends by addressing all "streamers" (tin-miners washing ore?), saying he will write to his love, "For her rosy lips entice me, with her tongue she tells me 'No'/And a angel might direct us right, and where shall we go?"

KEYWORDS: love rejection lyric nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South,West)) Ireland US(MW,SE) Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (15 citations):
VaughanWilliams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs, p. 98, "The Streams of Lovely Nancy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Copper-SongsAndSouthernBreezes, pp. 294-295, "The Streams of Lovely Nancy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 126, "The Streams of Lovely Nancy" (2 texts; the "B" and "C" texts are this, while "A" is "Nellie (I)"
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 139, "Te Streams of Lovely Nancy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 714, "Streams of Lovely Nancy" (1 text)
Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 23, "The Streams of Lovely Nancy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cologne/Morrison-WiltshireFolkSongs, pp. 40-41, "The Streams of Lovely Nancy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hodgart-FaberBookOfBallads, p. 149, "The Streams of lovely Nancy" (1 text)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 26, "Green Mountain" (1 text)
Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 120-121, "Green Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune, probably this although its four verses never mention Lovely Nancy)
Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland 64, "The Streams of Lovely Nancy" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H520, p. 259, "The Strands of Magilligan" (1 text, 1 tune)
Graham-Joe-Holmes-SongsMusicTraditionsOfAnUlsterman 72, "The Strands og Magilligan" (1 text, 1 tune); p. 280, "The Streams of Lovely Nancy" (a reprint of a W. Armstrong broadside)
Forget-Me-Not-Songster, pp. 80-81, "Green Mountain" (1 text)
DT, LOVNANCY* (erroneously titled "The Steams of Lovely Nancy")
Roud #688

RECORDINGS:
Turp Brown, "The Streams of Lovely Nancy" (on Voice02)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 28(29), "The Streams of Lovely Nancy," W. Armstrong (Liverpool), 1820-1824; also Harding B 11(3678), Firth b.34(282), Harding B 11(3677), Harding B 11(3678A), Harding B 11(825), Firth c.13(24), Harding B 11(3679)[some words illegible], 2806 c.17(410), 2806 c.17(409) [some words illegible], Harding B 15(320a), Harding B 11(1519), Firth b.26(542)[some words illegible], "[The] Streams of Lovely Nancy"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Cursor Mundi" (14th century religious poem, sharing images)
cf. "The Ploughboy (I)" (lyrics)
cf. "If I Were a Fisher" (floating verses)
cf. "Farewell, Sweet Mary" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Nellie (I)" (lyrics)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Streams of Nantsian
Faithful Emma
The Dreams of Lovely Nancy

NOTES [196 words]: All versions of this song seem to be equally mysterious. Lloyd quotes A.G. Gilchrist as speculating, with evidence, that this song is actually a relic of a hymn to Mary. -PJS Cologne/Morrison-WiltshireFolkSongs also suggest that it is a "half-remembered version of a mediaeval mystic or religious poem, possibly to the Virgin Mary," and note that Wiltshire is very anti-Catholic -- which perhaps hints that the confusion in the song might be due to bowdlerization. That doesn't strike me as very likely, however.
Margaret Dean-Smith offers the speculation that "streams/streamers" refer not to flowing waters but to "streamers," who worked in tin mines. If that helps. It seems to be a popular hypothesis; Tony Deane and Tony Shaw The Folklore of Cornwall, B. T. Batsford, 1975, pp. 68-69, say that the line "Come all you little streamers" is "an obvious reference to early tin mining." Anne Gilchrist went beyond that, suggesting that the descriptions of the castle in the song describe St. Michael's Mount, and that "Nancy/Nantsian" might be a corruption of "Marazion," a town near the mount. The former is possible but not compelling; the latter strikes me as a stretch. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0
File: VWL098

Streets of Forbes, The

DESCRIPTION: Ben Hall is "hunted from his station" and "like a dog shot down." A bushranger for three years, he is planning to "cross the briny sea" when found and "riddled like a sieve." The authorities parade his body through the streets of Forbes

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Manifold)
KEYWORDS: outlaw police Australia death
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
May 5, 1865 - Ben Hall is ambushed and killed by police near Forbes, Australia
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, pp. 60-61, "The Streets of Forbes" (1 text, 1 tune)
Paterson/Fahey/Seal-OldBushSongs-CentenaryEdition, pp. 79-81, "The Streets of Forbes" (1 text)
DT, STRFORBE*
Roud #20764

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ben Hall" (plot, subject) and references there
NOTES [125 words]: For the background of Ben Hall, see the other songs listed in the cross-references, especially "Ben Hall."
To tell this from the other Ben Hall songs, consider this first verse:
Come all of you Lachlan men, and a sorrowful tale I'll tell Concerning of a hero bold who through misfortune fell.
His name it was Ben Hall, a man of good renown
Who was hunted from his station, and like a dog shot down.
According to Patterson/Fahey/Seal, this is based on a poem by Ben Hall's brother-in-law John McGuire. John S. Manifold, Who Wrote the Ballads? Notes on Australian Folksong, Australasian Book Society, 1964, p. 58, says that McGuire wrote it after seeing Hall's body carried past him, and calls this "the most moving of all the bushranger ballads." - RBW

Streets of Hamtramck

DESCRIPTION: "As I walked out in the streets of Hamtramck, As I walked out in Hamtramck one day," the singer meets an old worker, "too old to work and... too young to die." The old worker talks of what he has done and says that workers must fight for pensions
AUTHOR: Kuppy Scott
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Western Folklore 19, according to Cohen); reportedly written for a 1949 strike
KEYWORDS: age work hardtimes derivative
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp. 416-417, "Streets of Hamtramck" (1 text)
File: CAFS2416

Streets of Laredo, The [Laws B1]

DESCRIPTION: (The singer meets a young cowboy "all dressed in white linen and cold as the clay." The cowboy has been shot (or given a venereal disease?) and is dying. He regrets his carousing, gives instructions for his burial, and dies.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1886
KEYWORDS: cowboy death lament burial dying funeral disease violence homicide
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,MW,NE, Ro,So,SE,SW) Canada(Mar) Ireland
REFERENCES (47 citations):
*Laws B1, "The Cowboy's Lament (The Dying Cowboy)"
Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Barry-NewGreenMountainSongster, pp. 250-252, "The Cowboy's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 392-397, "The Unfortunate Rake" (3 texts plus a fragment and references to 4 more versions; 1 tune, all of which are this song despite the title)
Randolph 182, "The Cowboy's Lament" (2 texts plus an excerpt, 1 tune)
Abrahams/Riddle-ASingerAndHerSongs, pp. 75-78, "Tom Sherman's Barroom" (1 text, 1 tune)
Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 124, "The Dying Cowboy" (3 texts, none of which refer to "The Streets of Laredo" and which might be mixed with other versions of this song)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 100, "The Dying Cowboy" (1 short text plus mention of 1 more)
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 82, pp. 103-105, "The Dying Cowboy" (3 texts)
List-SingingAboutIt-FolkSongsInSouthernIndiana, pp. 354-360, "The Cowboy's Lament," "The Wild Cowboy" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Neely/Spargo-TalesAndSongsOfSouthernIllinois, pp. 181-184, "The Dying Cowboy" (3 texts)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 263, "The Unfortunate Rake" (1 text plus 9 excerpts and mention of two others, called "The Unfortunate Rake" but apparently all this song)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 263, "The Unfortunate Rake" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #15, "The Dying Cowboy" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 148, "The Cowboy's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Abernethy-SinginTexas, pp. 149-151, "The Streets of Laredo" (1 text, 1 tune, plus a text of "The Unfortunate Rake")
Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. 353-359, "The Dying Cowboy" (6 texts; 3 tunes on pp. 452-453)
Carey—Maryland Folk Legends and Folk Songs, p. 116, "Dying Cowboy" (1 text)
Friedman—Viking / Penguin Book of Folk Ballads, p. 424, "The Cowboy's Lament (The Streets of Laredo)" (2 texts, the second being a lumberjack text, "The Wild Lumberjack")
Grigson—Penguin Book of Ballads 111, "The Cowboy's Lament" (1 text)
Lomax/Lomax—Folk Songs USA 59, "The Streets of Laredo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sandburg—The American Songbag, p. 263, "As I Walked Out in the Streets of Laredo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Theodore Thorp/Fife—Songs of the Cowboys XIII, pp. 148-190 (29-30), "Cow Boy's Lament" (22 texts, 7 tunes, though not all are really part of this piece -- the "H" text, from Minnesota, is in a Scandinavian tongue; "K" looks like it comes from the "Tarpanilin Jacket" family; "L" is "The Wild and Wicked Youth"; "M" is "Jack Combs"; "N" is "St. James Infirmary"; many of the other texts are parodies);
Thorp/Logsdon—Songs of the Cowboys, pp. 41-44, "The Cowboy's Lament" (1 text)
Fife/Fife—Cowboy and Western Songs 119, "The Streets of Laredo" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Larkin—Singing Cowboy, pp. 30-31, "The Cowboy's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune, with four verses that are clearly "Streets of Laredo" but an opening that is "My Home's in Montana")
Hubbard—Ballads and Songs from Utah, #164, "The Dying Cowboy" (1 short text, lacking most of the introductory material)
Tinsley—He Was Singin' This Song, pp. 76-79, "The Cowboy's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp—English Folk Songs from Southern Appalachians 131, "St. James's Hospital, or The Sailor Cut Down in His Prime" (2 texts, 2 tunes, but the "A" text really belongs with "The Unfortunate Rake")
Lomax—Folk Songs of North America 200, "The Dying Cowboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
McKenzie—Ballads and Sea Songs from Nova Scotia 120, "The Dying Cowboy" (1 text)
Botkin—Treasury of American Folklore, pp. 859-860, "The Cowboy's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hodgart—Faber Book of Ballads, p. 242, "The Dying Cowboy" (1 text)
Cox—Folk Songs South 53, "The Dying Cowboy" (5 texts)
Seeger—American Favorite Ballads, p. 41, "The Streets Of Laredo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann—Sam Henry's Songs of the People H680, p. 141, "The Cowboy of Loreto" (1 text, 1 tune)
American Ballads and Songs, 77, pp. 170-171, "The Dying Cowboy" (1 text)
Welsch—Nebraska Pioneer Lore, pp. 17-20, "The Cowboy's Lament" (1 text)
Cohen—American Folk Songs A Regional Encyclopedia 2, pp. 522-523, "Streets of Laredo" (1 text)
Warner—Folk Songs and Ballads of the Eastern Seaboard, p. 2, "The Cowboy's Lament" (1 short text, probably partial) Arkansas Woodchopper, pp. 15-16, "The Dying Cowboy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Shay—Barroom Ballads / Pious Friends Drunken Companions, pp. 80-81, "The Cowboy's Lament" (1 text)
Darling—New American Songster, pp. 8-9, "The Cowboy's Lament" (1 text)
Silber—Silber Folksingers Wordbook, p. 115, "The Streets Of Laredo" (1 text)
Saffel—Cowboy Poetry, pp. 192-193, "The Cowboy's Lament" (1 text)
DT 350, LAREDST*
ADDITIONAL:: Powder River Jack and Kitty Lee's Songs of the Range: Cowboy Wails of Cattle Trails, Chart Music, 1937, p. 43, "The Cowboy's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kenneth Lodewick, "The Unfortunate Rake" and His Descendants," article published 1955 in Western Folklore, republished on pp. 87-98 of Norm Cohen, editor, _All This for a Song_, Southern Folklife Collection, 2009
Roud #2
RECORDINGS:
Jules Allen, "The Cowboy's Lament" (Victor V-40178, 1929; Montgomery Ward M-4099, 1933)
Captain Appleblossom, "The Cowboy's Lament" (OKeh 45373, 1929)
Bentley Ball, "The Dying Cowboy" (Columbia A3085, 1920)
Al Bernard, "Cowboy's Lament (The Dying Cowboy)" (Grey Gull 4173/Radiex 4173/Van Dyke 74173 [as Buddy Moore], 1928; Radiex 5113/Van Dyke 5113 [both as "Cowboy's Lament"], n.d.)
Vernon Dalhart, "The Dying Cowboy" (Brunswick 137/Perfect 12361 [as "The Cowboy's Lament"], 1927; Supertone S-2009, 1930; Conqueror 7724 [as "The Cowboy's Lament"], 1931)
Dick Devall, "Tom Sherman's Barroom" (Timely Tunes [Victor subsidiary] C-1563, 1931; rec. 1929; on BefBlues1, When I Was 2)
Newton Gaines, "A Walkin' the Streets of Laredo" (Victor V-40253, 1930)
Ewen Hail, "Cowboy's Lament" (Brunswick 141, 1927; Brunswick 433/Supertone S-2043. 1930)
Harry Jackson, "Streets of Laredo" (on HJackson1)
Bradley Kincaid, "In the Streets of Laredo" (Supertone 9404, 1929)
Ken Maynard, "The Cowboy's Lament" (Columbia 2310-D, 1930; on WhenIWas1)
Harry "Mac" McClintock, "Cowboy's Lament" (Victor 21761, 1928)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Tom Sherman's Barroom" (on NLCR06, NLCR11)
H[j]olland Puckett, "The Dying Cowboy" (Champion 15428 [as Harvey Watson]/Gennett 6271/Herwin 75557 [as Robert Howell]/Silvertone 5065/Silvertone 8152 [as Si Puckett]/Silvertone 25065/Supertone 9253 [as Harvey Watson], 1928; rec. 1927)
Johnny Prude, "The Streets of Laredo" (AFS, 1940s; on LC28, BackSaddle)
Ranch Boys, "Cowboy's Lament" (Decca 5061, 1935)
Pete Seeger, "Streets of Laredo" (on PeteSeeger12)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Unfortunate Rake" (tune & meter)
cf. "The Wild Lumberjack" (subject, meter)
cf. "The Sailor Cut Down in His Prime" (tune & meter)
cf. "The Bad Girl's Lament (St. James' Hospital; The Young Girl Cut Down in her Prime) [Laws Q26] (tune & meter, plot)
cf. "Jack Combs" (tune & meter, lyrics)
cf. "The Dying Outlaw" (tune & meter)
cf. "My Home's in Montana" (tune, floating lyrics)
cf. "My Friends and Relations" (tune, floating lyrics)
cf. "The Mowing Machine" (tune & meter)
cf. "The Bard of Armagh" (tune & meter)
cf. "Trooper Cut Down in His Prime" (tune & meter)

SAME TUNE:
A Sun Valley Song (Darling-NewAmericanSongster, p. 11)
The Lineman's Hymn (Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 11-12)
The Streets of Hamtramck (Darling-NewAmericanSongster, p. 12)
The Ballad of Sherman Wu (Darling-NewAmericanSongster, p. 13; on PeteSeeger19, AmHist2)
A Golfing Song (Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 13-14)
The Professor's Lament (Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 14-15)
The Ballad of Bloody Thursday (File: CAFS2668)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
My Home's in Montana
The Young Cowboy
Tom Sherman's Barroom
Tom Sherwin's Barroom

NOTES [221 words]: One of the large group of ballads ("The Bard of Armagh," "Saint James Hospital," "The Streets of Laredo") ultimately derived from "The Unfortunate Rake." All use the same tune and metre, and all involve a person dying as a result of a wild life, but the nature of the tragedy varies according to local circumstances.

Thorpe/Fife-SongsOfTheCowboys studied 150 versions of this text, and determined that 39 were set in "The Streets of Laredo" or similar; 37 took place at Tom Sherman's Barroom or similar, 25 used other words starting with LA (Lafferty, London, Laden, etc.), 31 (not all of them variants of this exact song) used miscellaneous places, and 18 were not localized.

Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging, pp. 289-290, reports that "Tom Sherman's barroom was a popular cowboy dance hall and bar in Dodge City, Kansas." He cites a claim that this song was written by Francis Henry Maynard in 1876, and claims that Tom Sherman's was the location in this original text. Based on the dates at which the song was collected, this is possible, but I haven't listed Maynard as the author because the evidence is so thin. Logsdon quoted an article in which Maynard allegedly described the circumstances of the composition.

For the treatment of syphilis prior to the twentieth century, see the notes to "The Unfortunate Rake." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
File: LB01

Strike for Better Wages

DESCRIPTION: "At the docks there is a strike that the company don't like...." "Strike, boys, strike for better wages... Go on fighting at the docks... Go on fighting till the bosses they give way." The singer pities the jobless seeking work. The strikes won't give in Strike Out the Top Line

DESCRIPTION: "Strike out the top line, let this be your care, Loosen the bonds that degrade and ensnare...." "Strike out the top line, Only the top line, Sweep the drink traffic away... Vote for No License that day." The song describes the benefits of limiting liquor

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Crusade Songs, according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)

KEYWORDS: drink political nonballad New Zealand

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, p. 95, "Strike Out the Top Line" (1 text, tune referenced)
Cleveland-NZ-GreatNewZealandSongbook, p. 108, "Strike Out the Top Line" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Don't Strike Out the Top Line" (subject of prohibition in New Zealand)

NOTES [360 words]: As Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ describe it, New Zealand voters had the option, every three years starting in 1894, to vote on prohibition, and they had three choices, from top to bottom:

CONTINUATION (maintaining the current number of liquor licenses)
REDUCTION (giving authorities the right to shut down up to a quarter of licenses)
NO LICENSE (complete elimination of alcohol)

Voting consisted of what is now called "approval voting" -- saying which choices were acceptable. This song tries to take advantage of that situation. If the vote for NO LICENSE failed to reach the three-fifths majority needed for approval, then those ballots which listed both NO LICENSE and REDUCTION would count toward REDUCTION. If, as was possible, some who were pro-liquor voted for CONTINUATION and REDUCTION (on the grounds that REDUCTION was better than shutting things down entirely) and some voted only for REDUCTION (on the grounds that they didn't object to drink but thought there were too many pubs), then by only "striking out the top line" the prohibitionists could at least earn a reduction, which (by their standards) was better than nothing.

It doesn't seem to have worked; in the 1896 poll, at least, CONTINUATION won easily, with NO LICENSE slightly ahead of REDUCTION.

Even when New Zealand fixed (?) the voting system, their relationship with liquor remained complicated. According to Gordon Ell, Kiwiosities: An A-Z of New Zealand traditions & Folklore, New Holland Publishers, 2008, p. 136, a phenomenon called "Booze Barns" eventually came about: "During the 1960s the perverse logic of the Licensing Control Commission re-allocated liquor licenses from many ageing corner pubs to new hotels in the suburbs, surrounded by car parking. To enjoy a drink you had to drive. Huge public bars, detached from motel-like accommodation, provided the venue for mass drinking... The idea of a quiet, sociable drink was stifled by rock bands and the milling throng. Such 'booze barns' have deservedly lost custom" as liquor laws made it easier for local pubs and restaurants to serve alcohol.
According to Ell, p. 74, the last "dry towns" gave up in 1999. - RBW

Strike Song, The

DESCRIPTION: "We are out for higher wages, As we have a right to do, And' we'll never be content Till we get oor ten per cent, For we have a right tae live as well as you."
AUTHOR: probably Mary Brooksbank
EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)
KEYWORDS: worker labor-movement strike money
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 44, "The Strike Song" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #22211
File: Gath044

Strike the Bell

DESCRIPTION: "Aft on the poop deck and walking about, There's the second mate so steady and so stout," refusing to strike the bell and release the watch even though there is clearly a storm approaching. Most wish the bell would strike, but the officers stay the course
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1969 (Hugill-SongsSea)
KEYWORDS: sailor storm hardtimes
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 123, "Strike the Bell" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 44-45, "Strike the Bell" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp.115-116, "Strike the Bell" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4190
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ring the Bell, Watchman" (tune) and references there
File: PaSe123

Stringybark

DESCRIPTION: "There are white-box and pine on the ridges afar, Where the ironbark, bluegum, and peppermint are, But the one I know best and the dearest to me And the king of them all is the stringybark tree." Why is it so dear? The singer's birth-hut was made of it
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1968
KEYWORDS: home
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, p. 264, "Stringybark" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Stringybark and Greenhide" (subject)
NOTES [214 words]: Learmonth, p. 511, describes stringybark as an informal name for several species of eucalyptus, the name being given because the bark "peels off in long fibrous strips." Morris, pp. 442-443, gives multiple meanings. The first, dating back to at least 1845, is close to Learmonth's: "any one of various Gums with a tough fibrous bark used for tying, for cordage, for roofs of huts, etc." The second sense is "bush slang for bad whisky." The third is simply an equivalent for "bush" in all its senses, i.e. that which is away from civilization. Ramson, p. 643, "Any of many trees, chiefly of s.e. mainland Aust., of the genus Eucalyptus (fam. Myrtaceae) having a characteristically thick, rough, persistent, long-fibred bark; the barak of the tree. Also with distinguishing epithet, as red, swamp, white, yellow." The first citation is from 1799. But there is a secondary meaning: "Used allusively as an emblem of the unsophisticated, the remote, and the rustic."
Paterson/Fahey/Seal-OldBushSongs-CentenaryEdition, p.281, notes that stringybark grew on poor land, but it isn't absolutely clear whether this means low soil fertility or unusually dry. I would guess the former, though, because eucalyptus leaves reportedly are very low in nutrition value even by leaf standards. - RBW

Bibliography

- Morris: Edward E. Morris, A Dictionary of Austral English, 1898 (I use the 1972 Sydney University Press with a new foreword but no new content)

Last updated in version 5.2
File: MA264

Stringybark and Greenhide

DESCRIPTION: "I sing of a commodity, it's one that will not fail yer,... the mainstay of Australia... Stringybark and greenhide can beat [gold] all to pieces." Greenhide can hold carts together; stringybark strengthens homes; the singer praises these useful products

AUTHOR: George Loyau (?) (source: Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads)

EARLIEST DATE: probably before 1870 (Sydney Songster)

KEYWORDS: nonballad Australia

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 170-172, "Stringybark and Greenhide" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ward-PenguinBookOfAustralianBallads, pp. 71-72, "Stringy-bark and Green-hide" (1 text)
Stewart/Keesing-FavoriteAustralianBallads, pp. 71-72, "Stringybark and Greenhide" (1 text)

Roud #8400

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. 'Stringybark" (subject)

NOTES [194 words]: Learmonth, p. 511, describes stringybark as an informal name for several species of eucalyptus, the name being given because the bark "peels off in long fibrous strips." Morris, pp. 442-443, gives multiple meanings. The first, dating back to at least 1845, is close to Learmonth's: "any one of various Gums with a tough fibrous bark used for tying, for cordage, for roofs of huts, etc." The second sense is "bush slang for bad whisky." The third is simply an equivalent for "bush" in all its senses, i.e. that which is away from civilization.

Ramson, p. 643, "Any of many trees, chiefly of s.e. mainland Aust., of the genus Eucalyptus (fam. Myrtaceae) having a characteristically thick, rough, persistent, long-fibred bark; the barak of the tree. Also with distinguishing epithet, as red, swamp, white, yellow." The first citation is from 1799. But there is a secondary meaning: "Used allusively as an emblem of the unsophisticated, the remote, and the rustic."

Although the song presents itself as a praise of stringybark and greenhide, Patterson/Fahey/Seal see it more as a toast to the abilities of Australians to improvise, and I incline to agree. - RBW

Bibliography

- Morris: Edward E. Morris, A Dictionary of Austral English, 1898 (I use the 1972 Sydney University Press with a new foreword but no new content)

Last updated in version 5.2
File: PFS157
Stringybark Cockatoo, The

DESCRIPTION: "I'm a broke alluvial miiner who's been using his cup to drain." With no other means of support, the miner goes to work for a "stringybark cockatoo." The work is dull and the master poor, cheap, and hard to work with

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Paterson's _Old Bush Songs_)

KEYWORDS: unemployment work farming Australia mining

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 107-108, "The Stringybark Cockatoo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, pp. 100-102, "The Stringybark Cockatoo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Stewart/Keessing-FavoriteAustralianBallads, pp. 34-35, "The Stringybark Cockatoo" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Cockies of Bungaree" (plot, lyrics)

NOTES [72 words]: A "Cockatoo," or "Cockie," is a farmer whose land is so poor that it can raise little but cockatoos. Stringybark (for which see "Stringybark") was also considered a sign of very poor land.

This song has so many similarities to "The Cockies of Bungaree" that I have to suspect literary dependence. The "Bungaree" text is the more popular, and hence perhaps more likely to be original, but I can offer no absolute proof of this. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: PASB100

Stringybark Creek

DESCRIPTION: "A sergeant and three constables rode out from Mansfield Town" to seek the Kelly gang. When they separate, Kelly overpowers two, then catches the other two as they return. One man, MacIntyre, escapes to bring the news to Mansfield

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1964

KEYWORDS: outlaw death trick horse

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1855 - Birth of Ned Kelly
1880 - Execution of Kelly. His last words are reported to have been "Such is life."

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 136-137, "Stringybark Creek" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, pp. 70-72, "Stringybark Creek" (1 text, 2 tunes)

ADDITIONAL: John S. Manifold, _Who Wrote the Ballads? Notes on Australian Folksong_, Australasian Book Society, 1964, pp. 77-78, "A Sergeant and Three Constables" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Kelly Was Their Captain" (subject) and notes and references there

NOTES [131 words]: Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook reports that there is also a fiddle tune named "Stringybark Creek," which is sometimes used for this song. Said tune sounds vaguely familiar; I think I've heard it under another name. But it's not one of the common fiddle tunes. Anderson reports the tune as "The Wearing of the Green" but says that at least one other tune is used.

John S. Manifold, _Who Wrote the Ballads? Notes on Australian Folksong_, Australasian Book Society, 1964, p. 75, says that W. J. Wye, who collected this, considered this the oldest ballad of the Kelly Gang.

Edward "Ned" Kelly and his gang are perhaps the most famous of all Australian bushrangers. For some anecdotes of his life, in addition to the cross-referenced songs, see the notes to "Kelly Was Their Captain." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2
Stripy and Blondie

DESCRIPTION: "Now come here and I'll tell you a story It's all about Malta you know." Stripy is dating Blondie and an "OD winger." Blondie catches Stripy with his other man, and arranges for a 15" gun of the Warspite to blow up Stripe, the OD winger, and the bar

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: navy courting homosexuality betrayal technology derivative
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, pp. 66-67, "Stripy and Blondie" (1 text, tune referenced)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Frankie and Albert" [Laws I3] (tune of the "Frankie and Johnny" versions)
NOTES [177 words]: The reference to the Warspite as the ship in this song is interesting. The Warspite, a member of the Queen Elizabeth class, had eight 15" guns (the size mentioned in the song). These are not the largest guns used in the Royal Navy; the Nelson and Rodney carried 16" guns, and the battlecruiser Furious briefly carried two 18" guns before they were found to cause so much blast that they damaged the ship; they had to be removed and the Furious converted to an aircraft carrier.

But Nelson, Rodney, and I were not ships that served in the Mediterranean, at least for any length of time during World War II (and the Furious had lost her big guns anyway). The Warspite spent much of the war there. What's more, she was famous for a battle there in which she scored the longest-range hit ever recorded by a naval gun. So although Blondie could theoretically have found a bigger gun, the song correctly describes her as using the biggest artillery available from Malta, and even picking the ship most likely to score an accurate hit with it. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.1

Stripling, The

DESCRIPTION: A young man of 18 loves a 29 year old woman. He gathers flowers, lies with them at his head and feet, and claims to be dying for her love. She says when he is in his prime he'll slight her for being old. She goes with him anyway.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan5)
KEYWORDS: age love
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan5 987, "The Stripling" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #6270
File: GrD5987

Struggle for the Breeches, The DESCRIPTION: Husband: "You are inclin'd I now do find the breeches for to wear." Wife: "No, dear, not I, but I will die or I will have my share" They trade ("comic"?) insults without resolution.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1873 (Poet's Box broadside "Struggle For The Breeches," according to Greig/Duncan7)
KEYWORDS: shrewishness accusation bragging dialog humorous nonballad husband wife FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan7 1286, "The Struggle for the Breeches" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 268-271, "The Struggle for the Breeches" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 419)
Roud #1316
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth c.20(157), "The Struggle for the Breeches" ("About my wife I mean to sing a very comic song"), H. Such (London), 1863-1885; also Harding B 16(262a), Firth c.26(237)[some illegible lines], "[The] Struggle for the Breeches"
Murray, Mu23-y4:026, "Struggle For The Breeches," unknown, 19C
NLScotland, L.C.Fol.70(45a), "Struggle for the Breeches," unknown, c.1890
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Wearing of the Britches" (theme) and references there
NOTES [133 words]: Greig/Duncan7 quoting Bell Robertson [1841-1922]: "That was a song that was thought funny when I was a girl." - BS
On August 27, 1591, Robert Bourne entered a ballad into the Stationer's Register entitled "A pleasant ballad of a combat between a man and his wyfe for the breches" (so Hyder E. Rollins, An Analytical Index to the Ballad-Entries (1557-1709) In the Register of the Company of Stationers of London, 1924 (I use the 1967 Tradition Press reprint with a new Foreword by Leslie Shepard), #323, p. 36). Similarly, Francis Grove on November 26, 1619 registered "A woman would weare the Bruhes" (sic.) (Rollins #3001, p. 257). The chronological gap is large enough that a direct connection between these and the modern song seems unlikely, but the title shows how old the general idea is. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
File: GrD71286

Stump Speech, The
DESCRIPTION: The candidate asks for votes: "Ladies and gentlemen, hearers and shearers, Both of the feminine and sheminine gender..." The candidate refuses to say where he stands; he stands with those who are "in." He appeals to "Fellow electors and blithering idiots"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Fahey-Joe-Watson-AustralianTraditionalFolkSinger)
KEYWORDS: political nonballad humorous recitation
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fahey-Joe-Watson-AustralianTraditionalFolkSinger, [p. 10, page headed "We chattered on..."], "The Stump Speech" (1 text)

File: FaWStuSp

Stumpie the Lawyer
DESCRIPTION: Stumpie tells Meg it is safe when "ye needna dread ill when ye hae a Pitfour" now that the election is over. But "a mob wi' tar-barrel cam doon to the door" and played her "Lochaber no more" [used as a funeral dirge]
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1887 (Walker, _The Bards of Bon-Accord 1375-1860_, according to Greig/Duncan2)
KEYWORDS: fire nonballad political
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan2 242, "Stumpie the Lawyer" (1 text)
Roud #5846
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Logie o' Buchan" (tune, according to Greig/Duncan2)
NOTES [62 words]: Greig/Duncan2: "Part of a song current in Aberdeen about 1805. Election row -- Pitfour one of the contestants. Rabble took a tar-barrel down to a 'howl' in Netherkirkgate kept by 'Salmon Meg' (woman's husband being a salmon fisher) -- a house frequented by Pitfour -- and set fire to it. Kennedy the advocate and 'Annalist' is the 'Stumpie' of the song; he was a cripple." - BS

Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD2242

Subaltern's Song
DESCRIPTION: "A subalteron is one who lives a life of joy and ease, He never has to worry, and he does as others please," and when there is trouble, he will be blamed; "That's where we're happy, happy as can be." And the pay is poor, so they lose girls to high officers

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1979 (Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead)
KEYWORDS: soldier hardtimes technology courting

FOUND IN: Canada

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, pp. 98-99, Subaltern's Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #29423
File: Hopk098

Substitute (I), The

DESCRIPTION: Recitation; Tom Burke befriends young Tim Cory. Tim is crushed by a falling tree and asks Tom to take care of his children. He finds Tim's children are now orphans. The speaker later learns Tom has married Tim's oldest daughter

AUTHOR: Probably Marion Ellsworth
EARLIEST DATE: 1941 (Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Recitation; Tom Burke, a saw-filer in the lumber camp, befriends a young man, Tim Cory. Tim is crushed by a falling tree, but before dying, he asks Tom to take care of his children. Tom takes the body to Tim's house. He finds Tim's children are now orphans, their mother having been dead for two years; he takes up a collection among the crew. The speaker loses track of Tom, but one day he chances on a small farm, and he finds Tom has married Tim's oldest daughter, and they've made a good and happy home.

KEYWORDS: lumbering work logger marriage farming recitation orphan family friend

FOUND IN: US(MW)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Beck-SongsOfTheMichiganLumberjacks 104, "The Substitute" (1 text)
Roud #8884

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Harry Dunn (The Hanging Limb)" [Laws C14]
- cf. "Chance McGear" (plot)
- cf. "Boy Killed by a Falling Tree in Hartford" (plot)

NOTES [38 words]: Put baldly, as in the description, this sounds like sentimental treacle, but to my ear it's a poem with some guts to it. Like the other pieces probably written by Ellsworth, it does not seem to have entered oral tradition. - PJS

File: Be104

Success to Every Man

DESCRIPTION: "De time is drawin' near, me b'ys, De narthern floe to face, So we must get out 'aulin' rope, De whitecoats fer to lace!" Various sealing ships are listed. The singer wishes success and prosperity to the sealers

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (England, Vikings of the Ice)

KEYWORDS: hunting ship

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, p. 109, "Success to Every Man" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: George Allan England, _Vikings of the Ice: Being the Log of a Tenderfoot on the Great Newfoundland Seal Hunt_ (also published as _The Greatest Hunt in the World_), Doubleday, 1924, pp. 233-234, "(no title)" (1 text)

NOTES [310 words]: Several of the ships in this piece are mentioned in other items in the Index. For the _Viking_, see "To the Memory of the Late Captain Kennedy." The _Suthren Cross_ is obviously the _Southern Cross_, for which see _The Southern Cross_. For the _Kite_, see "The 'Kite' Abandoned in White Bay." That leaves the _Nipshun_. There is no such sealer, but the name is a likely mis-hearing of the _Neptune_, for which see "Neptune, Ruler of the Sea." We know that sealers on occasion referred to the _Neptune_ as the "Nipshun"; England, p. 116, has the sealers of the _Terra Nova_ say that George Barbour (who at that time commanded the _Neptune_; Chafe, p. 88) was in charge of the _Nipshun_.
The names of these ships isn't much dating help. The Neptune first went sealing in 1873, and lasted until 1941 (Feltham, p. 93), though she missed the hunt in 1904 (Chafe, p. 102), plus a few years in the 1930s (but this song is older than that, so it hardly matters). The Viking first went to the ice in 1904 (Chafe, p. 105), and lasted until it suffered a powder explosion in 1931 (Feltham, pp. 157-159). The Southern Cross went to the ice for the first time in 1901 (Chafe, p. 104), and was lost with all hands in 1914 (Feltham, pp. 128-131). The Kite first went sealing in 1877 (Chafe, p. 101) and sailed every year until 1914, then started again in 1918. On its face, the mention of these four ships would permit any date from 1904 to the beginning of 1914, but we can narrow things a little more. The song mentions "wood and ironclads," i.e. wooden and steel sealers. The first steel ship was the SS Adventure, for which see "I Am a Newfoundlander." Her first trip to the ice was in 1906. And ironclads is plural, so it has to be after the fleet had multiple ironclads. I'd say that restricts us to 1908-1913. My gut feeling is that this comes from 1911. - RBW

Bibliography

Success to the Hardy Sealers

DESCRIPTION: "The twelfth of March is drawing near And we must all prepare Our pipers and our pannicans The sealer's life to share." Ships preparing to go to the ice are listed. The singer hopes they return safely. AUTHOR: apparently Johnny Burke EARLIEST DATE: 1912 (Burke's Ballads) KEYWORDS: ship travel hunting FOUND IN: REFERENCES (1 citation):
Roud VW44592

NOTES [833 words]: Although Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff attribute this to Johnny Burke, and quote it from one of his publications, it is not in his most extensive collection, Johnny Burke (William J. Kirwin, editor), John White's Collection of Johnny Burke Songs, Harry Cuff Publications, St. John's, 1981. (For a brief biography of Johnny Burke, see the notes to "The Kelligrew's Soiree.""

This must have been brand-new when it was published in "Burke's Ballads"; the Stephano, which is mentioned in the song, was finished in 1911 and went to the ice for the first time in 1912 (Chafe, pp. 78-79). Like other ships in the Bowring sealing/liner fleet, she was named after the Shakespeare character (O'Neill, p. 961). She was sunk by U-53 in October 8, 1916 near Nantucket (Winsor, p. 62) -- although, happily, the passengers and were warned by the submarine and given time to abandon ship; there were no casualties (O'Neill, pp. 962-963). But she had only a handful of years as a sealer (which probably explains why, even though she was the biggest and best ship ever to go sealing up to this time, this seems to be the only sealing song to mention her; many other sealers were mentioned repeatedly).

Three other ships mentioned in the song were destroyed not long after the commissioning of the Stephano and were also commemorated in song. One of these ships gives us an absolutely firm date: The Algerine, for which see "The Loss of the Algerine," was lost in 1912. Since the mention of the Stephano forces a date no earlier than 1912, and the Algerine forces a date no later than that year, obviously the year must be 1912!

Supporting the 1912 date is the first line, "The twelfth of March is drawing near" -- the sealing fleet sailed on March 12, 1912 (Chafe, p. 98), whereas it had usually sailed on March 10 until 1910.
(sealing law didn't permit ships to sail before that date; Candow, p. 57; according to Greene, p. 94, in 44 of the 71 years from 1863-1933, the sailing date was precisely March 10), and the fleet had sailed on March 13 in 1911, when the sealing companies agreed not to take any seals before March 16 (Ryan, p. 194).

It is interesting and unusual to see this song divide the ships into wooden ships (Algerine, Kite, Labrador, Neptune, Southern Cross, Viking) and ironclads. The earliest steamers were of course all wooden, but eventually the shipping companies started using steel ships, which could break the ice more easily. While they lasted, the steel ships were the most successful ships, and the ones everyone wanted to be part of. But they proved uneconomical; they cost more than the old wooden ships, and generally weren't well-suited for other tasks (Ryan, p. 200), and with the seal population in decline, it was hard to afford them. All went off to other duties in World War I, and many (like the Stephano and the Florizel) did not come back; after World War I, the sealing fleet in most years once again consisted of wooden walls (Feltham, p. 95, although this fails to note that, once in a while, a new steel steamer served after the Great War).

Of the other ships mentioned in the song, the Southern Cross was lost with all hands in 1914; see "The Southern Cross (I)."

The Florizel was wrecked in 1918; see "The Wreck of the Steamship Florizel."

The Neptune is the subject of "Neptune, Ruler of the Sea."

For the Viking, see "To the Memory of the Late Captain Kennedy."

For the Kite see "The 'Kite' Abandoned in White Bay."

For the Labrador see also "Captains and Ships" and "The Sealer's Song (II)."

This is the only sealing song to mention the Venture -- which probably shouldn't surprise us, since no such sealing ship is listed by Chafe! Probably the reference is to one of the two sisters Bellaventure and Bonaventure, the former being the "Belle" and the latter the "Bon" of "Captains and Ships," or their older fleet-mate the Adventure, mentioned in "The Sealer's Song (II)" and "I Am a Newfoundland." The Adventure, the very first steel sealer, first went to the ice in 1906 and ended her career in 1915; the Bellaventure and Bonaventure both served 1909-1915 (and it was the Bellaventure which had the sad fate of bringing home the survivors and the victims of the Newfoundland Disaster of 1914; see "The Newfoundland Disaster (I)"). All three ships were sold to Russia in 1916.

The Beothic too went to the ice 1909-1915; she is mentioned in this song and in "Captains and Ships." She had a near-disaster in 1913, when she was hit by the Bonaventure (O'Neill, p. 984), which took her out of the 1913 sealing season. The Bonaventure (which is mentioned in the "Ballad of Bob Bartlett, Arctic Explorer") was able to proceed on her way, but the Beothic was crippled and barely survived. (For this event, see also "First Arrival from the Sea Fishery S. S. Fogota, 1912.") There is a picture of the Bonaventure and the Beothic on p. 39 of Ryan/Drake. Winsor, p. 62, has a photo of the Stephano. - RBW

Bibliography

- Feltham: John Feltham, Sealing Steamers, Harry Cuff Publications, 1995
- Greene: William Howe Greene, The Wooden Walls among the Ice Flos: Telling the Romance of the Newfoundland Seal Fishery, Hutchinson & Co, London (PDF available on the Memorial University of Newfoundland web site)

Last updated in version 5.0
File: RySm081
Success Unto the Coal Trade

DESCRIPTION: "Good people, listen while I sing The source from where your comforts spring; And may each wind that blows still bring Success unto the coal trade." The singer points out how coal supports the nation and feeds the people of the north

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1900 (Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland)
KEYWORDS: mining nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 140-141, "Success Unto the Coal Trade" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3163
File: StoR140

Sucking Cider through a Straw

DESCRIPTION: "The prettiest girl that I ever saw Was sucking cider through a straw." "I told that gal I didn't see how She sucked the cider through a straw." "And now I've got me a mother-in-law From sucking cider through a straw."

AUTHOR: credited in the 1919 publication to Carey Morgan and Lee David
EARLIEST DATE: 1919 (sheet music)
KEYWORDS: courting drink
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,SE)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 47, "Sucking Cider through a Straw" (1 fragment)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 47, "Sucking Cider through a Straw" (1 tune, plus text not found in the Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 version)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 329, "Sucking Cider Through a Straw" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 239, "Sipping Cider Through A Straw" (1 text)
DT, SIPCIDER*
Roud #7867
RECORDINGS:
Vernon Dalhart, "Sippin' Cider" (Columbia 1712-D, 1929)
SAME TUNE:
The Other Day I Met a Bear (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 44; DT, IMETBEAR)
NOTES [38 words]: The 1919 publication gives the name as "Sipping Cider thru' a Straw." Curiously, Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, writing no later than 1927, did not seem to know of this -- implying that this was originally "folk" rather than pop. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: San329

Sucking Pig (I), The

DESCRIPTION: Of a giant pig, which takes 7000 men to butcher, and seven years to remove a trotter; its bones yield 7000 bags of flour. Cho: "O, perhaps you may think that/O, it's not all true/But I don't care a fig/What I say, I know it's true/About this suckling pig"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (recording, Jack Elliott of Birtley)
KEYWORDS: lie corpse death work food talltale animal worker
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
Roud #8083
RECORDINGS:
Jack Elliott, "The Sucking Pig" (on Elliotts01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Derby Ram" (subject, plot)
Suffolk Miracle, The [Child 272]

DESCRIPTION: A squire's daughter loves a lowborn man. The squire sends her away. In time her love comes to bear her home. His head hurts; she binds it with her kerchief. She arrives home. Her father says her love is dead. She finds his dead body wearing her kerchief

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1689? (broadside, dated to that year by Wood); a song with this name was in William Thackeray's broadside catalog by 1690

KEYWORDS: love courting separation death father lover ghost supernatural corpse travel horse grief

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South,West)) US(Ap,NE,SE,So) Ireland Canada(Mar,Newf)

REFERENCES (33 citations):
Child 272, "The Suffolk Miracle" (1 text)
Bronson 272, The Suffolk Miracle" (13 versions)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 272, "The Suffolk Miracle" (3 versions: #1a, #2, #6)
Butterworth/Dawney-PloughboysGlory, pp. 22-23, "It's of a farmer all in this town (The Suffolk Miracle)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Gl 90, "Lover's Ghost" (1 text)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 37, "The Suffolk Miracle" (4 texts plus 1 fragment ("C") that might be almost anything, 5 tunes) {Bronson's #4, #2, #3, #1a, #8}
Wells-TheBalladTree, pp. 217-219, "The Suffolk Miracle" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #3}
Barry/Eckstorm/Smyth-BritishBalladsFromMaine p. 314, "The Suffolk Miracle" (1 fragment)
Randolph 32, "Lady Fair" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #12}
Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland, pp. 145-147, "The Holland Handkerchief" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #7}
Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland4, pp. 50-62, "The Suffolk Miracle" (3 texts, 2 tune, all weeming somewhat mixed -- e.g. "A" has the rose-and-briar ending) {Bronson's A=Bronson's #10, B=#7}
Flanders/Ballard/Brown/Berry-NewGreenMountainSongster, pp. 86-89, "The Suffolk Miracle" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #10}
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 27, "The Suffolk Miracle" (1 text)
Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, pp. 84-85, "The Lady Near New York Town" (1 text, 1 tune)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 41, "The Suffolk Miracle" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 41, "The Suffolk Miracle" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #169, "The Suffolk Miracle" (1 text, 1 tune) {Bronson's #11}
Davis-TraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 42, "The Suffolk Miracle" (2 texts plus a scrap which could be 2 times, anything, 2 tunes, one of them for the unidentifiable fragment) {Bronson's #8, #5}
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 49, "The Farmer's Daughter" (1 text, 1 tune)
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 88-90, "The Suffolk Miracle" (2 texts, 1 tune) {Bronson's #6}
Peacock, pp. 407-408, "The Suffolk Miracle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 645-649, "The Suffolk Miracle" (2 texts)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 175, "The Suffolk Miracle" (1 text)
Niles-BalladBookOfJohnJacobNiles 56, "The Suffolk Miracle" (1 text)
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 198-201, "The Suffolk Miracle" (1 text, 2 tunes)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H217, pp. 432-433, "The Lover's Ghost" (1 text, 1 tune)
McBride-FlowerOfDunaffHillAndMoreTradSongsInnishowen 40, "The Holland Handkerchief" (1 text, 1 tune)
"The Holland Handkerchief" (1 text, 1 tune)

A wonder stranger ne'r was known

"Uncle Pat Fry: Yadkin County Minstrel or The Blind Balladeer of East Bend," Vol. XVI, No. 3 (Nov 1968), pp. 156-157, "The Suffold Miracle" (1 text)

DT 272. SUFFMRCL* SUFFMRC2 SUFFMRC3*

ADDITIONAL: Leslie Shepard, _The Broadside Ballad_, Legacy Books, 1962, 1978, p. 136, "The Suffolk Miracle" (reproduction of a broadsheet by John White, closely related to but not the same as Child's a)

ADDITIONAL: John Ashton, _A Century of Ballads_, Elliot Stock, London, 1887; reprinted 1968 by Singing Tree Press, pp. 110-114, "The Suffolk Miracle" (1 text)

Roud #246

RECORDINGS:
Freeman Bennett, "The Suffolk Miracle" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
Packie Manus Byrne, "The Holland Handkerchief" (on Voice03)
Nora Cleary, "The Holland Handkerchief" (on IREarlyBallads)
Dol [Adolphus G.] Small, "There Was an Old and Wealthy Man" (AFS, 1950; on LC58) {Bronson's #1b}

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Douce Ballads 2(207b), "The Suffolk Miracle" or "A Relation of a Young Man Who a Month After His Death Appeared to his Sweetheart," F. Coles (London), 1678-1680; also Wood E 25(83) [some lines illegible; "MS annotation following imprint: 1689"], Douce Ballads 3(88a)[many illegible lines], "The Suffolk Miracle" or "A Relation of a Young Man Who a Month After His Death Appeared to his Sweetheart," CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Maid of Sweet Gurteen" (theme)

SAME TUNE:
My Bleeding Heart (per broadsides Bodleian Douce Ballads 2(207b), Wood E 25(83) and Douce Ballads 3(88a))

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Sad Courtin'
The Richest Girl in Our Town
Lucy Bouns

NOTES [389 words]: Child complains of this song, "This piece should not be admitted here on its own merits.... It is not even a good specimen of its kind. Ghosts should have a fair reason for walking, and a quite particular reason for riding...." Child prints the song for the sake of its foreign analogs.

Presumably Child thinks the ghost should do more, e.g. take the girl to the grave with him, as in the tale-type known from Burger's "Lenore" (Thompson #365, "The Dead Bridegroom Carries Off His Bride"). In those, it is sometimes a drowned sailor who comes to collect the girl.

All I can say is, the plot may be somewhat defective, but the full forms of the ballad itself are quite beautiful and pathetic. It does corrupt easily, though, as the Flanders texts show.

More interesting is the way the story is expressed. Legends of ghosts are of course common, and legends of the fate of spirit and body affecting each other not rare (e.g. if a living person slashes at a ghost, the ghost may appear to be intact but the corpse will bear a scar, perhaps healed). In this song, the ghost actually comes to bear an artifact. That is not often encountered.

The idea of a ghost leaving its grave for cause and then coming back bearing the mark of what it did may predate all those legends of Child's. One of the most famous collections of tales of the Middle Ages was the Golden Legend, which exists in many manuscript copies and was printed in translation by William Caxton. In the legend of Saint Julian, we hear of Mercury, a knight who had been slain by Julian the Apostate (not the Saint Julian of the legend, obviously!), who was summoned back from the grave to fight against the Emperor. Supposedly Mercury's body was missing the next day, then showed up on the morning after that, with armor and weapons covered with blood -- and the report was that the Emperor Julian died soon after. (See Judy Ann Ford in Jason Fisher, editor, _Tolkien and the Study of His Sources_, McFarland & Company, 2011, p. 138). Part of the story -- that Julian died saying "Galilean [i.e. Jesus], you have conquered" -- is recorded in authentic history. The rest of the story is not. But the tale is doubtless very old.

The "Holland Handkerchief" of certain versions is not a cloth woven in the Netherlands; rather, the adjective refers to the pattern of the weave. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1
Sugar and Tea

DESCRIPTION: "Lead her up to sugar and tea, Lead her up to candy. You swing 'round that sugar and tea While I swing 'round that dandy." "Hi oh that sugar and tea, Hi oh that candy, You swing 'round that sugar and tea While I swing 'round that dandy."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Talley)
KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 71-72, "You Turn for Sugar an' Tea" (1 text, 1 tune)
Randolph 531, "Sugar and Tea" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST R531 (Partial)
Roud #7643
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Dog in the Wood" (lyrics)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Sugar Loaf Tea
He Loves Sugar and Tea
NOTES [31 words]: This shares a chorus with the song I've indexed as "Dog in the Wood," but the verses are so distinct (that is a hunting song, this a courting song) that I've tentatively split them.

---

Sugar Babe (I)

DESCRIPTION: "Shoot your dice and have your fun, sugar babe... Run like the devil when the police come." The singer describes various results of getting drunk. Sundry other floating verses

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934
KEYWORDS: drink gambling nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 153-154, "Sugar Babe" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3655
File: LxA153

Sugar Babe (III)

DESCRIPTION: Floating verses with internal chorus "this-u morning" and final chorus "My honey babe, my little babe, so sweet." Verses: "Kill me a chicken and bring be the wing." "I got a mule and the mule won't gee." "I took my girl to the crawfish stand...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: courting abandonment food floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 482, "Sugar Babe" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 482, "Sugar Babe" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
NOTES [62 words]: The notes in Brown state, "It seems best to retain this title [which came from the informant] for the present medley, because it is the refrain that gives it such coherence as it has." I'm not sure I agree -- but certainly there is no other single place the song can file, as the verses all appear elsewhere. I suspect they were fitted into an existing blues framework. - RBW
Sugar Baby (Red Rocking Chair; Red Apple Juice)

DESCRIPTION: "Got no sugar baby now...got no use for your red rocking chair...who'll rock the cradle, who'll sing the song...all I can do, fuss, eat, sleep with you/send you to your mama next payday" -- floating verses all.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Dock Boggs)

KEYWORDS: marriage nonballad floatingverses

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (5 citations):

- Lunsford/Stringfield-30And1FolkSongsFromSouthernMountains, p. 50, "Red Apple Juice" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Jones-MinstrelOfTheAppalachians-Bascom-Lamar-Lunsford, p. 234, "Red Apple Juice" (1 text, 1 tune); also p. 243, "Little Turtle Dove" (1 text, 1 tune, a composite of floating verses, some of which perhaps belong here)
- Dunson/Raim/Asch-AnthologyOfAmericanFolkMusic, p. 82 "Sugar Baby" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 34, "Red Rocking Chair" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 175, "Red Apple Juice" (1 text)

RECORDINGS:

- Clarence Ashley, Clint Howard et al, "Honey Babe Blues" (on Ashley02, WatsonAshley01)
- Dock Boggs, "Sugar Baby" (Brunswick 118B, 1927; on AAFM3) (on Boggs2, BoggsCD1, CloseHomeMS)
- Roscoe Holcomb, "Got No Honey Baby Now (Honey Babe Blues)" (on Holcomb2)
- Bascom Lamar Lunsford, "Little Turtle Dove" (1928; on BLLunsford01; a composite of all sorts of floating verses, a few of which may be from here)
- Charlie Monroe & his Kentucky Pardners, "Red Rocking Chair" (RCA Victor 21-0145, 1949)
- New Lost City Ramblers, "Red Rocking Chair" (on NLCR03)
- Frank Proffitt, "Got No Sugar Baby Now" (on FProffitt01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Pay Day" (floating lyrics)

cf. "Rain and Snow" (floating lyrics)

cf. "Fare You Well, My Own True Love (The Storms Are on the Ocean, The False True Lover, The True Lover's Farewell, Red Rosy Bush, Turtle Dove)" (floating lyrics)

NOTES [22 words]: This is a white blues, but it powerfully resembles an improvised African-American blues lyric, composed mostly of floating verses. -PJS

Sugar Hill

DESCRIPTION: Dance tune; "If you want to get your eye knocked out/If you want to get your fill/If you want to get your head blowed off/Go up on Sugar Hill". Other floating verses, "Possum up a 'simmon tree."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recording, Crockett Ward & his Boys)

KEYWORDS: dancing drink floatingverses dancetune

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):

- Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #79, "Sugar Hill" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, p. 193, "Sugar Hill" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:

- Frank Bode, "Sugar Hill" (on FBode1)
- Dad Crockett, "Sugar Hill" (Brunswick 372, 1929; on KMM [as Crockett Family Mountaineers])
- Iron Mountain String Band, "Sugar Hill" (on ClassOT)
- Dan Tate, "Sugar Hill" (on FarMtns2)
- Virginia Mountain Boomers [Ernest V. Stoneman, Willie Stoneman, an the Sweet Brothers], "Sugar
Sugar in My Coffee

DESCRIPTION: Complaints about life laced with the refrain, "(How in the world do the old folks know) That I like sugar in my coffee-o." The singer may describe how he likes to drink, or wishes he were/were not living the life of a white man.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: nonballad playparty

FOUND IN: US(SE,So)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Randolph 565, "Sugar in my Coffee" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 92, "I Do Love Sugar in My Coffee O" (2 short texts)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 92, "I Do Love Sugar in My Coffee O" (1 tune plus text excerpt)

Roud #7659

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "What'll I Do with the Baby-O" (floating lyrics)

NOTES [78 words]: The Randolph fragment is so short that it could just be a piece of "What'll I Do with the Baby-O," and Brown's texts are also distinct. The mention of "sugar in my coffee" may just be a floating line. But it's going to be very hard to identify any of these scraps with a "real" song. Randolph suggests that the origin of this may be in the fiddle tune "Sugar in My Toddy-o." Certainly possible. In which case it may be related to "Jingle at the Window (Tideo)." - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1

File: R565A

Sugar in the Gourd (Bacon in the Smokehouse)

DESCRIPTION: "Bacon in the smokehouse, barrel full of lard, Milk in the dairy, butter on the board, Coffee in the little bag, sugar in the gourd, And the way to git it out is to dash the goard about."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (recording, Fiddlin' John Carson)

KEYWORDS: food dancing nonballad

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #137, "Bacon in the Smokehouse" (1 short text, 1 tune)
- Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains, pp. 44-48, "Sugar on the Floor" (1 text)

Roud #5051 and 17580

RECORDINGS:
- Gid Tanner & His Skillet Lickers, "Sugar in the Gourd" (Columbia 15612-D, 1930)

NOTES [85 words]: Roud splits Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida's "Bacon in the Smokehouse" from "Sugar in the Gourd," but all the texts involved are short, and the form appears the same; I'm lumping them until someone turns up another "Bacon in the Smokehouse" version. "Bacon" is Roud #5051; "Sugar in the Gourd," #17590. Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains's "Sugar on the Floor" is more a dance instruction than an actual song, and might be done to some other tune, but the title makes it seem likely that it goes here.- RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: Morr137
Suit of Green, The

DESCRIPTION: A girl mourns the loss of her love taken by guards "for wearing of the suit of green." Her master buys her a suit of green to wear to Dublin where she pleads with the Colonel for her lover's life. The Colonel spares them both; they will marry.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1862 (broadside, Bodleian Firth c.14(134)); first half 19C (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)
KEYWORDS: love marriage request rebellion trial pardon clothes colors Ireland patriotic prisoner
FOUND IN: Ireland Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 24, "The Suit of Green" (1 text, 1 tune)
Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion 22, "The Suit of Green" (1 text, 1 tune)
OBoyle-TheIrishSongTradition 23, "Suit of Green" (1 text, 1 tune)
Healy-MercierBookOfOldIrishStreetBalladsVol2, pp. 42-43, "(A Much-Admired New Song Called) The Suit of Green" (1 text)
ST OLoc024 (Partial)
Roud #3023
RECORDINGS:
Cyril O'Brien, "Wearing of the Suit of Green" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth c.14(134), "Suit of Green," E.M.A. Hodges (London), 1855-1861; also 2806 b.9(226), 2806 c.15(123), 2806 b.9(277), 2806 b.10(208), 2806 b.10(208), Firth c.26(264), Johnson Ballads fol. 363, "[The] Suit of Green"
NOTES [38 words]: Although wearing green was never an actual crime in Ireland, it was often associated with rebels (see "The Wearing of the Green" and the like). In times of trouble, it was likely to invite, shall we say, official attention. - RBW

Sukey Sudds

DESCRIPTION: "Sukey Sudds was a-standing in front of her tubs, A-washing her clothes so nice.... Sukey Sudds picked up her three-legged stool And she throwed it right into the fire, fire, fire, And she throwed it right into the fire."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: clothes
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 438, "Sukey Sudds" (1 text)
Roud #7608
NOTES [42 words]: Is this a parody of "Lord Lovel [Child 75]"? There is a parody of the latter which begins "Old Sukey she stood at the college gate, A-scratching her milk-white ear." It doesn't match this song, but they appear to be based on the same name and tunes. - RBW

Sumer Is I-cumen In

DESCRIPTION: "Sumer is i-cumen in, lhude [loud] sing cuccu!" A round celebrating the beginning of summer and the appearance of various symbols of fertility

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: fourteenth century or earlier (British Museeum MS. Harley 978, generally dated c. 1225-1250)
LONG DESCRIPTION: Sumer is i-cumen in, Lhude sing cuccu! Growe sed [grows seed] and blowe [blooms] meed And spring [springs] wde [wood] nu [now]. Sing cuccu! Awe [ewe] blete after lomb [lamb],
Lhou [lows] after calves cu [cow]
Bulluc stere [stirs], bukke [buck] verte [passes gas, or perhaps frequents the fields]
Murie [merry] sing cuccu
Cuccu, cuccu,
Wel singes u cuccu,
Ne swik u nauer nu! [Now nature never ceases].

KEYWORDS: farming lyric nonballad MiddleEnglish

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (17 citations):
Stevick-OneHundredMiddleEnglishLyrics 3, "(Sumer Is I-cumen In)" (1 text)
Sidgwick/Chambers-EarlyEnglishLyrics II, p. 2, "(no title)" (1 text)
Chappell/Wooldridge-OldEnglishPopularMusic I, pp. 10-13, "Sumer Is Icumen In" (1 text, 1 tune; the frontispiece shows a facsimile of the neumed manuscript)
Ritson-AncientSongsBalladsFromHenrySecondToTheRevolution, pp. 10-11, "A Song or Catch In Praise of the Cuckoo" (1 text)
Hirsh-MedievalLyric-MiddleEnglishLyricsBalladsCarols #8, "(Sing cuccu nu, sing cuccu!)" (1 text, with a photo of the original manuscript)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 260 "Summer Is A-Coming In" (1 text, modernized and otherwise fouled up)

DT, ICUMSUM
Brown/Robbins-IndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse, #3223
DigitalIndexOfMiddleEnglishVerse #5053

ADDITIONAL: Carleton Brown, editor, _English Lyrics of the XIIIth Century_, Oxford University Press, 1932, p. 13, "Sumer Is Icumen In" (1 text)
Reginald Nettel, _Seven Centuries of Popular Song_, Phoenix House, 1956, p. 14, "(no title)" (1 text)
Noah Greenberg, ed., An Anthology of English Medieval and Renaissance Vocal Music, pp. 35-41 (1 text plus modern arrangement)
Karin Boklund-Lagopolou, _I have a yong suster: Popular song and Middle English lyric_, Four Courts Press, 2002, pp. 44-45, "(Sumer is isumen in)" (1 text)
Bruce Dickins & R. M. Wilson, editors, _Early Middle English Texts_, 1951; revised edition 1952, #XXIV, p. 118, "The Cukoo Song" (1 text)

MANUSCRIPT: London, British Library, MS. Harley 978, folio 11 (with music)

NOTES [762 words]: Possibly the oldest pop song in the English language; it's a wide-open question whether the manuscript was a transcription of a piece from oral tradition, or the source. - PJS

Ritson too quotes an unnamed source who called this "the most ancient English song." Wooldridge observes that this song "contains the earliest canon, and the earliest persistently repeated bass, as yet discovered," and speculates (based on the several erasures clearly visible in the manuscript) that the scribe, probably John Fornsete of Reading Abbey (also called John of Fornsete, after his presumed birthplace of Fornsett in Norfolk; Nettel, p. 14), was personally responsible for the arrangement. Boklund-Lagopolou, p. 45, interprets the corrections to mean that the music was actually revised after the manuscript was written, because the handwriting of the manuscript seems too old for the style of performance in the notation. Either suggestion is of course possible, but I wouldn't place too much weight on the erasures; musical notation was evolving quickly at this time, and the scribe might simply have had trouble understanding it and copying it accurately. According to Dickins and Wilson, p. 225, the manuscript is a commonplace book (i.e. a personal miscellany), not a musical collection.

On the other hand, Bennett/Gray, p. 395, argue that the text was composed to fit the tune. Personally, I'd be inclined to consider this a proto-classical piece (all the more so as it occurs only in the one manuscript) rather than folk, but I'm not going to be dogmatic about it. Chambers, p. 77, splits the difference, noting that the piece "has a refrain, and uses a seasonal theme, but in the form which has come to us it is a part-song for learned musicians" -- in other words, a folk form to be sung by professionals. Davies, p. 310, points out that the instructions for singing are in Latin. Nettel, p. 14, translates them; they say the piece can be sung by four voices, and if requested at least three, with two as an absolute minimum, plus bass. The bass part is supposed to come in with the second lead voice, not the first.
Most scholars date the manuscript to the thirteenth century (e.g. Chambers, p. 77, dates it c. 1240; Stevick, p. 4, dates text and music separately but puts one at 1230-1240 and the other c. 1225; Davies, p. 52, says "earlier thirteenth century"). Manfred Bukofzer, however, prefers the fourteenth, and a number of scholars have argued that the elaborate musical form implies a later date (cited by Davies, p. 310). Luria/Hoffman, p. 5, say that it is usually dated around 1240 but musicologists prefer a date around 1310.

Luria/Hoffman, pp. 311-313, reprint a short article by A. K. Moore on this poem, referred to as the "Reading Rota" after the town with which it is associated. Moore seems to prefer the late date and thinks the piece an imitation of Welsh folk song.

Looking at the best of my available facsimiles (the full-color copy on p. 50 of BarkerEtAl) and comparing it with the letterforms shown on pp. 27-29 of Moorman, I wonder if those who argue for a later date don't have a point. I'm not a paleographer, and there wasn't that much difference between thirteenth and fourteenth century insular hands anyway -- but the manuscript does have several forms (notably spelling out the word "and," rather than using the upside-down L, , used as an ampersand at the time) more characteristic of late than early manuscripts. And the open rather than the closed "c", and the "a" without an ascender, are late. Of course, if the manuscript is a copy rather than the autograph, that doesn't mean much.

The use of English and Latin, rather than French, is also an argument for a later date (since French was the more prestigious language starting from the Norman Conquest, with the prestige gradually lessening over time). The use of English may also argue for folk roots.

Nettel, p. 15, points to the fact that it is in Ionian mode as evidence for its folk origin; it is of course the most common mode for folk songs, but the church avoided it and called it "modus lascivus."

We should perhaps note that Harley 978 is not to be confused with another famous Harleian manuscript, Harley 2253, which contains "King Horn" among many other famous poems. "Sumer Is I-cumen In" appears to be the only English song or poem in Harley 978 (Bennett/Gray, p. 395, says that the other pieces in the same book are in French and Latin. Indeed, there is a Latin parallel text to the English of this, but as Davies notes on p. 310, it doesn't really fit the music). - RBW

Bibliography

- Bennett/Gray: J. A. W. Bennett, Middle English Literature, edited and completed by Douglas Gray and being a volume of the Oxford History of English Literature, 1986 (I use the 1990 Clarendon paperback)
- Boklund-Lagopolou: Karin Boklund-Lagopolou, I have a yong suster: Popular song and Middle English lyric, Four Courts Press, 2002
- Chambers: E. K. Chambers, English Literature at the Close of the Middle Ages, Oxford, 1945, 1947
- Moorman: Charles Moorman, Editing the Middle English Manuscript, University of Mississippi Press, 1975
- Nettel: Reginald Nettel, Seven Centuries of Popular Song, Phoenix House, 1956

Last updated in version 5.3
File: FSWB260B

Summer Hill

DESCRIPTION: The singer tells how he used to ramble, until he spies Cupid and is pierced by his dart. Now "I'm a wounded lover on Summer Hill." He describes the girl's beauty, and hopes to win her. He refuses to reveal his name

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: love courting beauty
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H20b, p. 245, "Summer Hill" (1 text, 1 tune)
Summer Lane

DESCRIPTION: "The Mason-Dixie Line has given us all the pip, Your songs from the Yankee land have been done brown." The singer suggests instead the Saturday jubilation, because "It is always summer in Summer Lane." Many amusements of the town are listed

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Palmer)
KEYWORDS: music party nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(West))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Roy Palmer, _The Folklore of Warwickshire_, Rowman and Littlefield, 1976, pp. 150-152, "(Summer Lane) (1 text [on p. 152], 1 tune [on pp. 150-151])

Summer Morning, The (The White/Blue/Green Cockade)

DESCRIPTION: "It was one summer morning, as I went o'er the moss, I had no thought of 'listing till the soldiers did me cross." But her love is in the army. She both laments and curses him. They meet; he dries her tears and says he will return; she vows to ramble

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1820 (Kidson's mother according to Kidson-TraditionalTunes); 1846 (Dixon-AncientPoemsBalladsSongsOfThePeasantryOfEngland)
KEYWORDS: soldier love separation recruiting
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North,South,West))
REFERENCES (10 citations):
Dixon-AncientPoemsBalladsSongsOfThePeasantryOfEngland, Song #34, pp. 229-230, "The Summer's Morning" (1 text)
Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 449-451, "The Summer's Morning" (1 text)
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 113-115, "The Summer Morning"; p. 115, "The White Cockade" (1 texts plus 1 fragment, 3 tunes)
Stokoe/Reay-SongsAndBalladsOfNorthernEngland, pp. 68-69, "It Was One Summer Morning" (1 text, 1 tune)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 517, "Blue Cockade" (1 text)
Copper-ASongForEverySeason, pp. 282-283, "The White Cockade" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #20, "The White Cockade" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gundry-CanowKernow-SongsDancesFromCornwall, p. 43, "The Green Cockade" (1 text plus Cornish translation, 1 tune)
Dallas-TheCruelWars-100SoldiersSongs, pp. 30-31, "The White Cockade" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, COCKADE1*

Sun Don't Set In the Morning

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Sun don't set in the morning (3x), Light shine 'round the world." Verse: "Pray on, praying sister (brother, preacher), Pray on (3x), Light shine 'round the world"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 23, "Sun Don't Set In de Mornin'" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 130 in the 1901 edition)
RECORDINGS:
James Garfield Smalls, "Hol' Out de Light" (on USSeaisland03)
File: Dett023

Sun Down Below

DESCRIPTION: "Six o'clock I hear 'em say. Sun down, Sun down below. Time to quit and go away. Sun down, Sun down below." Hauling shanty or cargo loading song, likely of Negro origin.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1945 (Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips)
KEYWORDS: shanty, worksong
FOUND IN: West Indies US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, p. 85, "Sun Down Below" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: Harl085

Sun Gonna Shine in My Door Some Day

DESCRIPTION: "Been in that jailhouse, expecting a fine." He has no friends to help. "It's no matter, Lord, I know, Sun gonna shine in my door some day." He is alone and hungry. His buddy escaped when he was taken. His girl (?) has abandoned him.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (collected from Jesse Harris)
KEYWORDS: prison, hardtimes, abandonment
FOUND IN: US (So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 366-367, "Sun Gonna Shine in My Door Someday" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #15590
NOTES [54 words]: This shares a line, and a little bit of feeling, with the Flatt & Scruggs song "Sun's Gonna Shine in My Backdoor Someday." (It is the same as Big Bill Broonzy's song, although Broonzy has a lot of different verses.) But I don't think they're really the same song; this particular line simply inspired the bluegrass piece. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.2
File: LoSi366

Sun Is Gone Down in the West Love, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer mourns the loss of her sweetheart: "last night you were in with another... I hope you won't leave her in sorrow. Alone as you've gone and left me." She will never love another and in her coffin "I'll think on the promise you made me."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1912 (JIFSS 1921 (see Note below))
KEYWORDS: infidelity, love, promise, nonballad, death
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 176, "The Sun Is Gone Down in the West Love" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #14061
RECORDINGS:
Elizabeth Cronin, "The Sun Is Gone Down in the West Love" (on IRECronin01)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Since I Lost My Remembrance of You
NOTES [52 words]: Mudcat has a version that shares some verses and adds others to OCroinin-Croininmin (http://mudcat.org/thread.cfm?threadid=115872) from Journal of the Irish Folk Song Society Vol 18 Dec 1921, noted in 1912. Elizabeth Cronin’s tune is the same as Sarah Makem’s for "Caroline and Her Young Sailor Bold" [Laws N17]. - BS
Last updated in version 3.2
Sun Lights Up All the Big Blue Skies

DESCRIPTION: "Sun lights up all the big blue skies, Shines all the live-long day... Drives all the darkness away." The mockingbird, lark, catbird sing. The roses, violets bloom. All these things make the day brighter, but what makes it brightest is her beloved (baby?)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro)
KEYWORDS: love flowers bird nonballad
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
* Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro, pp. 11-12, "(Sun lights up all de big blue skies)" (1 text)

Sun To Sun Blues

DESCRIPTION: "Man can worry from sun to sun When a woman's worries have just begun." "I can't keep from worrying no matter how I try" "I ain't goin' let no one woman make me no monkey man." "I'll go down South ... where I never been before"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (StuffDreams2)
KEYWORDS: parting nonballad lover
FOUND IN:
RECORDINGS:
* Blind Blake, "Sun To Sun Blues" (on StuffDreams2)
NOTES [18 words]: Three line blues: the first line is repeated -- more or less -- and the last line completes the thought. - BS
* Last updated in version 5.2

Sun's Bright in France, The (My Ain Countree)

DESCRIPTION: The singer is in France (exiled after Culloden?) and looks across the sea toward home in Galloway, where he left Mary and their three children. "I'll meet ye aa again soon Frae my ain counterie"

AUTHOR: Allan Cunningham (source: Cunningham, but see notes)
EARLIEST DATE: 1810 (Cromek, but see the notes)
KEYWORDS: exile reunion separation France Scotland lament children wife
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
* McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen, pp. 129-129, 155, "My Ain Counterie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #21757
ALTERNATE TITLES: The Sun Rises Bright in France
NOTES [390 words]: As always, when referring to Cromek I must repeat this warning: "Cromek died [1812] shortly after the issue [1810] of Remains of Nithsdale and Galloway Song, which was mostly written by Cunningham, though palmed upon Cromek as recovered antiques" (source: J. Ross, The Book of Scottish Poems: Ancient and Modern, (Edinburgh, Edinburgh Publishing Co, 1878), "Allan Cunningham 1784-1842," p. 738; other sources agree). For more on Cunningham and Cromek see the notes to "The Bonnie House o Airlie" [Child 199].
In this case, Cromek has the source as "Miss MacArtney." I assume that that was what he had been told by Cunningham. Cromek's note suggests that this is one of "many affecting fragments of song which seem to have been the composition of those exiles [the "wretched fugitives" "after the battle of Culloden"].

Finally, Cromek's note lived on in this statement in Frank Kidson and Martin Shaw, Songs of Britain (New York: Boosey & Co, 1913 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 120 -- where the song is printed as a Jacobite song, "The Sun Rises Bright in France": "Many of those concerned in the Jacobite rebellions of 1715 and 1745 escaped to France and dared not return to the land of their birth." Graham points out that Cunningham's 1825 version adds two verses and makes some other changes to the 1810 version. McMorland-Scott follows the 1825 changes -- with the single exception of not changing "high heaven" to "the high heaven" -- and changes some words besides.

- BS

Whatever its origin, this should not be confused with the popular song "My AIn Countrie" attributed to Mary Lee Demarest, which occurs on p. 267 of Heart-Songs. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: McSc129

Suncook Town Tragedy (Josie Langmaid) [Laws F21]

DESCRIPTION: Josie Langmaid is on her way to school when she is accosted by (Joseph) LePage. He abuses and kills her. Her family searches for and finds her body. The killer is condemned to hang

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads)

KEYWORDS: homicide family execution

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

Oct 4, 1875 - Murder of Josie Langmaid, reportedly by Joseph LePage

Mar 15, 1878 - Execution of Le Page

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (5 citations):

Laws F21, "Suncook Town Tragedy (Josie Langmaid)"
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 72-73, "Suncook Town Tragedy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 21-22 "The Suncook Town Tragedy" (1 text)
Burt-AmericanMurderBallads, p. 57, "(no title)" (1 short text, 1 tune)

DT 684, SUNCKTWN

Roud #2259

NOTES [81 words]: Although Laws shows no signs of doubt about Le Page's guilt, the account in Burt-AmericanMurderBallads makes it seem that the case was at least somewhat uncertain. Langmaid had been abused and then decapitated, but the only evidence Burt-AmericanMurderBallads lists to tie the crime to Le Page is the fact that he had courted young girls (and Langmaid wasn't that young; Burt-AmericanMurderBallads lists her age as 17). Le Page even had a partial alibi, but was convicted anyway. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.7

File: LF21

Sunday Night

DESCRIPTION: "Sunday night an' Nancy o! My delight and fancy, oh! All the world that I should know If I had x, oh! He! ho! my x oh! My bonny, bonny x, oh! All the world that I should keep If I had x, oh!"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1875 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
Sundown

DESCRIPTION: Courting song, with the chorus "It's nearly sundown, sundown/Sun is almost down/ Bound away to leave you, 'fore the sun goes down..." Verses begin with "Hi, my little darling"; singer promises to bring his girl back a ribbon to tie around her waist

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal)

KEYWORDS: courting parting nonballad playparty lover

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):

RECORDINGS:
Art Thieme, "Sundown" (on GetFolked) (on Thieme04)

NOTES [57 words]: I suspect this is related to the song "Hurry Sundown," and I'm guessing that it's a playparty. - PJS

The NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, from Harvey Reeves, consists of little more than repeats of the line "I'm going to see my darling before the sun goes down"; it may be a separate song, but it can hardly file on its own, so I'm putting it here.

Last updated in version 6.1

File: RcSundow

Sundown Below

DESCRIPTION: Response line is "Sundown, Sundown below." Leader lines include "Sun is down in the hole below," "Sun is down and I must go"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands)

KEYWORDS: nonballad shanty

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands, p. 221, "Sundown Below" (1 text)

NOTES [47 words]: The current description is based on the Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands text. Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands writes, "This tune was sung at the end of the day as a hint to the captain, when the hold was too dark for the stevedores to see what they were doing." - BS

Last updated in version 4.1

File: Parp221
Sunflower Chorus on Micanopy People
DESCRIPTION: "The mayor came driving around the bend, Good-bye, my lover, good-bye, All loaded down with side-walk men." "To Cooper's to get a stamp they went... Cooper dunned them for a quarter of a cent." And so on, listing details of town life in Micanopy, Florida
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida)
KEYWORDS: commerce moniker
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #12, "Sunflower Chorus on Micanopy People" (1 text)
Roud #5016
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Goodbye, My Lover, Goodbye" (tune)
File: Morr012

Sunny Side Up
DESCRIPTION: "Keep the sunny side up, up, And the other side too," Soldiers march, sailors sing. "Turn around and touch your toes" like the Eskimoes and Japanese; "touch your chin" like an Indian.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
KEYWORDS: derivative playparty
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 127, "Sunny Side Up" (4 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #18992
NOTES [59 words]: Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame: "From the moment the film 'The Best Things in Life Are Free' was released in 1929, little girls recognized that one of its hit songs, 'Sunny Side Up', might have been specially written for them." Lyrics are by Buddy G. DeSilva and Lew Brown, music by Ray Henderson (source: "Sunnyside Up" at the Internet Movie Database site). - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: OpGa127

Sunshine After Rain
DESCRIPTION: "I left my love in Engand In poverty and pain"; they weep as he sets out across the sea. He works hard, saves his money, goes home, finds the girl. They live happily and are well-off: "The morn has 'dorned the darkest night And sunshine followed rain."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (Chappell)
KEYWORDS: love separation emigration reunion farming
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 55, "Sunshine Followed Rain" (1 text)
Roud #13821
File: ChFRA055

Sunshine Railway Disaster, The
DESCRIPTION: Two trains approach Sunshine at the same time. 44 die in the crash. "If those trains had only run As they should, their proper time, There wouldn't have been a disaster At a place they call Sunshine. If those brakes had only held...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1974
KEYWORDS: train wreck disaster death Australia
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
April 20, 1908 - The Bendigo train crashes into the rear of the Ballarat train at Sunshine near Melbourne. 44 passengers (all in the Ballarat train) were killed; over 400 (from both trains) were injured.

Sup of Good Whisky, A

DESCRIPTION: A mouthful "of good whisky will make you glad"; too much will make you mad; none is bad. Preachers, doctors, lawyers, Turks, and Quakers are against it but drink "in their turn" Germans, French, and Italians boast of their drinking; Hibernia's is best.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1839 (Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)

KEYWORDS: drink nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 83-86, "A Sup of Good Whisky" (1 text)

BROADSIDES:

*Bodleian, Firth b.25(569/570/571/572) View 4 of 5, "A Sup of Good Whisky" (A sup of good whisky will make you glad), W. Macnie (Stirling), 1825; also Johnson Ballads 3185, Harding B 25(1853), Harding B 11(3699), "A Sup of Good Whisky"

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Chapter of Kings" (tune, per broadsides Bodleian Harding B 25(1853), Harding B 11(3699))

File: CfPS083

Supen Ut, En Dram Pa Man

DESCRIPTION: Swedish shanty/drinking song. Chorus translates to: "Oh listen, listen here us now, Out of deep throats we're calling you, A tot which goes from man to man, A tot for us Johnnies." Verses mention more drinking and sailing themes.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1935 (Sternvall, _Sang under Segel_)

KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage shanty drink

FOUND IN: Sweden

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 282-283, "Supen Ut, En Dram Pa Man" (2 texts, English & Swedish, 1 tune)

Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, p. 168, "Supen Ut, En Dram Pa Man" (2 texts, Swedish & English, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Whiskey Johnny" (similar theme)

ALTERNATE TITLES:

Kom Hor, Kom Hor

File: Hugi282

Superintendent Barratt

DESCRIPTION: "O, Sherlock Holmes is deid lang syne In some forgotten garrett, But aa o youse hae heard the news O' Superintendent Barratt." Barratt comes north to seek the Stone, dislikes the weather, gives up, and goes home.

AUTHOR: Words: Maurice Blythman ("Thurso Berwick")

EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (MacColl-PersonalChoice)

KEYWORDS: humorous travel

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:

Dec 25, 1950 - Four Scottish students break into Westminster Abbey and steal the Stone of Scone

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):

MacColl-PersonalChoice, p. 15, "Superintendent Barratt" (1 text)
DT, BARRETT

NOTES [403 words]: Obviously not traditional; I'm not sure why MacColl included this in what is otherwise a book of traditional songs. Maybe he just wanted to poke John Bull about the seizure of the Stone of Scone -- "the Stone of Destiny," the rock on which Kings of Scotland were crowned, which was stolen at Christmas 1950. Some people still think the "official" stone was hidden away (Magnusson, pp. 679-680), but a stone that was accepted as the original was returned to Westminster in 1951 (OxfordCompanion, p. 842) after being placed in Arbroath Abbey wrapped in a Scottish flag, a symbolic protest since it was there that the 1320 Declaration of Arbroath declares Scotland independent of England (Keay/Keay, p. 847). Still, the first attempts to find it were unsuccessful, which would explain this song.

Contrary to the implication of the song, the theft was not particularly smooth and the pursuit not entirely inept. "In the event, [the theft] only succeeded after a series of errors, narrow squeaks and almost unbelievable coincidences worthy of an Ealing comedy" (Magnusson, p. 675). Among other things, the robbers broke the stone, and were caught in the act by a policeman who was fooled into thinking two of the thieves were lovers making out (Magnusson, p. 676). And while this fellow Barratt may have been unable to find a clue, a certain Inspector Willie Kerr had interviewed the leading thief based on library records (Magnusson, pp. 678-679), so the investigation did involve some original thinking.

The tune is said to be "Barbara Allen." Pick your favorite version.... Incidentally, it cannot be said with absolute certainty that Sherlock Holmes would have been dead in 1950, although the death of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in 1930 obviously meant that there were no more true Holmes stories, and the last Holmes story by internal chronology, "His Last Bow," is set in 1914. Doyle never gave an absolute date for Holmes's birth (and probably never decided on one), but "The speculations of scholars have placed this important event variously in the years 1852, 1853, 1854, 1855, 1857-58, and even in '867" (AnnotatedHolmes, volume I, p. 47). The latter date is not really possible, since Holmes was an adult at the time of "A Study in Scarlet" in 1881, but a date in the mid- to late-1850s is reasonable and, indeed, almost necessary. So he could have still been around, although perhaps not of sound mind, in 1950. - RBW

Bibliography

Last updated in version 6.1
File: McPSCuBa

Sur le Pont d'Avignon

DESCRIPTION: French round: "Sur le pont d'Avignon, L'on y danse, l'on y danse." "On the bridge at Avignon, see them dance, see them dance." The song tells how men, women, and soldiers bow and dance
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1846 (Du Mersan, "Chansons et Rondes Enfantines")
KEYWORDS: dancing nonballad
FOUND IN: France
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 390, "Sur Le Pont D'Avignon (On The Bridge At Avignon)" (1 text)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, pp. 539-540, "Sur le Pont d'Avignon"

NOTES [47 words]: One of the best-known songs in all of France. The great bridge on the Rhone was finished in 1185. The need to carry larger ships has resulted in much of the span being torn down, but a portion still stands (sticking out into the middle of nowhere), mostly as a tourist attraction. - RBW
Surely I Can Do
DESCRIPTION: Fragmentary text, "Any amount... Surely I can do.... Courtin', courtin', courtin'...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)
KEYWORDS: courting nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 730, "Surely I Can Do" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
NOTES [24 words]: The description is (almost) all that Schinhan was able to transcribe from Brown's recording; obviously it will be very difficult to identify. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: BrS5730

Surrender of the Natives, The DESCRIPTION: "The Waikato now is ours, The natives we have beaten... And now each vile offender We... humbly ask That they'll come and surrender." Maori warriors submit -- and so do children and women and old men, expecting food and support
AUTHOR: Words: Charles R. Thatcher (1831-1878)
EARLIEST DATE: 1864 (Thatcher's Songs of the War, according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)
KEYWORDS: battle soldier humorous
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Apr 1864 - During the Maori Wars, a large group of Maori surrender -- and have to be cared for
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, pp. 39-41, "The Surrender of the Natives" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hoskins-GoldfieldBalladeer-LifeAndTimes-Charles-R-Thatcher, pp. 79-80, "Surrender of the Natives" (2 excerpts)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Courting in the Kitchen" [Laws Q16] (tune)
NOTES [116 words]: For brief background on Charles Thatcher's career, see the notes to "Where's Your License?" For an extensive collection of his songs, see Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong. This particular song comes out of the Maori Wars, and apparently refers to a trick the Maori pulled. A large group offered to surrender -- but when the Europeans came to gather in those who had given up, they found only women and children. The men had stayed away to continue the fight, leaving it to the other side to care for their dependents. Which, incidentally, shows that this was a relatively civilized war; if (say) the French had tried that trick against Henry V, he'd have killed everyone who gave in to him. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: BaRo039

Susan Brown (I)
DESCRIPTION: Beautiful Susan, the singer, has many wooers; she flirts with all even though she loves a rich farmer's son. The lad proposes to a different girl. Susan poisons him, then flees. Unable to find work, she is imprisoned and now is dying of consumption
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: love courting betrayal homicide poison prison death
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H771, pp. 415-416, "Susan Brown" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7963
File: HHH771
Susan Carr
DESCRIPTION: Billy Green and Susan Carr had courted, but she turns to Thompson instead. Green challenges Thompson for the right to her hand. Green kills Thompson and drowns himself. Susan dies soon after. All three are buried together
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: love abandonment homicide death burial drowning suicide
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H690 p. 416, "Susan Carr" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9764
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Pride of Newry Town" (plot)
NOTES [81 words]: The notes in Henry/Huntington/Herrmann speculate that this may be related to Laws P33, "Susannah Clargy" (one of the most obscure of the Laws ballads). I strongly doubt there is any link. There are common elements -- a girl with two lovers, and a death, as well as the similar names of the heroines -- but many different elements as well. "Susan Carr" sees the two suitors do battle, while "Susannah Clargy" is a song of suicide with the lover's ghost coming back to take her away. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.3
File: HHH690

Susan Strayed on the Briny Beach [Laws K19]
DESCRIPTION: Noble Susan loves Willy, a sailor, and will not accept a husband of high degree. As she walks along the beach, worrying about him, she sees a body which proves to be his. She dies for love; the two are buried together
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland)
KEYWORDS: love death burial drowning sailor shore
FOUND IN: Canada(Newf) Ireland
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Laws K19, "Susan Strayed on the Briny Beach"
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 103, "Susan Strayed the Briny Beach" (2 texts)
Peacock, pp. 646-647, "As Susan Strayed the Briny Beach" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 21, "Susan Strayed the Briny Beach" (1 text, 1 tune)
Guigné-ForgottenSongsOfTheNewfoundlandOutports, pp. 28-32, "As Susan Strayed the Briny Beach (Susan Strayed the Briny Beach)" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H774, pp. 150-151, "Susan on the Beach" (1 text, 1 tune)
Ranson-SongsOfTheWexfordCoast, pp. 70-71, "The Sligo Shore" (1 text)
DT 695, SUSTRAY
Roud #1896
RECORDINGS:
Everett Bennett, "As Susan Strayed the Briny Beach" (on NFAGuigné01)
Arthur Nicolle, "As Susan Strayed the Briny Beach" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. Rare Willie Drowned in Yarrow, or, The Water o Gamrie [Child 215] (plot)
cf. "Down by the Seaside" (plot)
File: LK19

Susan Van Dusan
DESCRIPTION: "Oh, Susan Van Dusan, The gal of my choosin', She sticks to my bosom like glue." "Oh, Susan Van Dusan, Oh, I will quit usin' Tobacco and boozin' for you." "Oh, Susan Van Dusan, What gum are you usin' That sticks to my bosom like you?"
Susan, The

DESCRIPTION: The Susan, returning to Bonaventure from successful fishing on the Labrador, sinks in a storm at Cutthroat and the crew of four is lost

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1977 (Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou)
KEYWORDS: death fishing sea ship storm wreck

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Sep 6, 1912 - Loss of the Susan M

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 103, "The Susan" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4405

NOTES [125 words]: Cut Throat Island is up the Labrador Coast near the mouth of Groswater Bay about 140 air miles northeast of Happey Valley-Goose Bay. Bonaventure, Trinity Bay, is just north of the Avalon Peninsula. - BS
The name Susan, the mention of Cut Throat, and the name Captain Miller allow us to positively identify the ship involved. Captain Joseph Prim and Mike McCarthy, The Angry Seas: Shipwrecks on the Coast of Labrador, Jesperson Publishing, 1999, p. 118, says that the Susan M was a "Schooner, Miller, Master, lost at Cut Throat Island, Labrador, September 6, 1912, two crew members drowned, seven saved." They have further details on the storm, and another brief mention of the boat (which they there call the Susan M. Miller) on pp. 82-85. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.1

File: LeBe103

Susanna Cox

DESCRIPTION: German. "Ach market auf, ihr Menschen all." Take warning from the fate of Susanna Cox, who was seduced by her employer Jacob Gehr. She bears a child and kills it. She is tried, convicted, and executed. The story is littered with moral warnings

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1936 (Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends); supposedly written 1810 and translated into English by Ludwig Schtark in 1845
KEYWORDS: warning foreign language sex pregnancy homicide death execution warning

FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, pp. 120-128, "Susanna Cox (Ein Trauerlied enthaltend Die Geschichte der Susanna Cox, weiche in Reading wegen Ermordung ihres Kindez higerichtet werde)" (1 German text plus feeble poetic English translation, 1 tune)
File: KPL120

Susannah Clargy [Laws P33]

DESCRIPTION: Susannah vows to be true to the widow's son; they break a ring as a token. Some months later she agrees to marry another man; she scorns the widow's son. He kills himself; that night his ghost comes to claim Susannah

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1918 (Cecil Sharp collection)
KEYWORDS: ghost broken token courting marriage suicide

FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Laws P33, "Susannah Clargy"
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 185, "Susannah Clargy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Olson-BroadsideBalladIndex, ZN3179, "Young lovers most discrete and wise"
DT 511, SUSCLRGY
Roud #998
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Ghost's Bride" (plot)
cf. "Alonzo the Brave and Fair Imogene" (plot)
cf. "Skon Jungfrun Hon Gangar Sig Till Sogsta Berg (The Pretty Maid Climbs the Highest Mountain)" (plot)
File: LP33

Susiana
DESCRIPTION: Shanty. Characteristic line: "Hooray, oh, Susiana! Away right over the mountain."
(The fragment in Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman is too short to determine the plot -- if there is one.)
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman)
KEYWORDS: shanty
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar) West Indies(Nevis)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, p. 83, "Susiana" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 378, "Way, Me, Susiana!" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, p. 286]
Abrahams-DeepTheWaterShallowTheShore, p. 58, "Oh Louisiana" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9436
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Poor Lucy Anna" (similar wording in some verses)
File: Doe083

Susie
DESCRIPTION: "Choose your partner, Suz, Susie, Choose your partner, Susie girl." "Face your partner..." "Out the window...." "Take a peek at...." "Kiss her when you catch her...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains)
KEYWORDS: playparty courting
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Skean-CircleLeft-FolkPlayOfKentuckyMountains, p. 21, "Susie" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: Skean021

Sussex Mummers' Christmas Carol, The DESCRIPTION: "When righteous Joseph wedded was Unto a virtuous maid, A glorious angel from Heaven came." "O mortal man, remember well, When Christ our Lord was born.""God bless the master of this house Wth happiness beside...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1882 (Broadwood)
KEYWORDS: religious childbirth Jesus floatingverses
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Broadwood-EnglishTraditionalSongsAndCarols, pp. 80-83, "The Sussex Mummers' Christmas Carol" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1066
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "God Bless the Master of this House" (lyrics)
cf. "The Bellman's Song (The Moon Shone Bright)" (lyrics)
cf. "When Righteous Joseph Wedded Was" (lyrics)
NOTES [60 words]: This appears to be a composite, with the first verse from "When Righteous Joseph Wedded Was," plus material from "The Moon Shone Bright" or one of its relatives and several other floating verses. How much of this is due to Broadwood's editing is unclear. The collective result can hardly be matched with any particular song, however, so I file it separately. - RBW
Last updated in version 2.8
File: LEBC080

Susy Gal
DESCRIPTION: "Susy licked the ladle An' 'er dolly rocked the cradle. Goodbye, Susie gal, I'm gone again. I fell into the gutter And my heart began to flutter. Goodbye, Susie gal, I'm gone."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: nonballad travel
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 320, "Susy Gal" (1 short text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 320, "Susy Gal" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
NOTES [18 words]: The editors of Brown speculate that this might be a playparty. Certainly it looks like a singing game. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.1
File: Br3320

Suvla Bay
DESCRIPTION: "In an old Australian homestead With roses 'round the door, A girl received a letter 'Twas a message from the war... He played his part that April day, And now he lies in Suvla Bay." The grieving girl turns away suitors and joins the Red Cross
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987
KEYWORDS: Australia battle death mourning
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1915 - The Dardanelles campaign. British forces attack Gallipoli; the Australians and New Zealanders form the spearhead of the second phase of the attack, at Suvla Bay. All the attacks are bloody failures
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 206-207, "Suvla Bay" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5350
NOTES [134 words]: It has been said that the Australian participation in the Dardanelles campaign is what made Australia a nation. Certainly it etched itself deeply in the Australian consciousness. It would be amazing if there were no traditional songs about it. This song (like the later "And the Band Played Waltzing Matilda") seems not to be of actual folk origin, but it seems to have become part of Australian tradition.
The tragedy of Suvla Bay was not so much its failure (World War I was, after all, a war consisting of very little except failure) as its "needless" failure. When the troops went ashore in 1915, they encountered no resistance -- but their commander sat there and did nothing until the Turks could build a defensive position. From then on, it was a case of the ANZACs being slaughtered for nothing. - RBW
File: MCB206

Swaffham Prior Plough Monday Song
DESCRIPTION: "A sifting of chaff, a bottle of hay, See the poor colts go carrying away. Squeak, boys, squeak, and wag your tais, Hi nnney, hi mommey."
AUTHOR: unknown
Swaggering Farmers (Times Are Altered)

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you swaggering farmers of courage stout and bold." After twenty years of success, it is time to consider their poor servants, whose "wages are so small." In 1816, rents were doubled, and extreme suffering resulted.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1830 (Bodleian broadsides Harding B 17(314a), Johnson Ballads 64)

KEYWORDS: hardtimes money farming servant

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmér-ThePainfulPlow, #2, "The Farmers Done Over" (1 text, 1 tune, adapted by Palmér)
Roud #21259

BROADSIDES:

File: PPai002

Swaggers

DESCRIPTION: The listeners are warned against hiring with Swaggers at Porter Fair. The singer lists all the various indignities suffered by those who work there.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: farming work humorous

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #138, p. 1, "Swaggers"; #4, p. 2, "Swaggers";
"Folk-Song in Buchan," pp. 47-48, "Swaggers" (2 texts plus 1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan3 386, "Swaggers" (9 texts, 3 tunes)
Buchan-ABookOfScottishBallads 68, "Swaggers" (1 text, 1 tune in appendix)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 219-221, "Swaggers" (1 text)
Roud #4589

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Parks o' Keltie" (tune, per Greig)
cf. "Nethermill" (subject)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Swaggers in Porter Fair

NOTES [73 words]: Greig #124, p. 3: ",.. there is a good deal of material common to these ploughman ditties" ['"Sleepytoon" and "Swaggers"].
Greig/Duncan3 has a map on p. xxxv, of "places mentioned in songs in volume 3" showing the song number as well as place name; Auchterless (386) is at coordinate (h4-5,v6) on that map [roughly 28 miles NW of Aberdeen]; Turriff (347,386,682) is at coordinate (h5,v7) on that map [roughly 31 miles NNNW of Aberdeen] - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: DBuch68

Swagman, The
DESCRIPTION: "Kind friends, pray give attention To this my little song, Some rum things I will mention And I'll not detain you long." The swagman bought a pair of shears, but couldn't shear. Now he travels the country seeking short-term work. He says he is not a tramp
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Beatty)
KEYWORDS: work travel hardtimes sheep
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Anderson-StoryOfAustralianFolksong, pp. 157-158,"The Swagman" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Bill Beatty, _A Treasury of Australian Folk Tales & Traditions_, 1960 (I use the 1969 Walkabout Paperbacks edition), pp. 285-286, "The Swagman" (1 text)
Roud #9109
File: BBTAF285

Swallow (I), The
DESCRIPTION: The clipper Swallow goes down New Brunswick's coast fighting a storm to Tormentine and waits out the storm "lying in the government dock.... for Georgetown we are bound... our voyage is not o'er If the Swallow returns I'll sing you some more"
AUTHOR: Willard van Ember, Northport N.S.
EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs)
KEYWORDS: commerce sea ship shore storm sailor
FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-MaritimeFolkSongs, pp. 186-187, "The Swallow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2714
NOTES [21 words]: The places named in New Brunswick are Newcastle, Escuminac, Buctouche, and Tormentine. Georgetown is on Prince Edward Island. - BS
File: CrMa186

Swallow (II), The
DESCRIPTION: "The zwallow (sic.) twitters on the barn, The rook is cawin' on the tree, And in the wood the ring dove coos But my valse love hath vled vrom me." The wren and all creatures have their loves, but the singer sits beneath a withy and mourns his false love
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1853 (Akerman, according to Cologne/Morrison-WiltshireFolkSongs)
KEYWORDS: love betrayal bird wren nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(West))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cologne/Morrison-WiltshireFolkSongs, p. 3, "The Swallow" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #23618
File: CoMo003

Swalwell Hopping
DESCRIPTION: "Lads! myek a ring An' hear huz sing The sport we had at Swalwell, O." The singer tells of a wild day at the market. He lists the various people they saw along the way. After a day of revelry, "We staggered ahint se merry, O."
AUTHOR: Words: John Selkirk
Swannanoa Tunnel

DESCRIPTION: "Asheville Junction, Swannanoa Tunnel, all caved in, baby, all caved in." About the life of a steel driver: "This old hammer Killed John Henry, Couldn't kill me." The singer hopes for relief from the hard work and a chance to see his woman.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (Cecil Sharp collection); +1913 (JAFL26)

KEYWORDS: railroading work separation death

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE,SW)

REFERENCES (12 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 280, "John Henry" (2 texts plus 5 fragments, 1 excerpt, and mention of 1 more, but the "H" text and "I" excerpt are this piece and most of the rest, except the "A" text, are "Take This Hammer")
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 270, "John Henry" (7 excerpts, 7 tunes, of which "A," "A(1)," and perhaps "C" appear to be "John Henry"; "E," "G," and "J" appear to be "Take This Hammer," and "H" appears to be "Swannanoa Tunnel")
Lunsford/Stringfield-30And1FolkSongsFromSouthernMountains, pp. 34-35, "Swannanoa Tunnel" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jones-MinstrelOfTheAppalachians-Bascom-Lamar-Lunsford, pp. 235-236, "Swannanoa Tunnel" (1 text, 1 tune)
Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates 256, p. 166, "The Yew-Pine Mountains" (1 text, which omits the "Swannanoa Tunnel" lyrics but is otherwise so similar I have to believe it the same. It may well be a fake; it was supplied by Carey Woofter, suspected or faking materials he gave to Combs and Cox)
Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart1 33, "Swannanoa Tunnel" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 91, "Swannanoa Town" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Warner-FolkSongsAndBalladsOfTheEasternSeaboard, pp. 52-53, "Asheville Junction, Swannanoa Tunnel" (1 text)
Botkin-TreasuryOfSouthernFolklore, p. 749, "Swannanoa Tunnel" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 45, "Swannanoa Tunnel" (1 text)
SouthCarolinaFolkloreJournal, John Forbes (transcriber), "Songs Collected by Mr. Bascom," Vol. XXV, No. 1 (May 1977 -- special issue for Bascom Lamar Lunsford), pp. 20-21, "Swannanoa Tunnel" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, SWANNOA*

RECORDINGS:
Bascom Lamar Lunsford, "Swannanoa Tunnel" (Folkways FP 40, c. 1952) (on BLLunsford01) (on BLLunsford02)
Dellie Norton, "Oh Lord Ellie" (on OldTrad1, FarMtns4)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Drivin' Steel" (theme, lyrics)
cf. "Take This Hammer" (floating lyrics)
cf. "If You Meet a Woman in the Morning" (form, lyrics)
NOTES [83 words]: The connection between this song and "Take This Hammer" (Nine Pound Hammer) is very strong; there are so many intermediate versions that we can hardly draw a clear distinction. But the extreme versions are sufficiently different that I have listed them separately. - RBW
Sharp's versions mention neither the tunnel nor a cave-in, but I put them here for simplicity's sake, using the mention of Swannanoa as the dividing line from "Take This Hammer." You should check out that entry too, though. - PJS
Last updated in version 6.1
File: CW166

Swansea Town (The Holy Ground)

DESCRIPTION: The singer is leaving (home and/or sweetheart). He describes the various troubles the ship faces on her voyage (around the Horn), including bad weather. (He writes to his girl when the ship stops in port.) At last he arrives home with great rejoicing
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951
KEYWORDS: sailor ship storm parting reunion
FOUND IN: US(MA) Ireland
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman, pp. 152-154, "Swansea Town" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 431-436, "Old Swansea Town Once More," "In Cameltoon Once More," "The Holy Ground Once More" (4 texts, 4 tunes) [AbEd, pp. 323-328]
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 97, "The Holy Ground" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 125, "The Holy Ground" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 20, "Old Dundee Town Once More" (1 text, 1 tune) DT, HOLYGRND*
Roud #929
NOTES [128 words]: Normally known in Ireland as "The Holy Ground" (there is even a spot in Cork called "The Holy Ground") and "Swansea Town" in the wider world. Doerflinger-SongsOfTheSailorAndLumberman's text opens with a stanza not found in the Irish versions but with connections to several Appalachian songs:
Now the Lord made the bee and the bee did make honey,
Oh, the Devil sends the girls for to spend the sailors' money."
Robert Gogan, 130 Great Irish Ballads (third edition, Music Ireland, 2004), p. 152 notes that the title "The Holy Ground" normally refers to the east side of Cobh near Cork -- but admits a rumour that it once referred to a brothel in the town. He can find no confirmation of this. I would presume, in any case, that that would be "The Holey Ground." - RBW

Swapping Boy, The

DESCRIPTION: The Swapping Boy (sets out for London to get a wife. He swaps wife, or the wheelbarrow he took her home in, for a) horse, which he swaps for a cow, and so forth, for a cheaper animal each time, until he ends with a mole which "went straight to its hole"

AUTHOR: unknown

KEYWORDS: animal humorous commerce

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,NE,SE,So) Britain(England(North),Scotland(Aber)) Ireland Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (33 citations):
- Sturgis/Hughes-SongsFromTheHillsOfVermont, pp. 15-17, "Posey Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio 93, "The Swapping Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Randolph 256, "Went to the River" (1 text, 1 tune, a much degraded form with a different chorus and some floating verses)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 196, "Swapping Songs" (4 text plus 2 excerpts, but "E" and "F" are "Hush Little Baby"; the "C" excerpt is unidentifiable from the description)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 196, "Swapping Songs" (2 excerpts, 2 tunes; the "A" version is "The Swapping Boy", the "E" version is "Hush Little Baby")
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 131, "When I Was a Little Boy" (1 text plus mention of 2 more, with only the first verses about fetching the wife from London)
- Cox/Hercog/Halpert/Boswell-WVirginia-B, #19A-B, pp. 166-169, "The Foolish Boy," "Johnny Bobeen" (2 texts, 1 tune)
- Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol5, pp. 25-26, "Come a Long Way Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Wyman/Brockway-LonesomeSongs-KentuckyMountains-Vol2, p. 10, "The Swapping Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Richardson/Spaeth-AmericanMountainSongs, pp. 41-42, "The Foolish Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Cambiaire-EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads, pp. 78-79, "The Swapping Song" (1 text)
- Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 217, "The Foolish Boy" (3 texts, 3 tunes)
- Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 72, "The Swapping Song (The Foolish Boy)" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 124, "The Foolish Boy, or The Swapping Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Ritchie-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernAppalachians, p. 1, "The Swapping Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Burton/Manning-EastTennesseeStateCollectionVol2, p. 83, "Little Boy" (1 short text)
- Roberts-SangBranchSettlers, #9, "Swappin' Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 243, "Down by the Brook" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Chase-AmericanFolkTalesAndSongs, pp. 174-175, "The Swapping Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Gilbert-LostChords, pp. 44-45, "Wing Wang Waddle" (1 text)
- Abrahams/Foss-AngloAmericanFolkSongStyle, pp. 70-71, "Foolish Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H732, p. 57, "My Grandfather Died" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle 43, "The Foolish Boy" (1 text)
- Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 48, "The Bugle Played for Me" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSOR Wt 374)
- Roud/Bishop-NewPenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs #107, "The Foolish Boy" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 312, "Wim-Wam-Waddles" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #43, p. 2, ("My fader deed an' left me") (1 text)
- Greig/Duncan8 1696, "I Sell'it the Horse an' I Bocht a Coo" (2 texts)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 71, "When I was a little boy I lived by myself" (2 texts); 156, "My father he died, but I can't tell you how" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #7, pp. 29-30, "(When I was a little boy)"; #115, p. 96, "(My father he died, but I can't tell you how)"
Montgomerie/Montgomerie-ScottishNurseryRhymes 23, "(His father died)" (1 short text); 163, "O, when I was a wee thing" (1 short text, with only the verses about "When I was a wee thing" and the fetching home of a wife in a wheelbarrow)

ADDITIONAL: Roger deV. Renwick, _Recentering Anglo/American Folksong: Sea Crabs and Wicked Youths_, University Press of Mississippi, 2001, p. 70, "The Foolish Boy" (1 text)

ST EO93 (Full)

Roud #469

RECORDINGS:
Anne, Judy & Zeke Canova, "The Poor Little Thing Cried Mammy" (Banner 32127/Oriole 8044/Perfect 12685/Regal 10299/Romeo 3044, 1931; rec. 1930) (Champion 16188, 1931; rec. 1930 [as Clemens Family])Columbia 15653-D, 1931; rec. 1930 [as Three Georgia Crackers, "Pore Little Thing Cried Mqmmy"]) (one of these is reissued on CrowTold01, but I don't know which)
Harry Greening & chorus of Dorsetshire Mummers, "The Foolish Boy" (on FSB10)
Bradley Kincaid, "The Swapping Song" (Champion 15466 [as Dan Hughey]/Silvertone 5188/Supertone 9209, 1928)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Little Brown Dog"
cf. "Mary Mack (I)" (plot)
cf. "Old John Wallis" (lyrics)
cf. "Pirn-Taed Jockie" (theme: bad bargains)
cf. "My Father Died a Month Ago" (theme)

NOTES [685 words]: Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio writes of this song, "Most texts are like the above in blending two separate songs, 'When I Was a Little Boy' and 'Swapping Song.' The first story, based, in all likelihood, upon Wat Tyler's Rebellion of 1381 in England, continues through four stanzas."
That two songs are combined here is very likely; Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland's version and others (including versions back to Gammer Gurton's Garland) omit the trip to London to fetch a wife, while we find a youth setting out for London to find a wife as a separate item in _Tommy Thumb's Pretty Song Book_, Volume II, of c. 1744. But whether this should be tied to the Kentish rebellion of 1381 can be questioned. The Opies, while quoting the first half, make no mention of Wat Tyler, and say it uses the tune of "John Anderson my Jo," which could hardly go back to an English event of 1381. - RBW

Perhaps "The Swapping Boy" should be split between the Opie/OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 71/Eddy-BalladsAndSongsFromOhio/Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 131 ("When I was a little boy I lived by myself") songs and the Opie/OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 156/Henry H732("My father he died, but I can't tell you how") songs. The description for "My Father Died" might be: Singer inherits his grandfather's horses. He sells the horses to buy a cow and sells and buys the cow, a calf, a pig, a dog, and a cat that runs off after a rat. "My grandfather left me all he did own, And I don't know how it is, but I'm here by my lone." The end of Opie/OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 156 is more disastrous: "I sold my cat and bought me a mouse, But she fired her tail and burnt down my house." - BS

In the light of the above, I suppose I should separate these two songs -- but the result would be an even worse mess than lumping them, because the combination clearly exists as a song in its own right. Since it is possible that it's one song that split, and not two that coalesced, I'm keeping them together until we can find some clearer evidence of the history. With full acknowledgment that there are two highly independent parts.

We should also note that there is a fairly precise parallel to the swapping story in German. The Grimm tale of "Lucky Hans" [#83, "Hans im Gluck," from 1818] tells of a young man who, after completing an apprenticeship, is given a nugget of gold by his master. It is heavy enough that he trades it for a horse. He sells the horses to buy a cow and sells and buys the cow, a calf, a pig, a dog, and a cat that runs off after a rat. "My grandfather left me all he did own, And I don't know how it is, but I'm here by my lone." The end of Opie/OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 156 is more disastrous: "I sold my cat and bought me a mouse, But she fired her tail and burnt down my house." - BS

The tale is usually translated under a title such as "What the Old Man Does Is Always Right." The gimmick is the same -- the old man goes out to sell his horse, and makes a series of trades. But, except that in the first trade, the man exchanges his horse for a cow, there is little other similarity; he ends up with a collection of withered apples. And the emphasis of the tale is not on the trading but on the psychology of the man and his wife.

In English, we find a swapping tale called "Mr. Vinegar," found on pp. 28-32 of Joseph Jacobs, collector, English Fairy Tales, originally published 1890; revised edition 1898 (I use the 1967 Dover paperback reprint) and derived from Halliwell. In this case, Mr. Vinegar recovers some money from robbers whom he frightens, but then trades it all away.

There is also at least one other English swapping rhyme, found in Peter and Iona Opie, I Saw Esau: Traditional Rhymes of Youth, #58, beginning, "I went downtown To meet Mrs. Brown, She gave me a nickel to buy a pickle. The pickle was sour; I bought me a flower." And so forth. - RBW

Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames has the original inheritance coming from grandmother; Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO has it from grandfather. - BS

Last updated in version 6.0

File: E093

Swearing-In Song, The

DESCRIPTION: "Do you wish to be sworn at Highgate?" "I do, Father." "Amen." "Silence, O, yes! You are my son! Full to your old father turn, sir. This is your oath." The swearer vows to be honest and chaste, and to follow drinking rituals. He kisses the horn as token

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1877 (Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland)

KEYWORDS: drink promise humorous

FOUND IN: Britain(England)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Bell-Combined-EarlyBallads-CustomsBalladsSongsPeasantryEngland, pp. 408-411, "The Swearing-In Song or Rhyme" (1 text)

Roud #4586

File: BeCo408

Sweater, The

DESCRIPTION: "Who robs the widow of her right By work that takes her day and night To earn his poor starvation might? The Sweater/" It leads girls astray. It cheats and lies. It has great wealth. "He is society's disgrace, And must be told so to his face"

AUTHOR: "N. A. A.," according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ

EARLIEST DATE: 1889 (Lyttelton Times, according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)

KEYWORDS: work hardtimes labor-movement

FOUND IN: Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, p. 76, "The Sweater" (1 text)

Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 76, "The Sweater" (1 text, 1 tune) (p. 59 in the 1972 edition)

Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, p. 161, "The Sweater" (1 text)

RECORDINGS:

Barbie Colquhoun, "The Sweater" (on NZSongYngCntry)

NOTES [22 words]: "The Sweater" in this song refers not to the woven garment but to the owner of a sweatshop -- one who runs a "sweating system." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.4

File: BaRo076

Swede from North Dakota, The

DESCRIPTION: Having spent a year working, the Svede decides to visit Minnesota's State Fair. He meets a Salvation Army group (refusing to work for Jesus when he learns "Yesus don't pay nothing"), winds up drunk, and returns home

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (book by "Yumpin' Yiminy")
Sweep the Floor

DESCRIPTION: "Sweep the floor, pick up the chair, Sweep under, place it there."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)

KEYWORDS: playparty

FOUND IN: New Zealand

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 180, "(Sweep the floor)" (1 text)

File: SuSm180
Sweep Your Own Door Clean

DESCRIPTION: "I hate to hear folk talk about other folks affairs ... The man that keeps his own door clean has got enough to do." "Don't judge a man by what he wears ... Although he [sic] brought to poverty he's not been brought to shame"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: virtue nonballad clothes hardtimes
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 665, "Sweep Your Own Door Clean" (1 text)
Roud #6090
File: GrD3665

Sweep, Chimney Sweep

DESCRIPTION: Singer tells what cleanly work he makes as a chimney sweep. He tells the girls to arise and fetch him ale, then boasts about how he can climb to a rooftop without ladder or rope, and there you can hear him halloa. He says he will work for none but gentry.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1815 (first verse found in "Cries of London")
LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer tells what cleanly work he makes as a chimney sweep. Girls come to his door; although he's black as a Moor, he's capable. He tells the girls to arise and fetch him some ale, then boasts about how he can climb to a rooftop without ladder or rope, and there you can hear him halloa. He says he will work for none but gentry. "Sweep, chim-nie sweep is the common cry I keep/If you can but rightly understand me"

KEYWORDS: pride courting bragging work nonballad worksong worker
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 240, "Sweep, Chim-nie Sweep" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1217
RECORDINGS:
Bob & Ron Copper, "Sweep, Chimney Sweep" (on FSB3)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
The Chimney Sweep
File: K240

Sweepers

DESCRIPTION: "We're dodging mines, dodging mines, Always bleeding well dodging mines... My God they're everywhere." The singer would like to place a mine within Hitler's anatomy for deploying so many mines

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1985 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: ship sailor technology nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 95, "Sweepers" (1 text)
File: Tawn095

Sweet Adelina

DESCRIPTION: "In the evening when I sit alone a-dreaming, Of days gone by, love, to me so dear, There's a picture that in fancy's of' appearing." "Sweet Adeline, My Adeline, At night, dear heart, For you I pine.... You're the flower of my heart." He hopes to reunite

AUTHOR: Words: Richard Husch Gerard / Music: Harry Armstrong
EARLIEST DATE: 1903 (sheet music; Armstrong supposedly wrote the tune in 1896)
KEYWORDS: love separation nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 149, "A Medley" (1 text, 1 tune, starting with the chorus of "Sweet Adeline," then "The Old Oaken Bucket," "In the Evening by the Moonlight," "Rufus Rastus Johnson Brown," and "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground")
DT, SWTADLN

ALTERNATE TITLES:
You're the Flower of My Heart, Sweet Adeline

NOTES [208 words]: The lyrics of this were allegedly written in praise of "a girl who worked at the music counter of a New York department store." Possible, of course, but also a good promotional gimmick. The name was originally "Rosalie," so the inspiration was not verbal. Both Spaeth, A History of Popular Music in America, p. 335, and Douglas Gilbert, Lost Chords, p. 327, report that, with the song going nowhere, the authors saw a poster advertising a farewell tour by opera singer Adelina Patti, and "Adelina," Englishified as "Adeline," went into the song and a hit was born. According to Spaeth, p. 334, it is "the queen of the echo school of harmonizing." Spaeth gives extensive discussion of how the song came to be popular on pp. 334-336, and adds that the "melodic appeal [of the song] may be traced to the well-tried pattern of the Westminster Chime." Richard Moody, Ned Harrigan: From Corlear's Hook to Herald Square, Nelson Hall, 1980, p. 237, has a different take on the composition; supposedly David Braham (for whom see "Babies on Our Block") "had set the tune for Gregory Hyde's "You're the Idol of My Heart," thirty years before the song became more familiarly known as 'Sweet Adeline.'" Obviously this does not match the common account. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2
File: RcSweAde

Sweet Alice

DESCRIPTION: Australian parody of "Ben Bolt" in which Sweet Alice becomes an Aborigine woman: "Oh, don't you remember sweet Alice, Dan Holt, the lubra so dusky and dark." The singer recalls the hard times of an Australian migrant worker

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (Beatty)
KEYWORDS: work derivative mining gambling bug
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Bill Beatty, _A Treasury of Australian Folk Tales & Traditions_, 1960 (I use the 1969 Walkabout Paperbacks edition), pp. 309-310, "Sweet Alice" (1 text)
File: Beat309

Sweet America

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you jovial sailors That love your native home, Among strong winds and rushing seas... Our ship is full and homeward bound To sweet America." They have sailed the coasts of Chile and Peru; they look forward to seeing the girls at home

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1856 (Journal from the _Catalpa_)
KEYWORDS: whaler sailor
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, pp. 28-29, "Sweet America" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27533
File: HGam028

Sweet as the Flowers in May Time

DESCRIPTION: "Sweet as the flowers in May/springtime, Sweet as the honey dew, Sweet as the roses in the bowers, I'm thinking tonight of you. Sweet as the rose in the garden, Sweet as the dew on the rose, I'd rather be somebody's darling Than a poor boy nobody knows."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (recording, Carter Family)
Sweet Avondu

DESCRIPTION: The singer "never more shall view Those scenes I loved by Avondu." He recalls the scenes from the mountains to the sea. He bids farewell to Clara: "No more we meet by Avondu"

AUTHOR: James Joseph Callanan (1795-1829) (source: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)

EARLIEST DATE: 1830 (_The Recluse of Inchidony_, according to Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland)

KEYWORDS: home separation Ireland nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland, pp. 127-133, "Sweet Avondu" (1 text)

NOTES [142 words]: Croker-PopularSongsOfIreland: "'Avondu,' says the author, means 'the Blackwater (Avunduff of Spenser).... It rises in a boggy mountain called Meenganine in [County Kerry] and discharges itself into the sea at Youghall." - BS

There is a certain amount of confusion about this author. Most sources list his name as James Joseph Callanan, but he is also sometimes listed under the name "Jeremiah" (and, yes, it is known that it is the same guy). Most sources agree that he was born in 1795, but his death date seemingly varies; Hoagland and MacDonagh/Robinson give 1829. He wrote some poetry of his own, but is probably best known for his translations from Gaelic. Works of his found in this index include "The Convict of Clonmel," "The Outlaw of Loch Lene," "Sweet Avondu," "The Virgin Mary's Bank," "Gougane Barra," and a translation of "Drimindown." - RBW

File: CrPS127

Sweet Betsy from Pike [Laws B9]

DESCRIPTION: "Sweet" Betsy and "her lover" Ike set out from Pike County, Missouri for California. On the way they lose much of their livestock and property, but also have some amazing adventures. (They marry, then divorce.)

AUTHOR: claimed by John A Stone (Old Put)

EARLIEST DATE: 1858 (Put's Golden Songster, second edition)

KEYWORDS: travel hardtimes settler

FOUND IN: US(Ap,MW,Ro,So,SW)

REFERENCES (30 citations):
Laws B9, "Sweet Betsy from Pike"
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 343-345, "Sweet Betsy from Pike" (1 text)
Randolph 192, "Sweet Betsy from Pike" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 (atypical) tune)
Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 193-196, "Sweet Betsy from Pike" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 192A)
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 300-301, "Sweet Betsy from Pike" (4 fragments, 1 tune)
Moore/Moore-BalladsAndFolkSongsOfTheSouthwest 153, "Sweet Betsy From Pike" (1 text, 1 tune)
Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 41, pp. 215-218, "Sweet Betsy from Pike" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #159, "Sweet Betsy from Pike" (1 text, 1 tune)
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 83, p. 106, "Sweet Betsy from Pike" (1 short text)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 750-751, "Betsy from Pike" (1 text)
Sweet Birds

DESCRIPTION: "The birds are returning their sweet notes of spring... As I sit in the dream... For my darling far over the sea... Oh, say, does he truly love me?" "Sweet birds (x2), Oh, say that my lover is true." She recalls the day he left and promised to be true

EARLIEST DATE: 1876 (original publication)

KEYWORDS: bird love separation questions

FOUND IN: US(SE,So)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 295, "Sweet Birds" (3 texts plus an excerpt and mention of 3 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 295, "Sweet Birds" (2 tunes plus text excerpts) Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 13, "Sweet Birds" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Sweet Blooming Lavender

DESCRIPTION: Street cry: "Won't you buy my sweet blooming lavender? There are sixteen blue branches a penny, all in full bloom." The singer tells how the plant is fresh, and how it will benefit the wearer.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: c.1880 (Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs)

KEYWORDS: nonballad commerce

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond,South))

REFERENCES (3 citations):
- Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, p. 105, "(Will you buy my sweet lavender?)"
- Broadwood/Maitland-EnglishCountySongs, p. 105, "(Sixteen bunches a penny)" (2 texts, 4 tunes)
- Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 356, "Sweet Blooming Lavender" (1 text, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: Walter de la Mare, _Come Hither_, revised edition, 1928; notes to #153, ("Or the Streete cries all about") (1 fragment of this, plus an assortment of other street cries)

Roud #854

RECORDINGS:
- Bill Ellson, "Will You Buy My Sweet Blooming Lavender?" (on Voice11)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Lavender Girl" (theme)

NOTES [137 words]: Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland notes that his informant, Florrie Penfold, knew several street cries but preferred this because it is "more of a song." Which indeed it is, and so is included.

Kennedy lists a number of collected versions of this piece. I doubt that all are actually the same song, but they are doubtless all lavender street calls.

In addition to its color and scent, lavender is reputed to be a sleep aid and perhaps an antidepressant; according to Ruth Binney, Nature's Way: lore, legend, fact and fiction, David and Charles, 2006, p. 117, "Lavender (Lavendula) is another soothing herb, described as 'a comfort to the brain' by the 16th-century herbalist William Turner."

Lavender supposedly acquired its scent because the Virgin Mary hung the baby Jesus's clothing on it to dry (Binney, p. 123). - RBW

Last updated in version 2.7

File: K356

Sweet Bunch of Daisies

DESCRIPTION: "Sweet bunch of daisies, Oh, how dear to me. Often I hear them Whisp'ring love of thee. Murmuring softly In a silent theme Of love's bright morning. Now one sad, sweet dream, Sweet bunch of daisies, Brought from the dell, Kiss me one... daises won't tell"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)

KEYWORDS: love courting flowers

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 726, "Sweet Bunch of Daisies" (1 short text, 1 tune)

NOTES [17 words]: The current description is based on the Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 fragment. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1

File: BrS5726
Sweet By and By

DESCRIPTION: "There's a land that is fairer than day, And by faith we can see it afar.... In the sweet by and by We shall meet on that beautiful shore." The singer describes the blessings and beauties that the faithful will enjoy in heaven.

AUTHOR: Words: Sanford Fillmore Bennett (1836-1898) / Music: Joseph. Philbrick Webster (1819-1875)

EARLIEST DATE: 1868

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Jackson-PopularSongsOfNineteenthCenturyAmerica, pp. 198-201, "Sweet By and By" (1 text, 1 tune)
Heart-Songs, p. 485, "Sweet By-and-By" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 355, "In The Sweet Bye And Bye" (1 text)
DT, SWTBYBY*

ADDITIONAL: Charles Johnson, One Hundred and One Famous Hymns (Hallberg, 1982), pp. 206-207, "Sweet By and By" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST RJ19198 (Full)

Roud #7651

RECORDINGS:
Elizabeth Cotten, "In the Sweet Bye and Bye" (on CloseHomeMS)
Harkins & Moran [pseudos. for Sid Harkreader w. Grady Moore], "In the Sweet Bye and Bye" (Broadway 8117, c. 1930)
Haydn Quartet, "In the Sweet Bye and Bye" (Victor 1316, 1902)
Bela Lam & his Greene County Singers, "Sweet Bye and Bye" (OKeh 45177, 1928; rec. 1927)
Uncle Dave Macon, "In the Sweet Bye and Bye" (Vocalion 5162, 1927)
Margarethe Matzenauer, "In he Sweet Bye and Bye" (Pathe Actuelle 027519, n.d.)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Preacher and the Slave" (tune)
cf. "The Cowboy's Dream" (tune)

SAME TUNE:
The Preacher and the Slave (File: San221)
The Only True Life ("You may tell of your grand city life; Of the joys that around it doth cling") (by A. P. Knapp) (Albert P. Knapp, _Grange Songster_, 1915, pp. 14-15)

In the Reign of Justice ("There's a glorious future in store When the toil-worn shall rise from the dust") (Foner, p. 166)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
In the Sweet By and By

NOTES [212 words]: Jackson writes, "It may be that the venerable old Gospel number 'Sweet By and By' is the only famous song written in a drugstore; it is CERTAINLY the only famous song written in a drugstore in Elkhorn, Wisconsin."

Johnson quotes from Bennet's papers, describing how it happened: one day in 1867, J. P. Webster (who also wrote the music for "Lorena") strolled into the Elkhorn drugstore in a grim mood. Asked what was wrong, he declared that it wasn't important; "It will be all right by and by." Sanford Fillmore Bennett, who owned the drugstore, heard the line scribbled these verses -- with the intent to write as song, according to what he said; Jackson claims it was to comfort Webster. Personally, I probably would have gotten even more grim after reading such saccharine lyrics, but Webster at once cheered up and started to set them to music, and the music at least did well. Since we're talking about useless Wisconsin lore, we might add that this is said to have been the favorite hymn of Charles Ingalls, the "Pa" of Laura Ingalls Wilder (it was written the year Laura was born, note, though Elkhorn is in the eastern part of the state, far from the Pepin country), and was reportedly played at his funeral in 1902 (see Donald Zochert, _Laura_, pp. 140-141). - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: RJ19198

Sweet Canaan

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "The land I am bound for, Sweet Canaan's happy land I am bound for (x2), Sweet Canaan's happy land, Pray give me your right hand." Verses: "O my brother (sister) did you come to help me (x3), Pray, give me your right hand"
Sweet Cider

DESCRIPTION: "Where's the mule and where's the rider? Where's the gal that drinks sweet cider? Sallie, won't you have some (x2), Sally, won't you have some of my hard cider?"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: drink nonballad

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 45, "Sweet Cider" (1 text)

Roud #7864

RECORDINGS:

Riley Puckett & Clayton McMichen, "Paddy Won't You Drink Some Cider" (Columbia 15358-D, 1929)

ALTERNATE TITLES:

Pretty Little Black-Eyed Susan

File: Br3045

---

Sweet Clonalee

DESCRIPTION: The singer explains why he is leaving Clonalee for America. He loved a girl, but she turned instead to a wealthy old farmer. The farmer accused the singer of sheep-stealing. He leaves his parents behind and curses James Magee (presumably the farmer)

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: love courting rejection age money emigration accusation theft sheep
Sweet Copshawholm

DESCRIPTION: Singer wanders out to admire Copshawholm, where he grew up. "But there is not work for all And youth must wander from Their place of birth... I maun haste away." He will dream "of times to come When I shall end my days in... sweet Copshawholm."

AUTHOR: James Telfer (source: McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen)

EARLIEST DATE: 1989 (McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen)

KEYWORDS: emigration farewell home parting unemployment work Scotland nonballad

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Bord))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen, pp. 30-31, 149, "Sweet Copshawholm" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #6931

NOTES [18 words]: McMorland/Scott-HerdLaddieOTheGlen: Copshawholm is the old name for Newcastle, a border region village. - BS

Last updated in version 3.2

File: McSc030

Sweet Country Life, A

DESCRIPTION: The singer prefers "a sweet country life" to the "lofty high towers" of towns and cities. He prefers homespun to robes and fine dresses, bird songs to fiddles, flutes and spinnets. "Country lasses ... never do forsake your own country employment"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1778 (Boardman)

KEYWORDS: home clothes farming music nonballad bird

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South),Scotland(Bord))

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume1 62, "Lord Eglinton's Song" (1 text)
Reeves/Sharp-TheddiomOfThePeople, p. 235, "A Sweet Country Life" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Timothy Boardman, Log-Book of Timothy Boardman Kept on Board the Privateer Oliver Cromwell in 1778" (Albany, 1885 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 85, "A Country Song" (1 text)

Roud #2406

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Country Life" (theme)
cf. "The Country Life" (II) (theme)

NOTES [24 words]: Wakefield's text and tune are from Miss L.E. Broadwood; she took them down from her uncle, Mr. John Broadwood, probably around 1840 [p. 383]. - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: LyCr162

Sweet County Wexford

DESCRIPTION: "On Moniseed of a summer's morning" the Shelmaliers fight British and Gorey cavalry. After driving the British back the Irish rest. "Had we the wisdom to follow after ... We'd have saved the lives of many a martyr That died in Arklow"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads)

KEYWORDS: rebellion battle death Ireland patriotic

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
May 26, 1798 - Father John Murphy launches the Wexford rebellion; he defeats the Camolin cavalry that night, and the next day annihilates a small militia force at Oulart
May 29, 1798 - Father Murphy leads the insurgents against Enniscorthy
June 5, 1798 - The Wexford rebels attack the small garrison (about 1400 men, many militia) at New Ross, but are repelled
June 9, 1798 - Father Murphy, trying to lead his forces into Wicklow, defeated at Arklow
June 21, 1798 - Rebel defeat at Vinegar Hill ends the Wexford rising
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (3 citations):
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 79, "Sweet County Wexford" (1 text, 1 tune)
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 94, "Sweet County Wexford" (1 text, 1 tune) Healy-MercierBookOfOldIrishStreetBalladsVol2, pp. 55-56, "Sweet County Wexford" (1 text; tune on p. 21)
Roud #2997
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Boulavogue" (historical setting)
cf. "Father Murphy (I)" (subject of Father Murphy) and references there
NOTES [508 words]: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815: "According to Denis Devereux, O Lochlainn's source for the words, this song is the original upon which P.J. McCall based his 'Boulavogue'." On the other hand, see the notes to "Father Murphy (I)."
The Irish baronies of Shelmaliier, East and West, are in County Wexford. - BS
This is an unusually self-honest assessment of the course of the Wexford rebellion. Wexford itself was abandoned on May 30, and Gorey even before that, but the rebels didn't occupy the latter until June 4. The delay gave the loyalists time to organize and counterattack. (See Robert Kee, The Most Distressful Country, being Volume I of The Green Flag, p. 115).
Wexford didn't really matter; it was south of the Rebel strong points. Gorey, though, was on the way to Arklow and, eventually, Dublin. Had the rebels headed straight there, it might have given them a chance to really threaten the government. Instead, they went to Wexford, and camped on the Three Rocks hill. They beat off a small force of Meath militia, killing its commander, Colonel Watson (see Thomas Pakenham, The Year of Liberty, p. 177). The garrison abandoned the town (Pakenham, p. 178), and the rebels entered. (We note, incidentally, that it was in Wexford that they captured the prisoners to be brutalized at Scullabogue -- for which see "Father Murphy (II) (The Wexford Men of '98)" and "Kelly, the Boy from Killane.")
The attack on Wexford had another side effect: It caused the rebels to appoint Bagenal Harvey their commander (Kee, pp. 116-117), and he had no clue what to do; his ineptitude would contribute much to the defeat at New Ross (for which see "Kelly, the Boy from Killane" and "James Ervin" [Laws J15]).
Finally, in mid-June, the rebels headed for Arklow, which they should have occupied at least a week earlier. Repulsed (see the notes to "Father Murphy (I)"), the rebellion lost its last hint of planning, and fizzled out.
The characters cited in the song are often hard to identify. I can mention the following:
"Gowan" - "Hunter" Gowan, given his nickname because of his earlier career tracking down outlaws, who organized the "Black Mob" (a group of rebel-hunting vigilantes); he is reputed to have marched about with the finger of a rebel at the end of his sword. And worse. "Fiend" seems a suitable word for him.
"Captain Dixon" - there was a Captain Dixon, but he was a rebel sea captain; I think there is some confusion here.
"General Walpole": Presumably Colonel Walpole, ADC to Viceroy Camden? He was never a general, but he did have a brief taste of independent command, which might explain the title.
In early June, Walpole was sent from Dublin with a few hundred men and three cannon to reinforce General Loftus's troops in Wexford. This despite a complete lack of military training and experience. It showed. On June 4, as part of a plan to surround a rebel force at Ballymore, Walpole's force set out from Gorey. He did not follow the battle plan, was intercepted by the rebels, and he and most of his soldiers were killed. - RBW
File: OLoc079

Sweet Dunloy
DESCRIPTION: The singer and his love leave Ireland for Scotland to escape her father. The father follows and has them forcibly returned to Ireland. Although the girl says she consented, the jury convicts him. After he is freed, they will go to America instead Sweet Fanny Adams

DESCRIPTION: Fanny Adams, her sister, and another girl go to play, but meet a clerk named Frederick Baker. He sends the younger children off with money for sweets, then murders Fanny. The singer grieves for her daughter, but notes that her murderer is now dead as well

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867? (broadside announcing execution of Baker)
LONG DESCRIPTION: The singer’s eight-year-old daughter Fanny Adams and her sister go to play with another girl, but they meet a young clerk named Frederick Baker. He offers the younger children money for sweets; when they have gone, he drags Fanny to the hollow. She is missed, and the searchers find her body, murdered and horribly dismembered. The mother grieves for her daughter, but notes that her murderer is now dead as well

KEYWORDS: grief rape violence abduction crime execution homicide punishment death mourning children mother

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Aug 27, 1867 -- Murder and dismemberment of eight-year-old Fanny Adams by Frederick Baker. Baker was hanged later in the year.

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 333, "Sweet Fanny Adams" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2152

RECORDINGS:
Vashti Vincent, "Sweet Fanny Adams" (on FSB7)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Execution of Frederick Baker" (subject)

NOTES [102 words]: The murder took place at Alton, in Hampshire. Cruel to relate, the expression "Sweet Fanny Adams" became part of British vernacular; in the Royal Navy it was used to refer to any dubious meat dish. [According to Ernle Bradford, The Mighty Hood, 1959 (I use the 1977 Coronet paperback), p. 51, it was also the Royal Navy habit to call any sailor named Adams by the nickname "Fanny." - RBW]

In more recent popular usage, it means "nothing"; if one doesn't get paid for a job, for example, one says one got "Sweet Fanny Adams" or "Sweet F. A." In this context, of course, it is a euphemism for "sweet fuck-all." - PJS

Last updated in version 5.1

File: K333

Sweet Forget-Me-Not

DESCRIPTION: "Fancy brings a thought to me, A flower rich and rare, Of grace and beauty both combined, A fadeless flower rare." The singer recalls courting his beautiful love. In time, he proposes and they happily marry. They dwell in a cot with a forget-me-not

AUTHOR: Bobby Newcomb (1877) (source: MUNFLA/Leach)
EARLIEST DATE: 1916 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)
KEYWORDS: love courting flowers home

FOUND IN: US(SE) Canada(Mar,Newf)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 727, "Sweet Forget-Me-Not" (1 short text, 1 tune)

DT, FGETMNOT*

ADDITIONAL: Norm Cohen, "Henry J. Wehman and Cheap Print in Late Nineteenth-Century
Sweet Genevieve

DESCRIPTION: The singer would "give the world to live again the lovely past" with Genevieve. They are older now, but he still loves her and wishes to be with her always: "O Genevieve, Sweet Genevieve... Still the hands of mem'ry weave... Blissful dreams of long ago"

AUTHOR: Words: George Cooper / Music: Henry Tucker

EARLIEST DATE: 1869

KEYWORDS: love age

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (7 citations):
- Jackson-PopularSongsOfNineteenthCenturyAmerica, pp. 202-205, "Sweet Genevieve" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Geller-FamousSongsAndTheirStories, pp. 11-13, "Sweet Genevieve" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 166-167, "Sweet Genevieve" (1 text)
- Heart-Songs, pp. 24-25, "Seet Genevieve" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 259, "Sweet Genevieve" (1 text)
- Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, p. 543, "Sweet Genevieve"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Silver Threads among the Gold" (theme)
- cf. "When You and I Were Young, Maggie" (theme)

NOTES [94 words]: Genevieve is reported to be the real-life bride of George Cooper who died shortly after their marriage. However, since no one can find the records of this marriage, this may be the usual sort of sentimental folklore. The song was very successful, but doesn't seem to have gained much place in tradition.

George Cooper originally worked with Stephen Foster, and seems to have switched to working with Henry Tucker after Foster's death; in 1865, they produced "Jeff in Petticoats," also in the Index. He also wrote "Beautiful Isle of the Sea" with J. R. Thomas. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: RK19202

Sweet Girls of Derry, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer is captivated by the sweet girls of Derry. He describes them as "so comely and merry" with sweet voices. "Though I left them behind me, Full soon they shall find me in Derry again"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Hayward-UlsterSongsAndBalladsOfTheTownAndCountry)

KEYWORDS: courting nonballad

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Hayward-UlsterSongsAndBalladsOfTheTownAndCountry, pp. 76-77, "The Sweet Girls of Derry" (1 text)

Roud #6537

File: HayU076
Sweet Glenbush

DESCRIPTION: The singer calls on the maidens to listen to his (?) story, asking them to pity a wandering youth. He recalls his departure from Glenbush; now dreams and memories of home say to him, "Come back to sweet Glenbush"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: homesickness
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H573, p. 212, "Sweet Glenbush" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "Scarborough Settler's Lament" (theme) and references there
File: HHH573

Sweet Heaven (I)

DESCRIPTION: "I want to go to Heaven and I want to go right; How I long to be there; I want to go to Heaven all dressed in white. How I long..." "Sweet Heaven (x3). Oh, how I long...." About heaven, the contest between the singer and Satan, and other floating themes

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Barton-OldPlantationHymns)
KEYWORDS: religious devil floating verses
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 638, "Sweet Heaven" (1 text, with many floating verses, e.g. the terrapin and the toad, "I run old Satan round the stump")
Barton-OldPlantationHymns, p. 10, "Sweet Heaven" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11834
CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "The Catfish (Banjo Sam)" (floating lyrics)
File: Br3638

Sweet Heaven (II)

DESCRIPTION: Singer is going to the racetrack; he promises to share any winnings with his sweetheart. Rest floats, e.g. "Give beefsteak when I'm hungry, whiskey when I'm dry...." Chorus: "Let her go (x2) God bless her/Though she roams over land and sea...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Tenneva Ramblers)
KEYWORDS: farewell parting floating verses nonballad lover gambling racing food
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 243, "Liza Anne" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #7697
RECORDINGS:
  Clint Howard et al, "Sweet Heaven When I Die" (on WatsonAshley01)
  Arthur Smith Trio, "Sweet Heaven" (Bluebird B-7146, 1937)
  Tenneva Ramblers, "Sweet Heaven When I Die" (Victor 20861, 1927)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "Country Blues" (floating verses)
  cf. "Dear Companion (The Broken Heart; Go and Leave Me If You Wish To, Fond Affection)" (lyrics)
  cf. "Saint James Infirmary" (the "let her go" lyrics)
NOTES [93 words]: This certainly has strong overlaps with "Dear Companion", paraphrasing its chorus and some of its verses. But its gestalt is different, and it has acquired a life of its own, so I split them. - PJS
I put Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 243, here because its first floating verse is "Beefsteak when I'm hungry...," but it's really a mess of floaters, one of which also shows up in the "Betty Anne" version of "Shady Grove." Although it was collected in 1917, I'm not assigning that as Earliest Date for "Sweet Heaven (II)," but I note it here. - PJS

File: RcSwHeav

Sweet Inishcara

DESCRIPTION: "I have travelled in exile midst cold-hearted strangers" in Canada and India/Indies looking for gold and spices. The singer returns home to find his home in ruins and his sweetheart dead. He will join her. "In heaven she'll welcome her wanderer home"

AUTHOR: John Fitzgerald (source: OCanainn-SongsOfCork)

EARLIEST DATE: before 1958 (recording, Copley 9-228-B)

KEYWORDS: love travel return death gold Canada India Ireland

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCanainn-SongsOfCork, pp. 48-49, "The Exile's Return" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #12923

RECORDINGS:
Paddy Breen, "Sweet Inishcara" (on Voice04)
Ollie Conway, "Sweet Inis Cara (The Exile's Return)" (on IROConway01)
The McNulty Family, "The Exile of Cork" (Copley 9-228-B, n.d.; on IRMcNulty-Night1)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Bonnie Tyneside" (theme)

NOTES [140 words]: When I was puzzling about the text of "The Exile of Cork" John Moulden pointed out that it belongs here. The matrix number for the McNulty Family's "Exile of Cork" is E3-CB-3235-1A.

Spottswood lists Tim Donovan, "The Exile of Cork" (on Decca 12157) with session date Apr 7, 1938 (matrix number 63574-A). If it can be verified that that recording is for this song it would establish a new earliest date (source: Ethnic Music on Records: a Discography of Ethnic Recordings Produced in the United States, 1893 to 1942 by Richard K Spottswood (Urbana, c1990), p. 2751).

The singer's home is "by the beautiful Lee" and finds, when he returns, that "sweet Inishcara o'er-shadows her grave." Below Cork City, the Lee flows past Inniscara and enters the Celtic Sea. OCanainn-SongsOfCork: "This was composed some sixty years ago [c.1918]...." - BS

Last updated in version 4.4

File: RcSweIni

Sweet Jane [Laws B22]

DESCRIPTION: Willie bids his Jane farewell and sets off across the sea. Three years later, having gained success as a gold miner (and suffered much hardship), he returns to his southern home and marries Jane

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Brown)

KEYWORDS: separation marriage gold mining

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Laws B22, "Sweet Jane"
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 259, "Sweet Jane" (1 text plus mention of 1 more)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 259, "Sweet Jane" (1 excerpt, 1 tune)
Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates 51, pp. 177-178, "Sweet Jane" (1 text)
Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, p. 67, "Sweet Jane" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT 726, SWTJANE

Roud #3243

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Come Sweet Jane
Adieu, Sweet Lovely Jane

NOTES [123 words]: This is a relatively rare song, and is not at all specific in its details. Where does the singer go to seek gold? We have no clue. Since he apparently goes overseas, it can hardly be the San Francisco or Klondike gold rushes (yes, a prospector might well go to those places by sea -- but it is not "overseas"). That leaves perhaps South Africa or Australia.
The singer claims also to have "lived on bread and salty (meat/lard), and never lost my health."
Such a diet, if followed for long, would assuredly result in scurvy -- and, if pursued for three years, would certainly result in death. Clearly he got more vegetable matter than he let on.
If there is more to be said about this song, it must be hidden in a version I have not seen. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.7
File: LB22

Sweet Jesus

DESCRIPTION: "Sweet Jesus, sweet Jesus, He's the lily of the valley, He's the bright and morning star, Sweet Jesus, sweet Jesus, He's the fairest of ten thousand to my soul." "How I love him. how I love him" "I'll serve him." "He's worthy."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1997 (Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Jesus
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit, pp. 86-87, "Sweet Jesus" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [68 words]: The phrase "bright and morning star" is from Rev 22:16. The literal Greek text reads "the star the bright the morning." This isn't as clumsy in Greek as in English, perhaps, but I think it is an indication of the Aramaic habits of the writer. The King James Bible tried to preserve the feeling with its "bright and morning star" rendering; most of the newer translations simply say "bright morning star." - RBW

Last updated in version 3.8
File: WarSp086

Sweet Kilydysart

DESCRIPTION: The singer from Lissycasey (County Clare) is accosted by Peggy Malone in Kilydysart who exposes his paternity by showing his baby in public. They go for a drink. He considers her good features. They marry and return to Lissycasey to live a happy life.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin); 19C (broadside, Bodleian 2806 b.11(120))
KEYWORDS: marriage sex accusation pregnancy drink humorous baby lover
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 141, "Sweet Kilydysart" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9671
RECORDINGS:
Elizabeth Cronin, "Sweet Kilydysart" (on IRECronin01)
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 b.11(120), "A favorite new song The Mountain Phoenix" ("In sweet Kildysert, as Phoeuix [sic] was dawning"), unknown, no date
File: OCC141

Sweet Kingwilliamstown

DESCRIPTION: An exile from Kingwilliamstown sails away, thinking about "childhood's days and happy hours ... old home and the friends so dear." "Shall I no more gaze on that shore or view those mountains high?"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (OCanainn-SongsOfCork)
KEYWORDS: exile separation Ireland nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCanainn-SongsOfCork, p. 67, "Sweet Kingwilliamstown" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [21 words]: OCanainn-SongsOfCork: "Kingwilliamstown is the name by which Ballydesmond, near the Cork-Kerry border, was formerly known." - BS

Sweet Kitty (I)

DESCRIPTION: "As (I/Peggy/Kitty/He) was riding one day," the squire and Kitty meet. He offers her twenty guineas to sleep with him. She agrees, then cuddles him until he falls asleep. She steals his money. When he seeks her, he doesn't even recognize her

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Hammond MS.)

KEYWORDS: sex money trick escape nobility

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Purslow-TheConstantLovers, p. 67, "Peggy and the Squire" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #1349

File: PCL067

Sweet Kitty Clover

DESCRIPTION: "Sweet Kitty Clover, she bothered me so, Oh, oh, oh, oh, oh!... Her face was round and red and fat, Like a pulpit cushion or redder than that." "Sweet Kitty in person is rather low... She's three feet tall." "If Kitty to kirk with me would go..."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1837 (The _Vocal Companion_)

KEYWORDS: courting humorous

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (3 citations):

Scott-EnglishSongBook, pp. 60-61, "Sweet Kitty Clover" (1 text, 1 tune)

Linscott-FolkSongsOfOldNewEngland, pp. 286-288, "Sweet Kitty Clover" (1 fragment, 1 tune)

ADDITIONAL: (no author listed), "The Vocal Companion_, second edition, D'Almaine and Co., 1937 (available from Google Books), pp. 154-155, "Sweet Kitty Clover" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST Lins286 (Full)

Roud #3743

NOTES [36 words]: The Vocal Companion credits this to "Kean," but it is not certain whether

"[Edmund] Kean" wrote words and music, or just music, or whether he was the arranger. The book tends to list only composers, not lyricists. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.2

File: Lins286

Sweet Lisbweemore

DESCRIPTION: Singer meets a maid who asks him to "show me the way... to the weaver's house." He agrees and, on the way, tries to seduce her. She resists and runs away when he says "if another man were in my shoes he'd spoil your thread." "She was too smart for me"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)

KEYWORDS: seduction escape bawdy rake

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):

OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 142, "Sweet Lisbweemore" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #5303

RECORDINGS:

Elizabeth Cronin, "Sweet Lisbweemore" (on IRECronin01)

NOTES [13 words]: For another example of thread and yarn as a sexual symbol see "Ball of Yarn"

- BS

Last updated in version 3.2

File: OCC142
Sweet Liscarrol Town

DESCRIPTION: Beware "roving boys of pleasure." Singer is far from Liscarrol Town and describes its "pretty girls... fine horses, fine carriages." "If I were in Liscarrol Town... I'd be happy as a king." "I curse the day I chanced to stray from... Liscarrol Town."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)
KEYWORDS: homesickness travel nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 143, "Sweet Liscarrol Town" (1 text)
Roud #16239
NOTES [90 words]: OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin begins "You roving boys of pleasure give ear unto my song / I'll sing for you a verse or two that won't detain you long / I'm pressed in grief and no relief in slavery I'm bound / I am far from those who wished me well in sweet Liscarrol Town." This is the counter to the songs revelling in such travels: "You rambling boys of pleasure / Give ear unto these lines I write / It's true I am a rover / And in roving I take great delight" [Bodleian, 2806 c.13(252), "The Rambling Boys of Pleasure"] - BS

Last updated in version 3.2
File: OCC143

Sweet Londonderry (on the Banks of the Foyle)

DESCRIPTION: The singer describes the "ancient walled city," "sweet Londonderry on the banks of the Foyle." Orphaned, he works for years as a sailor. He courts a pretty girl of Londonderry. He hopes to work for her when they are married

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: love courting home sailor work
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H813, p. 468, "Sweet Londonderry" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #9453
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Londonderry on the Banks of the Foyle
Lovely Derry on the Banks of the Foyle

File: HHH813

Sweet Long Ago

DESCRIPTION: "There's a mystic golden shore Where the surges evermore Break in music on the strand soft and low. I can hear the ceaseless hymn, I can see the headland dim Of the golden shores of sweet long ago, Long ago, sweet long ago...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1921 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 728, "Sweet Long Ago" (1 short text, 1 tune)
NOTES [17 words]: The current description is based on the Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 fragment. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1
File: BrS5728

Sweet Loughgiel

DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls leaving Loughgiel and his friends at home. He describes his early life there. He dreams of being back. He hopes someday to return, and wishes he could be as content as he was there

AUTHOR: "McWilliams"
EARLIEST DATE: 1933 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: homesickness
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHensysSongsOfThePeople H506, p. 214, "Sweet Loughgiel" (1 text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "Scarborough Settler's Lament" (theme) and references there
File: HHH506

Sweet Lulur

DESCRIPTION: Singer meets a policeman in Danville. "He bound my feet in cold iron, all tangled my feet in chains, But before I'd go back on my Lulur, I'll have them tangled again." He notes that "If it hadn't a-been for sweet Lulur, it was Lulur that brought be here."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1915 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: police prison love
FOUND IN: US(SE,SW)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
  Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklure3 350, "The Prisoner's Song" (7 texts plus 1 fragment, 2 excerpts, and mention of 1 more; "A"-"C," plus probably the "D" excerpt, are
  "The Prisoner's Song (I)"; "E" and "G," plus perhaps the "H" fragment, are "Meet Me Tonight in the Moonlight"; "J" and "K" are "Sweet Lulur")
  Bronner/Eskin-FolksongAlivePart1 28, "Lulu" (1 text, 1 tune) Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 307, "Way Up on Clinch Mountain" (2 texts, 1 tune; the "A" text is "Rye Whiskey," but the short "B" text is perhaps this or something like it though probably composite, perhaps with "The Wagoner's Lad")
Roud #767
CROSS-REFERENCES:
  cf. "The Prisoner's Song (I)" (floating lyrics)
  cf. "Meet Me Tonight in the Moonlight" (floating lyrics)
NOTES [19 words]: Roud, presumably following Brown et al, lump this with "The Prisoner's Song" group. It appears to me distinct. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.5
File: BrIII350

Sweet Mama

DESCRIPTION: "Sweet mama, treetop tall, Won't you please turn your damper down? I smell hoecake burning, Dey done burnt some brown. I'm laid mah head On de railroad track. I t'ought about Mama An' I drugged it back. Sweet mama, treetop tall, Won't...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: food love suicide
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 242, "Sweet Mama" (1 short text)
RECORDINGS:
  Birmingham Jubilee Singers, "Sweet Mama, Tree Top Tall" (Columbia 14190-D, 1926)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
  Honey, Turn Your Damper Down
NOTES [102 words]: Birmingham Jubilee Singers verse is very close to Scarborough's: "Sweet mama, treetop tall, baby, turn your damper dowm. I smell your bread cooking, honey, Done got good and brown"; couplet, sometimes floating; "Sweet mama, treetop tall, baby turn your damper down." Some floating couplets are "Standing on the corner with my hat in my hand, I'm waiting for the woman ain't got no man" and "If you don't like my peaches don't you shake my tree, Get out of my orchard let the peaches be." For more versions see https://mudcat.org/thread.cfm?
Sweet Mama (II)
DESCRIPTION: Singer can't call his "mama" "sweet" any more: "every time I come to your house It's a man standing in your door" He's leaving: "going up the country Where the Southern cross the Dog" He worries: "My plan needs a future (with) my old-time used to be"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (StuffDreams1)
KEYWORDS: infidelity love sex parting nonballad lover nonballad
FOUND IN:
Roud #29292
RECORDINGS:
Yank Rachel with Sleepy John Estes and Jab Jones, "Sweet Mama" (on StuffDreams1)
NOTES [92 words]: Three line blues: the first line is repeated -- more or less -- and the last line completes the thought.
"One year later (1903) band leader and composer W.C. Handy encountered the blues again at a railroad station in the Delta town of Tutwiler, Mississippi. There a man pressed a knife on the strings of a guitar and sang the line, 'Goin' where the Southern cross the Dog,' three times in succession. The like referred to the Southern and Yazoo Delta ('Yellow Dog') railroads." (David Evans, Big Road Blues (Boston: Da Capo Press, 1982), p. 34.). - BS
Last updated in version 5.2
File: RcSweMa2

Sweet Mama Rolling Stone
DESCRIPTION: "Roll me with your belly, feed me with your tongue." "Tell me mama how you want to roll in town." "Tell me mama how you want your rolling stone." "How come you do me mama you keep smacking me down." "Take care of me mama while you're feeling right"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (USDunbarS01)
KEYWORDS: sex nonballad lover
FOUND IN: US(SE)
RECORDINGS:
Scott Dunbar, "Sweet Mama Rollin' Stone" (on USDunbarS01)
NOTES [13 words]: Dunbar's verses are single lines repeated once. Lines may be being suppressed. - BS
Last updated in version 5.1
File: RcSeMaRS

Sweet Mamie Chadman
DESCRIPTION: "Sweet Mamie Chadman, that's the girl I love, She's got hair like her mother and teeth like a lightning bug." The police arrest him and take him before a judge. The judge give him 99 years. "I want to see my baby one more time 'fore I die."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1968 (NorthCarolinaFolkloreJournal)
KEYWORDS: love prison trial
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
NOTES [47 words]: Most of this appears to be a fairly generic prison/chain gang song, although it's hard to tell which one, but the opening is different, so I've filed it as a separate song. I wonder about the form -- it's given in ballad stanzas, but it really feels like it ought to be a blues. - RBW
Last updated in version 6.1
Sweet Marie

DESCRIPTION: The man longs for Marie, but finds it hard to tell her: "Sweet Marie, come to me, Come to me, Sweet Marie, Not because your face is fair, love, to see, Every daisy in the dell Knows my secret very well, Yet I dare not tell Sweet Marie... ."

AUTHOR: Words: Cy Warman / Music: Raymond Moore

EARLIEST DATE: 1893 (sheet music)

KEYWORDS: love

FOUND IN: Australia US(So)

REFERENCES (3 citations):
Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, pp. 229-230, "Sweet Marie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 155, "Sweet Marie" (1 text plus mention of 2 more)
Geller-FamousSongsAndTheirStories, pp. 70-74, "Sweet Marie" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
Walter Morris, "Sweet Marie" (Columbia 15115-D, 1927)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sweet Marie (Parody)"

SAME TUNE:
Sweet Marie (the Racing Mare) (Meredith/Covell/Brown-FolkSongsOfAustraliaVol2, p. 229)
The Klondiker's Return (File: CAFS2678)
Swet Marie (Parody) (File: Brne156)

NOTES [183 words]: I am told that "[This] song was featured in the 1947 movie 'Life with Father' (articles first appeared in The New Yorker in the 1920s and were later published as three books: God and My Father, Life with Father, Life with Mother). Prior to becoming the movie (and later a TV series in the 1950s), 'Life with Father' was written as a play and opened on Broadway in 1939. "Percy French did a parody of the song with Sweet Marie becoming a racehorse. That song is available in "The Songs of Percy French" selected and edited by James Healy (Ossian Publications/Mercier Press--1986/1996)."

Moore was a nineteenth century singer who apparently was very popular as a performer. Warman apparently came to him and asked him to perform "Sweet Marie," which Warman had written in honor of his wife. Warman eventually came up with a tune and sang it as part of the musical comedy "Africa." Ironically, it was no great success when Moore sang it -- but when he quit the play, his replacement made it a hit. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3

File: MCB229

Sweet Marie (Parody)

DESCRIPTION: "From the fields of war I come, Sweet Marie, Will you kiss me welcome home, love, to thee?" "I am only skin and bones... And I'm full of army prunes as can be." "Oh, I got it in the neck." "Now I'm with you once again... you seem not to identify me"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks); 1953 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)

KEYWORDS: love separation soldier war injury hardtimes food humorous derivative

FOUND IN: US(MW,So)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 156, "Parody of 'Sweet Marie'" (1 text, 1 tune)
McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks, pp. 27-28, "Sweet Marie" (1 short text, 1 tune)

Roud #11354

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sweet Marie" (source of parody)

NOTES [87 words]: Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric's informant Mary Drake of Huntsville, Alabama claimed to have written this. The existence of a similar parody from McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks (which was collected four years earlier) surely argues against this, although McIntosh's version is more about hard times and disease, so it might be that Drake wrote an army version and someone else the hard times version. I thought about splitting the two, but since neither seems to be common, I'm allowing them to stay together. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.3
File: Brne156

Sweet Mary

DESCRIPTION: Dialog; young man asks sweet Mary whether he may ask her parents for her hand. She replies that they will reject his suit; he says he will die of grief. She has a way to save him; "Since my parents are both so contrary/You’d better ask me."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1962 (recording, Horton Barker)

KEYWORDS: courting love rejection request dialog humorous

FOUND IN: US(SE)

RECORDINGS:
Horton Barker, "Sweet Mary" (on Barker01)

NOTES [20 words]: Should not be confused with "Farewell, Sweet Mary," although it's just possible that this may be a parody of that song. - PJS

File: RcSweeMa

Sweet Mary Ann (Such an Education Has My Mary Ann)

DESCRIPTION: "My Mary Ann's a teacher in a great big public school, She gets one thousand dollars every year" for she teaches Greek and Latin and French and "Timbuktu." She knows etiquette. She can dance all types of dances, and play the "pianay"

AUTHOR: Words: Edward Harrigan / Music: David Braham

EARLIEST DATE: 1878 ("Malone's Night Off")

KEYWORDS: love music nonballad

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Finson-Edward-Harrigan-David-Braham, vol. I, #20, pp. 68-70, "Sweet Mary Ann" (1 text, 1 tune)
Emerson-StephenFosterAndCo, pp. 146-147, "Sweet Mary Ann" (1 text)

Roud #V17984

RECORDINGS:
Mick Moloney, "Such an Education Has My Mary Ann" (on HarriganBrahamMaloney)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth b.28(4a/b), "She's a daisy," R. March and Co (London), 1877-1884; also Firth b.28(11a/b), " She's a daisy," R. March and Co (London), 1877-1884 [both of these are really chapbooks, not broadsides, with dozens of songs]

NOTES [199 words]: For background on Harrigan and Braham, see the notes to "The Babies on Our Block."

"On September 16 [1878], Malone's Night Off; or, The German Turnverein was revived with the addition of a new song, 'Sweet May Ann (Such an Education Has My Mary Ann),' a simple diatonic patter song extemporizing on the heroine's scholarly, intellectual, and practical acumen. Evidently Mary Ann knows Greek, Latin, and a bevy of other foreign languages, she plays the piano and all sorts of card games like a professional, and she dances expertly in any and every style. The chorus of the song is especially interesting, for, instead of drawing the listener's interest to unexpected chord changes or melodic leaps -- as was his usual practice -- Braham surprises the listener by rhythmical variations in the accompaniment" (Franceschina, p. 117).

Moody, p. 68, describes the climax of "Malone's Night Out" as "a grand turnverein finale: Affulback Gilmore (Harrigan) pursues the band through the 'William Reilly Overture,' baton in one hand, a flag in the other."

Interestingly, the semi-combined Braham and Harrigan households are reported to have shared a servant named Mary Ann (Franceschina, p. 157). - RBW

Bibliography

Sweet Mary of Cliftonhill

DESCRIPTION: At harvest time the singer sees Mary with another man. Later they drink to each other at a tavern. He reminds her of good times they have had. She leaves for home. They kiss and part. Miles away now he pines for her.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig/Duncan4)

KEYWORDS: courting love parting harvest

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #99, pp. 1-2, "Sweet Mary of Cliftonhill" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan4 708, "Sweet Mary of Cliftonhill" (8 texts, 6 tunes)

Roud #6148

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Harvest Time
Clifton's Braes

File: GrD4708

Sweet Moll

DESCRIPTION: A man tells Moll that he has her parents' or friends' approval to marry. She demands a servant boy [or handsome husband], silver buckles, meat, tea for breakfast and wine at night. He offers no silver, bacon and milk. She refuses and they part.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Taylor, recalling a play enacted c.1875))

KEYWORDS: courting marriage rejection food wine dialog

FOUND IN: Britain(England(South,West))

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, pp. 95-98, "Old Moll" (2 texts) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 385)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Bk 19, "Old Moll"
Purslow-TheConstantLovers, pp. 97-98, "Sweet Moll" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Charles Read Beckwith, "Mummers' Wooing Plays in England" in Modern Philology, Vol. XXI, No. 3 (Feb 1924 (available online by JSTOR)), pp. 268-272 "A Christmas Play [from Keynsham]" (1 text)

Roud #817

NOTES [1245 words]: Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 385 is the same version as Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames pp. 97-98.
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames: "It dates probably from the seventeenth century ...." Since Saint George's name is associated with a kind of mummers' play, and since a subset of those plays is discussed below, this may be the place to introduce him as he appears here. "[Saint George] is particularly important in relation to the mummers' play as we have it. As Miss Dean-Smith has pointed out [Life-Cycle or Folk Play, p. 247], the characteristic English form of the folk-play is the combat play, and it takes its origin from the battle between the King of Egypt and the armies of Christendom in the eleventh century, and the apparition of St George seen at the seige of Jerusalem" (source: P. Happe, "The Vice and the Folk Drama" in Folklore, Vol. LXXV, No. 3 (Autumn 1964 (available online by JSTOR)), p. 165). A relatively small number of these "combat" plays include a wooing dialog that seems incongruous. These "wooing" plays were - "mainly in the East Midland counties" - performed on "Plough Monday", the first Monday after Twelfth Night, and the beginning of the ploughing season (see the ploughmonday.co.uk site; also Roger deV.).
Renwick, "The Mummers' Play and The Old Wives Tale" in The Journal of American Folklore, Vol. XCIV, No. 374 (Oct-Dec 1981 (available online by JSTOR)), p. 439). Alford writes "the St George play and the Plough play ... are in reality two distinct plays but where the geographical dividing line has been uncertain, encouraging both plays, St George and his characters have invaded the Plough play" (source: Violet Alford, "Letters to the Editor" [re Happe, cited above] in Folklore, Vol. LXXVI, No. 1 (Spring 1965 (available online by JSTOR)), p. 63).

Here I can only sketch Beckwith’s theme explaining the sexual rejection in his and Taylor's texts of "wooing" play. He writes that "There is little doubt that the rejection and marriage symbolize the virgin union of the representatives of the new season and the displacement of the representatives of the old season" (p. 227). "It is also reasonably certain that the similarity of the season and fertility rites in the English and Greek plays is not due to any influence of a relatively modern period but to the retention of the same pagan symbolism in both, however far the customs may be from the original forms" (p. 229).

In the Beckwith text, a Sussex Saint George mummers' "wooing" play the man is a Prince and Moll a shepherdess. Here the dialog takes place after a soldier kills St George who is restored to life by the doctor. Father Christmas, once a shepherdess's courtier, gives the shepherdess "a little bottle [to] quench your thirst" and the shepherdess immediately becomes in the mood that Father Christmas "shoot the dart So let us gain the Prince's heart." Her enchantment doesn't last long enough to stop her from rejecting the Prince.

In the Taylor text, a Worcestershire Saint George mummers' "wooing" play, the man is Saint George. The dialog takes place after St George kills everyone in sight except Beelzebub and the Italian doctor, and the doctor brings everyone back to life. After the dialog with Sweet Moll, who leaves alive, St George kills a clown, again restored to life by the doctor, and the hat is passed and ale requested for the troop. While other reports of "Sweet Moll" are independent of the Saint/King George play it's a fair question whether the song is from the play.

There are examples of Saint/King George "wooing" play song that migrate into rather than out of the play:

See the discussion of the St Croix text of "Matty Gru" under "Little Musgrave and Lady Barnard" [Child 81]; there an explicit sexual episode is inserted into the play.

See the comment on Rouse's Rugby text under "Old Man Came Over the Moor" and Rudkin's Lincolnshire text under "The Keys of Canterbury."

See the comment on the Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO text of "Rolling in the Dew."

See the comment on the Campbell text of "Wheel of Fortune."

See the comment on the Beckwith text of "Young Roger of the Mill."

Beckwith, p. 254 ll. 86-93 and fn 4, cites a verse from an 1824 Broughton Christmas play, specifically, "be she gone be she gone farewell I care not for if she's a pretty thing I've had my share on't for if she has more Land than I by one half acre I've plow'd and sown in her Ground let the Fool take her," that dates back at least to 1671. See:

* J Woodfall Ebsworth, Westminster Drolleries ... of 1671, 1672, (Boston, 1875 ("Digitized by Google")), Part 1, p. 81, "The Careless Swain" ("Is she gone? let her go; faith Boys, I care not") (1 text) [1671]

* Joseph Woodfall Ebsworth, editor, The Roxburghe Ballads: Illustrating the Last Years of the Stuarts (Hertford, 1883 ("Digitized by Google")), Vol. IV Part 1 [Part 10], pp. 22-25, "The Deluded Lasse's Lamentation" or "The False Youth's Unkindness to his Beloved Mistress" ("Is she gone? let her go. I do not care") (1 text) ["Probable date, 1672"]

* Broadside EngBdsdBA 22124, Pepys 5.289, "The Deluded Lasses Lamentation" or "The False Youth's Unkindness to his Beloved Mistress" ("Is she gone, let her go, I do not care"), J. Deacon (London), 1689, accessed 08 Dec 2013.

The wide variety of song imported into the mummers' plays makes me wonder how a particular song was chosen. In 1706 D'Urfey produced a comic opera that ran for only five performances, was considered a failure, and was apparently not performed again. However, it included a song that seems to fit the function of a wooing song very well: a milkmaid (Maturity) is leary of being seduced by a young man of bad reputation (Sport); she tells him she will not "lie down for a crown," he proposes, and she accepts ("Of two to make three, We'll Wed, and we'll Bed, There's no more to be said, And I'll ne'er go a Milking more") (Thomas D'Urfey, Wonders in the Sun; or, The Kingdom of the Birds (Jacob Tonson, London, 1706 (reprinted as Issue 104 of Publication (Augustan Reprint Society), University of California, 1964) [with an Introduction by William Worthen Appleton]; see Appleton's note on p. i, and the song ("Oh Love if a God thou wilt be"), Act III, Sc. 1, pp. 51-53).

D’Urfey reprinted the song in 1719 and Ramsay printed it after that ([Thomas d'Urfey,] Wit and Mirth, or, Pills to Purge Melancholy (London, 1719 ("Digitized by Google")), Vol I, pp. 100-102, ("Oh Love of a God thou wilt be") (1 text, 1 tune); Allan Ramsay, The Tea-Table Miscellany: or, A Collection of Scots Sangs (in three vols) (London, 1733 (ninth edition) ("Digitized by Google")), Vol. III, # 16 pp. 264-266, ("Oh love! if a God thou wilt be") (1 text)). In Beckwith's 1824 Broughton Christmas play, II. 124-128, only a fragment is left and that is just a plea to be left alone ("My father's working at his loom My Mother's spinning hard at home Their Dinners they've got Their suppers they want So I pray be gone and give me your room"). Was this a fragment in the oral tradition in 1824? If not, and the song was inserted from a printed source, why wasn't the whole song used?

For further confirmation that the "Wooing Ceremony is confined to four East-Midland counties -- Lincolnshire, Leicestershire, Nottinghamshire, and Rutland," see Allan Brody, The English Mummers and Their Plays, (London, 1969), p. 99. Although he has a chapter on the wooing ceremony, and mentions that it may include a wooing song, he gives no examples. - BS

File: WT095

Sweet Nellie Bawn

DESCRIPTION: "Stroll through the meadows, cross over the stream, You see my darling she is a poet's dream." The singer praises Nellie's hair and voice and says he is always lonely without her. They will be married in the spring

AUTHOR: W. R. Williams (Will Rossiter), according to Huntington

EARLIEST DATE: 1866 (Journal of the Benjamin Cummings)

KEYWORDS: love separation marriage husband wife hair

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, p. 285, "Sweet Nellie Bawn" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #27534

File: HGam285

Sweet Pinks and Roses

DESCRIPTION: "Sweet pinks and roses, That grow in the vine, Go find you a partner, The prettiest you can find. Honey in the gum so sweet, so sweet (x3), Joy is bound to be."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1934 (Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida)

KEYWORDS: playparty flowers courting

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #119, "Sweet Pinks and Roses" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #5039

File: Morr119

Sweet Poll of Plymouth

DESCRIPTION: "Sweet Poll of Plymouth was my dear, When forc'd from her to go." Poll and the sailor part in sorrow. He is away for five years. By the time he returns home, "My Poll, the sweetest flower of May; Then languished, drooped, and died."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (Ashton-RealSailorSongs)

KEYWORDS: sailor love separation pressgang death

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ashton-RealSailorSongs, #34, "Sweet Poll of Plymouth" (1 text)

Roud #12677

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Polly of Plymouth

NOTES [54 words]: There is an earlier song, seemingly found only in New York, called "Sweet Poll of Plymouth's Lament." They both involve sailors leaving Poll in Plymouth -- but in "Sweet Poll of Plymouth," the girl dies; in "Sweet Poll of Plymouth's Lament," William is the one who dies. So I'm Sweet Poll of Plymouth's Lament

DESCRIPTION: "O William, dearest William hear, While yet the ship is nigh" how much the singer grieves to see him leave. She wonders if he will ever return. She imagines his death. "But still sweet Poll of Plymouth lives In melancholy song."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1787 (Country Journal and Poughkeepsie Advertiser, according to Nestler)

KEYWORDS: sailor separation death

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):

ADDITIONAL: Harold Nestler, "Songs from the Hudson Valley" (article in _New York Folklore Quarterly_, Volume V, #2, Summer 1949), pp. 82-83, "Sweet Poll of Plymouth's Lament" (1 text)

NOTES [79 words]: Nestler thinks this "follows traditional patterns." It seems awfully flowery to me, and there is no evidence that it ever had a tune. But I can't prove it wasn't traditional. There is another song sort-of-traditional song, "Sweet Poll of Plymouth." They both involve sailors leaving Poll in Plymouth -- but in "Sweet Poll of Plymouth," the girl dies; in "Sweet Poll of Plymouth's Lament," William is the one who dies. So I'm tentatively splitting them. But I'm not sure.

- RBW

Sweet Portaferry (I)

DESCRIPTION: "Why should men toil foreign lands to explore, When wonder and pleasement are here at the door ... and leave Portaferry and the Kingdom of Down?" If the singer were rich he might travel but at the end he'd return home.

AUTHOR: Leslie Montgomery

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)

KEYWORDS: travel lyric Ireland home

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):

NOTES [9 words]: Portaferry is about 20 miles southeast of Belfast. - BS

Sweet Portaferry (II)

DESCRIPTION: The singer travels around Ireland but "Sweet Portaferry remains in my mind." He returns from foreign lands with "silks and fine laces" to his true love. "Then I'll whisper so fondly and I know she'll agree 'O! Sweet Portaferry, you're a dear spot to me'"

AUTHOR: Cathal O'Byrne

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)

KEYWORDS: travel lyric Ireland love sailor

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):

NOTES [9 words]: Portaferry is about 20 miles southeast of Belfast. - BS

Sweet Refrain

DESCRIPTION: "A music hall was crowded in a village o'er the sea, And brilliant lights were flashing everywhere." A minstrel sings, and a "darkey" remembers his mother and the days of his youth; he begs, "Sing again that sweet refrain"

AUTHOR: Gussie L. Davis (1863-1899)?
Sweet River Suir

DESCRIPTION: The river most deserving of praise is the Suir. The river "has the most devinest aspect" and the best navigators. Its shores have the most melodious bulls. "Its meandering banks so transparent pure; It far surpasses mugs, jugs, and glasses"

AUTHOR: Phil Smith
EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads)
KEYWORDS: river humorous nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlainn-MoreIrishStreetBallads 84A, "Sweet River Suir" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [55 words]: "The River Suir rises in the Devils Bit Mountains [North Tipperary] and flows through the limestone country of South Tipperary and North Waterford" (source: South East [Ireland] Tourism site). For other songs about the river see "The Clonmel Flood," "The Wreck of the Avondale," "The Wreck of the Gwendoline," and "Rare Clonmel." - BS
File: OLcM084A

Sweet Rose in June, The

DESCRIPTION: Couplets about milk maid Miss Kate or Katie. For example, "Down in the green meadows I'll walk with Miss Kate, Where cowslips are growing to make the milk sweet" The chorus is in the Taylor note below.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1867 (Taylor's _The Story of Kennett_; see note below)
KEYWORDS: love farming lyric nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 145, "The Sweet Rose in June" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Öx 264)
Roud #1202
NOTES [49 words]: "... another [husker] sang a melody popular at the time, the refrain of which was, "Be it late or early, be it late or soon, It's I will enjoy the sweet rose in June!" (source: Bayard Taylor, The Story of Kennett, (New York, 1867 ("Digitized by Google")), p. 212); Kennett is in Pennsylvania. - BS
Last updated in version 5.2
File: WT145

Sweet Rosie Anna

DESCRIPTION: Rosie Anna knows that when the steamboat comes to pick up men for the harvest the singer will leave for the harvest and not return until payday. He sings "farewell my darling child I won't be home tomorrow"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1960 (LomaxCD1701)

KEYWORDS: farewell home parting separation harvest ship work floating verses nonballad shanty worksong

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
GarrityBlake-FishFactory, pp. 99-100, ("Bye-bye sweet Rosianna") (1 text)

Roud #12380

RECORDINGS:
Bright Light Quartet, "Sweet Roseanne" (on LomaxCD1701)
Menhaden Fishermen, "Sweet Rosie Anna" (on USMenhaden01)

All hands led by Northern Neck Chantey Singers, "Sweet Rose Anna" (on USMenhaden02)

NOTES [225 words]: GarrityBlake-FishFactory, LomaxCD1701, USMenhaden01 and USMenhaden02 have "Sweet Rosie Anna" as a menhaden chantey. See the notes to "Help Me to Raise Them" for information about menhaden chanteys.

Whatever the origin of this song, the menhaden fishermen made it their own. They see the harvest as their time at sea harvesting -- fishing for -- menhaden. The "steamboat coming around the curve" is not a river boat but the fishing ship they will sign on. "Sweet Rosie Anná" on USMenhaden01 is performed as a menhaden call and response chantey; for example, "bye-bye bye-bye and I go below BYE-BYE SWEET ROSIE ANNA (chatter) bye-bye bye-bye and I go below I WON'T BE HOME TOMORROW (chatter)" where: lower case is the chanteyman calling the verse line; upper case is the crew's response; "(chatter)" is directions called out by the crew about hauling.

Both USMenhaden01 and USMenhaden02 have a floater line that usually answers "I've got a girl in Baltimore" (as in "Li'l Liza Jane")? "The streetcar runs right by her door" (see E.C. Perrow, "Songs and Rhymes from the South" in The Journal of American Folklore, Vol. 26, No. 109 (Apr-Jun 1913 (available online by JSTOR)), #iv.30.1 p. 156, footnote: "I have heard a large number of more or less obscene verses ... such as those that follow the lead of" the "... Baltimore ... streetcar ..." verse). - BS

Last updated in version 4.2

File: GaBl099

Sweet Rosie Levinsky

DESCRIPTION: "Sweet Rosie Levinsky, She was a blacksmith by birth. She was tired of living And decided to leave this old earth. She tried dying by inches, But finding that this was too hard She went out in the alley Laid down and died by the yard.... Three feet."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions)

KEYWORDS: death

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, p. 25, "Sweet Rosie" (1 text)

Roud #9608

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" (lyrics)

NOTES [15 words]: Presumably to be sung to the tune of "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," but Shay indicates no tune. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2

File: SBar025

Sweet Rosie O'Grady

DESCRIPTION: "Just down around the corner of a street where I reside, There lives the sweetest little girl that I have ever spied." The singer vows never to forget the day they met, and says that the very birds sing her name

AUTHOR: Maude Nugent

KEYWORDS: love nonballad bird marriage
Sweet Scented Barber, The

DESCRIPTION: "I'll sing of a feller that live in the city" -- a perfumed barber. Miss O'Brien casts her eyes on him. Sam Snider the butcher grows jealous. The barber kills him with a lathering brush. She kills herself with brandy. He swallows hair dye and dies

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1967 (Huntington-FolksongsFromMarthasVineyard)

KEYWORDS: love court ing hair suicide humorous fight drink

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Huntington-FolksongsFromMarthasVineyard, pp. 44-46, "The Sweet Scented Barber" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #11624

NOTES [30 words]: Huntington suspects that this is a music hall song, and I think he's right that it has a music hall song in its ancestry, but I also suspect it is a parody of something else. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: HuVi044

Sweet Sixteen

DESCRIPTION: The singer talks about "the pretty girls who often may be seen 'Long about they time when they're sweet sixteen." He describes how they primp and show off and talk about boys. (He warns that they tease, or will not work.)

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1976 (collected by Logsdon from Riley Neal); copy in the Lomax papers probably from before 1940
KEYWORDS: youth beauty nonballad
FOUND IN: US(Ap,So,SW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Logsdon-WhorehouseBellsWereRinging 38, pp. 200-202, "Sweet Sixteen" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #10098
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Putting on the Style" (theme)
File: Logs037

Sweet Smiling Lassie o' Modest Fifteen, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer "fell in love wi' the bonnie young lassie, The sweet smiling lassie o' modest fifteen." He proposed, she consented, they married "and noo we are livin' fu' happy and bien [prosperous]"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: love marriage beauty
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan4 732, "The Sweet Smiling Lassie o' Modest Fifteen" (1 text)
Roud #6165
File: GrD4732

Sweet Spirit, Hear My Prayer

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, thou to whom this hear ne'er yet Turned in anguish or regret, The past forgive, the future spare, Sweet spirit, hear my prayer!" The grieving singer cries out for help to "calm these trembling fears," and repeatedly begs to be heard

AUTHOR: Words: "Lurline" / Music: William Vincent Wallace (source: Heart-Songs)
EARLIEST DATE: 1878 (sheet music in the Library of Congress published by Oliver Ditson & Co.)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Heart-Songs, pp. 476-477, "Sweet Spirit, Hear My Prayer" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #13815
File: HeSo476

Sweet Sunny South (I), The [Laws A23]

DESCRIPTION: A young Southerner, armed and ready, bids farewell to family and sweetheart. He sets off for the war, hoping to return when the Yankees are driven off

AUTHOR: William Leach Bloomfield EARLIEST DATE: 1853 (see NOTES)
KEYWORDS: war farewell
FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,NE) Canada(Mar)
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Laws A23, "The Sweet Sunny South"
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 18, "The Bright Sunny South" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan 97, "The Sweet Sunny Souoth" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cox-FolkSongsSouth 76, "The Rebel Soldier" (2 texts, but only the first belongs here; the second is The Rebel Soldier)
Creighton/Senior-TraditionalSongsOfNovaScotia, pp. 272-273, "Sweet Sunny South" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Mackenzie-BalladsAndSeaSongsFromNovaScotia 49, "The Sunny South" (1 text)
DY 698, SUNNYSTH
Roud #800
RECORDINGS:
Dock Boggs, "Bright Sunny South" (on Boggs1, BoggsCD1, ClassBanj)

NOTES [269 words]: Laws, obviously, considers this piece to be of American origin. Cazden et al, however, note that the versions hardly REQUIRE a setting in the American Civil War, and that one southern version refers to a FOREIGN war. In addition, the song has been found primarily in the North. On this basis Cazden argues for an Irish rather than southern American origin. Gardner and Chickering's text has an interesting last few stanzas which wish that "from Union and Yankee our land shall be free." This sounds rather like a particularization from perhaps Kentucky or Missouri.

Gary Stanton tells me, "The song is first published in this version in 1853 by Firth, Pond & Co of New York, composed by Wm Leach Bloomfield, under the title 'Take Me Home' and is available for review on the American Memory site of the Library of Congress. The title page of the ballad reports that it was sung by Edwin P. Christy at Christy's American Opera House, N. Y. Laws considered this a Civil War Ballad, and it gained new popularity among confederate music publishers during the Civil War, including Blackmar & Bro, Augusta, Georgia who credited Eugene Raymond with rearranging the song. Later publishers would credit Raymond, and Gus Meade gives an impossibly early date for Raymond's edition." - RBW

Not to be confused with the sentimental song of the same name [in the Index as "Sweet Sunny South (II) - RBW], wherein the singer returns to his childhood home to find everyone dead and gone. The characteristic first lines of that song are "Take me back to the place where I first saw the light/To the sweet sunny south take me home." - PJS

Last updated in version 3.6
File: LA23

Sweet Sunny South (II)

DESCRIPTION: "Take me back to the place where I first saw the light, To my sweet sunny south take me home." The singer (perhaps an ex-slave) describes home and how much he misses it. He hopes to return to the graves of "my little ones" "to rest and to die" among them

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1918 (Cecil Sharp collection)
KEYWORDS: home death burial grief homesickness loneliness return family
FOUND IN: US(Ro,SE)
REFERENCES (7 citations):
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #119, "Sweet Sunny South" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 186, "The Sunny South" (3 texts, 3 tunes)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 400, "The Sweet Sunny South" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 400, "The Sweet Sunny South" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Rorrer-RamblingBlues-LifeAndSongsOfCharliePoole, p. 88, "Sweet Sunny South" (1 text)
Heart-Songs, pp. 20-21, "Take Me Home" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, SUNSOUTH
Roud #772
RECORDINGS:
Arkansas Woodchopper [pseud. For Luther Ossenbrink] "Sweet Sunny South" (Conqueror 7880, 1931)
DaCosta Woltz's Southern Broadcasters, "Take Me Back to the Sweet Sunny South" (Gennett 6176/Challenge 333, 1927)
Roy Harvey & the North Carolina Ramblers, "Sweet Sunny South" (Paramount 3136, 1928)
J. E. Mainer's Mountaineers, "Take Me Home to the Sweet Sunny South" (Bluebird B-6479/Montgomery Ward M-5035, 1936)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Take Me Back to the Sweet Sunny South" (on NLCR04)
Red Patterson's Piedmont Log Rollers, "The Sweet Sunny South" (Victor 21132, 1927)
Charlie Poole and the North Carolina Ramblers, "Sweet Sunny South" (Columbia 15425-D, 1929; on CPoole01, CPoole05)
Posey Rorrer and the North Carolina Ramblers, "Sweet Sunny South Take Me Home" (Edison, unissued, 1928)
Jackson Young [pseud. for Ben Jarrell], "Take Me Back to the Sweet Sunny South" (Champion 15318/Herwin 75555, 1927)

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "On the Banks of the Old Tennessee" (floating lyrics)

SAME TUNE:

'31 Depression Blues (File: Rc31DB)

Bring Me Back to My Home (by Johnny Burke) (Johnny Burke (William J. Kirwin, editor), _John White's Collection of Johnny Burke Songs_, Harry Cuff Publications, St. John's, 1981, #66, p. 105, with no tune listed but clearly inspired by this)

NOTES [116 words]: Rorrer-RamblingBlues-LifeAndSongsOfCharliePoole notes sheet versions of this dating back at least to the Civil War period, and possibly to several decades before that, but gives no details.

It seems fairly clear that the original versions were about a slave who had gained his freedom by some means but now wished to be back in his old place. Songwriters of the mid nineteenth century were fond of this (propagandistic) theme. One wonders how popular it would have been had the audience been Blacks rather than Whites.

Heart-Songs credits this to "Raymond," but that's all it says. - RBW

Not to be confused with "The Sweet Sunny South (I)" [Laws A23], a Confederate soldier's farewell.

- PJS, RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: DTsunsou

Sweet Swansea

DESCRIPTION: "The first time I entered sweet Swansea, For the truth unto you I will tell, I was handcuffed and put into prison, And locked up in a dark dismal cell." He describes the dreadful prison. He curses judges and juries. He wishes he had wings to fly away

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1967 (Hamer-GarnersGay)

KEYWORDS: prison hardtimes bird trial floatingverses

FOUND IN: Britain(England(West))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Hamer-GarnersGay, p. 49, "Sweet Swansea (Swansea Jail)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1612

NOTES [56 words]: A large part of this song is similar enough to "Logan County Jail (Dallas County Jail)" [Laws E17] that I thought about lumping them, and the rest floats from "Here's Adieu to All Judges and Juries" or "Botany Bay (I)" or the like. But Roud treats them as separate (perhaps on the grounds that it's a unique combination), so I do to. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0

File: HaGa049

Sweet Tayside

DESCRIPTION: The singer overhears two lovers. The man says it would be a "great sin" if the girl does not give him a love token. She asks what he would have; he names a ring, a garter, and a broach. She gives them, then laments that he is untrue. He then marries her

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1881 (Christie)

KEYWORDS: love courting ring gift betrayal

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (4 citations):

Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #97, p. 2, "Sweet Tayside" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan4 882, "Sweet Tayside" (2 texts plus a single verse on p. 570, 1 tune)
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, pp. 118-119, "Sweet Tayside" (1 text)

ADDITIONAL: W. Christie, editor, Traditional Ballad Airs (Edinburgh, 1881 (downloadable pdf by University of Edinburgh, 2007)), Vol II, pp. 92-93, "The Ploughman's Daughter" (1 tune)
Roud #5544

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "The Banks of Sweet Dundee" (tune, per Greig/Duncan4)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Ploughman's Bonny Lassie
File: 0rd118

Sweet Thing (I)

DESCRIPTION: "What you gonna do when the pond goes dry, honey, What you gonna do when the pond goes dry, baby?" Sundry verses about catching fish, rural life, and (presumably) sexual innuendo

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Cecil Sharp collection)

KEYWORDS: nonballad courting sex

FOUND IN: US(Ap,So)

REFERENCES (7 citations):
- Randolph 443, "Sweet Thing" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Randolph/Cohen-OzarkFolksongs-Abridged, pp. 349-350, "Sweet Thing" (1 text, 1 tune -- Randolph's 443)
- Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 34, "Sweet Thing/Crawdad Song/Sugar Babe" (3 texts, 1 tune)
- Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians 245, "Sugar Babe" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sharp/Karpeles-EightyEnglishFolkSongs 62, "The Crow-Fish Man" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 240, "What Kin' o Pants Does the Gambler Wear" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 235, "Sweet Thing" (1 text)
- Roud #4853

RECORDINGS:
- Callahan Brothers, "Sweet Thing" (Decca 5952, 1941)
- Lulu Belle and Scotty, "Sugar Babe" (Melotone 6-08-58/Perfect 6-08-58, 1936)
- [Tom] Darby and [Jimmie] Tarlton, "Pork Chops" (Columbia 15611-D, 1931, rec. 1930)
- Lester McFarland & Robert Gardner, "Birmingham Jail" (Brunswick 293, 1929/Supertone S-2031, 1930)
- Pickard Family, "Get Me Out of This Birmingham Jail" (Brunswick 385, 1929; Supertone S-2068, 1930)
- Dock Walsh, "Going Back to Jericho" (Columbia 15094-D, 1926)
- Doc Watson, Gaither Carlton & Ralph Rinzler, "I'm Going Back to Jericho" (on Ashley02)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Crawdad" (tune, lyrics, and everything else) and references there
- cf. "Going Down This Road Feeling Bad" (floating lyrics)

SAME TUNE:
- Bud & Joe Billings (pseud. for Frank Luther & Carson Robison) "Birmingham Jail #2" (Victor V-40082, 1929)

NOTES [172 words]: Songs with this tune and metrical pattern turn up throughout North American tradition; like the limerick, this skeleton seems to have become a favorite framework for humorous material. - PJS

This song poses a conundrum (hinted at in Paul's comment), because it merges continuously with the "Crawdad" family; they use the same tune (at least sometimes) and ALL of the same verses. Roud lumps them. Chances are that they are the same song. But the tenor of the song changes somewhat with the presence or absence of a crawdad; after initially lumping the song, the Ballad Index staff decided to split them, based solely on mention of a crawdad. Which meant, e.g., that "The Crow-Fish Man (I)" files here even though it's clearly derived from "Crawdad." So one should definitely check all versions of both to get the complete range of material. - RBW

Well, adding to the conundrum, the version of "The Crow-fish Man" in Sharp-EnglishFolkSongsFromSouthernAppalachians "does" mention crawdads, so it gets filed under "Crawdad Song." - PJS

Last updated in version 4.3
Sweet Trinity (II), The

DESCRIPTION: "A hunter early ranging Along the forest wild
Saw o'er the greensward tripping, tripping, tripping, tripping,
Three maidens fair and mild." (x2). They are Faith, Love, and Hope. They say to pick one. He asks "why must two depart" and begs them to "share my heart"

AUTHOR: unknown; Theodore Frelinghuysen Seward's 1872 collection "The Coronation" says only that it is "arr. from the German"

EARLIEST DATE: 1872 (Seward); hymnary.org cites it as from 1870 under the title "The Hunter's Prize" but appears to have no other information

KEYWORDS: religious courting nonballad hunting

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Morris-FolksongsOfFlorida, #93, "The Sweet Trinity" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #5054

NOTES [33 words]: The grouping of Faith, Hope, and Love (charity; agape) is famously found in 1 Corinthians 13:13 -- but they are not called a "trinity"; the "holy trinity" is of course Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.2

File: Morr093

Sweet William of Plymouth

DESCRIPTION: William, a sailor, courts poor Susan. She rejects her parent's plan to marry her to a wealthy squire and is sent away. William returns from sea, and they -- not knowing he is now rich
-- tell him she is dead. William and Susan meet and marry.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1813 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 4(91))

LONG DESCRIPTION: William, a seaman, courts Susan, "but a fisherman's daughter ...
"[but] the most beautiful creature on earth." "The day was appointed the knot should be tied" but Susan becomes sick, and cannot be cured by "famous Physicians"; the wedding had to be postponed.
William is called to go to sea, leaving her behind. He promises to marry when he returns "if thou by good fortune alive dost remain." She promises to remain true. He leaves. She recovers. She rejects a "wealthy young farmer" who courts her, and a squire as well. The squire appeals to her father and mother who, "being ambitious of honour and fame, Did strive to persuade her, but all in vain." She rejects their attempt.

They send her to Holland, planning to tell William, on his return, that Susan has died; if William marries another then Susan would be free to marry the squire. William, gone two years, returns
"laden with riches." Susan's parents tell him she has died. He leaves his money with his own parents and decides "to travel again, Perhaps it will wear off my anguish and pain." At sea again, a storm wrecks his ship on the Dutch shore. He goes to the Hague, to repair his ship, and meets Susan. She tells him of her parent's plot. They go to Plymouth where they plan their wedding. He invites Susan's parents, saying that he has decided to marry another since Susan is dead. They agree, and "fetch home our daughter to marry the squire." She was dressed so finely that "her father and mother her face did not know." Susan reveals herself to her mother, and her parents give her their blessing, not yet knowing about his riches. He hints at his wealth and "with music and dancing they finish'd the day."

KEYWORDS: courting rejection disguise wreck

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan5 1078, "The Fisherman's Daughter" (1 fragment)

Roud #6763

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 4(91), "Sweet William of Plymouth" ("A seaman of Dover, sweet William by name"), J. Evans (London), 1780-1812; also Harding B 4(96), "Sweet William of Plymouth";
Harding B 4(96), "Sweet William of Plymouth"

LOCSinging, as10407a, "The Fortunate Lovers" or "Sweet William of Plymouth" ("A Seaman of Plymouth, sweet William by name"), unknown, no date

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Johnny the Sailor (Green Beds)" [Laws K36] (theme: poor sailor returning wealthy, is rejected by sweetheart's parents who think him still poor)

NOTES [188 words]: The Greig/Duncan5 fragment -- "And she was not courted by none of the worst, A young squire came to court her at last; He called her his jewel, his true love, his dear ... 'I cannot, I daur not, you must be denied.'" -- corresponds to lines 37-39, 45 and 48 (of 200) of the Vaynes (i.e., Roxburghie Collection III.332) text with some changes, viz., "So that she was counted [sic] by none of the worst; A wealthy young farmer came to her the first, And call'd her the jewel and joy of his life.... Then came a squire, who call'd her his dear .... "I must not, I cannot, you must be deny'd." Helpfully, the Greig/Duncan5 title was "The Fisherman's Daughter" which is not hinted at in the Greig/Duncan5 text or notes.

I have gone into great detail in the LONG DESCRIPTION because "Sweet William of Plymouth" has sometimes been considered a version of "A Rich Irish Lady (The Fair Damsel from London; Sally and Billy; The Sailor from Dover; Pretty Sally; etc.)" [Laws P9]. That is clearly not the case and may be caused by confusion with the broadsides for "The Sailor from Dover" which follow the standard story line for Laws P9. - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: Grd1078

Sweet William's Ghost [Child 77]

DESCRIPTION: (Sweet William) dies while engaged. Since he has an unfulfilled commitment, his spirit cannot rest. He goes to his sweetheart, who begs him to wed her/kiss her/etc. When she learns that he is dead, she releases him from his promise

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1740 (Ramsey)

KEYWORDS: ghost promise freedom death

FOUND IN: US(NE,SE) Canada(Newf) Britain(Scotland(Bord)) Ireland

REFERENCES (26 citations):
Child 77, "Sweet William's Ghost" (8 texts, 1 tune) {Bronson's #1}
Bronson 77, "Sweet William's Ghost" (11 versions+ 1 in addenda)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads 77, "Sweer William's Ghost" (4 versions: #1, #3, #9, #12)
Chambers-ScottishBallads, pp. 217-219, "Sweet William's Ghost" (1 text)
Lyle/McAlpine/McLucas-SongRepertoireOfAmeliaAndJaneHarris, p. 170, "There cam a Ghost" (1 fragment, 1 tune) {Bronson's #1}
Morton-FolksongsSungInUlster 8, "Sweet William's Ghost" (1 text, 1 tune)
Percy/Wheatley-ReilquesOfAncientEnglishPoetry III, pp. 130-133, "Sweet William's Ghost" (1 text)
Butterworth/Dawney-PloughboysGlory, p. 48, "Willie the Waterboy" (1 text, 1 tune, short enough that it might be Child #77 or Child #248 or a combination or perhaps independent; Roud files it with Child #248, but Dawney with Child #77)
Davis-MoreTraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 21, pp. 152-156, "Sweet William's Ghost" (1 text, so fragmentary that it might be some other ballad with intrusions from "Sweet William's Ghost")
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 240-241, "Lady Margaret and Sweet William" (1 text, taken from the Green Mountain Songster)
Flanders-AncientBalladsTraditionallySungInNewEngland2, pp. 178-183, "Sweet William's Ghost" (2 texts, the first being the Green Mountain Songster version)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 23, "Sweet William's Ghost" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 23, "Sweet William's Ghost" (1 excerpt, 1 tunes)
Greenleaf/Mansfield-BalladsAndSeaSongsOfNewfoundland 9, "Lady Margaret" (1 text)
Peacock, pp. 390-395, "Lady Margaret" (1 text, 6 tunes)
Karpeles-FolkSongsFromNewfoundland 9, "Sweet William's Ghost" (2 texts, 9 tunes) {Bronson's #3}
Leach-FolkBalladsSongsOfLowerLabradorCoast 4, "Sweet William's Ghost" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 256-262, "Sweet William's Ghost" (1 text plus a Danish text for comparison)
Leach-HeritageBookOfBallads, pp. ix-xi, "Sweet William's Ghost (Lady Margaret)" (1 text, 1 tune)
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 47, "Sweet William's Ghost" (2 texts)
Sweeter Than the Flowers

DESCRIPTION: Singer's mother has died and the family delays the family reunion because she will not be there. The singer recalls the funeral when they "had to face it." The chorus says they "can't forget the hour"; mother was "sweeter than the flowers"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (recording, Roy Acuff)

KEYWORDS: grief death funeral mourning father family mother

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

RECORDINGS:

Marie Hartery, "Sweeter Than Flowers" (on MUNFLA-Leach)

NOTES [26 words]: This song was recorded many times in the late 1940s but the Acuff version was the easiest for me to verify. The description follows the Acuff recording. - BS

Last updated in version 4.2
Sweeter the Breeze (I), The DESCRIPTION: "Take a deep seat and a faraway look, Keep him between your knees. The higher he goes, the sweeter the breeze. Keep your mind in the middle and let both ends flop!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973
KEYWORDS: cowboy horse nonballad recitation
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 86, "The Sweeter the Breeze" (1 text)
NOTES [36 words]: Even Ohrlin admits this is a "cross between a verse and a saying." But I suppose it might be traditional advice for a bronc rider, so here it is. (Ohrlin made up another piece with this title, not included here.) - RBW
File: 0hr086

Sweethearts I've Got Plenty
DESCRIPTION: The singer passes her sweetheart "walking fast by another girlie's side." He waves to her but she passes by "for I hate to be slighted by a man .... sweethearts I've got plenty I can count them more than twenty" and her mind will "change with the wind"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: courting infidelity
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan6 1140, "Sweethearts I've Got Plenty" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
Roud #6824
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Farewell He" (theme) and references there
File: GrD61140

Swell My Net Full
DESCRIPTION: "Out on the ocean, dreary and cold, I lead the life of a fisherman bold. So swell me net full....." The singer lists a fish for each weekday, and describes how to deal with weather. When he dies, "Build me a tombstone of herring back scales."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs), but recorded no later than 1982
KEYWORDS: fishing nonballad food storm work
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 145, "Swell my Net Full" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #16874
File: PaSe145

Swiler's Song, The
DESCRIPTION: "Rise up me hearties with gaff and sculp, With hobnail rope and line." The singer repeatedly encourages his comrades in their tasks as they hunt seals. He admits that "many a hearty swiler sleeps 'round the Funks and Baccalieu," but still urges them on
AUTHOR: Words: Pat Byrne
EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff)
KEYWORDS: hunting nonballad
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, pp. 144-145, "The Swiler's Song" (1 text, tune referenced)
Roud #V44858
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Sinking of the Caribou" (tune)
cf. "Spancil Hill" (tune)

NOTES [288 words]: This is supposed to be sung to the tune of "The Sinking of the Caribou," which I assume is the song indexed as "The Loss of the Caribou." Which would make the actual tune be "Spancil Hill."
"Swilers" are of course sealers, and "swiles" are seals.
"Old Man Kean" is Captain Abram Kean, the only captain to take a million seals in his lifetime; for him, see "Captain Abram Kean."
The description of the fleet as a "floating hell" is pretty apt; the sealing schooners served for decades, carrying far too many men; George Allan England, in his book Vikings of the Ice: Being the Log of a Tenderfoot on the Great Newfoundland Seal Hunt (also published as The Greatest Hunt in the World), Doubleday, 1924, declared more than once that the ship he sailed on (the Terra Nova, under none other than Abram Kean) should have been "condemned" after her thirty-odd years of service, but she kept going to the ice for another two decades.
The "main patch" is the sealer's term for the area of the ice where the largest share of the harp seals went to bear their young -- the baby seals known as "whitecoats" after the color of their fur for their first few weeks.
To "sculp" is to cut off the hide and the attached fat (the fat was, for many years, the most valuable part, because it could be made into a very useful oil); the hide plus fat was itself a "sculp."
"The Funks" and "Baccalieu" were islands on the north coast of Newfoundland; although dangerous to navigate around (see, for instance, "The Cliffs of Baccalieu"), they too close to the big island for there to be many seals there, so a sealer could rest in their vicinity. Although "sleep" in this context probably means that they died there when their ships were wrecked. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: RySm144

Swiles of Newfoundland, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, the day we left St. John's, me b'ys, It was a very fine day! Our wives an' sweethearts on the quay Says they, ye'll understand." The singer complains about the bad conditions, but delights in killing "swiles [seals] in Newfoundland."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (England, Vikings of the Ice)
KEYWORDS: hunting hardtimes
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Ryan/Small-HaulinRopeAndGaff, p. 106, "The Swiles of Newfoundland" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: George Allan England, _Vikings of the Ice: Being the Log of a Tenderfoot on the Great Newfoundland Seal Hunt_ (also published as _The Greatest Hunt in the World_), Doubleday, 1924, pp. 128-129, "(no title)" (1 text)

Roud #V44610

NOTES [61 words]: "Pinnacle tea," mentioned near the end of this, is tea made with water made from melted sea ice or glacial ice -- fresh water, but sometimes a bit brackish and probably not very good-tasting; see G. M. Story, W. J. Kirwin, and J. D. A. Widdowson, editors, Dictionary of Newfoundland English, second edition with supplement, Breakwater Press, 1990, pp. 378-379.- RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
File: RySm106A

Swim Back You Bastard to Me

DESCRIPTION: "If the skipper fell into the oggin [ocean], If the skipper fell into the sea, If the skipper fell into the oggin, He'd get sod-all lifebelt from me. Swim back, swim back, Oh swim back you bastard to me...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: navy revenge derivative
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Swing Low

DESCRIPTION: "Star in the east, swing low, Star in the west, swing low, Stars shining in my breast, Swing low, chariot, swing low. "My father's gone, swing low... Angels took him...." "My mother's gone...." "I got a letter... it was sent from heaven...."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (recording, Bascom Lamar Lunsford)

KEYWORDS: religious father mother

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jones-MinstrelOfTheAppalachians-Bascom-Lamar-Lunsford, p. 226, "Swing Low, Chariot" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
Bascom Lamar Lunsford, "Swing Low" (on BLLunsford01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot"

NOTES [53 words]: Bascom Lamar Lunsford thinks this a forerunner of "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," and it's likely enough that I decided to include the song even though I'm not sure how strong it is in tradition. On the other hand, it is possible that it is a filed-down version, without the strong freedom motif of the better-known song. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1

File: RcSwinLo

Swing Low Sweet Chariot Swing Low

DESCRIPTION: "Oh swing low sweet chariot swing low" "Must be Jesus passing by" "Swing low in the East ... Swing low in the West ... Morning star was a witness too"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands 35, pp. 154-155, "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" (1 text, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Swing Low" (lyrics)

NOTES [15 words]: Dett, in "Prayer is the Key to Heaven," has the line "The morning star was a witness too." - BS

Last updated in version 4.1

File: Parr035

Swing Low, Sweet Chariot

DESCRIPTION: Black spiritual: "Swing low, sweet chariot/Coming for to carry me home"; "I looked over Jordan and what did I see/.../A band of angels comin' after me"; "If you get there before I do/.../Tell all my friends I'm a-comin' too"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1872 (publ. in Theodore B. Seward, "Jubilee Songs, as Sung by the Jubilee Singers of Fisk University")

KEYWORDS: religious nonballad slavery floatingverses

FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (16 citations):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, pp. 102, App.V, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Work-FolkSongOfTheAmericanNegro, pp. 58-59, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (1 text); p. 121, "Swing Low" (1 text, 1 tune)
Gainer-FolkSongsFromTheWestVirginiaHills, pp. 220-221, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (1 text, 1 tune)
Seeger-AmericanFavoriteBallads, p. 16, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 608-610, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 28, (no title) (1 fragment of 2 lines)
Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit, pp. 89-90, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fireside-Book-of-Folk-Songs, p. 310, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 353, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (1 text)
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 265, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (1 text)
Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, p. 54, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (1 text)
Heart-Songs, p. 251, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #132, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (1 text)
DT, SWINGLOW
ST PSABF0016 (Full)
Roud #5435
RECORDINGS:
Carroll Clark, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (Black Swan 2024, 1921)
Cotton Pickers Quartet, "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" (OKeh 8917, 1931)
Lt. Jim Europe's Four Harmony Kings, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (Patie 22187, 1919) (Patie 020581, 1923 [as Jim Europe's Four Harmony Kings])
Fisk University Jubilee Quartet, "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" (Victor 16453, 1910; rec. 1909)
Fisk University Male Quartet, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (Columbia A1883, 1915; Silvertone 3294 [as Border Male Quartet], n.d.)
The Four Jacks, "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" (Allen 21000, n.d. but post-wwii)
Mabel Garrison, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (Victor 640, 1901)
Hampton Institute Quartette, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (RCA 27470, 1941)
Roland Hayes, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (Vocalion [US & UK] 21003, n.d.; Supertone, 1931)
Hall Johnson Negro Choir, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (Victor 36020, 1930)
Kanawha Singers, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (Brunswick 205, 1928)
Menhaden Fishermen, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (on USM enhaden01)
Mitchell's Christian Singers, "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" (Melotone 6-04-64, 1936)
Norman Phelps & his Virginia Rounders, "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" (Decca 5247, 1936)
Paul Robeson, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (Victor 20068, 1926) (HMV [UK] 8372/Victor 25547, 1937)
Pete Seeger, "Swing Low" (on PeteSeeger24)
Southern Four, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (Edison 51364, 1924)
Standard Quartette, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (CYL: Columbia, no #, 1894)
Taylor Sisters, Mae Helen Blakeney, soloist, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (on HandMeDown2)
Tuskegee Institute Singers, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" (Victor 17890, 1916)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Swing Low"
cf. "Wade in the Water" (floating lyrics) and references there
cf. "Dawsonville Jail" (tune)
cf. "I Don't Want to Stay Here Any Longer" (lyrics)
cf. "The Woolston Ferry" (tune of first verse)
NOTES [88 words]: Guy Logsdon & Jeff Place state that the songs were taught to the Fisk Jubilee Singers in 1871 by two former slaves from the Indian Territory (Oklahoma), Aunt Minerva Willis & Uncle Wallace. See "The Presbyterian", Sept. 10, 1890, and Thoburn & Wright's "Oklahoma: A History of the State and Its People."
The subtext of running away to freedom is clear throughout this song; the fact that the title is a pun on the name of the most famous conductor on the Underground Railroad, Harriet Tubman, may or may not be accidental. - PJS

Last updated in version 6.0
File: PSAFB016

Swinging, Swinging

DESCRIPTION: "Swinging, swinging, swinging, swinging. Swinging 'neath the old, 'Neath the old apple tree." "Now my heart is beating thinking of the greeting, Swinging 'neath the old apple tree. Swinging, swinging, swinging, swinging, Swinging 'neath the old...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)
KEYWORDS: love nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric 29, "Swinging, Swinging" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #11396
File: Brne029

Swinish Multitude, The

DESCRIPTION: Give me the man who bids "the sun of Freedom rise" against tyrants, and the soul who "inlists for Freedom's cause." May you "no longer unavenged be called 'The swinish multitude.'" Freedom is coming to the world. Dare to die pursuing statecraft's crimes.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1804 (_Paddy's Resource_, according to Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815)
KEYWORDS: nonballad political
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815 80, "The Swinish Multitude" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [114 words]: Moylan-TheAgeOfRevolution-1776-1815: "Edmund Burke in his [Reflections on the Revolution] in France described the common people as the 'swinish multitude'." The phrase was adopted as a mock compliment by sympathizers with the revolution and several United Irish songs played upon the phrase." - BS

Burke's precise quote is "Learning will be cast into the mire, and trodden down under the hoofs of the swinish multitude."

Thomas Pakenham, _The Year of Liberty_, p. 173, reports that the United Irishmen of Henry Joy McCracken sang a "workingmen's song called 'The Swineish (sic.) Multitude.'" If he has a source for this, it appears to be E. Thompson, _Working Class_, p. 90. - RBW

File: Moyl080

Swinton May Song

DESCRIPTION: "All in this pleasant evening, together come are we, For the summer springs so fresh, green, and gay." The singer calls on master, mistress, and children to rise up for the May, and wishes blessings on them; the singers will not return until next May

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1862 (Chambers, according to Palmer)
KEYWORDS: ritual religious family
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #132, "Swinton May Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #305
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "May Day Carol" (subject) and references there
NOTES [27 words]: Roud lumps a great variety of May songs (many of them clearly distinct) under his #305. I've split a lot of them, including this, but best to check them all. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.7
Sword in My Hand

DESCRIPTION: "I have a sword in my hand Help me to use it, Lord I'm goin' away To watch an' pray Never to come back 'Till the Great Judgement day"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1954 (Elder-FolksongsFromTobago)

KEYWORDS: nonballad religious

FOUND IN: West Indies(Tobago)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Elder-FolksongsFromTobago 40, "Sword in My Hand" (1 text, 1 tune)

NOTES [24 words]: Elder-FolksongsFromTobago: "This Tobago spiritual song is all about the aspiration by the devotee to be a good 'swordsman' to use the Word." - BS

Last updated in version 4.0

File: ElT0040

Sword of Bunker Hill, The

DESCRIPTION: An old veteran, dying, bid his son to bring "the sword of Bunker Hill." Grasping the sword, in a burst of energy, he tells the boy how he captured the blade from a British officer. The old man dies

AUTHOR: "Covert"? (see NOTES)

EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland), but dating at least to the Civil War era; see NOTES

KEYWORDS: battle dying patriotic

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
June 17, 1775 - American defeat at the Battle of Bunker Hill

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland, pp. 224-225, "The Sword of Bunker Hill" (1 text, 1 tune)
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, p. 88, (no title) (1 fragment, very likely not this song but associated by the informant with Bunker Hill, and it fits better here than anywhere else)
Heart-Songs, pp. 316-317, "The Sword of Bunker Hill" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #12, "The Sword of Bunker Hill" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2279, p. 153, "The Sword of Bunker Hill" (8 references)
STFO224 (Partial)
Roud #4684

SAME TUNE:
The Banner of the Free ("He lay upon the battle-field," by Eugene Johnson) (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets pp. 6-7)
The White Star Division ("Star, the brightest star of fame," probably referring to the second division of the Union XII Corps) (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, p. 177)

NOTES [359 words]: Although this song, by implication at least, praises American conduct at Bunker Hill, the record of the Colonials at that battle was in fact rather poor. Sent on the night of June 16 to garrison Bunker Hill, American troops instead occupied Breed's Hill, which was lower, less defensible, and closer to the British artillery. The British under General Gage attacked the next day. The Americans did show unaccustomed discipline, which caused the battle to last longer than usual, but ultimately the British forced them back. The battle was a dreadful strain on the British, though, who suffered more than 1100 casualties (see Stanley Weintraub, Iron Tears: America’s Battle for Freedom, Britain’s Quagmire: 1775-1783, Free Press, 2005, p. 9), compared to 441 American losses.

The "Warren" of the song is Dr. Joseph Warren, the man who had organized Paul Revere's Ride and a leading figure in the rebel forces (although not one of their commanding officers). He was killed in the battle. (It will tell you something about conditions at the time that Warren, although he worked as a physician, actually earned his degree in theology, because that was the only curriculum taught at Harvard College at the time; see Weintraub, p. 8).
I have in my collection a damaged songster, date unknown but almost certainly from the period 1865-1885, attributing this to "Covert"; in the same songster, a piece called "Follow the Drum" is credited to "B. Covert." The Flanders/Olney-BalladsMigrantInNewEngland text is nearly identical to the songster version. Heart-Songs attributes the music of this to "B. Covert" and the words to W. R. Wallace. Although rarely collected in tradition, this was well-enough known to have been used as the tune for several Civil War pieces (see the Same Tune list), one of which, "The Banner of the Free", was popular enough to be printed at least eight times. The song itself was also widely printed in the 1860s; Edwin Wolf 2nd, American Song Sheets, Slip Ballads, and Political Broadsides 1850-1870, Library Company of Philadelphia, 1963, p. 153, lists eight broadsides from that period, by at least four different publishers. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.0

File: F0224

Sydney Cup Day

DESCRIPTION: Joe Thompson comes up to the singer on race day and asks him to back his horse. The singer is not interested

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1954

KEYWORDS: horse racing gambling Australia

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, p. 35, "Sydney Cup Day" (1 text, 1 tune)

File: MA035

Sympathizing with the Fenian Exiles

DESCRIPTION: Keep your mouth shut and beware spies. We visit the Fenians jailed like "dogs kept in a manger." General Burk's turnkey "is worse than a Turk." Rossa, Luby and others are named. God is watching inside the walls. Our day will come.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1966 (Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion)

KEYWORDS: exile prison political

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (2 citations):

Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion, p. 52, "A New Song Sympathizing With The Fenian Exiles" (1 fragment)

Healy-MercierBookOfOldIrishStreetBalladsVol2, pp. 131-133, "(A new song sympathising with) The Fenian Exiles" (1 text)

Roud #V8283

BROADSIDES:

Bodleian, 2806 c.8(40), "A New Song Sympathising With the Fenian Exiles" ("My Irish friends [sic] aome [sic] rally round"), unknown, n.d.

NOTES [55 words]: Zimmerman-SongsOfIrishRebellion p. 52 is a fragment; broadside Bodleian 2806 c.8(40) is the basis for the description.

Is the topic prisoners as in the text, or exiles as in the title? If the former the date is probably before 1871; else, after. - BS

For O'Donovan Rossa and the Fenian Exiles, see "Rossa's Farewell to Erin." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.1

File: BrdSwtFE

Syng Hoit Faleri (Listen Little Bosun)

DESCRIPTION: Norwegian shanty. "Listen little bosun, what I want to tell you, do you want to play dice with me? Ch: Sing high falleri, fallala-lala."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1888 (L.A. Smith, _Music of the Waters_)

KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage shanty gambling
T for Texas (Blue Yodel #1)
DESCRIPTION: "It's T for Texas, T for Tennessee (x2), It's T for Thelma, the gal who made a fool out of me." A lonely song for an unhappy man; he will buy a pistol and shoot the woman
AUTHOR: Jimmie Rodgers
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1928 (recording, Jimmie Rodgers)
KEYWORDS: floating verses hard times homicide
FOUND IN: US (Ap, SE)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 339, "Leave for Texas, Leave for Tennessee" (2 texts)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 71, "T for Texas, T for Tennessee" (1 text)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 152, "Mule Skinner Blues" (1 text, 1 tune, with one stanza of "T for Texas" thrown in at the end)
Roud #11743
RECORDINGS:
Jim Eanes, "Blue Yodel No. 1" (Rich-R-Tone 1058, n.d.)
NOTES [85 words]: Jimmie Rodgers is apparently responsible for this song in its present form, but he built it up largely from floating verses.
To add to the fun, the Lomaxes took a verse of this and tacked it on to another Rodgers piece, "Muleskinner Blues." Given that neither song has much of a plot, it can be hard to separate the resulting hybrids.
It will show how strong was the influence of Rodgers that the song was in tradition within five years (Brown's "a" text is from 1930, and Henry's from 1934 or earlier). - PJS, RBW
File: LoF152A

T'Oilean Ur, An
DESCRIPTION: Gaelic. The singer goes to America and sees nothing familiar: not a Christian, horse, cow, sheep, but only roaring wild animals and people. When he meets people from Ireland he realizes he would be fortunate to be home even just to find proper mourners.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1976 (OBoyle-TheIrishSongTradition)
KEYWORDS: foreign language emigration America Ireland
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OBoyle-TheIrishSongTradition 19, "t-Oilean Ur, An" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [46 words]: The description follows O Boyle's translation. - BS
I would assume that when the singer says he saw no Christians he meant he saw no "Catholics". This would be almost reasonable if he migrated to, say, New England, especially in the eighteenth or early nineteenth century. - RBW
File: 0Boy019

T'Owd Yowe wi' One Horn
DESCRIPTION: Old "yowe" (ewe) resists penning and kicks the farmhand around the yard. The butcher is sent for; the yowe charges him and breaks his legs. She is sent to fight for the king, and kills soldiers in quantity.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (JFSS: Dean Robinson)
KEYWORDS: farming humorous tall tale animal sheep
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
REFERENCES (3 citations):
VaughanWilliams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs, p. 82, "T'Owd Yowe wi' One Horn" (1 text, 1 tune)
O'Shaughnessy/Grainger-TwentyOneLincolnshireFolkSongs 18, "T'Owd Yowe wi' One Horn" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Journal of the Folk-Lore Society, Vol. II, No. 7 (1905 (available online by JSTOR)), #2 p. 79, "T Owd Yowe Wi One Horn" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1762
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Grey Goose"
cf. "The Killing of the Big Pig (Iso Sika)"
NOTES [111 words]: This seems to have been collected only once, but cognate stories of big animals that are hard to kill and cook are common (see cross-references). "The Derby Ram" is also connected. -PJS
Kennedy apparently regards it as the same as the piece "The Ewie wi' the Crookit Horn" (#271 in his collection). But neither the plot, nor the words, nor the music is the same. - RBW
Then there's the "Yowie wi' the Crookit Horn," which seems to be slang for an illegal whiskey still. -PJS
O'Shaughnessy/Grainger-TwentyOneLincolnshireFolkSongs is from VaughanWilliams/Lloyd-PenguinBookOfEnglishFolkSongs. The JFSS words, apparently the "original" text, are only slightly different. - BS
File: VWL082

Ta Me Mo Shui (I Am Awake)

DESCRIPTION: Gaelic. The singer lies awake until cock crow though the rest of the household sleeps: he had met a banshee the night before and she had doomed him to love her "until crack of Doomsday"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1976 (OBoyle-TheIrishSongTradition)
KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage love magic
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Tunney-WhereSongsDoThunder, pp. 37-39, "Ta Me Mo Shui" (1 text)
OBoyle-TheIrishSongTradition 24, "Ta me 'mo Shui" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [94 words]: If you were brought up on the stories I was brought up on, you probably just think of a banshee as a (non-human) creature whose cry causes death. Not so in Irish legend; "Bean Sidhe" is a "woman of the hills" -- a member, presumably, of the old fairy folk, the Aes Sidhe, the "people of the hills." The Bean Sidhe may be young and beautiful, or an old hag; a family may have its own special Bean Sidhe -- an immortal, who announces the death of each member of the family. Legends of a young man falling in love with one are rare, but it fits the Irish concept. - RBW
File: TST037

Ta Ra, Limavady

DESCRIPTION: The singer praises Limavady. He lists the boasts of other towns (e.g. "Coleraine for Kitty justly proud"), but prefers the local product ("But the girls that take the shine off both Are the girls that come from Limavady"). He asks others to praise it also
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Sam Henry collection)
KEYWORDS: home nonballad
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H706, p. 180, "Ta Ra, Limavady" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #8007
File: HHH706
Ta-Ra-Ra Boom De Ay (II)
DESCRIPTION: Descriptions of how various people came to be in their present psychological and sexual states, to the tune of "Ta-ra-ra Boom-der-e"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950
KEYWORDS: bawdy sex
FOUND IN: US(MW,NE,SW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 271-273, "Ta-Ra-Ra Boom De Ay" (4 texts, 1 tune)
File: EM271

Ta-ra-ra Boom-der-e
DESCRIPTION: The words often consist of floating lyrics. The chorus, "Ta-ra-ra(-ra) Boom-de-ay," is diagnostic. Sayers' lyrics: "A sweet Tuxedo girl I see, Queen of swell society, Fond of fun as fond can be, When it's on the strict Q.T...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1888
KEYWORDS: nonballad nonsense
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,So)
REFERENCES (8 citations):
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolksongsOfTheCatskills 144, "Ta-ra-ra-ra Boom, Hurray!" (1 text plus many fragments, 2 tunes)
Spaeth-ReadEmAndWeep, pp. 144-146, "Ta-ra-ra Boom-der-e" (1 fragmentary text)
Gilbert-LostChords, pp. 206-208, "Ta-ra-ra-boom-der-e" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 25, "Ta-Ra-Ra Boom-Der-E" (1 text)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, pp. 570-571+, "Ta-Ra-Ra boom-Der-E"
ADDITIONAL: Robert A. Fremont, editor, _Favorite Songs of the Nineties_, Dover Publications, 1973, pp. 2999-301, "Ta! Ra! Ra! Boom De Ay!" (1 text, 1 tune, an early but undated sheet music edition)
Aline Waites & Robin Hunter, _The Illustrated Victorian Songbook_, Michael Joseph Ltd., 1984, pp. 103-106, "Ta-Ra-Ra-Boom-De-Ay!" (1 text, 1 tune, plus a color print of an early sheet music cover)
Reginald Nettel, _Seven Centuries of Popular Song_, Phoenix House, 1956, pp. 209-210, "(no title)" (1 text)
Roud #V15841?
RECORDINGS:
Land Norris, "Bum Delay" (OKeh 45058, 1926)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I'm the Man that Wrote Ta-ra-ra Boom-de-ay"
cf. "Will You Go Boom Today?" (tune)
SAME TUNE:
Ta Ra Ra Boom De Ay (We Have No School Today) (Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 102)
NOTES [291 words]: Cazden et al present a list of the various authors who have claimed this piece while denying credit to any of them. (They concede the form "Ta-ra-ra Boom-der-e" to Henry J. Sayers, 1890; published in 1891 by Willis Woodward; cf. Spaeth, _Read 'em and Weep_, pp. 144-146. Jon W. Finson, _The Voices That Are Gone: Themes in Nineteenth-Century American Popular Song_, Oxford University Press, 1994, p. 76, carefully states that the song is "usually credited to the [sic.] Henry J. Sayers, manager of the Thatcher, Primrose and West Minstrels.")
There was actually a lawsuit over the issue (Henry J. Sayers vs. Sigmund Spaeth et al, 1932). Fuld reports "Judge Robert P. Patterson later held that the music and words of the chorus were not original, but the first two verses were."
Randolph quotes Gilbert to the effect that the tune "is said to have originated in Babe Connors' famous St. Louis brothel" (!); Finson, pp. 76-77, says that the claim came from the court testimony of Theodor Metz.
Something very similar appears in a Strauss piece.
The uncertainty about the authorship resulted in the comic parody "I'm the Man that Wrote Ta-ra-ra Boom-de-ay."
Nettel, p. 209, says that "Lottie Collins first sang it in 1891, and had to keep giving encores until she was exhausted." Laura Ingalls Wilder, in her journal of her trip from South Dakota to Missouri, reported that even cowbells were playing this song. It was so popular (see Laura Ingalls Wilder, On the Way Home: The Diary of a Trip from South Dakota to Mansfield, Missouri, in 1894, Harper & Row, 1962, p. 70).
I saw a claim online that this is the most common tune for the "Lizzie Borden took an axe And gave her father forty whacks..." lyric, but have not seen supporting evidence. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: FSC144

Tacking Ship Off Shore

DESCRIPTION: In a storm the ship is driven toward "the lighthouse tall on Fire Island Head" but the skillful captain and crew avoid "a dangerous shoal" and "steady the helm to the open sea"

AUTHOR: Words: Walter F. Mitchell

EARLIEST DATE: 1932 (Creighton-NovaScotia)

KEYWORDS: sea ship storm sailor

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 147, "Tacking of a Full Rigged Ship Off Shore" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST CrNS147 (Partial)

Roud #1845

NOTES [73 words]: The author, according to Creighton-NovaScotia, is "a native of Nantucket Island"; perhaps the Fire Island lighthouse is the one on the Long Island shore of New York. - BS

The title "Tacking Ship Off Shore" does not seem to be found in tradition, but it appears to be the author's title. The poem seems to have been fairly popular; Granger's Index to Poetry cites five anthologies, mostly of the sentimental sort, containing the piece. - RBW

File: CrNS147

Taffy Was a Welshman (I)

DESCRIPTION: "Taffy was a Welshman, Taffy was a thief, Taffy came to my house And stole a piece of beef." Taffy and the singer engage in a campaign of theft against each other -- e.g. Taffy takes a bone; the singer finds it and beats Taffy with it

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1842 (Halliwell, according to Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes)

KEYWORDS: abuse food theft

FOUND IN: Britain

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 494, "Taffy was a Welshman, Taffy was a thief" (2 texts plus a reprint of sheet music from c. 1865)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #67, pp. 72-73, "(Taffy was a Welshman)"
Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel, p. 200, "Taffy Was a Welshman" (1 text)

DT, TFFYWLCH

Roud #19237

CROSS-REFERENCES:

cf. "Napper" (floating lyrics)
cf. "The Ayrshireman's Lilt" (theme: foreigners living nearby as thieves)

NOTES [175 words]: "Taffy" is an English twisting of the Welsh pronunciation of "David" (Daffyd), the patron saint of Wales.

The English of course had a habit of baiting the Welsh, especially on Saint David's day. And the analogy here is rather exact: When it came to a war of raids, the English -- who had the English law on their side -- could do more damage. Taffy could steal, but the Englishman could not only steal but beat Taffy.

Despite this obvious explanation for the rhyme, Jack-PopGoesTheWeasel offers us a complicated explanation linking Taffy with Amaethon, a Celtic agricultural deity.

It's not clear to me that this is a folk song, but the notes in Brown connect it with "Napper," which Taglioni

DESCRIPTION: "Her mother had a nice wee dog, she used to call it Tony, And every time I kissed the girl he bit my Tagglieownie"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1977 (IRClare01)

KEYWORDS: bawdy derivative nonballad dog

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tunney-StoneFiddle, p. 9, "Tagglieownie" (1 fragment)

Roud #3569

RECORDINGS:
Martin Reidy, "Tangaloni" (on IRClare01)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Taglioni Coat" (line pattern and some text) and references there

NOTES [259 words]: The current description is all of the Tunney-StoneFiddle fragment.

The following text is in the discussion of "As I Went Out Upon the Ice (Ag Dul amach ar an Leac Oighir dom)" at Andrew Kuntz's The Fiddler's Companion site.

As I went out upon the ice, [or "One day as I went out to skate"]
The ice being rough and stony,
The ice it broke and down I went,
And wet my Taglioni. [or "tanlee ownee"]
Tunney-StoneFiddle: "My mother said it wasn't a nice song...."

The pattern of the four-line verse fragments, but not the bawdiness, seems based on the eight-line verse broadside "Taglioni Coat".

Here is a verse that seems the original for the previous fragment:
One chilly day, not long ago,
I met a sad disaster,
When on the Serpentine to show,
Myself a skating master,
I circles cut, the ice gave way,
Transparent, but not stony,
It cracked, gave way, I tumbled,
And soaked my Taglioni.

but, in this case, it's clear from the context that the singer considers himself a fashion plate whose Taglioni coat is literally soaked (or maybe I'm being naive again; see the LONG DESCRIPTION at "Taglioni Coat").

Reidy's "The Tangaloni" on IRClare01 mixes the broadside eight-line verse form and story with the four-line verse verse form bawdy verses and adds a chorus. I have included it under both songs.

"ta-glio-ni \tal'yone\ n -s [after Filippo Taglioni 1871 Ital. ballet master]: an overcoat worn in the early 19th century." (source: Webster's Third New International Dictionary of the English Language Unabridged (1976)); Filippo Taglioni (1777-1871). - BS

File: RcTaglio

Taglioni Coat, The

DESCRIPTION: Singer left his vulgar cronies behind when he bought a Taglioni coat. His fortunes changed when the coat led him to a wealthy lady, marriage and privilege. Clothes make the man.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1856 (broadside, Harding B 14(168))

LONG DESCRIPTION: Singer used to be "shabby, low and mean" with vulgar cronies, but has put that behind him. Now, wearing a Taglioni coat, he is "known in all fashionable quarters" and admired by "London's fairest daughters" One day, ice skating, he falls into the Serpentine, soaking his coat. He is invited, by a lady with "lots of money" to go home with her, change his clothes and dry his coat. While drying his coat before her fire he proposes marriage, she accepts, they marry, and, among his advantages he gains "a flunkey, too, to curl my hair, And brush my Taglioni."

Moral: to marry well "don't sport a Blouse, or Mackintosh, But try a Taglioni"

KEYWORDS: courting marriage clothes humorous servant

FOUND IN: Ireland
Roud #3569
RECORDINGS:
Martin Reidy, "Tangaloni" (on IIRCleaf01)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 14(168), "Taglioni Coat" ("I once was shabby, low, and mean"), W. Jackson and Son (Birmingham), 1842-1855

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Taglioni" (line pattern and some text) and references there

cf. "Umbrella Courtship" (tune, per broadside Bodleian Harding B 14(168))

NOTES [53 words]: Broadside Harding B 14(168) is the basis for the description.
"ta-glio-ni \tal'yone\ n-s [after Filippo Taglioni 1871 Ital. ballet master]: an overcoat worn in the early 19th century." (source: Webster's Third New International Dictionary of the English Language Unabridged (1976)); Filippo Taglioni (1777-1871). - BS

File: RcTagCoa

Tail Toddle

DESCRIPTION: The singer's wife left and before she returned "Tammie gart [made] my tail toddle [totter]." Neither dead, nor sick, "when I'm weel, I step about, An Tammie ..." Wedding guests gave coins; the bride says "o'er little For to mend a broken doddle [penis]"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1796 (according to Farmer)
KEYWORDS: sex bawdy nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1716, "Tail Toddle" (2 texts)
MacColl-PersonalChoice, p. 21, "Tail Toddle" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, TAILTODL

ADDITIONAL: John Stephen Farmer, editor, Merry Songs and Ballads, Prior to the Year 1800 (1897 ("Digitized by Google")), Vol V, p. 253, "Tail Toddle"
Roud #11275

NOTES [90 words]: Greig/Duncan8 text count includes one bawdy verse on p. 402: "Lasses gar your tails toddle Spread your houghs [hips] lat in the dodle [penis] That'll gar your tails toddle." The translations are Greig/Duncan8's.

Farmer: "[b. 1796] [By Burns; from The Merry Muses of Caledonia (c.1800); tune, Chevalier's Muster-roll]" - BS

Interestingly, neither of my (supposedly) complete editions of Burns lists this song. The material in the "Merry Muses" is anonymous; I do not think Burns's authorship can be proved, although it seems reasonable. - RBW

Last updated in version 6.1

File: GrD81716

Tailor and Louse

DESCRIPTION: A tailor and louse live in a house. Spitefully, the tailor sews the louse into a button. The louse escapes, has misadventures in town and dies. His body is carried by six fleas. A bug tolls the bell to carry the louse's soul to Hell.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Reeves-TheEverlastingCircle)
KEYWORDS: burial death humorous bug clothes
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Tailor and the Sailor, The DESCRIPTION: The singer says she's sought by a tailor and a sailor. "I think I'll tak the sailor and let the tailor be." Tailors just sit and sew but sailors can turn a ship about and sail her. She'll wash his shirt and maybe they'll be married; or maybe not.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan1)
KEYWORDS: love nonballad sailor
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan1 57, "The Tailor and the Sailor" (2 texts)
Roud #5810
File: GrD1057

Tailor Ban, The

DESCRIPTION: Singer and tailor Ban are drinking buddies often mistaken for one another. They plan "a mad trip to Kilgarvin"; singer will marry Miss Foley but their alikeness will allow them some freedom. But if there's a child "let nobody ask who's the father"

AUTHOR: Sean O Tuama (Johnny Nora Aodha) (source: OCanainn-SongsOfCork)
EARLIEST DATE: 1943 (OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin)
KEYWORDS: marriage disguise drink humorous
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (2 citations):
OCanainn-SongsOfCork, pp. 76-77,123, "The Tailor Ban" (1 text, 1 tune)
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 177, "The Tailor Bawn" (1 text)
File: OCan976

Tailor Fell Through the Bed, The

DESCRIPTION: [C:] Dreaming of caulking his cloth, [O:] "the tailor fell through the bed, thimbles and a." [B:] The lassie "kend that a tailor could do her nae ill." [O:] She asks for silver. [B:] She's lying alone and would be happy to see him again.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1825 (Cunningham)
KEYWORDS: sex money humorous
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig/Duncan8 1843, "The Tailor Fell Through the Bed" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: James Johnson, Editor, _The Scots Musical Museum_ [1853 edition], volume III, #212, p. 221, "The Taylor fell thro' the bed, &c." (1 text, 1 tune)
ST GrD81843 (Partial)
Roud #13597
Tailor He's Been Seekin' Me, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer has been courted by a tailor and a sailor "but I think I'll tak' the ploughman lad and lat the rest gang free." A tailor can't work at night if he has no candle but a plowman can "water his steeds" any time

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1909 (Greig/Duncan6)
KEYWORDS: courting rejection nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-Duncan6 1126, "The Tailor He's Been Seekin' Me" (1 fragment)
Roud #6833
CROSS-REFERENCES:
"Yon Bonnie Lad" (theme) and references there

Tailor, The

DESCRIPTION: A tailor comes to mend clothes. The girl of the house falls asleep and the tailor rapes her. She would have her maidenhead returned. He asks how that should be. She says "jist the way that it was ta'en." He lays her down and "gien her't owre, and owre"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1776 (Herd)
KEYWORDS: rape sex virginity clothes
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-Duncan7 1438, "Daffin Doon Dilly" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Roud #7154
CROSS-REFERENCES:
"The Country Girl (The Fair Maid of the West)" (theme of regaining maidenhead)
"The Widow of Westmoreland's Daughter" (theme of regaining maidenhead)

Tak It, Man, Tak It (I)

DESCRIPTION: "When I was a miller in Fife, Losh, I thought that the sound o' the happener, said, 'Tak hame a wee flow to your wife.'" The singer lives his life, and constantly hears the temptation, upon seeing an item (especially drink) to "Tak it, man, tak it."

AUTHOR: David Webster (1787-1837) (source: Whitelaw)

EARLIEST DATE: 1835 (Webster "small vol. of poems," according to Whitelaw)

KEYWORDS: drink humorous theft

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 15-18, "Tak It, Man, Tak It" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #41, p. 2, "Tak' It, Man, Tak' It" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 579, "Take it, Man, Tak It" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Whitelaw-BookOfScottishSong, pp. 248-249, "Tak' It, Man, Tak It"

DT, TAKITMAN

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.14(13), "The Miller of Fife" ("When I was a miller in Fife"), R. McIntosh (Glasgow), 1860-1874; also Harding B 26(432), "Miller o' Fife"; Firth b.25(287), 2806 c.14(142), "Tak It, Man, Tak It"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Brose and Butter" (tune, per Whitelaw and broadside Bodleian 2806 c.14(142))
cf. "Take It, Bob" (tune)

SAME TUNE:
Take It, Bob (File: GrD3578)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
The Mill and the Kiln

NOTES [15 words]: Roud links this song with "The Working Chap" as found in Ord, etc. I flatly don't see it. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.2

File: FVS015

Tak It, Man, Tak It (II)

DESCRIPTION: "Langsyne, fine I mind, little mair than a lad, I wrocht wi' John Jackson at Inkaboot Mill," where Jackson's daughter teases him and flirts. Asked for a kiss, she rejects him -- but at last he steals one, and in the end they are happily married AUTHOR: Walter Towers?

EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (Ord-BothySongsAndBallads)

KEYWORDS: courting marriage

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ord-BothySongsAndBallads, p. 54-56, "Tak It, Man, Tak It" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #5590

NOTES [47 words]: Apart from the title line and the notion of temptation, this has nothing in common with "Tak It, Man, Tak It (I)" -- but I rather suspect one inspired the other. I'm not sure which way the dependence went; both have listed authors. This is clearly the less popular of the two. - RBW

File: Ord054

Tak' Anither Gill

DESCRIPTION: "Cattle noo are very low, and corn winna sell, But we'll aye keep oor spirits up and tak' another gill." We'll kiss the lasses; they won't go home "and tell their auld mither"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: farming drink hardtimes nonballad courting

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan3 564, "Tak' Anither Gill" (1 text)

Roud #6035

File: GrD3564
Tak' Back the Ring, Dear Jamie

DESCRIPTION: The singer says "I canna leave my mammie, She's been sae kind to me." The singer's mother is old and frail, her eyes are dim "And seen they'll close and a'." The singer promised her father to take care of mother. If Jamie can't wait, they cannot marry.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan4)

KEYWORDS: age marriage nonballad mother

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan4 901, "Tak' Back the Ring, Dear Jamie" (2 texts, 1 tune)

Roud #6144

NOTES [47 words]: Greig/Duncan4 cites a reference to John Cameron's Lyric Gems of Scotland, not always an indication that the song is the same. However, since there is no ring in the Greig/Duncan4 texts, and no other comment explaining the title, I assume there is a ring in the Lyric Gems text. - BS

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD901

Take a Drink on Me

DESCRIPTION: Chorus "Take a drink on me/All you rounders, take a drink on me...." Verses float: "What did you do with that gun in your hand You give it to a rounder and he shot a good man", "If you keep on stalling, you'll make me think... your daddy was a monkey..."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Charlie Poole)

LONG DESCRIPTION: Floating verses, linked by chorus "Take a drink on me/All you rounders, take a drink on me/Oh, Lord, honey take a drink on me." Verses include "What did you do with that gun in your hand/You give it to a rounder and he shot a good man", "If you keep on stalling, you'll make me think/That your daddy was a monkey and your mama was an ape"; "You see that gal with a hobble on/She's good looking just as sure as you're born"

KEYWORDS: crime drink nonballad floatingverses

FOUND IN: US(SE)

REFERENCES (6 citations):
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, pp. 156-157, "Take a Drink on Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
Rorrer-RamblingBlues-LifeAndSongsOfCharliePoole, p. 77, "Take a Drink on Me" (1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, p. 289, "Take a Drink on Me" (1 text)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 239, (no title) (1 fragment, in which the listener is urged to "take a one on me!"); it seems more likely that it's this than "take a whiff")
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 28, "Take A Whiff On Me" (1 text); p. 235, "Take A Drink On Me" (2 texts)

DT, DRNKONME*

Roud #10062

RECORDINGS:
New Lost City Ramblers, "Take a Drink on Me" (on NLCR01)
Charlie Poole and the North Carolina Ramblers, "Take a Drink on Me" (Columbia 15193-D, 1927; on CPoole01, CPoole05)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Take a Whiff on Me" (tune, words)
cf. "Coney Isle" (lyrics)

SAME TUNE:
Take Your Leg Off Mine (listed by Rorrer-RamblingBlues-LifeAndSongsOfCharliePoole, p. 77, as a bawdy version of the above)

NOTES [88 words]: This is a problem in classification. On the one hand, it's clearly a version of "Take a Whiff on Me." On the other, none of the verses of the latter show up in this song. So I call them siblings but, since we're being splitters here, different songs.

[The version on page 28 of the Folksinger's Wordbook], although it uses the "whiff" chorus, consists entirely of floating verses -- none of them the same as the verses in the Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook version, but many shared with common fiddle tunes. - PJS
Take a Stand
DESCRIPTION: Verse format: (some-line(3x) "If I never never meet you any more" same-line(3x) "I will meet you on Canaan's shore"). Verse lines include "Live the life," "Take a stand," "Pray for me," "Keep the faith," "Shake my hand"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (StuffDreams1)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious death
FOUND IN:
Roud #16317
RECORDINGS:
Blind Willie Johnson, "Take Your Stand" (Columbia 14624-D, 1929)
Rev. R.L. Wightman with Lottie Kimbrough and Congregation, "Live the Life" (on StuffDreams1)
NOTES [20 words]: Blind Willie Johnson's track has "I will meet you on the Kingdom's door" instead of "I will meet you on Canaan's shore." - BS
Last updated in version 5.2
File: RcTaASta

Take a Whiff on Me
DESCRIPTION: The singer "Walked up Ellum and... come down Main / Tryin' to bum a nickel, just to buy cocaine / Ho, ho, honey take a whiff on me." The singer devotes considerable energy to seeking women and drugs, with slight success and open disregard for the risks
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1928 (recording, Grant Brothers)
KEYWORDS: drugs sex
FOUND IN: US(Ap,MA,So)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Randolph/Legman-RollMeInYourArms I, pp. 130-132, "Take a Whiff on Me" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 89, "Take a Whiff on Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 186-188, "Honey, Take a Whiff on Me" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 277, "Oh, Ho, Baby, Take a One On Me!" (1 text, 1 tune)
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, p. 157, "Hop Song" (1 text)
DT, WHIFFME
Roud #10062
RECORDINGS:
Anonymous singer, "Take A Whiff On Me" (on Unexp1)
Freeny's Barn Dance Band, "Croquet Habits" (OKeh 45524, 1931; rec. 1930; on StuffDreams1)
Grant Brothers & Their Music, "Tell It to Me" Grant Brothers & Their Music, "Tell It to Me" (Columbia 15322-D, 1928; on RoughWays1, GoodForWhatAilsYou)
Memphis Jug Band, "Cocaine Habit Blues" (Victor V-38620, 1930)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Take a Drink on Me" (tune, words)
cf. "Tom Cat" (lyrics, form)
cf. "Cocaine Blues (I)" (subject) and references there NOTES [105 words]: "Ellum" ("Elem," "Deep Elem") refers to Elm Street in Dallas, the heart of that city's red light district. The various versions of this song, naturally, differ considerably in local color.
- RBW
The recording "Tell It to Me" presents another classification problem; also known as "Let the Cocaine Be," it has a chorus "Tell it to me, tell it to me/Drink corn likker, let the cocaine be" that other "Take a Whiff on Me" songs do not, and sometimes different verses. I'm joining them primarily because many versions of "Tell It to Me" include the "Honey, take a whiff on me" refrain, but a case could also be made for splitting. - PJS
Last updated in version 4.2
File: RL130
Take Away the Whisky

DESCRIPTION: "Take away the whisky, coffee and the tea; Cold water is the drink for me. Our father Adam and our mother Eve They had no reason to believe That tea was for a medicine and coffee for a cold, And it appears that they loved for more than 900 years."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1947 (Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah)
KEYWORDS: religious drink
FOUND IN: US(Ro)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #214, "Take Away the Whisky" (1 short text)
Roud #10897

NOTES [77 words]: In Genesis 5:5, it is said that Adam lived to the age of 930. However, Eve's age at her death is never stated -- indeed, Eve is not mentioned at all in Genesis 5, from the "P" source, and the "J" source, which does talk about Eve, has no information about either Eve's or Adam's lifespans, other than that they were doomed to die. Thus, even if we take the Bible literally, we have no clue whatsoever about how long Adam and Eve were involved with each other. - RBW

Last updated in version 3.8
File: Hubb214

Take Back the Engagement Ring

DESCRIPTION: "One moonlight night a year ago," two lovers courted. He proposes. She later declares, "Take back the ring you gave me, Take it back, Jack, I pray. Wearing it would deprave me, More than I am today. To make me your wife would wrong you...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Finger-FrontierBallads)
KEYWORDS: courting ring rejection
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Finger-FrontierBallads, p. 7, "Take Back the Engagement Ring" (1 excerpt)
Roud #15951
File: Fing007

Take Back Your Gold

DESCRIPTION: The singer sees a man and a woman. She is begging him to be honorable and marry her; he refuses. He is going to be married to another. He offers money to soothe her. She says, "Take back your gold, for gold can never buy me."

AUTHOR: Monroe H. Rosenfeld & Louis W. Pritzkow
EARLIEST DATE: 1897 (sheet music by Jos. W. Stern & Co.)
KEYWORDS: courting marriage betrayal money gold
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Randolph 820, "Take Back Your Gold" (1 text)
Spaeth-ReadEmAndWeep, pp. 183-184, "Take Back Your Gold" (1 text, 1 tune)
Geller-FamousSongsAndTheirStories, pp. 144-149, "Take Back Your Gold" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Robert A. Fremont, editor, Favorite Songs of the Nineties, Dover Publications, 1973, pp. 294-298, "Take Back Your Gold" (1 text, 1 tune, the 1897 sheet music)
Roud #7427
RECORDINGS:
Walter Morris, "Take Back Your Gold" (Columbia 15101-D, 1926)
NOTES [16 words]: For background on Monroe H. Rosenfeld, see the notes to "Those Wedding Bells Shall Not Ring Out!"

Last updated in version 4.2
File: R820
Take It, Bob

DESCRIPTION: The singer is Bob Bell, a miller fond of drink. He tries often to quit drinking but his mill seems to say "Take it Bob, take it, it's better than tea" He dreams he is dead but hears the mill say he should take the brandy meant for the mourners.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan3)
KEYWORDS: drink humorous nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #8, p. 2, "Take It Bob" (1 fragment)
Greig/Duncan3 578, "Take It, Bob" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6041
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Tak It, Man, Tak It (I)" (tune and the temptation theme)
File: GrD3578

Take Me Back to Dear Old Blighty

DESCRIPTION: "Carry me back to dear old Blighty, Put me on the train to London town. Take me over there, Drop me anywhere, Liverpool, Leeds, or Manchester, I don't care. I should like to see my best girl... Blighty is the place for me."

AUTHOR: Arthur J. Mills, Fred Godfrey, and Bennett Scott (source: Wikipedia)
KEYWORDS: home war soldier travel
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brophy/Partridge-TommiesSongsAndSlang, p. 217, "(no title)" (1 text)
File: BrPa217B

Take Me Back to Old Montana

DESCRIPTION: "Take me back to 'Old Montana," where there's lots of room and air... Where at at night th emagpies twitter, And the injun fights were fit. The singer mentions the rivers makiong green patches in the Bad Lands. The singer hopes to die in Montana

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1937 (Powder River Jack & Kitty Lee Songbook)
KEYWORDS: home river Indians(Am.) cowboy
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia2, pp 568-569, "Take Me Back to Old Montana" (1 text plus several variants)
ADDITIONAL: Powder River Jack and Kitty Lee's _Songs of the Range: Cowboy Wails of Cattle Trails_, Chart Music, 1937, pp. 4-5, "Powder River, Ler 'er Buck" (1 text, 1 tune)
File: PRJ016

Take Me Back to the Cumberland Mountains

DESCRIPTION: "Take me back to the Cumberland Mountains, I don't like Lynchburg any more; I want to go home to our old log cabin...." The singer looks back to seeing Pap, Mammy, Uncle Mose, old dog Tray, and the various farm animals

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1939 (Thomas)
KEYWORDS: home family return father mother animal
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thomas-BalladMakingInMountainsOfKentucky, pp. 126-127, "(no title)" (1 text)
NOTES [65 words]: Thomas seems to have thought this was "Uncle Noah Bentley's Coon Hunting Song," but it has nothing to do with raccoons or hunting. It was said to have "the favorance of 'Sourwood Mountain,’ but with no tune, this cannot be proved. The item has all sorts of references to other songs (e.g. "old dog Tray"), but it appears to be a matter of allusion rather than common floating material. - RBW

Take Me Down the Harbour
DESCRIPTION: "Take me down the Harbour on a Sunday afternoon, To Manly Beach or Watson’s Bay Or round to Coogee for a day... Good old Harbour, Sydney Town, They can't beat you." The singer enjoys his girl and sailing in Sydney Harbour
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1954
KEYWORDS: Australia nonballad
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 35-36, "Take Me Down the Harbour" (1 text, 1 tune)
NOTES [15 words]: Said to have been a popular music hall song in the early twentieth century in Australia. - RBW

Take Me to the Water
DESCRIPTION: "Take me to the water (x3) to be baptized." "None but the righteous (x3) shall see God." "I love Jesus (x3), yes I do." "He's my savior (x3), yes he is."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1997 (Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad Jesus
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warren-EveryTimeIFeelTheSpirit, pp. 91-92, "Take Me to the Water" (1 text, 1 tune)

Take Me Up Tenderly
DESCRIPTION: "Take me up tenderly, Show me the big city, Far from the mountains...." The singer rejects the rain and snow and mountains and says he will work in his mother's garden. "Thus sang the tramping man, Rattling his frying pan...."
AUTHOR: Words: H. W. Gretton
EARLIEST DATE: c. 1938, according to Cleveland-NZ-GreatNewZealandSongbook
KEYWORDS: rambling home work gardening
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cleveland-NZ-GreatNewZealandSongbook, pp. 14-16, "Take Me Up Tenderly" (1 text, 1 tune)

Take My Tip, Pack Your Grip
DESCRIPTION: "Take my tip, pack your grip, Get right off this bleeding ship, Bye bye Loch Lomond. Dump my gear upon the quay, Then no more you'll see of me.... I will leave the Jaunty far behind me... So take my tip... Get right off this bleeding ship"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1987 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: navy farewell derivative
FOUND IN: Britain
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 41, "Take My Tip, Pack Your Grip" (1 text, tune referenced)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Bye, Bye, Blackbird" (tune)
Take This Hammer

DESCRIPTION: The singer tells a (fellow prisoner?) to take his hammer to the captain; the singer is running away. The hammer (which killed John Henry) will never kill him. The versions show considerable variations

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Jekyll-JamaicanSongAndStory); "Take This Hammer": 1915 (collected by Newman Ivey White); "Nine Pound Hammer" variant: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag; recording, Al Hopkins & his Buckle Busters)

KEYWORDS: prisoner work escape nonballad worksong

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE) West Indies(Jamaica)

REFERENCES (33 citations):
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 571-582, "Nine Pound Hammer" (1 text, 1 tune)
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 383, "John Henry" (6 texts, but the last three belong with this song)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, p. 376, "Ever Since Uncle John Henry Been Dead" (1 text, 1 tune, which I believe belongs here although the text is too short to be sure); 457-458, "My Old Hammah" (1 text, 1 tune)
Curtis-Burlin-NegroFolkSongs-TheHamptonSeries (I), pp. 140-148, "Hammerin' Song" (1 text with variants, 1 tune with variants)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 280, "John Henry" (2 texts plus 5 fragments, 1 excerpt, and mention of 1 more, but it appears that fragments "B," "D," "E," and "G" go here)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 241, "Some of These Days and It Won't Be Long" (1 text plus a fragment; the "A" text shows hints of incorporating another ballad); also 240, "I Been a Miner" (1 4-line fragment, consisting of the stanza "I been a miner most of my life" and the stanza, "Big John Henry (x3) poor boy blind")
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 270, "John Henry" (7 excerpts, 7 tunes, of which "A," "A(1)," and perhaps "C" appear to be "John Henry"; "E," "G," and "J" appear to be "Take This Hammer," and "H" appears to be "Swannanoa Tunnel")
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 240; "I Been a Miner"; 241, "Some of These Days, And It Won't Be Long" (2 tunes plus text excerpts)
Bush-FSofCentralWestVirginiaVol1, pp. 48-49, "Roll On, Buddy" (1 text, 1 tune)
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 231, "Hank! Hah" (1 fragment, probably this) McNeil-SouthernMountainFolksong, pp. 160-164, "Roll On, John, Poor Rail Road Boys" (4 texts, 2 tunes, of which at least the first "Roll On, John" text goes here; the rest are filed with "Poor Rail Road Boys")
Chappell-FolkSongsOfRoanokeAndTheAlbermarle 104, "The John Henry Hammer Song" (1 short and 1 very long text, 1 tune; the short text might be anything and the long, though it ends with these verses, includes much floating material about railroad construction)
Rosenbaum-FolkVisionsAndVoices, pp. 122-123, "Old John Henry Died on the Mountain" (1 text, 1 tune, listed by Roud as an independent song, #16268, but giving every evidence of being a version of this) Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 219, (no title) (1 short texts; neither has the "take this hammer" line, but they fit metrically and mention the hammer that killed John Henry); p. 220, "Work-song" (1 short text, 1 tune, at least related to this); p. 220, "Nine-Pound Hammer" (1 short text); p. 220, "Work-song" (1 short text, with a verse of this song although it also mentions shooting Ida in the leg)

Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeaslands, p. 223, ("This is the hammer that kill John Henry")
(1 text)

Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, p. 186, "Rocks In De Mountens" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-FolkSongUSA 93, "Take This Hammer" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 380-381, "Take This Hammer" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 145, "Roll On, Buddy"; 297, "East Colorado Blues" (2 texts, 2 tunes -- both, especially the former, folk processed and expanded and perhaps derived in part from other songs.)
Lomax/Lomax-OurSingingCountry, pp. 264-266, "Oh, Roll On, Babe" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 237-240, "Take This Hammer" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Green-OnlyAMiner-RecordedCoalMiningSongs, p. 329-331, "Nine Pound Hammer" (7 texts, 2 tunes)

Dunson/Raim/Asch-AnthologyOfAmericanFolkMusic, p. 100, "Spike Driver Blues" (1 text, 1 tune); p. 112, "Nine Pound Hammer" (1 text, 1 tune)
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, pp. 94-95, "Nine-Pound Hammer" (1 text, 1 tune)

Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, p. 61, "Water Boy" (1 text)
Botkin-TreasuryOfAmericanFolklore, p. 913, "Take This Hammer" (1 text, 1 tune)
Courlander-NegroFolkMusic, pp. 137-138, "(John Henry)" (1 text, with a fragment of the plot of "John Henry" but many lyrics from "Take This Hammer"); pp. 285-286, "John Henry (Version III)" (1 text, 1 tune)

Jekyll-JamaicanSongAndStory 184, ("Them Gar'n Town people them call me follow line") (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 234-235, "Spike Driver Blues" (1 text, filed with three texts of "John Henry"); also pp. 327-328, "John Henry," "This Old Hammer" (2 texts)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 69, "Take This Hammer" (1 text); p. 124, "Nine Pound Hammer" (1 text)

DT, NINEPND* TAKEHAMR*

ADDITIONAL: Moses Asch and Alan Lomax, Editors, _The Leadbelly Songbook_, Oak, 1962, p. 45, "Take This Hammer" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4299 and 6686 and 16845

RECORDINGS:
Frank Blevins & his Tar Heel Rattlers, "Nine Pound Hammer" (Columbia 15280-D, 1928; on LostProv1)
Emmett Brand, "Take This Hammer" (on MuSouth06)
Carolina Tar Heels, "Roll On, Boys" (Victor V-40024, 1929; rec. 1928) [I include this here for want of a better place; its chorus is from "Nine Pound Hammer/Roll On, Buddy," but the verses are unrelated floaters]
Palmer Crisp, "Roll On, John" (on Crisp01)
Delmore Bros. "Take It to the Captain" (King 718, 1948)
Roscoe Holcomb, "Roll On, Buddy" (on Holcomb2, HolcombCD1)
Al Hopkins & his Buckle Busters, "Nine Pound Hammer" (Brunswick 177, 1927)
Mississippi John Hurt, "Spike Driver Blues" (OKeh 8692, 1929; rec. 1928; on AAFM3, BefBlues3, MJH01, MJH02); "Spike Driver (John Henry)" (on MJHurt05)
Aunt Molly Jackson, "Roll On Buddy" (AFS 2548 B, 1939; on LC61)
Buffalo Johnson, "Nine Pound Hammer" (Rich-R-Tone 1023, 1952)
Buell Kazee, "Roll On John" (Brunswick 144, 1927) [a "Nine Pound Hammer" version]
Monroe Brothers, "Nine Pound Hammer Is Too Heavy" (Bluebird B-6422, 1936)
Paul Robeson, "Water Boy" (Victor 19824, 1925; HMV [UK] B-8103, 1934)
South Carolina ditch diggers, "Ten Pound Hammer" (on LomaxCD1700)
Horace Sprott, "Take This Hammer" (on MuSouth04)

Ernest Stoneman & Eddie Stoneman, "Nine Pound Hammer" (Vocalion 02655, 1934)
Sweet Brothers, "I Got a Bulldog" (1928; on TimesAint04)
Dan Tate, "Muck on my Heel" (fragment of "Roll On, Buddy" variant) (on OldTrad2, FarMtns1)
Henry Grady Terrell, "Old John Henry Died on the Mountain" (on FolkVisions2, ClassRR)
Art Thieme, "Railroad Blues and Nine Pound Hammer" [medley] (on Thieme01)
Merle Travis, "Nine Pound Hammer" (Capitol 48000, 1947; on 78 album "Folk Songs of the Hills", Capitol AD 50; rec. 1946)
Doc Watson, "Spike-Driver Blues" (on RitchieWatson1, RitchiteWatsonCD1)
Tex Williams, "Nine Pound Hammer" (Decca 29764, 1955)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Jumpin' Judy" (lyrics)
cf. "Walking Boss" (lyrics)
cf. "Swannanoah Tunnel" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Drivin' Steel" (theme, lyrics)
cf. "Don't You Hear My Hammer Ringing" (lyrics)
cf. "Old Rattler" (lyrics)
cf. "Hammer Ring"
cf. "If I Had the Gov'nor" (theme)
cf. "Pickaxe Too Heavy" (theme)
cf. "Roll On, Boys" (lyrics, theme)
cf. "My Captain Paid Me Forty-one Dolars and a Quarter" (form, theme, lyrics)
cf. "Poor Rail Road Boys" (lyrics)

NOTES [597 words]: The connection between this song and "Swannanoa Tunnel" is very strong; there are so many intermediate versions that we can hardly draw a clear distinction. But the extreme versions are sufficiently different that I have listed them separately. - RBW

Paul Stamler suggests that "Take This Hammer" and "Nine Pound Hammer" can be distinguished by the chorus (found in the latter) "Roll on buddy/Don't you roll so slow/How can I roll/When the wheels won't go." (Which is further modified in the Lomax collection to "Oh, roll on, babe, don't roll so slow, When the sun goes down, you'll roll no more"; this version is mostly about love, courting, and rejection and has only the slighted railroad elements.)

Paul adds, "According to the liner notes on LC61, the cited 78s (by Charlie Bowman and Al Hopkins) are the first recorded under the names 'Roll On, Buddy' and 'Nine Pound Hammer,' indicating the variant existed when these records were published. The Aunt Molly Jackson field recording dates from 1939. So I think we've established the variant's presence in tradition as early as the late 1920s. I think it's time to split 'em, with cross-referencing notes."

He's probably right. Sadly, we now have four references I can no longer check. So they remain lumped until I can find a way to get those books back. - RBW

Unfortunately, the liner notes to LC61 misled me. While it's true that the title "Roll On, Buddy" was first used by Charlie Bowman & his Brothers, his recording (placed here in earlier versions of the Index) wasn't this song. Instead, it was the one we have indexed as "Roll On, Buddy (II) [Roll On, Buddy, Roll On]." Sorry.

We can go further: Archie Green interviewed Charlie Bowman of Al Hopkins & his Buckle Busters, who stated that he and Al Hopkins had put together the "Roll On Buddy" variant from traditional fragments during their 1927 recording session, and the song was in fact copyrighted in their name. Bowman stated that he'd learned many of the fragments from African-American railroad workers in 1903-1905. - PJS

Norm Cohen has an extensive discussion, based on Archie Green's examination in Only a Miner. They note two basic elements: The "Take this hammer" stanzas, in non-rhyming couplets, and the "roll on buddy" verses, which do rhyme. They therefore suspect that Hopkins was the source of the combination. The problem is simply too great to fully explicate here; I can only recommend the discussions in Green and Cohen. - RBW

I place Robeson's "Water Boy" here for want of a better place. It contains several floating verses from this song (e.g., "There ain't no hammer that's on this mountain/That rings like mine..."). - PJS

Jekyll-JamaicanSongAndStory's tune is close to the commonly sung tune for "Take This Hammer". His lyrics are: "Them Gar'n Town people them call me follow line" (3x), "Somebody dying here ev'ry day"; "A ten pound order him kill me pardner" (3x), "Somebody dying here ev'ry day"; "Den number nine tunnel I would not work de" (3x), "Somebody dying here ev'ry day." Jekyll's explanation is interesting, but, keep in mind that he often seems not to know that his songs have U.S. analogs: "An incident, or perhaps it were better to say an accident, in the making of the road to Newcastle. A man who undertook a piece of contract work for 10 pounds was killed by a falling stone. The so-called tunnels are cuttings. Number nine had a very bad reputation."

In regard to Jekyll's Jamaican version, with the tag line, "Somebody dying here ev'ry day," see Edward's Bahamas hymn indexed here as "Somebody's Dying Every Day." - BS

Last updated in version 6.1

File: FR383
Take Yo Feet Out de Sand
DESCRIPTION: "Take you feet out de sand (x2), An' stick 'em in de mud."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama)
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 145, "Take Yo Feet Out de Sand" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #16300
File: Arn145A

Take Your Fingers Off It
DESCRIPTION: "Take your (fingers/hands) off it, and don't you dare touch it, You know it don't belong to you." Various people try to keep others away from their sexual partners. One complains of "a house full of children and none of them mine."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1973
KEYWORDS: sex adultery betrayal
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 80, "Take Your Fingers Off It" (1 text)
DT, FINGROFF
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Salty Dog"
File: FSWB080

Take Your Lover in the Ring
DESCRIPTION: "My old mistress promised me, Before she died she would set me free, Take your lover in the ring, I don't care (x2)." "Now she's dead... I hope the devil will burn her well. Take your lover.... " "It's a golden ring." "It's a silver ring."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (RIng Games of American Children, according to Coffin & Cohen)
KEYWORDS: playparty nonballad slave freedom ring
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 225, "Take your Lover in the Ring" (1 text)
ADDITIONAL: Tristram P. Coffin and Hennig Cohen, _Folklore in America: Tales, Songs, Superstitions, Proverbs, Riddles, Games, Folk Drama and Folk Festivals_, Doubleday, 1966, p. 183, "Take Your Lover in the Ring" (1 text)
Roud #18170
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "My Old Missus Promised Me" (floating lyrics)
File: CoCo183B

Take Your Time
DESCRIPTION: "Honey Baby, take your time, Please don't break this leg of mine. Don't like, an' I ain't goin' to have it no more." About a difficult family meal (?): Mama picks on Sam; Sister is out of control (doing the twist); the singer gets in trouble in town
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1944 (Wheeler)
KEYWORDS: food family bawdy
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Wheeler-SteamboatinDays, pp. 97-98, "Take Yo' Time" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #10036
Taking Gair In the Night

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you good people, come listen you might. It's only a ditty I'm going to write,... It's all about taking your gair [=gear -- the trawls used in capelin fishing] in the night." Song lists the fishermen of Penguin Island, their boats and hardships.

AUTHOR: Jerry Fudge ?

EARLIEST DATE: 1928

KEYWORDS: fishing home work sea ship shore

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf,Ont)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Fowke/MacMillan-PenguinBookOfCanadianFolkSongs 18, "Taking Gair in the Night" (1 text, 1 tune)
Peacock, pp. 145-146, "Taking Back Gear in the Night" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lehr/Best-ComeAndIWillSingYou 105, "Taking Gear in the Night" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fowke-TraditionalSingersAndSongsFromOntario 59, "Taking Gair in the Night" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #2327

ALTERNATE TITLES:
Gerry Fudge

File: FowM018

Taking His Chance

DESCRIPTION: Bushranger Jack Dean comes to the door of the inn and dances with May Carney. Although all know he is an outlaw, the bushmen do not betray him. But at last someone notifies the police. Dean is shot and killed as he prepares to flee

AUTHOR: Henry Lawson (1867-1922)

EARLIEST DATE: 1955 (Meredith/Tritton-DukeOfTheOutback)

KEYWORDS: outlaw death police Australia

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 270-271, "Taking His Chance" (1 text, 1 tune)
Meredith/Tritton-DukeOfTheOutback, pp. 77-78, "Taking His Chance" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #22627

File: MA270

Tale of the Trail, A

DESCRIPTION: "It ain't so far from right to wrong, The trail ain't hard to lose. There's times I'd almost give my horse To know which one to choose." The poet admits the difficulty of telling which is which, and so promises to help those who have gone astray

AUTHOR: James W. Foley

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Foley, "Tales of the Trail")

KEYWORDS: cowboy nonballad recitation

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 41, "A Tale of the Trail" (1 text)

File: 0hr041

Talk About Jesus

DESCRIPTION: "Talk about Jesus -- he has blessed my soul, And he is gone. Must Jesus bear the cross alone? For there's a cross for everyone And... for me." "I heard the voice of Jesus saying, Come unto me and rest." "'Tis Jesus Christ I want to hear...."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Brown)
KEYWORDS: religious Jesus nonballad
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 639, "Talk About Jesus" (1 text)
Roud #11935
File: Br3639

Talkin' 'Bout a Good Time

DESCRIPTION: Alternate lines are a chorus, "We gonna have a good time." The hymn leader sings "Good time, a good time." "Singing/praying/ for a good time." "Talkin' bout a good time." "We gonna have a time."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1966 (Carawan/Carawan-AintYouGotARight)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Carawan/Carawan-AintYouGotARight, p. 117, "Talkin' 'Bout a Good Time" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #16307
RECORDINGS:
Benjamin Bligen and the Moving Star Hall congregation, "Talking 'Bout a Good Time"
(BeenStorm1)
NOTES [69 words]: The BeenStorm1 liner notes do not list singers for each song. The credit here is from Carawan/Carawan-AintYouGotARight, which is the same text. The current description is based on the Carawan/Carawan-AintYouGotARight/BeenStorm1 text. Arnold reports a different hymn with a similar same title (Byron Arnold, Folksongs of Alabama (Birmingham: University of Alabama Press, 1950),p. 161, "We Gonna Have a Good Time"). - BS
Last updated in version 4.0
File: CarCa117

Talking Blues

DESCRIPTION: "If you want to get to Heaven let me tell you what to do, Gotta grease your feet in mutton stew...." The singer boasts of the ways he avoids work and easily acquires food, sex, etc. Many of the verses float
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (Scarborough)
KEYWORDS: work nonsense animal bird nonballad courting humorous floatingverses
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (9 citations):
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 444, "If You Want to Go to Heaven" (1 fragment, apparently this piece)
Joyner-FolkSongInSouthCarolina, p. 106, "Original Talking Blues" (1 text)
Richardson/Spaeth-AmericanMountainSongs, p. 102, "Jest Talkin'" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 224, "Talking Blues" (1 text with metrical markings)
Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, pp. 116-117, "Jest Talkin'" (1 text)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 254-258, "When de Good Lord Sets You Free" (1 text, 1 tune -- an immense composite containing elements of "Moanish Lady," "Talking Blues," and probably other materials, to the tune of "Mourner, You Shall Be Free")
Scarborough-OnTheTrailOfNegroFolkSongs, p. 225, (no title) (1 fragment, perhaps one of the items that inspired the Lomax mess)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 80, "Talking Blues" (1 text)
DT, TALKBLUE TALKBLU2
Roud #13912, etc.
RECORDINGS:
Chris Bouchillon, "Talking Blues" (Columbia 15120-D, 1927; Vocalion 02977, 1935; rec. 1926)
Harmon Canada, "The Talkin' Blues" (Gennett 6972/Champion 15808 [as Joe Smith]/Supertone 9554, 1929; Champion 45173 [as Joe Smith], c. 1935)
Curley Fox, "Curley's New Talkin' Blues" (Decca 5185, 1936; rec. 1935)
Bill Gatin, "Talkin' Blues" (Decca 5122, 1935)
Pete Seeger, "Talking Blues" (on PeteSeeger32)
Roy Shaffer, "Talking Blues" (Bluebird B-8234, 1939/Montgomery Ward M-8493, c. 1940)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. every other song with the words "talking" and "blues" in the titles
cf. "Mourner, You Shall Be Free (Moanish Lady)" (this piece is sometimes sung to a tune similar to that)
cf. "Henhouse Door (Who Broke the Lock?)" (floating verses)
cf. "Ain't Gonna Grieve My God No More" (lyrics)
SAME TUNE:
Talking Dustbowl Blues (File: LoF225)
Talking Hard Luck (File: CSW214)
Talking Atom (DT, TALKATOM; Sam Hinton, ABC-Eagle ABC-230, 1950; on PeteSeeger19, PeteSeeger48)
Chris Bouchillon, "New Talking Blues" (Columbia 15262-D, 1928)
Herschel Brown & his Band, "New Talking Blues" (OKeh 45247, 1928)
Herschel Brown & his Band, "Talking Nigger Blues" (OKeh 45247, 1928)
Herschel Brown, "New Talking Blues No. 2" (OKeh 45337, 1929)
Herschel Brown & his Boys, "Nigger Talking Blues No. 2" (OKeh 45337, 1929)
Curly Fox, "Curly's New Talking Blues" (Decca 5185, 1936; rec. 1935)
Jesse Rodgers, "Jesse's Talking Blues" (Bluebird B-6143, 1935)
NOTES [152 words]: Robert Lunn and Chris Bouchillon both claim to have written and recorded the canonical "Talking Blues," with the above-quoted lyrics; however, it's likely they acquired the form and some of the verses from anonymous African-American musicians. [Given that Scarborough's text precedes them, I'd say it's nearly certain. - RBW]
[For the items in the "same tune" list, the] discographical information lists Mr. Brown's name as "Hersal" for one record and "Hershel" for another. I don't know which is right. And I've since found one spelled "Hershal." Are we confused yet? - PJS
Richardson/Spaeth-AmericanMountainSongs's version, interestingly, has an actual tune for this, which she compares to "Old Zip Coon." Since her version is about as old as Scarborough's, it suggests that this was originally a song, but someone learned it without the tune (perhaps from a lost printed item?), and the rest is history. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: LoF224

Talking Columbia
DESCRIPTION: "I was down along the river, just sittin' on a rock, Lookin' at the boats in the Bonneville lock." The singer describes what he sees along the river -- and how it inspired this song. He concludes that the world should be run by electricity, not dictators
AUTHOR: Woody Guthrie
EARLIEST DATE: 1941-2 (recording by author)
KEYWORDS: political river technology
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 232, "Talking Columbia" (1 text)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Talking Blues" (and its assorted relatives)
File: LoF232

Talking Dustbowl Blues
DESCRIPTION: Talking Blues about the dustbowl: The farmer sees his farm turn to dust, trades it for a Ford, heads out to California, has engine trouble, and winds up in California starving and having to beg. The song ends with sarcastic remarks about politicians
AUTHOR: Woody Guthrie
EARLIEST DATE: April 26, 1940 (recording by author)
KEYWORDS: poverty hardtimes travel technology work political derivative dustbowl
FOUND IN: US
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Talking Hard Luck

DESCRIPTION: Talking blues, describing the singer's hard times in surrealistic terms: "I've been bawled out and balled up, held down and held up... lost all I had and part of my furniture...and if that ain't hard luck, folks, then you tell me what is."

AUTHOR: Chris Bouchillon & Lonnie Glosson (each supplying part)
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (recording, Chris Bouchillon)+1936 (recording, Lonnie Glosson)
KEYWORDS: hardtimes nonsense recitation talltale
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Cohen/Seeger/Wood-NewLostCityRamblersSongbook, pp. 214-215, "Talking Hard Luck" (1 text with musical accompaniment)
DT, ARKLUCK
RECORDINGS:
Clarence Ashley & Tex Isley, "Tom's Talking Blues (Hard Luck Blues)" (Ashley01)
Chris Bouchillon, "Born in Hard Luck" (Columbia 15151-D, 1927; Clarion 5144-C, 1930 [as Clay Chapman]; Velvet Tone 2498-V, 1932 [as Clay Chapman]; on GoodForWhatAilsYou)
Harmon Canada, "Born in Hard Luck" (Gennett 6972/Champion 15808 [as Joe Smith]/Supertone 9554, 1929; Champion 45173 [as Joe Smith], c. 1935)
Lonnie Glosson, "Talking Hard Luck" (Conqueror 8732, 1936)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Talking Hard Luck" (on NLCR03, NLCR12, NLCREP1, NLCRCD1)
Buddy Starcher, "After I Lost That Job" (Staraday SEP 158, c. 1960)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Born In Hard Luck
Good Place to Be From, Anyway
NOTES [78 words]: This is a group of recitations on similar themes, basically grouped around the Bouchillon, Glosson, and Starcher pieces, all part of minstrel, circus and medicine-show traditions. The Ashley piece combines Bouchillon's and Starcher's with a couple of verses from "Don't Let Your Deal Go Down," while the New Lost City Ramblers stitch together Bouchillon's and Glosson's. Much of the material also shows up in the work of medicine-show artist Harmonica Frank Floyd. - PJS
Last updated in version 4.2
File: CSW214

Talking Swag

DESCRIPTION: "Wrap up the butt of the old cigar, And pop in the cork of the whisky jar, And hope we'll meet a block with a car... For it's ninety miles to wherever we are, On the swag!" The rambler rarely finds a room or work; even pigs are better fed

AUTHOR: Words: Shirlee Alison (converted to a talking blues by Neil Colquhoun)
EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry)
KEYWORDS: rambling hardtimes food
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 70, "Talking Swag" (1 text with metrical markings and chords) (p. 45 in the 1972 edition)
RECORDINGS:
Neil Colquhoun, "On the Swag" (on NZSongYngCntry)
Tall Angel at the Bar
DESCRIPTION: "Tall angel at the bar, lord I wonder what's to matter (x2)." "Tall Angel at the bar, will my mother got to go (x2)." "Tall angel... to the bar of God." "She come stepping down the Jordan." "She come stepping down like the lightning." "Don't a-fail...."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad mother death
FOUND IN: US(SO)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 165, "Tall Angel at the Bar" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #16130

Tall Pine Tree, The (The Samsonville Song)
DESCRIPTION: At the foot of the tall pine tree is a brook which runs through Samsonville. The brook powers the mill that feeds Samsonville. The singer(s) love the pine tree, where they "get a chance for to take a glance at the girls in Samsonville"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1982
KEYWORDS: nonballad
FOUND IN: US(MA)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cazden/Haufrecht/Studer-FolkSongsOfTheCatskills 177, "The Tall Pine Tree, or, The Samsonville Song" (1 text, 1 tune)
ST FSC177 (Partial)
NOTES [12 words]: A parody of "The Old Pine Tree," written in 1849 by Charles White. - RBW

Tally Ho Hark Away (The Fox Chase; The Sun Had Just Peeped)
DESCRIPTION: "The sun had just peeped its head over the hill" and the birds and ploughboys are just starting their days when the hunter cries "Tally ho!" The fox is in view. They chase it for six hours. At the end, they toast the "fox hunting boys."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Gardiner collection)
KEYWORDS: animal hunting nonballad donfound in: Britain(England(West))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Purslow-TheConstantLovers, p. 99, "Tally-Ho! Hark Away!" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1182

Tally-i-ho in the Morning
DESCRIPTION: Footman Tipperary Joe, who "never yet owned a horse or a hound ... though I've no money, I live at my ease" enjoys the hunt on foot. "If I'm not first, I am seldom late, With my tally-i-ho"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1923 (Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames)
KEYWORDS: hunting nonballad dog
FOUND IN: Britain(England(South))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Williams-FolkSongsOfTheUpperThames, p. 64, "Tally-i-ho in the Morning" (1 text) (also Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 491)
Roud #1242
Talt Hall

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you fathers and mothers And brothers and sisters all, I'll relate to you the history Concerning old Talt Hall." "He shot and killed Frank Salyers." Hall is taken and condemned to die. He writes to bid his brother farewell. He regrets his acts

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1908
KEYWORDS: homicide punishment execution crime
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates 62, pp. 157-158, "Talt Hall" (1 text)
Cohen-AmericanFolkSongsARegionalEncyclopedia1, pp. 198-199 "Talt Hall" (1 text)
Roud #4102
NOTES [108 words]: Combs/Wilgus-FolkSongsOfTheSouthernUnitedStates reports that "Talt Hall, [a] native of Kentucky... was hanged in Virginia toward the end of the nineteenth century" and that "he had on his conscience more than twenty assassinations." Cohen adds details: He was born around 1846 in Tennessee and executed in 1892 by hanging. Supposedly he was tried three times for murder before a jury finally was courageous enough to convict him. Cohen adds a report that the song was written by a ten-year-old named Uriah N. Webb. I do not know how firm this conclusion is, so I have not listed Webb as the author. This song is item dE42 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW

Last updated in version 2.7

File: CW157

Tam Barrow

DESCRIPTION: Widower Tam goes out courting a second wife. He finds that "a' the lasses blinkit blythe, but few o' them had tocher," so at last he settles on a rich widow. He soon grows tired of her and casts her out.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1827 (Kinloch)
KEYWORDS: wife dowry money courting abandonment
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Kinloch-TheBalladBook XXIV, pp. 77-78, "Tam Barrow" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan4 826, "Auld Tammy Barra" (1 text)
ST KinBB24 (Full)
Roud #6217
File: KinBB24

Tam Buie (Tam Bo, Magherafelt Hiring Fair)

DESCRIPTION: The (widow) attempts to hire Tam. He asks about his wages. He talks her into an increase, then asks about his diet. Satisfied, he asks where he will sleep. After turning down several offers, he agrees to sleep with, and marry, her

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1828 (Buchan)
KEYWORDS: worker courting marriage home bargaining
FOUND IN: Ireland Britain(Scotland(Áber))
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Greig/Duncan7 1424, "The Rigwuddy Carlin" (3 texts, 2 tunes)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H748, p. 263, "Magherafelt Hiring Fair" (1 text, 1 tune)
Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 194 (notes), (no title) (1 text, probably incomplete, but recognizably this, treated as a version of "Bargain With Me"; Kennedy also includes a portion of the Sam Henry text)
ADDITIONAL: Peter Buchan, Ancient Ballads and Songs of the North of Scotland (Edinburgh, Tam Frew's Hat

DESCRIPTION: "You've a' heard tell o' auld Tam Frew... Whase only way o' livin noo Is gaun aboot and cleanin' clocks... But the oddest o' his queerest ways -- He keeps his smiddy in his hat." Tam's hat, his behaviors, and his old age are humorously described AUTHOR: John McLay?

EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Ford)

KEYWORDS: clothes humorous technology

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Ford-VagabondSongsAndBalladsOfScotland, pp. 65-68, "Tam Frew's Hat" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #13113

File: FVS065

Tam Lin [Child 39]

DESCRIPTION: Janet goes to Carterhaugh to pull flowers. She meets Tam Lin, who makes her sleep with him. She finds herself pregnant, and demands Tam Lin marry her. But to do so, she must rescue him from thralldom to the Elven queen. With difficulty, she does so.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1769; perhaps cited in 1549 (see notes)

KEYWORDS: magic pregnancy marriage rescue shape-changing

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland,England) Ireland US(NE)

REFERENCES (24 citations):
Child 39, "Tam Lin" (15 texts)
Bronson 39, "Tam Lin" (4 versions plus 1 in addenda)
Bronson-SingingTraditionOfChildsPopularBallads39, "Tam Lin" (3 versions: #2, #2.1, #3,1)
Chambers-ScottishBallads, pp. 186-193, "The Young Tamlane" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan2 330, "True Tammie" (1 text)
Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 86, "A Fairie Sang"; Lyle-Andrew-CrawfurdsCollectionVolume2 99, "Janet and Tam Blain" (2 texts)
Dixon-ScottishTraditionalVersionsOfAncientBalladsII, pp. 11-20, "Tam-a-Line, the Elfin Knicht" (1 text)
Scarborough-ASongCatcherInSouthernMountains, pp. 250-254, "Tam Lane" (1 text; tune on p. 422) {Bronson's #4}
Leach-TheBalladBook, pp. 136-141, "Tam Lin" (1 text)
Leach-HeritageBookOfBallads, pp. 38-43, "Tam Lin" (1 text)
Quiller-Couch-OxfordBookOfBallads 2, "Tam Lin" (1 text)
Friedman-Viking/PenguinBookOfFolkBallads, p. 41, "Tam Lin" (1 text)
Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 23, "Tam Lin" (1 text)
Gummere-OldEnglishBallads, pp. 283-289+360, "Tam Lin" (1 text)
Hodgart-FaberBookOfBallads, p. 129, "Tam Lin" (1 text)
Buchan-ABookOfScottishBallads 27, "Tam Lin" (1 text)
Tunney-WhereSongsDoThunder, pp. 163-169, "Tamlin" (1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 28-31, "Tam Lin" (1 text)
DT 39, TAMLIN1* TAMLIN2* TAMLIN3
ADDITIONAL: Emily Lyle, _Fairies and Folk: Approaches to the Scottish Ballad Tradition_, Wissenschaftlicher Verlag Trier, 2007, pp. 110-111, "Tam Lin" (1 text plus an excerpt); pp.116-117, "Lady Margaret" (1 text, 1 tune, a much-worn-down version from Betsy Johnson); pp. 118-119, "[Leady Margat]" (1 text); on pp. 119-121 Lyle compares various texts of "Tam Lin" with portions of several other ballads
Katherine Briggs, _An Encyclopedia of Fairies: Hobgoblins, Brownies, Bogies, and Other Supernatural Creatures_, 1976 (I use the 1977 Pantheon paperback), pp. 449-453, article "Young Tam Lin, or Tamlane" (1 text plus discussion)
Iona & Peter Opie, The Oxford Book of Narrative Verse, pp. 32-37, "Tam Lin" (1 text)
James Kinsley, editor, Burns: Complete Poems and Songs (shorter edition, Oxford, 1969) #558, pp. 658-663, "Tam Lin" (1 text, 1 tune, from c. 1796)
Roud #35
RECORDINGS:
Anne Briggs, "Young Tambling" (on Briggs2, Briggs3, Briggs4)
Eddie Butcher, "Saturday Night is Hallowe'en Night" (on IREarlyBallads)
A. L. Lloyd, "Tamlyn (Young Tambling)" (on Lloyd3)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Seven Virgins (The Leaves of Life)" (tune)
NOTES [1084 words]: Liner notes to Eddie Butcher's recording: "This short 'chantefable' includes verses of 'Tam Lin.' Roud makes this #294 with other "Tam Lin" derivatives. - BS
Carterhaugh, also mentioned as the site of magic in "The Wee Wee Man," "is a plain at the confluence of the Ettrick and Yarrow in Selkirkshire" (Scott).
The idea of gaining a lover who is changing shape has ancient roots. We find it in Ovid's "Metamorphoses," where Peleus (the father of Achilles) has the problem of coupling with his wife Thetis.
The problem was, Thetis was very attractive, and a lot of the Gods (including Zeus and Poseidon) wanted her for themselves. But there was that prophecy that her son would be greater than his father. (This is the prophecy that finally got Prometheus free of his torture, because he knew who was involved and Zeus didn't).
Once the gods knew that Thetis was the dangerous party, they decided to wed her off to a mortal so she could have a son and they could get back to the serious business of hitting on her. They chose Peleus, and held a great marriage feast (it was at that feast that Eris threw out the Apple of Discord, causing the fight between Aphrodite, Athena, and Hera which led to the Judgment of Paris, and hence to the abduction of Helen and the Trojan War).
The gods could marry Thetis off; they couldn't make her like it. Peleus found himself in the interesting position of having to locate and, in effect, capture his wife. Given help from the gods, he found Thetis in a cave and attempted to couple with her. To defeat him, she turned into a bird, a tree, and a tigress. The latter scared him off, but eventually he caught her while asleep (Metamorphoses XI.225ff.).
Similar stories are told, e.g., of the devil -- one legend of Saint Dunstan says that Satan tried to lure the saint into sexual immorality by showing up as a pretty girl and making a move on him, but Dunstan, who was working as a smith, caught the devil by the nose with his tongs. The devil tried many changes of shape, but Dunstan did not let go until Satan took his own shape. Freed, the Devil flew off and left Dunstan alone (Simpson, pp. 63-64).
Dixon-ScottishTraditionalVersionsOfAncientBallads quotes a possible mention of this song from Wedderburn's _Complaynt of Scotland_ (1549): He refers once to a dance of "thom of lyn," and elsewhere to the "tayl of yong tamlane." But Lyle, p. 110, points out that the full reference in the latter case is to "the tayl of the 3ong tamlene and of the bald braband," with the meaning of the latter item being unknown. (Cf. Complaynt, p. lxxix). Hence we cannot prove that either of these is this piece, even if it's the same story. Indeed, Dixon hints that the references might be to "Tom o' the Linn," which appears to be the song we index as "Brian O'Lynn (Tom Boyleyn)." Murray, who edited the _Complaynt_, suggests on the other hand that "The Bald Braband" is a separate (lost?) romance (Complaynt, p. lxxix).
Lyle catalogs a number of parallels to other ballads, noting especially (pp. 123-126) a link to "The King's Dochter Lady Jean" [Child 52]. The points of lyric contact are interesting, but "Tam Lin" is at the heart a ballad of the supernatural, "Lady Jean" an incest ballad. The only fundamental point they have in common is rape.
Some versions of the ballad end with the Queen of Fairie, deprived of Tam Lin, being forced pay another tithe to hell. Lyle, p. 128, connects this to the legend of changelings four, e.g., in "The Queen of Elfan's Nourice" [Child 40]. The story is that the Elven people carried off unbaptized infants to pay their tithe. The difficulty with this link is that it implies that Janet could have saved Tam by bringing in a priest to have him baptized, rather than going through the rigamarole on Hallow's Eve.

Nonetheless Wimberly, pp. 390-391, follows a hint from Child and argues strongly that there is a baptism ritual involved -- it's just that the versions of "Tam Lin" have so disordered the transformations that this is no longer true. Presumably the transformations continued until Janet could bring Tam to water (perhaps a holy well?) and throw him in. From that, he would emerge "an utter naked man" -- but also cleansed of the taint of the Queen. This raises interesting questions about the possibility of re-baptism (which most sects would deny is possible), but maybe such analysis is too much to ask of a ballad. (There is also the problem that Faerie is normally considered morally neutral, e.g. in the romance "Sir Orfeo" it is separate from both heaven and hell, and so also in the ballad "Thomas Rymer" [Child 37].)

Scott knew a story that Tam Lin continued to have relations with the Queen even after Janet took him away. Boklund-Lagopolou, p. 157, seems to suggest that the whole point of the song is a sexual relationship between Tam and the Queen. This feels wrong to me; I think Scott's legend post-dates rather than predating the ballad.

For observations on shape-shifting in ballads, see the notes to "The Twa Magicians" [Child 44]. Lyle, p. 139, argues that the use of elements of other ballads in "Tam Lin" implies that it was compiled by a ballad-maker who did not believe in the literal truth of the elements. In other words, if I understand her right, there was no underlying folktale; it was composed as fiction.

Briggs, volume A.1, p. 502, does not say quite the same thing, but she does call the song "a compendium of Scottish fairy beliefs." She also notes that Sir Walter Scott turned the idea into the poem "Alice Brand." "Alice Brand" is a long and complex poem, being sections XII-XV of "The Lady of the Lake" (pp. 154-156 of Scott-Works), with other elements, but it is clear that Scott did have traditional ballads in mind when he wrote it.

Interestingly, Hallow's Eve is not the only night of a wild hunt, and the Elven Queen not the only leader. Hole, p. 59, reports a legend of King Arthur and his men riding a ghostly road on Christmas Eve.

According to Williams, p. 48, "On the plain at Carterhaugh, which is situated where the Ettrick and Yarrow meet about a mile north of Selkirk, there are two or three rings where grass never grows. People say these are fairy rings which survive from the time of Tam Lin.... - RBW

Whitelaw-BookOfScottishBallads "Tom Linn" has 26 stanzas instead of Child 39D's 34. The source is Child's 39Db (see Child's notes and Maidment, A New Book of Old Ballads (Edinburgh, 1844), #16 pp. 54-60, "Tom Linn" "taken down from the recitation of an old woman"). - BS
Tam o' My Back

DESCRIPTION: "There was Tam o' my back, an' Tam i' my lap ..., Tam o' the lea"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: riddle nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1632, "Tam o' My Back" (1 text)
Roud #13072
NOTES [25 words]: "There are ten Tams here, suggesting manipulation of fingers or toes" (source: Ewan McVicar, Doh Ray Me, When Ah Wis Wee (Edinburgh, 2007), p. 26). - BS

Tam O'Shanter Hat, The

DESCRIPTION: "I'll sing on the Tam o' Shanter's hat For the Cameronian Rifles." "John Bull, Pat, and Sandy true, Are a' amalgamated noo." At review time we outdo the Life Guards and Royal Blues." "Tho' we lose the Cameronian name, We ne'er can lose the Cameron fame"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan1)
KEYWORDS: pride army clothes nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan1 72, "The Tam O'Shanter Hat" (1 text)
Roud #5799
NOTES [633 words]: Greig/Duncan1: "The song refers to the amalgamation in 1881 of the 90th Light Infantry and the 26th Regiment of Foot to form the Cameronians (Scottish Rifles). The new uniform consisted of dark green doublet, tartan trews, and Tam o' Shanter (a flat woollen bonnet)."

The amalgamation of regiments Ben mentions were part of the 1881 Cardwell Reforms. Prior to that, British regiments came in all sorts of sizes, strengths, and capabilities, because they had been raised at various times, and some had more ease keeping up their strength than others. Cardwell (1813-1886) was Gladstone's Secretary of War from 1868, and he had three problems to deal with: "the army's unreadiness for war, its inability to provide adequate colonial garrisons and its officering by the antiquated system of the purchase of commissions" (Keegan/Wheatcroft, p. 59). "He brought in three major reforms: the Army Enlistment Act of 1870, the Regulation of the Forces Act of 1871, and the scheme of 1872 which linked battalions of a regiment so as to ensure regular exchanges between home and overseas stations, and gave each regiment a county affiliation and a recruiting and training depot within its county" (Haswell, pp. 100-101). The first of these acts regularized the terms of soldiers, meaning that old drunks and cripples did not stay with the army, while the second got rid of commissions by purchase (Haswell, p. 101; Chandler/Beckett, p. 188, notes that this had to be done by executive authority because of opposition in parliament). Although all the reforms were widely opposed, it was was the third reform that caused the most controversy. It was not until 1881 that a successor of Cardwell, Hugh Childers, actually managed to amalgamate battalions (Haswell, pp. 114-115), and it took even longer to sweep out some of the old officers -- including the Duke of Cambridge, who as commander-in-chief of the army did his best to oppose the reforms (Haswell, p. 102). From a purely military standpoint, the Cardwell Reforms were logical and vital; the old way resulted in a badly disorganized army. But the troops "hated" them -- since almost all regiments were combined with at least one other, they felt their history was lost. Plus they often lost their home places -- British regiments were largely recruited geographically, and the regions they recruited from were changed.

The Cameronians, according to Hallows, p. 282, had originally been the 26th Regiment; they were amalgamated with the 90th Regiment, the Perthshire Volunteer Light Infantry. They retained the title The Cameronians at the time. However, that name is now gone -- the Cameronians were disbanded in 1968, according to Hallows, p. 284.

According to Baynes/Laffin, pp. 158-159, the Cameronians were originally raised by Richard Cameron, and the soldiers were Covenanters. They had a distinguished history, serving with Marlborough, then later in the American Revolution, and they were with Moore in the Peninsula.
They later served much time in Asia (Baynes/Laffin, pp. 159-160). The old Cameronians were the first battalion of the post-Cardwell Cameronians. This battalion was eliminated in 1947, meaning that, as a formation, the old 26th Regiment ceased to be even before the amalgamated regiment was disbanded.

Part of the problem with the amalgamated Cameronians was that the other battalion of the regiment, the Perthshire infantry, was so different. Raised in 1794, they had a history entirely unlike the Cameronians, according to Baynes, pp. 160-161.

Baynes/Laffin, p. 162, says that the regiment served in Aden in 1966, then came home in 1967 to be told that it had a choice: Amalgamate with another regiment (again) or disband. They chose to disband; such companies as are left are now part of the 52nd Lowland Volunteers. - RBW

Bibliography

- Haswell: Jock Haswell, The British Army: A Concise History (Thames and Hudson, 1975)
- Keegan/Wheatcroft: John Keegan and Andrew Wheatcroft, Who’s Who in Military History from 1453, 1976, 1987 (I use the 1991 LPR reprint)

Last updated in version 2.5

File: GrD072

Tambaroora Gold

DESCRIPTION: The singer, down on his luck, redeems himself by moving to Tambaroora and finding gold. Now he has respect, but it is only for the money. When his money is gone, his girl abandons him for someone else with Tambaroora gold.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1968

KEYWORDS: gold elopement abandonment work hardtimes

FOUND IN: Australia

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Manifold-Penguin Australian Songbook, pp. 40-41, "Tambaroora Gold" (1 text, edited; 2 tunes collated into one)
- Meredith/Anderson-Folk Songs Of Australia, p. 206, "Tambaroora Gold" (1 fragment; 1 tune)
- Meredith/Tritton-Duke Of The Outback, p. 90, "Tambaroora Gold" (1 fragment)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Wild Rover No More" (theme)

File: MA206

Tamiston

DESCRIPTION: Betty and Johnnie Smith court. He spends all his money on her. Lord Elgin seduces and leaves her. Her mother suggests Johnnie marry Betty. Betty makes up with Johnnie. They marry. Their daughters marry well and "her son micht weel command a ship"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1907 (Greig/Duncan5)

KEYWORDS: courting marriage seduction children

FOUND IN: Britain (Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #165, p. 2, "Tamiston" (1 text)
- Greig/Duncan5 1060, "Tamiston" (4 texts, 2 tunes)

Roud #6302
Tammy Chalmers

DESCRIPTION: The singer "left the kirk that patronage gae me" and his "simple flock" because "Tammie Chalmers, he's fairly diddled me." "But nocht can bring my bonnie glebe and stipend back again." He and his wife are grief-stricken.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: grief political religious clergy

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):

Greig/Duncan3 682, "Tammy Chalmers" (2 texts)

Roud #6107

NOTES [413 words]: Greig/Duncan3: "This song is a satiric treatment of the Disruption of 1843 when, under the leadership of Dr Thomas Chalmers, approximately a third of the ministers of the Church of Scotland resigned their offices and endowments and formed the Free Church." -BS

There had been a long debate in the Church of Scotland in 1843 over whether a minister could be forced on an unwilling congregation. The idea is rather foreign to reformed doctrine, but it flows easily out of the hierarchical Anglican doctrine followed in England -- and England, of course, dominated parliament. So the official Church of Scotland policy allowed civil jurisdiction both over church courts and over congregations. (There were other differences between the groups, having to do with church policy and who ran congregations as well as with issues such as the treatment of the poor, but this is so nitpicky that even I don't want to dig into it. Both parties considered themselves the true Presbyterian church, but to be fair, both seem to have fallen within the limits of Calvinist theology.)

According to OxfordCompanionp. 295, 474 out of 1203 ministers in the Scottish church quit the official body to form the Free Church. According to Mitchison, p. 383, the ministers who withdrew were mostly the more strongly evangelical, and often leaders of new parishes, which tended to draw the more radically conservative ministers. According to MacLean, p. 204, by 1900 the Free Church (which in that year joined the "United Presbyterians" to form the "United Free Church") had more parishes than the official Church of Scotland. The two branches reunited in 1929 after Westminster abandoned its control over the Church of Scotland.

Thomas Chalmers (1780-1847) was the leader of these radical evangelicals. Prior to the split, he had worked to build up an endowment to support the various new congregations, but such an endowment could not match the government bounty given to official ministers. It sounds as if the singer in this song was swept away by the fervor of the evangelicals -- but then found that he had to survive based on nothing more than what his congregation gave him, rather than the government salary paid out of the taxes collected to support the state churches. - RBW

Greig/Duncan3 has a map on p. xxxv, of "places mentioned in songs in volume 3" showing the song number as well as place name; Turriff (347,386,682) is at coordinate (h5,v7) on that map [roughly 31 miles NNW of Aberdeen] - BS

Bibliography

- MacLean: Fitzroy Maclean, A Concise History of Scotland, Beekman House, 1970
Tammy Toddles
DESCRIPTION: "Tammy Toddles is a cantie chile, Fu' cantie an' fu' croosie, The fairies liked him unco weel, An' built him a wee hooe." A fairy enters the hous and skips and dances and sings. It is so shrill that Tammy "was mis-smothered in the thrang."
AUTHOR: unknown
KEYWORDS: home magic nonballad supernatural dancing
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Porter/Gower-Jeannie-Robertson-EmergentSingerTransformativeVoice #9, pp. 123-124, "Tammy Doddle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #2497
RECORDINGS:
Lizzie Higgins, "Tammie Toddle" (on LHiggins01)

Tammy Traddlefeet
DESCRIPTION: Tammy Traddlefeet sings "I hae been a weaver lad, for twenty years an' twa." "We weaver lads were merry blades in good times" but prices have fallen. "We'll maybe live to see the time when things'll tak' a come" and good times will return.
AUTHOR: David Shaw (source: Fenton)
EARLIEST DATE: 1879 (Fenton)
KEYWORDS: weaving hardtimes
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan3 477, "The Weaver Lad" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Andrew Fenton, editor, Forfar Poets (Forfar, 1879), pp. 61-62, "Tammy Traddlefeet"
Roud #5876
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Four-Loom Weaver" (subject) and references there
NOTES [38 words]: The description follows Fenton.
Fenton: "This song was composed when wages for handloom weaving was low, and provisions very high in price, the now half-forgotten iniquity of Protection not yet having received its death blow." - BS
Last updated in version 2.4
File: GrD3477

Tampa
DESCRIPTION: "Well I tamped all the way from Tampa In (21) days, buddy, in (21) days." "You got to tamp like me." Other verses tell of various disasters: "Ada shot Shorty." "Waterworks in Georgia just burning down." "I broke my brand-new hammer."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (recorded from Jesse Hendricks, J. B. Smith, Matt Williams, Louis Houston by Jackson)
KEYWORDS: work hardtimes disaster nonballad
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Jackson-WakeUpDeadMan, pp. 300-302, "Tampa" (2 texts, 1 tune)
File: JDM300

Tamping Ties
DESCRIPTION: Call and response for tie-laying. "Tamp 'em up solid...Then they'll hold that midnight mail....Well, work don't hurt me...."
AUTHOR: unknown
Tan-Yard Side, The [Laws M28]

DESCRIPTION: The singer loves a girl who lives by the tan-yard side. After a year of courtship, they prepare to be wed, but her father has him sent to sea. He vows to marry her if he ever returns.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1884 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3956))

KEYWORDS: courting, exile, sea, return

FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond)) US(MA) Canada(Mar,Newf) Ireland

REFERENCES (8 citations):
- Laws M28, "The Tan-Yard Side"
- Peacock, pp. 592-593, "The Slaney Side" (1 text, 2 tunes)
- Creighton-SongsAndBalladsFromNovaScotia 76, "Down By the Tan-Yard Side" (1 text, 1 tune)
- O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 25, "The Tan Yard Side" (1 text)
- OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 41, "Down by the Tanyard Side" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H52b pp. 429-430, "The Slaney Side" (1 text, 1 tune)
- DT 585, TANYARD

ADDITIONAL: Maud Karpeles, _Folk Songs of Europe_, Oak, 1956, 1964, p. 69, "Down by the Tanyard Side" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #1021

RECORDINGS:
- Frank Quinn, "The Tan Yard Side" (on Voice10)
- Peter Molloy, "Down By the Tanyard Side" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
- Winfred Powers, "The Slaney Side" (on MUNFLA/Leach)
- Phoebe Smith, "The Tan Yard Side" (on Voice11)

BROADSIDES:
- NLScotland, L.C.Fol.70(96b), "The Slaney Side," James Lindsay (Glasgow), c.1855

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "Fish and Chips" (tune)

SAME TUNE:

NOTES [118 words]: The structure of each verse is the same as in "There's A Man Going Round Taking Names.

For example, the first verse is:

Tanneray your daughter get married, Tanneray (2x)/Tanneray he went in the market one mornin/
When the locals see him comin runnin/ O your daughter get married, Tanneray
While I haven't seen a Bahaman text for "There's A Man Going Round Taking Names" Steve Roud has the following entry under that title, "matched by title only [Info taken from published Checklist]," source: Library of Congress recording 422 A1, perf: Austin, Elizabeth, place: Bahamas: Cat Island: Old Bight, accessed December 6, 2014
You could argue that the structure is not much further distant from "Crawdad." - BS
Last updated in version 3.7
File: RcTanray

Tap a Tap Shoe

DESCRIPTION: "Tap a tap shoe (or "Tap-a-shoe"), that would I do, If I had but a little more leather; We'll sit in the son till the leader do come, Then we'll tap them both together." A rhyme a mother uses while tapping baby's shoes together

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1975 (Deane/Shaw)
KEYWORDS: mother clothes nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(England(West))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
ADDITIONAL: Tony Deane and Tony Shaw _The Folklore of Cornwall_, B. T. Batsford, 1975, p. 49, "(Tap-ashoe, that would I do)" (1 short text)
Roud #20472
File: SeSh049B

Tapping at the Garden Gate

DESCRIPTION: The singer asks a girl in the room: "Who's that tapping at the garden gate" every night? She blushes and looks under the table. The singer says it's not there, and it's not a cat. "Cats don't know when it's half-past eight"

AUTHOR: Words: J. Loker; Music: S. W. New
EARLIEST DATE: before 1867 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(1375))
KEYWORDS: courting humorous nonballad animal
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/Duncan4 807, "Tap, Tap, Tapping" (1 fragment)
Heart-Songs, pp. 264-265, "Tapping at the Garden Gate" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #6208
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(1375), "Tapping at the Garden Gate" ("Who's that tapping at the garden gate?"). J. Harkness (Preston), 1840-1866; also Firth b.27(173), "Tapping at the Garden Gate"
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Who's That Tapping at the Garden Gate?
NOTES [41 words]: Greig/Duncan4 is a fragment; broadside Bodleian Harding B 11(1375) is the basis for the description.
The authorship attribution is from sheet music at California Sheet Project site. - BS
Heart-Songs also attributes the song to Loker and New - RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File: GrD4807

Tar the Yoll

DESCRIPTION: "Tar the yoll [yawl] again." Father bought the tar yesterday and Jeannie put it on.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1910 (Greig/Duncan8)
KEYWORDS: nonballad sailor
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1622, "Tar the Yoll" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12985
Taranaki Song

DESCRIPTION: "The passing moments to beguile, To cheer our spirits, raise a smile... We'll sing in Taranaki's praise." About "New Plymouth fair, New Zealand's boast." It has riches, farms, fair ladies, "churches for the orthodox, And for the sinners gaols and stocks"

AUTHOR: Words: John Hursthouse (source: Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)
EARLIEST DATE: 1846 (Wellington Independent, according to Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ)
KEYWORDS: home New Zealand drink work farming nonballad

Tariff on the Brain

DESCRIPTION: "Come all you honest people, Whoever you may be, And help the honest workingmen Resist monopoly." The "brokers" have "Tariff on the brain (x2), Look out for politicians Who have tariff on the brain." They have Grover to support their gold standard

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1938 (Nevada Folklore pamphlet; probably written in the 1890s)
KEYWORDS: money political nonballad derivative gold

NOTES [423 words]: This song is somewhat unclear about conditions in the 1890s, because while Grover Cleveland stood for hard money (i.e. no silver purchase at 16:1, a major cause of the Panic of 1893), he was a Democrat, and the Democrats were generally the low-tariff party: "A [low] tariff came in in 1857. This remained until 1861, when the Morrill Tariff went into effect, in accordance with the policy of the Republicans, now in power, who favored high protective duties. The Civil War caused a large increase of the rates to meet government expenses and stimulate manufactures. This continued long after the war. In 1882 a Tariff Commission was appointed to consider readjusting the rates, and the Republicans made some slight reductions. Since then they have returned to advocacy of high protection, while the Democrats, since President Cleveland's message of 1887, have favored reduction of the rates. The McKinley Act of 1890 maintained the protective system. A Democratic bill for moderate reduction was introduced into the House in December, 1893." Jameson, pp. 642-643.

Farmers, including the members of the Farmers Alliance who sang this song, wanted a lower tariff because they were exporting raw materials and importing expensive finished goods; manufacturers wanted high tariffs because they had to compete with more efficient European factories. Hence the tariff struggles. The farmers also wanted high inflation, to moderate their mortgages. So they opposed the "gold bugs" of this song, and disliked Cleveland, who favored hard money even though he had an acceptable view of the tariff. Graff, p. 114, notes how the Panic of 1893 placed the U.S. government under great financial strain, and President Cleveland covered the shortage of gold by borrowing gold from J. P. Morgan on favorable terms. Hence the popular opinion of Cleveland reflected in this song; "The president, screamed his critics, was in league with the 'money trust,' The terms that [Morgan's] syndicate exacted were rightly regarded as exorbitant.... The condemnation of Cleveland is probably unfair because Cleveland ha bargained hard and, in the acute crisis, had no other way out" (Graff, p. 115). On p. 117, though, Graff admits that "in the interregnum [i.e. presumably while Benjamin Harrison was President in 1889-1893], Cleveland had become much more sympathetic to the needs and concerns of businessmen and eastern bankers. Nor was he alone in his inclination. Quite simply, the leaders of both parties were impervious to the cries of farmers and workingmen." - RBW

Bibliography

Last updated in version 4.3
File: Wels073

Tarland Laws, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer praises Tarland's lasses braw, hearty boys, fertile fields and high mountains that "keep aff the stormy win's." Tarland toon has a weekly fair, markets, fighters that will chase all comers. "We'll drink success ... That Tarland wins ye a' man."

AUTHOR: William Thomson (source: Greig/Duncan3)
EARLIEST DATE: 1911 (Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)
KEYWORDS: pride bragging nonballad
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
  Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #160, pp. 1-2, "The Tarland Laws" (1 text)
  Greig/Duncan3 511, "The Tarland Laws" (1 text)
Roud #5995

NOTES [36 words]: Greig/Duncan3 has a map on p. xxxv, of "places mentioned in songs in volume 3' showing the song number as well as place name; Tarland (511) is at coordinate (h0-1,v4-5) on that map [roughly 28 miles W of Aberdeen]. - BS

Last updated in version 2.6
File: GrD3511

Tarry Woo

DESCRIPTION: "Oh tarry woo' [wool]... is ill to spin, Card it well, oh card it well, card it well ere you begin." Card it, spin it, weave it. Shepherds may go out and dance. Who would be a king when he could be a shepherd?

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1853 (Scots Musical Museum)
KEYWORDS: sheep shepherd clothes royalty
FOUND IN: Britain(England(North))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
  Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #12, "Tarry Woo" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1472
File: PECS012

Tartan Plaidy, The (O My Bonnie Highland Laddie)

DESCRIPTION: "When first he landed on our strand," Prince Charlie charms all who meet him. "When Geordie heard the news belyve, That he had come before his daddy," the king sends John Cope north. Cope and Charlie play cat and mouse. Stories of the '45

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1821 (Hogg-JacobiteRelicsOfScotlandVol2)
KEYWORDS: Jacobites rebellion battle

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
  1720-1788 - Life of Charles Edward Stuart, "Bonnie Prince Charlie," the Young Pretender, eldest son of James Stuart the "Old Pretender"
  Jul 23, 1745 - Bonnie Prince Charlie lands on Eriskay
  Jul 25, 1745 - Charlie transfers to Moidart
  Aug 8, 1745 - Approximate date that firm word reaches George II's court of Charlie's landing
  Aug 19, 1745 - "Gathering of the Clans." Official raising of the standard at Glenfinnan
Aug 27, 1745 - Charlie expects to catch the army of General John Cope at Corriearrack, but Cope evades him and heads for Inverness. Cope from there heads to Aberdeen, to take ship south to Dunbar, moving from there to Prestonpans on Sep 20

Sep 4, 1745 - Charles enters Perth and proclaims his father King

Sep 17, 1745 - Jacobite army enters Edinborough

Sep 21, 1745 - Battle of Prestonpans. Bonnie Prince Charlie's Highland army routs the first real Hannoverian force it encounters

Apr 16, 1746 - Battle of Culloden Muir ends the 1745 Jacobite rebellion

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Hogg-JacobiteRelicsOfScotlandVol2 60, "O My Bonny Highland Laddie" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig/Duncan1 126, "The Lad Wi' The Tartan Plaidie" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Roud #5778

BROADSIDES:
NLScotland, APS.4.95.15(2), "The Tartan Plaidie," unknown, c. 1830; also L.C.Fol.70(141), "Prince Charlie and his Tartan Plaidie," L.C.Fol.70(141a) [a trimmed version of the preceding], L.C.1270(005), "Charlie Stuart and his Tartan Plaidy," James Kay (Glasgow), c. 1845

ALTERNATE TITLES:
When Charlie First Cam to the North
Charlie Stuart and his Tartan Plaidy
Culloden Moor

NOTES [399 words]: Looking at the texts available to me, this seems to be rather a catchall piece, describing the 1745 rebellion in as much detail as the singer wants to tell. On the whole, the versions seem fairly accurate, implying literary composition somewhere along the line. This fits with the anonymity of many of the prints.

The statement that "The graceful/manly looks o' that brave laddie Made every Hieland heartie warm" is, incidentally, true -- when Charlie landed, Lochiel (properly Cameron of Lochiel, one of the leaders of Clan Cameron, and the single most important chief to support him) sent messengers to urge him to go home. But Charlie arranged a meeting, and Lochiel was swept away. So were other chiefs.

The song describes a speech Charlie made to his troops before Prestonpans. This is real, though the details are doubtless unreliable; Charlie did give a speech which inspired his forces. If Cope did the same, obviously, it didn't work.

The comment that George II "thirty thousand pounds would give To catch him in his Hieland plaidie" is correct; within days of Charlie's landing, the government offered 30,000 pounds for his capture. Charlie initially made a contemptuous offer of thirty pounds for the head of George II, though political considerations later forced him to match the Hannoverian sum (obviously no one ever collected either reward).

In using the above dates, incidentally, it should be recalled that the Catholic continent was on the Gregorian calendar, but Protestant England still on the Julian (until 1752), making English dates 11 days behind continental dates. It is sometimes very hard to know which system a particular source is using; some, indeed, switch back and forth.

The dates given here and in most places in the Ballad Index are based on British Julian dates, since this is what seems to be most common -- e.g. Culloden, by modern standards, took place on April 27, 1746, but the references above list it as April 16, because that was the day marked on Cumberland's calendar (assuming he had enough brains to know what a calendar was, which is somewhat dubious). - RBW

See R. H. Cromek, Remains of Nithsdale and Galloway Song, (London, 1810), p. 153 for two verses that probably belong here; the non-chorus lines are "'A the lasses o' Dunkel' Brew gude ale for Charlie's sel'" and "The bonniest may in a' Dundee Made down the bed for young Charlie." - BS

File: BrAPS4959

Tarves Rant, The

DESCRIPTION: A group of bothies go on a Sunday tear. After leaving the tavern, the singer is separated from his companions, and gets in a fight with a policeman. He's thrown in jail, escapes, is caught again, and has to pay for the policeman's torn coat, plus a fine.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1905 (Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast)
Tassels on Her Boots

DESCRIPTION: The singer is intrigued by the tassels on a girl's boots. He courts her; she speculates that he is sad because he always stares at the ground. He explains that he is looking at the tassels. Now they are married; he intends to tassel the children's boots

AUTHOR: Robert Coombs?

EARLIEST DATE: 1869 (publication)

KEYWORDS: clothes courting

FOUND IN: US(MW,So)

REFERENCES (5 citations):
- Randolph 491, "Tassels on Her Boots" (1 text)
- Peters-FolkSongsOutOfWisconsin, pp. 158-159, "Tassels on Her Boots" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, pp. 93-94, "Tassels on the Boots" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Gilbert-LostChords, p. 60, "Tassels on Her Boots" (1 partial text)
- New-Comic-Songster, p. 4, "Those Tassels on the Boots" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #3275

SAME TUNE:
- Cap and Gown ("When, trembling Freshmen, first We sought this class share") (Henry Randall Waite, Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges, first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, p. 64)

NOTES [144 words]: Spaeth (A History of Popular Music in America, p. 173) says that this was "one of a large group of songs [in the 1860s] that discussed details of feminine attire," but mentions only this and "Jockey Hat and Feather."

Internet sources say that this is from a dramatic production, "Ixion (The Man at the Wheel)." At least one also listed a different author, Arthur Cheney. New-Comic-Songster lists it as by "Frank Cooper." The earliest sheet music I've found says only "as sung by Emelie Melville."

The Coote(s) associated with waltzes in the first stanza is Charles Coote, a bandleader and light music composer whose greatest fame came in the 1870s, but who now is almost completely forgotten. A check of half a dozen musical histories failed to turn up any information about him, and I couldn't find much more in an (admittedly rather cursory) internet search. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3

File: R491

'Tater Pie

DESCRIPTION: "For breakfast we have potato pie, For dinner we have potato pie, For supper we have potato pie, And it's sliced potato pie all the time. 'Tater pie, 'tater pie, There's a fly in the sliced potato pie... Choked to death on cold potato pie."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1952 (Browne-AlabamaFolkLyric)

KEYWORDS: food humorous bug
Tattie Jock

DESCRIPTION: The singer worked for Tattie Jock and Mutton Peggie. One night he and nine others were caught stealing potatoes. They fought the police. One escaped to join the navy. The others are sentenced to 13 years in Botany Bay.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1908 (Greig/Duncan3)

KEYWORDS: fight theft transportation trial farming work food Australia police

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #151, p. 2, "The Bothy Lads o' Forfar"; #36, p. 2, ("Ye'll hae heard o' Tattie Jock") (1 text plus 1 fragment)
- Greig/Duncan3 377, "The Bothy Lads o' Forfar" (2 texts)

Roud #5915

NOTES [54 words]: "The whole point of why we sing the song is that these men were only stealing potatoes -- to eat. They were fed so very bad!" (Source: Artie Trezise quoted, regarding "Tattie Jock," in Dan Milner and Paul Kaplan, The Bonnie Bunch of Roses (Oak, New York, 1983), pp. 117-118; the current description is based on this text). - BS

Last updated in version 2.6

File: GrD3377

---

Tattie Time, The

DESCRIPTION: Bothy ballad. Singer describes members of the crew harvesting potatoes, people to avoid, and humorous incidents during the harvest. He warns against drink. When the harvest is over they scatter to their other trades such as scrap and rags.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1961 (recorded from Ronnie White)

KEYWORDS: farming harvest work humorous moniker boss worker

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland)

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- MacColl/Seeger-TravellersSongsFromEnglandAndScotland 105, "The Tattie-Liftin’" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Kennedy-FolksongsOfBritainAndIreland 357, "The Tattie Time" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #2162

NOTES [15 words]: Almost a nonballad, but there are enough bits of narrative for it to squeak through. - PJS

File: McCST105

---

Tattooed Lady, The

DESCRIPTION: "I paid a (franc/bob/shilling) to see a fair tattooed lady...." The rest of the song describes the various sights to be seen on the lady's skin. These are generally localized (e.g. in Australia they see the ANZAC logo), ending with "my home in (wherever)"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions)

KEYWORDS: nonballad parody humorous

FOUND IN: Australia US Britain(England(North))

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, p. 136, "My Girl From Battersea" (1 text, tune referenced)
- Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 230-231, "The Tattooed Lady" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, p. 59, "That Tattooed French Lady" (1 text)
- Spaeth-ReadEmAndWeep, p. 221, "The Tattooed Lady" (1 text)
Roud #9622
NOTES [60 words]: Listed as a parody on "My Home in Tennessee," and the American versions seem to support that claim. The Australian version, however, could have picked up its tune from "Les Darcy." In Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy's version, the singer doesn't go to see the girl; she is "my girl from Battersea." But most of the rest is the same, so I've lumped them. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: FaE230

Taumarunui
DESCRIPTION: "I'm an ordinary joker, getting old before my time, For my heart's in Taumarunui on the Main Trunk Line." A hauler, he stops regularly at Taumarunui for breaks. There he meets a "Sheila" and falls in love. She changes her work hours to avoid him
AUTHOR: Words: Peter Cape (source: Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ)
EARLIEST DATE: 2009 (Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ)
KEYWORDS: love courting food rejection New Zealand
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, pp. 41, 223-224, "Taumarunui" (fragments of the text, none complete)
ALTERNATE TITLES:
Cootamundra
NOTES [58 words]: Although written by Peter Cape, a New Zealander, if the song is traditional, it appears to be in Australia. According to Garland, it is found there under the title "Cootamundra." I'm assuming that changing the name of the town in which the action happens qualifies as the folk process, and including the piece. But I'll admit to being dubious. - RBW
Last updated in version 4.3
File: Garl041

Tavern in the Town
DESCRIPTION: Singer laments her lover, who courted her ardently but now goes to a tavern and courts others while leaving her pining. She hopefully anticipates dying and being buried.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1883 (sheet music published by Shapiro, Bernstein & Co. of New York)
KEYWORDS: loneliness courting infidelity rejection abandonment
FOUND IN: Britain(England(All),Scotland(Aber)) US(MA) Canada(Newf) Ireland
REFERENCES (35 citations):
Sharp-OneHundredEnglishFolksongs 94, "A Brisk Young Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Leather-FolkLoreOfHerefordshire, pp. 205-206, "A Brisk Young Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Karpeles-TheCrystalSpring 44, "A Brisk Young Soldier, or Died for Love" (1 text, 1 tune, short enough that I file it here although it could be "Love Has Brought Me to Despair" or something else)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 497, "There Is a Tavern in the Town"; Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Wt 424, "When I Wore My Apron Low" (2 texts)
Kidson-TraditionalTunes, pp. 44-46, "My True Love Once He Courted Me" (4 texts, 4 tunes)
Palmer-EnglishCountrySongbook, #82, "The Brisk Young Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Palmer-FolkSongsCollectedBy-Ralph-VaughanWilliams, #42, "A Briskk Young Sailor" (1 text, 1 tune)
Belden-BalladsSongsCollectedByMissourFolkloreSociety, pp. 478-480, "The Blue-Eyed Boy" (4 texts, though "D" is a fragment, probably of "Tavern in the Town" or "The Butcher Boy" or some such)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 259, "I'll Hang My Harp on a Willow Tree" (2 fragments, named for that key line from "Tavern in the Town" which occurs in both fragments, but the "A" text is mostly "Pretty Little Foot")
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 259, "I'll Hang My Harp on a Willow Tree" (2 tunes plus text excerpts)
Greig/Duncan6 1169, "Died for Love" (11 texts, 8 tunes); 1171, "There Is a Tavern in the Town" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenryssSongsOfThePeople H683, p. 393, "The Apron of Flowers" (1 text, 1 tune -- apparently a collection of floating verses including one that goes here)
OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin 81, "Last Night Being Windy" (3 texts, 1 tune)
Reeves/Sharp-TheIdiomOfThePeople 20, "A Brisk Young Lover" (5 texts)
Hamer-GarnersGay, p. 61, "There Is a Tavern in the Town" (1 text, 1 tune)
Korson-PennsylvaniaSongsAndLegends, pp. 48-49, "I Wish In Vain" (1 text, 1 tune)
Killion/Waller-ATreasuryOfGeorgiaFolklore, p. 258, "A Railroad Boy" (1 text, short enough that it might be either "The Butcher Boy" [Laws P24] or "Tavern in the Town")
Jackson-PopularSongsOfNineteenthCenturyAmerica, pp. 210-213, "There Is a Tavern in the Town" (1 text, 1 tune)
Spaeth-ReadEmAndWeep, pp. 84-85, "There Is a Tavern in the Town" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 180, "There Is A Tavern In The Town" (1 text)
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #137, "There Is a Tavern in the Town" (1 text)
Fuld-BookOfWorldFamousMusic, pp. 572-573, "There Is a Tavern in the Town"
Pound-AmericanBalladsAndSongs, 23, p. 62, "There Is a Tavern in the Town" (1 text; the "A" text is "The Butcher Boy")
Peacock, pp. 705-706, "She Died in Love" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hopkins-SongsFromTheFrontAndRead, p. 32, "Tavern in the Town" (1 text, 1 tune)
Scott-ACollectorsNotebook-31TraditionalSongs, p. 7, "The Sailor's Lament" (1 text, 1 tune, rather short, and with elements of "The Butcher Boy" [Laws P24], "Tavern in the Town," and perhaps even "Love Has Brought Me to Despair" [Laws P25]; if I had to file it with one, it would probably be "The Butcher Boy," but I'm not sure; Roud lists it as #60, which is both "Tavern in the Town" and "Love Has Brought Me to Despair")
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 62-63, "There Is a Tavern in the Town" (1 text, 1 tune)
Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 203-204, "There Is a Tavern in the Town" (1 text, 1 tune)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 140-141, "The Tavern in the Town" (1 text, filed under "The Butcher Boy")

DT, TAVTOWN*
ADDITIONAL: Henry Randall Waite, _College Songs: A Collection of New and Popular Songs of the American Colleges_, new and enlarged edition, Oliver Ditson & Co., 1887, pp. 4-5, "There Is a Tavern in the Town" (1 text, 1 tune)

SEE ALSO:
Lomax-FolkSongsOfNorthAmerica 229, "Hard, Ain't It Hard" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 185, "Hard, Ain't It Hard" (1 text)

DT, TAVTOWN AINTHARD*
ST ShH94 (Full)
Roud #60

RECORDINGS:
Amy Birch, "Over Yonder's Hill" (on Voice11)
"Pops" Johnny Connors, "There is an Alehouse" (on IRTravellers01)
Rudy Vallee, "Tavern in the Town" (Victor 24739, 1934)
Mrs. Thomas Walters, "She Died in Love" (on PeacockCDROM) [one verse only]

SEE ALSO:
Almanac Singers, "Hard, Ain't It Hard" (General 5019A, 1941; on Almanac01, Almanac03, AlmanacCD1)
Woody Guthrie, "Hard Ain't It Hard" (Folk Tunes 150, n.d., probably mid-1940s)

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Firth b.28(6a/b) View 7 of 8, "There Is A Tavern In The Town," R. March and Co. (London), 1877-1884

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Love Has Brought Me to Despair" [Laws P25]
cf. "I Know My Love" (floating lyrics)
cf. "Oh, Johnny, Johnny" (floating lyrics)
cf. "The Rashy Muir" (tune, per Greig/Duncan6)

ALTERNATE TITLES:
There Is an Alehouse in Yonder Town
There's a Tavern in the Town
Up The Green Meadow
Adieu, Adieu, Adieu!

NOTES [492 words]: The overlap between this song and the "Butcher Boy" cluster is obvious; whether they're the same song is a Talmudic question. -PJS

The 1891 sheet music credits this piece to F. J. Adams. The earliest known printing of "Tavern" (as opposed to the presumably related Cornish miners' song "There is an Alehouse in Yonder Town"), however, does not give the author's name. The printing in the 1887 edition of College Songs lists it as copyright by Wm. H. Hills but lists no author.

Alan Lomax calls "Hard Ain't It Hard" a reworking of this piece, and I'm going along on the principle that it certainly isn't a traditional song (given that it's by Woody Guthrie). I don't think it's that simple, though; the "Hard ain't it hard" chorus clearly derives from "Ever After On." - RBW

Yes, Rudy Vallee recorded it too. And blew the lyrics, I might add [My understanding is that the people around him were trying, with great success, to crack him up - RBW]. But clearly the song remained current in pop culture as well as folk culture. It was also reputed to have been popular among collegiates. - PJS

"Hang my harp on a willow tree" may be taken from Psalms 137:2 [King James] via Thomas Haynes Bayly. Cf. "I'll Hang My Harp on a Willow Tree." Broadside Bodleian Firth b.28(6a/b) View 7 of 8 ascribes "There Is A Tavern In The Town" to W.H. Hills. - BS

Somewhere in my youth, someone (probably school authorities) forced upon us a game, "Head, Shoulders, Knees and Toes." Thirty-odd years later, I recalled it for some reason, and realize that the tune is an up-tempo version of this. If the song was inflicted upon other classes than mine, it may be that the song has had some sort of horrid second life. - RBW

Amy Birch's version on Voice11 has a first line "Over yonder's hill there is an old house" but continues to be enough like "Tavern in the Town" that I put it here rather than Laws P25 or any of the other songs in this cluster.

Greig/Duncan6 [on #1169]: "Noted by George F. Duncan from mother's singing in 1875."
The Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople "complete" text is a composite of eight English texts:
"The composite text I have printed contains seventeen stanzas, and omits none of the elements in Sharp's twelve English versions. Full as this composite text is, however, it does not contain all the elements noted by other collectors, nor would it be possible to make a satisfactory synthesis which includes every element." The result is a collection of floating verses that includes the usual "Tavern in the Town" verses.

The count of texts for Reeves/Sharp-TheldiomOfThePeople includes four fragments from other collections.

If "Tavern In the Town" is limited to the college song then I have misclassified OCroinin/Cronin-TheSongsOfElizabethCronin, Greig/Duncan6 and others. Steve Roud has revised his distribution of the family among Roud numbers #60, #409, #860, #18828, #18829, #18830, #18831, #18832 and #18834 (the "college song"). - BS

Last updated in version 6.0

File: ShH94

Taxation of America

DESCRIPTION: "While I relate my story, Americans give ear, Of Britain's fading glory You presently shall hear." The singer tells the "true relation" or "the taxation of North America." "North, and Bute his father" propose to tax the Americas, but the Americans rebel

AUTHOR: unknown (credited to Peter St. John in Eggleston)

EARLIEST DATE: c. 1847 (Forget-Me-Not-Songster; Moore's "Songs and Ballads of the American Revolution," itself published in 1856, dates it to 1765)

KEYWORDS: money patriotic

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1760-1820 - Reign of George III

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
Forget-Me-Not-Songster, pp. 55-62, "Taxation of America" (1 text)
Thompson-APioneerSongster 44, "The Taxation of America" (1 text)
Spaeth-WeepSomeMoreMyLady, pp. 3-5, "Taxation of America" (1 text)
cf. Gardner/Chickering-BalladsAndSongsOfSouthernMichigan, p. 477, "American Taxation" (source notes only)

Roud #3687

NOTES [1357 words]: After the French and Indian War (Seven Year's War, for which see "Brave Wolfe"), Britain faced both a new obligation (the need to administer Quebec) and a huge financial burden (a national debt of 122,603,336 pounds, according to Middlekauff, p. 57; Lyon, p. 291, cites the rounder figure of 140 million pounds, noting that just the interest on this debt absorbed half the government’s ordinary income). And Britain had been taxed to the hilt. So attempts were made to gain additional money from the American colonies. (Lyon, p. 296, notes that at this time the tax burden on the citizens of Britain averaged 26 shillings a head, which was nearly unbearable; the colonies, before the passage of the various revenue-raising measures, averaged only 1 shilling per head! There would be tax protests in England as well as the Americas by the late 1770s; Lyon, p. 301.)

It's interesting to note that the Spaeth text never says "what" tax North and Bute wished to gather. As a matter of fact, the taxes on the Americans were quite mild compared to what the British suffered, and in many cases the British actually lowered the duties (e.g. the tariff on imported molasses was cut in half) -- it's just that the administration would actually attempt to "collect" the taxes, which had been widely evaded (Middlekauff, p. 61). The amounts were trivial (the most optimistic projection was 200,000 pounds per year, according to Middlekauff, p. 62, which wouldn't even cover the interest on the British debt, and most estimates were in the 75,000 pound range).

Given the overall incompetence of this song (which seems to have been known only from broadside and perhaps the Guernsey manuscript), it strikes me as quite possible that the author didn't "know" what taxes caused the colonists to revolt. For a song on the subject that's a little closer to actual reality, see "Old Granny Wales (Granny O'Whale, Granua Weal)."

Among those mentioned in Spaeth's text of this piece:

"North": Lord Frederick North, second Earl of Guilford (1732-1792). A political success from an early age, he became First Lord of the Treasury (in effect, prime minister) in 1770; he was the leader most responsible for the increased friction between the government and the colonies, though he was perhaps more willing to compromise than the ministers under him -- certainly more so than the King he served.

North repeatedly tried to find solutions for the American problems, or failing that to resign (Cook, pp. 294-295), but George III would not release him because North was the only man with enough clout to form a government who also would go along with George's wishes. North finally was allowed to leave office after Yorktown, when the opposition in parliament became so strong that North simply could not maintain a government. (Cook, pp. 357-358, says George tried to keep him on even then, but North knew the confidence motion was coming, and quit.) The American mess really wasn't his fault; it was George III's. But it was easy to blame things on North.

Ironically, North would briefly return to the government, working with Charles James Fox, in effect in opposition to George III (February 1783; Cook, p. 375); this was the government that in September finally ratified the peace with the U. S. -- though it might have come some months earlier had not the Fox/North coalition interfered with the work of the previous Shelburne government. The King hated the Fox/North team so much that he called upon 24-year-old William Pitt the Younger to form a government in December (Cook, p. 377)

"Bute his father": Presumably John Stuart, Third Earl of Bute (1713-1792). He wasn't North's father, but he was Prime Minister 1762-1763. His brief period of power, however, had little effect on colonial relations that I can see, though he was personally close to George III, to whom he had once been tutor. Sinclair-Stevenson, p. 115, even speculates that "perhaps [George III's] deep devotion for the handsome and elegant Lord Bute was not entirely platonic." Hadlow too (p. 107), mentions the report that Bute had a "very handsome person," and speculates that this was why Frederick the father of George III came to notice him. But this is not evidence of anything. Given how straitlaced George III was, I rather doubt Sinclair-Stevenson's implication -- especially given George's myriad children. On the other hand, the letters cited on p. 111 of Hadlow shows that George had an extreme confidence in Bute, as if the older man really were his father or a lover. Bute was unpopular everywhere; Lyon, p. 291, notes that he was burned in effigy in Britain as well as the colonies.

It's just possible that we should re-reference the pronoun and treat "his father" not as North's father but as George III's. Borneman,p. 264, does say that George "idealized" Bute and implies that George may have treated him as a father-figure (George's father Frederick had died when George was 13, and in any case there was an unwritten law in the Hannoverian dynasty that fathers and their heirs always despaired each other).

A third possibility is that the remark "Bute, his father" is a slam at George III's legitimacy.

Middlekauff, p. 20, has much to say of Bute, "a Scot, the advisor -- not, as some whispered, the love -- of George's mother." Lyon, p. 291, reports that John Wilkes's North Britain in 1763 "published allegations of an affair between Bute and the king's mother." Horace Walpole -- a distinguished but hardly an unbiased reporter -- said the same thing (Hadlow, p. 108). Obviously the song might have been making the whispers explicit. However, there is no direct evidence of a relationship between the two, who in any case worked together long after George was born -- and besides, George III had clear resemblances to his Hannoverian ancestors.

Middlekauff adds, "For the next five years [Bute] served as the prince's tutor and friend. The friendship seems to have developed easily -- in part, we may suppose, because George craved affection and kindness and Bute responded with both. Yet... Bute held the upper hand: he was twenty-five years older, strongly opinionated, obviously intelligent, and he was in charge of the prince's education. Although Bute possessed the learning required, he was not a good teacher.... Bute himself knew much but did not understand men or human conduct.... Master and pupil then and later commonly mistook inflexibility for personal strength and character" (p. 20).

The colonies blamed Bute for the much-hated Stamp Act, but in fact it was proposed by Grenville after Bute had ceased to be Prime Minister. At worst, Bute's responsibility was indirect: As Prime Minister, he had created a plan to have the colonies pay for the troops based there (Middlekauff, p. 51). This is obviously reasonable, if you assume a standing army was needed there (and it probably was, with rebellious Canada to the north, Spanish Florida to the south, and constant conflicts with the Indians to the west as colonists kept trying to grab Indian land; Middlekauff, p. 54) -- but George III and Bute's successors refused to consult with the colonies about how to raise this money. By contrast with his predecessor William Pitt, who had been largely responsible for beating the French in Canada, Bute must have seemed a great disappointment.

"Green" (sic.): Presumably Nathaniel Greene (1742-1786), largely responsible for the success of the Colonial campaigns in the south after he succeeded Gates in 1780 (Jameson, p. 279).

Gates: Horatio Gates (c. 1728-1806), the theoretical victor at the key battle of Saratoga, though hindsight shows that he really had little to do with it: he was later appointed to command in the south, but botched matters and had to be relieved by Greene (Jameson, p. 260).

Putnam: Probably Israel Putnam (1718-1790), though it might be his cousin Rufus (1738-1824). Neither was a great success (in fact, both were rather disastrously bad officers), but Israel Putnam was still popular in 1779 when he was paralyzed and had to retire from the military (Jameson, pp. 534-535).

Conquering Washington: Presumably you know who he is. - RBW

Bibliography

- Hadlow: Janice Hadlow, A Royal Experiment: The Private Life of King George III, Henry Holt, 2014 (published in Britain by William Collins as The Strangest Family)
- Lyon: Ann Lyon, Constitutional History of the United Kingdom, Cavendish, 2003

Last updated in version 3.8
File: CG477a

Taxes, The

DESCRIPTION: "There never was such taxes in Ireland before." There are seven verses of things to be taxed. "They'll double tax the hobble skirts and table up some laws, But the devil says he'll tax them if he gets them in his claws"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads)
KEYWORDS: humorous political
FOUND IN: Ireland
REFERENCES (1 citation):
OLochlainn-IrishStreetBallads 4, "The Taxes" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #3033
NOTES [75 words]: The British government was notorious for the number of fees it charged (recall that this was the cause of the American revolution). My guess, though, is that this comes from the period of the Napoleonic Wars. For one thing, Ireland lost its independent parliament after the 1798 rising. For another, the British government, which hated deficits, had to raise revenue dramatically to keep up its war spending. The result was a long list of new taxes. - RBW

Tay Bridge Disaster, The

DESCRIPTION: "The bridge, the bridge, the wondrous bridge, That spans the Firth of Tay, The greatest work of human skill" is not strong enough to stand a great storm. A train starts to cross the bridge, which collapses. Many die. Listeners should "lean upon the Lord"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee)

KEYWORDS: death wreck train technology

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Dec. 18, 1879 - The Tay Railroad Bridge collapses; 75 people on a train crossing the bridge die

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Gatherer-SongsAndBalladsOfDundee 14, "The Tay Bridge Disaster" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #21586
File: Gath014

Tay Bridge, The

DESCRIPTION: "The Tay bridge is broken and I'm come to mend it"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan8)

KEYWORDS: nonballad river

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Dec. 18, 1879 - The Tay Railroad Bridge collapses; 75 people on a train crossing the bridge die

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan8 1621, "The Tay Bridge" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Roud #13075
File: GrD81621

Tay, The

DESCRIPTION: The singer warns young men against women overly dependent upon tay (tea). He works and earns a good living, but his wife wastes the money on tay. At last he breaks kettle and pot. She attacks him; he gives in and lets her have her tay

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1924 (Sam Henry collection)

KEYWORDS: drink humorous husband wife fight warning

FOUND IN: Ireland

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Henry/Huntingdon/Herrmann-SamHenrysSongsOfThePeople H25a, pp. 502-503, "The Tay" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1310

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Wee Cup of Tay" (theme)
cf. "The Old Woman Drinking Her Tea" (theme: husband dominated by tea-drinking wife)

File: HHH25a
DESCRIPTION: "The Pahekas [Europeans] came with their rum and their god, And soon the broad lands of our fathers were sold, But the voice of Te Kooti said, 'Hold the land! Hold!' Exult for Te Kooti e-ha!'" The story of how he was oppressed is retold

AUTHOR: Words: Probably Arthur Desmond

EARLIEST DATE: 1889 (Sydney Bulletin)

KEYWORDS: New Zealand battle freedom

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ, pp. 87-88, "The Song of Te Kooti" (1 text)
Colquhoun-NZ-Folksongs-SongOfAYoungCountry, p. 39 in the 1972 edition, "Te Kooti, E Ha" (1 text, 1 tune); dropped from the 2010 edition

RECORDINGS:
Barbie, Neal, Megan, and Simon [Colquhoun], "Te Kooti, E Ha" (on NZSongYngCntry)

NOTES [1323 words]: Both Bailey/Roth-ShantiesByTheWay-NZ and Colquhoun attribute their texts to the 1889 Sydney Bulletin, yet they differ substantially. I have no way to explain the difference.

The story of the colonizers' treatment of the Maori much resembles the American mistreatment of the original inhabitants of North America: There was a treaty, the Treaty of Waitangi -- the "Waters of Lamentation" (Sinclair, p. 70). Many Maori leaders argued that it was too late to simply expel the white men, so the Treaty was signed on February 9, 1840.

And then, of course, the white men started exploiting and pushing back the Maoris. Some resisted. Te Kooti had been imprisoned, probably unfairly, and escaped in 1868 and founded a nativized variant on Christianity, "Ringatu" (from Maori "ringa+t," "hands-raised up," as if in prayer, according to NewZealandDictionary, p. 227). But he also attacked the Europeans, causing much slaughter before he was driven away. This represented the end of the Maori Wars. (Sinclair, p. 145). He came to be remembered as a sort of Maori Robin Hood.

Maddock, p. 103, has a drawing of Te Kooti, and tells his story, "[I]n 1868, Arakirangi Te Kooti escaped from the Chatham Islands where he had been imprisoned, without trial, for two years on suspicion of furnishing rebels with arms. During that time a vision inspired him to found the Ringatu Church (still strong today in areas of Maoridom), which... blended aspects of Pakeha Christianity with others of Maori spiritual belief, drawing a close analogy between their plight and that of the captive Children of Israel. Evading what seems to have been a not very vigilant guard... Te Kooti and some compatriots commandeered a schooner and made safe passage to home ground near Gisborne, where their arrival cause considerable alarm."

"Colonial defenses were now largely the business of volunteer militia... [who] inflicted a considerable reverse upon Te Kooti, who, in revenge, struck back shortly after at the rural settlement of Matawhai. There, 70 people, 37 Maori and 33 Pakeha, were slain in what is referred to by writers of opposing viewpoints as either a massacre or a retaliation."

"For years to come, as the prophet and his people were hounded from one desolate hiding place to another, the very name 'Te Kooti' would strike terror into Pakeha hearts."

Mein Smith, p. 74, says, "Te Kooti Arikirangi Te Turuki... is remembered as a prophet who defied injustice. From 1865 his iwi [tribe/clan], Ngati Porou, were split between a government facton of kupapa Maori and Pai Mariri supporters. Te Kooti had fought on the government's side, but was arrested with hundreds of Pai Mariri followers and imprisoned on the Chatham Islands without trial as a suspected spy. There he founded his own religion, Ringatu, or the Upraised Hand, and engineered a brilliant escape with 300 followers to New Zealand in 1868. Pursued by colonial and kupapa troops, he waged guerilla war, escaping to the remote Urewera district, until he finally took refuge in 1872 in the King Country, becoming the colony's most wanted outlaw..... Surrounded by ambiguities, neither chief nor tribal leader, he lived in exile yet, unlike other outlaws, he received a pardon. He became the subject of narrative fiction, astride his white horse, even before his death. Two of New Zealand's earliest films were Rewei's Last Stand, and The Te Kooti Trail, shot by Rudall Hayward in 1927."

Ell, p. 254, in the entry "Te Kooti Rikirangi (?1830-93) says, "This often-maligned warrior, against whom the last pitched battles were fought in 1870, spent his last 20 years in seclusion developing his faith of Ringatu. The religion is still widely practiced in Maoridom, particularly on the East Coast. Te Kooti actually fought against the Hau Hau [a Maori sect founded by Te Ua Haumene, whose members cried out 'Hapa, hapa paimariri hau' as they went into battle; NewZealandEncyclopedia, p. 246] with the colonial forces in 1865, but was arrested as a suspected spy and shipped without trial to the Chatham Islands. His resentment, coupled with his powers of leadership, led to his leading an escape of Hau Hau prisoners who sailed back to New Zealand aboard a captured schooner. Te Kooti's religious fervour and leadership were enhanced when he sacrificed a relative to placate an ocean storm en route. Authority was awaiting the escapers and there were ensuing battlers in the Poverty Bay hills. From there Te Kooti led his force against those whom he believed had wronged him. They murdered 33 British and 27 Maori in Poverty Bay before carrying the war through the Urewera country and on to Taupo. Te Kooti escaped the final fight at Te Porere beneath Tongariro in 1870 and in 1871 took shelter behind the Confiscation Line, in the King Country, with the Maori King. From there he exercised his influence as a religious leader of the Ringatu cult, a faith derived from Hau Hauism, Christianity and Judaism.... Te Kooti was pardoned in 1883. His story is told in Te Kooti Rikirangi: general and prophet, by W. Hugh Ross (Collins, Auckland, 1966).

NewZealandEncyclopedia, pp. 533-534: "TE KOOTI, Rikiranki To Turuki (c. 1830-93) was a Maori guerilla leader, and the founder of the Ringatu church. He was a ruthless fighter, and for years eluded government forces relentlessly pursuing him through the North Island.... [In the cool light of history it has become apparent that he was a remarkable, charismatic leader, who has been more sinned against than sinning."

"He was born near Gisborne of good family but not of chiefly rank, was educated at Waerenga-a-hika Mission School near Gisborne, spent some time as a horse breaker and then as a seaman. For a period he was commander of a small schooner, trading along the East Coast. "Te Kooti actually supported the Pakehas at the siege of Waerenga-a-hika in 1865, but immediately afterward he was accused of supplying the Hauhau rebels" with supplies and information. Refused a trial, "One story is that he gained his name 'Te Kooti' from his fellow prisoners, who overheard him persistently asking to be taken to court." Imprisoned on the Chathams, he studied the Old Testament and founded Ringatu after claiming a revelation. So he escaped and took up the fight against the Europeans, after being attacked at Ruakitiri Gorge, and "decided that he would demonstrate that he was not a man to be trifled with, and in November 1868 attacked Matawhero, killing 33 Europeans and 37 friendly Maoris. Closely pursued by troops, he took up a position on Ngatapa Hill. [Colonel] Whitmore attacked and, after a three-day siege, drove him out into the Urewera Bush." After the battle, 120 of his followers were executed.

"For the next three years Te Kooti was harassed and pursued by government forces and colonials," fighting an effective guerilla war. He then went into the King Country, where he expounded Ringatu, making no attempt to fight the Europeans. He was pardoned in 1883, although people were still so afraid of him that he had to cancel a visit to Gisborne in 1889.

"Te Kooti has been persistently linked with the fanatical Hauhau sect, mainly because he adopted the upraised hand symbol, not as in the case of the Hauhaus as a means of protection from bullets, but as an act of homage to God. It was easy to transfer the Hauhau image to Te Kooti, because he was so intensely feared.... He was a small man, softly spoken and gentle in manner, and his Ringatu Church, still influential in the Bay of Plenty, is also noted for its quiet and dignified ritual." There is at least one other song pertaining to Te Kooti mentioned in the Index, "The Row at the Waikato" by Charles R. Thatcher, which opens, ":"A panic's been raging up in town, News from the Waikato has just come down, That Te Kooti, a warrior of renown, Is going to do the settlers brown." It is set to the tune of "The Cork Leg"; see the Same Tune data in that song for references. - RBW Bibliography

• Maddock: Shirley Maddock, A Pictorial History of New Zealand, Heinemann Reed, 1988
• Mein Smith: Philippa Mein Smith, A Concise History of New Zealand, Cambridge University Press, 2005

Last updated in version 5.2
File: BaRo087
Teach the Rover

DESCRIPTION: Teach, an outlaw captain, goes to Carolina after the Act of Grace, but soon turns pirate. Finally he is overtaken by Maynard's crew. In the desperate battle that follows, Maynard boards the pirate ship and himself kills Teach.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1891 (Ashton-RealSailorSongs)
KEYWORDS: pirate battle
HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1717 - Act of Grace pardons most of the Jacobite leaders of the 1715 rebellion.
1718 - Lieutenant Robert Maynard's frigate captures the pirate ship of Edward Teach. Teach is shot in the fighting.

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (4 citations):
Grigson-PenguinBookOfBallads 78, "Teach the Rover" (1 text)
Ashton-RealSailorSongs, #79, "The Downfall of Piracy" (1 text)
Frank-NewBookOfPirateSongs 17, "The Downfall of Piracy" (1 text, 1 tune; from separate sources; #17 in the first edition)
ST PBB078 (Partial)
Roud #8115

NOTES [690 words]: Edward Teach is the actual name of the pirate usually known as "Blackbeard." (At least, "Teach" is the name he acknowledged; Hendrickson, p. 208, mentions a report that he was born Edward Drummond.) This song agrees with The General History of Pirates (usually attributed to Daniel Defoe, but this is now much doubted) in describing him as quite successful and bloody, but available records (such as the log of a ship the History asserts fought against Teach) seem to indicate that much of the History's account is fiction (e.g. DictPirates, p. 26, says that the History "combined fact and fiction," declaring that "To straightforward reporting of Teach's adventures, Defoe added lurid stories portraying him as a horrifying monster.")

What is fact is that Teach's short career did not yield many rich prizes, and the records do not indicate that he harmed his victims.

According to Herman, pp. 248-249, Teach was a Bristolman who had fought in the War of the Spanish Succession. He made his base in the maze that was North Carolina's Outer Banks, making it hard for large ships to pursue him. This kept him safe from the two Royal Navy sloops of war sent to hunt him down, but the captain of the Pearle sent Lt. Maynard aboard a small boat to catch Teach. Their battle, on November 21, was fought in conditions of no wind, so apart from one broadside Teach managed to fire at the navy force, it was all hand-to-hand combat. Reportedly Teach's body had been pierced by five pistol shots and 25 sword wounds. But the corpse was beheaded and the body thrown overboard, so this cannot be proved.

But, of course, what counts is not what actually happened but what people thought happened. Amazing stories were legend -- e.g. that Blackbeard's body, after it was thrown in the sea, swam around the ship several times before sinking (Hendrickson, p. 209). There was also a report that he married 14 different women (Hendrickson, p. 208), although few of them seem to have been named. And then there is the hair. Cordingly, p. 13, quotes the History as follows:

"Captain Teach assumed the cognomen of Black-beard, from that large quantity of hair, which, like a frightful meteor, covered his face, and frightened America more than any other comet that has appeared for a long time.

This beard was black, which he suffered to grow of an extravagant length; as to breadth, it came up to his eyes; he was accustomed to twist it with ribbons... and turn them about his ears; in time of action, he wore a sling over his shoulders, with three brace of pistols, hanging in holsters like bandoliers, and stuck lighted matches under his hat, which appearing on both sides of his face, his eyes naturally looking fierce and wild, made him altogether such a figure, that imagination cannot form an idea of a fury, from Hell, to look more frightful."

Brumwell/Speck, p. 293, report a legend that he drank his rum spiked with gunpowder. Some of this, like the part about the matches, is probably exaggerated (DictPirates, p. 26, says that Teach's "bizzare beard and clothing [were] not mentioned by anyone who met Teach"), but Cordingly, pp. 13-14, quotes several sources supporting his long beard tied with ribbons.

There was, according to Cordingly, p. 24, a successful (but far from accurate) play from 1798 called "Blackbeard, or The Captive Princess." I don't know if it influenced this song; it doesn't sound like it would have. Robert Louis Stevenson's Master of Ballantrae (1889) is perhaps a more likely influence. DictPirates, pp. 27-28, mentions movies allegedly about Teach ("Blackbeard the Pirate," 1952, and "Blackbeard's Ghost," 1968); these obviously had no effect on tradition.

According to Firth, the earliest version of this is from The Worcester Garland, a copy of which is in the British Library (1162.c.4 [89]). But he offers no date. Frank says it is from c. 1765. Frank also mentions, without rejecting it out of hand, a report that this was written by a young Benjamin Franklin based on news reports of the time. His only evidence seems to be that Franklin wrote other pieces based on reports from the same paper. - RBW

Bibliography

- DictPirates: Jan Rogozinsky, Pirates, Facts on File, 1995 (reprinted 1997 by Wordsworth as The Wordsworth Dictionary of Pirates; this is the edition I used)
- Firth: C. H. Firth, Publications of the Navy Records Society, 1907 (available on Google Books)

Last updated in version 4.3
File: PBB078

Teacher Lick de Gal

DESCRIPTION: Jamaican patois: Mother patches the girl's shift, but she burns the same spot; teacher beats the girl while her mother holds her, and she turns over. The girl has a baby; they beat and fine her. Bitter casava poisons Joe Brownie.

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (Murray-FolkSongsOfJamaica)
KEYWORDS: violence clothes death pregnancy mother poison food
FOUND IN: West Indies(Jamaica)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Murray-FolkSongsOfJamaica, pp. 43-44, "Teacher Lick de Gal" (1 text, 1 tune)
ADDITIONAL: Noel Dexter and Godfrey Taylor, _Mango Time - Folk Songs of Jamaica_ (Kingston: Ian Randle Publishers, 2007), pp. 112-113, "Teacha Lick de Gyal" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jim Morse, _Folk Songs of the Caribbean_ (New York: Bantam Books, 1958), pp. 110-111, "Teacher Lick de Gal" (1 text, 1 tune)

RECORDINGS:
Edric Connor with the Caribbeans and Earl Inkman, "Teacher Lick de Gal" (on WIEConnor01)

NOTES [41 words]: Murray-FolkSongsOfJamaica does not explain what is going on. Is the burned petticoat connected, at least symbolically, to the pregnancy? Is Joe Brownie the father? Was his death an accident? Is there another version that answers the questions? - BS
Last updated in version 3.7
File: JaMu043

Teams at Wanapitei, The

DESCRIPTION: "In eighteen hundred and ninety-five Away to the woods we thought we'd strike... To go to work at Wanapitei." The song briefly describes the trip to the woods, and the work -- but most of the song is devoted to the horses in the teams

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Fowke)
KEYWORDS: logger work lumbering horse
FOUND IN: Canada(Ont,West)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Fowke-LumberingSongsFromTheNorthernWoods #21, "The Teams at Wanapitei" (1 text, tune referenced)
Teamster in Jack MacDonald's Crew, The

DESCRIPTION: Leslie Stubbs was a teamster "who came to the lumberlands his family to maintain." He complains of headache and becomes sick. MacDonald and Tom Proctor take him home to his wife in Sherman Mills. Doctor Harris cannot save him.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1965 (Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland)

KEYWORDS: death lumbering disease doctor

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
- Jan 23, 1908 - death of Earl Stubbs

FOUND IN: Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland, pp. 165-167, 256, "The Teamster in Jack MacDonald's Crew" (1 text, 1 tune)

Roud #13997

NOTES [39 words]: Ives-DriveDullCareAway-PrinceEdwardIsland: "Earl Stubbs, aged 28, having contracted spinal meningitis in a lumbercamp, died at his home in Sherman Mills, Maine, January 23, 1908, and Dr Francis Harris had signed the death certificate" - BS

File: IvDC165

---

Teapots at the Fire, The

DESCRIPTION: A midnight fire at Labor Union Hall. As the fire burns to the basement the local women, who are named, have their eyes on the teapots. Now, "In every home in St John's town, If you go in today, You'll find a fancy teapot in a cupboard stowed away."

AUTHOR: Johnny Burke (1851-1930)

EARLIEST DATE: 1964 (Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing); reportedly written 1928

KEYWORDS: theft fire humorous moniker

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Blondahl-NewfoundlandersSing, p. 27, "The Teapots at the Fire" (1 text, 1 tune)
- ADDITIONAL: Johnny Burke, _Burke's Christmas Songster 1926_, self-published, 1926 (PDF copy available on the Memorial University of Newfoundland web site), [no page number], "The Scramble for the Teapots at the Fire" (1 text)
- Johnny Burke (John White, Editor), _Burke's Ballads_, no printer listed, n.d. (PDF available on Memorial University of Newfoundland web site), p. 16, "The Teapots at the Fire" (1 text)
- Johnny Burke (William J. Kirwin, editor), _John White's Collection of Johnny Burke Songs_, Harry Cuff Publications, St. John's, 1981, #55, pp. 88-89, "The Scramble for the Teapots at the Fire" (1 text)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
- cf. "The Kelligrews Soiree" (tune)
- cf. "Mariposa" (theme)
- cf. "The Middlesex Flora" (theme)
- cf. "The Old Mayflower" (theme)
- cf. "The Irawaddy" (theme)

NOTES [14 words]: For a brief biography of Johnny Burke, see the notes to "The Kelligrew's Soiree." - RBW

Last updated in version 4.4

File: Blon027

---

Teasing Songs

DESCRIPTION: A teasing song hints of a bawdy or ribald rhyme, but avoids it at the last minute, as in this example: Suzanne was a lady with plenty of class / Who knocked the boys dead when she Teddy Bear, Teddy Bear, Go Upstairs

DESCRIPTION: "Teddy bear, teddy bear, go upstairs, Teddy bear, teddy bear, say your prayers, Teddy bear, teddy bear, say goodnight, Teddy bear, teddy bear, turn out the light." "Teddy bear, teddy bear, turn around, Teddy bear, teddy bear, touch the ground." Etc.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1949 (McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks)

KEYWORDS: nonballad

FOUND IN: US(MA,MW,SE) New Zealand

REFERENCES (7 citations):
Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 110 ("I had a teddy bear dressed in green"); "(Teddy bear, teddy bear, look at the sky)" (2 texts); p. 111, "(Ladybird, ladybird, drop your purse)" (1 text)
McIntosh-FolkSongsAndSingingGamesofIllinoisOzarks, p. 104, "(Teddy bear, teddy bear, turn..."
Teddy O'Neill

DESCRIPTION: The singer has a dreadful dream of Teddy courting another girl. She recalls where they used to meet. They cannot meet now; he has gone across the sea to seek his fortune. She would rather he were still present, even if poor

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: before 1867 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3747))

KEYWORDS: love courting separation emigration poverty dream

FOUND IN: Ireland Britain(England(South))

REFERENCES (4 citations):
O'Connor-OldTimeSongsAndBalladOfIreland, p. 14, "Teddy O'Neal" (1 text)
Williams-Wiltshire-WSRO Mi 718, "Teddy O'Neile" (1 text)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2287, p. 154, "Teddy O'Neale" (1 reference)
DT, TEDONEIL

Roud #5207

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(3747), "Teddy O'Neale", J. Harkness (Preston)), 1840-1866; also Firth c.22(91), Harding B 11(3645), "Teddy O'Neale”; Firth b.28(6a/b) View 6 of 8, "Teddy O'Neal”; also 2806 c.15(168), Harding B 19(30), "Teddy O'Neile"

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Maggie of Coleraine" (tune)
cf. "The Girls of Coleraine" (tune)

SAME TUNE:
Maggie of Coleraine (File: HHH657)
The Girls of Coleraine (File: HHH064)

NOTES [171 words]: The Bodleian broadsides reverse the first two verses so that the first line is "I went to the cabin ..." and the second verse begins "I dreamt but last night ..." - BS

Edwin Wolf 2nd, American Song Sheets, Slip Ballads, and Political Broadsides 1850-1870, Library Company of Philadelphia, 1963, p. 154, lists an early broadside published by Wrigley where the first line is "I've come to the cabin he danced his wee jigs in." Thus there seems to have been a lot of variety in the form of the song from a very early date. According to William H. A. Williams, 'Twas Only an Irishman's Dream, University of Illinois Press, 1996, p. 73, this version was published in 1843, and is pretty clearly an "Irish Paddy" comedy song, since the next lines are "As neat a mud palace as ever was seen; And, consid'ring it served to keep poultry and pigs in, I'm sure it was always most elegant clean." It seems clear that there were both comic and serious versions of this from an early date, but I wouldn't bet on which came first. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.2

File: DTtedone

Teem Wa's, The (The Toom House)

DESCRIPTION: "Come hark a while, and I will speak Yonder's a house where I never saw reek." The young man who owns it explains that "the lasses they're so very scant." Assured that he can find a woman if he tries, he vows that there will be life in the house soon

AUTHOR: unknown
Teetotal Mill, The

DESCRIPTION: Tom and Bill are "discussing the merits of brandy and gin." Tom tells of the Teetotal Mill where you go to give up drink. After a test "you're very soon cured." They go to the mill and see drunken wrecks enter and come out healthy and happy. They cheer.

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1849 (broadside, NLSScotland L.C.Fol.178.A.2(016))

KEYWORDS: drink, dialog, friend

FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))

REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig/FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #144, pp. 1-2, "The Teetotal Mill" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan3 602, "The Teetotal Mill" (1 text)

Roud #5890

BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, 2806 c.14(172)[some words illegible], "The Teetotal Mill" ("Two jolly old topers once sat in an inn"), R. M'Intosh (Glasgow), 1849-1859; also Harding B 11(3751), Harding B 20(166), "The Teetotal Mill"

NLSScotland, L.C.Fol.178.A.2(016), "The Teetotal Mill," R. M'Intosh (Glasgow), 1849

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Villikens and His Dinah" (tune, per Greig)

NOTES [15 words]: Broadsides NLSScotland L.C.Fol.178.A.2(016) and Bodleian 2806 c.14(172) are duplicates. - BS

Last updated in version 2.4

File: GrD3602

Telegraph Wire, The

DESCRIPTION: "Oh, dear me, the world's on fire, news sent around on a telegraph wire! Lord have mercy, only think, news sent to Mexico quicker than a wink! Oh dear, what shall I do? Every year brings something new!" A catalog of marvels and changes of the modern age

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl)

KEYWORDS: technology

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
1752 and following - Franklin's experiments with lightning
1844 - Samuel Morse installs the first electromagnetic telegraph
1857, 1858, 1866 - Cyrus Field attempts to lay a transatlantic cable. (The 1857 attempts failed, the 1858 cable was briefly operational; the 1866 cable was the first true success)

FOUND IN: US(NE)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Warner-TraditionalAmericanFolkSongsFromAnneAndFrankWarnerColl 75, "The Telegraph Wire" (1 text, 1 tune)

ST Wa075 (Partial)

File: Wa075
Telephone Arguin' Blues

DESCRIPTION: Singer can't connect with "that scheming sparrow of mine" because the lines are busy with so many people arguing. He tries Central. "I can't get no message on the phone no matter nowhere I go." "I picked up the 'ceiver I could not hear your voice"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1930 (recording, Jaydee Short)
KEYWORDS: technology ordeal nonballad lover

RECORDINGS:
Jaydee Short, "Telephone Arguin' Blues" (Paramount 13043, 1930; as J.D. Short on USChartersHeroes)

NOTES [18 words]: Three line blues: the first line is repeated -- more or less -- and the last line completes the thought. - BS

Tell All the World, John

DESCRIPTION: "Tell all the world, John (x3), I know the other world is not like this." "Well I've never been to heaven but I've been told, I know the other... The gates are pearl and the streets are gold, I know the...." "One of these mornings." "The tallest tree..

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1950 (Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama)
KEYWORDS: religious nonballad floatingverses

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 173, "Tell All the World, John" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #12228

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "All My Trials" (floating lyrica) and references there

Tell Brother Elijah

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "No harm! no harm! Tell Brother Elijah! No harm! no harm! Come along to Jesus. Verse: O sinner (mourner, Christian, preachers), ain't you tired of sinning (mourning, praying, shouting)? Lay down your load of hell and Come along to Jesus"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1899 (Barton-OldPlantationHymns)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious Jesus

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Barton-OldPlantationHymns, p. 5, "Tell Bruddah Lijah" (1 text, 1 tune)

Tell Jesus

DESCRIPTION: Chorus: "Tell Jesus, done done all I can (x3), I can't do no more". Verses: "Went up on the mountain, Didn't go to stay, When my soul got happy, Then I stayed all day" and other floating verses

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute)
KEYWORDS: floatingverses nonballad religious Jesus

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 77, "Tell Jesus" (1 text, 1 tune; p. 129 in the 1901 edition)
Tell Me Dear Lassie the' Wye for to Woo

DESCRIPTION: "O tell me my bonny young lassie ... how for to woo." May I praise "your red cheeks like the morning," "lips like the rose when it's moistened wi' dew," and "een's pauky [lively] scorning"?

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: courting
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Greig/Duncan4 909, "Tell Me Dear Lassie the' Wye for to Woo" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Roud #6143
NOTES [27 words]: Greig/Duncan4 text is one verse on pp. 575-576 copied from Johnson, The Scots Musical Museum (1787-1803), song 540. The description is based on this fragment. - BS

Tell Me Lassie Will Ye Tak' Me

DESCRIPTION: After "we courted mony an hoor" a shepherd asks a lass to marry. He points to his sheep, house, and wealth. She says she has not decided and is too young. He says "The morn I'll draw up with Mary." She says "Here's my hand that I will tak' you"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1906 (Greig/Duncan4)
KEYWORDS: courting farming money dialog youth
FOUND IN: Britain(Scotland(Aber))
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #171, p. 2, "Tell Me, Lassie, Will Ye Tak' Me?" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan4 859, "Tell Me Lassie Will Ye Tak' Me" (1 text)
Roud #6252
File: GrD4859

Tell Me Now

DESCRIPTION: "I don't know why I went to war, Tell me, oh tell me now... Or what these folks are fighting for." "I don't know why I totes this gun." The singer doesn't know why the troops feed badly when the officers eat well. He hopes God will take him when he dies

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe)
KEYWORDS: soldier war food hardtimes death
FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 209-211, "Tell Me Now" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27894
NOTES [40 words]: Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe says, "This is what the negroes did to the 'Mlle. from Armentieres." I'd be more inclined to believe it if the dialect were truer. I suspect a white man wrote this and claimed it as a Black song. - RBW

Tell My Jesus "Morning"

DESCRIPTION: "In the morning when I rise, Tell my Jesus huddy (howdy?), oh. I wash my hands in the morning glory, Tell my Jesus huddy, oh." "Morning, Hester, morning, gal." "Say, brother Sammy, you got the order." "Pray, Tony, pray, boy, you got the order."
Tell My Mother

DESCRIPTION: "Tell my mother, Tell her for me, To meet me in the morning at Galilee, O, you better walk steady, Jesus (is) a-listening, Oh, you better walk steady, Jesus died, Oh, you better walk steady, Jesus is a-listening, All day long."

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1922 (Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5)
KEYWORDS: nonballad religious mother
FOUND IN: US(SE)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 765, "Tell My Mother" (1 short text, 1 tune)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Twelve Gates to the City" (floating lyrics)
NOTES [109 words]: The current description is based on the Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 text.
The "Tell my mother" verse of this appears in some versions of "Twelve Gates to the City," but the rest of the song obviously looks different, so I've split them. Jesus's instruction to meet him in Galilee was not issued to his mother; in Mark 16:7, the women who visit Jesus's tomb are told to inform "the disciples and Peter" that Jesus will meet them in Galilee. But given that Jesus's mother was said to have been with some of those women at the foot of the cross, and some of the other women were named Mary, perhaps some confusion is understandable. - RBW

Tell Old Bill

DESCRIPTION: "Tell old Bill, when he leaves home this morning, Tell old Bill, when he leaves home this evening, Tell old Bill... To let them downtown coons alone...." (An hour after) Bill left he is dead/murdered and being brought home in a "hurry-up wagon"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1927 (Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag)
KEYWORDS: death whore homicide
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 18-19, "Dis Mornin', Dis Evenin', So Soon" (1 text, 1 tune)
Shay-BarroomBallads/PiousFriendsDrunkenCompanions, pp. 200-201, "Dis Mornin', Dis Evenin', So Soon" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax/Lomax-AmericanBalladsAndFolkSongs, pp. 100-102, "Old Bill" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 78, "Tell Old Bill" (1 text)
DT, OLDBILL*
Roud #7876
RECORDINGS:
Milton Brown & His Brownies, "This Morning, This Evening, So Soon" (Bluebird B-5610, 1934)
CROSS-REFERENCES:

Tell Tale Tit

DESCRIPTION: "Tell, tale, tit, Your tongue shall be split. And all the little puppy dogs Shall have a little bit." Or, "...your mother's in a fit, Your father's in the washing tub, Tell tale tit."" Said to be used against "sneaks."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1972 (Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren)

KEYWORDS: playparty injury dog

FOUND IN: Britain New Zealand

REFERENCES (2 citations):
- Sutton-Smith-NZ-GamesOfNewZealandChildren/FolkgamesOfChildren, p. 126, "(Tell, tale, tit)" (1 text); p. 132, "(Tell, tale, tit)" (1 text)
- Peter and Iona Opie, _I Saw Esau: Traditional Rhymes of Youth_, #154, "(Tell Tale Tit)" (1 text)

File: SuSm126D

---

Tell Your Horse's Age

DESCRIPTION: Detailed instructions for determining a horse's age from its teeth, beginning "To tell the age of any horse, Inspect the lower jaw, of course," and ending "They longer get, project before, Till twenty, when we know no more."

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1948 ("Bit and Spur")

KEYWORDS: horse age nonballad recitation

FOUND IN: US

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 74, "Tell Your Horse's Age" (1 text)

File: Ohr074

---

Temperance Ship, The

DESCRIPTION: "The Temperance Ship is now afloat ... raise the temperance banner from the old Bay State to Indiana." "This ship has sailed four years or more." "Come join us then ye old and young"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1856 (Thompson-APioneerSongster)

KEYWORDS: drink nonballad political

FOUND IN: US(MA)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
- Thompson-APioneerSongster 82, "The Temperance Ship" (1 text)

File: TPS082

---

Tempest, The (Cease Rude Boreas)

DESCRIPTION: "Cease rude Boreas blustering killer... Messmates hear a brother sailor Sing the dangers of the sea." A storm comes up; the crew struggles mightily to survive. The mast falls, the ship leaks; they make it home and rejoice

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1827 (Journal from the Galaxy); Hugill thinks it dates from the 1700s

KEYWORDS: storm disaster ship sea

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (4 citations):
- Huntington-SongsTheWhalemenSang, pp. 70-72, "The Tempest" (1 text)
- Hugill-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 144-145, "Rude Boreas" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Kinsey-SongsOfTheSea, pp. 158-160, "Rude Boreas" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2252, p. 152, "The Storm" (1 reference)

File: TPS082
Ten Days of Finals, The
DESCRIPTION: On successive days of final examinations, the singer's true love gives to him a special gift.
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE:
KEYWORDS: bawdy parody humorous cumulative derivative
FOUND IN: Canada US(MW,SW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Cray-EroticMuse, pp. 373-374, "The Ten Days of Finals" (2 texts)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Twelve Days of Christmas" (tune)
File: EM373

Ten Little Furies
DESCRIPTION: "Ten little Furies, landing on so fine. One hit the round-down, Ting! Bang! Nine."
And so on through many different reasons for losses, until we're left with "One little Fury, being flown by Number one, Sugar in his petrol tanks, Good idea son!"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1969 (Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy)
KEYWORDS: technology navy death humorous derivative
FOUND IN: Britain(England)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy, pp. 108-109, "Ten Little Furies" (1 text, tune referenced)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ten Little Injuns" (tune)
NOTES [303 words]: Tawney-GreyFunnelLines-RoyalNavy lists the tune of this as "Ten Little Nigger Boys," which I believe is the item we've indexed as "Ten Little Injuns."
This sounds like a World War II song, but in the form printed by Tawney, it can't be. Both the plane involved (the "Fury") and the ship where Tawney supposedly found it (the Theseus) argue against it.
There was, according to Wikipedia, a pre-war biplane fighter called the "Fury," but it had been phased out of combat roles by the start of World War II (although I gather from Wikipedia that a few were still used for training during the war).
But this can't be the plane involved, because the song mentions a "Bofors," which is a famous 40 mm anti-aircraft gun -- but it wasn't in use by the British before World War II. Similarly, the song mentions an armored flight deck, and no pre-war British carrier had an armored deck. So the pre-war Fury is out. It's possible that the word is actually "Fairey," the maker of many British naval planes, including the famous Swordfish torpedo plane and the Fulmar fighter, but we have no evidence for that. There was a post-war plane called the "Sea Fury," so that is likely what is meant here.
Tawney said this was a version from the Theseus, although the song itself does not offer a ship name. I checked three different sources and could find no Royal Navy ship named Theseus during World War II. Certainly there was no carrier of that name! But, according to Wikipedia, the carrier HMS Theseus was commissioned shortly after the war, and served primarily in a training role until the Korean War. She was broken up in 1952. Given that the Bofors went obsolete well before 1962, Tawney's version is likely from the late 1940s.
I wonder, though, if there wasn't a World War II version featuring some other plane. - RBW
Last updated in version 5.1
File: Tawn080

Ten Little Indians (II)
DESCRIPTION: "One, two, three, little Indians, ... Ten, little Indian boys." Game steps: "Open your Ten Little Indians (John Brown Had a Little Indian)

DESCRIPTION: "John Brown he had a little Indian (x3), One little Indian boy." "One little, two little, three little Indians, four little, five little, six little Indians, Seven little, eight little, nine little Indians, Ten little Indian boys"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1940 (Ford)
KEYWORDS: nonballad Indians(Am.)
FOUND IN: US(MA,So)
REFERENCES (9 citations):
Randolph 594, "John Brown Had a Little Indian" (1 text)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 136, "John Brown Had a Little Injun" (1 text)
Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore5 136, "John Brown Had a Little Injun" (1 tune plus a text excerpt)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 241-242, (no title) (1 short text, consisting of this chorus counted forward then backward; John Brown is not mentioned)
Byington/Goldstein-TwoPennyBallads, p. 106, "John Brown Had Little Indian" (1 text, 1 tune)
Spurgeon-WaltzTheHall-AmericanPlayParty, pp. 137-138, "Meet Hal Way with Your Best Likeness" (1 text, 1 tune, with the verses being from "Meet Half Way (Miss Liking)" but the chorus being "Ten Little Indians (John Brown Had a Little Indian)"
Doreen Elliott, "Old Joe Badger" (on Elliotts01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
ADDITIONAL: Henry Randall Waite, _Carmina Collegensia: A Complete Collection of the Songs of the American Colleges_ first edition 1868, expanded edition, Oliver Ditson, 1876, p. 32, "John Brown Had a Little Injun" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #4993
RECORDINGS:
Doreen Elliott, "Old Joe Badger" (on Elliotts01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "The Drunken Sailor" (tune, floating lyrics)
cf. "Old Brass Wagon" (tune)
cf. "Ten Little Injuns" (chorus)
cf. "Ten Little Indians (II)" (one verse)
NOTES [57 words]: Of the Mother Goose item "Tom Brown's Two little Indians," the Baring-Goulds write, "Whether or not this rhyme inspires the writing of 'Two Little Injuns...' is an interesting speculation." I must say that they are quite close -- close enough that pure coincidence seems unlikely. For more background, see the notes to "Ten Little Injuns." - RBW
Last updated in version 5.0
File: R594

Ten Little Injuns

DESCRIPTION: Ten Indians stand in a line, one goes home and there are nine. Each disappears in a new way until only one is left. The last one lives alone until "he got married and then there were none"

AUTHOR: Septimus Winner (1868), with adaptions by Frank Green and others
EARLIEST DATE: 1868 (sheet music published by Sep. Winner of Philadelphia)
KEYWORDS: humorous Black(s) Indians(Am.)
FOUND IN: US(Ap)
REFERENCES (5 citations):
Richardson/Spaeth-AmericanMountainSongs, pp. 84-85, "Ten Little Niggers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Heart-Songs, p. 357, "Ten Little Niggers" (1 text, 1 tune)
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 376, "Ten little nigger boys went out to dine" (2 texts); 511, "Tom Brown's two little Indian boys" (1 text)
Baring-Gould-AnnotatedMotherGoose #818, pp. 304-305, "(Ten little Injuns standin' in a line)"
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2295, p. 154, "Ten Little Injuns" (1 reference)
Roud #13512
BROADSIDES:
Bodleian, Harding B 11(1572), "Ten Little Niggers" ("Ten little niggers going out to dine"), unknown, n.d.; also Firth c.16(335), Firth b.27(94), "Ten Little Niggers"; Firth c.16(334), "Ten Little Ministers" ("Ten little ministers, sitting in a line"), unknown, 1874; also Johnson Ballads fol. 386a, "A new version of a popular song"
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Ninety-Nine Bottles of Beer" (counting)
cf. "Eight Little Cylinders" (counting)
cf. "Ten Little Indians" ("John Brown Had a Little Indian") (chorus)
SAME TUNE:
Ten Little Furies (File: Tawn080)
NOTES [400 words]: Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 511 is one verse "Tom Brown's two little Indian boys; One ran away, The other wouldn't stay, Tom Brown's two little Indian boys." (Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes has an early date c.1744 from Tommy Thumb's Pretty Song Book).
The Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 376 texts are "Ten little nigger boys went out to dine" and "Ten little Injuns standin' in a line."
Opie/Opie-OxfordDictionaryOfNurseryRhymes 376 lists the following names and publication dates of adaptations:
"Ten Little Niggers" Feb. 1869 [According to the Baring-Goulds, this is by Frank Green. The Opies say it might have been written in late 1868 - RBW]
"Ten Little Negroes" Mar. 1869
"Ten Little Darkies" June 1869
"The Ten Youthful Africans" Sep. 1869
"Ten Little Darkies" c.1870
"Ten Little Negro Boys" Dec. 1874
The things that reduce the number vary from text to text. So, for example, for the ministers of broadside Johnson Ballads fol. 386a, the last minister "was so very Low, Everybody told him they thought he'd better go." For broadside Harding B 11(1572) the last one gets married and raises a family of ten more.
Some versions, including Winner's original, share the chorus with "Ten Little Indians" ("John Brown Had a Little Indian").
See Tim Coughlan, Now Shoon the Romano Gillie, (Cardiff,2001), #165, pp. 437-441, "Yeck Bitto Rom'n Chal Churvin ap a Ruck" ["One little Gypsy boy climbing up a tree"] [Romani-English text reported by Leland, English Gypsy Songs (1875)]. Coughlan: "Leland's informant seems to have been remarkably quick off the mark. [Septimus] Winner's original set was published in London in July 1868..... Also included by Leland is a second set from the pen of Hubert Smith .... ["Desh Tani Chavis Duriken," also quoted by Coughlan from Leland]. - BS
For more on Septimus Winner, see the notes to "Listen to the Mockingbird."
This appears to have been parodied by none other than Charles Dodgson (Lewis Carroll), who in his report "Twelve Months in a Curatorship" wrote the following about the Wine Committee:
Tuns: 'Ten Little Nigger'
Four frantic Members of a chosen Committee!
One of them resigned, then there were three.
Three thoughtful members: they may pull us through!
One was invalided -- there there were Two.
Two tranquil members: much may yet be done!
But they never came together, so I had to work with one.- RBW
Last updated in version 6.0
File: 002376
Ten Little Words

DESCRIPTION: "Ten little words was all it said, It's on their way they hum. 'Kiss Mother for me,' it singing says, 'For I'm too poor to come.'" The members of the (logging?) crew join together to raise the money to send the man home to see his dying mother

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1956 (Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan)
KEYWORDS: mother death money travel technology
FOUND IN: US(MW)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Beck-TheyKnewPaulBunyan, p. 151, "Ten Little Words" (1 text)
Roud #6510
NOTES [85 words]: Why do I have a feeling that there is a missing verse of this in which the young man dies on his way home? The song does not mention the telegraph, but I strongly suspect that that is what is happening here. This would explain the use of exactly ten words. It was typical of telegrams to have a flat fee for the first ten words, then a per-word charge for each word over ten. So there was a strong tendency to write messages that were exactly ten words. On that basis, I've added the keyword "technology." - RBW

Last updated in version 5.0
File: BBun151

Ten Stone

DESCRIPTION: Windlass shanty. "I nebber seen de like sence I ben born! Way, ay, ay, ay, ay! Nigger on de ice an a hoein' up corn, Way, ay, ay, ay, ay! Ten stone! ten stone! ten stone de win' am ober, Jenny get along, Jenny blow de horn, as we go marchin ober!"

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1914 (Bullen & Arnold, _Songs of Sea Labor_)
KEYWORDS: shanty worksong sailor
FOUND IN: West Indies
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, p. 268, "Ten Stone" (1 text, 1 tune) [AbEd, p. 198]
Roud #9129
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "I Belong to that Band" (lyrics)
NOTES [36 words]: This may well be related to the mess of material filed under "I Belong to that Band"; it has some of the same lines, and is utterly disorganized. But the total material found in each is simply too small to be sure. - RBW

File: Hugi268

Ten Thousand Cattle

DESCRIPTION: Perhaps as a result of a bad winter, "Ten thousand cattle have gone astray, Left my range and traveled away." The singer is left destitute. His girl has also left him (for another). Other verses may complain about the weather, his girl's lover, etc.

AUTHOR: Owen Wister (1888?)
EARLIEST DATE: 1904
KEYWORDS: cowboy hardtimes separation disaster
FOUND IN: US(Ro)
REFERENCES (6 citations):
Larkin-SingingCowboy, pp. 151-153, "Then Thousand Cattle" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 6, "Ten Thousand Cattle" (1 text, 1 tune)
Tinsley-HeWasSinginThisSong, pp. 88-91, "Ten Thousand Cattle" (1 text, 1 tune)
DT, TENTHOU* TENTHOU2*
ADDITIONAL: _Sing Out_ magazine, Volume 35, #2 (1990), pp, 70-71, "Ten Thousand Goddam Cattle" (1 text, 1 tune, included because it's one of the relatively unexpurgated versions)
John I. White, _Git Along, Little Dogies: Songs and Songmakers of the American West_, 1975 (page references are to the 1989 University of Illinois Press edition), pp. 27-37, "Owen Wister, Songwriter" (1 text, 1 tune, plus a sheet music cover, history of Wister's cowboy writings, and a copy of a letter from Wister about the song)
Roud #5763
NOTES [32 words]: Reported to have been written by Owen Wister (1860-1938; author of The Virginian plus assorted minor poetry) in 1888 based on the experiences of the dreadful winter of 1886/7 in Wyoming. - RBW
Last updated in version 3.1
File: 0hr006

Ten Thousand Dollars for the Home Folks

DESCRIPTION: To the tune of Chopin's funeral march: "Ten thousand dollars for the folks back home (x2), Ten thousand dollars for the home folks, Ten thousand dollars for the family."
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1929 (Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe)
KEYWORDS: death money family soldier
FOUND IN: REFERENCES (1 citation):
Niles/Moore-SongsMyMotherNeverTaughtMe, pp. 27-28, "Ten Thousand Dollars for the Home Folks" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #27869
File: NiM027

Ten Thousand Miles Away

DESCRIPTION: "Sing ho! for a brave and a gallant ship, And a fair and fav'ring breeze, With a bully crew and a captain too To carry me over the seas...." The singer wishes for a ship to carry him to his sweetheart, transported to Botany Bay "ten thousand miles away"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: before 1867 (broadside, Bodleian Harding B 11(3763))
KEYWORDS: love separation transportation ship
FOUND IN: Australia US(NE,Ro) Britain(England(South),Scotland(Aber)) Ireland
REFERENCES (17 citations):
Colcord-SongsOfAmericanSailormen, pp. 159-161, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Harlow-ChantyingAboardAmericanShips, pp. 116-118, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hugill-ShantiesFromTheSevenSeas, pp. 409-410, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
[AbEd, pp. 311-312]
Huntington-TheGam-MoreSongsWhalemenSang, p. 194, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (1 fragment, 1 tune)
Meredith/Anderson-FolkSongsOfAustralia, pp. 84-85, 272-273, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (2 texts, 2 tunes)
Meredith/Tritton-DukeOfTheOutback, pp. 82-83, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Flanders/Brown-VermontFolkSongsAndBallads, pp. 148-149, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 31-32, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Sandburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 100-101, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Hubbard-BalladsAndSongsFromUtah, #71, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Copper-SongsAndSouthernBreezes, pp. 232-233, "Blow the Winds I Oh" (1 text, 1 tune)
Manifold-PenguinAustralianSongbook, pp. 8-9, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Greig-FolkSongInBuchan-FolkSongOfTheNorthEast #169, p. 2, "Blow Ye Winds" (1 text)
Greig/Duncan6 1102, "Blow Ye Winds, Ay Oh" (6 texts plus a single verse on p. 544, 4 tunes)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 86, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (1 text)
DT, THOUSMIL*
ADDITIONAL: Tristram P. Coffin and Hennig Cohen, _Folklore in America: Tales, Songs, Superstitions, Proverbs, Riddles, Games, Folk Drama and Folk Festivals_, Doubleday, 1966, pp. 68-69, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #1778
RECORDINGS:
Robert Cinnamond, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (on IRRRCinnamond03)
Eugene Jemison, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (on Jem01)
BROADSIDES:
Ten Thousand Miles Away (On the Banks of Lonely River)

DESCRIPTION: The singer recalls his aged mother "on the banks of a lonely river, Ten thousand miles away." He wishes he (were a little bird so he could be) with her. A letter from his sister says his mother has died; he wishes she were there. He prays for his mother

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1882 (broadside, LOCSheet sm1882 16161)

KEYWORDS: death mother loneliness separation age grief burial mourning family sister

FOUND IN: US(Ap,SE,So) Canada(Mar)

REFERENCES (4 citations):

- Randolph 697, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (1 text plus a fragment, 1 tune)
- Abrahams/Riddle-ASingerAndHerSongs, p. 41, "Ten Thousand Miles Away" (1 text, 1 tune)
- Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 170, "The Homesick Boy" (2 texts)
- Brown/Schinhan-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore4 170, "The Homesick Boy" (2 excerpts, 2 tunes)

RECORDINGS:

- Asa Martin & Doc Roberts, "I Must See My Mother" (Champion 16568, 1933; Champion 45176, c. 1935; rec. 1932; on KMM [as Martin & Hobbs])
- Fred Redden, "The Banks of Claudy" (on NovaScotia1)

BROADSIDES:

CROSS-REFERENCES:

- cf. "To the West A While to Stay" (plot)

NOTES [154 words]: Several of Randolph's informants credited this to a Missouri musician named Hubbard. Given the general feebleness of the song, it is quite likely that it comes from such an obscure source. The presence of the North Carolina texts, however, argues that it is not local to the Ozarks. - RBW

Broadside LOCSheet sm1882 16161: "composed by I.M. Williams" whatever that means. Is it a coincidence that the publisher is so close to the Ozarks? [NovaScotia1] begins "In youth I craved adventure To Australia I did stray, I left my home and mother For a fortune far away, She bade me not to leave her Or to return some day To the banks of far off Claudy Ten thousand miles away." This verse is missing from LOCSheet sm1882 16161, which begins with the letter verse, followed by the dream verse. - BS

There seems to have been a popular nineteenth century song "Near the Banks of That Lone River." It does not appear to be the same. - RBW

Last updated in version 4.1

File: R697

---

Ten Thousand Miles Away from Home (A Wild and Reckless Hobo; The Railroad Bum) [Laws H2]

DESCRIPTION: The reckless hobo cannot stay still; the sound of a train keeps calling him. (He may become involved with various girls, but even they cannot hold him.)

AUTHOR: (credited to Jimmie Rodgers by John Greenway)
EARLIEST DATE: 1925 (recording, George Reneau)
KEYWORDS: railroading train travel rambling floating verses
REFERENCES (19 citations):
Laws H2, "Ten Thousand Miles Away from Home (A Wild and Reckless Hobo; The Railroad Bum)"
Cohen-LongSteelRail, pp. 355-366, "Waiting for a Train/Wild and Reckless Hobo" (2 texts plus a print from Richard Burnett's songbook and a peculiar "Wabash Cannonball" mix, 2 tune)
Randolph 836, "A Wild and Reckless Hobo" (1 short text, 1 tune)
Sahndburg-TheAmericanSongbag, pp. 456-457, "Ten Thousand Miles Away from Home" (1 text, 1 tune, which from its form appears to go here although the plot is somewhat different; the singer misses the true love who abandoned him)
Stout-FolkloreFromIowa 90, p. 113, "Down at the Water Tank" (1 text)
Davis-MoreTraditionalBalladsOfVirginia 29, pp. 221-228, "The Maid Freed from the Gallows" (3 texts plus a fragment, 2 tunes; the two longest texts, AA and DD, both contain floating material, in the case of "D" probably from this piece)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore2 30, "The Maid Freed from the Gallows" (4 texts, 5 excerpts, 1 fragment, plus mention of two more; the final text, M, probably combined with this piece)
Brown/Belden/Hudson-FrankCBrownCollectionNCFolklore3 359, "The Wild and Reckless Hobo" (1 text); 361, "Waiting for a Train" (1 short text)
Hudson-FolksongsOfMississippi 111, pp. 250-251, "The Railroad Bum" (1 text)
Fusion-BalladsOfTheKentuckyHighlands, pp. 128-129, "Ten Thousand Miles From Home" (1 text)
Cambiaire-EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads, pp. 3-4, "A Wild and Reckless Hobo" (1 text); p. 101, "The Railroad Bum" (1 text, which seems to be mixed with other material)
Henry-SongsSungInTheSouthernAppalachians, pp. 107-108, "A Wild and Reckless Hobo" (1 text. Same source as Cambiaire-EastTennesseeWestVirginiaMountainBallads's, though with differences in presentation)
Bush-FsofCentralWestVirginiaVol4, pp. 76-77, "The Danville Girl" (1 text, 1 tune)
Lomax-AFSB, pp. 28-30, "Ten Thousand Miles from Home" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Abernethy-SinginTexas, p. 172, "(All around the water tank)" (1 fragment, from the Jimmie Rodgers version)
Ohrlin-HellBoundTrain 42, "Sam's 'Waiting for a Train'" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 54, "Danville Girl" (1 text)
Pankake/Pankake-PrairieHomeCompanionFolkSongBook, p. 130, "At the Jail" (2 texts, 1 tune; the result looks to me to be a mix between this and "Logan County Jail," though it's one of those vague cases....)
DT 781, DANVGIRL (DANVILL2)
Roud #699 and 7046
RECORDINGS:
Dock Boggs, "Danville Girl" (Brunswick 132B, 1927); (on Boggs2, BoggsCD1)
[Richard] Burnett & [Leonard] Rutherford, "Ramblin' Reckless Hobo" ([Columbia 15240-D, 1928; Velvet Tone 2496-V/Clarion 5436-C [both as Clayton & Parker], 1932; rec. 1927; on BurnRuth01, KMM)
Vernon Dalhart, "Wild and Reckless Hobo" (Brunswick 2942, 1925)
Morgan Denmon, "Wild and Reckless Hobo" (Velvet Tone 2366-V, 1930); "The Wild and Reckless Hobo" (Okeh 45327, 1929)
Dixon Brothers, "The Girl I Left in Danville" (Montgomery Ward M-7337, c. 1937/Bluebird B-7674, 1938)
Texas Gladden and Hobart Smith, "Wild and Reckless Hobo" (on USTGladden01)
Bill Baker w. Bob Miller's Hinky-Dinkers, "Wild and Reckless Hobo" (Brunswick 445/Supertone S-2059, 1930)
New Lost City Ramblers, "Danville Girl" (on NLCR06)
Pine Mountain Ramblers [or Virginia Mountain Boomers], "Ramblin' Reckless Hobo" (Champion 15610, 1928; Supertone 9305, 1929)
Charlie Powers, "The Wild and Reckless Hobo" (CYL: Edison 5131, n.d.)
George Reneau, "Wild and Reckless Hoboes" (Vocalion 14999, 1925)
Pete Seeger, "Danville Girl" (on PeteSeeger02, PeteSeegerCD01)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "More Pretty Girls Than One" (words, tune)
Ten Thousand Texas Rangers

DESCRIPTION: "Ten thousand Texas Rangers are laughing fit to kill At the joke of the German Kaiser, an' his fierce, imperious will." If the Mexicans are fools enough to listen to the Germans and invade the U. S., it will fail, and "by Gawd, but that one's on Bill!"

AUTHOR: Alice Corbin (Source: Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys)

EARLIEST DATE: 1917 (Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys)

KEYWORDS: Mexico

HISTORICAL REFERENCES:
Jan. 1917 - The Zimmerman Telegram invites Mexico to go to war with the United States

FOUND IN:

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Thorp/Logsdon-SongsOfTheCowboys, pp. 145-146, "Ten Thousand Texas Rangers" (1 text)

NOTES [232 words]: In 1917, Germany was preparing to start unrestricted submarine warfare in World War I, which they thought (almost certainly correct) would bring the United States into the war on the Allied side. The Germans came up with a plan to involve the chaotic Mexican government in war with the United States. This offer, which was conveyed in a telegram, offered (in the sort-of-official translation) to "make war together, make peace together, generous financial support and an understanding on our part that Mexico is to reconquer the lost territory in Texas, New Mexico, and Arizona." Note that some of this phrasing is used in the piece. The telegram was signed by the German foreign minister, Arthur Zimmerman. The telegram was sent in code from Germany to the German embassy in Mexico -- but because the Germans had to use cables to send it, and the British had tapped the cables, the British got their hands on it, decoded it, and shared it with the Americans, using subterfuge to make it appear they had picked up a copy of the telegram in Mexico rather than intercepting and decrypting it (which would have told the Germans that their code had been cracked). The Germans could of course have denied the telegram's authenticity, but instead Zimmerman admitted to sending the thing. And, of course, the United States soon joined the Allies, and played a vital role in defeating the Germans. - RBW

Last updated in version 5.3
File: ThLo145

Ten Virgins, The

DESCRIPTION: "There were ten virgins when the Bridegroom come, There were ... when He come" "(There were ...)")x3) "When he come". Five virgins were foolish and five were wise. The foolish ask the wise for oil; the wise tell the foolish to buy from the sellers

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1901 (Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute); 1893 (see notes)
KEYWORDS: Bible nonballad religious
FOUND IN: US(SE,So)
REFERENCES (3 citations):
Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute, p. 72, "There Were Ten Virgins" (1 text, 1 tune; pp. 90-91 in the 1901 edition) [for 1893 edition, see notes]
Parrish-SlaveSongsOfTheGeorgiaSeasIslands 36, pp. 158-159, "Zion" (1 text, 1 tune)
Arnold-FolkSongsofAlabama, p. 168, "The Ten Virgins" (1 text, 1 tune)
Roud #15278 and 10433
RECORDINGS:
Mississippi John Hurt, "The Ten Virgins" (on MJHurt05)
CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Oh, They Put John on the Island" (structure, chorus lines)
cf. "She'll Be Coming Around the Mountain" (structure, tune) and references there NOTES [165 words]: The description is based on Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute.
The Biblical reference is to [the] parable [in] Matthew 25:1-13 [usually called the "Wise and Foolish Virgins" - RBW]: Ten virgins go to meet a bridegroom. All bring their lamps but the foolish ones do not bring [extra] oil. The bridegroom is delayed and arrives unexpectedly at midnight. Only the wise virgins have enough oil for their lamps so they can go and greet him. By the time the foolish virgins buy oil for their lamps they are so late that the bridegroom refuses to recognize them. "Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh" (King James). The index to the 1893 edition [of Dett/Fenner/Rathbun/Cleveland-ReligiousFolkSongsOfTheNegro-HamptonInstitute] has "There were ten Virgins" on page 90 (Thomas P. Fenner and Frederic G. Rathbun, Cabin and Plantation Songs (New York: G.P. Putnam's Sons, 1893)). I have not seen page 90. - BS
Last updated in version 4.2
File: Dett072

Tenaouich' Tenaga, Ouich'ka

DESCRIPTION: Canadian French: A trapper is met by an Indian, who tells him that the comrade from whom he had earlier parted has died. The Indians have (buried/brought) the body. The recurrent word "Ouich'ka" seems to be an attempt to imitate Indian dialect

AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1865 (Gagnon)
KEYWORDS: death Indians(Am.) burial Quebec foreignlanguage
FOUND IN: Canada(Que)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Tendemain des Noces, Le (The Song of Marriage)

DESCRIPTION: French. Girl looks ahead to the joy of marriage. After the wedding, she's disillusioned; she will wear the cloak of joyfulness, but the "girdle of sufferance (le cordon de souffriance)". Her mother asks who forced her into marriage. The girl still laments

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1946 (Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes)

LONG DESCRIPTION: French. Young girl, walking by the sea, thinks of the pleasures of the marriage bond. After the wedding, she's disillusioned; she will wear the cloak of joyfulness, but the "girdle of sufferance (le cordon de souffriance)". Her mother asks who forced her into marriage, pointing out that she'd been warned. The girl laments leaving her family, saying she will be miserable for the rest of her life.

KEYWORDS: foreignlanguage grief homesickness marriage wedding clothes family mother wife

FOUND IN: US(MW) Canada(Que)

REFERENCES (1 citation):
Berry-FolkSongsOfOldVincennes, p. 50, "Le lendemain des noces (The Song of Marriage)" (1 text + translation, 1 tune)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Single Girl, Married Girl" (theme)
cf. "I Wish I Were Singe Again (II - Female)",(theme)
cf. "Do You Love an Apple?" (theme)
cf. "When I Was Young (II)" (theme)

File: BerV050

Tender Mother's Grave

DESCRIPTION: Singer gathers flowers for his mother's grave. "She is gone to the dear land of the blessed." "There's none in this wide world like your mother You shall never miss your mother till she's gone." "Shall I ever see you more gentle mother"

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1951 (MUNFLA-Leach)

KEYWORDS: grief death mourning flowers nonballad mother

FOUND IN: Canada(Newf)

Roud #30110

RECORDINGS:
Pat Molloy, "Tender Mother's Grave" (on MUNFLA-Leach)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Gentle Mother" (subject and some lines and line fragments)

NOTES [26 words]: For "Gentle Mother" see, for example, Eugene Ward McElroy, "Gentle Mother" (on "I Pray You Pay Attention," Musical Tradition Records MTCD367-8 CD (2014)) - BS

Last updated in version 4.4

File: ML3TeMoG

Tender's Hold, The (While Landsmen Wander)

DESCRIPTION: "Whilst landsmen wander uncontrolled, And boast the rights of freedmen," the seamen suffer on a tender. The sailors wonder what has become of their rights. They have been torn away from their families. People's claims of freedom are vain

AUTHOR: unknown

EARLIEST DATE: 1986 (Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs)

KEYWORDS: political sailor nonballad

FOUND IN:
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Palmer-OxfordBookOfSeaSongs 74, "Song" (1 text)
Roud #V41847
BROADSIDES:
File: PaSe074

Tennessee Killer, The
DESCRIPTION: "Oh I've killed men in Georgia And men in Alabam', But kill a man in Arkansas And God your soul will damn!" The singer admits to widespread murders, but was taken in Little Rock. Now he will hang. He warns others against guns
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1942 (Randolph)
KEYWORDS: homicide punishment execution warning
FOUND IN: US(So)
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Randolph 175, "The Tennessee Killer" (1 text)
Roud #4101
NOTES [8 words]: This song is item dE41 in Laws's Appendix II. - RBW
File: R175

Tennessee Wig-Walk
DESCRIPTION: "I'm a bold-headed chicken, with a hole in me head, I ain't been happy since I don't know when ..." Walk instructions for "Doin' the Tennessis Wig Walk." "You're the King and I'm the Queen, You're the one that stole my ring"
AUTHOR: unknown
EARLIEST DATE: 1978 (Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame)
KEYWORDS: derivative playparty royalty
FOUND IN: Britain(England(Lond))
REFERENCES (1 citation):
Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame 128, "Tennessee Wig-Walk" (4 texts, 1 tune)
Roud #19008
NOTES [31 words]: Opie/Opie-TheSingingGame: "'The Tennessee Wig-Walk', words by Norman Gimbel and music by Larry Coleman, 1953,..."
you can see the lyrics at the International Lyrics Playground site. - BS
Last updated in version 2.6
File: 0pGa128

Tent Poles are Rotten, The
DESCRIPTION: "The tent poles are rotten, and the campfires dead And the possums they ramble in the trees overhead. I'm out on the wallaby, I'm humping my drum..." The singer describes the pleasures and virtues of a wanderer's life
AUTHOR: Words:Henry Lawson (1867-1922) (various tunes used)
EARLIEST DATE: 1984
KEYWORDS: rambling Australia
FOUND IN: Australia
REFERENCES (2 citations):
Fahey-Eureka-SongsThatMadeAustralia, pp. 188-189, "The Tent Poles are Rotten" (1 text, 1 tune)
Garland-FacesInTheFirelight-NZ, p. 105, "(Now the tent poles are rotten/On the Wallaby)" (1 text)
File: FaE188

Tenting Tonight
DESCRIPTION: "We're tenting tonight on the old camp ground... Many are the hearts that are weary tonight, wishing for the war to cease... Tenting tonight (x2) Tenting on the old campground" The singer describes how the soldiers are lonely -- and often dying
AUTHOR: Walter Kittredge
EARLIEST DATE: 1864 (sheet music published by Oliver Ditson & Co, Boston)
KEYWORDS: Civilwar battle death home music
REFERENCES (15 citations):
Jackson-PopularSongsOfNineteenthCenturyAmerica, pp. 206-209, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" (1 text, 1 tune)
Silber-SongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 181-183, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground"; p. 183, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground, II" (2 texts, 1 tune)
Silber-SoldierSongsAndHomeFrontBalladsOfCivilWar, pp. 50-51, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" (1 text, 1 tune)
Wolf-AmericanSongSheets, #2297, p. 155, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" (3 references)
Heart-Songs, p. 28, "We're Tenting To-Night" (1 text, 1 tune)
Jolly-Miller-Songster-5thEd, #14, "We're Tenting Tonight" (1 text)
Emerson-StephenFosterAndCo, pp. 121-122, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" (1 text)
Hill-PoemsAndSongsOfTheCivilWar, pp. 222-223, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" (1 text)
Arnett-IHearAmericaSinging, pp. 86-87, "Tenting Tonight" (1 text, 1 tune)
Krythe-SamplerOfAmericanSongs 10, pp. 150-157, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" (1 text, 1 tune)
Colonial-Dames-AmericanWarSongs, pp. 107-108, "Tenting on the Old Camp Groun" (1 text)
Darling-NewAmericanSongster, pp. 348-349, "Tenting Tonight" (1 text)
Messerli-ListenToTheMockingbird, pp. 123-126, "Tenting Tonight on the Old Camp Ground" (1 text)
Silber/Silber-FolksingersWordbook, p. 289, "Tenting On The Old Camp Ground" (1 text)
DT, TENTTNT* (TENTTNT2*)

RECORDINGS:
Apollo Quartet, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" (Berliner 4264, 1898)
Colonial Quartet, "Tenting Tonight" (Phono-Cut 5097, c. 1913)
Columbia Stellar Quartet, "Tenting Tonight on the Old Camp Ground" (Columbia A1808, 1915)
Haydn Quartet, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" (Victor 119, 1900)
Knickerbocker Quartet, "We're Tenting Tonight" (CYL: Edison [BA] 1881, n.d.)
Mount Vernon Quartet, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" (Columbia 15245-D, 1928)
Peerless Quartet, "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" (Zon-O-Phone 892, c. 1908) (Emerson 7160, 1917) (Pathe 40032 [as "Tenting Tonight on the Old Camp Ground"], 1916)
Pete Seeger, "Tenting Tonight" (on PeteSeeger28)
Frank C. Stanley, "Tenting Tonight on the Old Camp Ground" (CYL: Edison 8151, 1902)
Sterling Trio, "Tenting Tonight" (Little Wonder 266, 1915)
Unidentified vocal quartet "Tenting To-night on the Old Camp Ground" (Harvard 514, 1903-1906; prob. rec. 1900; Oxford 11964, c. 1906)

CROSS-REFERENCES:
cf. "Camp Meeting Tonight On the Old Camp Ground" (derivative)

SAME TUNE:
Camp Meeting Tonight On the Old Camp Ground (File: RcCMTOCG)
Singing on the Old Church Ground (recording, Emmet Brand, on MuSouth06) "Ridin' Round the Old Bed Ground (John I. White, _Git Along, Little Dogies: Songs and Songmakers of the American West_, 1975 (page references are to the 1989 University of Illinois Press edition), p. 52) Parody on Tenting on the Old Camp-Ground ("We're drinking, to-night, in the old bar-room," by William H. Hanford") (Wolf-AmericanSongSheets p. 124)

